Irish racing team's new car is real, real fine

"She's real fine, my 385." In their original song, the Beach Boys sing "she's real fine my 409," glamorizing loud, four-barreled, gas-guzzling hot rod cars that whisked people across the wide open American roads.

But for the most part, that era has passed, and Notre Dame engineering students are helping to usher in a new way of automotive travel by racing a sleek, almost dead silent, Indy-style battery powered car with a maximum voltage of 385.

Notre Dame, along with 11 other universities, purchased rolling chassis and fiberglass shells as specified by the Solar Electric Racing Association (S.E.R.A.) in Phoenix. A challenge to the schools was then put out to see who could design the best type of propulsion system.

"There's two objectives involved," said Col. John Miles, Notre Dame's assistant dean of Engineering. "One is to give undergrads hands on research, and the second is to enhance technology of electric vehicles."

Notre Dame Racing, which consisted of 26 undergraduates last year, chose a lead acid battery produced by Delco/Remy for their car. The undergrads, led by their advisor Professor William Barry, then designed what they believed was the most efficient way to install 28 12-volt batteries.

Just how well did Notre Dame's design work? In the two races they competed in this summer, they won both pole positions, won a race in Ohio State at Indianapolis, and came in second at one pit stop to recharge batteries, and at the Cleveland race, it took Notre Dame's pit crew only 50 seconds to change out the car's 1,100 pounds of batteries.

"At the Cleveland race we managed to go the longest—8 laps—before we had to pit," Miles said. "Our average speed was 83 miles per hour, which is not bad considering that it was a road course with lots of sharp turns. We've never had the car up to maximum speed, but we figure it could go 150 to 160 miles per hour."

Unfortunately, the Irish Racing Team has not found instant champagne in the winner's circle. Obstacle upon obstacle has been overcome, according to Barry.

Alcohol abuse plagues campus

By KATIE MURPHY

For years, alcohol consumption has been a legitimate rite of passage on college and university campuses across the nation. Drinking parties, tailgates, and college bars are typical aspects of American college life, even though 3 out of every 4 college students cannot legally drink.

In a study released last June by the Commission on Substance Abuse at Colleges and Universities, the extent of alcohol consumption among America's college students has reached staggering heights.

"With the greater risk of AIDS and other potentially tragic consequences, alcohol abuse on campus has now reached crisis proportions," said Father Edward Malloy, president of the University of Notre Dame and chairman of the commission.

"All substance abuse, but most especially alcohol on college campuses, is inhibiting the intellectual, social and spiritual development of our students."

Although the commission originally intended to address a number of types of substance abuse, recent scientific literature and research targeted alcohol abuse as the most serious campus problem. With this in mind, the commission decided to ultimately focus the study on this trend.

"The pattern of drinking on college campuses is unhealthy, excessive, and unnecessary," Malloy said.

The commission observed that:

• over the past 15 years, the percentage of college women drinking to get drunk has more than tripled, from approximately 10 percent to 35 percent;

• each year students spend over $5.5 billion on alcoholic beverages—more than they spend on all other drinks and books combined;

• 8 percent of students drink an average of 16 drinks or more per week;

• 95 percent of violent crime on campus is alcohol-related,

And the award for upstaging its own award program. Once again, I'd like to acknowledge that Sure, the music channel was handing out its 11th annual MTV Video Music Awards Thursday night, with lists of big-name nominees. But the pre-party focus was on newlyweds Michael and Lisa Marie Presley-Jackson, who opened the show with their first live television appearance, as husband and wife.

"We welcome Mr. and Mrs. Michael Jackson," the announcer intoned as the program went on the air. "I'm very happy to be here. And just think, nobody thought this would last," Jackson said, then added a bit of kibosh on his wife's the squalling delight of the crowd.

R.E.M. — which had six nominations — won the direction, cinematography, editing and so-called "breakthrough" awards for its haunting "Everybody Hurts." The dance award went to "What a Man" by Salt-N-Pepa, featuring En Vogue. Aerosmith won the group citation for it.

Bush to face Chiles in Florida race

Gov. Lawton Chiles easily won the Democratic nomination in his re-election bid while GOP candidates Jeb Bush waged a fierce battle in "Thurston's primary" to challenge the governor's nomination. First brother-in-law Hugh Rodham took an early lead in a four-way battle for the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate. The winner will fill the special Senate seat vacated by Sen. Connie Mack, who was unopposed in his primary. Bush, son of former President Bush, led a crowded GOP field running for governor. Already returning, Bush had 4,319 votes, or 42 percent; Florida Secretary of State Jim Forman, or 1,869 votes, or 18 percent; Insurance Commissioner Tom Gallagher had 1,764 votes, or 17 percent; and state Sen. Ander Crenshaw had 1,410, or 14 percent.

It is also the rule, rather than the exception that political parties think in terms of elections instead of ideas. If Politicians conduct business with a great deal of name calling, hair-pulling, innuendo and charges that boils down to this: An activity will not be undertaken unless it; damages the other party and furthers the status of your own. It's a political power struggle, helps a congressman get elected, or any combination of the two.

This must not be. This sad state of affairs has become endemic to American politics, and its roots run deep. These three hundred years ago a philosopher named John Locke wrote about the concept of the common, or public good. He held that there were certain ideas that were beneficial to a nation and its people, and that we must agree on a course of action with these goals in mind. Political questions can be resolved in this framework. Does the idea promote the public good and wel-

John Mellencamp cancels tour

Singer John Mellencamp canceled the remainder of his "Dance Naked" tour today after doctors discovered a cancerous growth in his heart. Mellencamp, 42, underwent tests at Bloomington Hospital Wednesday after he complained of fatigue. Doctors discovered an occluded artery of the heart, said Lauren Murphy, a spokesperson for Mercury Records in New York. "Basically, that means there's a blockage there, a clogged artery. They recommended that he cancel the rest of his tour and rest," Murphy said. "The doctors are coming up with a course of treatment. The prognosis is extremely good for a full recovery." Murphy did not know what sort of treatments he would undergo. Mellencamp had been at home in Bloomington on a scheduled break from his tour when he began feeling ill. Murphy said he was at home staying there to rest and edit the video for "Dance Naked," the next single from the singer's album, which began July 29 had 14 dates remaining, including a show Thursday night in Vancouver. The tour was scheduled to end in Indianapolis on Friday, and the singer will not be making up any of the canceled shows.

SMC considers installing cable

By JENNIFER LEWIS
News Writer

Due to logistical problems, Saint Mary’s has put the cable policy proposal submitted in the Fall of 1993 on the back-burner, according to LeMans Residence Hall Director Colleen McKenna.

The proposal, made by the Resident Hall Association (RHA) to the Senior Officers, came about after several years of investigation.

“T.V. has proven to be an educational tool just as much as an entertainment source. Regardless of the positive aspects of cable there will be a two to three year delay due to minimum cost and planning,” said Osburger.

Saint Mary’s is looking into two different options of installing cable. One is laying wire through the buildings, and the other is installing wireless systems through a satellite dish. There are complications with both, according to vice president of fiscal affairs, Dan Osburger.

LeMans Hall regards cable in high demand and believes it should be installed as soon as possible.

“We really think in today’s society cable is a necessity, cable TV is much more than MTV and Fox,” she said. “T.V. has time consuming disruptions on campus. Osburger said, the wireless approach has too many limitations. The cable would only be accessible in the lobbies of the resident halls.

Most of the dorms only have one lounge area with a T.V. and due to difficulties with the satellite dishes, LeMans would be unable to possess cable.

There are not enough T.V. lounges in the halls,” said Osburger. "In order for it to be worth while, we would have to create more lounge areas.

Malloy noted that the drinking patterns at Notre Dame "resemble the patterns elsewhere." Approximately 85-90 percent of University disciplinary problems (such as sexual misconduct, destruction of property, impaired driving, unruliness) are related to alcohol consumption.

The official University rules regarding alcohol consumption are described in du Lac. At the beginning of the school year, a Drug-Free Policy Statement was distributed to campus residents reiterating these regulations.

At Notre Dame, Malloy expects to foster an extended dialogue on the issue of alcohol consumption and eventually review campus policies in du Lac. "The members of this commission were not prohibitionists and we're not trying to create a society where human freedom is more restricted," said Malloy. "We are much more concerned with matters of health than we have ever been before."

Commission members included Joseph Paterno, Head Football Coach, Penn State; William Gray III., President, United Negro College Fund; Johnetta Cole, President of Spelman College; Senators Nancy Kassebaum (R-KA) and Jeff Bingaman (D-N.M.), Harvey Fineberg, Dean, Harvard School of Public Health; Herbert Pardee, Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, Columbia University; Pamela Ann Rymer, Judge (U.S. Court of Appeals, 9th Cir.), and Frederick Bohen, Executive Vice President and Chief Operating Officer, The Rockefeller University.
USAir jet crashes near Pittsburgh, 131 killed

By MICHAEL HADDIGAN
Associated Press

ALIQUIPPA, Pa. — A USAir jetliner nose-dived into a field while trying to land near Pittsburgh on Thursday, killing all 131 people on board. It was the deadliest crash in the United States in seven years.

Flight 427 originated at Chicago’s O’Hare International Airport and was to stop in Pittsburgh and was one of the first at the crash site. "It was just coming straight down. I was screaming through the trees to try to douse the flames," said Tom Michel, who was at a gas station near the crash site. "It looked like it was under full power and he just went straight in."

Air traffic controllers said they lost contact with the plane when it was about seven miles from the airport, said Pat Boyle, a spokesman for the Allegheny County Department of Aviation. He said a report of an explosion before the crash could not be confirmed.

Michel said there was a "big boom and the sky lit up. There was black smoke everywhere and that was it." Witnesses reported a gruesome carnage in a clearing on a heavily-wooded ravine.

