PORT-AU-PRINCE

His days in power slipping away, Haiti’s military leader Jean-Claude “Baby Doc” Duvalier had to call for a U.S. evacuation service for 10 of his men killed in a shootout with U.S. Marines even as Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras sat ramrod straight at the service, staring at the caskets draped with the red-and-blue Haitian flag. Haitians speculated on his imminent departure, along with that of fellow coup leader Philippe Biamby and the military-installed government of Emile Jonassaint.

Another leader of the September 1991 military coup, Lt. Col. Michel Francois, skipped town Tuesday for a new life in the neighboring Dominican Republic.

The de facto leaders have until Oct. 15 to quit power under a U.S.-Haitian agreement being enforced by 20,000 American troops, including U.S. soldiers surrounding the white-walled Presidential Palace and two-story headquarters across the street. Cedras has vowed to remain in Haiti but under terms of the agreement worked out with former President Carter, he and Biamby will resign after elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide returns to power next week.

Haitian coup leader Cedras’ power slipping away

Power transition details hazy

As for the provisional president, U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager said: “We have no word on what Jonas­saint plans are... It's clear he cannot continue to occupy the palace.”

Haitians, meanwhile, helped U.S. soldiers track down army-allied gun­men who had terror­ized neighborhoods since the coup ousted Aristide from the presidency only seven months after Haiti’s first freely democratic election. The gunman, known here as an attaché, was forced to face his victims Wednesday without his weapons.

After Samuel Chery was detained by the soldiers and led away from a poor neighborhood in suburban Petionville, his vipers banded together and burned down his house.

Ideal Catholic health care position explained

By NORA REGINA MEANY
News Writer

According to Sr. Patricia Vandenberg, C.S.C., Catholics can take the gospel into the workplace by becoming more like the Good Samaritan from the Gospel of Luke.

At her noontime lecture at St. Mary’s College entitled “Health Care in America”, Vandenberg cited this Biblical fable to be the basic position any Catholic should have in regards to the mandatory health care plan that has been in the works for almost two years. Vandenberg received a degree from Duko University in the late seventies. She is President of the Holy Cross Health Care System.

Vandenberg said that there were four main points to the Good Samaritan story. The first was the fact that the individual questioned Jesus what he must do to live life. The second fact was that the Samaritan was "moved to compassion" to help the ailing man in the street. The third was that even the Samaritan was "moved to compassion" to help the ailing man’s wounds, and the final point was the willingness of the Samaritan to pay for the ailing man’s care.

The point that the Samaritan was so generous was the most important part of the parable, said Vandenberg.

“We, like the Good Samaritan, should be willing to pay the price of proper health care...and willing to pay more than necessary,” she said.

Vandenberg said that hospital leaders should return to the not-for-profit mindset that they held in the beginning of the century. She said that in the post-World War II era, growing economic prosperity lead to a proliferation of hospital funds.

Vandenberg said that the 1960’s brought about the implementation of Medicaid and Medicare. She said these programs the “consume Good Samaritans.” She said that man’s trip to the moon inspired a proliferation of medical technology.

“It (technology) is both costly and time-consuming to teach,” she said.

Vandenberg noted that America is in great need of a reform of morals. She stated that we, as a nation, have strayed from the original teachings of Jesus.

“Jesus said to live with integrity. Love God and love your neighbor,” she said.

In conclusion, Vandenberg cited the health care statement of Sr. Patricia Vandenberg, C.S.C., compared health care with the parable of the Good Samaritan in her speech last night in LaFertune Ballroom.

Resolution asks for ‘watchdog’ commission

By GWENDOLYN NORGLE

There needs to be a consistent student advocacy group on Notre Dame’s campus, according to Thomas Matzzi, Interim Freshmen Class Council president, who submitted a working resolution at last night’s Student Senate meeting.

Matzzi’s resolution was for the formation of an independent “watchdog” commission that would work for a “long term investigative and lobbying effort on behalf of students.” Matzzi asked for a mandate that the Student Senate recognize the need for such an organization. According to Matzzi, “Student Government is ineffective because of its solvent nature and the fact that they’re forced by protocol to work cooperatively with Student Affairs.”

Matzzi said in his resolution that the office of Student Affairs and its departments is virtually unchecked in its authority over all aspects of student life.

Student Government has allowed Student Affairs to “usurp many of the lobbying powers intrinsic to Student Govern­ment,” according to the resolution.

The commission, Matzzi proposed, would have the responsibility of documenting the testimony of individual students or student groups “as to their interaction with Student Affairs with regard to their policies and actions.” In addition, see SENATE / page 4

Can you win with ethics?

After three years of coursework studies, numerous nights at Hayes-Healy starting at 7:30 p.m., and enough discussions about the "real" world and "the business environment" to make the most diehard business major sore, my marketing curriculum is finally coming to an end this semester.

I had learned the four "Ps" and how to conduct market research. I learned all about market trends and regression analysis. I felt I was nearly enough to be a true success.

