A True message: love empowers

By AMY SCHMIDT

"Alphonse—I love you!"

Have you heard anyone say those four words today? Probably not, because you have come into contact with Herb True, a professor in the College of Business who urges people to use humor to explore love.

True said that because most people consider themselves "pseudo-experts" in love, it has acquired a immoral reputation.

"Nobody can tell you how much you love," he said.

Disputing Rush Limbaugh's interpretation of love as "an emotion over which humans have little or no control," True described four different states of love upon which humans can choose to act.

The first of these states of love is "storge." True described storge as the kind of love for people that are not chosen per se, such as family members and classmates.

"Philia," or brotherly love, calls people to friendship. He linked friendship to love because "both enable people to share.

The third type of love is "eros," or romantic love, which comes with little or no warning. True said that eros is "caught and not taught," and should not be confused with attraction or infatuation.

The final type of love is "agape," which True noted as the most important and powerful.

Professor of Business Herb True explained the many sorts of love in a lecture last night.

He said that this type of love completes us and inspires us.

"Agape is concern for others equal in intensity to concern for ourselves," True said: "You can love others only as much as you can love yourself."

He said that "agape" is unconditional, and relies upon the supernatural and the spiritual. It is present everywhere, and should be seen as a gift from God.

He also described a barrier to any of these types of love, known as an "ego barrier," edging God out.

True concluded by telling the audience to use love to empower themselves and others.

"No matter what the question," True said, "love is the answer.”

Avoiding the question?

There has recently been much media attention, especially in the Notre Dame-focused press, on the pro-life movement.

Strangely, though, none of that attention has focused on the violence upon abortion facilities and their employees, and what if any pro-life groups are supportive of it.

The reason for this is that the pro-abortion movement has become desperate. As the practice of medicine improves, the evidence increasingly shows that a pre-born child is not abortion should be legal. Rather, all the evidence points to the fact that the pro-life movement is right.

They were very successful for a while, fooling many with their fancy terminology and arguments. But then the pro-life movement became more organized and active on the national level and helped focus people's attention on the violence upon abortion facilities and their employees, and what if any pro-life groups are supportive of it or helping.

FBI knew about New York terrorists

NEW YORK

The FBI was on the trail of three of the World Trade Center bombers for nearly four years before the deadly explosion in the office towers, the government said Tuesday.

In evidence presented at the trial of Sheikh Omar Abdel-Rahman and 10 others accused of weapons-related terrorism, the FBI also said it had bugged the Muslim cleric's phone a week before the blast.

The surprising testimony -- a day after a key defense witness switched sides -- raised new questions about why the FBI was unable to prevent the 1993 bombing, which killed six and injured hundreds.

Prosecutors say the defendants planned to blow up the United New York offices and the city's Holland and Lincoln tunnels and the George Washington Bridge.

The prosecution has been trying to show that the trade center bombing was part of an overall plot and give jurors a connection to something concrete, instead of plans that never made it off the drawing boards.

Tuesday's testimony revealed that by mid-1989 the FBI had already begun surveillance on the group it says was trying to force the United States into changing its Middle East policies.

States consider padding for crimes

When it comes to punishing scofflaws from graffiti artists to petty thieves, some lawmakers think the best idea is a good, old-fashioned spanking. Of several states that have considered the idea, Mississippi has gone the furthest. The state House adopted a bill Monday that would allow judges to order paddlings instead of prison sentences. The legislation does not spell out how, when or by whom the punishment would be inflicted. Opponents believe it is unconstitutionally cruel.

Hopkins drops suit against CEO

BALTIMORE

The corporation that runs Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore has issued a public apology and withdrew a $50 million lawsuit against a former executive it had accused of dishonesty and disloyalty. Johns Hopkins Health System Corp., a nonprofit corporation that runs the hospital and other medical facilities, had claimed in its lawsuit last spring that Barbara Hill, who ran its health maintenance organization, secretly used her position to negotiate the 1991 acquisition of Hopkins HMO to Preferred Insurance Co. of America. Hill later moved to Prudential, where she managed its HMO. The Hopkins corporation further claimed that Hill's actions caused the hospital to lose millions of dollars a year.
Panel opens debate on ordination of women

By ROB CAHILL
New Writer

"The Women in the Church, Was it a Battlefield?" panel discussion held Tuesday by the Committee on Notre Dame's Position on the Ordination of Women pointed to roles that women have played in the past in the Church. These roles can be a guide for the modern question of whether or not women should be ordained, since they were as important or more important than the roles that male contemporaries of these women played.

Mary Rose d'Angelo was the first speaker and her talk was titled "Women in the Beginnings." She mainly focused on Romans 16, written by Paul. She showed how in Romans 16:1-15 women were given the same titles as men. One woman, Phoebe, was called a deacon. Another woman, Julia, was called one of the most prominent among the apostles. D'Angelo demonstrated that at the very beginning of the Church, men and women were equal and Paul relied heavily on women to help him in his ministry.

