Rosenthal among those to enter South Bend shrine

By BRAD PRENDERGAST News Editor

Richard Rosenthal, athletic director at the University, was one of three Notre Dame alumni inducted into the South Bend Hall of Fame on Sunday.

A also included during the ceremony held at the Century Center downtown South Bend were Robert Grant, class of 1928, and Lello Troyer, class of 1971.

"I was very pleased when I learned I would be inducted," Rosenthal said. "It's a tremendous honor to be recognized in your own community.

Rosenthal, a 1954 graduate with a bachelor's degree in finance and a two-time basketball All-American, played professional basketball for two seasons with the Fort Wayne (Ind.) Pistons before beginning a career in banking. After serving as chairman of the board and chief executive officer of U.S. Joseph Bank and Trust Co. - now Society Bank -

Rosenthal became athletic director at Notre Dame in 1987. According to Ron Bolla, executive director of the South Bend Alumni Association, which runs the hall, candidates for induction must have made significant contributions to the South Bend community.

"We select people based on what they have done for their fellow man," Bolla said. "Rosenthal, said Bolla, certainly qualifies.

Active ly involved in Project Future, an organization designed to attract businesses to the South Bend area, and in Special Olympics, Rosenthal also helped develop the Century Center and has worked extensively with the Chamber of Commerce.

"Project Future pulls all the energy from the institutions in the economic community to bring in companies and create jobs," he said. "So far, we've been able to create thousands of jobs."

According to Roland Kelly, vice-chairman of the South Bend Alumni Association, Rosenthal has been very instrumental in the city.

"He is a very good guy," Kelly said. "He is more than just a guy"

Troyer, an architect, had a different reaction than Rosenthal when he learned he had been inducted.

"I was surprised," he said. "My wife thought that I had been inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame located in South Bend and designed by Troyer when she first heard.

Besides designing the football hall of fame, the 1971 graduate in architecture has also been an international leader in Habitat for Humanity, working with former President Jimmy Carter in the Jimmy Carter Work Project as well.

Troyer's interest in helping others build homes stems from an experience he had when he was younger.

"As a student, I was invited to a United Nations international conference on housing in New York," he said. "I try continues by adding, "at the final meetings, I became quite aware of the magnitude of the housing problem in the world. I learned that one quarter of the world is not adequately sheltered."

Troyer noted that the dorm rooms of students on campus may appear small, but in poor countries, many homes are only 16'x16'.

"These homes often shelter families of six or seven," he said. "Grant, a federal magistrate for the past 37 years, earned his bachelor's and law degrees from Notre Dame in 1928 and 1930.

According to Kelly, the robing chamber of the Notre Dame Law School's moot courtroom was named in honor of Grant, who served years as the federal building in South Bend was named for him.

The Notre Dame Alumni Association presented its John J. Cavanaugh, C.S.C., Award to Grant this year.

The hall was begun because there was no place locally to recognize those who contributed to the community, according to Bolla.

"These people who have been involved in South Bend in the light as a community doctor," he said.

Votes for the members of the hall are located on the walls of the Century Center.

The Century Center is located in downtown South Bend at 120 South Saint Joseph Street.

Peace possible in Northern Ireland

By MIKE DAY News Writer

Although it may take a little more time, there is a serious chance of attaining peace in Northern Ireland for the first time in 25 years, according to Gerald Powers, a foreign policy advisor for the U.S. Catholic Conference.

Powers, who earned law degree at Notre Dame in 1986, gave a lecture on the current situation in Northern Ireland at the law school yesterday. In his recently published book, Zealous Making, Powers comments on the controversy that has existed between one million Protestants and the half million Catholics in Britain.

"The conflict in the area must not and will not continue," said Powers. "Maintaining the status quo would be morally unacceptable and politically inequitable." Powers has spent the last eight years working for the bishop's conference and has made numerous trips to Northern Ireland. He acknowledged that the recent cease-fires are a dramatic step in the peace movement.