"All we saw was body parts hanging from the trees," said Denise Godich, a nurse who was one of the first at the scene. "There were people everywhere. You could just see parts of them."

Another eyewitness said pieces of plane and baggage were scattered throughout the area.

The plane’s black box, which records cockpit conversations and flight data, was recovered, said Jim Eichenlaus, manager of Hopewell Township and coordinator of emergency services at the scene.

"We have done a fairly extensive search of the area and there are no survivors," he said.

The Boeing 737 was carrying 126 passengers and a crew of five, said Dave Shipley, a spokesman for the airline.

The plane went down shortly after 7 p.m. in a field about seven miles from the airport, which is 20 miles northwest of Pittsburgh.

The engines just went dead," eyewitness Sandra Zuhback told CNN. "It just blew up."

Shipley said the weather was clear. "There’s no indication at all as to what caused the accident," he said.

Linda Jones said she was standing on her porch when she saw the plane turn to the right, turn over once or twice, and go down behind some trees.

The plane was at 6,000 feet when it went off the radar, Boyle said. He said the plane went down at 7:19 p.m., 10 minutes after it was due in at the airport.

Several doctors who were first told to go to the scene were later told not to bother, hospitals said.

There were 20 emergency vehicles on top of the hill, and a medical helicopter hovered above. Fire hoses snaked through the trees to try to douse the flames. Because the terrain near the wreckage is so rugged, rescue crews were having to build a road to the crash site. No survivors were found in their debris were expected before Friday.

A temporary morgue was being set up at the airport, said Arthur Gilles of the Allegheny County Coroner’s Office. "We were told the prospect of survivors is very slim," he said.

People who had been waiting at Pittsburgh International Airport to pick up passengers were taken into a private area and counselors were being brought in.

The crash was the worst in the United States since Aug. 16, 1987, when a Northwest Airlines MD-80 went down while taking off from Detroit Metropolitan Airport, killing 156 people. A 4-year-old girl was the sole survivor.

It was the fourth fatal USAir crash in the past five years.

On July 2, a USAir jetliner crashed in a thunderstorm near the Charlotte-Douglas International Airport in North Carolina, killing 37 of the 57 people on board.
Do We Believe That This Little Girl is a Human Being?

Whether or not this little girl is a human being is not a matter of theology, morality, or belief as some would lead you to think.

Rather it is a matter of science, and the scientific evidence is clear. Human beings don't produce non-human offspring. But you need not take our word for it, just listen to the official journal of the California Medical Association,

"The very considerable semantic gymnastics which are required to rationalize abortion as anything but taking a human life would be ludicrous if they were not often put forth under socially impeccable auspices."

Yet this same editorial endorsed abortion on demand. And abortion advocates such as The New Republic and Kate Michelman, head of the National Abortion Rights Action League (NARAL), while normally ducking the issue, have also admitted the same thing.

It is clear that both pro-life and pro-choice activists agree that this is a human being. Yet there is one issue that they do not agree on: whether or not all human beings should have the same rights regardless of stage of development.

The pro-life side believes that all human beings should have the same rights. The pro "choice" side believes that it is up to them to choose whose life has value. And if your life has no value to them, they pronounce you "non-human" or not a "person."

We believe that all human beings should have the same rights regardless of stage of development. What do you believe?

No, We Believe That All Human Beings Should Have the Same Rights
Bosnians celebrate mass without Pope

By CLARE NULLIS
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina

Tearful and angry faithful gathered at Sarajevo's cathedral Thursday for a Mass left hollow by the absence of the pope, as John Paul II, grounded in Italy by security fears, called on Serbs, Croats and Muslims to forgive.

The Vatican this week called off a one-day visit to the Bosnian capital planned for Thursday, saying the pope feared for the safety of the crowds that would have turned out to see him and worried that his pilgrimage could aggravate tensions in the besieged city.

The pope addressed the people of Sarajevo on radio and television and delivered the same sermon he had planned to give if he had been present in the Bosnian capital.

"The spiral of 'wrongs' and 'punishments' will never stop if forgiveness does not come at a certain point," he said. "To forgive does not mean to forget. If memory is the law of history, forgiveness is the power of God."

Matilda Sagolj said she cried when she heard the pope's words in Serbo-Croatian, broadcast from the courtyard of his summer residence in Castel Gandolfo, near Rome.

"I am sorry, I am so sorry," she said, breaking into tears again. "His arrival meant all the world to me, and now I feel terrible."

A papal envoy, Monsignor Francesco Monterisii, said in Sarajevo that the pope still hoped to visit "in one of the next few days, in the near-future." But with security still a nightmare, it was unclear what would make the pontiff change his mind.

Conference reaches agreement

By EDITH LEDERER
Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt

With anger growing over the Vatican's hard-line stance on abortion, negotiators at the U.N. population conference Thursday hammered out what they called a last-chance compromise on the explosive issue.

A special committee assigned to write the provision on unsafe abortions agreed on a compromise text Thursday night. The main negotiating committee was expected to consider the new language on Friday.

But even if the compromise succeeds, the controversy at the conference won't end because negotiators still face other contentious provisions of the meeting's 20-year action plan.

The main committee is expected to consider sections on reproductive and sexual health on Friday that refer to "fertility regulation" — a phrase the Vatican views as a code word for abortion — and adolescent sexuality.

To address the concerns of some nations on Thursday, the World Health Organization's definition of unsafe abortion was added to the section on abortion as a health issue. That definition says abortion is unsafe if carried out by unqualified people in inappropriate settings.

To show how minutely the wording has been worked over, a new draft of the proposed compromise changes "legal" abortion — which the Vatican opposed — to abortion that "is not against the law."

Earlier Thursday, Nikoless Biegman, vice-chairman of the overall negotiations, said he was confident a special committee on unsafe abortion would "very, very quickly" arrive at a final compromise text.

"As far as I am concerned, (this) will be the end of the discussion in the committee because anything which could possibly be accommodated has been accommodated," he said.

Timothy Wirth, the U.S. undersecretary of state for global affairs, told reporters Thursday night: "We're very close to getting finished. I expect we will get through the abortion issue tomorrow morning and it will be downhill from there."

The Vatican delegation said it was pondering how to react to the compromise, but suggested it may have a problem with the phrase "safe abortion" because abortion is "unsafe for the future."

The conference's plan of action does not require the blanket approval of all participants, and the Vatican did not approve documents that came out of the two previous U.N. conferences in 1974 and 1984. But great effort is being made to reach compromise because the United Nations likes consensus when issuing long-term goals.

The compromise drafted on Thursday is a revision of the version put forward earlier this week by the European Union and backed by the United States, Nordic nations and several Muslim countries including Iran and Pakistan.

Crown heights retrial will be public

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press

NEW YORK
The federal trial of a teenager charged in the death of a Jewish scholar during a 1991 racial disturbance will be open to the public even if he is tried as a juvenile, a judge ruled Thursday.

"In light of the fact that this case has had enormous public interest, most of the arguments that one would normally hear for closure strike me as not being very relevant here," U.S. District Judge David G. Trager said.

Trager postponed decisions on whether to try Lemrick Nelson as an adult, and whether to remove himself from the case over what defense lawyers say is a conflict of interest.

Nelson is charged with violating the civil rights of Yankel Rosenbaum, a Jewish scholar of the ultra-Orthodox Lubavitch sect who was stabbed to death by members of a black mob during racial disturbances in Brooklyn's Crown Heights section in August 1991.

The violence was set off by the death of a 7-year-old black boy, Gavin Cato, who was struck by a car traveling in a motorcade of Lubavitchers.

MIA teams find remains
by GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press

HANOI, Vietnam
U.S. search teams apparently have made a significant breakthrough in accounting for Americans missing in action from the Vietnam War, a U.S. official said Thursday.

American search teams recovered remains believed to belong to a U.S. Marine who died in captivity in Quang Ngai Province, once part of South Vietnam, 325 miles northeast of Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon.

The discovery was seen as a breakthrough by U.S. officials in Hanoi, who are investigating 84 cases of Americans missing in action from the war.

"I'm excited by it, I'm hopeful," said Army Lt. Col. Melvin Richmond Jr., head of the U.S. MIA Office in Hanoi. "It's an important step.

The United States handed over the 84 so-called "special remains cases" to the Vietnamese a year ago, but not one had been solved up to now.

In each case, the Vietnamese photographed and dug up the dead American servicemen or the sites where POWs died in captivity and their remains were buried.

President Clinton has made Vietnam's cooperation in the fullest possible accounting of MIA's a condition for establishing full diplomatic relations.

Richmond said that Vietnamese cooperation was still "strong" in the latest field operation that began Aug. 18 and is to end Sept. 20. He said other remains believed to be those of Americans were either recovered or turned over by villagers, but he declined to say how many.

U.S. investigators were led to the grave site by a former soldier who survived the POW camp and was released in 1973 when all American forces withdrew from Vietnam.

Thomas Davis, a 20-year-old draftee private from Mobile, Ala., said a prayer and buried his buddy nearly 22 years ago. He returned to Vietnam last January to help pinpoint the burial site.

Davis said as many as 10 Americans died in the camp. One was killed trying to escape, and others, like his buddy, died from maltreatment and lack of medical care, he said.

"His body just gave up, watched him die,"

Richmond cautioned that the identification was not final, and that a thorough forensic examination would be necessary.

"Up until this time, we've been unable to solve a single one of the 84 special remains cases," said Richmond. "This is the first time that we have the possibility of solving one.

The United States was allied with South Vietnam during the war that ended in victory for the Communist North.
Protestant extremists unwilling to cease-fire

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland

Protestant extremists said Thursday they won't lay down their arms until they are convinced an IRA cease-fire is real and Britain and Ireland reveal their plan for Northern Ireland's future.

