Callahan discusses Lenten suffering

By AMY CODRON

People can experience the mystery of the cross through the SMC Sesquicentennial Lenten Lecture Series, "A Celebration of the Cross.

Callahan's own experience as a Catholic and clinical psychologist, allowed her to experience the images in the Cross.

"I kept seeing images, faces of persons in my own world, both from what I could see faces from our shared world and the icons of pain from our shared world's experience."

Callahan explained, "It is not only the human cries and griefs, it is the lament of a world where the Earth, the air and the water were poisoned and is being polluted by toxic waste beyond imagining."

Returning from a global to a personal level, she reflected on the face of the mirror, my own experience."

"Loss is such a universal human experience, so often defining human pain, it is explained.

In her twenty years of practice as a psychologist, the Cross has shown Callahan many faces, said she.

It was in the stories of returned missionaries that she was invited into the sacred space of the suffering in the Third World.

The human face of the Cross reflects not only pain but active hope, depending better, Callahan explained.

"It is not only the human cries and griefs, it is the lament of a world where the Earth, the air and the water were poisoned and is being polluted by toxic waste beyond imagining."

SMC re-examines what it means to be a Catholic women's college

By ZOE MARIN

The culture shock experienced when returning to the United States was just as great as the initial shock of arriving in Africa, according to Professor James Bellis at a panel discussion last night after visiting Africa.

Five guests reflected on their experiences of living in Africa as part of Black History Month. Among them were Bellis, Fr. James Ferguson, Dr. De Bryant, Bro. Phillip Armstrong, and graduate student Tristan Borer.

Bellis discussed the difficulty of adjusting to African life and the contrasts between all the American conveniences such as "potato chips and waffles that didn't come from the new fad or has backyard geese running all over them."

Returning to the US was also a shock, Bellis said. It meant readjusting to the food, people and environment all over again.

Amstrong had a different experience. He worked with adolescents in a secondary school in Cape Coast and discussed the differences of the students.

"Among the students was an element of ambition. They realized the importance of education, Amstrong said.

The students were also very involved culturally for their age.

"It was fascinating to watch students portray the heritage of their people," said Amstrong describing a dancing festival the students performed.

Ferguson spent 20 years as a missionary in Africa. The students shaken at the summit by the scale of the African contrasts between their own lives and the lives of Africans.

As a Protestant teaching at a Catholic college, Newman feels that the difference between her faith and that of the college need to be more defined.

"It is hard to be Protestant in a place where Catholics are not saying what it means to be Catholic," she said. "Saint Mary's needs to make its ties to the Catholic Church more concrete.

One concrete link between the college and the Catholic Church dates back 150 years to the Congregation of the Sisters of the Holy Cross.

When the Sisters of the Holy Cross founded Saint Mary's in 1844 Catholicism was well defined in mandatory masses, a faculty made up completely of sisters, and various other tangible signs of Catholic character.

That Catholic character of yesterday is weakening as those tangible expressions of faith disappear and the interaction between students and the sisters decreases, according to Whelan.

Students find it easy to experience their faith in an atmosphere that holds the Catholic character that Saint Mary's does.

Sometimes numbers aren't everything

Never ask a math major about his or her philoso-

For my twenty-second birthday, I received a book entitled "Happy Birthday, Forty Years Late." This was from my mother who, ever aware of my interest in mathematics, decided to get me exactly the type of book I would appreciate.

The book contained tons of pertinent facts about my birthday, such as on Feb. 15, 1925, the London Zoo announced the installment of electrical lights to "cheer up" animals sickened by London's weather. The thing that interested me most was a small section in the back of the book entitled, "At Your Age..." This section was my piece of Pi.

The account was so fascinating that it has gotten me thinking How do we manage to ignore all the facts and figures that stream by us every day? I think about it, at least for a few days, whenever I am near a mathematical expression when it all seemed so simple...

Wolf: Achieve one set of goals

By MARA DIVIS

New Won.

If women train their minds to achieve one set of goals, they have begun to teach the next generation how to teach and how to love, according to Marcyanne Wolf, Saint Mary's class of 1969, in last night's preeminent sesqui-centennial lecture.

Reading from a series of letters she never sent to significant people in her life, Wolf cited important shaping events in her life, and how attending a women's college inspired her to continue learning and teaching.

