Peter Davis addresses Hollywood's influence on apartheid in South Africa during a viewing of his film last night in DeBartolo.

They (the Africans) viewed it as something high ethical see black actors on the stage," said Nkoski in the documentary. "They loved the white actors they had seen in the 1940's and 50's. A lot of the emotion they felt when they first saw the film was the same color as themselves."

The cinema truly was a way for the blacks of South Africa to forget about the cruelties they faced every day in the system of apartheid, according to Davis. They used it as an outlet and altered their own way of living by what they viewed on the big screen, he added. As a result of how vividly and accurately the films created during the 1960's depicted the horrors of apartheid, a world-wide sentiment for the blacks suffering in South Africa grew dramatically during the next decade.

Ironically, the white South African government turned as a "people," said novelist Lewis Nkoski in Davis' film. "Because of the cinema, a whole new world opened up to the Africans. For the first time they had the opportunity to view other cultures and develop an understanding of a greater world."

Movie viewers all over the world were able to see the horrors of apartheid in South Africa for the first time in Alan Paton's film "Cry, The Beloved Country." Paton's production provided an effect similar to the one that Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" had in the United States, said Davis. Hollywood's influence on the South African culture during the 1960's despite the increase in violence and the constant segregation the blacks faced during the decade, according to the film. For the first time, Africans emerged as the prominent actors in the films, and the response they received was unbelievable.
No excuse for another 25 years of this

Relations between Notre Dame and Mary's have really heated up over the past two weeks since the publication of various letters to the editor regarding the distribution of Maya Angelou tickets. The ill-feelings, however, go far beyond the availability of tickets to see Maya Angelou.

On a broad scale, the stereotypical attitudes about "SMC Chics" and "Domers" seem to be getting worse, or maybe just now publicly verbalized. This needs to stop. The writers to the editor have now become personal slams between students of the two institutions.

It seems that students on both sides of State Road 31 have written before they've thought, or done their fact checking. This suggests a much deeper problem.

The women of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's have had problems since day one. But one day over the past twenty-five years. It's time to put the past behind us and start relating.

It is possible for the women of Saint Mary's and Notre Dame to have friendships—it is possible. The women of Saint Mary's are not "dumb and easy" and, likewise, the women of Notre Dame are not "uptight and fat." We are unique individuals, come from different backgrounds, share many of the same values, and enjoy doing the same things. After all, we use to be even in the same places on Friday and Saturday nights, so what seems to be the problem?

How about Notre Dame men for an answer? Some seem to enjoy perpetuating these stereotypes, it must be pretty good for their collective ego's to have women from two campuses fighting over them.

It is also probably better, from their point of view, to have these women angry at each other, rather than joining forces and turning their anger on the opposite sex.

I must clarify these accusations, they do not apply to all Notre Dame men. They do not apply to those who are comfortable with themselves and with their relationships with females from both campuses. The also do not apply to those who are making a personal level, rather than viewing us as "meat" at a party.

The stereotypes can be broken down by working and interacting with each other on a personal level, or at least one that does not involve alcohol.

In light of the heightened tension I feel that it is appropriate to address the editors of Mary's and The Observer, to explain how well the two schools can co-exist without one another.

The Observer is the perfect example. The paper represents common ground where students of both schools must work together daily. It does not take long to relate on a personal level when working side by side.

By becoming personally involved in many of the myths are dispelled while a mutual respect and understanding is developed. And that is universal, students participating in any organization that links the two schools will soon learn that the stereotypes are false and need to be ended.

Only one question remains: How long it take for you—both Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students—to step out of your little world to see what others have to offer?

The views expressed in the Inside Column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

World at a Glance

Gorbachev proposes plan for a safer world

The world is still playing by the same Cold War rules and they will not longer work, Mikhail Gorbachev said Wednesday.

The former Soviet president proposed drastically cut nuclear arsenals and would tax sales of conventional weapons to pay for a nuclear freeze. The United Nations to pay for peacekeeping.

A proposal to improve peacekeeping would give more clout to the United Nations and regional security organizations.

Gorbachev, who has little influence in the world of the West, has been fighting for years to make peace. Now he is getting worse, or maybe just now publicly verbalized. This needs to stop. The women of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's have really heated up over the past two weeks since the publication of various letters to the editor regarding the distribution of Maya Angelou tickets. The ill-feelings, however, go far beyond the availability of tickets to see Maya Angelou.

On a broad scale, the stereotypical attitudes about "SMC Chics" and "Domers" seem to be getting worse, or maybe just now publicly verbalized. This needs to stop. The writers to the editor have now become personal slams between students of the two institutions.

It seems that students on both sides of State Road 31 have written before they've thought, or done their fact checking. This suggests a much deeper problem.

The women of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's have had problems since day one. But one day over the past twenty-five years. It's time to put the past behind us and start relating.

It is possible for the women of Saint Mary's and Notre Dame to have friendships—it is possible. The women of Saint Mary's are not "dumb and easy" and, likewise, the women of Notre Dame are not "uptight and fat." We are unique individuals, come from different backgrounds, share many of the same values, and enjoy doing the same things. After all, we use to be even in the same places on Friday and Saturday nights, so what seems to be the problem?

How about Notre Dame men for an answer? Some seem to enjoy perpetuating these stereotypes, it must be pretty good for their collective ego's to have women from two campuses fighting over them.

It is also probably better, from their point of view, to have these women angry at each other, rather than joining forces and turning their anger on the opposite sex.

I must clarify these accusations, they do not apply to all Notre Dame men. They do not apply to those who are comfortable with themselves and with their relationships with females from both campuses. The also do not apply to those who are making a personal level, rather than viewing us as "meat" at a party.

The stereotypes can be broken down by working and interacting with each other on a personal level, or at least one that does not involve alcohol.

In light of the heightened tension I feel that it is appropriate to address the editors of Mary's and The Observer, to explain how well the two schools can co-exist without one another.

The Observer is the perfect example. The paper represents common ground where students of both schools must work together daily. It does not take long to relate on a personal level when working side by side.

By becoming personally involved in many of the myths are dispelled while a mutual respect and understanding is developed. And that is universal, students participating in any organization that links the two schools will soon learn that the stereotypes are false and need to be ended.

Only one question remains: How long it take for you—both Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students—to step out of your little world to see what others have to offer?

The views expressed in the Inside Column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

No charges for Mays' false claims

SEBASTIAN, Fla.

Switched-at-birth teen-ager Kimberly Mays won't face charges for making false sexual abuse accusations against the man who raised her. "Kimberly is going to seek custody and we're not going to file any criminal charges against her," Assistant State Attorney Steve Houchnis said Wednesday. The 15-year-old "divorced" her biological parents, and it would go Regina Twigg last year in favor of Robert Mays in televised court proceedings.

Then in February, Kimberly ran away from home and later went to live with the Twiggs. The girl told authorities Mays had abused her since she was 7. She later broke down and admitted making the story up, the Florida Department of Law Enforcement said last month. She blamed the fabrication on emotional stress. Kimberly had been switched at birth in a hospital in 1978. When the switch came to light years later, the Twiggs wanted her back. Kimberly refused, saying she wanted to stay with Mays, the only father she had known, and a judge ruled in her favor.

Neo-Nazi receives II years

VIENNA

A leading extreme rightist accused of trying to form a successor to the Nazi party was found guilty Wednesday and sentenced to 11 years in jail. Gottfried Kessel, 36, switched political parties when health reform legislation died for this session of Congress but aides on the two key tax-writing committees said it was unlikely lawmakers will deal with the issue when they come back to Washington to vote on a global trade pact in late November. The 25 percent tax deduction for health pre

Trade Deficit shrinks, imports up

WASHINGTON

America's trade deficit shrank by 12.9 percent in August to $15.4 billion, the lowest level in three months, while imports surged to a record high, the government said today. The Commerce Department said that the U.S. trade deficit in goods and services fell to $9.74 billion as U.S. exports hit an all-time high, reflecting big increases in exports of aircraft and semiconductors, and a decline in imports of chips and cigarettes. The overall improvement was likely to be offset by a sharp widening in the deficit in July, when it had jumped to $11.19 billion, reflecting the second worst goods deficit on record.

Foley pledges tax break

House Speaker Thomas Foley, fighting to win re-election, has said he will try to revive a health insurance tax break for the self-employed in one month's lame-duck session of Congress. But aides on the two key tax-writing committees said it was unlikely lawmakers will deal with the issue when they come back to Washington to vote on a global trade pact in late November. The 25 percent tax deduction for health pre

The views expressed in the Inside Column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.
Students can swap tickets for GAs

By WENDY GRZYWACZ
New Wave

Student football season ticket holders interested in exchanging or donating their tickets for the Navy Parents' Game have two options this year. The ticket office in the Joyce ADC will exchange one Navy student ticket and $14 for a general admission ticket, and Big Brothers/Big Sisters are accepting unused Navy tickets to be used by unmatched children in their program. By exchanging an unused student coupon and $14, students will be able to convert into regular admission seating for other relatives interested in attending the game on October 29th. The seat locations will be the same as the original student tickets.

"We're trying to help every­one that needs to be helped" by accommodating those who will benefit from this offer, said Perry Baert of the Notre Dame ticket office. Although he acknowledged that the response has been slightly lacking, the office expects more interest today.

This is the first time the ticket office has offered such an exchange and it may have more years to come. Students interested in ex­changing tickets for Big Broth­ers/Big Sisters will bring their entire ticket books to the JACC second-floor ticket window today between 8:30 and 5:00 p.m. A maximum of four tickets may be exchanged by each student.

Students who wish to help neighborhood children by donating their ticket to Big Brothers/Big Sisters should contact the Center for Social Concerns.

Dance to promote alcohol awareness

By BRAD PRENDERGAST
New Wave

As part of National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week, sever­al student organizations are sponsoring a dance tonight at the LaFortune Ballroom.