The demand to first see the details of the "framework document" being negotiated by London and Dublin effectively put any cease-fire on the Protestant side a month or more away.

"Change, if any, can only be honorable after dialogue and agreement," said a statement from the Combined Loyalist Military Command, an umbrella group for outlawed Protestant paramilitary groups. "It is important that patience is shown to this body given the gravity of the debate required."

The British and Irish governments missed their July target for finishing a proposal for restoring a degree of self-government to Northern Ireland. Prime Minister John Major's office said Thursday the two governments hoped to complete the proposal sometime in the autumn.

The framework would then be subject to negotiations among all parties in Northern Ireland.

The Belfast Telegraph, citing unidentified sources, reported Thursday that the proposal would call for an elected, 85-member assembly in Northern Ireland, with elected lawmakers replacing British ministers in executive positions. Major's office declined to comment on the report.

Northern Ireland had its own Edward Heath's government as minority Roman Catholics until 1972, when it was abolished by Prime Minister Edward Heath's government as strife between the province's majority Protestants and minority Roman Catholics worsened.

THURS., Sept. 9th
10:41 a.m. Security responded to a false alarm.

Dan Quayle, testing the waters for a 1996 presidential bid, returned Thursday to the scene of his Murphy Brown comments to hammer away again on family values. This time he took on fathers.

Speaking to the Commonwealth Club of California, the former vice president said he still believes the woes of America are largely due to the deterioration of two-parent families.

"Too often fathers walk away from their children, or worse yet, they don't even know who their children are," Quayle said to the luncheon crowd of about 1,000. "Raising a child is not just a mother's responsibility."

President Bush's former sidekick said he will wait until after the November elections before deciding whether to seek the Republican presidential nomination.

In his speech, Quayle said he couldn't understand the controversy he sparked in 1992 when he criticized the fictitious Brown, a successful TV news reporter who decided to have a child out of wedlock. He told the Commonwealth Club at the time that Brown mocked "the importance of fathers by bearing a child alone, and calling it just another lifestyle choice."

"What I was talking about then and what I am reiterating today is the importance of fathers," he said, "especially for youngsters who don't come into the world with a stock portfolio and a reserved place at an Ivy League University."

Quayle, who attended DePauw University and Indiana University Law School, said that times have changed from the "peace and prosperity in the 1950s, through the 'if-it-feels-good, do-it' 1960s, to the 'me generation' of the 1970s and then to the 'values-free zone' of the '80s and '90s."

"This cavalier attitude toward values is felt most painfully in fatherless families," he said.

Welfare reform, tax incentives for married couples and better entertainment and sports role models would help rebuild America's families, Quayle said.

"If children grew up never knowing their father, they're bound to assume that fathers are irrelevant, and that males are not accountable," Quayle said.

Notre Dame took their car to the Indianapolis 500 at the end of May to make a demo run. The throttle in the car stuck and the driver, a professional named Mark Folkert, had to run the car into a side rail to stop.

Folkert was safe, but the car was nearly totaled.

So beginning June 1, 10 undergrads worked day and night for the next month to prepare the car for the July 6 Cleveland race. They left South Bend at Midnight, July 6, and made it on time for pre-race registration.

After the test run, the team discovered transmission problems on the car. Barry said, 'They really came together—it was super.'

For winning the Cleveland race, Notre Dame received $5,000 in scholarship money. They also gave the city of Cleveland a glimpse of what auto racing in the future may be like.

“We've really captured the essence of people in Cleveland,” said Patrick Wolf, a senior electrical engineering major and member of the Irish Racing Team. “It was the quickest race they've ever heard. With electric race cars you can have a low hum, so you can sit and talk to whoever is sitting next to you instead of screaming.”

Now that the brief racing season is over, the Irish Racing Team is running into more problems. “Well up to now the Athletic Department has let us store the car in the football stadium, but now they need that space,” Barry said. “We’ve had to go looking all over campus, and thankfully Campus Security has given us some space.”

Irish Racing has also received countless volunteer hours and services from Surrey Motor Sports of Niles, Michigan, while Gurley-Leep of South Bend was willing to donate a truck to the team for pulling their trailer.

On the other hand, the team is having fun using its creativity in a continuing effort to make design improvements on the car.

“One thing we got to do at the races was to look around and see what everybody else was up to,” Wolf said. “I’m working on the car with another guy for our senior design project. Right now we’ve got a handful of ideas we want to implement before the upcoming races this spring.”

Areas of improvement include a system to better monitor the car’s power supply, testing different wheel greases and creating a diagnostic package so all the car’s systems can be watched, Barry said.

The Irish have four races tentatively set for next spring and summer—Phoenix, Long Beach, Detroit and Cleveland. Funding is the sole reason the races are tentative, Barry said. But for now, the buzz of the racing team’s brain power is helping to make the car’s electric hum sing a little more cleanly.
Kmart announces shutdowns

Associated Press

TROY, Mich. - Kmart Corp. announced today it will close 110 discount stores nationwide that are failing to meet financial goals, eliminating 6,000 jobs, and cut its management force by 10 percent.

The stores are in 30 states and will be closed by February 1995, Chairman Joseph Antonini said. The closures represent 4.7 percent of its 2,350 discount stores in operation.

The cuts in the management work force - a total of 2,300 jobs - will be made over two years, including 650 store managers who will lose their jobs immediately as a result of the store closings. Kmart Corp. employs about 260,000 people.

"Kmart conducted an assessment of our core discount stores to identify which stores were not meeting our return-on-investment requirements," Antonini said. "Going forward with a clear vision, we will insist that our stores fully meet our return-on-investment requirements.

Antonini broadcast the announcement to its discount stores nationwide at 8:30 a.m. Eastern time.

Some 5,000 businesses questioned by the government said they plan to increase investments in new building and equipment by 8.7 percent this year, compared with 2.3 percent in the previous year.

The number of initial claims for state unemployment benefits declined modest 3,000 in the week ended Sept. 3, down from a revised 333,000 in the previous week.

If the 1994 business spending plans are realized, it would be the biggest jump in capital investment since an 11.4 percent increase in 1977. In June, the government survey projected an 8.3 percent rise in investment spending this year.

Business investment rose 7.3 percent last year.

Businesses plan investment boost

WASHINGTON - Despite higher interest rates and signs of a slowing economy, American businesses remain optimistic and expect to modernize and expand this year at the highest rate in five years.

Blinder defends views on Fed

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER

WASHINGTON - Alan Blinder, the No. 2 official at the Federal Reserve, insisted Thursday that he has no serious disagreements with Chairman Alan Greenspan over the central bank's interest-rate policies.

But some private economists said Blinder's comments would do little to dispel the impression that he will not be as tough an inflation-fighter as Greenspan.

Blinder used a scheduled appearance before the Mortgage Bankers Association to dispute news reports that he had publicly challenged Greenspan's views on inflation during a Fed-sponsored conference last month in Jackson Hole, Wyo.

"There is no rift between the chairman of the Federal Reserve and myself," said Blinder, a former Princeton University professor who served as a member of the administration's Council of Economic Advisers before being named earlier this year by President Clinton to be vice chairman of the Fed.

"I don't want to retract anything I said in the past, but I don't think what I actually did say," Blinder told the Mortgage Bankers Association, asserting that his comments had been taken out of context in some news reports.

In this Wyoming meeting, Blinder had said that a central bank "should have a short-run employment objective in addition to its inflation objective." But Greenspan has said "I am not saying that we have a short-run objective of keeping unemployment low," Blinder said.

Poco a Poco

There are simply some experiences that no one can prepare you for. Your first kiss, a brush with death. The first week as a college student. There are some feelings so overwhelmingly new that, no matter how thorough the orientation program, you are simply unprepared. The first day that you get off the bus and pitch your tent in the ground in Mexico City, all of our training flew out the window. It was almost as if our last four weeks of preparation had never happened.

Meredith McCullough

The three of us look at each other, surprised by this realization. We laughed nervously and gathered up our belongings and departed.

Leaving the comfort of the plane for a world of unknowns, our thoughts darted back and forth between "What in God's name have we gotten ourselves into?" to "Hey! Is this going to be a cool adventure or what?"

We had to find out. A year ago I would have never guessed that upon graduation from Notre Dame I would find myself in Guanacaste, Mexico struggling to learn Spanish. And yet, I have been here for a week now doing just that—struggling like crazy with fellow 1994 ND graduates Katie Bergin and Scott Curtis. But our stay in Guanacaste is just the beginning.

In three months, a similar plane ride will drop us into yet another world of still more unknowns. In three months, we will journey to Santiago, Chile where we will live and work for the next two years, volunteering as Holy Cross Associates.

Getting to this point was a long, arduous journey but at the same time, it all seems to have happened so quickly. Some have been working for The Observer news department, studying for final exams in government and economics. But for the last few months as a college senior and trying to answer the question of what I am going to do with the rest of my life?—I somehow became a Catholic lay missionary.

Honestly, the title scares me. I had never before pictured myself in such a capacity. As a writer, sure. As a student of Spanish. And yet, I have been here a month now doing just that—struggling like crazy with fellow 1994 ND graduates Katie Bergin and Scott Curtis. But our stay in Guanacaste is just the beginning.

At this time in my life this is just right for me. On days like this, everything is clear and I know that any pain I feel or controversy or general impressions that come up over the next two years. I am grateful for this opportunity as Notre Dame has played such a huge role in bringing me to Chile in the first place.

A week has passed since our plane first touched down in Mexico City. In that short time a new world has opened up to us. We have moved in with Mexican families. We have begun to learn Spanish "poco a poco." We have become familiar with the streets, delighting in new sights, sounds, colors, aromas and wonderful people around us.

Tonight I lie on my bed and listen to the city-dogs barking, children laughing, and fireworks exploding at a nearby fair. Tonight it is okay that there is still so much we do not know or understand. Tonight it is okay that the future unfolds at its own pace. Tonight I am content.