"My life is a history of struggles of every student, now and always," she said.

Wolf received a Master's degree in English Literature from Northwestern University and a doctorate degree in Education from Harvard University. Most recently she studied neurolinguistic research in Germany on a Fulbright Scholarship. Drawing on her research, she said that each child should understand herself to help them.

She confronted opposition again as she applied for graduate school teaching fellowships and again lost to think for her, she said. In a letter to two professors who had received the fellowships, she said, she wrote to the lab's colleague.

"Some things upon stories are being built during these years at Saint Mary's and Notre Dame.

by vowing that one day she would be her correspondent colleague. "Some day women won't get circumvented, and I will be a college teacher," she said.

One English professor, who she admired and respected, warned her during her first year that she would be required to oppose the Vietnam War, which her parents supported.

"I'm twisted inside, torn between two families," she said. "I firmly believe that I am acting out of conscience. My parents gave up untold pleasures in life to teach me to think, and now they believe they have created a monster.

"I can't give them what they need: an opening to literacy," she said.

She explored the frustrating questions of reading teaching and neurolinguistic research at the Harvard University reading lab, she wrote to the lab's director.

The learning process is the same as the reading process, she explained. Teachers can predict, diagnose, and ask more questions.

Her Saint Mary's background encouraged this questioning and dedication to her goals of working more closely with her students.

"Saint Mary's taught us to search for our first principles and order our life by them," she said. "Stories upon stories are being built during these years at Saint Mary's and Notre Dame."
Trustees will consist of we cannot understand others, " faith."

In addition, the College must add a new Senior included in the new bylaws said.

The decision was made in response to the changing needs that face Catholic institutions today, Hickey said.

"We really felt that we were growing into a situation where it was becoming increasingly more difficult to attract quali-

It's time to honor the past and look toward the future," Hickey said. "As Saint Mary's determine proper training teachers in the country," Newman said.

 Occupational exposure not linked to child cancer

By RANDY HUTTER

Associated Press

An American scientist says that there is no detectable link between a father's exposure to radiation and cancer in their offspring is probably a chance finding.

In a news release, a cancer expert at Oxford University who is regarded as the man who first suggested that the link between smoking and lung cancer, said "the evidence is very clear that there is no excessive rate of childhood cancer due to paternal irradiation and subsequent leukemia in the offspring."

A commentary by Doll and his colleagues, Dr. H. John Evans and Dr. Sarah Darby, is published in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature.

The article is in response to speculation that an abnormally high rate of childhood cancer in children of atomic bomb survivors of the journal Nature.

The authors conclude that children of survivors of atomic bomb explosions in Japan.

Doll said the possibility that radiation damaged sperm "does not accord with what is known about genetics or what is known about childhood leukemia." He cites other evidence against the link. For instance, there was no excess cancers in children of survivors of atomic bomb explosions in Japan.

The bombing, the second attack since Saturday. The explosion on the train outside Cairo on Wednesday has killed two Australians and a German woman and injured 14 Egyptians.

In its claim on Wednesday, faxed to a Western news agency in Cairo, the Islamic Group, which has waged a two-year campaign to try to overthrow Egypt's secular government, said: "The explosion is a warning to the country to save themselves from being killed in the midst of the conflict.

Also Wednesday, a bomb went off outside the Mideast International Bank in downtown Cairo. The blast shattered windows and bent wrought-iron bars at the bank but caused no injuries. The bank is across the street from a hotel not used by the U.S. Embassy.

In addition, police in Cairo defused a locally made bomb late Wednesday at the American Express Company branch in the nearby International Commerce Bank at a payment center in the area of Mohandiseen, the Interior ministry said.

Two Egyptian Cairo banks have been damaged by bombs this month. The bombings started after the Islamic Group urged Egyptian investors, to remove their funds because they were indirectly supporting the government.

The explosion on the train occurred about as the train was approaching Abu Tig, about 21 miles south of Cairo. Abu Tig is near the southern edge of the West Bank, which is an Israeli-occupied area.

Due to the escalating violence, several countries have urged their citizens to avoid the area.

"Things are getting worse. We are looking for a way to reach a cease-fire," said an Egyptian official.

