South Bend Police advise in crime prevention

By LIZ FORAN

Ah, Christmas time. That wonderful time of year when many people turn to thoughts of joy, peace and love. Unfortunately, other people may be thinking about how easy it would be to break into your empty house, apartment or car while you are out of town for three weeks, and have themselves a merry little Christmas.

Notre Dame Security and the South Bend Police Department have several programs which can help off-campus students keep their belongings safe over the holidays. Home Watch, a program offered by South Bend police, is strongly backed by South Notre Dame Security and Student Government. It has police check some homes three times a day for any signs of tampering or break-in. Sgt. George Gherardi, a crime prevention specialist with the South Bend Police Department.

Home Watch is easy to use and may prevent your house from becoming a target ever break. To have your house put on the list:

• Telephone South Bend Police at 235-9201 and ask to sign up for Home watch.
• Identify yourself as a Notre Dame Saint Mary’s or the Holy Cross student.
• Tell police when (day and date) you are leaving and when you will return.
• Be prepared to give police a contact person and telephone number in case there is a problem at your residence. You can give them your telephone number or name or you can ask someone reliable in the South Bend area to be your contact person.

"Once you call in," Gherardi explained, "it is placed in a log book for the days you leave. You can have the best officer assigned to that district as a contact person.

"Many off-campus students reside in the neighborhood directly south of campus, known as the Northeast Neighborhood." Gherardi said. According to department statistics, burglaries and larcenies accounted for a total of 85 percent of all crimes in district 10, which is bordered by the St. Joseph River on the west, Eddy Street on the east and Angola Avenue on the north.

"Crime statistics remain constant in percentages from neighborhood to neighborhood," Gherardi said. "Crime rates may go up or down in a particular neighborhood, but the percentages of different crimes will remain the same." Larceny always makes up the largest part.

Different types of larceny include theft from automobiles, theft of auto parts, purse snatching and thefts from yards, he said.

Items such as televisions, computers and stereo systems are popular items to take in home burglaries because they are easily converted to cash, he believed.

Gherardi added that putting the boxes from new appliances out with the trash without breaking the down is like advertising.

Irish Prime Minister Erskine Childers defended the UN’s reputation in his lecture Friday night, while admitting these are changes to be made.

Childers touts United Nations

Prime Minister from Ireland calls for change

By EDWARD IMBUS
News Writer

Blasting critics of the United Nations but recommending changes for future implementation, former Irish Prime Minister Erskine Childers spoke Friday at a symposium held in the Hesburgh Center.

Childers said that accusations of a "bloated, inefficient bureaucracy" are unfounded and place public sentiment unwarranted against the UN. He noted that the UN’s staff, much of which consists of translators for the three main UN offices, is smaller than that of New York City.

He also stated that the UN staff working through UN programs do an excellent job given the amount and abuse of power by permanent UN members, such as the United States and Russia (who accept the debt of the former Soviet Union), have failed to send money to the UN as promised in international agreements.

"Continuing on that point, Childers said that funds for other well-placed projects were forced to the back financially when UN peacekeepers were authorized by the UN Security Council, thus straining the UN even further.

In keeping with the theme of the conference, "Creating a More Effective and Efficient UN." Childers listed twenty recommendations as to what the UN needed to address as an organization and how to effect that change.

Before beginning structural changes, however, Childers outlined what he perceived to be the most pressing problems facing the UN at this time, the severe lack of education of the third world compared to the industrialized world, extreme poverty and abuse of power by permanent UN members, and the overall disparity of wealth between the northern and southern hemispheres.

To illustrate his first point, he said that Notre Dame graduates as many people each year as the entire third world graduates in ten years percentage wise.

"In order to become a truly representative world body, the United Nation should take several steps of radical reform. First, all member nations should remit the financial aid they owe as a result of being too big so the UN could fund its programs to increase its effectiveness in the world. Second, permanent member nations should sign up for Home Watch, a program of the South Bend Police Department.

Schultz named first VP of Saint Mary’s Mission

By MYRNA MALONEY
Assistant Saint Mary’s Editor

As the first Vice President for Mission at Saint Mary’s College, Sister Rose Anne Schultz, C.S.C. hopes to incorporate the goals and values of the Congregation of the Sisters of the Holy Cross, with those listed in the mission statement of the College.

Schultz, a former Chair of the Board of Regents and a current director of the Center for Spirituality, was appointed last November as the College’s first Vice President for Mission.

"The position of Vice President of Mission was created to provide many ways to keep integrating the missions into the daily activities of not only the students, but the whole Saint Mary’s community," Schultz said.

Schultz was born in Wisconsin, grew up in Southern California and became familiar with the Sisters of the Holy Cross throughout her elementary and secondary education.

After coming up her vows, she taught and was involved with elementary administration in Indiana and Illinois, and later worked in religious education.

Our language and its abuses

I love English. In no other language is there the precision and fluidity that English provides. English gives those who understand it and use it properly the ability to communicate ideas concisely and graphically, directly or subly, and with as many words as desired.

Those who have mastered this powerful tool are called poets. They use the beautiful words to communicate their beliefs and feelings in ways that no one save a fool can call vague. These people always have a significant advantage in any debate or discussion for the simple reason that they are the most clear in their assertions.

Unfortunately, most people are not poets. And even those who are, many of them, are merely those who come to actually degrade English by its misuse and abuse. Even here at Notre Dame.

The University of Notre Dame last year proudly announced that, after a moment of some brilliance, the senior officers had created the position of University Ombudsman to investigate complaints of racial or sexual discrimination or harassment.

It was a great idea. Having a disinterested person to whom such complaints show that the University cares about its employees and solidifies any unneeded bureaucracy so as not to hang up such disputes in a timely manner.

However, there is one small problem. There is no such thing as an ombudsman.

The University was trying to be politically correct and change the word ombudsman into a less sexist term, assuming that this change is intended, and is respected by those who spoke of him.

It is embarrassing and unprofessional, however, to change the word ombudsman is to a less sexist term is a Swedish, non-gender related concept.

I hope that if Notre Dame's new administrator travels to other universities campuses, he is not pointed with thoughts like, "What in the world are those idiots saying? Those people are not poets. Those people are not poets. Those people are not poets. Those people are not poets. Those people are not poets."

The easiest way to avoid sounding stupid or vague or just wrong is by simply having someone read a poet or aspiring poet, read a draft before it is presented for scrutiny. A poet indeed will take their time in assisting, for a true lover and master of English will not let the work become or stay shabby. He will let the work become or stay shabby. He will let the work become or stay shabby.

