Dining hall changes include menu, layout

By JOSE BLANCO
News Writer

The beginning of the school year has brought changes to the Notre Dame Food Services, as both the South and North Dining Halls have undergone significant renovations and menu modifications.

At South Dining Hall (SDH), major improvements have resulted in a wider variety of foods available to students. In addition to the traditional menu, specialty foods have been included, allowing students to enjoy several kinds of pastas, Mexican dishes, and homestyle cheese, pepperoni, and vegetable pizza. A breakfast waffle bar and a gourmet coffee stand have also been added.

In addition to the expanded menu, North Dining Hall (NDH) has also experienced a series of renovations, including changing the layout of the dining hall to improve efficiency. Food court system has been adopted so that students can help themselves to their favorite foods daily. NDF offers Mexican food at "Fiesta Grande" and Chinese food at the "Shanghai Trading Company" as well as partial to Italian food, the Pastaria and the Pizzaria have been continued. The "Grab n' Go" counters have also been expanded to offer a greater variety of foods in less time.

Students wait on line at the "Pizzaria," one of many new food specialty bars at the dining halls. The bars and changed layout of the dining halls were implemented to permit more variety and an improved flow of traffic.

The body of a Notre Dame graduate student was discovered Saturday evening by a hiker, according to St. Joseph County Police.

The body of Alexandre Bumbacea, 29, a graduate student in mathematics, was identified by police after being found in a wooded area around McClain and George Avenue.

According to police, the body was discovered approximately 150 yards from McClain and George Avenue by a 15-year-old boy who was walking through the woods on his way home.

According to an investigation by the St. Joseph County Special Crimes Unit and county police, the body had been held in the woods for approximately seven to 10 days. A Notre Dame Credit Union card issued to Bumbacea was found by the Notre Dame math department members on his body, police said.

Police concluded through their investigation that Bumbacea had died of self-inflicted injuries. Police said Bumbacea, who was from Romania, left a note written in Romanian indicating his intentions over a week ago and had been depressed recently.

Notre Dame Professor Frederico Xavier of the mathematics department described Bumbacea as a "very fine gentleman and an outstanding student."

Xavier said that Bumbacea did very well on his graduate courses and had recently completed a set of math exams. "He was a very good student. This is a sad thing," said Professor Julia Knight, director of graduate in mathematics.

Bumbacea had only been at Notre Dame since September of 1993 and was studying differential geometry, Xavier said.

"This is a great loss, not only for me personally because I knew him, but because he was such a talented person," Xavier said.

The improvements at the dining halls have become a major topic of conversation among students, and while most students have responded favorably to the modifications, some have expressed their concern over lunchtime congestion.

"Everyone I see the lines in North, I lose my appetite," said St. Edward's Hall junior Rafael Gonzalez. "It's really a hassle because so many people are so rushed for time during lunch."

However, other students praised the wide variety of specialty options afforded by the renovations.

I really like the fact that they are offering healthier types of food," said Lewis Hall junior Laura Tuchohuer. "Still, I really miss the weekend buffets."

The workability of the new system will take a few weeks to determine, said David Prenkowki, director of Notre Dame Food Services.

Prenkowki said that employees were pleased with the restructuring of the dining halls. He added that meetings were held in the spring and summer with the purpose of giving the employees the opportunity to express their own ideas in regards to the proposed plans.

However, several employees expressed dissatisfaction with the efficiency of the new system. "The longer lines and fewer exits are leading to a lot of congestion," said Connah Hall sophomore Amy Cassidy. "The middle and Pastaria sections are very crowded, while the Chinese and Mexican sections are much emptier."

Prenkowki noted that major physical renovations are planned in the future for SDH. These renovations will enable it to accommodate both a food court system and the two planned dormitories on South Quad.

Library responds to needs

By EDWARD IMBUS
News Writer

The Hesburgh Memorial Library implemented several significant changes in their services and collections this summer.

One of the more notable changes is that security guards will no longer examine backpacks when students exit the library.

However, students must still hand over any library materials to the library monitors for inspection prior to leaving.

Other visible changes include the remodeling of the second floor, where the northeast corner was made into a "quiet study area" for individual study in carrels. Over 150 of the individual study desks were moved into the section for student use.