Only men represent Christ

Dear Editor,

It was 25 years ago this fall that the administration took a bold move to provide the one, crucial thing Father Sorin's vision had somehow failed to establish: female cheerleaders.

Notre Dame and Saint Mary's had seen women on campus, consolidated the theater department, cooperated on overseas and other programs.

But, by the fall of 1969, merger talks had reached the point where women entering Saint Mary's expected the graduate program from Notre Dame. Saint Mary's Class of 1973 was double the size of previous classes, a step towards raising the ratio of men to women from 7 to 1 to a planned 3 to 1. That class was predominantly female, 20 percent of all Notre Dame's students were female.

As of this year, students at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's would receive general admission, open-seating tickets to a unified student section.

And, on the field, would be a cheering squad made up of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students.

Irish cheerleaders: The real pioneers of woman

Dear Editor,

Professor Houck, in his letter of Sept. 6, 1994 that Popes John Paul II's pro claimed open status for women in the Catholic Church (refusing to women becoming priests) is "pro-debatable." He then asks if Notre Dame's opening day Mass, with 50 or 60 male priests, is an appropriate ceremony.

I, for one, do not think that the Pope and the Church are too lenient in their policies toward women. The exclusion of women is a grave offense. It is not just the formal church bodies that are responsible for this. They are the visible body of the Church.

Four women were chosen, all experienced cheerleaders. But Terri Buek Lewallen says the competition would have been tougher, if it hadn't been the new look for them. The competition would have been tougher, if it hadn't been the new look for them.

Forget gender in lieu of celebrating Catholicism

Dear Editor,

We are writing to express our surprise over Professor Houck's letter on September 6. We are appalled at the ideas expressed therein. We believe that merely by opening the discussion about Professor Houck Houck deems "profound" is utterly ridiculous. As an integral part of every Catholic's life and spirituality, there is not one to begin the school year thus.

Only men represent Christ

Dear Editor,

Friday, September 9, 1994

Only men represent seeking understanding," I have discovered that there are genuine reasons why the Catholic Church has taught that only men may be ordained to the priesthood. The Pope and the Church have some understandable wish to promote the idea of the human and divine nature in Jesus Christ is essential to our understanding of faith as Christians. The priest must represent Christ - who is inseparably God and man - in his divinity and in his humanity. It is therefore fitting that the priest also be a man.

Although it may not be the only or best way to understand the Church's teaching on this matter, it makes sense to me. I refer the reader who wishes to pursue this question further to the encyclical: "On the Dignity and Vocation of Women".

Limpopo: first at "The Loft"

By COLLEEN HAGEN
Music Critic

Now that school is back in session, it is time for a little "true or false" quiz. True: False: Good bands never play campus shows. FALSE.

Tonight, Limpopo, a highly acclaimed Russian folk-rock band will be appearing at The Fieldhouse Mall outside LaFortune after playing the Michigan Pep Rally. Tonight's concert is the first in a series of concerts sponsored by Student Union Board and WVFI. The concert series is called "The Loft," and will be running six times each semester.

S.U.B. and WVFI plan to bring concerts featuring "new, national, independent music and campus talent." The names of these bands may not be heard on the radio multiple times, but this does not mean they do not have comparably impressive credentials and talent.

The idea for a regularly scheduled concert series was a move to spark some interest among the student body in a collegiate music scene, and the sounds of the future in "The Loft," series are up-and-coming in the music industry. In the past, the two campuses have complained that not enough big name, headline bands have appeared at Notre Dame. Members of S.U.B. report that the problem lies in getting students to come to a concert of bands that they have not heard before.

Even though the bands that will play are not yet listed on the Top 10 chart, they have never made names for themselves. If the thought of giving some young talent a try is not enough to entice you, then think of another way.

Headliner bands have to start somewhere. They do not just appear at the top of the chart making millions.

Tonight's featured band, Limpopo, call themselves a "crazy Russian Folk'n' Roll" band. Not only were they the winners of The Echoes," the Russian folk tale Doktor Abyboli, which is a version of the Dr. Doolittle story. As mentioned in the Fort Worth Star Telegram, their name is a pun on a Soviet slang term for glu­sus maximus.

To match Limpopo's credentials, at least four of the bands that will be featured in "The Loft" series are nationally recognized. One of the bands, a has appeared on the College Music Journal's Top 150. Concerts are nationally rake some of their old material and some new off of "Sunburn." "The Loft" is still in the process of being booked, so look for further information later in the semester.

The last show of the semester will be a three band spectacle featuring Chicago's Trenchmouth, Columbus' Bumble Fea and opening the show will be the band July.

This semester, support new, up-and-coming bands with the concert series at "The Loft." The band you're seeing today may just be a legendary two years from now.

FANS TO DROWN MICHIGAN IN SEA OF GREEN

By THERESA ALEMAN
Assistant Writer

While the Irish will be playing Michigan this Saturday, they will most assuredly be sporting Kelly green. That's right, back for its fifth year, "The Shirt" is all Irish, ever popular, and always inspired, and it's everywhere.

Since 1990, the student body has worn "The Shirt," the first to the home football game every year. "The Shirt" has a new design, and color, and costs $10 for students, $14 for parents, $20 for the general public. This year it can be found on the body of just about every student on campus.

It is for sale at the bookstore, and in a Kelly green color guaranteed to wake up the echoes.

"The Shirt '94" features the Notre Dame football stadium, center Knockey, the Gipper, and the Four Horsemen riding the Star. A John Wayne movie poster is the shirt.

Sale of "The Shirt" has been a student-run project since 1990 when it began as a fundraiser for the AnTostal Festival of Performing Arts. The sale, $25,000. Over 10,000 shirts were sold during the 1990 football season and approximately 90 percent of the student body wore the shirt.

In 1991, $11,000 and funds were split between Notre Dame's Student Union Board and the Hall President's Council. Again, it was estimated that 90 percent of the student body wore "The Shirt." Proceeds from 1992 shirt sales exceeded over $200,000 when the project was expanded to include Notre Dame Alumini and fans.

Leaders of the project launched a national advertising campaign which resulted in the sale of 41,000 shirts. Reports estimate 90 percent of the student body wore "The Shirt" to the opening game.

In addition to benefiting scholarships, charities, and student organizations, proceeds went in part toward a Meghan Beeler and Colleen Higg scholarship fund. Beeler and Higg were two members of the Notre Dame women's swim team killed in a 1992 bus accident.

Last year, sales of "The Shirt '94" generated a reported $200,000 in revenues. A record 31,000 shirts were sold. Again, 95 percent of the student body reportedly wore "The Shirt" to the opening home game.

Over half of last year's funds went toward the medical treatment of Todd Broski, an ND rugby player who was severely injured in a game.

This year, sales are expected to reach over $200,000. "The Shirt" is advertised in "Blue and Gold Illustrated" and "Irish Sports Report." While still expected to be a huge money-making project, directors of the sale of "The Shirt '94" attempted to place the focus on "The Shirt" back on the student body.

"The Shirt '94 is primarily for students. It is to show support, unity, and spirit among students at Notre Dame. It is not strictly a project to make money," said Krist Broderick, Director of Relations for "The Shirt '94."

This year's funds will be used for student scholarships, charities, and various other student organizations.

IRISH ON THE OFFENSIVE...

Wolverine defense not too daunting

By TIM SHERMAN
Assistant Sports Editor

The Michigan game has been the springboard for many Irish offensive stars. Tim Brown, Raghib "Rocket" Ismail, Rick Minner, Reggie Blount, Even Kevin McDougal.

Which player on this year's offense is ready to take the team to the pool of stardom?

Fortunately for coach Lou Holtz and Irish fans, the list of contenders is fairly lengthy: Ron Powlus, Lee Becton, Derrick Mayes, etc.

Michigan coach Gary Moeller and his Wolverines know this. But they also know Notre Dame's arsenal of high-tech weaponry needs the trenches to be secure in order to have the time needed to fire.

"The thing that concerns me most is our inability to run the football," worried Holtz.

Last week against Northwestern, the offensive line gave Powlus and the time and protection he asked for. However, they also gave the running backs, particularly Becton, more headaches and bruises than they bargained for.

Still, the running game which is so integral to Holtz's attack does have a game's worth of experience under their belt, and maybe more importantly, another week's worth of line coach Joe Moore's tutelage.

"Notre Dame's lines are going to be Notre Dame's lines," said Michigan coach Gary Moeller. "They've got some new faces (Dusty Zeigler, Jeremy Akers) playing well." This may be enough for the Irish to be successful, especially considering that one of Michigan's weaknesses is its defensive line.

Of their top six tacklers last week in their 34-26 home victory over Boston College, not one came from the front three.

Eagle running backs got into the secondary often. Present that chance to Becton, Ray Zellars, and Bandy Kinder, and big ground gains become a distinct possibility.

Many of the Wolverines defenders have shown poor tackling habits. The Irish will be more than willing to exploit this apparent deficiency. "We just did not tackle well," appraised Moeller of last week's effort. "We got tired."

Another factor which concerns Moeller is his team's ability to force turnovers.

"Turnovers will be the number one indicator of who is going to win," Michigan coach Gary Moeller said.

North Dame, native leader in fewest turnovers last year, played error-free a week ago. Coupled with Powlus' debut in Chicago and the fact that McDougal was able to hit for over 200 yards last season in Ann Arbor, Notre Dame looks to hold the air advantage, as well.

By showcasing the deep aerial attack against Northwestern, Holtz has given Michigan one more worry. But it is the short, more ball-control type passing game that the Irish may rely on. If this is the case, look for tight ends Oscar McBride and Pete Chryplewicz to finally put their receiving skills on display.