Marketing Management is commonly defined as a "bridging course." Through the simulation of a computer market, teams of students duked it out for the course of ten weeks to see who could control the most market share and money at the end of the simulation. The course is designed to put you in an environment where all your marketing skills will be used. The competition is intense and begins to develop a class. Strategies develop that are designed as much for destruction of the other team as it is for the success of their own team. The students play for keeps because the final scores determine a large portion of the grade.

The simulation does indeed force you to use all of the skills acquired over your entire business curriculum. Most worries are the many intangibles of the "real world" and the "how do I know that" that have been overlooked. Namely, ethics in the simulation have been forgotten.

Harvard Business School conducts a simulation game similar to Notre Dame's. In 1982, a group of students used a computer code and broke into the leading team's program. They proceeded to steal the simulation information from that team and used it to win the game. Getting caught appeared to be their only mistake. The rationale behind the Harvard group's actions was that they were able to economize in their action because the gain from stealing the information was much higher than the possible consequences. The marketing simulation at Notre Dame has also made the bottom line king, with no mention of ethical implications that could present itself. There is no code or guideline to follow in these situations.

The students have been left to monitor themselves, with the only punishment (assuming they are caught) being that they will have difficulty working with the other groups. Notre Dame has always held its students to high standards and it seems to have neglected an important facet of a Notre Dame education. The university, by ignoring the ethical considerations, has in fact made them obsolete.

Success in the simulation and in the real world is always more than just winning. Success is winning fairly and with professionalism. Let's hope Notre Dame students are more concerned with being successful than with winning.

South Pacific earthquake relief encounters obstacles

VLADIVOSTOK
Bad weather hindered relief efforts Wednesday on the Kuril Islands following a massive earthquake that devastated the remote Pacific chain and sent residents fleeing to higher ground. The undersea quake late Tuesday had a magnitude of 8.2, the strongest in the world this year. It killed at least 10 people, destroyed buildings, tossed boats ashore and produced 9-foot-high waves that swamped coastal areas. Many islanders fled to higher ground, fearing the dozens of aftershocks which rattled the region Wednesday. Seismologists said the aftershocks, measuring up to magnitude 6, would continue for days. A strong aftershock with a preliminary magnitude of 6.5 rocked northern Japan Thursday morning. There were no immediate reports of damage or injuries. "They are in the hills with no food, no water or personal belongings," said Yevgeny Kulkov, a reporter on Sakhalin Island who spoke on Vladosvostok radio. "Helicopters have been unable to reach those in the hills because of bad weather." Rescue crews from Moscow, Siberia and the Far East flew to the islands, north of Japan on Wednesday to begin evacuating the injured and restoring emergency services knocked out by the earthquake. No deaths or injuries were reported Wednesday, on the Kuril Islands or on the largest island of Hokkaido. But high winds battered relief efforts, according to Yevgeny Krasnov, the governor of Sakhalin island, west of the chain. The quake caused tremors about 330 miles of Japan's northern coast, near the Kurils. Most of the damage was borne by the southern Kurils, where about 50,000 Russians live, including several thousand Jews. In Moscow, Senor Shogu, the minister for emergency situations, said...
Senate approves education bill

By CAROLE FELDMAN

WASHINGTON

Turning back a Republican-led filibuster over school prayer, the Senate gave final approval Wednesday to an education bill providing billions of dollars to help students in impoverished districts, train teachers and reduce school violence.

The vote was 77-20.

The House already has approved the legislation reauthorizing for five years the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, which expired Friday. President Clinton has indicated his support for the bill.

School prayer advocates, led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., tried to block a final vote on the bill. Helms thought the prayer language included in the bill was too weak.

"America is in the midst of an historic struggle between those who on one hand yearn for a restoration of traditional values envisioned by our founding fathers and on the other hand by those who contend that anything goes," he said.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., countered: "Those who are voting against ending this filibuster are voting against education. They are voting against federal aid to hard-pressed local schools. They are voting against teachers and students. They are voting against major reforms and improvements in the most important federal assistance for schools in every city, town and village in America."

The Senate voted 75-24 to break the filibuster. The only Democrat voting against cutting off debate was Sen. Richard Shelby of Alabama.

The legislation protects the right of students to participate in voluntary, constitutionally protected prayer and cuts off federal education funds to school districts found to have "willfully violated" a court order that they allow the prayer.

Helms argued that involving the courts in the issue created an impossible hurdle for students and their parents.

He preferred school prayer language that had been passed by the House but dropped when Senate and House negotiators settled differences between their separate versions of the bill.

The legislation authorizes $12.7 billion for fiscal 1995; $11 billion has been appropriated.

Congress suspends vote on GATT accord

By DAVE SKIDMORE

WASHINGTON

Struggling to save a huge global trade accord, Democratic and Republican leaders in the House agreed Wednesday to postpone a vote on the measure until after Thanksgiving.

President Clinton had been pushing for a vote before lawmakers went home this week. And as recently as Wednesday morning House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said he was "firmly and absolutely committed" to that.