Another major change was the relocation of the graduate student study section from the seventh to the tenth floor. According to Miller, desk locks were installed to ensure privacy and quiet. Study tables were also moved into the areas near the computer laboratories so students would be able to study while waiting for a computer to become available.

According to Miller, however, many other serious changes may be on the way.

An ad hoc committee on University libraries recommended that the formal University Committee on Library administration intends to continue adapting and improving its collections and services to enhance Notre Dame overall.
A stroll down Labor Day lane

Back in the days of my public school career, the Labor Day weekend was the traditional start of summer. This long three-day weekend stood as the last bastion of freedom until parent-teacher conferences and in-service days, which were always a dark October.

Signs of the end of summer were marked as such—only that it shows a time back brings memories of grade school, hot lunch programs, and long, dazed hours in ancient school buildings.

One memory involves the very first day of school. Upon returning to school for the fourth grade, I was amazed that I couldn’t find my name on the fourth grade teacher’s list. With tears streaming down my face, I scanned the third grade lists—in case I was held back—but I was not there either. All other alternatives were impossible, including synesthesia and the third grade vision— uninstall Todd School didn’t want me anymore.

October.

We have now, sometimes you just have to stop and smell the scented markers.

The memories go on and on. All the little things you don’t usually think about, like running recess. The views expressed in the Inside Column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

Marketplace bomb kills ten, injures 26 in Armenia

A bomb exploded Sunday in a market near Armenia’s border with Georgia, killing 10 people and injuring 26, officials said. Two of the dead were children of nearby Armenian village, Armenia’s rival, suggesting a political motive for the bombing.

The blast also destroyed a home, where the victims of the blast were staying. The area is reputed to be linked to a six-year-old war between Armenia and Azerbaijan over the disputed enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh. The explosion occurred within 30 miles of Azerbaijan. Last April, a bomb killed three people and injured more than two dozen aboard a passenger train heading from Tabriz, the Georgian capital, to Yerevan. Georgian officials suspected the blast bombing was retaliation for a submarine bombing in the Armenian capital the previous month. Azerbaijan blamed that bombing, which killed 14 people, on Armenia.

For Clinton, vacation proves relaxing

The wind was chilly, the hour early and the first shot not a pretty sight. "Oh, I tore it off," President Clinton said as he drove his golf ball astray. He winced and said: "Come rescue us, will you? We barely know what we're doing." But less than two hours later, Clinton was leaping from his golf cart and trading high fives with partner Vernon Jordan, a lobbyist and longtime Clinton friend. Clinton played nine holes and scored 39 — encouraging for a guy who wants to break 80 on 18 holes before he turns 50, two years from now. From there, Clinton went to Union Chapel, an interdenominational meeting place built in Oak Bluffs in 1870, especially for the island’s summer visitors. The Rev. Allen Hand, pastoral asistant at Grace Episcopal Church in nearby Vineyard Haven, delivered the guest sermon, stressing the theme of hope, as it is the name of Clinton’s birthplace. He opened with a prayer for the country, the president and Congress, "to lead us to the paths of justice and peace."

After church, the Clinton caravan rolled into Vineyard Haven, where the president and first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton went to lunch at the Black Dog Tavern. Other folks with reservations found themselves facing a police barricade and a shut down way. But Secret Service agents politely helped to sort matters out, and soon the flow of diners was not normal. Clinton vacation still has a few days to run. Clinton plans to interrupt it Monday to fly to the Bath Iron Works in Bath, Maine, to inspect a new destroyer, and then to stay in Chicago for several days, which will entertain with management in company decisions.

Unser wins despite stomach pains

Not even a severe bout of food poisoning could stop Unser Jr., who raced off to his third straight victory Sunday in the Vanocuver Molson-Indy. The victory in the inaugural Pacific-12 race made him the third American, after Wes Ferrell and A.J. Foyt, to win ever race in Group A.

The 32-year-old was able to win the race after a pit stop in last place.

"I think I just had the right amount of gas and the right amount of altitude," Clinton said.