The cease-fires of the IRA first and the paramilitary that followed illustrate the rethink ing that has been initiated," said Powers. "It will be a slow process since the wounds of the

Thanksgiving

It's turkey time. And you're going to love it. It means: Time to reflect on friends and family and all that other stuff that made us who we are today. We're all doing this reflecting thing for twenty some odd years, right? You have to admit that's a mighty long time. And unless you want to help mom add water to the mashed potatoes or open that can of cranberry sauce, you're going to have a lot of time on your hands this Thanksgiving to reflect. I'm suggesting that this year, why not be a bit more realistic and crazy. Skip the friends and family stuff. This ain't no fun. This is face-to-face telephone Christmas. This Thanksgiving, let it be all about you. Let's cut it loose. Let's have three helpings. Skip the vegetables completely. Pile your plate with Steve Top before it gets down to Helen. We've missed in the world now, no longer one of the little kidlet at the table. That's right, grab that drumstick before Aunt Wilma takes it over to no-man's land for other Billy.

Wow, that trip from the kitchen table. It was a tough one wasn't it? It only took 16 or 17 years, but you can count from the first three years or so or crossing through the legs of the dinne room table, you never knew you'd do it that way. That's something to be thankful for in itself.

"Arafat is a killer. Instead of shooting at Israelis, he is shooting at our sons," his father Mohammed, 58, said, tears streaming down his face. His body was lowered into a grave next to 10 of the other 13 victims.

At the PLO rally, Arafat, clearly elated by a crowd larger than the one that welcomed him on his arrival five months ago, encouraged supporters to plant a tree and come within feet of the Gaza Strip.

Before his speech, members of the Fatah Hawks, the underground armed band that had fought the Israeli occupation, circlustered in the crowd wearing marks and firing their weapons in the air.

Armed displays point from truce toward war in Gaza

GAZA CITY

PLo gunmen fired into the air and denounced Muslim extremists Monday as 10,000 people rallied in what Yasir Arafat billed as a show of support for peace with Israel. Arafat is seeking support from the broader public in his efforts to prevent bloody clashes Friday outside a Gaza City mosque between his political allies and Islamic activists opposed to negotiating with Israel.

About 200 supporters back Arafat in the Intifada R esistance Movement.

Train catches fire in Ontario, Canada

Associated Press

BRIGHTON, Ontario—Dozens of passengers were injured yesterday when a passenger train caught fire in Brighton, 85 miles south of Toronto.

"You couldn't recognize it as a train because it was all on fire," said Frank Cook, 19, who lives near the train tracks.

"It was going very fast. It kind looked, just like on TV with a lot of sparks and flame. The first-class car directly behind the engine, was sprayed with burning fuel after the train hit the piece of rail at 6:20 p.m.

Fire spread through the second, but passengers as far back as the sixth car — carrying a wheelchair basketball team — were not injured as their seats were engulfed by flames by their windows.

"We couldn't do it or not," was the first thing that shot through the mind of one of the passengers, Mohammad.

"It was the scariest thing that's ever happened to me because I could see the flames coming next to me," he said after arriving at Montreal's Central Station by bus. "The window was hot, there was a lot of smoke, it was pretty scary."

He and his teammates escaped the burning train with the help of passengers who wheeled them off.

Police of a preliminary investigation showed a yard-long section of loose rail had been placed on the track.

"Chunks of rail just don't jump on the train by themselves," said a provincial police spokesman, Staff Sgt. Ron Leclair.

Passengers described terrifying moments as cars were engulfed by flames and smoke.

"Heat was coming through the windows while we were still moving," said Bob Bonada, 57, a Toronto lawyer who was riding in the first-class car.

"When the heat, the smoke, smoke, and the heat, smoke, smoke, and the heat, smoke, smoke, and smoke, smoke, smoke, smoke..."

"Byline," the newsletter of the University of Notre Dame's Office of University Computing, has been awarded three prizes at this year's best computing news publication in the annual competition of the Special Interest Group on UNIX Systems, University and College Computing Services SIGUCS.

Joan Laffamme, documentation coordinator in the computing office, is Byline's editor and Sean Donnelly, publications and graphics coordinator in the office, is responsible for the newsletter's design and production.

Byline online publications from 34 institutions nationwide as well as a university in the Netherlands. The award continued a run of success for Notre Dame computing publications in the SIGUCS competition.

The office received first place honors for news articles over 16 pages and a second place in the category for computer curriculum catalogs in 1991 and the following year took the first place in the curriculum and training curriculum categories.

Notre Dame computing staff served as competition jurors in 1993 and were ineligible to compete.