The second speaker was Maria Smyth. Speaking on "Women in the Early Irish Church," she showed how women in Ireland played a major part in the conversion of the island along with St. Patrick during the fifth century. Smyth focused primarily on St. Bridget, who had the power of appointing which men would be ordained. There is even the possibility that Bridget herself was ordained Bishop of an Irish diocese by accident, she said.

Professor d'Angelo was one of four speakers who described the history of women in the Catholic Church in a lecture sponsored by the Committee on the Ordination of Women.

Biddick also commented on how the Church’s stance concerning AIDS is pertinent to the women in the Church debate. "AIDS goes to the heart of the conversation crisis. At best the Church’s dealing with AIDS has been ginger," she said. The speakers agreed, though, that the rich tradition of women involvement in the Church is a starting point for the modern day debate over whether or not women should be ordained.

Yesterday’s article on the student government debate misrepresented the ideas of two tickets.

The Montoya-Fischer ticket does not include taxi coupons in its platform. The Delaney-A llen ticket proposes an ATM debit card machine, rather than a Mod Quad ATM as previously reported. The Observer sincerely regrets the errors.
Feminism

ents are not even aware of what feminism is.

"The shock to me occurred when I was asking a woman what she believed to be a feminist and she replied, 'someone who wears pink.' At this point I realized that there are a significant number of people at Saint Mary's who are not even familiar with the term 'feminist,'" said Alexander.

Alexander and Ryan also focused on women's self-identities towards feminism. Out of the 36 women interviewed, only one agreed to being a fullledged feminist. Seventeen women agreed to being somewhat a feminist, but did not want to be associated with feminism due to the radicality of feminists. These women were also frightened of men's responses towards feminism.

"Many women feel that if they want to date a guy, they can't be feminists. For some reason, they think that feminists turns guys off," said Ryan.

Women who denied being feminists did so because they view feminists as lesbians and women who reject traditional family values. They see feminists as fanatical women who are very vocal and disruptive.

Alexander and Ryan concluded that the three basic factors that lead to negative images of feminism: familial factors, the campus environment, a presumed agenda of the feminism, and most signif-ificantly, bias in the mass media.

"Saint Mary's is identified by its students as immensely diff erent than other women's colleges because it is not radical.

"Most students label the campus of Saint Mary's as conservative not in a political sense, but in the sense that it is a heterosexual environment with students who would like to possess a traditional family with children in the future," Ryan said.

"If I don't see a feminist at Saint Mary's. Before I came to Saint Mary's last year, a friend warned me about the feminist environment that exists at a women's college. A year later, she's more feminist than I am, because she's at the Kalamazoo, which is very liberal," said Saint Mary's sophomore Cathy Roth.

The main factor Alexander and Ryan regard as contributing to negative attitudes towards feminism is the mass media, however.

"The mass media has supplied the American people with an extreme view of feminists as radicals. When I was interviewing these women, I was amazed at how many of them were using Rush Limbaugh's imagery. It's astonishing that Rush Limbaugh is an instrumental force in constructing feminism in the twenty-th century," Alexander said.

Alexander and Ryan will be presenting the results of their study of feminism at the Midwest Social Sciences
Conference this spring.

Sponsored activities seek support

RHA desires more recognition, plans 'big event'

By PEGGY LENCZEWSKI
News Writer

The members of Saint Mary's Residence Hall Association
(RHA) discussed last night the importance of increasing campus-wide support for activities sponsored by their organization.

"RHA sponsors a lot of events on campus, but doesn't get a lot of recognition because most students are not even aware of Notre Dame activities than what is going on on their own campus. That says a lot about Saint Mary's student awareness," said RHA member Margaret Gontier.

"The discussion was sparked by a request from SAB for a sigificant amount of money in order to attract the band Underwater People to campus.
Both RHA officers and members objected to contributing the amount requested because most students are more interested in Notre Dame activities than what is going on on their own campus." Ryan said.

"RHA will not be given the recognition that we want," Cherubini stated that she did not want RHA to continually be in the shadow of SAB.

RHA did agree to contribute part of the amount requested, but there was a general feeling of reluctance to foot the entire bill. RHA has been planning all year to sponsor a single campus-wide event that would receive a lot of publicity and would attract most of the student body. To donate the amount of money requested by SAB would make the as yet unnamed "big event" impos-se.

This decision prompted a discussion about RHA's difficulty in achieving the goals that were set at the beginning of the year.
According to Cherubini, "We want to increase the student body awareness of RHA (and its activities). No one is aware that RHA has a lot of clout with the administration and financial power."

"RHA Vice-President Kathy Pilcavage cited several reasons for the lack of awareness of RHA. "We're only a few years old, and there have been several different advisors over the past years. SAB and BOC also have cover boards and more funding.

Emanuela agreed, noting “To know and understand other cultures is in itself education.”

“American students have many advantages over students in less-developed countries. Not only are the facilities more advanced but when, for example, you discuss large companies in subjects like economics, they are a reality here. In Tanzania, we discuss companies like GM and Ford, but they are in America not in Tanzania,” said Emanuela.