But in a letter to the president, Foley and the other leaders said the House would vote Nov. 29 on legislation implementing the accord signed under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

At the insistence of Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., the Senate has already decided to vote on GATT on Dec. 1, two days later.

"The Senate decision to postpone the vote has quite frankly undermined our ability to guarantee bipartisan support for this effort in the House at this time," the House leaders said.

They promised to work "to assure that GATT overwhelmingly passes the House."

As a down payment, the House voted 296-123 Wednesday night to approve the rules of debate for 123-nation GATT accord, touted as the largest trade agreement in world history.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor said the "manifoldly clear, strong, unwavering support" in the leaders' letter was "a major step forward" in reassuring an agreement that he said would create 300,000 to 700,000 U.S. jobs.

The pact cuts world tariffs by an estimated $740 billion, reduces other barriers to trade and extends the rules of world trade to services and intellectual property such as computer programs and drug patents.

Opponents, including Hollings, say it will open American markets to a flood of manufactured goods produced in low-wage countries, destroying jobs at companies making textiles, aircraft, automobiles and other goods.

With the postponement, Kantor said, "we've taken the politics out of the debate. It will be calmer, more rational and more effective."

But some rank-and-file Republicans, who hope to see their party make big gains in the Nov. 8 midterm election, complained that the lame-duck session would mean as many as 100 defeated or retiring House members would vote without any accountability to the electorate.

"I think it is plain unconstionable that we bring this back in a lame-duck session. This important legislation should be voted on by members who have no political stake in the outcome," said Rep. Elton Gallegly, R-Calif.

this commission would report periodically to the University community on their findings, which, he said, would not be "just in relation to disciplinary matters."

According to Matzkie, the commission that he would like the Student Senate to mandate would be independent of the authority of any Student Government Administration and would be under the direct authority of the Student Senate. It would consist of six core members from the Class of '97 or '98 that would be appointed by the Chairperson of the Commission, nominated and appointed by the Student Senate.

Hilary Bonenberger, co-chair of the Hall Presidents Council suggested that the resolution include representation from each class. "Maybe the class presidents from each class (could sit on the commission), so that the entire student body is represented, not just one class," she said.

Matzkie said he hoped the resolution would be passed "by (Fall) break."

"I would say, in summary fashion that the mindset of modern America is not of the Good Samaritan," she said. "As a nation, we have lost our will to resolve this. When we look into the future, we could be overwhelmed."

U.S. health care most expensive

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

The U.S. health care system is still the most expensive in the world by far and the spending gap with other major countries is widening, a new study indicates.

The United States spent $3.094 per person on health care in 1992, or 13.6 percent of its gross domestic product, according to figures compiled for the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

Most of the other 23 countries tracked by the Paris-based OECD spent less than half as much. They devoted just 8.1 percent of GDP to health.

In a report published Tuesday in the Journal of Health Affairs, the United States had the fifth highest infant mortality rate — after Turkey, Portugal, Luxembourg and Greece — and the highest percentage of low-birthweight babies.

But it was near the top in life expectancy for senior citizens. U.S. men can expect to live 7.2 years beyond their 60th birthday and women 9.1 years. Iceland's octogenarians have the same life expectancy in Canada the 80-year-old men live for 7.1 more years on average and the women 9.3 years.

"By comparative international standards, the American health care system is still by far the most expensive in the world, and the gap between the United States and other countries is widening," said the report by George Schieber and Leslie Greenwald of the U.S. Health Care Financing Administration and Jean-Pierre Pouliès of the OECD.

It said per capita health spending keeps climbing faster than consumer prices. Since 1980, health care spending has grown 4.6 percent a year more than prices in the United States, 2.5 percent more in Canada, 3.4 percent in France, 2.5 percent in Germany, 3.5 percent in Japan and 2.3 percent in the United Kingdom.

Canada spent 10.3 percent of its gross domestic product or $1,949 per resident on health care in 1992; Finland 9.4 percent, $1,363; France 9.4 percent, $1,745; Switzerland 9.3 percent, $2,068; Germany 8.7 percent, $1,151; Japan 6.9 percent, $1,775; Italy 8.5 percent, $1,497; United Kingdom 7.1 percent, $1,151; Japan 6.9 percent, $1,376, and Turkey 4.1 percent, $156.

Americans spent less time in the hospital than people in most other countries. The United States had the second highest number of hospital employees per hospital bed (after Australia). Its physician to population ratio was slightly below average, but the United States had a far higher percentage of specialists.

A separate report in the same journal said the United States still holds a wide edge in medical technology over Canada and Japan, with far more magnetic resonance imaging machines and open-heart surgery units per million residents.

Shooting rampage kills 3, stuns France

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press

PARIS

In one of the bleakest episodes in recent Paris history, a young couple gassed two policemen, stole their guns and set off a wild car-chase, killing three officers and a taxi driver before being captured.

The slayings late Tuesday stunned a nation where only two other police officers had been killed in action all year, and prompted calls for restoration of the death penalty.

Authorities could recall no other case in which so many Paris police officers had been killed. Three officers and two civilian passers-by were also injured.