Sweden killings stem from rejection at nightclub

STOCKHOLM, Sweden Gunmen fired on a trendy nightclub in the capital early Sunday, killing three people and wounding 21. Police believe the killers were looking for revolutionaries who were reportedly turned away from the club. The slayings were the latest in a string of murders that have shocked Sweden, which once experi cenced very little violent crime. Police raided the apartment of one suspect in a working-class neighborhood south of Stockholm, but no one was there. Police said two other men also were involved in the shooting. The gunmen, dressed in military camouflage jackets and carrying a trench rackette the doors and windows of the Sture Company discotheque at 5:15 a.m., about an hour after a dispute with the club's doorman, said police.

Monarchy power would decrease

Prince Andrew and his estranged wife, the Duchess of York, would be bounced off the royal payroll and the queen's power would be cut under a plan being considered by the opposition Labour party, a newspaper reported Sunday. The Labor party issued a statement denying the report in The Sunday Times. But a party official told the British Broadcasting Corp. that some changes were being discussed. "The idea of talking about it does not necessarily spell the end of the monarchy, not for a second, but it does mean the monarchy's role will end up being slimmed down," said Labour spokesman Rick Straw. The Times reported that some royalties, including Prince Andrew and the Duchess of York, Sarah Ferguson, could keep their titles under the plan but would no longer be publicly active as royalty. That would mean losing their combined annual pay of $330,000 a year. The queen would lose her power to dissolve parliament and make appointments without referring them to parliament, the newspaper said, quoting internal Labour party documents. Those powers are largely theoretical. No monarch has acted against the advice of the prime minister in more than 200 years.

Holiday headaches on the rise

"From Thanksgiving to New Year's, we see a greater incidence of tension-type headaches and migraines," Diamond said. Dr. Seymour Diamond, executive director of the National Headache Foundation. "At my private headache clinic in Columbus, Ohio, we treat about 40 percent more patients than that we would in a normal 40-day period — we're busy." Family stresses and long lines in out, noisy department stores are enough to trigger tension headaches even in people who aren't headache-prone. Diamond recommends shopping early. Failing that, he said, "Practicing breathing and stretching techniques — such as neck rolls and slow deep breaths — is a possible way to release stress; the loosened sleep patterns also play a role in headaches. Late-night parties can mean too little sleep, while time off can woo people into the shops late. Avoid this plan — which combines to headache-causing carbon dioxide buildup in the blood. "Try to go to sleep and wake up the same time every day, whether you are going to work or not," Diamond said.

Puerto Rico limits school vouchers

A court has struck down the largest school voucher program in the United States, leaving officials in this U.S. commonwealth searching for other ways to help the 2,013 poor students it benefits. Puerto Rico's Supreme Court ruled Friday a program allowing school students to attend private schools violates the commonwealth's constitution, which prohibits providing public funds to private institutions. But Gov. Pedro Rossello vowed to seek alternatives to his administration's voucher program, which will end after the current school year. "The decision of the Supreme Court goes contrary to the interests of the children of our neediest families, who see a good education as an element of progress and advancement, and to the best interests of their families, who see this form of assistance as a less sexist term, assuming that some changes were being discussed. Notre Dame called to show concern

By MARY FELZER

Roman Catholicism’s deep concern regarding social issues was stressed in a talk given by Scott Appleby. Appleby said that as a Catholic university committed to encouraging economic and political justice, Notre Dame is called to demonstrate Catholicism’s preoccupation with social concerns. However, this is a difficult task to accomplish, according to Appleby.

First, there is skepticism remaining from pre-Vatican II days towards the worth of experiential learning, which Appleby said is “an integral and privileged mode of academic discourse.” For Appleby, the experience of Vatican II had widespread implications for the meaning of Catholicism. Prior to the Council, the traditional view of God was that of a transcendent being removed from everyday human experience.

In contrast to earlier times, Church leaders now preach understanding of God primarily gained through interaction with other members of His community. This change in focus makes it difficult for some to appreciate Catholicism’s involvement in social welfare issues, according to Appleby. The cause of social concern is hindered by recent trends in American religion that call attention to issues that seem essential only to those directly involved in de-legitimizing and disparaging those holding the opposite position, Appleby continued.

He said that there are the fundamentalists, who trace the root of all social problems and the loss of the Catholic identity to the 1962 Supreme Court ruling against prayer in public schools. Opposing them in the “culture wars” are the radical feminists, characterized by their disgust with the patriarchal culture and their desire for change.

“This situation animates the criticisms of social concerns involved,” Appleby stated. For the fundamentalists, “religion has been sabotaged by good-hearted, mushy headed liberals.” Catholics and the University of Notre Dame should consider the distinctiveness of Catholicism, said University officials should remain concerned about renewing Catholic ministry and continue demonstrating to students how faith can be integrated throughout a lifetime.

A Catholic’s compassionate, concerned response to social needs should be rooted in the biblical depths of Catholicism, he said.

ND alum returns to teach

By WENDY LOWDERMILK

A former Notre Dame student is returning to his alma mater to teach and encourage more young people to get involved in computing.

Pettrc Kogge has been named the Ted II. Mc Qurtrty professor of computer science and engineering at the University of Notre Dame. "Great," said Kogge in reaction to the professorship. "It’s a homecoming." Kogge graduated from Notre Dame with a bachelor’s degree in electrical engineering in 1974. He has had a “distinguished career” and “being an alumni is a natural fit.”

Professors of computer science and engineering at Stanford, and has written two textbooks. Kogge also holds six patents and has disclosures on 18 other ideas filed with the U.S. patent office since 1988.

will then check your house during that time. At shift change, he then passing the log book on to the next officer.

"Ideally, the house is being checked three times a day," he said, "once on each shift."

When the ground is clear, police will usually walk around the house, Gherardi said, checking doors and windows for signs of any problems.

"When that is done, they will not walk around the house, but will instead check to see if footprints appear in the area surrounding the house," he added.

Gherardi added that if someone was attempting to enter the house, hopefully neighbors would call the police.

"Unfortunately, students may not know many of their neighbors because they haven't lived in the area for that long," he said.

Gherardi also stressed the importance of letting police know if someone was stopping by to pick up mail or newspapers or to check on the house. "That way if police find someone in the house, they know who is authorized to be there and who is not," he said.

Students can also help to protect their houses and property by leaving lights on times while they are gone and by having a neighbor or someone trustworthy in the area pick up their mail and newspaper.

"It has never happened in South Bend," Gherardi said, "but there have been cases of houses being broken into while people were out of town that have been traced to cancellation of mail or newspapers. It might not be the paperboy, but it might be his older brother."

"The less people who know your house will be empty, the better."

He added that it would be a good idea, if possible, to have someone shovel a path to the door or brush off the car if it snows.

"The most important thing is to make it look like normal activity is taking place in the home," he said.

Another way students can help protect their property is to remove valuables from their homes over Christmas break. Notre Dame Security offers free storage of valuables for off-campus students over the holidays, according to Lt. Irving Sikorski.