Disclosures may have cost 2 lives

WASHINGTON
At least two Soviets who spied for the United States were killed after being exposed by the career CIA officer who has been accused of selling national security secrets, American officials said Wednesday.

Meanwhile, the accused officer's wife has been cooperating with the government since she was arrested along with her husband on Monday, according to one official, commenting only on condition of anonymity.

The official would not say what Maria del Rosario Casas Ames has disclosed. But her cooperation could be crucial to the government's effort to learn how much damage she and her husband, CIA operations officer Aldrich H. Ames, might have done.

The Clinton administration seemed determined not to allow the issue to ruin relations with Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

President Clinton said the case involved a "very serious" breach of "security because of issues that I am not at this time at liberty to discuss."

But he cautioned against a drastic change in U.S.-Russia relations.

"I can't think the facts of this case at this time under mine in any way shape or form the policy we have followed the last year toward President Yeltsin and his government and the forces of change in Russia," Clinton said.

The administration has asked the Russians to defuse tensions over the spy case by voluntarily removing from Washington one or more of the Russian intelligence officers connected to the alleged 1985 recruitment of Ames and his wife, Rosario.

Senato Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas called the case "as damaging as any in U.S. intelligence history." He said that at a minimum the Russians should "cease and desist efforts to penetrate American intelligence."

In Moscow, officials played down the importance of the case and said it should not provoke "excessive political emotions."

Some said the United States continues to spy on Russia.

Russia's Foreign Intelligence Service chief, Yevgeny Primakov, told The Associated Press he had never heard of Ames.

The Ames were charged Tuesday with conspiracy to commit espionage, a charge that carries a potential penalty of life in prison.

The couple are scheduled to appear at a hearing in federal court in Alexandria, Va., on Friday.

The Justice Department announced Tuesday that on Nov. 52, and his wife, 41, of funneling U.S. national security secrets to the Soviet Union and later the Russian government in exchange for payments totaling 1.5 million.

The spy operation is alleged to have continued until the two were arrested by FBI agents on Monday.

V incent Cannistraro, a retired CIA officer, said in an interview Wednesday that the Central Intelligence Agency knew of at least two U.S. agents - officials in the Soviet government who were working for the CIA - who were killed after being revealed by Ames.

CIA spokesman Dave Christian said he could not confirm the deaths.

An FBI affidavit released Tuesday alleged that Ames in 1990 had passed to the Russian intelligence services the identity of a Russian counterintelligence officer who had been working as an agent for the United States. It did not identify the agent or indicate whether others were compromised.

Bosnian government, Croat forces agree on cease-fire

By SNEŽANA VUČIĆ
Associated Press

ZAGREB, Croatia
Under growing diplomatic pressure from the West, the military chiefs of Bosnia's Muslim-led government and their second-strongest foes, Bosnia's Croats, signed a truce Wednesday.

Many truces in Bosnia have collapsed, but the accord between the former allies against Russia's traditional allies, the Serbs, without asking Russia first.

The Russian president reiterated his proposal for a summit between Russia, the United States, France, Britain and Germany to "put an end to the Yugoslav conflict." The United States and Germany were cool to the idea Wednesday, indicating it was premature.

Vukic said that Russian diplomacy made the difference. "Until now, no cease-fire agreement for Bosnia was signed under the leadership of Russia," he said.

The cease-fire pact was signed Wednesday by Rasim Delic, the Bosnian government commander, and Ante Roso, the Bosnian Croat commander.

Roser spoke of "new times, new dialogues," and Delic said the agreement could "show us the way to a political agreement."

In addition to the truce, the two warring sides agreed to:
- Position U.N. peacekeepers in sensitive areas to ensure adherence to the accord.
- Permit all military under U.N. control or withdraw such weapons from the front line by noon March 7 — at least 6,744 miles for mortars and 12,1/2 miles for tanks and artillery.
- Establish a joint truce-monitoring commission with U.N. peacekeeping officials on Friday in Kiseljak, just west of Sarajevo.
- The two sides also agreed to open specified routes in the U.N. peacekeepers and aid convoys. The only checkpoints on the routes are to be manned by U.N. soldiers.
- Both sides also promised to dismantle prison camps, release all prisoners and allow humanitarian aid.

untoil scant checks entail major disruption

Dear Editor: On the Sunday of the final eve of Junior Parents Weekend, the residents of Carroll Hall were given a rude surprise. After hearing for three days the glory of Notre Dame community, the house live in was violated in an unprecedented way.