The male suspect, Audry Maupin, 21, died of a chest wound Wednesday night. 24 hours after the chase. A second-year law student, he had been too badly hurt to undergo questioning.

The woman, 19 or 20, refused to talk to investigators. She was identified as Florence Ray, from the working-class suburb of Pantin, and had been living as a squatter in an abandoned building with Maupin.

Investigators searching the young woman's family home found documents with anarchist slogans and the name of a previously unknown group, "The Organization of Revolutionary Propaganda." The words "Death to the cops" were written on several documents.

Interior Minister Charles Pasqua described the suspects as "desperate young people, trapped in a fantasy of anarchist theories aimed at destroy­ing society." Right-wing political leaders, including Jean-Marie Le Pen of the National Front, said the best response to the killings would be to reinstate the death penalty, abolished in France in 1981.

Police unions demanded the government provide more funds and personnel for law enforcement. And about 500 cab drivers assembled their vehicles at the Place de la Nation in honor of their slain colleague, Amadou Diallo, 49, an immigrant from Guinea.

The rampage began at 9:25 p.m. Tuesday when a masked couple scaled a fence at a car pound, sprayed tear gas at two policemen on duty, and made off with their pistols.

For their getaway, the couple commandeered Diallo's taxi, taking the driver and a passenger hostage.

About 10 minutes into the journey, Diallo deliberately steered his taxi into a police car with three officers inside.

Two of the officers got out of their car, and both were fatally wounded as the couple opened fire, police said. Diallo was executed by the young woman at point blank range, witnesses said.

"The police got out of their car with weapons," another witness told French radio. "You could hear gunfire everywhere.... police were yelling people, 'Get down, get down.'"

48 die in religious suicide pact

Deaths tied to religious sect

By CHRISTIAN HUMBERT
Associated Press

Although the story of Jesus tells us that what we do in this life is important, it seems to go hand-in-hand with uncertainty. There is that popular question, discerning a career, absolute certainty is at least unlikely and probably unraveled.

Police found the bodies in the burning ruins of a farm and three ski chalets in southern Switzerland. The victims apparently killed themselves before the fires were set shortly after midnight, they said.

Authorities said most of the victims appeared to be Swiss, French, and Canadian and were investigating possible links with a religious sect in Canada.

Twenty-three adult bodies were found at a farm in the canton of Fribourg, northeast of Geneva, police said. One man was in the farmhouse with a bullet wound to the head, and 21 others were in an underground chapel lined with mirrors, where they had apparently suffocated themselves with plastic bags. Another body was found in a separate building.

Some of the victims in the chapel, which was reached by a door hidden behind paneling in a barn, were wearing red, white and black ceremonial robes, said Fribourg police spokesman Beat Carlen. Two women were wearing gold robes. One couple was in an embrace.

Carlen said some sort of altar was found in the chapel, but he did not have details.

The bodies of 48 members of a religious sect were discovered today in a concealed underground chapel and other buildings after apparently committing mass suicide. Some victims wore ceremonial robes, their hands clasped in prayer and plastic bags tied over their heads.

...CONSIDERATIONS

UNCERTAINTY

Are you a senior who is not as certain about what you want to do as you once were? Perhaps you feel that only the thing you are certain of anymore is that you are not certain.

Are you a freshman who, at the beginning of this year, planned on majoring in one area, but is not so sure anymore? Are you a freshman who, at the beginning of this year, planned on majoring in one area, but is not so sure anymore?

Perhaps one of the most important aspects of education is the dispelling of the ways that we oversimplify ourselves and others. Hopefully, in this period of education, we die to old ways of seeing ourselves that are narrow and exact in order to continually rise to new ways of seeing ourselves and others that allow us the freedom to change and appreciate the ability of others to change. Perhaps this dying and rising calls us to be a little more comfortable with not being sure all of the time and not knowing everything exactly.

Maybe our uncertainty is a step toward the truth.

What do we do with our lives is important. It can have a great impact on others. However, maybe the question which should precede "What do I want?" is "How do I want to be?"

Maybe the most important thing is not always what we do with our lives, but how we do it.

Finding good in the land of white people and lousy coffee

The line I have given my friends back East is largely as follows: South Bend is a bleak place. It is cold in the winter and hot in the summer. The only movies you can see are Milk Money or five or six good things about living at Notre Dame is even worse, with its stale coffee. I go on and on.

Well, I'm sick of it. I'm flying high these days, and the time is nigh for a change of attitude. There are at least five or six good things about living at Notre Dame, and I wish here and now to own portable joys, my new Darin at the Ozersky kitchen, and my new portable joy, my new Darin at the Ozersky kitchen.

Josh Ozersky

The Observer. Attend to him when you get the chance; a mind like that doesn't come along every day. More Griffin, less Rice!