"It's free and the hardest part is packing it up and bringing it in," Sikorski added. He also said the items should be boxed or packaged to ensure safe storage and to maximize storage space.

Items may be dropped off on December 19 and 20 from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. each day. Students should come in by way of the D-6 parking lot. Items may be picked up January 16 to 20 during regular business hours.

"We have someone in the office who checks the serial numbers of items that are taken to pawn shops," Gherardi said. "In order to pawn something in South Bend, you have to show identification. If the item turns up stolen, we know who had it."

If your equipment is stolen, Gherardi said, you will have no chance of reclaiming it even if it is recovered if you don't have the serial numbers written down.

Childers suggested that in the meantime, a watchdog agency should be created, not necessarily under UN auspices, to identify and document such cases, which he claimed happens regularly.

The biggest reform he offered was the direct elections of UN representatives to both the Security Council and the General Assembly.

Childers said that arguments that the process would be too complicated were wrong, since India holds elections for 900 million in their parliamentary elections.

It could follow that the world could handle elections of only seven times that amount.

Childers spent 22 years as a civil servant to the UN and served as senior advisor to the UN Director-General for development.

He has as the author of several books that deal with the role of the UN in various global issues.

claim to such power is the ability to "in the most people in the most efficient and most painful ways science allows.

The main reason this needs to be done, according to Childers, is because permanent members threaten governments less well off with suspension of project funding in their countries or other disreputable actions, unless the poorer nations accede to the wishes of the permanent members.

Childers has been a senior advisor to the UN and worked at the Fort Wayne diocesan office. He served for 11 years on the General Council, when she traveled to Bangladesh, Brazil and Africa to meet other sisters and hear their concerns.

"Prior to arriving at Saint Mary's five years ago, I completed a graduate program in Christian Spiritual Guidance in Washington, D.C.," Schultz said.

Holocaust survivor to speak on joy of life

By KATHY LATTANZI
News Writer

A unique perspective of the Holocaust will be given from the point of view of a Schindler Jew. Tonight, Zev Kedem will be speaking on "Schindler's List: A Survivor Celebrates Life."

Kedem, whose father died when he was very young and who was left in the care of his mother, will discuss the celebration and appreciation of life. Having been separated from his mother during the Holocaust and not seeing her again until 1985 affected him greatly.

He will also be discussing his experiences with hate and prejudice and how they relate to the world today.

After being sent to Auschwitz at the age of 8, Kedem was forced to live in several different concentration camps before he was rescued by Oskar Schindler.

Kevin Klaa, a Student Union Board member, is responsible for bringing Kedem to Notre Dame.

"We became interested when the movie (Schindler's List) came out," stated Klaa.

The events of the Holocaust were a major factor in shaping Kedem's views on life because he was captured for such a young age, according to Klaa.

"He brings our attention back to the events of World War II and the Holocaust," Klau said. "Although his main message is one of appreciation, Kedem will be speaking tonight at 7:30 at Washington Hall. Tickets are available for $2 at the La Fortune Information Desk and tonight Kedem will be giving from the point of view of a Schindler Jew.

Injured whale strays into Delaware River

By DAVE IVY
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA

An injured right whale that took a wrong turn ended up in the Delaware River, swimming in slow circles as rescuers Sunday tried to steer it back toward the Atlantic.

The young mammal, which may have been separated from its mother, strayed north into Delaware Bay instead of moving south for its winter migration.

The whale's head was bleeding from an apparent run-in with a boat during its 80-mile trek from the mouth of the bay at Lewes, Del., to Philadelphia, where it was first spotted Saturday.

"Or it could have been hit out in the ocean, possibly resulting in some disorientation. That may be why it's here," said Bob Schoelkopf, director of the Marine Mammal Stranding Unit in Brigantine, N.J.

The whale appeared to be lethargic and could be hungry, Schoelkopf said from a police helicopter.

"That's a good sign, if it continues moving in this direction, it could make it back to open water and possibly survive," Schoelkopf said.

Officials discouraged would-be whale watchers, warning boat and helicopter operators they could face $25,000 fines, imprisonment and seizure of their vessels if they came closer than about a quarter mile.

Right whales are the rarest of the great whales with a population of about 350 in the North Atlantic. They grow to up to 55 feet in length. The Philadelphia whale is about 20 feet to 25 feet long.

Stampede causes death of 4

By DARA SHARIF
Associated Press

TRENTON, N.J.

One exit was locked and another all but hidden at the nightclub where four youths were tried to death in a panic-driven stampede toward the front door, authorities said today.

Hundreds of partygoers squeezed into a single, narrow stairwell trying to escape a brawl at the second-story club early Saturday. At least 21 people were taken to the hospital, most with bruises and sprains.

A second exit was accessible only through the men's bathroom and had to be kicked open because it was locked, prosecutor Michael Lapolla said. Only a few patrons used that exit.

A third exit at the rear of the building was virtually useless, he said.

"No one would have been able to find it," he said. "There were no directions from the dance floor."

Authorities were considering filing manslaughter charges against Fernando Bravo, owner of the El Balcon club, Lapolla said.

"Overcrowding, alcohol being served to minors... (and) the lack of working exits" could play a part in charges, he said.

Telephones calls Sunday to El Balcon club in Elizabeth went unanswered. There was no local directory listing for Bravo.

A student organization at the University of Arizona is fighting an uproar over the presence of ROTC on the university's education system. The group, called the Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors (CCCO) is planning a protest at the mid-term elections that would challenge the Reserve Officers Training Corps presence on campus.

"The CCCO is looking to help people get out of the military and find alternatives. We are looking at offering scholarships because violence and militarism are antithetical to education," said Sam Praxton, a spokesperson for CCCO, to the university's student newspaper, the Arizona Daily Wildcat.

In a society which as a policy, "clearly and overtly violating the Constitution," said Diener. "They cannot reconcile the ROTC and a non-violent society.

The CCCO is further backed by several faith organizations, including the Catholic Newman Center and the Catholic Campus Ministry, who have already given up the faculty's support. More schools to offer direct student loans

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Education Department added 346 schools to the list of those already offering federal loans directly to students. This year, the department reports that 74,945 of the number of schools in the program has increased to over 100 million.

The federal government guarantees about $18 billion in student loans issued under the Federal Family Education Loan Program. Bill says the direct-lending program will save taxpayers $4.3 billion over five years that would have otherwise been paid to lenders for insurance.

The federal government guarantees about $18 billion in student loans issued under the Federal Family Education Loan Program. Bill says the direct-lending program will save taxpayers $4.3 billion over five years that would have otherwise been paid to lenders for insurance.

Under direct lending, the federal government makes the loans to students through schools, eliminating the need for students to go through banks and other private lenders.

The federal government has been phasing in the direct-loan program, beginning at 104 colleges in the 1994-95 school year. By next year, 450 schools will be receiving loans, with 500 schools waiting to join.