Emanuela and Prediganda hope to continue their education in America, but they would both like to eventually return to Tanzania to work for the Tanzanian people. Prediganda will continue working for the Mama Clementina Foundation to aid the less fortunate villagers while Emanuela hopes to attend law school.

Through all their experiences abroad, the two sisters place things in perspective. “We do not regret that we were born in Kilima because the village serves as a source of strength,” Emanuela said. “We are grateful that the College was able to recognize a child from the village because it is usually only the children of influential ministers and administrators that are able to receive an American education.”

While they have been in America, Emanuela and Prediganda rely on several area families that host them during breaks even though the College offers campus housing to the sisters during vacation time.

Council quiet on GLND/SMC issue

By BRAD PRENDERGAST
Assistant News Editor

In the wake of the resolutions passed by the Campus Life Council on Monday night, Hall Presidents’ Council members remained silent last night on the issue regarding the University’s decision to expel the Gay and Lesbian of Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s from the University Counseling Center.

At its meeting, the CLC voted to recognize and support the efforts of GLND/SMC and to ask Patricia O’Hara, vice-president of Student Affairs, to attend the next meeting in order to explain in person the decision not to recognize GLND/SMC.

A third proposal, to condemn the University’s action to expel GLND/SMC from campus and call upon the University to recognize GLND/SMC as an integral part of the Notre Dame community deserving of all rights and privileges afforded other campus groups,” failed to receive the two-thirds majority necessary for passage. Rich Palermo, co-chairman of the HPC, read the three resolutions at the HPC meeting last night, but none of the HPC members responded to the proposals.

Ilary Bonenberger, the other co-chair of the council, said that she would prefer to defer a resolution regarding the GLND/SMC controversy until after she hears what O’Hara says at the CLC meeting next week.

“I can’t speak for other members of HPC, but I would like to wait until we see what happens at the CLC meeting before we make any motions,” she said. “The CLC has more influence than the HPC in stimulating a response from the administration, according to Bonenberger. “The CLC has more power than the HPC,” she said. “If something is passed by the CLC and O’Hara has seven days to respond.”

Both Bonenberger and Palermo also serve on the CLC, and share a vote between them on the CLC.

In other HPC news

• The decision made last week to allocate $500 to each dorm must be approved by the Senate Budget Committee before the funds can be disbursed, Palermo said. The committee meets tonight.

• Also, the possibility of placing HPC’s remaining money into a contingency fund must be approved by the Senate Budget Committee, Palermo said. Currently, the Council has $16,000 which have not yet been designated for use. By putting part of that amount into a contingency fund, the Council will be able to retain its claim to the money for next year.

Gingrich ethics under attack

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Newt Gingrich said this week he's been "investigated, scrutinized, smeared and attacked" by liberals who deets his conservative ideas.

They hate the idea that we're winning," a bristling Gingrich asserted.

Although he was responding to questions from reporters, Gingrich clearly was poised to strike back at his critics. He identified them as "tax and spend liberals" who were trying to put him through "Chinese water torture."

"Every other day somebody on the left launches a new attack," Gingrich said, contending he's been "sensitive to ethics issues for my entire career." His comments came as the House ethics committee prepared to meet — possibly this week — to decide how to proceed on complaints against him.

Gingrich defended his wife's job with a company seeking a free trade zone in Israel, his book deals, his assistance to a company in his district, and his featured appearance Tuesday night at a $50,000 per couple dinner to benefit National Empowerment Television — which carries his lectures.

Gingrich's broadside had no apparent effect on liberal Democrats, who have been making floor speeches every day to attack his ethics and conservative beliefs.

"This lavish dinner speaks volumes about what Republicans represent," said Rep. Rosa DeLauro, D-Conn., one of several lawmakers who make daily demands for an outside ethics counsel to investigate the giving of ethics counseling.

"They are dining with the elite at the same time Republicans are opposing a minimum wage increase for American workers. A full-time minimum wage worker would have to work five and three-quarter years to buy a seat at Mr. Gingrich's table."

$1.6 trillion budget ignites capitol debate

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

President Clinton's $1.6 trillion budget got a chilly response from Congress today with the Republicans now in control vowing to rewrite it from top to bottom to achieve greater deficit reduction.

As the administration defended its program before two key congressional committees, it was clear that major battles lie ahead over how much to grant the middle class in tax relief and how much to cut popular benefit programs such as Medicare.

Republicans and Democrats on the House and Senate budget committees spent time trip­ping at Clinton's budget and arguing over whether the government can afford to provide tax relief facing such enormous deficits.

"The president's budget is an abdication of leadership," Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, complained to Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin and Laura Tyson, head of the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

"He is submitting a budget that says, 'Let Congress lead, Let Congress make the tough choices,'" Grassley said.

But Rubin and Tyson defended the spending plan, saying it built on the progress Clinton achieved with his initial $505 billion deficit reduction program, which they noted was passed without a single Republican vote.