"We want to make people aware that alcohol causes a lot of problems on campuses across the country," Scott Ha­gen, coordinator of the event from the Graduate Student Union, said, "but we also want to have a lot of fun.

Sponsored by the Graduate Student Union, Undergraduate Student Government, the Office of Alcohol and Drug Education, Flipside, and Students Against Drunk Driving, the dance is open to both graduate and under­graduate students.

"It's an opportunity for grad­uates and undergraduates to get to know each other," Bolm Serrano, president of SADD, said. "We're trying to get ev­erybody to have a good time.

The dance, held on Thursday night instead of on Friday or Saturday because fall break be­gins the next day, is the first of a study break, according to Ha­gen.

"Thursday night is late enough in the week that people are looking to relax," he said, "but there are still people around on the campus.

Both Hagen and Serrano are expecting about 300 students to attend. Last year's dance at­tracted a similar number of people.

"I think undergraduates will support it more than gradu­ates," Hagen said, "because it's more convenient for them.

Admission to the dance, which will run from 9 p.m. to midnight, is free.

Virgin margaritas and daiquiris will be served at the dance, as well as potato chips, pretzels, nachos, and fruit and vegetable trays.

Providing non-alcoholic alter­natives is important, Hagen said.

"There is a lot of peer pres­sure to drink," he said. "It's considered socially acceptable to drink.

Serrano said that many stu­dents come to college assuming that drinking is a way of life.

"The real problem is driving drunk," she said. "I don't think some students have the maturity when they first come to school to deal with alcohol re­sponsibly."

Can - or, more importantly - will Notre Dame's student body support non-alcoholic en­tertainment?

"I think there is a strong per­centage of people that would support these activities," Hagen said. "It's my hope that this dance is enough of a success so that we'll support it again next year.

"Sometimes, (non-alcoholic) events are not as successful as they could be," he continued. "If we get a little more effort into them, they could be really great.

SADD is also planning more activities for the year, including a bowling tournament, Satur­day night movies, a dating game contest, and the opening of a computer house where campus bands will perform.

Internet newest arena of sexual harassment

By ELIZABETH WIESE
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO

For women, logging on to the Internet is the computer equivalent of walking past con­struction workers on their lunch breaks.

"It's a pity," one of the women who logs on often says, "to bring the messages that bring you here at this time? " Wives chat privately.

Gender wasn't supposed to matter in cyberspace. But then, telling anyone that someone has ever logged on under a name like Cindi or Veronica.

Rather than deal with the potential and harassment, many women are logging on to women-only discussion groups scattered across cyberspace.

"It's not all 'there's how cool I am' and 'how cool I know clever I can be.' It's an attempt to con­nect, not to show off," saidawn Rabin, a Bostonian who logs on to the women-only por­tion of a 10,000-person computer network based in SanSulito, Calif.

There are at least 15 women-only areas or conferences - on bulletin boards around the country, as well as a smaller number of men-only spaces. Men must speak to an oper­ator to prove their sex before they can log on.

Women-only spaces don't mean male bashing. Last year the board of the Meta Network in Washington started a topic called Celeb Men.

For several weeks they filled it with their musings: "I love the way they look," "I love the way they look," "I like the way they play with their dogs."

As a holiday gift they copied the whole list over to a women-only conference, so that all the men could read it.

"It really deepened our rela­tionship with each other," said Lisa Kimball, one of the net­work's founders.

Over at New York City-based Women's List, one of the groups of young women re­cently started an online ver­sion of the ever-popular "Who'd you rather do?" game. The group's new, same-sex discussion list on this bulletin board has its dangers, however, as a recent case in California illustrated.

REGULAR MONTHLY GATHERING

Thursday, October 20
5:30 - 6:30 p.m.
Louange of the Morris Inn

Also: On November 17 at the INN at St. Mary's on December at a member's home - Christmas Party

For further information call John Gerber, C.S.C 1-8601 or JoAnne bunage 1-4617

Co-sponsored by the Singles Group and Campus Ministry
Enter at the Varsity Shop to

2 Tickets to the Bears® vs. Packers®!

Grand Prize!
Limousine trip to and from the game,
Monday Night, October 31, 1994 at Soldier Field!

Champion
WHAT THE BEARS® WEAR TO WORK

VARSITY SHOP

*Prizes are taxable. See current rules in the N.D. for details. Drawing will be held at least two days prior to game.
Apartheid

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press

CHICAGO

On the long list of crimes and misdemeanors that Chicago police blotter, the murder of 5-year-old Eric Morse seems the cruelest.

It was, police say, a carefully planned crime. Last week Eric was lured by two boys, 11 and 10, to their "clubhouse," a vacant apartment high in a housing project. He was dangled from a window, then dropped 14 floors to his death.

His frantic 8-year-old brother could not save him. Neighbors heard a long, fading scream. Eric died, police said, for his honesty. He refused to steal candy for the boys and reported them to his mother.

A wake was held for Eric on Wednesday, less than two months after another boy's death shook the city: Robert "Yummy" Sandifer, an 11-year-old murder suspect hiding from the police, was allegedly executed by two brothers in his gang, ages 14 and 16. The scrappy boy nicknamed for his love of cookies had a rap sheet that rivaled most adult felons: 28 arrests in 18 months.

These two incidents provide a ghoul glimpse into a frightening and disturbing world of kids who, for new and old questions about what is happening to an entire generation of inner-city children, who is responsible and how the viciousness can be stopped.

"We're seeing communities that are increasingly isolated from the social norms we believe in," said Alfred Blumstein, an urban affairs expert at Carnegie Mellon University.

"They're populated by kids who are prepared to risk their own lives or someone else's gain or avoid losing respect."

Some say these two murders reflect several nationwide trends: the growing power of guns, gangs and drugs among adolescents; the disintegration of families; the lack of legal remedies to deal with children committing the worst of adult crimes.

"By time kids come in attention of the criminal justice system, it's probably too late," Blumstein said. "(It's) typically the time parents react to parents ... but we see large numbers of parents who don't have the competence, who don't have the skill and themselves are dysfunctional."

The youngster in both Chicago cases has a troubled history. Robert Sandifer was an abuse victim himself, starting age 22 months. The 10-year-old charged in Eric's murder has a criminal prosecution (four were dropped) and last week was supposed to be confined to his home under court order. The fathers of both boys are in jail.

This week, Eric's death stirred new concerns from President Clinton to a gathering of police officers about taking the kids to jail from parents and the need for rule-making.

"What must we be worried about is wave upon wave of these little children who don't have somebody both good and strong to look up to, who are so vulnerable that their hearts can be turned to crime by the time they're 10 or 11 years old," Clinton said.

Eric's father, who tried to steer kids straight find it tough going.

"These kids will listen to a gang member selling drugs rather than something positive," said Tracy Harding, a police commander in Chicago's Cabrini-Green public housing project and program coordinator with the Chicago Police Department.

"The negative catches on such as alcohol and marijuana thinking to get respect. Then people are scared of you."

Harding said he was alarmed last week when he told an 11-year-old admired Robert Sandifer. "Just being in the gang and having so much pull, that was the ultimate fantasy to some of them."

Some experts say the Sandifer case points up two key reasons why the kids are so likeable: easy access to guns and the role of youth gangs.

A study released last week by the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta found that homicides among youths aged 15 to 19 jumped 154 percent from 1985 to 1991, far exceeding increases in other age group.

Chicago police statistics also show an increase in kids committing murder and other felonies.

Chicago police statistics also show an increase in kids committing murder and other felonies.

The youngsters in both Chicago cases have a troubled history. Robert Sandifer was an abuse victim himself, starting age 22 months. The 10-year-old charged in Eric's murder has a criminal prosecution (four were dropped) and last week was supposed to be confined to his home under court order. The fathers of both boys are in jail.

This week, Eric's death stirred new concerns from President Clinton to a gathering of police officers about taking the kids to jail from parents and the need for rule-making.

"What must we be worried about is wave upon wave of these little children who don't have somebody both good and strong to look up to, who are so vulnerable that their hearts can be turned to crime by the time they're 10 or 11 years old," Clinton said.

Eric's father, who tried to steer kids straight find it tough going.

"These kids will listen to a gang member selling drugs rather than something positive," said Tracy Harding, a police commander in Chicago's Cabrini-Green public housing project and program coordinator with the Chicago Police Department.

"The negative catches on such as alcohol and marijuana thinking to get respect. Then people are scared of you."

Harding said he was alarmed last week when he told an 11-year-old admired Robert Sandifer. "Just being in the gang and having so much pull, that was the ultimate fantasy to some of them."

Some experts say the Sandifer case points up two key reasons why the kids are so likeable: easy access to guns and the role of youth gangs.

A study released last week by the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta found that homicides among youths aged 15 to 19 jumped 154 percent from 1985 to 1991, far exceeding increases in other age group.

Chicago police statistics also show an increase in kids committing murder and other felonies.

Chicago police statistics also show an increase in kids committing murder and other felonies.

"What must we be worried about is wave upon wave of these little children who don't have somebody both good and strong to look up to, who are so vulnerable that their hearts can be turned to crime by the time they're 10 or 11 years old," Clinton said.

Eric's father, who tried to steer kids straight find it tough going.

"These kids will listen to a gang member selling drugs rather than something positive," said Tracy Harding, a police commander in Chicago's Cabrini-Green public housing project and program coordinator with the Chicago Police Department. Perry's visit yields modest results

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press

CHONGQING, China

Four days of talks with Chinese military officials left Defense Secretary William Perry pleasantly surprised Wednesday about what didn't come up: U.S. military sales of arms with stern words about the import of human rights and the dangers of missile sales to Pakistan.

Two U.S. sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Chinese had made no protest about any projects over the F-16 sales apparently signaled the difference to which China hopes to improve relations with the United States, according to Perry.