2: Archie's Barbeque. Now, I know what you're saying—"What the hell does this Jew know about barbeque?" Well, let me tell you something, my friend. I know more about barbeque as an obese tot than most New Yorkers do in a lifetime. And Archie's is the real thing. It's not genuine southern barbeque—like most Midwest establishments, the sauce is too sweet and thick for my taste. And the dark, empty, cathode-ray-lit space of Archie's, with its creepy wallpaper and proverb-strewn placemats, is something of a drag. But those ribs! Order them with the sauce on the side, and they arrive at your table firm and sweet, with a reddish-brown crust redolent of the Lord's bounty! Attend to him when you come out, blinking like a surprised larva in the sudden light, but while you're there it is earthly paradise.

3: Mortal Kombat. I never get past the game room's glass window in the basement of LaFortune without stopping to watch some lad hurt his yellow man's heart in his opponent's chest, or carving him up with scissors hands as bright red blood drips from the wound. They say this country is losing its fast-ball, but I have yet to see it in our video games. The variety of "fatalities" in Mortal Kombat beggars the imagination. I love it when the Bruce Lee guy goes inside his dazed enemy's head and blows him up in a shower of bones; or when, having knocked him silly with flying kicks, "Scorpion" pulls off his ninja mask to reveal a frightening skull, from which he breathes a fireball at his helpless foe, burning his once-mighty frame into a charred, kneeling skeleton. There are plenty fatalities I haven't seen, too.

The chance of seeing a new and lurid way of dispatching the other player (and the absolute genitality which accompanies these sadisms in the real world—a pat on the back, a chuckle from the fried (he/dead/disemboweled loser) gives me a new spark with which to face my day.

4: The Superstore. The giant shopping edifice on Grape Road with the unpronounceable name, can you beat it? Where else can you grab appliances with hands still cold from feeling roast beefs, or discard an unwanted container of chocolate milk on a tractor? These disjunctions and inconsistencies amaze and delight me.

5: My TA salary, my column, my fine home, the upstairs bar at Truman's, the Eighth floor of the Hesburgh library (literature and film). Hey!

Some are born mad. Some remain so.

Renegotiation not the cause of overpopulation

Dear Editor:

Benson's cartoon featuring the Pope and an Islamic maiden on an overpopulated globe which shows the human population as a cross in God's hand is a misrepresentation of the facts about overpopulation, and in particular, the Catholic Church's position on the dignity of women. In Benson's cartoon, the Pope is shown as the face of Jesus, and the Islamic maiden is shown as a symbol of femininity. However, the Catholic Church holds that every human being is created in the image and likeness of God, and that both men and women have an equal dignity and worth. The Church teaches that the family is the basic unit of society, and that the procreation of children is a natural and sacred responsibility of marriage. Therefore, the Church does not consider overpopulation to be a problem, but rather, it sees the growth of the human family as a sign of God's love and grace.

During this Multicultural Week, Notre Dame and Saint Mary's communities have been celebrating ethnic diversity with activities such as cultural lectures, discussions, panels, international fashion shows, and exhibitions. Judging from the turnovers at the Multicultural Fair, many students have expressed their interest in learning about other cultures and their own culture. Students are more aware, especially of the importance of ethnic diversity through the Multicultural Week, of the importance of communicating. These students are "strength and unity among the races." "FUERZA is an organization for students interested in Hispanic culture," said Saint Mary's FUERZA co-president Bernadette Pampuch. Currently comprised of thirty members, FUERZA attempts to increase cultural awareness and unity, according to Pampuch. The organization distributes a monthly newsletter and provides its members with entertainment and service-oriented opportunities, Pampuch said. "We can learn a lot from people of other cultures. We live in a changing world where cultural diversity can no longer be ignored. We will fight to keep you from turning your back on this world." The Italian Clubs of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's also promote ethnic awareness on campus. The Italian Clubs will co-sponsor the "International Disco" this Saturday evening, at the LaFortune Ballroom. Presidents Heather Matula, from Saint Mary's, and Louis Vitrella, from Notre Dame, are working on "open campuses up to new ideas," according to Matula. Everyone is invited to enjoy the cultural dance music from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m. for only one dollar, she said. Last year, the "International Disco" drew nearly 300 people. Matula and Vitrella are hopeful that this year's dance will draw even more. Matula said that the Italian Club also offers cooking classes and publishes an annual cookbook to promote multicultural awareness on campus. The Saint Mary's Spanish Club also works throughout the year for the spread of ethnic ideals. Saint Mary's Spanish Club co-president Veronica Torres said that club members meet two times per month for lunch, during which they practice speaking Spanish with other students and faculty members. The Spanish Club also meets to see Spanish films "when they come to town," Torres said. According to Torres, cross-cultural communication is a necessity. "With good communication, we can break through the barriers and stereotypes that society imposes," Torres said. "Many people have preconceived notions of other cultures. If we learn to communicate effectively and honestly, we come to the reality of those cultures." And we break through the stereotypes." Torres added.