U.S., Cuba continue talks

By LOUIS MEIXLER
Associated Press

NEW YORK - The United States and Cuba began a third day of talks Sunday on ways to halt the flood of Cuban refugees, but prospects for a quick accord appeared slim.

The United States has been holding out for a quick accord and refuses to discuss lifting the 32-year-old embargo. It says Cuba must implement democratic reforms before the embargo can be ended.

After a one-day break, the two sides met again at the U.S.-sponsored talks with V.I.P. Cuba President Miguel Diaz-Canel and U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Walter Dellinger.

The United States and Cuba have been in talks since May 28 on ways to halt the flood of Cuban refugees, but prospects for a quick accord appeared slim.

The United States has been holding out for a quick accord and refuses to discuss lifting the 32-year-old embargo. It says Cuba must implement democratic reforms before the embargo can be ended.

About 130,000 Cubans have emigrated to the United States since the beginning of the embargo in 1961, according to the U.S. State Department.

The United States is the only state to fly the rebel banner - a blue X with white stars on a red background - above its territory.

The NAACP, which represents black citizens, has been trying to remove the Confederate battle flag from the state Capitol.

Cuba and the United States are expected to get visas to travel to the United States this year, compared to the more than 30,000 Cubans who have taken to the sea in rickety rafts and boats, mostly in the past month.

Reversing longstanding U.S. policy, Clinton's administration has said it will stop helping the Cubans into the United States. Instead, the Coast Guard is taking them to the U.S. Navy base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Panama agreed officially Sunday to accept as many as 10,000 Cuban migrants to relieve overcrowding at Guantanamo.

The refugees will be housed at a U.S. military camp outside Panama City.

U.S.-sponsored Radio Marti stepped up warnings to Cubans in shortwave broadcasts Sunday of the high risk of drowning in the Straits of Florida, the 90- mile passage between Cuba and the Florida Keys.

"So many people have lost their lives at sea, drowning in the treacherous currents, risking attack by sharks," the broadcast said. "It is a death sentence."

The repeated messages also warned Cubans not to try to enter the Guantnamo base through Cuban-owned mines, fields, saying all efforts were being sought in the negotiations in New York to allow legal emi-

Hundreds of Confederate battle flags snapped in the breeze of this coastal resort Sunday, a fierce answer to an NAACP demand that the rebel banner be removed from the state Capitol.

The flags of all sizes adorned cars and were waved by chilzons, told the cheering, all-white crowd.

"We've given them everything they wanted. Now they want our flag," William Carter, president of the state chapter of the Council of Conservative Citizens, told the cheering, all-white crowd.

"If we can have a Martin Luther King Day, a black history month, why can't we have the Confederate battle flag fly above the Statehouse?" Carter asked.

Carter was the state campaign manager of former Ku Klux Klan member and presidential candidate David Duke.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said Saturday it would hold off imposing an economic boycott on the state to force the flag's removal, at least until the state Supreme Court rules on the issue.

South Carolina is the only state to fly the rebel banner - a blue X with white stars on a red background - above its Capitol. Georgia and Mississippi include the flag's design on their state flags.

Defenders honor the flag as a tribute to Southern culture and history. Opponents say it is a blatant symbol of slavery and bigotry.

"Every time I see that flag, it is an attack on my dignity," NAACP national Chairman William Gibson said Saturday at a Hilton Head march attended by about 1,000 people, mostly blacks.

More demonstrations are planned for other South Carolina cities.

Hartley: Cease-fire to continue

By SHAWN POGATCHNIK
Associated Press

A car bomb blew up outside the headquarters of the IRA's Sinn Fein political allies on Sunday, shattering glass, but failing to shake their resolve to keep peace moves alive.

"This was an attack on the peace process, but we will not be intimidated by the loyalist death squads, nor will we be deflected from the peace process," Sinn Fein city councillor Tom Hartley, on the fourth day of the IRA's cease-fire.

"This office will be open to tomorrow morning," said Belfast Sinn Fein councillor Eamonn McCann. The blast, which destroyed ceilings in the empty headquarter, caused no injuries but several people were treated for shock.

No one immediately claimed responsibility.

McCann said a car drove up to the building just as the IRA, whose men were seen running away.