The same forum will be true in 1995.

past 25 years are deep.\" According to Powers, the development of housing, voting rights, equal employment, and the economic growth over the period may have prevented a civil war in Northern Ireland.

However, the tension has slightly subsided in recent years.

"For the country to make the complete transformation, ways must be found to live with the difference in religion and culture," said Powers. "They must learn to respect the rights of one another and do more to stand up for the rights of other communities."

In Peace Making, Powers acknowledges that little participation in government has led to the lack of democracy in the country.

He also magnifies the importance of limiting government power. "For the first time, people in Northern Ireland are actually planning for peace."

"It will take a little longer, but there is definitely a serious chance for peace," said Powers. "For the first time, people in Northern Ireland are actually planning for peace."

Following God will lead to healing, forgiveness

"I'd just like to know how it would feel to have so many people hate him," said a friend of Mara Fox when she was featured on the 11:00 news on the anniversary of Mara's death. The girl was fighting her tears, and understandably so. I had hoped we, as a Notre Dame community, would be able precluded from interfering, and we are not necessarily those who thought that of The Observer. Viewpoint space is available to all members of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community and to all readers. The free expression of varying opinions through letters is encouraged.

will, with the grace of God, open their arms in magnanimity and pardon John for his mistakes. How disappointed I was to realize that perhaps I was the one who was wrong.

I suppose I should have realized this before the verdict came down. After all, instead of praying for John as well as Mara's family and friends, many people seemed to count down the hours until his conviction. But I remained hopeful that after the jury's deliberations ended, these people would reevaluate their vindictive attitudes and carry themselves more dignifiedly, regardless of the outcome of the trial.

However, when the jury decided to acquit, these once eager individuals either buried their heads in disappointment or spoke out in tones of condemnation. In neither instance could I discern that their reactions had anything to do with their love for Mara. A core group did not have returned her to us, and, from what I have learned about her through those who knew her, it would not have been her forefront desire to see John Rita punished. No, their disappointment apparently stemmed from unadulterated urges to obtain retribution. This was something I had hoped we, as a Christian community, could rise above.

I merit mention that, as a purely natural matter, we cannot assume that the jury's verdict resulted from its forgiveness principle, and assuming that the jury was derelict in its duties. The jury is given wide discretion which, with the outside world is largely precluded from interfering, and we are to presume that, once impaneled, jurors will rise to the task before them. This presumption is not always a valid one, and here, where the media was involved to a sizable extent one might reasonably call it into question. But if we can trust that a jury will be able to fairly deliberate in the O.J. Simpson case, which we are apparently expected to do, we must embody that trust in this case, where the media coverage was much less pervasive.

In short, we must assume, absent evidence to the contrary, that the jurors simply failed to find, beyond a reasonable doubt, that John Rita committed the offense specified in the statute under which he was charged. Considering the evidence, I for once cannot conclude that the jury was derelict in its duties. But even assuming that the jury's verdict resulted at least partially from a forgiveness principle, and assuming that this is unacceptable (a proposition I do not accept), what about the rest of us? We are not bound by the laws which govern jurors; nevertheless, we have an equally important duty to regard John Rita. Will we hate him for an irrational facet of humanity—or will we forgive him for his wrongs, as we ask God to do for each of us? When the case leaves the judicial system and enters the broader realm of humanity, there is no way to exclude personal emotions. And for me, forgiveness reigns supreme. I had hoped that others who called themselves Christians would be willing to open up at least to the possibility of forgiveness.

Although I have been disappointed thus far, I still retain this hope.

John Rita publicly expressed remorse for his wrongdoing on more than one occasion. His emotional state during the trial was clearly one of sorrow, and, upon acquittal, his reaction appeared quite the opposite of "feelings of glee and light-heartedness." And while I do not know John well, I know him well enough to avoid entertaining any serious doubt that he will carry on enormous burden in his heart all his life—a sentence which could not be matched by any punishment cognizable under law.