House Republicans continued to rail for a "Contract With America," which promises $200 billion in tax cuts, compared with Clinton's more modest $63 billion plan, plus a balanced budget by the year 2002, goal estimated to require $1.2 trillion in additional deficit cuts, compared with Clinton's proposed $144 billion.

Chechens speak of Russian brutality

MALGOBEK, Russia

At the end of December, he left his home in Siberia to try to rescue his aunt from the war in Chechnya.

Abdul-Vagap Chitayev, 41, director of a small construction company, never made it to his aunt’s place in Grozny. Instead, he was taken prisoner by Russian soldiers during their New Year’s Eve attack on the Chechen capital.

Now recovering in a hospital in Malgobek, 75 miles northwest of the Chechen capital, Chitayev is pale and exhausted. The Chechen’s legs had been stubbed, his ribs were broken, his lungs and kidneys injured — and he can’t walk.

“The soldiers told us they were trying to protect us from bombing and would soon let us go,” said Chitayev. Instead, he said he was kept in the basement of a furniture shop in Grozny for three weeks.

Random detentions and rough searches of Chechens by Russians at checkpoints occur daily, and Chitayev interviewed in different parts of the breakaway republic say they have been brutally interrogated at a detention center at the Russian army headquarters at Mozdok, about 70 miles northwest of Grozny.

“They said that they would kill me if they found out I spoke with journalists. Let them kill me. I would rather die and let people know about this horror,” Chitayev told The Associated Press.

The head of the surgery department at the Chechen hospital in Malgobek said several patients told him they had been abused by Russian soldiers in Mozdok.

“They are all very pale and exhausted, with serious wounds, psychic disorders. They are frightened, do not sleep and try in their sleep,” said Magomed Katsushadze.

Chitayev said a Russian army major stole more than $2,000 from him.

Then, a half-hour after his release on Jan. 23, he was arrested by troops wearing black masks, the trademark of the dreaded OMON, the special police force of the Interior Ministry.

Chechens say OMON forces, who often stand guard at checkpoints with regular soldiers, suddenly appear in copters or in armored vehicles and arrest people and take them to Mozdok.

The Interior Ministry acknowledged some Chechens have been beaten while in custody, but says any suspected incidents of serious abuse are checked.

“When there are complaints or suspicion of wrongdoing, a criminal investigation is ordered or the superiors are told to conduct their own,” said Alexei Petrenko, an Interior Ministry spokesman.
As I near the end of this academic year, I am continually reminded that, next year, I must venture forth into new surroundings. While I do not plan on using my Notre Dame experience to come back for law school. They continue to tell the members of the University's recent action was a step in the right direction. And the letter to the editor: I just mentioned, signed by over 70 people, stands as evidence that at least some people are willing to take a stand. The vote by the CSC regarding the University's recent action does likewise.

My experience at Notre Dame has been truly wonderful. People have accepted me and encouraged me to be myself, despite the fact that I do not conform to all societal expectations. Gays and lesbians on this campus also differ from the majority of the population, but unfortunately they have not had the same experience that I have had. I believe that this can change, because I feel that many of the members of our community can see fit to acknowledge the humanity of these people, whether or not we can condone this “lifestyle.” The gays and lesbians of the Notre Dame family are not asking much. They only want the basic privilege of meeting to discuss concerns which affect their daily lives. If you agree with me that they serve at least this much, please act on it. Make it known that you object to the administration’s treatment of these members of our family. Help to assure that this sector of the University community will leave Notre Dame feeling that his place has contributed to their development as persons, rather than demeaning them.

One of the many things which distinguishes me from my peers is the fact that I do not want to leave Notre Dame, I doubt that many people will become as attached to the place as I have. But all of us who spend time in this environment should be able to come away with it with positive feelings. If nothing else, we should be able to say that we were treated with respect and a basic level of human dignity. For whether or not we conform to the majority, I think we all deserve at least that much.

Kirsten Dunne, ND ’92, is a third-year law student.

Candidates present platforms

Editor's note: The platforms in this 3 page special section have been arranged in alphabetical order.

Jenny Allen

First and foremost, we want our administration to be the voice of the students. Our platform is based on ideas brought forth in discussion with students who hold different ideals for Notre Dame. At the same time we are realistic. We all know our platform may not bring all of the campus' problems or suggestions for improvement to David and Matt, part of the president's role is to be proactive with the student body. to research each organization's goals and find out what problems students have brought to their attention.

We don't pretend to have all of the solutions and will be happy to test the feasibility of any ideas which will be beneficial to campus groups regardless of their origin.

To this end we have researched several programs which will bring convenience to the daily lives and long term needs of Domers.

Matt Golish and Robert Brett

We have no vested interest in any ideas, only the ideas you vote for. If you like another ticket's ideas give us a call and tell us. The election on February 27th will contain all the ideas we receive from you. We will spend every available penny on the ideas that the student body chooses. Now you ask, exactly how much money are you talking about? Well, the money we have for student ideas is about $39527.86. And considering last year's budget of $70500, it's quite a chunk of change.