As part of the program, borrowers with low incomes can defer payments up to 24 months and have monthly payments of 1 percent of their total payment. After 25 years of repayment, any remaining debt would be forgiven.

More students could choose a 10-year payback plan, or the traditional 10-year loan.

Bush breaks ground for Texas A&M library

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - With a crowd of a thousand cheering on, George and Barbara Bush broke ground Wednesday for the George Bush Presidential Library and Museum Center at Texas A&M University.

"We hope this is only the small way this library and school will give something back to help prepare our children and the generations to come for the exciting challenges that lie ahead," Bush said.

Several former presidents and members of the family, including Texas Gov.-elect George W. Bush and family, and about 1,000 others watched as the former president and First Lady from across the street as the ceremony got underway.

The library and school of government will be constructed on a 90-acre site on the western edge of the Texas A&M campus, about 90 miles northwest of Houston and just across the road from the university's swine, goat and sheep research centers.

School officials said about $71 million has been raised so far for the $27 million complex. The complex is scheduled to be completed by early 1997.

The library will house 40,000 objects, 36 million pages of documents and about a million photographs from Bush's public career.

Philanthropist to give Miami $2 million

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) - A philanthropist has decided to reinstate a $2 million gift to the University of Miami that he withdrew because the school newspaper printed an ad questioning the Holocaust.

"I woke up three times last night and that's what my brain told me to do," Sanford L. Ziff said Thursday. "This horrendous incident is behind us." Ziff, founder of Sunglass Hut, was furious at the university because it appeared to encourage Miami Hurricane editors to yank a $288 advertisement.

The ad, placed by a self-described "revisionist," questioned whether the Auschwitz Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington, D.C., offers proof that Jews were gassed by the Nazis during World War II. The paper printed it on April 12 and pulled the $288 donation slated for the school's art gallery and cancer center.

Technician shot at Utah medical school

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - A man was shot recently at the University of Utah medical school and a woman who worked in the next lab was arrested.

Ping Yu, 31, was listed in serious but stable condition after surgery. O Yang, 31, the victim's girlfriend, was jailed for investigation of attempted aggravated murder, carrying a concealed weapon and possession of a deadly weapon with intent to assaults.

Hospital spokesman said the arrest was made by two technicians worked in adjacent labs at the medical school.

Authorities said six shots were fired. Yu was wounded in the shoulder area. A witness said he saw a woman drop a gun on the hallway floor outside the lab, then squat on the ground as she sobbed.

University Police Chief Wayne Shepherd said he found a loaded handgun on the floor when he arrived.

Georgetown prankssters steal skeleton

Pranks are a fundamental element of college life at even Catholic universities.

At Georgetown, an unknown number of people hanged a full-size skeleton off of a bell tower for the Holy "Order of the Skull Building" on Halloween evening after stealing it earlier from the Scarecrow Museum, which houses both the biology and anthropology departments.

Before Georgetown Security learned of bellower's new resident, the skeleton rested in a closet out of view of the walkways nearby.

Security found the skeleton the next day, but did not realize that it was property of the university until last week, when it was claimed by the department of biology.
Catechism: Gay acts 'intrinsically disordered'

The December 1st lecture at De Bariolo on "Gays, Lesbians and the law." said "continuing campus interest in the status of homosexuals.

"The Roman Catholic Church is now the counterculture," says Father John F.

Harvey, director of Courage, a support group for Catholic men and women—and their families—who try to live chaste lives in accord with Catholic teaching on homosexuality. The counterculture character of the Church on homosexuality is evident even at Notre Dame, he said. "The University explicitly denies formal recognition to homosexual student groups, an informal but pervasive orthodoxy of dissent leads many to regard this Church teaching as arbitrary, oppressive and not binding on individual Catholics or Notre Dame. It may be useful here to set the record straight.

First, the Church's teaching is not merely advisory. Ex Corde Ecclesiae, the Apostolic Constitution on Catholic universities issued by John Paul II in 1990, provides that "the institutional fidelity of the Catholic university to the Christian message includes a recognition and allegiance to the teaching authority of the Church to matters of faith and morals. Catholic members of the university community are also called to a personal fidelity to the church which all Christians imply."

With respect to a teaching of the "ordinary Magisterium," not infallibly defined, Catholics are still obliged "to adhere to it with religious assent." Catechism of the Catholic Church, No. 892. In his September 16, 1987, address to the American bishops the Pope said, "there is a tendency on the part of some Catholics to be selective in their adherence to the Church's moral teachings. It is sometimes claimed that dissent from the Magisterium is totally compatible with being a 'good Catholic' and poses no obstacle to the reception of the Sacraments. This is a grave error..."

Second, the Church teaching here is not arbitrary or holy or oppressive. It begins by affirming that "Although the particular orientation of the homosexual person is not a sin, it is a more or less strong tendency ordered toward intrin­sic moral evil, and thus the inclination itself must be seen as an objective disorder..." Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith (CDF), Pastoral Care of Homosexual Persons (1986), No. 3.

On "homosexual act," the new Catechism describes them as "intrinsi­cally disordered. They are contrary to the natural law. They close the sexual act to the gift of life. They do not pro­duce the procreation and the raising of new individuals in an effective and natural complementarity. Under no circum­stances can they be approved." No. 2357. Thus, when the European Parliament resolved that homosexual couples should be allowed to marry and adopt children, John Paul II replied that the resolution "does not merely offend people with homosexual tendencies by rejecting unjust discrimination in their regard. The Church agrees with that indeed, the supports and approves it... What is not morally acceptable is the legal approval of homosexual activity. Being understanding towards the sinner who is unable to free himself from this tendency is not the same as lessening the requirement of the moral norm... Without a basic awareness of the moral law, human life and human dignity are subject to degradation and ruin. Forgetting Christ's words, 'the truth will set you free' (Jn 8:32), the attempt has been made to tell the inhabitants of this continent that moral evil, deviation, a kind of slavery, is the way to liberation, thus distorting the true meaning of the family. The relationship of two men or two women cannot constitute a true family; still less can one grant such a union the right to adopt children who lack a family. These children suffer great danger, grave harm, because in these 'substitute families' they do not have a father and mother, but two fathers or two mothers. This is dangerous..." Address, Feb. 20, 1994. (Emphasis in original).

It would be a mistake to regard Church teaching here as essentially neg­ative. On the contrary, it offers a hope­filled affirmation of the human person. "Today," said the CDF in 1986, "the Church provides a badly needed context for the care of the human person when she refuses to consider the person as a 'heterosexual' or a 'homosexual' and insists that every person has a funda­mental identity: a creature of God, and by grace, His child and heir to eternal life." Pastoral Care, No. 16. As the Catechism states:

"The relationship of two men or two women cannot constitute a true family; still less can one grant such a union the right to adopt children who lack a family."