On Sunday, Sinn Fein indicated it would accept a peace settlement that stops short of its traditional goal of a united Ireland.

Sinn Fein, a senior Sinn Fein member and former Republic Army chief of staff, said the cease-fire of the independent south and British-ruled north was the best solution.

"He added: "If the Irish people decided on something else then we, as democrats, would have to accept it."

Sinn Fein had given such assurances before. But the comments of McGuinness, a former Irish Republic Army chief of staff, had added significance as the British government weighs the soundness of the cease-fire.

But Sinn Fein remains adamant that any new Ireland settlement must include a British commitment to withdraw its forces, a point untested by demonstrations Sunday of Sinn Fein's army bases in Catholic west Belfast and on border roads closed by British army engineers. Protestors painted IRA slogans on the bases and reopened one of the roads with bulldozers.

Catholics and Protestants in congregations all over Northern Ireland included special prayers for peace in their Sunday services.

In middle-class south Belfast, worshippers from both sides of the religious divide gathered for joint peace services.

But the Rev. Ian Paisley, leader of his own anti-Catholic evangelical church, warned his supporters that the IRA cease-fire and a British desire to woo Sinn Fein was "a close destruc­tion of our faith and of our freedom.""We are told to accept this green olive branch," Paisley, a member of the British and Eu­ropean parliaments, preached from the pulpit of his Martyrs' Memorial Free Presbyterian Church. "Then we are told they (the IRA) have no regrets for what they have done. Oh God, it is indeed an evil day."

The Irish government is pushing ahead with plans to bring Sinn Fein into open debate quickly. Albert Reynolds, the Irish premier, confirmed he expects to have face-to-face talks with Gerry Adams, the Sinn Fein leader, in Dublin this week.

It would be the first such meeting between Irish and Sinn Fein heads since "the troubles" began 25 years ago, when Britain deployed troops to quell street violence between Catholics and Protestants.

"Wednesday's cease-fire decision makes Sinn Fein leaders totally in the constitutional process, that they want to find solutions by inclusive negotiations," Reynolds said.

But British Prime Minister John Major emphasized Sunday that his government needed firmer assurance from Adams that the cease-fire was permanent.

"We have not had an absolutely unambiguous signal that this is for good," Major said in a BBC television interview.

Commanders of the two main Protestant-based paramilitary groups, meanwhile, met in secret this weekend to consider calling their own truce.

In the 1990s the Ulster Defence Association and Ulster Volunteer Force, called loyalist groups for their determination to maintain the British link, fought more than has the IRA.

Nigerian unions suspend strike

By FRANK AIGBOGUN

LAGOS, Nigeria

With hundreds of frustrated oil workers already back at work, leaders of Nigeria's petroleum unions said Sunday they were ready to suspend their 2-month-old strike for democracy because of a lack of public support.

"We have done our best," Arthur Onowari, spokesman for one of the striking unions, told The Associated Press. "We knew when it started that it was up to all Nigerians to save the country and not the oil workers alone."

Workers in the oil industry, which drives Nigeria's economy, went on strike July 4, crippling this nation of 90 million people with fuel shortages.

They demanded Gen. Sani Abacha's regime surrender power to Moshood K.O. Abiola, the man widely believed to have won the annulled 1993 presidential election that was to end a decade of military rule.

Strikes, protests and riots have buffeted the nation since then, but none hit as hard as the oil workers.

The suspension, to be discussed by union leaders on Monday, looked to be a face-saving move. Hundreds of strikers, frustrated by lack of support from other Nigerians, returned to work in the past week.

"The military has been using a combination of bribery and intimidation to get our men back to work," Onowari said, acknowledging the strike has virtually collapsed already.

Abiola was arrested June 23 after he declared himself presidential candidate. Onowari said it was up to all Nigerians to save Abiola.

"We have done our best," said Onowari. "We have done our best - 'We have done our best'."

A year ago, in the wake of the killing of abortionist David Dean by Michael Griffin, this column presented reasons why such abortions are unjustified in law and morality. Regrettably, the issue is with us again. We can maintain a prop­er perspective on it if we keep some basic principles in mind.