Forgiveness generally comes easily for me, but I do not argue that it must always be so. It can be difficult. However, we must keep our hearts open to the possibility. What the Western world thought of as punishment cognizable under law. Forgiveness generally comes easily for me, but I do not argue that it must always be so. It can be difficult. However, we must keep our hearts open to the possibility. What the Western world thought of as punishment cognizable under law. Forsen.
Dear Editor:

In response to Lisa Novak’s critique of Father Griffin, I have the following comments to make. In the article, she often repeats the anecdote which distills the Catholic position on race, and which is not applicable to our current dilemma—the difficulty in determining how we as a community understand the term “white” and its acqial. It is an analysis of the day-by-day experiences of the students in Notre Dame Hall, near the gates of Paradise where he was busy with the task of admissions, a department that is not under the oversight committee and in which he had substantial decision-making power within the gates who we are to work together in this country. A few the gates who are to think about John Rita.

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to Wendy Vestevich’s letter of Nov. 4 (“Our social mentalities spoil gender relations”). I was glad that Vestevich took the time to read and respond to The Observer article concerning the ND Speaks Out on Women forum. She seems to have been left with a rather negative impression of the event, but I believe that if she had attended the forum in addition to reading about it in The Observer, she might have had different things to say.

The Women’s Resource Center sponsored ND Speaks Out on Women last year and this year in order to give students a chance to discuss their experiences and concerns in a campus community with a place to share their thoughts and feelings about women at Notre Dame and South Bend. Many of the individuals who were invited to speak, read newspaper, and perform music, and there was an open microphone for anyone who wanted to participate at the end of the forum. The Women’s Resource Center’s role was to facilitate and stimulate discussion. Some people might want to announce this agenda for change or “thought control” at Notre Dame.

The Center seeks to promote the welfare of women at Notre Dame. This year, the Women’s Resource Center has been engaged rather than on the agenda of ideas, not a mandate, and the events it sponsored reflect this philosophy.

Gender relations are often difficult at Notre Dame, as noted by Vestevich and many others who have written about the lack of women’s support and news of them. We had read about the controversial issue of women and race, and although we are aware that it is a complex issue, we are concerned that it is not being discussed publicly.

To try to address this concern, Student Government and the Women’s Resource Center co-sponsored a panel discussion and a workshop. Would you like to participate in this? Are ND men too insensitive? It was held Tuesday, Nov. 15.

Students get a taste of graduate school

By MYRNA MALONEY
Assistant Saint Mary's Editor

If you’re a junior at Saint Mary's College and have ever wondered what it would be like to pursue a master of business administration degree following graduation, the University of Chicago Business Fellows may be a program worth considering.

Dottie White, Associate Director of Admissions at the University of Chicago Graduate School of Business, will hold an informational meeting in Harper's Parlor at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, November 29 for Saint Mary's students interested in applying for the program, according to Lisa Baumann, a participant during the summer of 1994.

Baumann, a senior economics major and Tonya Ann Sunday, also a senior and completing a math major, represented Saint Mary’s during the summer of 1994 at the University and found that the program exceeded all of their expectations.

The program, which lasts from mid June through the end of August, allows current undergraduates to take up to three graduate level courses in business at the University and awards advance MBA credit which is applicable later, should they decide to return after receiving their bachelor’s degree.

“We went through an orientation session prior to beginning the program. Later, in addition to our classes, we went on a group trip to visit various companies around Chicago such as McKinsey & Co. and Leo Burnett,” Sunday said.

The only requirements necessary for applicants, according to White, is an interest in observing what GSB would be like and consistent academic success at Saint Mary’s.

“Additional material on the program and GSB applications will be available at the meeting. Students must complete the applications and essays and turn them in to Patty Sayre, the coordinator of the selection process at Saint Mary’s,” Baumann said.

“A panel composed of Saint Mary’s professors and one alumna who also graduated from GSB will review them and choose five or six applicants to interview. This year, one representative from Saint Mary’s will be chosen to participate,” Sunday said.

That student will win up to $6,000 in tuition from the University, depending on the number of courses she takes. Students are encouraged to live in the International House on the main campus of the University, according to Baumann, because the GSB believes that time spent there fosters a sense of community.

“I thought living at the International House was a great experience because I was able to meet graduate students from other programs in addition to all the international students who lived there for the summer. We were responsible for all of our housing and living expenses,” Baumann said.

“The University discourages participants from holding jobs during the program and this is a very reputable program. I encourage any interested juniors to look into it, especially if they have only taken liberal arts classes while they’ve been at Saint Mary’s,” Baumann said.

“Additionally, many of the selection process at Saint Mary’s,” Baumann said.