"We got good production from our tight ends last Saturday," said Holtz. "I think we have improved at that position."

If there is as team whose linebackers do possess the speed and experience to hang with the Irish, though it is Michigan, even without the injured Matt Dyson.

Jarret Irons, the team's leading tackler of a year ago, and the tough Steve Morrison are the heart and soul of Moeller's defense.

Ty Law is a top-notch cornerbuck, but he may have trouble sticking with Mike Miller, never mind Derrick Mayes. After Law, the secondary appears porous.

B.C. threw for well over three hundred yards with a first-year quarterback. Powlus is not a typical rookie pitcher.

One question is: Will he be able to put up huge numbers again? The more appropriate question is: Will he need to?

Wolverine defense not too daunting

By TIM SHERMAN
Assistant Sports Editor

The Michigan game has been the springboard for many Irish offensive stars. Tim Brown, Raghib "Rocket" Ismail, Rick Minner, Reggie Blount, Even Kevin McDougal.

Which player on this year's offense is ready to take the team to the pool of stardom?

Fortunately for coach Lou Holtz and Irish fans, the list of contenders is fairly lengthy: Ron Powlus, Lee Becton, Derrick Mayes, etc.

Michigan coach Gary Moeller and his Wolverines know this. But they also know Notre Dame's arsenal of high-tech weaponry needs the trenches to be secure in order to have the time needed to fire.

"The thing that concerns me most is our inability to run the football," worried Holtz.

Last week against Northwestern, the offensive line gave Powlus and the time and protection he asked for. However, they also gave the running backs, particularly Becton, more headaches and bruises than they bargained for.

Still, the running game which is so integral to Holtz's attack does have a game's worth of experience under their belt, and maybe more importantly, another week's worth of line coach Joe Moore's tutelage.

"Notre Dame's lines are going to be Notre Dame's lines," said Michigan coach Gary Moeller. "They've got some new faces (Dusty Zeigler, Jeremy Akers) playing well." This may be enough for the Irish to be successful, especially considering that one of Michigan's weaknesses is its defensive line.

Of their top six tacklers last week in their 34-26 home victory over Boston College, not one came from the front three.

Eagle running backs got into the secondary often. Present that chance to Becton, Ray Zellars, and Bandy Kinder, and big ground gains become a distinct possibility.

Many of the Wolverines defenders have shown poor tackling habits. The Irish will be more than willing to exploit this apparent deficiency. "We just did not tackle well," appraised Moeller of last week's effort. "We got tired."

Another factor which concerns Moeller is his team's ability to force turnovers.

"Turnovers will be the number one indicator of who is going to win," Michigan coach Gary Moeller said.

RATING THE IRISH

Quarterback 5

Until he sins, Ron Powlus is still the Messiah. His performance will largely dictate Notre Dame's success.

Running Back 4

The unit on the whole had a below par showing against Northwestern, but they won't be kept down for long.

Wide Receiver 5

Some amazing catches from Derrick Mayes and Mike Miller last week made Powlus look like a superstar.

Offensive Line 2

Pass protection was good against Northwestern, but run blocking is a big question. Their inexperience showed.

Defensive Line 3

They didn't pile up great statistics against Northwestern, and running back Dennis Lundy had a big day. But the Wildcats were held to three points in as many quarters.

Linebackers 3

The play of Goheen, Suggs, Spores, McGee, and Wynn is solid, but the big plays eluded them against Northwestern. They need to provide a spark to the defense.

Secondary 4

Shawn Wooden was picked on by the Wildcats, but he came through with a pick of his own. Bobby Taylor is Bobby Taylor—awesome.

Special Teams 2

Last week's play was surprisingly poor considering Lou Holtz's track record with special teams. Every unit is in need of a serious tune-up.

Coaching 5

Lou Holtz is a big-game coach, and this one's huge. And plus, it's Michigan—expect something special.

—MIKE NORBUT

Notre Dame cannot live on Ron Powlus' arm alone, especially against a team like Michigan, although with Holtz, there's always hope.
Michigan offense multi-dimensional

By MIKE NORBUT
Optimist Sports Editor

For anyone who thought that the Michigan offense rode solely on the broad shoulders of running back Tyrone Wheatley, a second look is in order.

"Loosing a Tyrone Wheatley would be very comparable to us losing a great back, but obviously they also have other weapons," Notre Dame head coach Lou Holtz said.

"If they were just a one dimensional football team and that was their main asset, that would be disastrous. They still have two great wide receivers, an outstanding quarterback, and maybe the best offensive line in the country."

Though the Wolverines' offensive production would be definitely enhanced if Wheatley were to miss time, reserve running backs have proven their worth. Eddie Davis and Tim Biakabutuka stepped into the backfield last week against Boston College and combined for 169 yards, more than the Irish running backs gained against Northwestern.

"What disappointed me defensively was just maybe how we tackled, and that they controlled the line of scrimmage, which you know should not happen," Holtz said. "We just didn't play real physical."

In order to keep the Michigan running game corked, the Irish will need big plays from their front seven. The only change from last week in terms of personnel will be junior Paul Grasmanis moving to defensive end because of a thigh injury suffered by senior Germaine Holden.

MICHIGAN

Quarterback 4

Todd Collins is quickly becoming one of Michigan's best ever, and he is quite capable of leading this team.

Running Back 4

Sophomore Tshimanga Biakabutuka ran for 128 yards on 12 carries last week. Ed Davis is no slouch. But, oh, do the Wolverines wish they had Wheatley.

Wide Receiver 5

Both Amani Toomer and Mercury Hayes have big play potential. One of the nation's best receivers is due.

Wide Receiver 5

Both Amani Toomer and Mercury Hayes have big play potential. One of the nation's best receivers is due.

Offensive Line 4

Following in the tradition of fine Michigan offensive lines, this is a good one. A lot of size and strength.

Defensive Line 3

A weak spot, but still tough. Tackle Trent Zenkewicz, managed five yards per carry.

Linebackers 4

Led by Burks Award candidate Jarrett Irons, this unit is the pride and joy of the Michigan defense. But not having Matt Dyson in the lineup could mean no dice for the Wolverines.

Secondary 3

Gave up 344 yards passing to Boston College last week-end. Coaches say there is a law that is a mainstay at cornerback. The remaining three positions are a bit inexperienced.

Special Teams 4

With two capable punters, a decent kicking game, and Toomer returning punts, the special teams are definitely an advantage for Michigan.

Coaching 3

The Wolverines are always one of the best teams on paper, but Gary Moeller often manages to squander his players' talents. He is outclassed in this matchup.

"Turnovers will be the number one indicator of who is going to win secondly to the rush," Amani Toomer said.

"I want to run the football and I don't want to turn it over."

With so many turnovers, all the Wolverine offensive threats could be wasted.

Defenders around the nation are having nightmares.

Not about football, or even goals. They wake up sounding like Arnold Schwarzenegger, saying, "It's not a Turner."

"Amani Toomer is the latest in a line of fine wide receivers to play at Michigan, one that includes Heisman Award winner Desmond Howard, Greg McMurtry, and Anthony Carter."

"I think their wide receivers are outstanding," Irish head coach Lou Holtz said. "Amani Toomer and Mercury Hayes, the guys that are back, are awfully good."

"He has got to be able to play centerfield."

Moore

football.

"If you want to talk to a Neanderthal man, talk to Joe Moore," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz once said, while introducing his offensive line coach at a luncheon. "That's where his ideas originate."

Moore didn't deny that image during his speech, waxing nostalgic like Archie Bunker, longing for the days when women were women and men were men.

When players were players and coaches were coaches.

Though Moore may feel misplaced in this era of earrings and egos, his players respect him for the most basic reason. He cares.

It's just that sometimes he shows it like a nun who cracks your knuckles with a ruler. For your own good, of course.

"He's definitely old school, about as old school as you can get" Irish center Mark Zataveski said. "It takes some getting used to, but eventually you realize that he does everything for your best interests."

I will keep my pads low. I will keep my pads low. I will keep my pads low.

Zataveski scrawled that sentence 1000 times one night during the preseason.

Seems that during a scrimmage that day, Zataveski, well, wasn't keeping his pads low.

Moore ordered the ink-stained antidote.

A tactic that recalls simpler times.

Times like the late '50s, when Moore was a tailback at Penn State, playing for the Dean of the Old School, Joe Paterno.

Times that seem to be recreated on the practice field each day when Moore directs his linemen.

Often he summons his players to practice early or keeps them late, repeating primitive punishments.

"Like doing base blocks for an hour," Zataveski said. Mess up once and his booming baritone will echo through the autumn air, piercing even the thickest skin. Mess up again and expect to do some extra-curricular atonement.

But Moore can lighten as easily as he can frighten.

"He's been known to have some funny sayings in practice," Zataveski said, fishing for a favorite. "If you're supposed to stay on one man, he'll say 'If he goes to the concession stand for a hot dog, be there to put the mustard on it.'"

Not all are fit for a family publication.

"I could tell you some," tackle Mike McGlinn said, "but you couldn't print them."

Every tactic is a teaching tool, a method to turn Notre Dame's offensive line into a wall of granite.

A task that can be achieved only with work, not the wave of a wand.

"He always says there's no magic in the world, it's all work," Zataveski said. Moore sometimes appears to be a magician. Every player ever to start for him on the offensive line at Notre Dame has been selected in the NFL Draft.

And year in and year out, the Irish boast one of the nation's most potent running attacks.

The notoriety generally belongs to the men who carry the ball, not the guys who open the holes.

But Moore prefers the shadows. He spotted a newspaper photographer snapping pictures of him at a preseason practice and sent a messenger to shut up the shutterbug.

"Coach Moore doesn't like photos of himself," one of the lineman said, as straightforward as his mentor.

It seems like a little bit of Moore rubs off on each of his players. Soldiers often admire their general.