In Ward, his later cases, the Supreme Court defined the unborn child as a nonperson who may be killed at the discretion of others. The Court, appeals people from interfering with the killing of the unborn child and even makes that killing legal if performed by public authorities rather than by private persons to use reasonable, and should, there would be no legalized abortion as a nonperson who may be killed at the discretion of others in some situations. However.

Consider two cases. In the first, Abe, an abortionist's assistant in the killing room suddenly has a change of heart moments before the abortion begins. He has a moral right, and probably even a prudential ground. Such recent attacks on abortionists are a symptom of an unraveling of the civil order...
Powlus passes first test

Much-anticipated debut even better than expected

By GEORGE DOHRMANN

CHICAGO

Ron Powlus' first pass was a wobbling spiral, a tad underthrown, but for Notre Dame's intentions, right on target. It went 29-yards to flanker Mike Miller—not a touchdown, but not incomplete. At the moment, it was glorious gratification for Irish fans who had waited long, too long, for the heralded quarterback's debut.

But after the game, that first toss looked more like a mediocre opening act. Like Spinal Tap opening for the Rolling Stones. But, wow, what an encore.

Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz showcased his new toy on the Irish's first offensive play of the game, wasting no time showing the 66,946 fans at Soldier Field that Powlus' debut would break the mold, and with it Northwestern, in the form of a 42-15 win for Notre Dame.

Powlus' first pass was emblematic of his first game at the helm of the Irish offense.

Not perfect but close, and if your a Notre Dame fan, so promising that a dismal performance by the running game reads as only a minor inconvenience.

To offer him the Heisman Trophy today would be a bit of hyperbole.

He's at least six days from securing college football's most prestigious prize.

Notre Dame quarterback Ron Powlus revealed his rumored skills to rave reviews Saturday against Northwestern.

All the expectations? Exceeded. All the questions? Answered. An encore this week against Michigan would thrust him into Heisman contention. Familiar territory for Irish quarterbacks, but not normal for a neophyte.

In fact, there seems to be nothing normal about Powlus. Normal is not 18-of-24 passing for 291 yards and a school record-tying four touchdown strikes.

One game into his career he shares that mark with Steve Beurelien, Daryle

Irish connected on a 42-yard completion to Miller, a pass he said he had been practicing heading into the game because it was slightly underthrown.

Northwestern responded with a 22-yard field goal by Sam Valenzisi, following a nine-yard loss by Dennis Lundy on the drive on a twice broken collarbone, to lead 14-3 at halftime to some degree. This was the Irish’s lowest scoring output since a 26-7 loss at Illinois in 1989, a game that saw nothing but diplomas at the end zone.

No domination for Davie’s new-look defense

Penalties and poor run defense diminish individual performances

By MIKE NORBUT
Associated Press Editor

He came in to Notre Dame this past spring planning to put his stamp of aggression on the defense, but all defensive coordinator Bob Davie could do was stamp his foot in frustration.

Frustration for the mistakes, frustration for the penalties, frustration for the mental mistakes.

Granted, the Irish allowed only 15 Northwestern points, twelve of which came in the final quarter, but the scoreboard cannot clearly justify how well the Wildcat offense handled the aggressive Notre Dame defense.

"Northwestern won the battle up front," Irish head coach Lou Holtz said. "They controlled the line of scrimmage and were able to run the football.

"The Wildcats ran right through the Irish defense, deftly directing passes to Northwestern’s coach Gary Barnett said, adding with a twinge of sarcasm, "He's already won the national championship.

Regardless of the turnovers or the low point total allowed, Davie or the Notre Dame defense cannot be pleased with the total defensive performance, especially in preparation for Michigan.

"Northwestern gave us a lot of problems," Taylor said. "We need to come out on a higher level next time." If they don’t, the Wolverine offense may stamp them—into the ground.

INDIVIDUAL STATISTICS

Ron Powlus tied a Notre Dame record with his four touchdown passes.

A Wildcat drive. He also had another interception on a Northwestern two-point conversion play, which he almost converted into two points the other way.