Both students agree that completing the program added to their confidence and look back on it as an opportunity for growth.

“It’s such a good feeling to know that I was able to complete courses at the graduate level and that I was successful in doing so. In addition, the University of Chicago is such a wonderful business school and this is an opportunity to participate in a very reputable program. I encourage any interested juniors to look into it, especially if they have only taken liberal arts classes while they’ve been at Saint Mary’s,” Baumann said.

“The University of Chicago believes you have received, you can succeed in this program,” Sunday said.

How to Handle the Kissing Disease

By RYAN GRABOW

With finals right around the corner, and Jack Frost speeding his way towards South Bend, there is no doubt things are going to get "ugly" when we get back from Thanksgiving break! Since our resistance is extremely important to take it easy. Without doing so, you may become so exhausted and fatigued to will not have the energy to do anything but sleep. Considering how rested most of us feel normally, you should not take any chances if you are fighting Mono. In rare cases, drugs are required to reduce severe swelling if the tonsils are inflamed and obstruct breathing.

Most importantly, you cannot drink alcohol when you have Mono. Since the disease affects your liver, it can’t function normally while you are fighting the virus. Alcohol will only stress your liver even more and may cause it serious damage. In addition, drinking will dehydrate you and impair your sleep, adding to your weakened immune system.

What is the Worst that can Happen?

The real tragedy surrounding this disease is its long term effects. In many cases, unusual fatigue, depression, and sleepiness can persist for as long as a year before you feel "completely" better. In addition to this, swelling of the spleen associated with the disease will prevent you from participating in contact sports or strenuous activities until the swelling subsides. Unfortunately, this restriction may last anywhere from two months to a year. In very severe cases, permanent liver damage may also occur.

How Do We Prevent It?

Fortunately, however, most patients recover after four to six weeks of rest and fluids. It is extremely important to take it easy for a month or so to allow your body's immune system to destroy the virus, without doing so, you may become so exhausted and fatigued to will not have the energy to do anything but sleep. Considering how rested most of us feel normally, you should not take any chances if you are fighting Mono. In rare cases, drugs are required to reduce severe swelling if the tonsils are inflamed and obstruct breathing.

Alcohol will only stress your liver even more and may cause it serious damage. In addition, drinking will dehydrate you and impair your sleep, adding to your weakened immune system.

As for all viral diseases, prevention begins with hygiene. Wash your hands frequently. Do not rub your eyes or nose (especially entry points for viruses) with dirty hands. Do not kiss of share a drink with anyone having symptoms of the disease. Most importantly, get as much rest as possible, drink plenty of water, and eat three nutritious meals a day (that includes breakfast) to help your immune system strong. Good Luck and Stay Healthy.

The stars will be out tonight, and they will be shining brilliantly for the Irish.

The elite players in Women's Irish Basketball will plug out this evening to see who is the best of the best. The All-State girls are featured, and beginning at 7:30 and will feature the top players at each position from both the Blue and Gold divisions.

The Gold squad, coached by Tom Essenberg, features the top 29 players from Badin, Lyons, B.F., Walsh, Pangborn, Heath and Vanderbilt.

The eight man coaching staff will attempt to come away with the victory while playing as many as the girls as possible.

Looking for some competition? The Saint Mary's basketball team is ready to play their first game of the season tonight at Calvin College.

Head Coach Marvin Wood has put a load on his team to get them ready for Calvin, which is ranked in the top 20 in the pre-season ratings. The Belles will be playing for the first time in eight years, with six players on the team from last year returning.

Wood emphasized the different offenses and defenses the Belles have been working on to get ready for the season. Although the players have been practiced, they have not been mastered yet, according to Wood.

The team has several improved returning players this season. Sophomore Katy Lalli is scheduled to start at center, junior Lori Gaddis and sophomore Sarah Dugard at guard and junior Jeni Taubenheim at forward. Freshman junior Leemens McCull will be a new face starting at forward.

“Shes a perimeter player who will help offensively on the boards and hopefully on defense,” said Maureen O’Donnell and Brenda Hoban are two freshmen to look out for later in the season after they learn more of the teams strategies, according to Wood.

Although the Belles have been plagued by injuries in practice, sometimes only having eight out of the thirteen players. “practice has gone really well even though we’ve prepared us to play against Calvin,” said junior center Barbara Howells.