Perry ended his visit to China by flying back halfway to be to World War II when the two countries were allies, and looking forward to a time when that friendship could be renewed. He spoke in a ceremony at the Yangtze River that Stilwell directed the forces in China, who headed primarily to assuage China. At the time, it's probably too late," Blumstein said. "(It's) typically the time parents react to parents ... but we see large numbers of parents who don't have the competence, who don't have the skill and themselves are dysfunctional."

The youngsters in both Chicago cases have a troubled history. Robert Sandifer was an abuse victim himself, starting age 22 months. The 10-year-old charged in Eric's murder has a criminal prosecution (four were dropped) and last week was supposed to be confined to his home under court order. The fathers of both boys are in jail.

This week, Eric's death stirred new concerns from President Clinton to a gathering of police officers about taking the kids to jail from parents and the need for rule-making.

"What must we be worried about is wave upon wave of these little children who don't have somebody both good and strong to look up to, who are so vulnerable that their hearts can be turned to crime by the time they're 10 or 11 years old," Clinton said.

Eric's father, who tried to steer kids straight find it tough going.

"These kids will listen to a gang member selling drugs rather than something positive," said Tracy Harding, a police commander in Chicago's Cabrini-Green public housing project and program coordinator with the Chicago Police Department. Perry's visit yields modest results

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press

CHONGQING, China

Four days of talks with Chinese military officials left Defense Secretary William Perry pleasantly surprised Wednesday about what didn't come up: U.S. military sales of arms with stern words about the import of human rights and the dangers of missile sales to Pakistan.

Two U.S. sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Chinese had made no protest about any projects over the F-16 sales apparently signaled the difference to which China hopes to improve relations with the United States, according to Perry.

Perry ended his visit to China by flying back halfway to be to World War II when the two countries were allies, and looking forward to a time when that friendship could be renewed. He spoke in a ceremony at the Yangtze River that Stilwell directed the forces in China, who headed primarily to assuage China. At the time, it's probably too late," Blumstein said. "(It's) typically the time parents react to parents ... but we see large numbers of parents who don't have the competence, who don't have the skill and themselves are dysfunctional."

The youngsters in both Chicago cases have a troubled history. Robert Sandifer was an abuse victim himself, starting age 22 months. The 10-year-old charged in Eric's murder has a criminal prosecution (four were dropped) and last week was supposed to be confined to his home under court order. The fathers of both boys are in jail.

This week, Eric's death stirred new concerns from President Clinton to a gathering of police officers about taking the kids to jail from parents and the need for rule-making.

"What must we be worried about is wave upon wave of these little children who don't have somebody both good and strong to look up to, who are so vulnerable that their hearts can be turned to crime by the time they're 10 or 11 years old," Clinton said.

Eric's father, who tried to steer kids straight find it tough going.

"These kids will listen to a gang member selling drugs rather than something positive," said Tracy Harding, a police commander in Chicago's Cabrini-Green public housing project and program coordinator with the Chicago Police Department.

Bomb attack in Iraq, no fatalities reported

 Associated Press

BAGHDAD

A bomb exploded today at the Ministry of Religious Affairs building in Baghdad, wounding several people.

Government sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the blast occurred during office hours at the compound in the northern Bah al-Mouhamad district of the Iraqi capital.

No fatalities—only injuries — were reported.

News photographers said there was no sign of damage and windows remained intact at the walled, block-size complex, which comprises two large buildings and several smaller structures.

Guard officers would not allow photographers through the gates. There was no indication where they might have been behind the attack, the second in Baghdad in four days.

A booby-trapped car blew up near the offices of the state-run Al-Jawad radio station on Aug. 22, killing a child and wounding 13.

The Observer / NEWS

Book reflects on Pope’s life

By VICTOR SIMPSON
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY

In the first book ever published by a pope, John Paul II recalls his Jewish friendship with a boy in Poland before the Holocaust and the resulting penchant for condemning abortion.

In “Crossing the Threshold of Hope,” released today, the book, written while John Paul was pope, targets the moral and religious implications of the Nice bombing.

"Crossing the Threshold of Hope" contains no major prophetic pronouncements, but its writing and publication are highly unusual events. The book, written while John Paul was pope, targets the moral and religious implications of the Nice bombing.

Inside are the pope’s personal reflections on the papacy, religion and the role of the Romonian Orthodox Church in the world.

"It is the pope’s vocation," declared Archbishop William Keeler of Baltimore, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, during today’s Vatican launching of the English-language edition.

The book, published in 21 languages, hits bookstore shelves Thursday in 35 countries.

Knopf, which reportedly paid $6 million for the English-language rights, said more than 5 million copies will be in print in the United States.

Papal spokesman Joaquin Navarro said all royalties will go to a charity designated by John Paul. He estimated the pope will get 45 percent of the sale of foreign rights.

The Italian publisher, Mondadori, is planning a massive promotion, with advertising in 35 countries.

The book, published in 21 languages, hits bookstore shelves Thursday in 35 countries.

By MAUD BEELMAN
Associated Press

SARAJEVO

In 1988, long before Bosnia plunged into war, some young TV comedians spoofed a divided Sarajevo. Later, they joked about U.N. peacekeepers breaking into a home to settle a family dispute.

Now, the popular and prescient Sustainability hit Paradio group — the Balkan equivalent of Monty Python or “Saturday Night Live” — has a new book of work that pokes fun at Islam. But one may never see it.

officials attempting to impose Muslim culture and values on some Muslims deemed to be social deviants.

News photographers said there was no sign of damage and windows remained intact at the walled, block-size complex, which comprises two large buildings and several smaller structures.

Guard officers would not allow photographers through the gates. There was no indication where they might have been behind the attack, the second in Baghdad in four days.

A booby-trapped car blew up near the offices of the state-run Al-Jawad radio station on Aug. 22, killing a child and wounding 13.

In “Crossing the Threshold of Hope,” released today, the book, written while John Paul was pope, targets the moral and religious implications of the Nice bombing.

Inside are the pope’s personal reflections on the papacy, religion and the role of the Romonian Orthodox Church in the world.

"It is the pope’s vocation," declared Archbishop William Keeler of Baltimore, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, during today’s Vatican launching of the English-language edition.

The book, published in 21 languages, hits bookstore shelves Thursday in 35 countries.

Knopf, which reportedly paid $6 million for the English-language rights, said more than 5 million copies will be in print in the United States.

Papal spokesman Joaquin Navarro said all royalties will go to a charity designated by John Paul. He estimated the pope will get 45 percent of the sale of foreign rights.

The Italian publisher, Mondadori, is planning a massive promotion, with advertising in 35 countries.

The book, published in 21 languages, hits bookstore shelves Thursday in 35 countries.

By MAUD BEELMAN
Associated Press

SARAJEVO

In 1988, long before Bosnia plunged into war, some young TV comedians spoofed a divided Sarajevo. Later, they joked about U.N. peacekeepers breaking into a home to settle a family dispute.

Now, the popular and prescient Sustainability hit Paradio group — the Balkan equivalent of Monty Python or “Saturday Night Live” — has a new book of work that pokes fun at Islam. But one may never see it.

officials attempting to impose Muslim culture and values on some Muslims deemed to be social deviants.

News photographers said there was no sign of damage and windows remained intact at the walled, block-size complex, which comprises two large buildings and several smaller structures.

Guard officers would not allow photographers through the gates. There was no indication where they might have been behind the attack, the second in Baghdad in four days.

A booby-trapped car blew up near the offices of the state-run Al-Jawad radio station on Aug. 22, killing a child and wounding 13.

In “Crossing the Threshold of Hope,” released today, the book, written while John Paul was pope, targets the moral and religious implications of the Nice bombing.

Inside are the pope’s personal reflections on the papacy, religion and the role of the Romonian Orthodox Church in the world.

"It is the pope’s vocation," declared Archbishop William Keeler of Baltimore, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, during today’s Vatican launching of the English-language edition.

The book, published in 21 languages, hits bookstore shelves Thursday in 35 countries.

Knopf, which reportedly paid $6 million for the English-language rights, said more than 5 million copies will be in print in the United States.

Papal spokesman Joaquin Navarro said all royalties will go to a charity designated by John Paul. He estimated the pope will get 45 percent of the sale of foreign rights.

The Italian publisher, Mondadori, is planning a massive promotion, with advertising in 35 countries.

The book, published in 21 languages, hits bookstore shelves Thursday in 35 countries.

By MAUD BEELMAN
Associated Press

SARAJEVO

In 1988, long before Bosnia plunged into war, some young TV comedians spoofed a divided Sarajevo. Later, they joked about U.N. peacekeepers breaking into a home to settle a family dispute.

Now, the popular and prescient Sustainability hit Paradio group — the Balkan equivalent of Monty Python or “Saturday Night Live” — has a new book of work that pokes fun at Islam. But one may never see it.

officials attempting to impose Muslim culture and values on some Muslims deemed to be social deviants.

News photographers said there was no sign of damage and windows remained intact at the walled, block-size complex, which comprises two large buildings and several smaller structures.

Guard officers would not allow photographers through the gates. There was no indication where they might have been behind the attack, the second in Baghdad in four days.

A booby-trapped car blew up near the offices of the state-run Al-Jawad radio station on Aug. 22, killing a child and wounding 13.
The Observer • ISRAEL

Terror bomb on Israeli bus kills 22

By MIKI BUKOVSKY
Associated Press

TEL AVIV

A terrorist bomb shattered two buses today in the heart of Tel Aviv's shopping and cafe district. At least 22 people were reported killed and 48 wounded in the attack claimed by Islamic militants.

The attack was the third by Islamic radicals in 11 days and came as Israel was cementing peace with its Arab neighbors. The 9 a.m. blast ripped through a commuter bus heading north on Dizengoff Street during rush hour and wrecked a second bus passing in the other direction. There were reports the bomber carried explosives in a sack when he boarded the bus.