Multicultural communication implies that the world is definitely diverse. But we can learn from other cultures and we can benefit from what we learn," added Joe Bailey, assistant professor of Communication, Dance & Theatre at Saint Mary's. "Our cultural differences are not a bad thing. And there is one underlying similarity. It is simply that we are all human beings created in the image of God. This commonality underlies our differences. And when a commonality underlies differences, then there is hope," Pauley said. If you were to open the directory to the listings of the other organizations of the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's Communities, you would find that they number over thirty. "There are a number of organizations for students who want to learn more about ethnic awareness. And these opportunities exist not only during Multicultural Week, but all year long."

CORAL GABLES, Fla. The big play is back in the Miami football playbook and that will help their chances Saturday night against Florida State.

The 13th-ranked Hurricanes (3-1) have scored five touchdowns covering more than 50 yards already this season, matching their total from all of last year.

"Their big-play capability scares you as much as anything," said Rowditive linebacker coach of the third-ranked Seminoles (4-0).

Break-away speed and a sophisticated passing attack traditionally made Miami one of the nation's most explosive teams. But the long-range threat was lacking last season, which accounted in part for Miami's disappointing 9-3 record.

This year, thanks to a group of big-play targets for quarterback Frank Costa, the Hurricanes have regained their strike suddenly.

"They're receivers are the strength of their team," Florida State linebacker Brian Photograph said. "They've come back to make the big play. Last year that was missing."

Games between Miami and Florida State often swing on one bolt of offense. Last year, when the Seminoles won 28-10, they scored on Sean Jackson's 69-yard run and Charlie Ward's 72-yard pass to M punt. That was only Florida State's second victory in the past nine games of the series. When the Seminoles have such scores as 26-25 and 17-16, their offense produced the game's top play suddenly.

"That's w the way it's been down through the years against us," Rowditive said. "It seems like with all those one-point games we go back and find one or two big plays that beat you. Maybe you're outplaying them, and all of a sudden they get a 60-yard strike when we have them down."

HOUSTON The National Association of Basketball Coaches closed its two-day convention Friday afternoon calling for a delay in implementing entry standards and the end of eligibility for all freshmen.

The Board of Directors of the NABC released a written position stating its opposition to Proposition 16 and calling for a delay in the scheduled to go into effect in 1999 and will include a scale that would toughen the standards for a freshman athletes

"Today we are faced with finding a cure for initial eligibility so that we as coaches and administrators can continue to provide opportunities for many young people that want to attend college, play athletics, graduate and become productive members in our society," said George Washington's Mike Jarvis. The group urged freshmen to get a full scholarship for a freshman to be eligible are still what is referred to as Prop 46 a 2.0 grade point average in 11 high school core courses and at least the standardized SAT Prop 16 which was introduced in 1992, increases the number of core courses to 13 and would call for a student-athlete to have at least a 900 on the SAT with a 2.0 average or a 700 with a 2.5.
Kentucky receives threats aimed at Curry's wife

Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. - A threatening phone call to the University of Kentucky football office included a threat on the life of Carolyn Curry, wife of UK coach Bill Curry, the university announced Wednesday.

The university said the call was received within the past few days and was immediately reported to the UK police. The FBI has since joined in the investigation.

University administrators and athletics officials were not at liberty to comment on the call pending the conclusion of the investigation, the school said in a news release.

Ralph Hacker, moderator of "Cat Calls," said at the start of the broadcast that Curry had "pressing personal business" that kept him from participating in the show.

Kentucky, which does not play this weekend, is in the throes of a four-game losing streak. The Wildcats are 1-4 overall and 0-3 in the Southeastern Conference.

in our first two games and turned the ball over too much," he added. Against Pittsburgh, "a lot of guys were talking how the first half felt like last year when we were moving the ball down the field, I think we've got the feeling back."

But if Notre Dame can shut down Mitchell, Hartsell will be deprived of his biggest offensive weapon.

"He's got a great knack of finding the open area," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said. "He reads coverages very, very well .... He's got excellent hands."

Smart enough to know that another year at Boston College would enhance his NFL prospects. He thought about turning pro this season, especially when coach Tom Coughlin left to coach Jacksonville's new NFL team and Foley went to the Jets.

But he was told he needed to get stronger. He also got a chance to enjoy college football for one more fall and, perhaps, one more upset of Notre Dame.

"I talked to some family members and friends and people whose opinions really mattered to me," Mitchell said. "There's nothing like playing college football. There's nothing like playing on a Saturday afternoon."
scores last week. "We are psyched to play," Spencer said. "We need the win, and we're looking forward to a high caliber football game."

The teams will clash at 7:00 pm on Cartier Field.

Pasquerilla West vs. Lewis

Pasquerilla West is looking to put some points on the board against Lewis tonight. The Purple Wasules, champions of the league last year, are coming off of two tied games. The defense has been strong, allowing only one touchdown in three games, but the offense hasn't been able to convert of late.

"We've been working on new plays all week, and we're excited to see what we can do with them in our next game," co-Captain Katie Warzon said.

Lewis, boasting a sizeable female dorm, hopes to continue allowing only one touchdown in games. Their defense remains strong with good size, talented freshmen, and a quick secondary. Neither of the last two teams they've played have been able to score.