"My play in the games is much like practices," he continued. "I work against players like Derrick Mayes and Mike Miller every day, which helps me a lot." Shown Wooden and Travis Davis also recorded interceptions, and defensive end Brian Hamilton recovered a fumble. The four turnovers were a key to keeping Northwestern out of the end zone for three quarters.

Kevin McDougall threw just eight passes in the entire game against Northwestern in 1993. It wasn’t until the seventh game of the season that he threw his fourth touchdown pass.

And definitely not normal.

When Lou Holtz allows a quarterback to throw on consecutive plays from the two-yard line, it’s a special spectacle.

Kevin McDougall threw just eight passes in the entire game against Northwestern in 1993. It wasn’t until the seventh game of the season that he threw his fourth touchdown pass.

And led the Irish to the brink of a national championship.

One Chicago scribe summarized Powlus’ immaculate inauguration while the media masses awaited the quarterback’s words of wisdom.

"Powlus won’t be coming in for interviews," the writer said. "He’s out on Lake Michigan taking a walk."

That’s what Saturday’s game was all about—getting his feet wet. But he dove in head first on his initial play, a 29-yard toss to Mike Miller through the syrupy sky at Soldier Field that immediately solidified his superstar status.

Powlus spread the praise. He realized that—though his numbers were remarkable—he was also the beneficiary of several sterling snares by Miller and Derrick Mayes.

He even credited the Irish defense "for giving (the offense) the opportunity to be on the field."

But it was Powlus who commanded the most attention. And the most appreciation.

With unusual composure, he surveyed Northwestern’s defense, delicately directing passes to where only his receivers could reach them.

He dodged pass rushers and threaded needles like Betty Ross.

The heir to Notre Dame’s legacy assumed his throne in majestic fashion.

"He’s everything he’s cracked up to be," Wildcat coach Gary Barnett said, adding with a twinge of sarcasm, "He’s already won the Heisman."

Not yet.
Tailback Lee Becton knew what it felt like to have a defender on his back. He finished with just 16 yards rushing on 10 carries.

Irish cornerback Shawn Wooden pulls down Wildcat receiver Dave Beazley.

In the spirit of Star Wars, this too is a trilo-ogy.

Memorial Day, 1994—school is out.
The sun is beating down on my furrowed brow. In the distance, a meadowlark playfully nibbles the remains of a dead cricket. I stand with cruise orders in hand, looking to the sea—NROTC calls me. The wind blows gently, and I think I hear a voice—YES! It is Enya. She is singing my name. Kriiiiiss, yoooohh mussst go onnnnn kr­roooozzz (spelled phonetically). And so I go.

I boarded the plane for San Diego, knowing that due to the nature of NROTC activities, some of us will not be returning home. I wished my mother well, wrote a will on a cocktail napkin, and never looked back.

With the exception of extraordinarily good peanuts, the flight was uneventful. As I waited for my ride to my ship at a Navy abode by the airport, I spied a scrumptious banana nut roll, threw caution to the wind, and indulged. The excitement of getting to the ship, which was destined for Hong Kong, was reaching meltdown proportions. I would have exploded had it not been for a friendly person who let me listen to "Neutron Dance" on his walkman. The view finally came to get me, and I was given a sedative.

I reached my ship, and stared at her in bewilderment. She was gorgeous. An amphibious vessel by trade, she housed a working crew of about 400, and her name was USS Cleveland. I called her mother, and she rocked me to sleep at night.

Since it was only May 20th, and the "Steamin' Cleve" didn't leave until June 9th, the natural alternative was to mingle with the natives. I had met up with several other midshipmen on this sea-worthy vessel, including a jaunty, little more than Scott Fren of Ohio. Traveling in a pack, our first field trip was to a fast food restaurant called Del Taco. Now, I'm not a marketing major, but a monstrous sign that reads, "Get Your Food in 60 Seconds or It's Free!" is typically not a selling point. Despite the warning, I ventured in, and was bold enough to try the Del Taco sauce, known simply as "Del Scorcho." The employees were amazed as I made a mockery of this sauce, described as "BEYOND HOT!"

Yet, this was a mere prelude to our journey south.