"People went flying into the air, arms and legs, it was a terrible thing," said Moshe Reiner, who was walking to work when the blast occurred.

The bus, a charred skeleton of twisted metal, stood in the middle of the city's main street with bodies of women and a child still under the debris. Police spokeswoman Eti Greenbaum said 20 people were killed and 48 wounded. Israeli radio reported spoke of 22 killed.

"People fell out of the bus when it exploded," a commuter said. "The bus was immediately closed off."

A woman lying on the ground said she was walking to work when the explosion went off near the Tivoli Cafe.

"I saw flames shooting up from the bus and then smoke. People were running around screaming," she said.

Police pushed back bystanders and sent in bomb squad experts after a suspected bomb was found in the bus. Another unit decided to evacuate the area after the body of the terrorist was not found.

An announcer fought back tears on Israel Radio. "The explosion was a rare assault on the center of Tel Aviv by Israelis for its seeming lack of security," he said.

"People felt like I had been electrocuted. For a few minutes I couldn't move," said the 29-year-old cashier. "She saw a jumble of bodies at the front of the bus, where the blast occurred.

Doron Gumbash, 25, ran over and found the driver with his head blown off. "Gumbash said "all hell broke loose" as the reality of what had happened dawned on survivors.

People ran screaming. Bodies and body parts lay amid the wreckage of the bus. Shattered glass of cafes, restaurants and banks was scattered about.

Ariella Ronen, who was still shaking as she sat in a shoe store, said she was walking to work when the explosion went off near the Tivoli Cafe.

"The bus was completely burned and more bodies were all over the ground. There was a woman lying on the ground with the back of the bus on her," she said.

"I was brought in to lift the bus and look for more bodies."

Hundreds, then thousands, of curious onlookers streamed past police barbed wire.

Some rabble-rousers tried to incite the crowd into riot, their sporadic shouts of "Death to Arabs!" heard over the din of police helicopters, ambulance sirens and the shouts of rescue workers.

The explosion was a rare assault on the center of Tel Aviv, an oasis of prosperity prized by Israelis for its seeming lack of a connection to the Arab-Israeli conflict.

The latest wave of violence began Oct. 9, when two bystanders were killed by a radical who sprayed a busy Jerusalem cafe district with gunfire. A draft peace treaty was initialed on Monday, and festivities were being planned for the signing of the accord next week in a ceremony to be witnessed by 5,000 people, including President Clinton.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres vowed that Israel "will not hesitate to find those responsible for this terrible action and to prevent them in the future."

In London, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said he would return early from his trip and blamed Islamic radicals for trying to destroy the peace process.

"It is a continuation of the attempts by those who are antagonistic to the peace, the extreme Islamic terrorist groups," said Kanan.

"Israel immediately closed the West Bank and Gaza Strip, barring thousands of Palestinians from entering the area. A curfew was declared in areas called an emergency Cabinet meeting and ordered buses stopped and searched for bombs.

An anonymous caller to Israeli Radio claimed responsibility in the name of Hamas, a fundamentalist Muslim group that opposes Israel's peacemaking with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Another tire-ager stood near the site, sobbing for a boyfriend who apparently did not survive.

A car appeared to the site of the attack. "I saw flames shooting up from the bus and then smoke. People were running around screaming," she said.

Police pushed back bystanders and sent in bomb squad experts after a suspected second bomb was found. A helicopter flew overhead and dozens of ambulances raced to pick up the wounded and dead.

Israel's right-wing leader Benjamin Netanyahu said Israel should permanently close the Gaza Strip, an autonomous Palestinian zone. He warned that if Rabin did not get tougher with the Palestinians he would be "personally responsible for a wave of disasters that will follow."

Yasser Abed Rabbo, a spokesman for Arafat's PLO-run autonomy government in Gaza, condemned the attack and called it a "horrible action."

"We denounce it completely, and we consider that this crime is against the relations between the Israeli people and the Palestinian people," he said today on Israeli Radio.

"The answer we believe to such an incident is to continue our process and to implement it on the ground," he said.

Ori Urr, a leading member of the ruling Labor party in parliament, said the attack was apparently linked to Monday's bomb attack in the heart of Tel Aviv. "The blasts are a sign of the signing of that peace treaty on Oct. 26."

Terror bombing in Tel Aviv

At least 22 people were killed in one of the worst ever terror attacks in Israel when a bomb on a commuter bus exploded in the heart of Tel Aviv, Islamic militants are believed to be behind the attack.

The worst wave of violence began Oct. 9, when two bystanders were killed by a radical who sprayed a busy Jerusalem cafe district with gunfire. A draft peace treaty was initialed on Monday, and festivities were being planned for the signing of the accord next week in a ceremony to be witnessed by 5,000 people, including President Clinton.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres vowed that Israel "will not hesitate to find those responsible for this terrible action and to prevent them in the future."

In London, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said he would return early from his trip and blamed Islamic radicals for trying to destroy the peace process.

"It is a continuation of the attempts by those who are antagonistic to the peace, the extreme Islamic terrorist groups," said Kanan.

"Israel immediately closed the West Bank and Gaza Strip, barring thousands of Palestinians from entering the area. A curfew was declared in areas called an emergency Cabinet meeting and ordered buses stopped and searched for bombs.

An anonymous caller to Israeli Radio claimed responsibility in the name of Hamas, a fundamentalist Muslim group that opposes Israel's peacemaking with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Another tire-ager stood near the site, sobbing for a boyfriend who apparently did not survive.

A car appeared to the site of the attack. "I saw flames shooting up from the bus and then smoke. People were running around screaming," she said.

Police pushed back bystanders and sent in bomb squad experts after a suspected second bomb was found. A helicopter flew overhead and dozens of ambulances raced to pick up the wounded and dead.

Israel's right-wing leader Benjamin Netanyahu said Israel should permanently close the Gaza Strip, an autonomous Palestinian zone. He warned that if Rabin did not get tougher with the Palestinians he would be "personally responsible for a wave of disasters that will follow."

Yasser Abed Rabbo, a spokesman for Arafat's PLO-run autonomy government in Gaza, condemned the attack and called it a "horrible action."

"We denounce it completely, and we consider that this crime is against the relations between the Israeli people and the Palestinian people," he said today on Israeli Radio.

"The answer we believe to such an incident is to continue our process and to implement it on the ground," he said.

Ori Urr, a leading member of the ruling Labor party in parliament, said the attack was apparently linked to Monday's bomb attack in the heart of Tel Aviv. "The blasts are a sign of the signing of that peace treaty on Oct. 26."

Terror bomb on Israeli bus kills 22

By MIKI BUKOVSKY
Associated Press

TEL AVIV

A terrorist bomb shattered two buses today in the heart of Tel Aviv's shopping and cafe district. At least 22 people were reported killed and 48 wounded in the attack claimed by Islamic militants.

The attack was the third by Islamic radicals in 11 days and came as Israel was cementing peace with its Arab neighbors. The 9 a.m. blast ripped through a commuter bus heading north on Dizengoff Street during rush hour and wrecked a second bus passing in the other direction. There were reports the bomber carried explosives in a sack when he boarded the bus.

"People went flying into the air, arms and legs, it was a terrible thing," said Moshe Reiner, who was walking to work when the blast occurred.

The bus, a charred skeleton of twisted metal, stood in the middle of the city's main street with bodies of women and a child still under the debris. Police spokeswoman Eti Greenbaum said 20 people were killed and 48 wounded. Israeli radio reported spoke of 22 killed.

"People fell out of the bus when it exploded," a commuter said. "The bus was immediately closed off."

A woman lying on the ground said she was walking to work when the explosion went off near the Tivoli Cafe.

"I saw flames shooting up from the bus and then smoke. People were running around screaming," she said.

Police pushed back bystanders and sent in bomb squad experts after a suspected bomb was found in the bus. Another unit decided to evacuate the area after the body of the terrorist was not found.

An announcer fought back tears on Israel Radio. "The explosion was a rare assault on the center of Tel Aviv by Israelis for its seeming lack of security," he said.

"People felt like I had been electrocuted. For a few minutes I couldn't move," said the 29-year-old cashier. "She saw a jumble of bodies at the front of the bus, where the blast occurred.

Doron Gumbash, 25, ran over and found the driver with his head blown off. "Gumbash said "all hell broke loose" as the reality of what had happened dawned on survivors.

People ran screaming. Bodies and body parts lay amid the wreckage of the bus. Shattered glass of cafes, restaurants and banks was scattered about.

Ariella Ronen, who was still shaking as she sat in a shoe store, said she was walking to work when the explosion went off near the Tivoli Cafe.

"The bus was completely burned and more bodies were all over the ground. There was a woman lying on the ground with the back of the bus on her," she said.

"I was brought in to lift the bus and look for more bodies."

Hundreds, then thousands, of curious onlookers streamed past police barbed wire.

Some rabble-rousers tried to incite the crowd into riot, their sporadic shouts of "Death to Arabs!" heard over the din of police helicopters, ambulance sirens and the shouts of rescue workers.

The explosion was a rare assault on the center of Tel Aviv, an oasis of prosperity prized by Israelis for its seeming lack of a connection to the Arab-Israeli conflict.
THE OBSERVER

NOTRE DAME OFFICE: P.O. Box Q, Notre Dame, IN 46556 (219) 631-7471
SOUTH MARY'S OFFICE: 300 Hagan, Notre Dame, IN 46556 (219) 631-2864

1994-95 General Board

Editor-in-Chief: Jake Peters

Managing Editor John Lucas
Business Manager Joseph Riley

News Editor Jane Strahan
Viewpoint Editor Susan Fray
Sports Editor George Osbmosh
Accident Editor Mary Good
Photo Editor Josephine Johnson

The Observer is the independent newspaper published by the students of the University of Notre Dame de la Re and Saint Mary's College. It is not in any way endorsed or supported by the University or the College. The views expressed by the editors and writers do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the administration or either institution. The paper is operated as an agency and is possible. Unpaid editorial open to the students of the University, and The Observer. Viewpoint space is available to all members of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community and in all matters. The free expression of opposing opinions through is encouraged.