David Hungeling and Matthew Orsagh have done a great service by opening Student Government's door to you. Our job is to make you walk in and tell us what you think. With the cable referendum already on its way to becoming a reality, David and Matt have proven that you do not have to be a career politician to get things done in Student Government.

We would also like you to keep in mind that we are one of only two tickets that did not sign the letter to remove another ticket from the ballot. We want the students to choose the best possible ticket and we won't play politics to eliminate other candidates. Our goal is to represent you, not to use this as a springboard for a political career or a way to get into law school.

Our Student Housing Initiative of Tomorrow program will change the face of Notre Dame. The idea is going to allow you to live in a safe, friendly, off-campus community. We need neither University support nor substantial Student Government funds for this project. Although, everyone we have discussed it with seems more than willing to help. This new housing plan would significantly increase the quality of off-campus life and the social options for those of us on-campus.

We don't play politics. We will tell you what we think, not just what you want to hear. We will not skirt issues. Student Government needs to emphasize the student aspect more than the government. We will continue to take Student Government from the elite few, and make it more accessible to everyone.
The following platform combines tangible campus-wide improvements while creating a forum for students to voice their opinions and concerns about decisions which will directly affect them.

We have broken it down into four categories: 1) Resources; 2) Student Voice; 3) Fun; and 4) Safety.

Resources

Cable TV in each dorm room. ESPN, CNN, and a movie channel, among others. Long overdue, the Trustees Report on Cable illustrated that this was important to the students. If a majority of students respond positively to the referendum question about cable on the ballot, we will ensure that this realizes the cable TV is hooked up.

Mod Quad ATM - Both Society Rank and the Administration have expressed a sincere interest in installing a Mod ATM. The key remaining issue seems to be location. It could be placed on the wall of PW closest to Flanner, or next to the mail center or even behind Grace if the Administration was concerned about Mod Quad's natural beauty.

Student Voice

Forums - The forum on general relations held last semester was extremely successful in getting discussions about the student body. Students need to have a more consistent opportunity to address ongoing concerns, e.g. the recognition of homosexuals, etc.). The forums, open to students, faculty, and administrators will allow students to better understand how and where Student Government money is being spent.

Clarify roles of SUB and Athletics - SUB should be the organization responsible for entertainment. Yet Student Government has its own money for speakers, concerts, and other events. This overlap can easily be eliminated. We will also work to increase the Annual fund budget by 1/3, allowing SUB to decide how best to improve the annual spring festival.

Football Tickets - We would like to work with the Director of Ticketing, Bill Scholl, to follow through on strides made in the current administration to create a ticket exchange program similar to the one used this year for the Navy game. Any student would be able to turn in their ticket to the Athletic Department, plus $15 (the difference of the cost between a student ticket and a GA), and receive a GA for the same game. The Athletic Department is eager to pursue such a plan as a way to eliminate the cost of the tickets and allow students sneaking non-students into games on student tickets. Also, because of the stadium renovations, we are eager to have input about where the student section will be located once the expansion is complete.

Safety

Saferide program allows students to get around campus quickly and safely at night by providing a van staffed with Safety workers between the hours of 10 p.m. and 2 a.m. The Need a Lift program is both economical and dependable; allowing students to travel off campus through the use of discounted taxi coupons. The Day at the Office program and the Strategic Seminars are both opportunities for students to try something new. The Day at the Office program is a program which will give students access to the world working, while the Strategic Seminars allow students to participate in new activities and interact with other students on campus.

The Bargain Books proposal and the Grab-n-Go Detour were created to increase the quality of student life on campus. The Bargain Books program is a reaction to students' desire to bring back the Book Fair. We have modified the format of the project in order to avoid conflict with that and make it more convenient for student to resell their books. The Grab-n-Go Detour has been designed to help alleviate the traffic at South Dining Hall during lunch periods and will speed up the Grab-n-Go process.

We have made an effort to provide a platform to students which addresses their needs both on and off campus. We would like to note that while many of our programs are new, they require no significant expansion of student government.

The only program which will require the creation of a new committee and funding is the Day at the Office program. Therefore, we present you with this platform and offer you our commitment to serving you and your needs.
Throughout this school year we student seems to be looking for. They also want action which addressed other key areas. Students have voiced the need for improvements in not only social aspects of campus life, but also in the areas of academics, safety, and social service. The following ideas present reasonable suggestions towards improving life at Notre Dame for the entire student body. These ideas are not intended to be our only ones, but merely a starting point towards kicking off a great year. Should we be elected, the fun will start right when we get back to school. The First Annual Blowout Bash will be similar to AntoTotal. We plan to bring in a comedian, in major musical event. The fun will start right when we forced Finals. Some professors have said they do not find finals necessary, let's leave the decision up to the student body. Other serious issues include improving safety and relations between Notre Dame students and off campus life. By installing lights and telephones in the dark areas of campus, along with making a map detailing the Notre Dame "danger zones," our students can feel safer at their homes away from home. Also, a "Safe Week" will provide a free self-defense class and lessons on awareness. The Designated Driver program will allow students to pick up other students from weekend social events, while making money and helping them back to campus. Also, to help the South Bend community, a Blockfest this year will take the money you are charging for the breakfast you make to the most need. With the right combination of activities geared towards improving our campus social life while also maintaining our responsibility towards achieving our goals, we can make this the best year ever. We're in this for you—all of you. Let's have some fun and go ahead. Try it. You'll like it.