I had been there once before, but my return to the waste land of septic systems and ceramic Spuds Mackenzie was truly remarkable. Every city is famous for something, and Tijuana is no exception. To my surprise, I quickly learned that Tijuana is the Chiclet capital of the world. Yes, those little squares of candy that I enjoyed as a child came from this place. Like little pixies, children flitted about, tugging at my shirt, shouting "Chick-lay, chick-lay!" Before I knew it, I had spent $20 on this chewy ambrosia. Yet, while I was happily munching gum, a few others had decided to try some authentic tacos. Much to their dismay, these kids had no clue that they were eating Mexico's answer to Metamucil. Alas, live and learn.

The rest of the week was spent at Mission Beach. I hoisted boards like a mad man, riding the smaller waves with the ten-year-olds, and acting like a local. Take the bus back to the ship, I had a lady who had just got out of prison after serving four sentences for narcotics trafficking and possession of a sawed-off shotgun. I quickly added her to my Christmas card list, and thanked the world of public transportation for a new friend. That night, I slept well, and by morning, we were steamin' towards Hong Kong. Stay tuned for part 2.

Notre Dame students audition for Samuel Beckett's Waiting for Godot.

By PATTI CARSON
Saint Mary's Accent Editor

"This particular play has not been produced at Notre Dame or Saint Mary's in a very long time," according to Rev. David Garrick, CSC, Assistant Professor, Communication and Theater. Father Garrick is directing Waiting for Godot, Samuel Beckett's 1953 production.

"It is one of the key plays of the twentieth century. One cannot fully understand modern theater without seeing this production," he said. Beckett's play is a mix of existentialism, Freudian psychology, Christian myth, and French classical comedy. It ponders the meaning of life through puns and linguistic tricks.

Auditions proper were Wednesday and Thursday. Only five roles were open to the 32 men who auditioned for them. These students read from scripts and they were invited to do some improvising with movement and facial gestures, said Garrick.

The director is responsible for assigning parts, according to Garrick. After making and studying brief notes during auditions, 18 men were called back to auditions on Friday. "Expecting that this will be an enjoyable production. This is not going to be a 'heavy' play. Our production is a tragic comedy, not just a tragedy. Our aim is to maintain a balance between the tragedy and the comedy. The performance will not be a tearful one, but it will have humorous aspects," said Garrick.

Since the five roles were designed specifically for men, many of the technical jobs involved in the production are being done by women, according to Garrick. A number of students, both men and women, will help construct the set. The set for this play was designed by senior Rachel Prouty and the lighting was designed by senior Michael Kersey.

Cavanaugh Hall senior Stacey Stewart is the stage manager for the production. She is assisted by Radin Hall junior Kay Zolkowski and Sue Mignanelli.

"As stage manager, it is my responsibility to run production meetings with designers, directors, and producers. We must also keep track of stage movements. It's an all encompassing job that involves a lot of running around," Stewart said.

Stage managers devote at least five hours per day to the production, including rehearsal time, she said.

Rehearsals usually run from 7 p.m.- 11 p.m. The closer we get to the actual production, the longer we spend practicing, said Stewart.

"The excitement lies not only in the final production, but in the whole journey involved in making that production," said Carroll Hall senior Francis Kelly.

The most rewarding part of being in a production is meeting new people. It is interesting to work with my peers during rehearsal sessions, Kelly said.

Kelly, who previously had a role in "You Can't Take It With You and Marbeth, spends much of his time in Washington Hall. "As a theater major, the production in which I am taking part is my work. I consider the time commitment worthwhile and enjoyable." Why?

Kelly plays the role of Estragon in this production. Other cast members of Waiting for Godot include: Josh Hartman as Vladimir, Jerry Lavin as Pozzo, Scott Paradise as Lucky, and Chris Dobranski as Boy.

Kramer shines as Bears beat Bucs

Kramer, signed away from the Bears needed just six plays to gain control as Gedney hit Carlson in the third period. Carlson left the game with an injured left shoulder, but X-rays were negative. The Bears, starting their first game in the post-Warren Moon era, fell apart early in the second quarter after failing to score from the Colts 5.