"He's shaped my whole outlook on life," Zataveski said. "I'm more conservative about a lot of things."

But Moore isn't all guts and guff. He concluded his luncheon address with a sudden burst of emotion that made you wonder if he was about to peel off a mask and reveal that he was, in fact, Stuart Smalley, caring nurturer.

He shared the story of one of his final encounters with the late Notre Dame legend Moose Krause, a man always with a cigar in his mouth and a smile on his face.

"When I think of Moose, I feel good," Moore concluded, emotion moistening his words. "And I hope you feel good, too."

The Neanderthal Man has adapted well to the '90s.

Notre Dame’s offensive line struggles to find its identity after losing a trio to the NFL

By Rian Akey

Aaron Taylor, first round, Green Bay Packers. Tim Ruddy, first round, Miami Dolphins. Todd Norman, free agent.

The departure of three members of last year’s dominating offensive line to the NFL has left Irish line coach Joe Moore in the precarious position of having to fill holes before his unit can open them.

Mixed results in last weekend’s game against Northwestern indicate that Moore has developed a new line that knows it has potential, but must work to realize it.

Although the Irish line successfully protected debut quarterback Ron Powlus from the Wildcat rush, it has been blamed for the worse-than-expected performance by the backfield—Notre Dame held the line, but could not break through it.

Many of the line’s shortcomings may have stemmed from a combination of first-game factors.

"Maybe against Northwestern it was just first game jitters,” said guard Ryan Leahy. “Last year we came together for the Michigan game and we hope we can do that again this year. Joe Moore has always had good offensive lines and we’re just trying to be the best we can every day.”

Yet, even Leahy admitted that the purged lack of aggression on the Irish line against the Wildcats may have stemmed from more than minor nervousness. Anticipating an easy win may have cooled the Irish mean streak.

"Every player is more motivated this week since we’re playing Michigan,” said Leahy.

Even Lou Holtz was not overzealous in his criticism of the offensive line’s performance.

"We have a lot of offensive lineman doing some good things,” said Holtz. "But they didn’t all do them together.”

That Holtz and Moore were satisfied with the line’s general performance is evidenced by a week of practice which saw no major overhauls.

"Our practices were real intense,” said tackle Mike McGlinn, "but we worked mostly on basics and technique—staying low, going hard until the whistle, keeping our pads low.”

"Coach Moore expects a lot from us. Nothing is ever good enough until it’s the best.”

A focus on the fundamentals indicated a fact that McGlinn recognizes.

"We do have a mean streak,” said McGlinn. "We just need to be more aggressive and some time to develop so the offense can gel.”

And despite the disappointment of a sixteen-yard performance, tailback Lee Becton agrees that more time will give the Irish running game better numbers.

"I’m definitely adjusting a little bit more to this line,” said Becton. “You know, they are a little different. They block a little different than last year’s team, but I think they will be just as effective.”

The development required by the Notre Dame line is due in part to its youth. Although the entire line is made up of juniors and seniors, only two of them are seasoned starters—Leahy and current center Mark Zataveski—who are both adjusting to new positions.

Leahy, who missed four midseason games in 1993 after tearing a knee ligament, returns at center, replacing the injured Will Lyell as the present time and Mark will play as well as he possibly can and depicts everything you want in a football player, he’s just not particularly quick.”

Jeremy Aker returns at tackle with experience limited to starts while Leahy was injured last season.

Dusty Zeigler started only one game last year, but has already made an impact with Holtz this season.

"Zeigler played an outstanding football game,” said Holtz. "I think that guy is going to be an excellent offensive lineman.”

While everyone involved seems to feel that the only thing the offensive line needs for improvement is more time to develop, the Irish hardly have a moment to look at their watches before the Wolverines reach South Bend.

Fortunately, Notre Dame may be able to rely more on their new-found aerial attack than they have in the past, an aspect of the game where the offensive line performed more satisfactorily.

Powlus’ 291-yard, four touchdown debut against Northwesterners may be the aspect of last week’s game that people remember, but the offensive line’s contributions to his statistics must also be considered.

Powlus, for example, was sacked just once by the Wildcats.

Leahy summed up the commitment the line feels for the newcomer.

"Because he’s my quarterback I don’t just take care of him when I’m pass blocking,” said Leahy, "I take care of him all the time.”

"I worry about Ron more than anybody. We both live in the same dorm in the same section, and I check up on him and make sure he’s studying and not falling into the traps.”

But while Leahy’s off-field concerns include keeping Powlus from falling prey to the difficulties of newfound stardom, he and the rest of the offensive line are working on-field to prevent the Irish offense from relying too heavily on a passing attack.

"We try to play [on the offensive line] takes it real personal when we don’t run the ball well.”

Senior guard Ryan Leahy protects quarterback Ron Powlus on and off the field.

Zataveski has moved from guard to center, replacing the injured Will Lyell who was originally slated to start. So far, Holtz has been satisfied with Zataveski’s progress.

"(Zataveski) will give everything he has, every day of practice and every bit of the game,” said Holtz. "I think mark Zataveski is the best center we have at the present time and Mark will play as well as he possibly can and depicts everything you want in a football player, he’s just not particularly quick.”

Turn the tables: Give the bartenders a shot

I’ve never been any good at this prognosticating bit, so this week I employed the services of a few local tavern keepers. My original plan had been to travel to an assortment of bars and get the lowdown on this year’s Notre Dame/Michigan game from the experts. I only made it to three. You understand.

Keep in mind that this was a scientific study for work and not pleasure. No free grub or grog was promised by the participants. I paid for every . . . waaah. . . drink.

Ricky Joe – C.J.’s Pub

Taking time off from the grill, the frontman of South Bend’s top burger joint had this to say about the Irish/Michigan clash.

“Lee Becton’s going to rush for 190 yards and Germaine Holden is going to have four sacks. It’s Notre Dame in a blowout. Oh, and Justin Hussein is going to have an interception. Goheen is going to have a big day. I’m laying my cash on the burger, 35-10 Irish. Becton will have a big day. Becton comes up as big as a Super Pub with cheese and bacon.”

Mo Hussein – Club 23

Through the smoke of Club, Mr. Hussein can be found shooting pool with the Budweiser distributor and handicapping the Irish.

“Holtz has something up his sleeve. You better believe it. That Powlus kid has a great arm. It will be close but Notre Dame will win.”

I liked Mo’s verve and also his dedication to Pewulis. But Mo lacks the slick name like Ricky Joe. I tried thinking of a few: King Hussein, Hussein the Sun, Hussein the Greek. Nothing really working here.

Also I was disappointed not to find Homer or Barney on stools at the bar. This wasn’t the Mo’s Tavern I was thinking of.

Rich Bender – Bridge’s

The man who manages the last five corners bar could not be left off this list. “Notre Dame will establish the running game but Notre Dame will win. Powlus is all set and sophomore years would have been a wash for him. Also I was disappointed not to find Homer or Barney on stools at the bar. This wasn’t the Mo’s Tavern I was thinking of.”

I can’t help but get a little sentimental over this prognosticator. Oh, Bridge’s, my freshman and sophomore years would have been a wash without your sweet generosity towards my feeble excuse for an ID.”

Even sentiment can’t sway me from my gut feeling. I’m laying my cash on the burger, 35-10 Irish. Becton comes up as big as a Super Pub with cheese and bacon.
Rally to capture Irish spirit

By MARK ROSENBERG
Accent Writer

As the Notre Dame student body eagerly awaits the first home football weekend, one of the most anticipated events is the first pep rally. The rally kicks off at 7 p.m. tonight at the J.A.C.C. and will feature the marching band, cheerleaders and football players that Irish fans have come to expect.

Former Irish quarterback Terry Hanratty will serve as the guest speaker for the first rally, according to rally organizer Cort Peters.

Hanratty played under Ara Parseghian from 1966-68, earning a national championship with the '66 squad.

Tailback Lee Becton and linebacker Jeremy Nau will also address the fans. In addition to Lou Holtz, secondary coach Dean Pees will represent the coaching staff at the rally.

The organization of the rally requires a great deal of work from the Pep Rally Committee, according to Peters who organizes the lighting, the band entrances and the introductions of the cheerleaders and Leprechaun. The rest of the committee takes care of security.

Holtz chooses the players who will appear while administrative assistant George Kelly chooses the guest speakers from among many famous Notre Dame personalities who attend the games.

A new feature this year will be an opening cheerleader segment to begin 15 minutes before every pep rally. This feature is designed to get the fans involved in the action and to create a spirit of excitement when the band and players arrive at 7 p.m.

According to head cheerleader Jennifer Durso, the 12 varsity cheerleaders have decided to "try crowd involvement" through a couple of new cheers that will be introduced at tonight's rally.

As expected, both the band and the cheerleaders have invested a great deal of time in preparing for tonight's event. The cheerleaders have practiced for 3 hours every day this past week while the band has practiced for at least 90 minutes every weekday this school year, in addition to attending band camp the week before classes started.

This will be the first performance for this year's band and cheerleaders in front of the home crowd, some anxiety is no doubt felt in preparing for the event.

"Playing at the first rally is a little scary at first, but a lot of fun. It is a new crowd each time and they are very critical," Durso said.

The rally will also serve as the home debut for new Varsity Leprechaun Jamie Glover.

This year, more people than ever will be able to enjoy the Michigan pep rally as ESPN and WNDU-TV will provide live coverage of the festivities. Both stations will air live cut-ins to the rally throughout their preview broadcasts at 7 p.m.

Peters reports that WNDU will probably cover the other rallies this season while ESPN coverage will only occur for big games.

Every true Irish fan, however, knows that there is no comparable experience to witnessing a pep rally live. The Leprechaun, band, golden helmets and fanatic crowd response all create a spirit and tradition which no other school can duplicate.