"You are aware of an invention called television? And on this invention there are shows. Well, before they became shows, they make what is called a pilot. And if the television producers like it, it becomes a show. If they don't like it, it becomes nothing."

This excerpt from a dialogue between Vincent Vega and Jules in the movie Pulp Fiction regards the audience of the plethora of shows that have been written for the small screen over the years and how few have actually made it to the television screen.

Those shows that do make it to the screen, however, often accumulate a following of faithful viewers who week-in-week-out religiously glue themselves to the tube, waiting with great anticipation to find out — what is Kramer's first name? Who murdered Laura Palmer? Will Shirley Partridge run off with Reuben Kincard? The answer, as always? Find out next Wednesday.

"What is Kramer's first name? And on this invention there are shows. Well, before they became shows, they make producers like glue themselves to the tube, waiting with great what's called a pilot. And if the television producers like it, it becomes a show. If they don't like it, it becomes nothing."

The good in the community was represented by Bo and Luke Duke. Aided with their souped-up 1969 Dodge Charger, the General Lee, Bo and Luke foil Boss Hogg's schemes, episode after episode. Also fighting corruption is the rest of the Duke clan, Uncle Jesse and Daisy. But after three years on the air, John Schneider and Tom Wopat (Bo and Luke) left the show over a dispute with Warner Brothers regarding income. In a scrumbling effort to salvage the hit show, the producers hired replacements, Vance and Coy Duke, Bo and Luke's cousins. The explanation for Bo and Luke's disappearance? They left Hazard to pursue a career on the Nascar circuit. Although Bo and Luke returned 18 episodes later, the show was cancelled in 1985.

Nineteen hundred eighty-three marked the debut of the another cult show, in which a special team of soldiers, imprisoned by the army for Vietnam war they did not commit, escape from prison and retreat to the Los Angeles underground. Here they become soldiers of fortune, helping those who can not turn to the police. They are The A-Team.

The A-Team (NBC, 1983-87), consists of Hanibal Smith, the leader, who "Loves it when a plan comes together," B.A. Baracus (Mr. T), the muscle behind the team, who upon every episode blurts out "I pity the fool..." Templeton Peck, the cutie of the team, known as "Face" for his honest-looking face, and H.M. "Howling Mad" Murdock, the team's pilot. Perhaps the most entertaining episode was when the team assembled a war machine, built from spare auto parts, mounted with machine guns to thwart the bad guys.

From David Lynch, director of Eraserhead and other surreal movies, came the short-lived murder mystery Twin Peaks, a cult show of the 90's. Twin Peaks, is a lazy northwestern town 5 miles from the Canadian border. This genuinely weird, and at times confusing show revolves around the murder of 17 year old Laura Palmer. Due to the mysterious nature of the murder, FBI agent Dale Cooper is called in to take over the case. Agent Cooper, who is an addicted coffee drinker and huge fan of cherry pie, is aided in his investigation by Twin Peak's sheriff Harry S. Truman. Together they tried to piece together what happened on the night of February 23, 1990, between 12 o'clock and 4 A.M.

The cult nature of Twin Peaks was largely due to the show's surreal nature; Agent Cooper dreams about a midget, known only as "The Arm," who dances to smokey nightclub jazz, and speaks like a record played in reverse.

Although the show was cancelled only one year later in 1991 due to plot confusion involving the constant use of flashbacks, the show still gained a faithful following. The Twin Peaks audience became so vast that episodes are now available for rental at most video stores. The producer of the show, David Lynch, used the captivated audience to his advantage as he quickly filmed the movie Fire Walk With Me, which tells the story of Laura Palmer before her murder.

The cult nature of these shows did not just happen. Their popularity increased because each program employed characters indicative of the times as well as sensational plots that continue to draw in the viewer even today. The majority of these shows are now in syndication. The exploits of our friends, Bo and Luke Duke, Shirley Partridge, not to mention Ponch and Jon, are watched on a daily basis my members of all generations.

And there are others too, of course, Battlestar Galactica, Laverne & Shirley, Happy Days, Buck Rodgers, The Great Space Coaster, Starsky and Hutch, 3-2-1 Contact, The Electric Company, The Incredible Hulk, Knight Rider, Alf, Punky Brewster, Little House on The Prairie, Voltron, Transformers, G.I. Joe, M*A*S*H, Taxi, The Jeffersons, Magnum P.I., Charlie's Angels, Dynasty, Dallas...