The Observer phone lines:
Editor-in-Chief 631-4542
Manager/Viewpoint 631-4543
Editorial Director 631-4546
News/Photo 631-5322
Business Office 631-5333
Student Life 631-6482
Accident/Photo 631-4808
Arts 631-4505
Photography 631-6820
University Information 631-7475

$1.00 PER COPY

Accent Editor: Mary Good
Commentaries, Viewpoint, Sports, Managing Editor/Viewpoint: Accent/Saint Mary's

IN OBIER ATIVE

IN"RfJCTIV&

OFFICE: P.O. Box Q, Notre Dame, IN 46556
C: 631-5303
F: 631-4541
631-6927 Ads:
631-6900/8840 Sales:335
631-6873
631-8839 Office

Confront the issue. Consider their objective. If it is not a sin or a moral misstep, it is our job to check and correct their dehumanizing message. By snickering at women's or men's genitalia, we, as a society, are creating a culture in which we accept the violation of someone's private body.

Josh Ozersky

BLOOD BOILS OVER SEXIST PIGS

Gender Bias! The very words make my blood boil. The ugly spirit of sexism is about us in our fine university, and our "loyal" student body is in awe. I often wonder, what do the women of the Notre Dame campus make of our unregenerate sexism? Consider these awful jokes passed around at Alumni and Carroll Halls. Do we consider them funny? Are we so smart and clever at their dehumanizing message? By snickering at women's or men's genitalia, we, as a society, are creating a culture in which we accept the violation of someone's private body.

I, FARRINGTON

And it doesn't stop there. The "jokes" on the walls of Alumni and Carroll are dove coos in comparison with the vicious doggerel and cartoons, with talons it seems, on the upper floors of Hesburgh. Talk about your non-inclusive language! This stuff is punctuated with barbed wire.

It's time for Notre Dame's men to pick up the cross of womanly dignity. Stop writing all that nasty stuff on the walls, and using male pronouns all the time. Remove the electrical implants the university puts in instructors' heads; there is no need to condition them via electroshock to not call on women as often as men. The metro Chronicle of Men we are required to read at various lava lamp-Hi altars can also be dispensed with. The reversible painting of Father Hesburgh (the obverse is a portrait of a scowling Lee Morgan) should be replaced with a conventional version, to be kept there at all hours, whether there are women in the room or not. Likewise, let us sew up the removable eyes from the various paintings in the women's dorms. We can do without our secret access codes to the 900 numbers; our invitation-only cocktail wings at the JACC, too. The library's video catalog ought to be confiscated, finally, and reexamined and for all that Meariner on Dante videos, vols. 1-19. In fact, all frontiers of NFL highlight films. Speak out for Women, ND men. You have nothing to lose but your penal glands!

Josh Ozersky is a graduate student in history.

Resident

Residents not responsible for past Daag's words

Don Ed

We are writing this in response to Theresa Aleman's article that appeared in last Thursday's Observer. In this article, Aleman reported a top ten list from an Alumni Hall newsletter (the Daaghogue) that first published in March of 1993 that was shown at the recent forum for women's issues. As co-presidents of Alumni Hall, we have been requested by numerous women on campus to apologize for ourselves and our dorm mates for the comments made in this newsletter.

Although the Daaghogue is in no way endorsed or supported by Alumni Hall, it has been monitored by our vector since the publication of the very edition quoted in the Observer. The author of the noted Daaghogue was reprimanded by our rec- tor at the time for his irresponsibility, offensiveness, and vulgarity. Furthermore, at the time this issue was printed, we and our Alumni Hall newsletter are not, and were not, responsible for those comments.

In an effort to discern why a two year old copy of Alumni's newsletter was quoted at a forum on current social issues, we called Joe Evans, who read the Dawghouse at the event. Joe explained that he wanted to speak at the meeting, but had only the recent notes from Carroll Hall as evidence of sexist attitudes on campus. Feeling that he needed something more substantial, he took a copy of the Daaghogue down from the wall of the Women's Resource Center, where it had been hanging since the center opened. According to Joe, he never said that he obtained the newsletter directly from Alumni or referred to them as hall government notes. Both of these statements were reported in The Observer as facts. After con- tacting Aleman, she stressed that she was merely reporting on the forum and "felt no responsibility" to obtain a statement from anyone in Alumni or Carroll.

Since last Thursday two letters to the editor, one inside Column, and an editorial have been devoted to this issue. In addition, we have received numerous phone calls from anony- mous women demanding dorm apologies and punishment to the author of the Daaghogue. Had Aleman done a thorough job of reporting her story, she could have written her article using the Daaghogue as an example, but adding a footnote to explaining the issue had been dealt with when it occurred. We in Alumni Hall do not wish to perpetuate any sexist thoughts or ideas. We respect all women and, as a dorm, are against comments like those printed in the March 4, 1993 edition of the Daaghogue. As representatives of Alumni Hall, we offer an apology for those former residents who exercised bad judgment. At the same time, the current women's residents do not feel that we should bear responsibility for what was writ- ten many years ago.

GREG BORKOWSKI
JAMES DELANEY
Alumni Hall Co-Presidents

GODWINSBURY

RESPECT: A KEY ELEMENT IN CHARACTER THAT GOVERNMENT failure to respect the rule of law, right, due

GARY TRAVERDUCE

QUOTE OF THE DAY

"You can't hold a man down without staying down with him."

-Joche T. Washington
Crunch: Thick guitars with heavy rhythms

By ROB ADAMS
Marin Cottle

With all of the genres developing in today's music and all of the radio formats struggling helplessly to understand them, we can come up with some new names for sub-genres. Perhaps we'll be able to understand them all, it almost seems impossible that any new styles can surface. That is probably true for now, but in the meantime, at least we can come up with some new names for sub-genres.

Hence, welcome "Crunch." to the scene. Crunch is a personal label for bands who play guitar with their arms rather than their fingers, slam at the drums as if controlled by beasts, and create a sound so thick that it would be difficult to process conditioned movements if loud enough.

Big Chief is a band from the Motor City who definitely subscribe to the crunch description. With a mix of funky rhythms with guitar that is absolutely smar ting, they anchor a myriad of different musical formats on their new album, Platinum.

A cyclical attack of the guitar brutally hijacks the forefront of the song, "Bona Fide." With a bass support smooth as syrup and a barrage of vocals, the song seems to be telling him "rock on" at the end of each line. "So I stay funky/I keep on/It's been around too long years just to prove it," he raps on a call to dismiss all those who are fakin' the funk. Only a few tracks later, however, Big Chief explodes into the hard-core workout, "Locked Out." A distorted guitar leads into a spurring bass which triggers the song. Vocals take a definite back seat in this one, experimental guitar posturing reigns supreme. Locked Out could pass for a punk song if it were stripped down.

Philadelphia-born Richie Kotzen is another artist who would fall into the fictional category of crunch. His raspy vocals, retro ideals, and self-proclaimed "free attitude" added to his thick, gooy guitar playing make him a prime candidate for "Crunch Artist of the Year." An easy way to sum up Kotzen's new album, Mother of All Reunion, is to say that he was probably listening to his first person in line for Lenny Kravitz/Blind Melton tickets in Fall 1993.

Nowhere is this more evident than on his cover of "Reach Out/1'll Be There," a spirited seven-minute exploration of the 1966 hit. Tambourines provide excitement the drums and occasionally guitars and bass join in.

Kotzen's vocals are marvellous and he receives fabulous background help from Timothy B. Schmit. After he gives the song a "once-around," a superb guitar solo comes in to carry the song into the stratosphere, with Kotzen humming dramatically to give support at a couple of spots.

"Socialite" begins the album with a bang; it is fast and furious while Kotzen's vocal delivery is not too far behind. "I don't want your conversation, I don't want your version before I'd see me that way/Cause I got heart and soul from mamma and daddy gave me pride/Truth I cannot hide, Kotzen raps as he blasts into the chorus.

On "Used" Kotzen truly shows his vocal strength as he provides his own background vocals. A slightly laid-back groove is set on this song as Kotzen complains of being a "rookie." Hiatus Anon on drums provides a few fully unpredictable transitions.

Let's hope that crunch is here to stay because its heavy rhythms are too surely missed elsewhere.

Rectors monitor card games and campus streakers

By PATTI CARSON
Same Mary's Accent Editor

Can you imagine living in a dorm on campus after you graduate and while you are working? Some people do. These people are the residence hall directors and the rectors of the dorms on both campuses.

Shea Powell, a second-year residence director of McCandless Hall, says that she is no longer a "rookie." Powell, like Saint Mary's students, washes her clothes in the laundry room and she also eats in the dining halls sometimes.

"I love my apartment in McCandless," she said. "It has a living room, a full kitchen, a bedroom, and a bathroom." Her apartment is like her house, but she must respect the same policies as the students.

As far as the job description goes, Saint Mary's residence hall directors most likely function as the Rector of the dorm (RA) staff, advise hall council, and participate in judicial board hearings. Furthermore, they must act as counselors and programmers, according to Carman graduate Powell.

"The job of residence hall directors tends to have a high burnout rate since directors must live on campus," Powell said. Plus, directors, are human. They have personal lives which make it challenging to live on campus.

Rachel Tenyer, Holy Cross Hall Resident Director, is in the process of planning her November wedding. After the wedding, her husband will be living with her in the Holy Cross Hall apartment. "Actually, I'm very lucky because I have the biggest apartment of the four directors on campus," she said. And before she moved here for the first time this summer, her apartment was newly carpeted and wallpapered.

Tenyer received both her undergraduate and masters degree at Valparaiso University. She said that she keeps her very busy since Holy Cross Hall Resident Directors have "a lot of free time on their hands."