"When you're out on the field and it's 7-0, you're thinking we'll be able to win if we can bring our offense up to the high level of play that our defense has maintained," Warzon said.

Pasquerilla East v. Knott

Knott has had a lot of time to prepare for tonight's game against fifth-ranked Pasquerilla East. The Angels have had over a week and a half to work on their defensive attack and capitalize on turnovers forced by their improving defense. The chickens are preparing for an intense game against a highly motivated PW team.

Pasquerilla West intends to end their frustrating streak with the skills of quarterback Carrie Wiesecke and Lanny Lee and Andi Odicino at runningback.

"I think we'll be able to win if we can bring our offense up to the high level of play that our defense has maintained," Warzon said.

Pasquerilla East v. Knott

Knott has had a lot of time to prepare for tonight's game against fifth-ranked Pasquerilla East. The Angels have had over a week and a half to work on their defensive attack and improve their defensive-assault squad. Looking for their first win, captain Kelly Koski looks forward to try out changes in the defense against a competitive team.

P.E. isn't taking Knott's winless record into account. "We've implemented some big changes in order to get some more points on the board," said P.E. captain Sue O'Kain. "We'll treat Knott as any other team with the ability to win."

P.E. is one of many teams frustrated by a series of tied games. Their defense remains strong with good size, talented freshmen, and a quick secondary. Neither of the last two teams they've played have been able to score.

While Knott hopes their break to try out changes in the offense against a competitive team.

The Attitudes were plagued by penalties in the early-going, and Byrd ran the ball up the field on their first possessions, and Byrd ran the ball in for a touchdown. Lyons was unable to convert on the extra point attempt. Next it was Badin's turn to score, as captain Jill Satanek caught a long pass for a touchdown.

The Lyons offense picked up where they left off, and Byrd passed to Amanda Gast for a touchdown with less than a minute to go in the second half. The final score was a decisive victory for Lyons, 19-6. Quarterback Julie Byrd attributed the win to various elements.

"We executed the plays well, were focused, concentrated, and intense," said Badin's head coach Tom McDonald. "We need to do better in every aspect of the game."

Pangborn 19, Cavanaugh 6

To cap off the night, the Pangborn Phoxes took on the Cavanaugh Cavaliers. Pangborn came on strong, driving down the field for a touchdown on their first possession. Fullback Carrie Howard ran the ball into the end zone for Cavanaugh's first touchdown of the season.

The Cavaliers were unable to convert on the extra point attempt, setting the tone for the rest of the game. From this point on, Pangborn dominated on both sides of the ball. The Phoxes stellar offensive effort was led by wide receiver/running back Kelly Brady.

"She did it all," said Coach Eric Cunningham. The Phoxes quickly answered Cavanaugh's touchdown with one of their own. With ten minutes left in the half, Kelly Brady ran for 65 yards and put the Phoxes on the scoreboard.

Pangborn failed to score the extra point, and Cavanaugh took over. The Cavaliers could not get their offense going, and had to punt to Pangborn. The Phoxes then marched down to the endzone. Quarterback, Mary Kraft threw a 50-yard pass which Kelly Brady caught and took into the end zone. Kraft passed to Stacey Baker up the middle for the extra point.

The Cavaliers could not get things started on offense, and they went in to the second half trailing 13-6.

Pangborn came up short on their first possession of the second half, as did Cavanaugh. Mary Kraft and the Pangborn offense pushed down the field, and Trish Sorenson was able to score on a 3-yard option run with five minutes left in the half. Cavanaugh coach Greg Montgomery was proud of his team for finally scoring.

"We played strong defense, and our offense stepped it up this week," he said. "They are really starting to develop. We've got new team, but a good team.

"We need to work on our option defense and pass defense. We've played some of the best teams in the league this season, and we're really starting to improve."

Pangborn's coaches Greg Bannon and Eric Cunningham agreed that the Phoxes defense "played tough." Both coaches felt that Kelly Brady was the key player for Pangborn.

"Our offense picked it up tonight," he said. "They showed what they really had," Bannon said.

Belles lose fall home finale to DePauw

By TARA KRULL
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary’s tennis team was defeated Tuesday by DePauw University 6-3, in their fall season home finale. The loss left the Belles with an overall 1-2 record.

"Victories were just slipping away from us," coach Katie Cromer said. "We had chances to win matches, but we seemed to have trouble ending them."

The Belles started off on the right foot with two wins turned in by the number one doubles team of seniors Andrea Ayres and Robin Hrycko, and the number three doubles team of freshmen Nora Slusar and Kate Marhoefer.

Sophomore Kate Kozacik, the Belles’ number one singles player, made a great comeback after losing her first set 6-2. Unfortunately, she suffered leg cramps during her tie-breaker set and was forced to back out in the second set.

"I tried to just stay out there and play through it," Kozacik said. "It was just so frustrating though, because I had a good chance at winning the match after losing my first set." Cromer noted that the team’s inexperience was probably the main factor in their loss against DePauw.

"We had many matches go all the way to three sets, but we just did not have it in ourselves to carry out the sets into wins," she added.