... Theology is that you've got to avoid the difficulty of this kind of activity. You can still lead a good Christian life as a celibate person."

Father Harvey quotes a Courage mem­ber: " Courage offers... the answer. The inner peace, the deep self-acceptance and self-affirming that the choice of chastity imposes are far more enduring and self-affirming than the momentary gratifications of self-indulgence... I'm extremely happy... and relieved..."

Catholic Church, 2339 Homosexual persons are called to chastity. By the virtues of self-mastery that teach them inner freedom, at times by the support of disinterested friend­ship, by prayer and sacramental grace, they can and should gradually and res­olutely approach Christian perfection."

Founded by New York's Terence Cardinal Cooke in 1980 and now sponsored by the Archdiocese of New York, Courage has 27 chapters in the United States and Canada. Prayer and meditation open each Courage meeting, followed by discussion and reflection on the 12 steps of the Alcoholic Anonymous approach. Dr. King's thoughts and words come to life

In the Fall of 1950, Martin Luther King Jr. entered a student at Crozer Theological Seminary in Chester, Pennsylvania, and wrote in his autobiography, "An Autobiography of Religious Development." King recounts his life experiences and his dedication to religious faith emphasizing the supporting and fostering of his family, church, and community. Now forty-four years later, I want to present some of the ideas that King discussed in this little-known essay to the Notre Dame community.

Critically handwritten on light green, lined notebook paper, it is one of King's first reflections about the significance of religion in his life. He began the essay admitting to "anti-capitalist feelings" because he hadn't had a bigger job because "he didn't want to experience having to wait for food in bread lines during the Depression". During this time, King introduced his affectionate family that consisted of his father, mother, sister, brother, and his grandmother, and he underscored the love and care that "there was a great many wonderful family experiences of loving and discrimination." King recounted his first encounter with his first teacher in the fourth grade, a six year old boy he lived his best friend, a white boy of unknown age. The boy went to King and told him that his father had ordered him not to play with Martin anymore. King was shocked by the incident and sought for an explanation from his own parent at the dinner table when the situation was discussed. He realized, for the first time I was aware of the existence of the race problem," he remembered. His parents discussed the problems arising in the country they had endured and the wounded little boy made a momentous decision. "I was greatly shocked, and from that moment on I was determined to hate every white person. As I grew older and older this feeling continued to grow." King's partent's weighed in, and for the first time, the Christian duty to love all people and King responded by asking, "How can I to God and who had been responsible for me up with one of my first childhood friends?" Morehouse College in Atlanta provided the solution for him.

"I was greatly shocked,...and from that moment on I was determined to hate every white person. As I grew older and older this feeling continued to grow."

King recalled, "I did not conquer these feelings using any advice, or the college and came into contact with white students through working in interracial organizations.

Measuring success under the burden of a ND education

What burden? Graduation from here is a door opener to opportunities. It provides a measurable advantage over our entire professional lives. Just ask the internal recruiters at ND. But where's the burden? It's not something that begins as early as your first day on the job. For instance, in unrealistic measurements or in a no-hold barred competition among peers, it's not simply being unprepared that's the primary cause of failed innovations in learning, there would be little reason for this article.

If not that you can't learn, but that there is little motivation to excel if the run of the mill expectation that has been nurtured since birth and brought to a level of refinement through school has been summed up during these four years. If you would say about an executive for a national recruiter who was quoted as saying "An executive needs a pulse...insure and thus driven by their insecuring. Wait a minute. Haven't you just spent most of your life gaining the skills and values to overcome insecurity? Maybe there are employers out there where this education and your value systems might overlap.

There's the decision by another top executive to divorce his wife when he got his bigger job. He said he didn't want family stuff getting in the way of the big opportunity that he's going for. When you are also boxes for whom your education and value system could create an untenable working relationship if that exaggerated expectation was extended to you.

Recently, an Inside Column in The Observer pointed out that a case competition is often the daily ethical implications of the way the teams compete. This would be the type of competition that is often held among students to higher standards..." Let's add situations to the list where your education and value system might not thrive.

There can easily be a burden to your Notre Dame education when rewards are high for abandoning or modifying values. Now, if that burden hadn't been planted before we ever met you or we labeled on ethics as a highly publicized but equally isolated required course, the burden could be greatly lessened. As a

So how do we deal with the issue of taking a "Notre Dame education to the workplace?" Here are four questions you can use to evaluate your success when evaluating a job opportunity:

1. What do I need to feel successful? Look beyond salary and benefits. Every day for the next forty plus working years you are going to ask yourself: "Am I satisfying myself?" and expect a thumbs-up answer. You are already spending a great deal of time, effort and money up for the challenge. Isn't it in your best interest to make sure you are going to be able to answer the question how you will measure the answer?

Fortunately, you couldn't be in a better place to answer these questions. As a Notre Dame graduate, you can look at their classmates as sounding boards for advice and guidance. There are remarkable expectations between the same. And, whether you are freshmen or seniors, the sooner you start the better. For instance, I think I've met a second semester senior who will never forget that meeting and thinking of these kind of thoughts with classmates.

Also, spend quiet time listening to yourself. You've spent up to sixteen years preparing to contribute to society. Sixteen years! Don't you think spending a few hours searching for what you need to feel successful makes sense? It's fair to say that most graduates would agree these kind of discussions are already happening. This will be the greatest take-away from their Notre Dame education.

2. What's the mission? What's the measurement? Is there conflict between your personal ethic and the measurement of the job? Look around in an interview. Are the people who got promoted those who you send to represent them in a campus interview? Are the people who are in a leadership role in the company only interested if you can be molded into their plan? And, does this person or company have any values or principles that motivate you? If there are no "no" answers, proceed with caution.

3. What motivates your peers in the workplace? From that same article, I think back on Notre Dame, I think of it as one of those places that is different. There must be something about it, that they got all those good people who go there. I think back fondly on it as an insulation that attracted those sorts of people. As a "93 graduate from Notre Dame, I think back on the time I spent there and the time I spent at The Observer. The "mystique alluded to in Notre Dame literature no doubt incorporated the harmony between the majority of students and faculty." It's so much easier to have a picture of what your peers in the workplace will have had quite a different experience. The adage, "It is not enough that I win, you must lose," rings. Believing one can live by a vocation and a moral ethic at work and a more genuine one: other times outsized the eighties. Check for tension in the workplace. Is the use of a noble example and title effective? Is the competitive, is there respect and honesty? Recognize your needs in relationship with those of others.

4. What are the expectations of those great and the personal ethics that you never had an abrupt conversion experience, change graduation brings is the role change from buyer to seller. For up to sixteen years, you and your family have been education buyers either paying or being paid. The student to seller turns. Whether supplying a product or service, for profit or non-profit, in a learning experience, you are the supplier or seller and your teaching/learning measurement that establishes your value.