Rockets’ ‘Mad Max’ silent about altercation with fan

By BOB BAUM

Houston Rockets guard Vernon Maxwell left Portland with his teammates Tuesday as the team is responsible for the content of the news section each day. Maxwell said he was not going to talk about it. Witnesses said Maxwell ‘charged up a dozen rows into the Memorial Coliseum crowd during Monday night’s 120-82 loss to the Portland Trail Blazers and punched 35-year-old Steve George in the jaw. ‘George and his attorney said they plan to press charges and are considering a lawsuit. A police report filed by George at 1:36 a.m. Tuesday was forwarded to the Multnomah County district attorney’s office.

Robinson’s 20 power Bucks to win

MINNEAPOLIS

Isiah Rider scored a career-high 41 points and Minnesota used the highest-scoring first quarter in franchise history Tuesday night for a 109-100 victory over injury ravaged Golden State.

Rider, whose previous career-best of 35 points also came this season against his hometown Warriors, tied a team record with six 3-pointers as the Wolves snapped a five-game losing streak.

Rider made 15 of 23 shots for the third 40-point game in Minnesota’s five-year history. He also had nine assists and eight rebounds.

Without injured starters Chris Mullin and Ronny Seikaly and key backup Ricky Pierce, Golden State overcame a huge first-half deficit for the second game in a row.

But after going cold in the fourth quarter, they also lost for the second straight game and for the 30th time in 38 games since their last meeting with Minnesota - and the Nov. 17 trade that sent Chris Webber to Washington.

Chris Gatling matched a season-high with 25 points for Golden State, and Latrell Sprewell had 23.

Pathetic in their most recent losing streak, the Wolves had lost the previous five by an average of 25 points. But playing against the NBA’s worst defensive team, Rider scored 12 points as Minnesota took a 40-27 lead after the first quarter, breaking the team record of 39 points in the opening period.

Minnesota led 88-86 heading into the final period, and Rider and Christian Laettner scored all of Minnesota’s points during a 10-4 run that helped seal the victory.

Pacers 95, Hornets 92 OT

CHARLOTTE, N.C.

Haywoode Workman had the type of finish he’s always dreamed of. Dell Curry went through the kind of ending he’ll be trying to live down.

Workman sank four free throws in the final 11.8 seconds of overtime Tuesday night to give the Indiana Pacers a 95-92 victory and snap the Charlotte Hornets’ six-game winning streak. It was a fitting touch for Workman, who returned to his hometown.

“My whole day was terrible, awful,” Workman said, obviously referring to the first 20 minutes of the 21 he played. “It was just one of those days; you just wished it would go away. But then I got a second chance and I hit them.”

Following a timeout, Dell Curry took a long inbound pass and got off a jumper from just inside the 3-point line with 2.7 seconds to play. Curry, a 90 percent free-throw shooter, was fouled and hit the first shot, but his second one caromed off the front of the rim.

“It seems like I always miss the second one, too,” a distressed Curry said as reporters crowded around his locker.

Rookie Glenn Robinson scored 21 points and hit a key jumper as the Milwaukee Bucks overcame a slow start to beat the New York Knicks 95-87 Tuesday night.

Eric Murdock had 22 points and Vin Baker had 21 points and 13 rebounds for Milwaukee, who had lost five of its last six games. The Bucks beat the Knicks for the first time in eight games.

Patrick Ewing led New York, which dropped its second straight, with 23 points and 17 rebounds. John Starks also had 22 points and 13 rebounds. John Starks also had 22 points and 13 rebounds.

After trailing by 14 points in the first half, Milwaukee took a one-point lead into the fourth quarter. But the Bucks couldn’t shake the Knicks, and the game was tied six times before Robinson put Milwaukee ahead 90-87 on a 19-footer with 1:03 to go.

Baker blocked Starks’ jump shot, and Milwaukee retained possession until the Knicks were forced to foul with 24.9 seconds left. Murdock sank all four of his free throws down the stretch.

After a hot-shooting second quarter, both teams bogged down in the third. New York managed only 12 points and missed 6 of 13 field goal attempts. Milwaukee was even worse, shooting 6-for-22.

But the Bucks still managed to rally, taking their first lead of the game on a 3-pointer by Todd Day with 2:32 to go in the period. They were up 69-68 going into the final quarter.

After shooting 53 percent in that period, New York built its lead to 14, 35-21, early in the second quarter. But the Bucks starting hitting from the perimeter and outscored the Knicks 22-11, cutting their deficit to 48-46 on a 3-pointer by Baker with 2:43 left in the half.

All-Star Kemp pride ofSonics

By JIM COUR
Associated Press

SEATTLE

When Shawn Kemp was drafted by the Seattle SuperSonics six years ago without ever playing college basketball, even his own expectations were modest.

“Now he knew he could play. But without a college resume to base his ability on, he wasn’t sure how well he’d do in the NBA.” Kemp said. “Well, a lot of good things have happened to me and I’ve taken advantage of them.”

On Sunday in Phoenix, the Sonics’ six-foot-10 power forward will play in his third straight All-Star game, the second in a row as a starter.