Despite the fact that the Belles concluded their fall season with a losing record, Cromer and her team have high expectations for their longer, regular spring season.

"Overall, I am pleased with the outcome of this fall," she said. "We played tough teams and we played them well, so I definitely believe that we are on the right track for a solid spring season." Cromer also noted that the losses the Belles suffered came from teams who have extensive fall seasons. In return, those teams have had more of a chance to establish themselves as a team than the Belles have at this point.

Nevertheless, this fall season has given the team hope for the spring. It also gave them a chance to get to know each other which will allow for a smooth beginning once they start up again in January.

"This season was definitely a plus for team bonding," Kozacik stated. "Everyone feels comfortable now calling a teammate and asking her if she wants to get together and practice." According to Cromer, it will be this team unity and extra practice during the Belles’ time off that will make the team a winning one next spring.

"As long as everyone continues to work hard and we gain a little more experience, there’s no reason why Saint Mary’s won’t be a team to beat," Cromer said.

Saint Mary’s Soccer will take on The University of Chicago today at 4 p.m. at home.

Frazier likely to miss rest of season

LINCOLN, Neb. — Quarterback Tommie Frazier, hospitalized with a blood clot in his right leg, is still in the hospital for a week to 10 days for an operation.

"I am pleased with the outcome of this fall," she said. "We played tough teams and we played them well, so I definitely believe that we are on the right track for a solid spring season." Cromer also noted that the losses the Belles suffered came from teams who have extensive fall seasons. In return, those teams have had more of a chance to establish themselves as a team than the Belles have at this point.

That smaller vein, he said, likely rubbed against the larger inner vein, causing the second blood clot in two weeks.

The larger second clot discovered Tuesday has been dissolved, Gangahar said. Doctors now want Frazier’s blood to gradually thin so they can operate to tie off the smaller vein.

After a first clot, about 6 to 8 inches long, was discovered Sept. 25 behind Frazier’s right knee, Gangahar said Frazier would be out for the season if the clot re-formed.

While clots like Frazier’s are not rare, Gangahar said they usually occur among the elderly or those with heart disease or cancer.

WOMEN'S INTERHALL FOOTBALL

Walsh tops Badin, 14-7

By JENNY SHANK
Sports Writer

An exciting evening of women's interhall football was kicked off by a game between top-ranked Walsh and the Howard Ducks. Anne Jackholoche scored the first touchdown for Walsh as they went into the second half leading the Ducks by a score of 7-0.

To start off the second half, Sarah Norton capped a long drive by scoring a touchdown for Howard. The Ducks went to Angel Donovan who scored the extra point.

Walsh quickly answered with another touchdown, as Luz Maria Rodriguez ran the ball in the end zone. Walsh's Rachel Kavanaugh ran up the middle and converted on the extra point attempt.

The final score was 14-7. Walsh improved their record to 4-0, and Howard dropped to 0-3.

Walsh captain Kirsten Edmunson said that key catches on offense allowed them to win.

“We had two interceptions on defense by Genna Gwynn and Meg Hogerty,” she said. “Diane Cook and Becky Cantwell both made key tackles. We just wanted to go out there and win so that we could stay number one.”

Lyons 19, Badin 6

In the second game of the evening, Lyons faced the Badin Attitudes. Badin's speedy Kim Gold got things started with a long kick-off return.

The Attitudes threatened to score, but Lyons' tough defense kept them at bay.

Eagles' tight end knows Irish out for revenge

By HOWARD ULMAN
Associated Press

Just 47 seconds left. Third-and-10 at his own 25. Down by one point in front of a hostile crowd.

Mitchell had “by far the best game of my career” with 13 catches for 132 yards, two touchdowns and 10 first downs. He added a 24-yard reception to the Notre Dame 33 with 19 seconds left.

But Glenn Foley's 12-yard pass two after two incompletions was the biggest.

It steamedrolled from there,” Mitchell said. “It just seemed like Glenn threw the ball only where we could catch it.”

Mitchell, an outstanding pro prospect at tight end, will be back for Saturday's rematch at Boston College. Foley, a four-year starter, won't be. He's with the New York Jets, and Mark Hartsell, who has thrown just 36 passes, will start at quarterback.

“We're there with Mark,” Mitchell said. “He's a very confident kid. He's not cocky but he's very confident and wants to win badly.”

The presence of a reliable veteran like Mitchell should help.

Mitchell had 10 receptions in the opening 34-26 loss to Michigan, scored in a 12-7 loss to Virginia Tech and caught just two passes in a 21-9 win at Pittsburgh in which the Eagles focused on running the ball.

Now comes Notre Dame, a big favorite with a 4-1 record.

“The media is making a large deal - out of this game,” Mitchell said. “I think all we need to know is the 90 guys on this team believe we can win this game and we expect to win this game.”

“We just made too many mistakes of note...”

Dillon and Breen-Phillips won the interhall cross country titles. Joe Kerbleski and Julie Toth won the men and women's individual titles.