Indianapolis

The new look Indianapolis Colts made quick work of the Houston Oilers' 11-game regular-season winning streak Sunday. Marshall Faulk, one of 13 new starters, rushed for 143 yards and three touchdowns in his NFL debut as the Colts shocked the error-plagued Houston Oilers 45-14. Indianapolis played nothing like the team that was 4-12 a year ago. The Colts scored after each of three Houston turnovers and set a record for most points in a season-opening game.

Colts: Faulk run over error-plagued Oilers

By STEVE HERMAN

Indianapolis drove 56 yards on its next possession, including a 31-yard reception by Faulk, accompanied by a personal foul on the Oilers' Kris Dishman that took the Colts to the Houston 15. Three plays later, Harbaugh passed 12 yards to Sean Drawbert at the 4, then Harbaugh faked a handoff to Faulk and flipped the ball to Turner for the touchdown. The Colts' defense and special teams set up the next two scores.

Ashley Ambrose forced a fumble with Travis Hannah on the kickoff after Turner's first touchdown, then it took four plays for the Colts to score again, on a 9-yard pass to Turner with 3:16 left in the third quarter.

On the next Houston possession, Ray Buchanan intercepted Dan Reineking on the 21 and returned the ball 22 yards to the Houston 48, and it took the Colts three plays with Bailey and a pass interference call against Dishman at the 2. Faulk ran in for his second touchdown and the 20-14 lead. It was the 11-game record for Faulk, the second overall pick in the draft, when he was a third-stringer at the University of Alabama.

The Bears offered him $8.1 million for three years to be their No. 1 quarterback. He began earning the money by completing 18 of 25 passes for 212 yards. Two of those completions went to Gedney for the tight end's first touchdowns in the NFL.

The Buccaneers, with an effective but conservative offense, had pulled to 14-9 on a pair of third-quarter field goals by Michael Hunted. But after Husted missed from 54 yards in the fourth period, en route to his 100th pro victory and spoiling for Turner's debut with the Redbirds. Micael completed 17 of 28 passes for 183 yards and one touchdown, and Chris Warren rushed for 100 yards and scored two touchdowns.

Washington rookie quarterback Heath Shuler played for two possessions late in the second quarter after a drive led by starter John Friesz sputtered. Micael had 276 yards passing and 16 yards to Haywood Turner for the touchdown. Then it took four plays for the Bears to score again, on a 9-yard pass to Turner with 3:16 left in the third quarter.

New Formation begins season

By THOMAS SCHLUIT
Sport Writer

In the preseason, the Notre Dame men's soccer team made an important change from a 4-4-2 formation to a 5-2-1-2 in hopes to take advantage of their abundance of excellent midfielders and to increase their offensive pressure. In making this change the Irish eliminated their stopper position and moved last year's stopper, senior Kevin Adkisson, to sweeper. Yet, while these changes proved to be tremendously successful, the No. 16 Irish lost to No. 15 Penn State 1-0 when Travis Berger punched in the winning goal in the 83rd minute. This disappointing loss was no reflection of Adkisson's first half," said Explorer coach Craig Dorman. "The players did everything that I asked them to do. Chris (Raub) and the players in the backfield played very well."

But LaSalle could not overcome the relentless pressure from the Irish, giving up four goals in the second half including two by sophomore Stacia Masters. Despite the 5-0 victory, Irish assistant coach Carla Chin was concerned with the impact of LaSalle's defensive play on the Irish backfield's concentration. "We were a little relaxed in the back," said Chin. "Our passes weren't as crisp as they should have been. That's a result of the ball being on our end of the field for so long, and that's something we'll need to work on."

Overall, however, Chin was satisfied with the Irish performance. "One of the things we've wanted to work on is how we could adjust to that type of defense, and we were able to do that today."

Irish shoot down Rutgers in opener

By RIAN AKEY
Assistant Sports Editor

Notre Dame fans were looking to see a promising opening game performance by a Fighting Irish team this weekend. While many supporters thought this required a trip to Chicago, other Irish fans watched a dazzling debut without battling traffic on the Kennedy Expressway or forking out $4 for a Soldier Field beer as the Notre Dame women's soccer team posted shut-outs over Rutgers and LaSalle to open their 1994 campaign.