The team bonded before the season started so we all know each other which helps us to be in sync on the court,” said Gaddis.

“We are supporting each other as players.”

Irish Runners capture 14th place in NCAA tournament

Hershey bars just don’t taste as good after you’ve already dieted or Godiva chocolates.

The Notre Dame men’s cross country team entered the NCAA tradition of excellence as one of the ten teams that captured a place in the NCAA championships in Fayetteville, Arkansas yesterday. While the thought of being in the nation would have most teams absolutely ecstatic, Monday’s performance left the Irish satisfied, but still hungry for something.

Indeed, for a program that has finished in the Top Ten for five of the last seven years and has become accustomed to NCAA tournament success, a 14-place finish was better than nothing or another celebration nor tears. Instead, it left the Irish feeling just, okay.

“I’m not going to say that we’re too excited or our finish, ” said head coach Joe Piane. “We did okay—we’re happy that we’re here at the NCAA tournament. We know that we could have run better.”

Nevertheless, Piane was quick to praise his team’s efforts.

“There are over 200 Division I cross country programs in the nation, and to finish 14th is impressive,” he said. “You get to nationals, you know it’s a good year.”

At nationals Notre Dame garnered 360 points to finish in 14th place. Iowa State won the championship with 65 points, with Colorado taking second and Arizona taking third.

“According to Piane, with the exception of freshman Jason Rashing and senior captain, J.R. Melero, most of his runners had a day that didn’t have less than stellar performance.”

“Everyone just ran fair, in fact, every runner did better than last year, no one had a really outstanding race,” said Piane. “I was pleased with the effort for the performance, especially considering his condition two weeks ago and the fact that he is recovering from a mono.”

“One thing that we have been working on has been closing the gap between the runners and today there was just a little bit of a gap. Our top five runners,” so said.

The top finisher for the Irish was senior Nate Buder, who placed 60th with a time of 31:45.1. Ruxing placed 70th with a time of 32:59.6. Sophomore Matt Kolk placed 94th with a time of 32:13. Captain Melero placed 100th with a time of 32:00. Senior Belles coach John Gowan placed 143rd with a time of 32:41. Junior Derek Martisius rounded out the Irish squad with a 159th and finished in a time of 33:48.

Piane noted that Notre Dame was not the only team to leave the course wondering exactly what had happened to them.

“It was a meet riddled with upsets,” he said. “Arkansas, who had won the last three years, ended up placing 10th, while Wisconsin, which was favored to win, placed 19th.

“It was an exciting meet,” he said. “The weather was beautiful and sunny, but it was really muddy from the rain they had the day before. It was just a gumphire out there.”

Seniors suit up one last time in all-star game

For the seniors, tonight's interhall all-star game will mark the final chapter in their football careers. Sure, there will always be the pick-up games in the park, but it will be the last time to strap on the pads and reflect on the time as a child when they first performed that action. "I'll still continue to play football, but it's different when you suit up with pads on," Carroll senior Tony Laborde said.

In previous years, there had been no interhall all-star game, leaving some of the players with an empty feeling as the season ended. "In my sophomore year, there was an all-star team, but we didn't actually play," Morrison senior Dave Powell said. "I thought this was a great idea when I heard about it.

"I think it'll be a good opportunity for everyone," Carroll senior Scott Ismail commented. "I'm realizing it'll be my last game and it will be kind of an emotional thing." The game will begin at 9:00 in Loftus tonight following the women's all-star game at 7:30. With teams of 28 members representing both the Gold and Blue divisions, some players will be placed in some new positions making for an interesting game.

In addition, WNDU sportscaster Chuck Freeby will be attempting to score a touchdown between the first and second quarters as part of his segment, Chuck's Challenge. He will have four plays from the 10-yard line at quarterback to get the job done. Excluding the players from Zahm and Off-Campus, each of the teams practiced twice last week.

Last night marked the first time the squads practiced together as the players managed to impress their new coaches. "If you took an all-star team from these two teams, they would be able to compete at a Division II or III level," Blue assistant coach Frank Castellino said. The game will not only feature seniors, though, as many underclassmen were picked by their peers to represent their dorms.

"The upperclassmen are great to be around," Fisher freshman Sean Lynch added. "They're able to show you a lot of new things." One of those seniors, Fisher's Dan McGinty, may have summed it up best.