We have been told that all rooms campus-wide were entered over the recent Christmas break, and surveyed by University housing officials. They found over one thousand rooms to be in violation of their housing policy.

From this number, they have chosen to punish the fifty worst offenders. We have been told that 21 of the 23 rooms with lofts in our hall, or virtually all non-freshman rooms, are in violation of the University’s housing policy regarding lofted beds. We were told that we have one week to remove all lofts or modify them to meet University standards, which have gone virtually unenforced and unenforced for the last twenty-five years.

With midterms looming for all students in the next two weeks, this will entail major disruption for all the residents of Carroll Hall as rooms are torn apart. Instead of waiting until years end to implement the removal of all lofts, as may seem practical, they have chosen this week, with three-fourths of the year already gone by, to demand compliance.

If we do not meet the University’s demands, our rooms will be dismantled, wood from our lofts will be thrown in a dumpster, and we will be fined, and charged for this service.

As residents of the smallest, most unified dorm on campus, our lofts help to not only maximize our space, but they are one of the things that mark our dorm as unique. Now, after all the talk of how special this University is, action has been taken to strip our home of one of it’s most useful and enjoyable elements.

‘Quilters’ tells poignant story of pioneer women

The idea for the play came about when Newman auditioned for a play using an excerpt from the book. Although she did not get the part, she was encouraged to shape the women’s stories into a play of her own.

The play is unique because it is told from the women’s points of view, resulting in a broad display of life’s elements. By writing the play from the women’s perspectives, we are led in on the challenge of day-to-day survival.

“Find it admirable, the strength and fortitude people had to keep going, heading west when life was challenging,” said Sullivan.

“Families included sometimes twelve to sixteen children. Their biggest enemy was the weather, and simply surviving was their daily task.”

The quilts the women and their daughters produced are telling of the many events of their lives, especially the survival of the weather, births, weddings and traveling. Each patch tells a different story. The quilt serves as both a family album and a rite of passage, and certainly a legacy to pass along to future generations.

The set, especially the backdrop, lets the viewer invest as much imagination as he or she wants into this intriguing production.

The stage and technical crew, directed by scenographer Shaun Weiler, have quite a bit of navigating to do with over 120 light cues, helping with costume changes and ensuring a smoothly-run production.

The enchanting music and dramatic tales of admirable women and their families promises to be a real treat for the eye and the soul.

Tickets for ‘Quilters’ are on sale at the Saint Mary’s Box Office. There will be four showings in the Moreau Center for the Arts. Admission is $3 for students and $4 for adults.

Sullivan family teams up in ‘Quilters’

By ANNE DELANEY

For Katie Sullivan, “Quilts,” the poignant musical being put on at Saint Mary’s this weekend is especially meaningful.

Here is a situation that ironi­cally goes right along with the mother-daughter theme of the play, as her mother, Barbara Sullivan, joins in the production of “Quilters” as musical director.

“Who is more dependable and trustworthy than your mother?” Katie Sullivan asked herself when looking for someone to take charge of the play’s music. “We needed to hire a musical director, and she worked out perfectly.”

As it turns out, no one has rehearsed her part better than Barbara Sullivan, who has been involved in music throughout her life.

She holds three degrees in music, has worked with choirs, and was part of a musical theater team with her late husband for years.

Having just retired from Eastern Illinois University, she has given her free time for the past six weeks, moving back to South Bend to help sculpt the tripartite role the actress plays.

“It’s a tremendous amount of collaboration, juggling time and it asks a lot of the actors,” said Katie. “Each actress plays 12-15 roles, and to integrate dancing, singing and staging requires a lot of communication.”

Sullivan is used to working with her parents. She attended the same university where her father was a theater professor and played in many musicals with him as director.

Now she has the chance to work with her mother, who has been a fundamental element in the musical, and total, success of ‘Quilters.’

The musical play has 26 tricky songs with many parts, but Sullivan and her troupe of piano, bass, flute, guitar, mandolin and violin have conquered their difficulty.

After “Quilters” closes, the Sullivan can add a patch to their own quilt to commemorate their legacy of acting successes.