Several years ago, I met an excellent who had written several pieces that pleased him and others. He is a professor in the writing field, had he greatly suc-

This holiday season's movies have hit the screen with little fanfare and low audience approval (save A Miracle On 34th Street and Quantum Tarantino's Pulp Fiction). The remaining movies lack the clout to make a stir. Theサイト edges of a movie that would set them apart from the "same stuff different movie" syndrome that actors and directors become trapped.

Now in the theaters, the majority of the films are merely a waste of money and time. Why do I say this? It is not because I have no life and have seen every movie currently showing, including the Swan Princess.

No, it is because of my vast knowledge of movies and actors, I can determine the merit of a movie by simply knowing two things: One, who stars in it, and two, its title.

To the conclusion that I want to free the world of useless films. I want to become the champion of the average hard-working born in the U.S.A. movie and theater goer. It's kind of cinematic Ralph Nadler.

Now using my intuitive powers I will save you many boring dates and money by weeding out some of the bad movies this holiday season. (Keep in mind I have not seen any of the bad movies.)

1. The Lion King. One of Disney's most successful animated motion pictures to date was released early this year and has made mega-bucks off small children and adults alike. From lunch boxes to pencil pouches to t-shirts. Now after a good run on the big screen, the thoughtful people at Disney have re-released The Lion King so that everyone who did not get a chance to see it the first time can have it shoved down their throats... I mean so that everyone can share in this heart warming tale.

In my opinion, The Lion King is like Bambi except with African animals playing the major roles. A baby animal will be born and all the creatures of the area will see the new baby. The baby will meet new friends like Thumper the rabbit and will meet new friends like Timon the meerkat. The baby will meet new friends like Pumbaa the warthog, The baby will meet new friends like Rafiki the baboon. From lunch boxes to pencil pouches to t-shirts.

2. Interview With the Vampire, starring Tom Cruise and Brad Pitt as Vampires who are struggling with the acceptance of their new urges for blood. They are ostracized by their childhood friends whom they grew up with.

In a stirring scene, Tom Cruise is confronted by his mother. Struggling to understand her son demands that he tell her the truth about his vampiric tendencies. To which he replies, "You can't make me tell you what I am." Confused and torn by his urges, he reaches out for help through a series of classifiers and finds a council in an equally confused vampire Brad Pitt. Pitt and Cruise are in love with each other and galvanize the other vampires. The two are asked to appear on a Barbara Walters special in order for them to gain recognition. The two are asked to appear on a Barbara Walters special in order for them to gain recognition. The two are asked to appear on a Barbara Walters special in order for them to gain recognition.

3. The Pagemaster starring Macaulay Culkin is a definite must see. The movie begins with the child star Culkin being trapped at night in a public library by a pair of escaped house burglars who want revenge for sending them to the big house. The movie suddenly slips into an animated adventure when Culkin drops acid mistaking it for a Win-Off Green Lifesaver, and begins a wild hour and a half long trip in which he hides from the burglars among the book stacks, ultimately declaring himself the Pagemaster, ruler of all books and periodicals alike.

When Culkin gets the munchies he becomes fed up with the burglars and with the help of his cloth and leather bound friends he sets up an elaborate system of traps for the burglars. Dropping unbrigaded door knockers from the shelves onto the bumbling convicts, catapulting all 26 volumes of the World Book encyclopedia onto the bewildered criminal, and littering the floor with little golf pencils which the convicts slip on and are knocked unconscious.

When the library is opened in the morning the burglars are discovered and arrested. Culkin is found dead next to a smashed vending machine amid a heap of Hostess snack cake wrappers. The End. This is truly one of the most intriquing movies of the year. The Pagemaster is a movie that could have done to enhance their major. The movie is a definite must see. The movie is a definite must see. The movie is a definite must see.

4. Junior starring Arnold Schwarzenegger, Danny Devito, and Emma Thompson is an interesting counter to the usual action fare. Schwarzenegger, the star of many an action, and lately more comedy movies, plays a man who is artificially inseminated and becomes pregnant. The normally ripped superstud must break this news to his family and becomes pregnant. The movie suddenly slips into an animated adventure when Arianna puts on a Wint-Green Lifesaver, and begins a wild hour and a half long trip in which he hides from the burglar among the book stacks, ultimately declaring himself the Pagemaster, ruler of all books and periodicals alike.

When Arianna gets the munchies she becomes fed up with the burglar and with the help of her cloth and leather bound friends she sets up an elaborate system of traps for the burglar. This is truly one of the most intriquing movies of the year. The Pagemaster is a movie that could have done so much more." Landers saw the trading desk, the stock exchange, and was able to talk to many people who worked at the company. Landers says, "I was choose for the environment and to see where my education at Notre Dame could take me.

Students can participate in the program as many times as they want. Schuporsky, also a finance major, took advantage of this opportunity twice. He said "I really saw a difference between the pace in the classroom and in the real world. In class, students have time to sit and think. In the real world, many outside factors arise to which people must be able to quickly react." The Extern program operates through the Student/Alumni Relations Group in the Main Building. Schuporsky said, "We try to find alumni from all major cities from New York to Los Angeles. Students must provide their own transportation, but sometimes the alumni provide the housing." Students select their top three choices of location and the program does its best to place students in one of their top two choices.

Upon receiving the name of their assigned alumni, students call the alumni and the two exchange expectations of the week and make up a plan for how things will operate during the course of the week. Students usually shadow and follow the alumn at work.

Through participating in the Extern program, students are able to explore potential careers without any commitment. Extern provides opportunities that are not available after students graduate and enter the real world. The program benefits the alumni participants as well. The alumni are able to return to their alma mater without going to campus. "They enjoy reliving old memories with current Notre Dame students. They like to hear about what has remained the same and what has changed," said Landers.

Benefits of the program last for longer than the actual week. Schuporsky said "Many students keep in touch with their alumni and anything really can happen. Contact with the alumni is a means of exposing oneself to the environment. What students get out of the program is really up to them. The value of the Extern program is limitless."

Decision could haunt Stallings for ages

By PAUL NEWBERRY

Gene Stallings had been widely hailed for Alabama's knack of winning close games. Now he has to answer for a decision that may have cost the Crimson Tide a chance to win its second national title in three years.

The Crimson Tide lost for the first time after Stallings elected to kick an extra point with less than nine minutes remaining rather than go for two points. Leaving the Tide open for Florida to win the Southeastern Conference championship 24-23. Stallings was defiant after Saturday's game, insisting he had made the proper call. But not Florida coach Steve Spurrier, one of the most daring offensive minds in the game. Spurrier likes touchdowns — Florida had scored 66 entering Saturday's game — and he had gone for it on fourth down nearly as many times (13) as he had settled for a field goal attempt (15).