"I think it is a nice honor to give out," he added. "This is going to be my last game and it is a nice touch on which to end the season."

A first down at the 43, but then he fumbled under pressure, and Off-Campus' Joe Bergan fell on the football. Six plays later, Hammond dove in from the one, and the Crusins had sealed a 14-0 victory.

The duel of the quarterbacking Hammond brothers was clearly won by Off-Campus' Chris. He outshone Benji by guts. "Any freshman can hang his head, give up, and quit. He couldn't be a pretty easy target for his freshman brother."

"They were hitting him pretty hard at the end. A freshman getting to the Stadium is pretty impressive. I thought he played well considering Zahn couldn't run the ball well."

Bozanich felt Benji showed his Interhall career, and won it was Lyons who answered the call when the game was on the line. Starting deep in their own territory, Byrd and the Lyons offense engineered a nine-play, 60-yard drive. In what somebody may come to be known as The Drive, Byrd connected with receiver Jenny Layden three times and Shanitz once as a result of making adjustments against the 0-C blitz. "We focused all week on picking up the blitz, and we were able to do a pretty good job of that," said Byrd. "The offense executed pretty well, especially in the second half."

As the Off-Campus defense stiffened up near the goal line, Lyons faced a fourth and goal situation with less than four minutes to play. Just as she had all afternoon, Byrd came up big for Lyons with a four yard touchdown scamper to extend the lead to 13-0.

Off-Campus narrowed the gap to 13-7 following a nine yard touchdown pass from Neidlinger to tailback Megan Allen. However, it proved to be too little too late, as Lyons was able to run the clock out and hang on to the 13-7 victory. Indeed the cream did rise to the top. And for Lyons, victory couldn't taste any sweeter.

The O-C turnover gave the Lyons offense second life and a first down at the 30-yard line. It took just four plays for the team to score, as Lyons quarterback Julie Byrd found receiver Kathy Shantz wide open for an easy score as time expired in the first half. Byrd added the conversion on a keeper to give Lyons a 7-0 lead heading into intermission.

Just like the first, the second half started out as a defensive struggle. Neither squad was able to build a pretty good job of their own territory. Byrd and the Lyons offense engineered a nine-play, 60-yard drive. Crime capture men's title with 14-0 rout of Zahm

BY NEIL ZENDER

Sports Writer

Whoever said 'Crime Doesn't Pay' never played Off-Campus on the football field. The Crime rolled over a feisty Zahm club on their way to a 14-0 victory for the Interhall Championship.

Off-Campus won all season because of an unyielding defense. Sunday was no exception. The Crime held the Rabid Bats to 23 total yards. Zahm ran the ball 15 times for a grand total of 7 yards. Quarterback Benji Hammond was 4 of 12 for 38 yards, and was sacked three times for a loss of 22 yards.

The Off-Campus defense forced three Zahm turnovers, and the Bats were penalized five times for 60 yards.

"They capitalized on our mistakes. We weren't able to do the same," Zahm captain Dave Bozanich said.

The game was a 0-0 defensive stalemate in the fourth quarter, before the gutsy leadership of quarterback Chris Hammond led the Crime to the win. Wide receiver Tom Fitzpatrick got past the Rabid Bat defense, and Hammond hit him with a 29-yard touchdown strike. Michael Marty's extra point made it a 7-0 lead.

Lyons cruises past O-C for women's title

By MICHAEL DAY

The cream always seems to rise to the top when the moment of truth arrives.

It certainly did on Sunday, as Lyons captured the Interhall championship with an impressive 13-7 victory over a relentless Off-Campus squad at The Stadium.

Lyons, coached by Kevin Kowek, Andy Brant, Jim Mullen, and Kevin Klau, executed their game plan brilliantly on both sides of the ball. Offense. Defense. Coaching. You name it—Lyons was superior in each and every aspect of the game.

"It was a great team effort," said Klau. "The game typified the kind of effort we've had throughout the year."

With the game scoreless after nearly 16 minutes into the contest, Lyons linebacker Cindy Eagan came up with the play of the game. Make that the play of the season. Off-Campus appeared to be driving to take the lead when Eagan stepped in front of O-C wideout Michelle Drury and intercepted a Nicole Neidlinger pass to turn the tide of the battle.