Vaughn no fluke, ready for Red Sox

By ROB GLOSTER
Associated Press

FORT MYERS, Fla.
Mo Vaughn got his chance last season to prove he belonged in the major leagues. This year, he can show that his success in 1993 was no fluke.

Vaughn became Boston’s power hitter last season with 29 homers, 101 RBIs and a .297 average. He was ninth in the American League with a slugging percentage of .509.

But Vaughn is not impressed by that success, and says it just increases the pressure on him this season.

"You’ve got to put up numbers four or five or six or seven years in a row to be, in my eyes, considered a player," he said. "Not one year does a career make.

"I just want to prove to myself that I can go in and do this thing year in and year out. It’s probably going to be even worse than it was last year — there are no excuses for me now, because I’ve done it once."

Vaughn had a miserable rookie year in 1992, batting just .234 and struggling defensively at first base. He went to spring training last year without a definite spot in the Red Sox lineup.

But he beat out Carlos Quintana for the first base job by being Boston’s top hitter during the spring, and continued his torrid batting into the regular season — hitting .417 in his first 20 games.

Vaughn hit .362, with eight homers and 27 RBIs, as the Red Sox went 20-7 in July and temporarily jumped into the AL East race. He also became much better defensively in 1993, though he still led American League first basemen with 16 errors.

Manager Butch Hobson said he expects similar offensive output from Vaughn this season, as well as continued improvement on defense.

"Mo practices with an undersized glove to improve his fielding. "I look for him to be one of the outstanding first basemen in the American League before he’s through," Hobson said. "Mo is just going to pick up (offensively) where he left off last year."

Vaughn said he has not forgotten "the trials and tribulations of 1992," and worked hard in the offseason to make sure he doesn’t revert to the form of his frustrating rookie year.

"I have a tremendous amount to prove to myself and to prove to people," he said. "I take the game personally, I don’t take it on a professional level or a business level."

Vaughn, 26, is frustrated that he has not yet agreed on a 1994 contract with the Red Sox, and hopes that situation can be resolved within days.

Harding has lackluster performance

By WENDY E. LANE
Associated Press

HAMAR, Norway

Nobody booed, and she didn’t fall.

She didn’t do anything spectacular, either.

Yes, Tonya Harding did what she came to do today — skate at the Olympics. She not only skated, she completed her short program without hitting the ice, something she hadn’t done in a week of practices.

But after all Harding went through to get to Norway, her time on the ice was a bit anticlimactic.

The only thing resembling fireworks was the design on her dress, and she made no emotional display during or after her skate.

"I was happy with it," she said afterwards. "I’m happy with the performance."

After all the headlines and hype, Harding was just another skater.

Dressed in the same red-sequined halter top outfit she wore during last month’s U.S. championships, Harding stepped on the ice to enthusiastic applause and more than a dozen American flags waving.

"There was a lot of support out there, and it felt great," Harding said.

She opened her two-minute, 40-second program with a triple lutz-double toe loop combination, but had to step between the jumps to keep her balance. That would result in a deduction by the judges.

"I thought it (the lutz) was fine," she said. "You can’t be perfect every time."

Two-time gold medalist Katarina Witt skated fourth and was the early highlight, overshadowing Harding, who seemed tentative in her skating.

Then Bonaly, the European champion, skated a nearly flawless routine and moved into first place.

Harding stood fourth before the final six skaters, including Kerrigan and world champion Baiul, took their turns.

Kerrigan was scheduled for 26th.

Look out world—Jamaican bobsled team getting serious

By TONY CZUCZYK

LILLEHAMMER, Norway

Jamaica’s bobsledders, who blazed a trail on ice for hot countries, have two new race weapons — acupressure and money.

They’re part of a serious effort to fight what driver Dudley Stokes calls the “curiosity angle.”

Time was, the Jamaicans sold team T-shirts and a crew member’s reggae record to help pay for their 1988 Winter Olympics debut.

Now, for the first time, they have their own team doctor — who uses acupressure to heal race injuries — and a corporate sponsor.

“I’d like to build a team that in 1998 will be in medal contention,” he said Monday.

"Along the way, races will be a continuing quest to convince skeptics.

"Perceptions can only be changed by results,” Stokes said. "We are going to keep going. We think that the people will come around to the point of view that we have a serious team."