"The dorm residents are definitely living up to and beyond expectations," Tenyer said. The Hall Council and the students have already organized a lot of hall events to show their appreciation, she said.

"One of the most challenging aspects of the job is getting to know the students and the resident advisors," Tenyer said. Tenyer learns names by making rounds with the RA's.

According to both Tenyer and Powell, the year is off to a productive start. Powell looks forward to more exciting moments in the remainder of this year as she recalls her favorite memory from the previous year: "Last year, right before Christmas break, I had a slum-
Hamelin takes rookie honors
By Ben Walker
Associated Press

NEW YORK
Bob Hamelin, who inherited Kansas City's designated hitting job when the regular outfielders were sent to the minors last season, was one of the league's best sluggers, was an All-Star winner Wednesday as AL rookie of the year.

Hamelin was the first DH to win the rookie award, and the first Royals player to earn such a honor since Lou Pinella in 1969. The honor, now named the Jackie Robinson Award, was first presented in 1947.

Hamelin hit 24 home runs, drove in 65 runs and batted .282. He led AL rookies in homers, RBIs (64), runs (88), doubles (23), walks (56) and games (101) when the players' strike started Aug. 12.

Hamelin, who also played 24 games at first base, received 25 of 26 first-place votes in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. He also got three second-place votes and finished with 17 Cleveland outfielder Manny Ramirez, who hit 269 with 17 home runs, 39 doubles and 91 RBIs last season.

Ramirez, who was runner-up with 44 points. Texas outfielder Rusty Greer, who hit .274 with 17 home runs in 1993, also made a diving catch that finished off Kenny Rogers' perfect game, got the other three first-place votes and was third in the voting.

The NL rookie award was announced Thursday.

Hamelin, 26, broke Bo Jackson's rookie record of 21 home runs set in 1982. Hamelin's biggest homer was a two-out, three-run shot in the bottom of the 12th inning off Chicago reliever Roberto Hernandez on July 25 for a 6-4 victory that kept alive Kansas City's eventual 14-game winning streak. Helped by the string, the Royals closed within four games of the AL Central-leading White Sox when the strike started.

Hamelin also became a fan favorite in Kansas City after being named the Northwest League's MVP, earning the nickname "The Hammer." After the All-Star break, many fans showed up at the park waving hammers when he came to the plate.

Overall, Hamelin ranked ninth in the AL in home runs, RBIs (95) and home run ratio, connecting once every 13.8 at-bats.

Hamelin showed power from his first year in pro ball, leading the Northwest League with 17 home runs for Eugene after being picked by the Royals in the second round of the June draft. Hamelin sustained several back injuries in his last few seasons before going through an injury-free 1993, when he hit 29 home runs for Triple-A Omaha.

New mediators help resolve contract talks
By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

WASHINGTON
Baseball players and owners finally negotiated a labor deal today, this time with new mediators Leon Panetta and C. Whelan Smith. It was clear the sides didn't have much to talk about.

"Let's see how Mr. Usery takes control and how this move alongs," Colorado Rockies owner Charlie Monfort said before the meeting began. "I look for owners to be very involved."

Thirty-one people sat around a square-shaped table at the Washington hotel as talks resumed after a 40-day break. At the table were 13 management representatives and 14 from the union, including players Carlos Baerga, Tony Gwynn, Jr., David Cone, Tom Glavine, Scott Sanderson and Terry Steinbach.

At the head of the table were players' representatives, with the owners' representatives seated at the sides. The meeting was only the fourth since the union struck Aug. 12.

Eleven members of management, including commissioner Bud Selig, have been considered the top mediator in the talks. He wasn't talking about his progress or what the talks were doing, though, or how long the meeting would last.

"I don't know," he said. "I'll talk after the meeting."

The sides met last Sept. 19. Five days before owners canceled the World Series for the first time in 90 years and acting commissioner Bud Selig attended that meeting but not today's.

The Observes accepts classifieds every business day from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the North Dane Student Center, 204 Lafayette St. in Milwaukee. On Mondays and Thursdays from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. in the Student Union Center. Deadline is for daily ads is 3 a.m. The Observes is not responsible for errors, omissions or the return of material.

WANTED

JUGGER needed for PMC Christmas Midwtn Dinner. To participate in PMC's annual Christmas Midwtn Dinner, we need a JUGGER. Please call Mike at 1-942-4070.

LONDON PROGRAMS

APPLICATIONS DUE

5:00 PM

Tues., Aug. 21

Happy Birthday! You Ugly Bats! Love, Mama and the Pretty Babies

Auker Elliot and Friends and Percival & Friends Frequent flyer ticket winner for tonight at 7:30 to more into call 662-5540.

NEED RIDE TO AND FROM NEW ORLEANS OVER FALL BREAK

WILL PAY UP TO $100 TO GET HOME SAFELY!!!

Quali Copy, Quarkit

The 60th COPY SHOP 100 Lafayette Student Center Building

"The Inexperience of Bessons"

Inka Jidi

TOP TEN THINGS TO BUY USA FOR HER BIRTHDAY

8. An SM basketball jersey
7. A final exam arrangement
6. Turtles
5. Air of parking of Regina Hall
4. "Gnarly Dick" T-shirt
3. Advisory to the "Scrooge" Club
2. A 4th of July "Kiss Me" bumper sticker
1. A 4th of July "Kiss Me" bumper sticker during your next for your country.

Female Guest Students

1. More no more

Oak Hill 6:000. 273-4513

Looking for DRIDERS to share $ for drive to Durham, NC area for Oct Ball. Write John DF at 205-243-3000.

Old timers group. Please call 205-243-3000.

"The Inexperience of Bessons"

Inka Jidi

PERSONAL

THE COPY SHOP: In Lafayette Student Center new accept VISA, MC and AMEX cards for your convenience.

Girls Female Student

1. More no more

Oak Hill 6:000. 273-4513

Looking for RIDERS to share $ for drive to Durham, NC area for Oct Ball. Write John DF at 205-243-3000.

Old timers group. Please call 205-243-3000.

"The Inexperience of Bessons"
Thursday, October 20, 1994

BASKETBALL

Ex-Buckeye Jackson defends Ayers, OSU

By RUSTY MILLER

Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio

Jim Jackson returned to St. John Arena Wednesday carrying the promise of a young NBA team along with memories of a glorious period in Ohio State basketball.

Jackson, who led Ohio State to two Big Ten titles before leaving after the 1991-92 season, was wearing the uniform of the Dallas Mavericks on his latest visit to the arena he filled for three years.

"It feels good, even though I’ve been here all summer," the 6-foot-6 third-year guard said before an exhibition game in Columbus against the Cleveland Cavaliers. "It’s a different atmosphere, sort of like playing here again even though I’m wearing a different uniform."

A large crowd cheered Jackson and gave him a standing ovation when the starting lineups were announced.

Prior to the game, it was announced that Jackson was giving Ohio State a $1 million gift to be divided between the athletic department and the school’s black cultural center.

Jackson’s hometown was invited up memories for Buckeye fans. He departed after his junior year for a six-year, $20 million contract with the Mavericks.

Since then, the Ohio State program has been reduced to ash. Records of 15-14 and 13-16 came the next two years. Ohio State was put on one year of NCAA probation this spring because of recruiting violations.

In addition, an ugly string of assaults and gunplay resulted in three players being kicked off the team. Two others have transferred, gutting the walk-ons from an open tryout of students.

Like a celebrity campaigning for a candidate in an election year, Jackson defended Ayers and said his ex-coach had little to do with the Buckeyes’ demise.

"Coach Ayers is such a close friend of mine, going back to my high school days and through college. I hate to see the things that not only hurt him, but the program is — going through some unfortunate circumstances," Jackson said. "He’s the head guy, and he’s the head man.

Jackson admitted these are difficult days to be the most prominent alumnus of Ohio State basketball.

He also told The Times that the league would need at least a 40-or 50-game schedule in order to have a legitimate season leading to the Stanley Cup. In order to play a 50-game schedule, the NHL would have to start by mid-December.

A 40-game schedule would mean starting around Jan. 1.

Since the International Ice Hockey Federation (IIHF) reversed its ban on NHL players competing in Europe, several players have found work overseas.

They include Jari Kurri of the Los Angeles Kings, Teemu Selanne of the Winnipeg Jets, Esa Tikkanen of the St. Louis Blues and Christian Ruuttu of the Chicago Blackhawks, who are all playing in the Finnish League. Toronto’s Mats Sundin has also gone back to Sweden to sign.

Thursday night, Kurri and Selanne will be in the lineup against the Flyers, and Finnish hockey operations was in Dallas to talk about the labor dispute, which continued to be at a standstill Wednesday.

The lockout reached its 19th day, bringing to 105 the total of games postponed so far. The NHL hasn’t officially canceled any games, but NHL spokesman Arthur Pincus said Wednesday the league had to be prepared to run out on NHL’s hopes of salvaging the 84-game schedule.

NHL commissioner Gary Bettman said that no matter how many games are lost, they will not be made up past June. In an interview in Washington, Bettman said many of the league’s older buildings couldn’t produce adequate ice surfaces during the summer.

TheTimes

HOCKEY

Striking NHL players flee

By KEN RAPPOPORT

Associated Press

The only movement in the NHL labor situation these days seems to be players moving to Europe and Brian Burke moving around North America.

Boston Bruins forward Josef Stumpel was the latest to find a job in Europe, returning to his old club in Germany, the Cologne Sharks. Stumpel will play Friday in the Sharks’ next league game, Cologne spokesman Miro Sykora said Wednesday.

Stumpel’s move was more than could be said of the stale­mated NHL labor situation, which continued to be at a standstill Wednesday.

The lockout reached its 19th day, bringing to 105 the total of games postponed so far. The NHL hasn’t officially canceled any games, but NHL spokesman Arthur Pincus said Wednesday, "We have not been able to make an announcement soon" on a policy regarding ticket refunds.