After he got over the shock of Rudd's interception, Spurrier said he "just looked up at the scoreboard and knew seven points would give us the lead."

Down by six, the Gators set out to reach the end zone — and they did thanks to three gimmick plays Spurrier had been saving all day. Starting from his own 20, Danny Wuerffel threw two passes for 13 yards, then limped off the field as if injured. It was all a ruse, "just to make it look like it's not a planned play," Wuerffel said. Eric Kresser trotted on and threw a 25-yard pass to Ike Hilliard to get the Gators into Alabama territory. Then Wuerffel, never really hurt, returned.

With first-and-10 at the Alabama 31, the Gators split a receiver to each side, flanked by a tight end and a tackle, leaving only three blockers around Wuerffel at the center of the field. He fired a quick pass to Reidel Anthony, who used the extra blockers to pick up 9 yards.

On second-and-1, Wuerffel threw a pass at nearly the same spot to Chris Doering, but it was actually a lateral. Doering, "rushed back and threw his first pass of the season to slot man Aubrey Hill, who went 20 yards before he was knocked out of bounds at the Alabama 2. On the next play, Wuerffel, calling an audible, hit Doering for a touchdown pass across the middle.

"We had a quarterback sneak called, but they had everybody crammed in tight," Wuerffel said, "so I checked off with about six seconds left (on the play clock) and our line gave me time to make the throw."

Then Judd Davis — this time, had a quarterback sneak, but he made everybody crammed in tight, "We had a quarterback sneak called, but they had everybody crammed in tight," Wuerffel said, "so I checked off with about six seconds left (on the play clock) and our line gave me time to make the throw."

After he got over the shock of Rudd's interception, Spurrier said he "just looked up at the scoreboard and knew seven points would give us the lead."

"We had to go to our grab trick plays to make things happen," said Spurrier, whose Gators are on their way to New Orleans for a Sugar Bowl rematch with Florida State.

Spurrier's play-calling was never in question, but his people skills — demoting star quarterback Terry Doss to the third team, for instance — were criticized when Florida won nine games by an average of 35 points but folded in the fourth quarter in their other two contests: a 36-33 loss to Auburn and a galling 31-31 tie with Florida State.

Alabama had come from behind four times in the fourth quarter, and there was still plenty of time (15:29) to do it again.About 20 more yards and they would have been in Proctor's range, but the drive went no further. It ended when Jay Barker, 34-1-1 as the Tide's starting quarterback, threw an interception on fourth-and-15, relegating Alabama to the Citrus Bowl against Ohio State and to ponder the 2-point conversion that never was.

Irish grab Championship

Special to the Observer

Notre Dame led wire to wire as the men's swimming team earned its seventh straight National Catholic Championship, outdistancing second place Catholic University by over 300 points while the women's team won its sixth straight by nearly the same margin at Rolf's Aquatic Center this weekend.

The final score for the men's team effort was 1048 points, while second place Catholic had 701. The women's team amassed 1016 points compared to St. Louis's 683. The Irish men were paced by the meet's most valuable swimmer, Ry Bevillé, who set a meet record Saturday in the 100 butterfly and became a double winner when he captured the 200 fly Saturday evening. Notre Dame junior Jesslyn Peterson became the meet's only triple event winner when she captured the 200 breaststroke in a time of 2:22.90. Peterson was also named the meet's top women's swimmer.

Fighting Irish diver Marcia Powers was named the meet's top diver after capturing both the one and three-meter events. St. Louis's Gene Kohler duplicated the feat to win the men's diving award.

Notre Dame coach Tim Welsh also earned Coach of the Year honors. Notre Dame will swim again Friday evening at 6:30 when Wiscon Green Bay comes to town for a dual meet.

Belles keep slashing times

The Saint Mary's swimming team's performance in this past weekend's National Catholic Swimming and Diving Invitational at Rolf's Aquatic Center was nothing short of extraordinary.

On the first day of competition, the Belle's swim season best times in 15 of their first 17 races. They competed against division one schools Notre Dame and St. Louis and division three schools Catholic University and John Carroll. The Belle's took second out of the division three schools.

"We did extremely well overall and performance wise," said head coach Greg Janson who received the Coach of the Meet Award for women's swimming.

Three school records were set during the course of the three day competition. Juniors Teresa Popp and Katie Rose teamed with Freshmen Allison Smith and Sarah Gillen to set a new school record in the 400 freestyle. Smith went on to win the 1650 freestyle with a time of 17:49.92 minutes and set another school record in the process.

Janson called Smith's win, "Her single greatest performance of all time. This is the first time we've won an event in this meet. Her time would have placed her 11th at last year's NCAAs."

Irish could climb no closer than two. Twelve straight Torero points returned the tide.

"We had some excellent young men who had some success and stopped listening to the things that got us in that position," MacLeod said. "Hopefully, we're mature enough and enough of a team that this is a lesson we won't have to learn over again."

Irish learning from losses

By K.C. GOYER
Sports Writer

Tough luck. The Notre Dame women's basketball team has had the fortune to play tough teams, in tough games, and earn tough losses.

The Irish traveled to California for the University of California, Irvine Newport Beach Marriott Classic tournament this weekend. After soundly defeating the Anteaters, Notre Dame went on to lose to sixth ranked Alabama, 87-106 in the championship game on Saturday night.

While one of the strengths of this year's team is the depth of talent, Alabama relied on a balanced attack. Five players for the Crimson Tide scored double digits, including one off the bench.

Two Notre Dame players scored season highs as Beth Morgan contributed 23 and co-captain Carey Poor netted 19 points. Poor, along with co-captain Letitia Bowen, led both teams in rebounding with nine each. The Irish owned the boards as usual, this time 38-35.

Morgan and Poor were named to the All-Tournament team.

Other high statistics weren't as encouraging for the Irish. Four of the starters lost the ball at least four times. The game ended with the Irish committing 25 turnovers, as compared to the Tide's 16.

In the first half, Alabama boasted a .537 shooting percentage, sending 22 of 41 shots through the iron. Fiery shooting skills allowed Alabama to jump to an early 15-2 lead, and end the half leading 58-36.

Characteristic of the Fighting Irish, the team battled for a major comeback in the second half. Five minutes into the half, Notre Dame came back from an apparently very fruitful timeout to outscore Alabama 28 to 16 in under ten minutes. With two minutes remaining, the Irish were 8 points from the upset. A short but timely run of unanswered buckets for the Crimson Tide sealed the loss for the Irish, although the final score was not indicative of Notre Dame's caliber of play.

Notre Dame proved that this year's squad can run with the best of them once again last night, especially down the stretch. Against Purdue earlier this week and Alabama over the weekend, Notre Dame outscored their opponents by twelve points, falling just short of victory in the final two minutes.