Twilight tailgate to kick-off football weekend

Saint Mary's Accent Editor

Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students have only been in class for two weeks and already it's time for a refresher.

At 2 p.m. this afternoon, Saint Mary's Student Activities Board (S.A.B.) will offer a "Twilight Tailgate" to help students ease their stress and have some fun.

"The Twilight Tailgate is similar to a one day Autumn celebration in the fall," according to Mary Udovich, S.A.B. At Campus Event Chairperson.

"We thought that this would be a great way to start the year," said Udovich. "Nothing quite like this has been done before—especially this early in the year."

The Twilight Tailgate is free to all Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students, according to Udovich.

According to Udovich, afternoon festivities, which run from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m., include:

• The Volero Wall.
• Human Bowling. Students take their places in a huge ball and others roll them down a lane in an attempt to strike oversized pins.
• Tye-dying. S.A.B. will be selling "Twilight Tailgate" T-shirts that can be tye-dyed, for $8 or students can bring their own shirts.
• Volleyball/Canoe Races on Lake Marian. Both events are open to all interested. Participants must register for these events from 2:30 p.m. to 3 p.m. Groups of six or less may reserve time for volleyball matches. Six canoes will also be available at various times in the afternoon for races. Two people are allowed in each canoe.
• Temporary Tattoos. A wide variety of self-adhesive tattoos will be available. Designs include prints from the Harley Davidson logo to cartoon characters.

"This band is one of high energy. Global Village plays a wide variety of music that college students enjoy," she added.

Bonfire. A bonfire will be set up on the field between Havican Nursing Hall and the Angela Athletic Facility parking lot, said Udovich.

"We planned the events as an afternoon session and an evening session so that students could attend the Pep Rally between Instivities," said Udovich.

Evening activities, which run from 9 p.m. to 11 p.m., include:

• Global Village. This band, comprised of 11 members, plays around the Michigan State University area, said Augusta Hall Senior and S.A.B. coordinator, Audrey Comrie.

"Global Village plays at a variety of places, from fraternity houses to bars," she said.

Members of the band range in age from 21 to 24, according to Comrie.

In addition to having the basic equipment that nearly every band possesses, Global Village features a trombonist, a saxophonist, and a bongo player, according to Comrie.

"This band is one of high energy. Global Village plays a wide variety of music that college students enjoy," she added.

"Members of S.A.B. have been planning these activities all year. This month, when the current board members were elected," said Marlene Johnson, Assistant Director of S.A.B. "We encourage students to participate and to enjoy the festivities."
Back home in again Indiana, not yet pushing up daisies

I'm back home again in Indiana after a summer in Manhattan, where I spent a week in the hospital, wondering how soon it would be before I started pushing up daisies. En route home, I stopped in Alexandria, Virginia, to collect Darby O'Gill III, now at the peak of his form, when mixing with other dogs, naturally gentle disposition, he should behave for you beautifully at Notre Dame.

It strikes me as ironic that Darby spent two weeks of the summer learning obedience. On the way to the priesthood, I spent a year in the novitiate trying to learn obedience so that I could take vows promising to be poor, chaste, and obedient for a lifetime. The Master must be disappointed in the way I turn out as a Christian who might have been improved by neutering.

I should have sent an old pair of pants to obedience school with Darby O'Gill III so that he could be trained not to chew at my trouser cuffs. To lecture him from doing this, the other evening I stood under the desk and try to explain how inappropriate his behavior was, and how hard it was on my bell-bottomed Samsabells. Snarling like a pit bull, he warned me to lay off the chewing, or I would have him stuffed. In response, he ever so gently washed his face with his tongue. I was reminded of Jonathan Edwards' sermon, "Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God." What would happen, I wondered, if a repugnant creature—as leathen in God's sight, says Edwards, as a venemous spider would be to us—offered a sign of devotion to the just Judge? Would theology be changed forever if the angry God, ready to cast a sinner into the everlasting hon­

fire, should find that the bundle of iniquity was lovingly licking the wrath-filled fingers.

Darby O'Gill takes so much pride in himself when he sees how please he is with his obedience. If I were that eager to please the Master, I would not fear the judgment. Yet even I have a way of turning into something beautiful from God. In Old Town, part of Alexandria, I passed outside a bookstore to light a cigarette. In my left hand, I held my carcase on a terraced wall. I was surrounded by a lovely lady of color, about 40, who parked her car case beside me. Introducing herself as Peggy, she said, "Pastor, what's your name and what religion are you with?"

I wasn't thrilled at starting a friendship in the noontide heat, for all I know, she might have been a Jehovah's Witness wanting a handout...

I answered, "But the rabbis say, he died in God's hands." She put her hand on my knee, and started to pray for me. "If Pastor Griffin is putting that cigarette before You, Lord, he is definitely sinning. If he's not putting that cigarette ahead of You, then there's no harm to his smoking, and You can bring him to glory, when his time comes, to praise Your holy name with the saints."

On the other side, the offense is going to have to keep the pressure on. As the fourth leading scorer last year, senior midfielder Keith Carlson is being counted on to play a big role. "Carlson has a great shot and is a great scorer," junior forward Bill Lanza said. "He is expected to be a big part of our offense this year."

If the Irish are going to beat the Buckeyes, they will need solid games from both Engesser and Carlson.

"This is an important game for us," Berticelli said. "It's important that we focus on this game and be one-hundred percent ready to play. We can't be thinking about our win against Northwestern. It's also an important game because it leads into our conference play as we face Northern Illinois next."

"This is going to be a physical and rough game," adds Engesser. "We beat them in a close game (1-0) last year, and I expect it to be exciting again this year."

Yet, the feeling has to be good about this game as Berticelli says: "I think we're focused and I think we're ready."

The Belles suffered from opening match jitters in their first game, losing 2-15, but dominated during the second and third games, winning 13-4 and 15-1.

Transfer student Kelley Prosser scored all fifteen.

Jonathan Keith scored all fifteen.

NCAA suspends Ohio State player for violations

By RUSTY MILLER Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio

Its big-play capacity diminished if not crippled by the two-game suspension of Joey Galloway, Ohio State will rely on a variety of weapons to make up for the deep threat it lost.

The NCAA on Wednesday suspended Galloway, a fifth-year senior split end, for taking $200 from a person the university identified as a financial adviser in January. He repaid the money with interest late last week, but not until after the NCAA had learned of the payment.

No. 18 Ohio State plays at 25th-ranked Washington Saturday. Galloway did not fly with the team Thursday to Seattle. He will also miss the Sept. 17 home opener against Pittsburgh.

"We have to become closer. We have to circle the wagons," Ohio State coach John Cooper said Wednesday. "Some other people have to take up the slack. Obviously, we're going to miss Joey Galloway. We're going to miss his big-play potential."

Last year Galloway caught 47 passes for 946 yards and matched Eric Carter's school record of 11 touchdown receptions in a season.

This year, Ohio State's sports information department was promoting him for the Heisman Trophy. He was playing like a Heisman contender, too.

In a 34-10 victory over Fresno State on Aug. 29, Galloway had two catches for 88 yards — one a 67-yard touchdown bomb — and also scored on an 8-yard touchdown run when he reversed his field after taking a pitch to the left side, out-racing the Fresno State defense to the right corner of the end zone.

His starting position will be filled by Buster Tillman, a sophomore who caught three passes for 50 yards in the opener. But can Tillman fill Galloway's spikes when it comes to scoring touchdowns? Galloway averaged a touchdown every 4.3 times he touched the ball last season and had two TDs in four touches against Fresno State.

"Basically we'll stick with the same approach," OSU offensive coordinator Joe Hollis said. "I can't stand here ... and say that the play selection will be identically the same. But the general philosophy and general approach will be the same."

Washington coach Jim Lambright said his team was looking forward to the comparison between Galloway and another Heisman hopeful, Husky tailback Napoleon Kaufman.

But, he added, "The Husky defensive coaches will not be disappointed by the absence of Galloway from the starting lineup."

Galloway, the university and the NCAA did not disclose the identity of the person who had given the $200 to Galloway.

The Columbus Dispatch, citing unidentified sources, reported in its Thursday editions that the financial adviser was Michael Weisberg of Bannockburn, Ill.

Weisberg did not return telephone messages left by The Associated Press.

Navy cornerback deals with adversity

By DAVID GINSBURG
Ann Arbor Press

ANNAPOLES

Chris Hart is the co-captain of Navy's football team, a senior who likely will never don a helmet and shoulder pads after this year.

That is motivation enough for the talented cornerback to have the finest season of his life.

Hart's steadfast religious beliefs helped him cope with the loss. His resilience is a source of inspiration for his teammates — as well as coach George Chaump.

"Chris is an amazing guy. He has strong faith and strong beliefs, and I'm certain that's what pulled him through," Chaump said. "His inner strength makes him a great leader and a great captain. To bounce back the way he did, it's no wonder everyone looks up to him."

"Believe it or not, I'm a better person for it, a stronger person. Thank God for that," Hart said.

Hart's biggest source of motivation comes from an agonizing tragedy.

He lost his fiancée, Annette Baltimore, who learned as a child that she had an abnormal heart, was told by doctors that she no longer had a fighting chance.

But she collapsed when walking up the stairs after watching Hart play in Navy's annual Blue-Gold game last spring.

Baltimore, 23, died shortly after that.

"How can you ever prepare for something like that?" Hart said. "Believe it or not, I'm a better person for it, a stronger person. Thank God for that."

Soon after the funeral, Hart trained 70 miles for their first year at the Naval Academy. He also immersed himself in football, working to improve upon a 1993 season in which he had 63 tackles and a team-high three interceptions.

Hart's steadfast religious beliefs helped him cope with the loss. His resilience is a source of inspiration for his teammates — as well as coach George Chaump.