Time appears to be running out on the NHL’s hopes of salvaging their 84-game schedule. NHL commissioner Gary Bettman said that no matter how many games are lost, they will not be made up past June. In an interview in Washington, Bettman said many of the league’s older buildings couldn’t produce adequate ice surfaces during the summer.

TheTimes

Sophomore Literary Festival

Student Reading!!!

Take this opportunity to read on the very stage where Allen Ginsberg, Margaret Atwood, Kurt Vonnegut, and Tennessee Williams have all once read!

* Sophomore Literary Festival is inviting students to submit work (poetry and prose) for its 1st Annual Student Reading, to be held February 14, 1995.

* All submitting writers are required to attend an oral audition on Thursday, New. 10. Writers must read a short (5-10 minute) selection and submit a written copy of that selection to the judges as well.

* Time and place of audition will be announced after break, so be attentive to future ads and signs! (For more info, call Kate at 48283.)

BASEBALL

Oates takes Rangers’ post

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas

Former Baltimore manager Johnny Oates was hired Thursday to manage the Texas Rangers, replacing Kevin Kennedy, who was fired by new general manager Doug Melvin last week and then beat out Oates for the Boston Red Sox manager’s job.

Melvin and Oates worked together in the Orioles organization.

"It’s a wonderful opportunity for my family and myself," Oates said. "I can’t wait to get started."

Northwestern College of Chiropractic is now accepting applications for its new on-campus degree program. Call (219)277-1291.

FLOWER DELIVERY 7 DAYS A WEEK

Posy Patch

Super Saver Prices on Roses
Balloon Bouquets & Stuffing, Plants, Fresh Flowers, Plush Animals, Gift Baskets

Clocktower Square
51400 31 North
South Bend, IN 46637

(219)277-1291

Happy 21st Birthday Scottie

You finally made it!

Love,
Mom&Dad
Kristen, Kevin & Bernadette
I

I

I

I

I

I

I

I

Around mid-terms and finals we feel it, as we tend to become God and life are only experienced now, not in the past or future. because it robs us of our most precious gift: now, this moment.

If stress were a cardinal virtue, most of us would already be saints. Take a posture that is comfortable and restful. Close your eyes. Be aware of certain sensations in your body that you are feeling at this present moment, but of which you are not explicitly aware. Be aware of the touch of your clothes on your shoulders. Become aware of the touch of your clothes on your back, or your back touching your chair. Be aware of the feel of your hands as they touch each other or rest on your lap. Now become conscious of your thighs or buttocks pressing against your chair. Now become explicitly aware of your sitting posture. Do it over and over, only

SPRINGS

Thursday, October 20, 1994

Associated Press

ATLANTA

A death threat against the wife of Kentucky football coach Bill Curry is only one indication of society's negative attitude toward college sports, other football coaches' wives said. In interviews published in Wednesday's editions of The Atlanta Journal-Constitution, wives of coaches across the Southeast said they are disgusted with reactions toward their husbands, especially on talk shows.

"The callers on radio talk shows bother me," Carolyn Curry said. "They're not accountable to anyone in what they say."

The Monday after Kentucky was beaten 41-14 by Auburn for its fourth straight loss, secretaries in the school's football office found the death threat notes left in their answering machines. Some wives said they no longer sit in the stands because of negative comments they have heard about their husbands.

"Clemson was a hard place for me," said Sandy Hatfield, wife of Ken Hatfield, a former Clemson coach and now coach at Rice. "It was difficult for me to hear bad things they said about Ken. They were unjustified, negative, ugly, personal, vicious remarks. One time, I turned around to a guy and said, 'You happen to be talking about the man I love.'"

Curry also said she no longer feels comfortable in the stands.

"I haven't sat in the stands since we left Georgia Tech (in 1986)," she said. "I sit in a box at home and I sit in the athletic director's box on the road. I didn't let the children sit out­side either (when they were young)."

Stephanie Goff, wife of Georgia coach Ray Goff, said she still sits in the stands, but in a section with Georgia staffers.

"I hear hard stuff sometimes when I go down to see Ray (on a game)," she said. "It's hard to hear but it comes with the territory."

Such comments, she said, are "a sad commentary on our so­ciety. ... People out there who get so wrapped up in football don't seem to realize that coaches and their wives are people, too."
UNLV seeks cheaper coach after buyout

By TIM DAHLBERG
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS
UNLV bid a $1.8 million farewell to Rollie Massimino on Wednesday, then set about trying to find a new basketball coach who could come to work quickly and for a lot less money.

With Massimino formally gone, UNLV officials turned with a new sense of urgency toward hiring either Seattle SuperSonics president Kenny Guinn he secret contract given by the National Basketball Association for an interim coach to work until a permanent coach is found.

"We have been talking to other people," he said. "The basketball season has begun. There isn't a lot of people available. But we will find someone to put on the court."

Whoever it is will find himself coaching at a salary far less than the nearly $900,000 annual pact Massimino enjoyed.

Massimino formally became the ex-coach of the Runnin' Rebels on Wednesday when the University of Nevada Board of Regents approved a buyout that will cost the university $375,000 for a year five years.

Massimino agreed to the buyout last Friday, after first proposing that the university pay him $5.6 million to leave.

"It is not an easy dollar amount to swallow," Guinn said. "We should not lose any body like that."

The coach 0-5 against Colorado. He is 1-5 against Texas and 1-4 against Nebraska, making him a combined 2-14-1 in three of the biggest games on the schedule.

During his first four years on the job, Gibbs could bring up NCAA sanctions when critics howled, but he inherited a team that had been placed on three years' probation and was trying to earn the right to correct the situation and repair the damage.

The Texas game stung Oklahoma for several reasons including money paid to_corrrect the situation and return the fans for several games.

"We're doing everything we can to get the program back on track," he said. "I think we should pay a coach $1 million, $800,000 or even $500,000."

Grgurich reportedly had agreed in principle to take the job, but Guinn said there were personal differences between Grgurich and Weaver that had to be worked out.

The University of Notre Dame is pleased to announce the appointment of Professor John Borkowski as University Ombudsperson for Discriminatory Harassment.

If you are a victim of discriminatory harassment and do not know where to turn, call the University Ombudsperson for Discriminatory Harassment at 631-3909.

By GREG SMITH
Associated Press

IOWA CITY, Iowa
Ahh, remember the good old days when you could enjoy an occasional dead chicken? At the University of Iowa, they do.

It looks like the fun is over, though.

Security has been stepped up at Kinnick Stadium during football games, and the cheerleaders have been moved away from the student section because of debris raining down from the stands. And it's not just dead chickens, either. It's also marshmallows, bottles and eggs.

In this case, however, we know which came first. It was the chicken.

"Back in the old Fieldhouse they used to use a starter's gun at basketball games and you'd have this real loud "Bang!" called George Wine, Iowa's sports information director reminisces.

"Every once in a while some smart-aleck student would bring a chicken and throw it at the upper deck. Then that baby just right, you know, about two seconds before the game," he said. "It would land right on the floor."

That was a pretty funny deal back then."

Iowa hasn't played in the Big 12 since last year, but someone has carried the chicken tradition at least once to the football stadium.

No serious injuries have been reported, but Michele Anderson, Iowa's student coordinator, was grazed by a broken eggshell.

"It stands funny, but it's not," she said.

She has decided to move her cheerleaders away from their customary northwest corner of the stadium — away from fowl territory, so to speak.

The school's Public Safety Department, worried that cheerleaders would be hurt by something in mid-stunt and get seriously hurt, increased security during Iowa's homecoming game Oct. 8 to deter the bad eggs from throwing objects.
Grace

continued from page 16

score at 20-0.

"The team was playing well," Captain Pat Cooke said.

"Defensively they got the shutout they were going after and offensively we moved the ball pretty well. We sputtered a couple of times, but that's what we wanted to do in terms of passing the ball. We're fortunate to be blessed with some great athletes. It's a real pleasure to coach these guys, and to be a part of the team."

The Big Red had tough luck. Tailback Pete Meyer played a solid game and was a thorn in Grace's paw, but after Grace jumped to a quick lead, the Big Red found themselves playing catch-up, which nullified the effective Meyer.

Dillon tried to catch up by throwing more. Although quarterback Stefan Molina was able to complete some short passes, a Big Red defender was always there to make the tackle leaving the Big Red with a negligible point total.

Dillon's biggest play came in the fourth quarter when Molina connected with fleet receiver Kenny Elzy for thirty yards, putting the ball on the Grace 30. However, the Big Red promptly fumbled, giving Grace the ball back. Dillon finishes the season at 0-4.

Grace's 2-2 record leaves them tied with Flanner for the fourth annual playoff spot in the Blue Division. However, their head-to-head loss to Flanner in week two of the season leaves them out of the playoffs.

Grace improved last year's winless season to a 300 record this year. That's something Cooke can't help being pleased with.

"I'm certainly happy with our performance. There were a number of people who were part of this year's team who suffered through last year's 0-4 season, and I think it was good so far as they brought that perspective of what it was like to lose week in and week out. And they sort of made up their mind midway through the season that it was going to be a different type of season for them."

It was definitely a different type of game against Dillon.

"It was the first time we put it together on both sides of the ball. Offensively we scored the most we did in any game this year. Defensively, it was the first shutout we were able to collect. It was a great effort on both sides of the ball. It was nice to finally live up to the potential of our team."

Offensively, the Crime ran rampant, totaling over one hundred yards on the ground. They were led by tailback Mike Thompson, Detorte, and Chris Monahan. However, the offense still stalled frequently.

"We moved the ball well today," Detorte said. "We just beat ourselves. It'll come. We're doing what we want to, we're just beating ourselves. They're not stopping us. We're stopping ourselves."