USA Hockey falls to Finland, medal bid ends

By HOWARD ULMAN
Associated Press

LILLEHAMMER, Norway, Thursday - The Americans worked six months, but will go home without an Olympic hockey medal. The Finns have won six games, and look almost unstoppable.

Finland dominated the United States like they have dominated every other opponent, winning 6-1 Wednesday and moving into Friday's semifinals against Canada.

Canada beat the Czech Republic 3-2 in overtime, while Sweden played Germany and Slovaks faced Russia in late quarterfinals.

Finland was seeded only seventh when the tournament began. But it is 6-0 and has outscored its foes 31-5.

The Americans are 1-2-3, beating only a weak Italian team 7-1. They have gone 14 years without a medal, their longest stretch ever, since winning gold in 1980.

"We never got rolling offensively in this tournament except against a team against Italy," U.S. coach Tim Taylor said. "We had our moments for brilliance and we had our moments of pressure.

While Canada and Finland improved with later roster changes, Taylor stuck by his word and made few additions to the group he assembled last August in Connecticut for their first practice.

"In the United States, there are not a lot of players available to us, certainly not as many as some other countries have," he said.

The United States begin consolation play Thursday against the Czechs and can finish no higher than fifth. It came in fourth in 1992 when it lost the bronze medal game to Czechoslovakia.

Finland got four power-play goals and one shorthanded goal.

Misled Opportunities

I confess to Almighty God, and to you, my brother and sisters, that I have sinned through my own fault in my thoughts and in my words, in what I have done, and IN WHAT I HAVE FAILED TO DO:...

The PLO and the Israelis do better. The inability to reconcile pedagogical and pastoral concerns brings pain and sadness of missed opportunity, at least to me. Right now with the advent of the Names Project Memorial Quilt this weekend, questions and comments are back in the public eye. The Quilt is not really about homosexuality, it's about a disease, and the mourning of the dead. I saw many more people die of this plague through heterosexual transmission in East Africa than we have witnessed here in the U.S., where it is often seen as a strictly gay disease. In fact, there are at least three Notre Dame alumni with panels in the small number of sections of the Quilt that will be in St. Peter's Cathedral this weekend. Perhaps in their memory, some new opportunity could be sought for healing this unrequited tension on our campus.

For all of us, there are so many ways fear keeps us from doing the good we should. To speak to a friend about a problem, to travel to a strange country, to ask a companion for forgiveness, to call up somebody for a date, to change majors when the old one is boring all these things require trust, and the defeat of fear, if the opportunity for growth is to be there.

In the self-examinations of Lent, maybe we can spend a little extra time calling for the growth of wisdom and courage in each of us, that we might enjoy the sweet taste of freedom and avoid the sadness and pain of missed opportunities.

Five Blair’s favorite number

By ALAN ROBINSON
Associated Press

HAMAR, Norway

Gimme five.

That five — count 'em, five — gold medals around Bonnie Blair's neck. Five golden tributes to greatness.

More golds than Dick Butcher or Brian Boitano, Dorothy Hamill or Peggy Fleming. Mary Lou Retton or Wilma Rudolph ever won.

It's five more golds than Nancy Kerrigan or Tonya Harding will likely ever win.

She's not colorful, not controversial, not conversational.

She's not a quote machine who loves to hear herself talk and see her words in print. She's so much the All-American Girl, she'd probably have to pay to be on "Inside Edition" or "Hard Copy" rather than the other way around.

So, then, what exactly is Bonnie Blair? Only the greatest U.S. female Olympic ever, the greatest U.S. Winter Olympic ever.

And to her, that's plenty good enough.

"Maybe in time I'll realize what I've done," Blair said Wednesday after winning her second straight Olympic speedskating 1,000-meter gold medal. "All I know is I loved skating and loved competing."

And loved winning — possibly, more than any American female athlete of our time.

"I think she will be remembered as the greatest women's speedskating sprinter ever, one of our greatest athletes ever," U.S. coach Nick Thometz said.

"Bonnie just does not like to lose. Maybe that's why she hardly ever does."

Blair won the way she almost always wins — easily, with little flair, little flash, just all dash.

She skated her best time in six years — one minute, 18.74 seconds — to defeat silver medalist Anke Baier of Germany by 1.38 seconds, the largest margin in Olympic history.