"Chris is an amazing guy. He has strong faith and strong beliefs, and I'm certain that's what pulled him through," Chaump said. "His inner strength makes him a great leader and a great captain. To bounce back the way he did, it's no wonder everyone looks up to him."

"Being chosen as captain was a really big honor," he said. "That's one reason why this season is so important to me. I have to set an example and be a leader, on and off the field."

Hart has fulfilled his obligations. Sometimes his mind starts to wander back to happier times, and suddenly his unbridled spirit turns somber.

That's when defensive back Joe Speed shouts a few friendly words across the field.

For Irish head coach Chris Petrucelli, the situation in Fairfax is hardly encouraging, and not only because legal, "said Mason-they're there to play soccer." ful, which was not a surprise to He questions the ethics of the departments were unsuccess­ of Massachusetts and Providence College Petrucelli. · Fairfax is hardly encouraging, "Many people aren't happy with "Many people aren't happy with the situation," he said, "but most aren't going to say any­ thing about it." While George Mason head coach Jac Cicala was also unavailable for comment, Patriot assistant coach Paul Ellis offered his view of the situ­ nation. "(Eddy) transferred from UMass, where she wasn't start­ ing," said Ellis. "She was under Reanna Scurry, who was also an All-American, and is now a member of the women's national­ al team. Skye decided she did not want to split time." In [Mead's] case, she was red-started as a freshman, and Providence doesn't offer a fifth year of eligibility." Ellis also confirmed that Eddy and Mead were not receiving George Mason degrees. "[Eddy]'s degree is coming from UMass," he said. "Jen's degree will come from Providence." While Ellis's explanations legitimize the actions of Eddy and Mead, questions remain about the role of Cicala and George Mason in the transfers. The All-American migration to Fairfax began in 1993, just one year after Cicala's arrival at George Mason. The Patriots qualified for the NCAA women's soccer "final four" three times during the mid-1980s, but posted only a 8­ 6-3 mark in 1992, Cicala's first season. Despite that less-than­overwhelming record, All­ American Eddy decided to join George Mason for 1993, pro­ pelling them to a 18-3-2 record and a trip to the national title game. While hopes of a return to the NCAA final make Mead's trans­ fer more logical, one can only speculate about the continued attractiveness of George Mason to All-American goalies. Ellis offered an explanation for George Mason's good fortune with transfers: "We have girls from the local area who go away to school, and then after the first year decide that being away from home isn't what they want." Yet, Eddy had three seasons at Massachusetts before deciding to transfer, and the George Mason media guide lists Mead's hometown as Raynham, Massachusetts. Even if these transfers are entirely legitimate by NCAA standards, the back-to-back transfers of non-degree-seeking athletes to George Mason lead to speculation about the school's academic integrity. "I'm not George Mason," said Petrucelli. "And if their univer­ sity wants to do this, there's not much I can do." Despite all the controversy regarding the George Mason goalkeepers, Notre Dame keep­ er Jen Renola still has the challenge of living up to her All­ American opponents. "The first thing for Renola," said Petrucelli, "is that everyone's going to be comparing her to the other goalies." And since Notre Dame's first two opponents have managed just three shots against Renola, this weekend's matches may be her real season openers. But Petrucelli isn't worried about Renola being unprepared. "Jen wants to be and will be an important part of this team," said Petrucelli. "She doesn't want to stand on the other end of the field for ninety minutes and watch." "When [Renola] is a senior, she will be as good as those other goalies." And Petrucelli certainly hopes that in two more seasons his prediction comes true—unless Renola is playing for George Mason.

Belles’ soccer plagued by injuries

By BECKY MAYERNIK
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary’s soccer team will confront Lake Forest tomorrow in their opening game of the season at Lake Forest. Despite the fact that the Belles are a young team this year with many injuries, the team is confident about tomorrow’s game.

Injuries are troubling the Belles right now. Approximately half the team is hurt, according to Nichols.

Senior Captain Jenny Ferry is out with a knee injury, as is sophomore halfback Brigid Sullivan.

Senior Captain Jenny Ferry is out with a knee injury, as is sophomore halfback Brigid Keys. Senior captain Maura Sullivan is also suffering from an ankle injury, but is planning on playing tomorrow afternoon.

Regardless of the injuries, the team is confident about tomorrow’s game.

Cyclones prepare for Hawkeyes

By CHUCK SCHOFFNER
Associated Press

IOWA CITY

One of the longest weeks in the 103-year history of Iowa State football is finally about to end.

The Cyclones have been battered on all fronts after their 28-14 season-opening loss to Northern Iowa. Fans are grumbling. Players are constantly being asked to explain what happened. A student senator even wrote a resolution calling for the firing of coach Jim Walden.

But Saturday, Iowa State has a chance to make everyone forget last week. With a victory at Iowa, the gloom over Cycloneland would evaporate. "I'm just looking forward to getting out and redeeming ourselves, especially up front in the line because we feel like we have a lot to prove now," offensive tackle Tim Kohn said. "We came out a little overconfident (against Northern Iowa) and now we have to prove we have the experience everybody says we have and just come out and dominate the line of scrimmage."

"I think if we come out against Iowa fired up and come out with a big win, everybody will forget about this UNI stuff," said Kohn. It'll take more than bravado to get the Cyclones past Iowa, however. The Hawkeyes showed a lot of muscle and speed in routing Central Michigan 52-21 last week. Plus, they have the added confidence of 11 straight victories over Iowa State. When a team dominates a series like that, history tells the Iowa players they'll find a way to win regardless of how the game is going. Last year was a perfect example. Iowa State cut a 31-7 Iowa to lead to 31-28 and had the momentum after recovering an onsides kick at midfield with just under two minutes left. But Iowa's Maurea Crain knocked the ball from quarterback Bob Utter, the Hawkeyes recovered and held on.

If that happens?

"We have the added confidence of 11 straight victories over Iowa State. When a team dominates a series like that, history tells the Iowa players they'll find a way to win regardless of how the game is going. Last year was a perfect example. Iowa State cut a 31-7 Iowa to lead to 31-28 and had the momentum after recovering an onsides kick at midfield with just under two minutes left. But Iowa's Maurea Crain knocked the ball from quarterback Bob Utter, the Hawkeyes recovered and held on.

And that happens?

"I think if we come out against Iowa fired up and come out with a big win, everybody will forget about this UNI stuff," Kohn said. "But while it's true we have no big gun like Mike this year, we do have a lot of great runners. It should be a very interesting year."

"I'm just looking forward to getting out and redeeming ourselves, especially up front in the line because we feel like we have a lot to prove now," offensive tackle Tim Kohn said. "We came out a little overconfident (against Northern Iowa) and now we have to prove we have the experience everybody says we have and just come out and dominate the line of scrimmage."

Irish head to Big Four Classic

By BRIAN LUCAS
Sports Writer

Six victories in six matches. Only two games lost during that span. What more could you ask of a team?

How about having to travel to Louisville to play three matches in two days against some of the toughest competition in the country.

That’s the task that awaits the Notre Dame volleyball team as they prepare for the Big Four Classic.

The Irish begin the tournament tonight as they face a tough Louisville squad. The Cardinals went 23-13 last year with one of those losses coming at the hands of Notre Dame.

While the Notre Dame football team is playing its biggest game of the season on Saturday, the volleyball team will be facing its toughest test when it meets Kentucky.

The Wildcats, ranked 20th in the pre-season, finished last season with a 28-2 record and ranked 12th in the nation.

This game will also have a revenge factor as Kentucky beat the Irish last year in a hard fought match that went the distance. Notre Dame won the first two games but went on to lose the final three. If they hope to climb in the rankings, this is a must win for the Irish. The Irish close the tournament Sunday against intra-state rival Indiana.

MEN'S SOCCER

Big home test for Irish

By THOMAS SCHLIDT
Sports Writer

One of the main precepts of war is to never extend yourself too thin. The same holds true for sports. So when the Notre Dame men's soccer team plays their pressure-oriented offense, they must have faith in their defense to stall any counter attack.

Engesser

One piece of this solid defense is sophomore Brian Engesser, who shall be counted on heavily when the Irish face Ohio State tonight on Alumni Field at 7:30.

Last season, he was one of the few freshmen in Irish history to have started every game, and one only has to look at his consistency and maturity as a defender to understand why.

"He (Engesser) is the most solid and consistent defender in our program," coach Mike Berticelli said.

"He is extremely dependent. He just makes excellent choices with the ball." Yet, even with the success of the team, since his arrival, he is one of the most overlooked players on the team.

"He (Engesser) is probably the most underrated player on the team," Berticelli added.

"That's probably because he plays defense, and isn't always involved in the glamorous plays."

Though overlooked, he is a major part of this defense that will be needed to defuse any pressure from the Buckeyes.

Irish opponent George Mason has a controversial habit of admitting All-American transfers

By RIAN AKEY
Associate Sports Editor

When the Notre Dame women's soccer team was upset 2-1 by George Mason in the opening round of the 1993 NCAA tournament, Irish players were crushed by the abrupt ending to their most successful season ever.

Despite their disappointment, the Irish looked forward to a rematch this season, when George Mason would be without their All-American goaltender Skye Eddy, whose brilliant second-half net play helped the Patriots pull off the upset.

"Skye's degree is coming from UMass. Jon's degree will come from Providence."
George Mason sophomore coach Paul Eddy

"Within NCAA rules it is legal, but I don't know about the ethics of bringing those players in."
Notre Dame coach Chris Petrucelli

But no statistician is likely to develop writer's cramp racking up Fighting Irish goals in today's rematch, because George Mason has replaced Eddy with another All-American goaltender, senior Jennifer Mead.

While Eddy transferred from the University of Massachusetts for her senior season, Mead spent her first three years at Providence College. The Patriots, it appears, are the 49ers of NCAA free agency.