Coach Muffet McGraw has a lot of talent to work with from the young team. Sophomore's Beth Morgan, Rosanne Bohman, Jeannine Augustin, and Katryna Gaither provide the backbone of the team, scoring 40 of the team's 87 points against Alabama.

Although the intense competition the Irish have been facing this season is taking its toll the team's record, the players are learning to play with the best and that they are capable of defeating the best. Fortunate for the team's future, but a bit of tough luck for current encouragement.

Irish lose their sixth straight

Michigan hands Irish another loss in 11-2 win

By MICHAEL DAY

An old fashioned slaughter. Perhaps that is the best way to describe Michigan’s 11-2 trouncing of the Notre Dame hockey team on Saturday evening at Ann Arbor.

In front of 7,427 fans at Yost Arena, the Wolverines dominated the Irish from start to finish on their way to handing Notre Dame their sixth consecutive loss on the year. The defeat dropped the ninth place Irish on their way to handing Michigan’s 11-2 explosion with the opening goal of the game to the Irish.

However, the Wolverines’ two early goals appeared to serve as a wakeup call for the Irish. The Notre Dame defense shutdown Michigan’s potent offense for the next 16 minutes before junior center Jamie Ling cut the Wolverine lead in half with a goal at the 11:08 mark of the first period.

Following a Michigan goal, senior right wing Jeff Hasselman received a pass from junior defenseman Gary Grubber and powered the puck past Wolverine goaltender Marty Turco to cut the deficit to 3-2.

That was all she wrote for the Irish, as Michigan closed the game with an incredible 8-0 run on their way to the 11-2 victory.

“They certainly came out ready to play tonight,” said head coach Ric Schafer. “Our inability to score goals makes it tough for us to win, especially when our defense and goal-tending struggle as it did tonight.”

The high powered Michigan offense received a pair of goals from Kevin Hilton, Ron Sacka, and Brendan Morrison, and Lukshin, Muckait, Matt Herr, Mike Legg, and Robb Gordon contributed one each in the winning effort.

In addition to Notre Dame’s problems in containing the Wolverine offense, the blowout resulted from the Irish offense’s inability to penetrate the Michigan defense following the first period.

However, Schafer remains confident that the team will turn it around next weekend when the team hosts Alaska-Fairbanks and Miami of Ohio.

“We are much better than our record shows,” said Schafer. “We just need to execute better on offense and be more consistent on the defensive end.”

The Notre Dame hockey team continues to lose as Michigan defeated them 11-2.

Panthers defeated, Lions next

Irish advance in NCAA tourney by defeating Pitt, Penn State next

By BETSY BAKER

Notre Dame's dreams of a volleyball national championship are still alive. Despite the resilient defensive stance of the Pitt Panthers yesterday, the Irish volleyball team survived the four-game match and walked away with a 15-9, 11-15, 15-13, 15-13 victory.

The Irish had to overcome many obstacles to obtain the win, namely the Pitt front line. As Irish head coach Debbie Brown expected, the Panthers' strength was in their blocking. Pitt blocked 21 Irish attempts, with 6-0 sophomore Melanie Gustafson contributing 2 solo blocks and 10 block assists.

In addition to the wall they put up at the net, the Panthers neutralized the strongest Irish asset, their outside attack, by returning many of their kill attempts and holding the Irish to a .128 hitting percentage.

"Our defense was strong," said Pitt captain Carrie Thornton. "But we couldn't kick it in at the end."

The Irish used depth and endurance to overcome the powerful Pitt performance. All-American outside hitter Christy Peters returned from an ankle injury to lead the Irish with 19 kills and 22 digs. Although Peters' statistics indicate no lack of recovery from her injury, she was still not one hundred percent.

"It was obvious Christy [Peters] was hampered and a little out of sync," said Pitt head coach Cindy Alvear. "But as the match went on, her finesse came out. That's something you don't lose with an injury."

Peters attitude was grateful and optimistic. "I felt pretty good," said Peters. "I was just really happy to be out there."

Along with Peters, the Irish team provided the necessary skills and stamina to complete the defeat of the Panthers. Freshman Angie Harris followed Peters with 11 kills and 18 digs. Sophomore outside hitter Jenny Birkner and freshman middle blocker Jaime Lee also had 9 kills each. Junior Shannon Tuttle set the entire match for the Irish, an exhausting feat in itself. Tuttle was also a force at the net for the Irish with five block assists.

As physically grueling as the match was, it was the mental edge that won it for the Irish. They resisted constant lead changes and Irish deficits, including a six-point 13-7 Pitt lead in game two, to come back and clinch the victory.

"This was the biggest see-saw match I've ever seen," said Alvear. "It's a tough match to lose when you're up."

Belief in their ability and support from the Irish fans also helped give the Irish team the mental edge. "Even when we were down, we knew we could come back," said Brown. "The crowd was great," said Peters.

"It contributed to our enjoyment of the match."

The Irish now look ahead to fifth ranked Penn State, as they head to the sweet sixteen Friday night in Lincoln, Nebraska. The match will be one of vengeance for the Irish. The Nittany Lions have knocked the Irish out of the tournament the last two years. "Especially for the seniors, this match is very important," said Peters. "We will be a completely different team."

Lamarr Justice sparked a rally that wasn't enough to win

By JASON KELLY

Association Sports Editor

Perhaps a lesson can be dredged from this letdown. Maybe the 90-76 loss to San Diego wasn't so much a regression as it was a rude return to reality.

If the Irish learned that they cannot rest on the success of one early-season upset, then Saturday's shellacking could ultimately have a positive effect.

Notre Dame (2-1) is not the same team it was a year ago, though it looked frightfully familiar during a feeble 15-point first half when San Diego opened a 31-point lead.

But it also is not exactly the team that upset Indians on Tuesday, particularly when it abandons the principles that built the victory.

"(San Diego) absolutely obliterated us," Irish coach John MacLeod said. "We had some success (against Indiana) and we got a little full of ourselves and decided we could go halfway. We paid dearly for it."

The 2-1 Toreros' raced to their remarkable halftime margin behind guard Doug Harris, who finished with a game-high 23 points. Sean Flannery had 17 and David Fizdale added 16.

Notre Dame helped dig its early hole with just 19 percent shooting in the first half (5-for-26 from the field), including 1-for-9 from 3-point range. Fourteen turnovers and just one assist added to the nostalgia. It looked like last year all over again.

"Notre Dame spent less than half of the intermission in their locker room, returning to the court after a quick, but apparently quite effective, meeting."

"We just talked about the absolute silliness—and that's the only way to describe it—of our first half play," MacLeod said of the brief halftime talk that ignited a second-half resurgence. "We had to dig in defensively and return to team play."

The Irish managed to revive some pride in the second half, remarkably chopping the lead one assist added to the nostalgia. It looked like last year all over again.

"We got a little full of ourselves and decided we could go halfway. We paid dearly for it."