The bronze went to old rival Ye Qiaoqiao, who beat Blair in the 1993 world championships only to injure a knee and lose her gold-medal speed. For Ye, bronze in 1:20.12 was good, but not good enough.

"I think maybe that if I don't get hurt I will set world records," she said. "I wish I could get more gold. Bonnie, she has so many gold medals."

How many? Blair has one more than sprinter Evelyn Ashford, swimmer Janet Evans and diver Pat McCormick, four-time gold medalists who were tied for the lead among U.S. women Olympians.

Among U.S. Winter Olympians, Blair's six medals — she also took bronze in the 1,000 in 1988 — are one more than Eric Heiden, who won all five speedskating races in 1980.

"There goes another record," Heiden said.

The only Winter Olympians to win more gold medals than Blair are Lydia Skoblikova of the Soviet Union, who won six speedskating golds in 1960 and 1980, and East African skier Lyubov Egorova of Russia, who has three golds this year and six for her career.
Irish to face Titans for first

By DYLAN BARMER
Spurn Wire

The Notre Dame women's basketball team will shoot for its second straight win tonight, as they travel to beautiful Detroit to take on the Titans of Detroit Mercy.

The Titans have been rolling out wins like new Ford Explorers off the Detroit assembly lines lately, having won five straight to move to 7-2 in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference, and in doing so have set up a crucial matchup with the Irish, who are also 7-2 in MCC play.

The Titans are led by freshman guard Autumn Rademacher, who is averaging 14.8 points per game. While Autumn's shots have fallen like leaves all season, she is by no means the lone threat that Detroit Mercy possesses.

Four of the Titan starters are averaging in double figures in scoring, and Amira Danfourth's 14.5 points per game put her right behind Rademacher.

Titan freshman Michelle DeHaan is the main threat on the boards, averaging 7.7 rebounds per game while contributing 11.3 points each outing. Faith Cyr is also a tough player, coming into tonight's game averaging 12.2 points and 6.6 rebounds per contest.

The Irish, who are coming off a 69-54 road win against Louisville, will be led by the hot hand of freshman miracle-worker Beth Morgan, who leads the team in scoring at 17.3 points per game.

Morgan has scored 20 or more points in the past five games, and is on her way to becoming only the third freshman in Notre Dame history to lead the team in scoring.

Junior forward Leslie Bowen continues to perform well for the Irish, averaging 10.6 points per game to go along with a Barkley-esque 9.8 rebounds a game.

Senior center Tootie Jones has also put together a quietly successful season for the 17-6 Irish, averaging 9.3 points while grabbing six rebounds per outing.

At first glance it may appear that all Notre Dame has to do to win is show up. That is, if history is any kind of barometer.

The Irish have won 13 straight against the Titans, and have not lost to Detroit Mercy since a 94-86 road loss during the 1986-87 season.

The Irish are 7-2 all-time against the Titans at Detroit, with the last three contests there being won by a margin of 14.3 points.

This is basketball, not history class, though, and the Irish will certainly need a strong effort in order to claim a victory over the no doubt vengeful Titans.

Detroit will gain possession of first place in the MCC with a victory, and the Irish would prefer to continue to enjoy the view from the top rather than be stuck chasing after the Titans.

Following tonight's matchup, the Irish will be left with only two regular season games before the start of the MCC tournament on March 5. Both those games are also MCC matchups, and may prove critical in establishing a strong position in the standings.

North Carolina squeaks by fiesty Irish, 80-71

Inside strength and talent to much for Irish

By JASON KELLY
Associate Sports Editor

They came in waves, two or three at a time, taking turns firing at a Notre Dame team that just wouldn't die.

It's hard to believe that No. 4 North Carolina used just eight players in Wednesday's 80-71 win.

Its bench seemed bottomless. But a revolving door of five starters and three freshmenn was enough to wear down the Irish, who stretched another top ten team to the limit.

They made pests of themselves again, trailing just 64-61 with less than five minutes remaining.

Notre Dame had a chance to move ahead after a technical foul on the Tar Heels' Rasheed Wallace with 4:11 left.

"We're a missed free throw and a turnover later, North Carolina began a 7-0 run to swamp the pests away.

"It started to slip away when we couldn't take advantage of the technical situation," Irish coach John MacLeod said. "That turnover seemed to break our back."