The Crime offense has failed to reach full-strike, in large part because Off-Campus has a difficult time scheduling practices. That just makes the role of the defense all the more important according to Downey.

"Defensively, we almost expect a big play like that each week. You can't expect an offense to work on all eleven cylinders if you don't practice. Defensively, we try to look for a big play like that."

The Crime sealed the victory in the fourth quarter when Thompson intercepted a Scott Lupo pass, and returned it to the Flanner 17-yard line.

Five plays later quarterback Chris Hummond snuck in from the one, giving Off-Campus a 14-0 lead. But Flanner isn't hanging their heads.

"It was a tough game," Downey said. "They're a tough team. I'm sure they'll go far in the playoffs. They've got some speed and some hard hitters. They're not afraid to hit you. With the exception of that big play, it was a close game. You take away the big play, and it's 6-0."

Flanner finishes the season a 2-2, tied with Grace for the fourth and final playoff slot in the Blue Division. However, they will enter the playoffs on the basis of their head-to-head victory over Grace in the second week of the season.

Quarterback Scott Lupo was effective, but Off-Campus dominated the line of scrimmage and shut down the Flanner ground game.

"We just dominated the line," Detorte said. "We're a strong football team. We've got a lot of big boys. We're solid. People have to be afraid of running the ball against us."

Flanner only made it across midfield twice. The first time was aided when The Crime was sentenced to a cumulative 45 yards in penalties.

The lack of practices isn't a great concern to Detorte when it comes to the playoffs.

"We don't have organized practices as much as we like to. We have lots of guys that know football. A lot of times when you come from a dorm, you have a lot of guys that don't play football. The people that make the time commitment to come out to games are all good football players. We all know how to do it, it's just a matter of getting together. We're going to have a few practices before our next game."

"I think we need to take one game at a time," Downey said.

"It'd be nice to get a good organized practice in before we have a playoff game. It's do or die in the playoffs. We can't afford to get complacent and come out there careless. One loss and it's over."

If you see sports happening, call The Observer at 631-5453.

We deliver. IN

At Kinko's, we'll pick up your originals and DELIVER finished projects to your office.

Our Dame's fall sports teams have DELIVERED an overall 44-14-2 record and three national rankings.

TAKE A STUDY BREAK!

graduates & undergraduates

UNITED

In honor of National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week all graduate and undergraduate students are invited to

DANCE

Thursday, October 20th
9 PM til Midnight
LaFortune Ballroom

Snacks, Beverages (moochails - virgin margaritas & daiquiris), D.J.

Sponsored by:
Graduate Student Union, Undergraduate Student Government, Notre Dame Office of Alcohol and Drug Education, Flipside, S.A.D.D.

Kinko's

cross the center

2202 C South Bend Ave.
Greenwood Plaza
271-9398

109 E. Jefferson
Jefferson Centre
234-8709

LAST CALL FOR THE
KINKO'S

We deliver. IN

Kinko's

cross the center

If you have not yet turned in the coupon for a free Champion t-shirt on the first page of your student season ticket booklet, you can do so at The Varsity Shop on the second floor of the Joyce Student Center. The Varsity Shop's hours are Monday through Saturday, 11:30 a.m.-5:30 p.m., and Sunday, 12:00 p.m.-5:00 p.m.
FOUR FOOD GROUPS OF THE APOCALYPSE

DAVE KELLETT
THE FAR SIDE

I THOUGHT I HEARD ANYTHING.
I DON'T HEAR ANYTHING.

AND I CAN TELECOMMUTE.
IF I WANT, BUT SINCE
DRESS CODES DON'T APPLY
TO ME.

I THOUGHT YOU SAID SOMETHING OUTSIDE.

IT WAS KIND OF A TRUMP!
WAS I LOOKING.
AND MAKE SURE IT'S NOT ANYTHING SCARY!

WILL ACTUALLY, IT WAS LIKE A LITTLE BEER IN A SMALL GLASS, A LITTLE BIT.

SCOTT ADAMS

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1 Snacks in Santa Rosalia
6 Upright
14 Aligned
16 Elephantine
17 Banner blackie
18 Globe rattener.
19 in a way
20 Interest rate.
21 Negotiates a puddle
22 Khan
23 Superman’s mother
24 Lake resort
25 Galway Bay
26 Galway Bay
27 Accommodate
29 ---openers
31 Mugged a snoozer
33 Husky runners
35 Gouda’s cousin
37 Berlin one
38 ---openers
39 ---openers
41 Sarge, for one
42---Khan
43 Aunts and others
44 Most Scroogelike
45 Fair constructions
46 Buff
47 --la-la
48 Reuniongoer
49 Harry Golden’s “--in America”
50 Watered silk
51 Tackles’ neighbors
52---rug
53 Altiplano tuber

DOWN
1 Charteris detective
2 Simon---
3 Alligator pear
4 Old telephone exchange
5 Stop --- dime
6 Steady---Steady
7 Kind of town
8 Think alike
9 Resins
10 Actress Zadora
11 Least of the Great Lakes
12 Rallying cries
13 Not an easy boss
14 — applied
15 Blockhead
16 More than enough
17 Rainier locale
18 Globe flattener, in a way
19 Interest rate
20 Negotiates a puddle
21 Hyperactive Brat
22 Khan
23 Superman’s mother
24 Lake resort
25 Galway Bay
26 Galway Bay
27 Accommodate
29 ---openers
31 Mugged a snoozer
33 Husky runners
35 Gouda’s cousin
37 Berlin one
38 ---openers
39 ---openers
41 Sarge, for one
42---Khan
43 Aunts and others
44 Most Scroogelike
45 Fair constructions
46 Buff
47 --la-la
48 Reuniongoer
49 Harry Golden’s “--in America”
50 Watered silk
51 Tackles’ neighbors
52---rug
53 Altiplano tuber

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

CHARLIE INCA CODE
1222 fetal
1334 heart
1444 acorn
1555 home
1666 hands
1777 some bad omen
1888 blind eye
1999 evil
2000 cacao

THOUSANDS OF LANDS
SOME BAD OME
1222 fetal
1334 heart
1444 acorn
1555 home
1666 hands
1777 some bad omen
1888 blind eye
1999 evil
2000 cacao

UP AND COMING EVENTS

Brought to you by your friends at the Student Union Board:

SEINFEST ’94!!

Does the next Seinfeld go to Notre Dame?! Come find out at the first annual student comedy club. SEINFEST ’94: Coming November 3rd.

OLIVER STONE

Critically acclaimed film writer, director, producer is going to stop by Notre Dame November 9th. Be there!
Off-Campus, Grace wins close season

Crime defense stops Flanner

BY NEIL ZENDER
Sports Writer

They're big. They're bad. They're mean. And they wear black.

The Off-Campus Crime is Interhall's version of the Oakland Raiders. All they're missing is Al Davis. They're a crew of outcast misfits from "established" dormitories playing together to stick it to the rest of the league.

They just may do it. Just ask play-off-bound Planner, who took a 14-0 beating last night.

John Madden would have been proud of the way the 3-1 Crime beat Planner. It wasn't via a high-octane offense. It was because of rough, tough defender Jamey Downey and his defensive teammates.

In a scoreless first quarter game, Downey scooped up a Planner fumble and chugged halfway across the field into the end zone like a runaway steam engine.

"I just saw the ball, and it hopped up," Downey said. "I was on an outside stunt, and the ball was there, and I grabbed it. All I saw was end zone, so I started running with it."

Downey is part of a Crime defense that prefers to take a bite out of opposing offenses, yielding only six points in all of 1994. That statistic misconveys just how efficient the Crime's defense is.

"The only points we gave up this year were on a fluke center to quarterback exchange," Captain Dave Dettore said. "It wasn't as if they even caused a fumble. We fumbled the ball on our seven yard line, and one team scored. And the extra...

---

Grace QB stars in 20-0 shut-out

The next thing you know, Grace Hall's Mike Perez and Mike Dwyer might be featured on one of the NFL's corny "Teamwork," commercials. The quarterback-wide receiver combo passed right by Dillon's Big Red in a 20-0 Grace victory.

Before this season, Grace had not won a game in three years. They finish the 1994 Interhall season at .500.

But the big win over Dillon came on the shoulders of Perez and Dwyer. The dynamic duo connected on two touchdowns.

"I just have a lot of confidence he'll go up and get the ball wherever I throw it," said Perez, who eclipsed the 200-yard mark.

With the game scoreless in the first at their own forty, Perez hit Dwyer fifteen yards downfield on a curl pattern. The wily receiver then proceeded to cut, slash, and burn his way into the end zone. After the conversion, it was an 8-0 Grace lead.

Perez and Dwyer were at it again in the second quarter. Twice they connected on passes that were out of bounds in the back of the end zone. The third time was a charm, as they connected on an 8-yard slant, running the lead to 14-0.

"He puts it in a spot where I can get it every time," Dwyer said.

During their hottest stretch, Perez was 7 for 10, passing for 121 yards and a touchdown. Five of those passes for 99 yards went to Dwyer.

In the fourth, Grace added an insurance touchdown to leave the grace/interhall page 14

---

INTERHALL SOCCER

Michael Wigton scored the only goal in Zahm's 1-0 win over Morrissey to claim the men's soccer interhall crown.

---

INTERHALL PLAYOFF QUALIFIERS

Men:
Carruth, Fisher
Zahm, Alumni
Stanford, Keenan
Flanner, Off-Campus

Women:
P.E., Lyons
Pangborn, Lewis
Off-Campus, Walsh
B.P., Siegfried

---

Run, Pass, Tackle

Despite a 20-0 shut-out of Dillon last night, Grace's playoff hopes were dashed in a tie breaker with Flanner, since the 'Cocks had beaten them in head-to-head competition earlier this season.

Observer photos by Michael Hopfner and Brandon Carlino

---

of note...

Kansas City's Bob Hamelin was named the American League Rookie of the Year.