“Kemp, in his sixth season, has become one of the league’s most exciting players. He brings crowds to their feet with thunderous dunks and intimidating blocks.” Sonics coach George Karl talked to Kemp this week after the team returned from a 4-0 Eastern road trip that included a victory over Orlando.

“I told him, ‘Shawn, I think your challenges are championing the Game of the Year at Madison Square Garden or you’re getting your own jersey hanging in the rafters much longer than you ever thought you would get in a position where the goals in their careers are Hall of Fame and championships.”

Kemp thinks he’s shooting his jump shot better than ever, but he’s not getting as many opportunities this season.

“I’ve concentrated a little bit more on the inside game because that’s where they need me,” Kemp said. “I’m standing and guarding some big guys down low,” he said. “The low post is pretty much mine. The jump for (Perkins) and Detlef and the rest of the guys.”

The Sonics have a lot of talent, but the player they count on most is Kemp. A member of Dream Team II last summer, Kemp has led the Sonics in scoring a dozen times this season and has in rebounding in 30 games.

He scored a career-high 42 points in a double-overtime victory over the Los Angeles Clippers on the road Dec. 10. He had a season-best 19 rebounds in Sacramento on Dec. 8.

It’s easy to expect too much from Kemp, Karl admitted.

Soccer and Volleyball announce class of ‘99

By MIKE NORBUT
Associate Sports Editor

In the wake of the Notre Dame football team’s haul of high school recruits last Wednesday, the Irish fall Olympic teams will have their own signing day today, with expectations just as high.

The men’s soccer team is hoping to sign five new players, only one of whom is from the Midwest. Benjamin Becklage, from St. Louis, Missouri, is the only Irish interest that is relatively close to home. The four others, Matt Johnson from Livermore, California, Oakville, Ontario’s Matt Mahoney, Greg Vehlo from Longwood, Florida and Mobile, Alabama’s Garick Short are expected to fill out the Irish card of men’s soccer recruits.

Notre Dame needs a big recruiting class this year, considering they are losing seven players to graduation, and offensive leader Tim Oates.

The women’s soccer team does not need a bumper crop of players this year, considering they are only losing starters Tiffany Thompson and Jodi Hartwig to graduation. They are hoping to sign, however, four top players, three of whom are from the west coast.

Margo Tufts from Seattle, Washington is expected to sign alongside California’s Monica Gerardo, who resides in Simi Valley and Shannon Boxx, who is from Torrence. They will probably be joined by Laura Vanderberg, the only product that is close to home. Vanderberg is from Kalamazoo, Michigan.

The Irish women’s volleyball team is hoping to sign one recruit today, Lindsay Treadwell, who hails from Austin, Texas. With the loss of All-American Christy Peters, the Irish have a need for a strong middle or outside hitter, but several scholarships will be set aside to offer to next year’s senior class, which has already shown promise.

The contributions made by African Americans to our national culture and that of the world can be seen wherever we look. The Notre Dame Bookstore is proud to once again offer a selection of books representing these contributions. We invite you to join us in sharing the experiences and inspirations of the African American people.

O’Brien has been especially impressive in the early going, as his two victories against the Spartans came on the heels of a stellar performance in the team’s first match, a 4-3 set back at the hands of the Minnesota Golden Gophers.

Notre Dame victories were also recorded by No. 4 Jason Pun, and No. 5 Steve Flanigan.

The doubles point was also taken by the Irish, as O’Brien and Simme teamed for a victory at No. 2.

With underclassmen playing, and winning, at the top four singles spots, the Irish inexperience is looking to be less of a factor than might have been expected.

When you make your Spring Break plans, remember these tips:

- Take your turn being a designated driver, get everyone where they are going safely.
- Respect the state’s laws.
- Don’t let your friends drive impaired. It’s one of the fastest ways to end a friendship.
- Drinking, drugs, and driving don’t mix.
- You don’t have to be “drunk” to be impaired - even one or two drinks affect your driving skills.
- DON’T ride with someone who is impaired.
- Stay out of dangerous situations involving alcohol.

Duquesne game important for Irish psyche
By TIM SHERMAN
Assistant Sports Editor

At the start of this season's campaign, followers of Notre Dame basketball probably did not even notice tonight's game against the Dukes of Duquesne on the schedule. Sandwiched between more glamorous showdowns with UCLA and Kentucky, this game was probably taken to be just another in the long line of no-name competitions that meant little to the Irish.

That was then. This is now. This is exactly the type of game the Irish must take if they are to secure the post-season berth that they so badly want.

Possibly more important is the psyche of the Irish. Tonight's contest is the perfect opportunity for Notre Dame to bounce back from Sunday's UCLA debacle. A 37-point loss can't be good for a team confidence. A game against Duquesne can be.

Other five, is 6-foot-3 sophomore guard Tom Pipkins. Pipkins leads the Dukes in scoring with 18.6 points per game, although he shouts just 37% from the floor. In addition, he hauls in nearly five rebounds every contest.

For the Irish, guard Keith Kurowski is not expected to return, although he is back in limited action. "We'll have him work on conditioning, then take it day-by-day," said MacLeod.