Notre Dame bent but didn't break at the end of the first half, falling behind by six. That deficit disappeared early in the second half.

Ryan Hoover hit a pair of 3-pointers to give the Irish a 53-49 lead with 11:49 remaining.

He caught a finger in the eye in the first half and complained of blurred vision at halftime. "His 3-pointers indicated he was probably refocusing," MacLeod joked.

Monty Williams was one Irish player who didn't get too many good looks at the basket, finishing with a team-high 20 points on just 8-for-22 shooting.

After scoring 15 points in the first five minutes of the second half, he managed just two more points the rest of the way.

"I thought we did a decent job on Monty," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said. "But he got loose early in the second half."

And he got lost late in the ball.

Despite his offensive absence, Notre Dame hung around thanks to the scrappy play of sophomore Keith Kurkowski.

He scored points including a spinning off-balance jumper to pull the Irish to within one, and less than five minutes left.

But the opportunistic Tar Heels were better. They made free throw and made the Irish free throws down the stretch.

"Notre Dame was more ready than we were at the beginning," Smith said, shrugging off the idea of a letdown in his team's only non-conference game this month.

"We came in like we would have if we were playing an (Atlantic Coast Conference) opponent."

Despite his usual strong game, Monty Williams and the Irish were unable to pull off the upset over North Carolina.

Super freshmenn are ready for the prime time

The transcripts in the Office of the Registrar in Chapel Hill read 'Class of '97.' Don't be fooled.

The three prominent members of the North Carolina class of '97, Rashad Wallace, Jerry Stackhouse, and Jeff McInnis, lived up to their billing as the best freshman class in the country last night, scorching the Notre Dame defense for 20 of their team's 43 second half points.

What makes the accomplishments of this talented group even more impressive is the fact that they play with the maturity of seniors.

The credentials of this group were impeccable before joining the Tar Heels this season, so much so that senior Pat Sullivan, a starter on last year's national championship team, voluntarily redshirted himself for the win.

"His performance, it is safe to say that they have arrived. "Bringing those three freshmen off the bench gives them a pretty strong group."

Technically, they are relegated to watching the tip from comfortable seats on the bench, but in reality, only potential lottery pick Eric ObseiVer/John Kelly

Resilient Irish ready for Spartans

How important can one win be in a season of over 35 games?

If you have lost your last six games and are in danger of dropping even further in the standings, the answer is simple: Vital.

Vitaly important.

The Notre Dame hockey team faces off against 5th ranked Michigan State at 7 pm tonight in the 'JAC.'

For the Irish, with the start of the postseason just three weeks away, a reversal of the losing trend is necessary immediately.

The Irish cannot afford to drop many more games if they are to receive a reasonable seed in the CCHA playoffs.

"Obviously, we don't want to drop any further," said coach Ric Schafer. "Our fate is in our own hands. We need some points but we just have to worry about playing good hockey. It'd be nice to get the breaks, but we're going to try and make our own."

As for the confidence level of the team, it is, surprisingly, relatively steady, according to Schafer.

"We're a resilient bunch. We know we can only go out and do our best and we've done that. You just can't beat yourself. They are still fighting, and sooner or later, we'll win some games."

The task will not be easy by any means, as the Spartans boast a solid 18-9-4 mark and have beaten top-ranked Michigan twice this season.

Michigan State is strong all around. Left wingers Steve Guolla and Rem Murray and center Amon Carter are among the league's top seven scorers.

This dangerous trio has combined for 53 goals, more than half the total of the entire Irish squad.

On the other side of the red line, goalie Mike Bukaz leads a stifling defense. Bukaz is among the league leaders in nearly every category and is the final line of defense that allows just over three goals per contest.

"They're a funny team," commented Schafer. "They've gotten beaten out 11-1 and then turned around and beaten Michigan. We've had some good games with them, plus, it's a home game."

Earlier this season, Notre Dame faced Michigan State in a home and home series. The Spartans took the first game at Munn Arena 3-1, but the Irish returned home and managed a 1-1 tie.

At this point, a point would be nice, but the Irish are looking for the win.

"The necessary ingredients are to have the goaltender (Greg Louder) on top of his game, to score more than three goals, and to play top-notch defense," continued Schafer. "We've had our moments. Now we want to start making mine."
