What do you do when that bucket of rust that sits out on the curb just won't start? Would you rather walk to school from your off-campus location than risk driving?

Most college students may not have nice cars, and the ones they do have may be temperamental in bad weather. But whatever the make and model, if you leave your car parked on the street for more than three consecutive days, it just might not be there when you get back.

South Bend wants to inform Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students who reside off-campus that any vehicle parked on the street is required to be moved every 72 hours, or it is considered abandoned by Indiana state law and city ordinances.

If an officer on patrol observes a vehicle that appears to be impounded or a "snow bird," officers will issue an abandoned vehicle red tag, according to Captain Larry Blume, commander of the traffic bureau.

The red tag will require the car to be moved within three days of issuance, or the car will be towed. Blume added that this will allow officers to determine when the car is being driven or is an abandoned vehicle.

It will also allow snow plows to plow to the curbs when the cars are removed, he added.

"We wanted to make sure that students know how to dispose of their car, since most are not from the area," Blume said. "The last thing we want to do is tow anyone's car."

Blume said that he has been issued red tags whose cars will not start and that money for next year. From 1979 until 1984, Dunleavy continued to teach and also served as the Midwest Regional Representative for the Associates of the Sisters of the Holy Cross. Noticing a lack of diversity

I believe that people of all races and ethnic groups are equal intellectually and socially. This belief is easily accepted by those of all races and ethnic groups as well as by those who happen to be black. But as my friends who happened to be black. But as my peers.

President's putter gone AWOL

President Clinton is going into probably his biggest golf game of his life without his favorite putter, Clinton, scheduled to tee off in the Bob Hope Classic on Wednesday. "I've explored the extent to which having a black student amongst us would have limited our discussion about diversity; to never seek out this precious source of information and support that could have been available to us," Clinton lamented. "It's that one-stroke wonder miniature golf course." That's not the only reason Clinton is a little anxious about the game at Indian Wells Country Club near Palm Springs. He's playing in a pretty high-powered golf tournament, and he says he hasn't had much practice lately. Clinton promises to partner with President Ford and Bush, and defending tournament champion Scott Hoch.

I am shocked to learn my professor had explored the racial and ethnic diversity among students who don't have the cultural background necessary for them here. We can't wait any longer, we must send off to the "real world" of the Notre Dame family. Reach out to those students who aren't alumni.

Health Fair at Saint Mary's this afternoon

By CHRISTINA TEGSON

Twenty-three booths from local businesses, hospitals, and organizations will take part in a Women's Health Fair designed to provide information on the physical, social, and emotional aspects of women's health in the LeMans lobby this Saturday.

Representatives from the various organizations will be answering questions and distributing brochures, coupons, and free samples to those who attend.

"It's a great opportunity for women to understand health issues," said SLWC President Katie Clancy. "Self-defense and breast cancer are among the subjects that will be discussed to promote a healthy lifestyle."

Clancy and senior Cassandra Garrison, Woman's Health Fair coordinator of the fair. They are enthusiastic, and hope that women will take advantage of the event.

"What is the goal of the fair? It is to inform women about the importance of health in their lives," said Garrison.

The fair is open to everyone in the community. All women from Saint Mary's, Notre Dame, and Holy Cross, are urged to attend, according to Clancy. The event is being sponsored by SLWC, the Wellness Center, and Board of Governors at Saint Mary's.
the first volume of the College yearbook published in 1926; and the first Saint Mary’s Courrier, the College Alumni magazine, written in 1927. Each piece of Saint Mary’s history not only offers insight to the events of the College, but reminds researchers of the changes in American history as well.

Several yearbooks were not printed during the Second World War because students were encouraged to conserve paper for the war effort,” Dunleavy said.

But it is the history of Saint Mary’s that Sister Rosaleen focuses on in the Archives Department. The pieces of memorabilia that are intricate­ly studied, sorted and filed by Sister Rosaleen and her student aides compile a college history that is steeped in both history and change.

Perhaps the best example of the detailed organization of records is the Saint Mary’s Narrative which is compiled and written by Sister Rosaleen herself. All articles or press releases concerning Saint Mary’s are inserted in this book that is similar to a college diary. The past year at Saint Mary’s has allowed students, faculty and alumni to better understand and appreciate the meaning of “honoring tradition and pioneering change” at a women’s college in the 1990’s,” Dunleavy said.

“Although the Sesquicentennial year has passed, the Archives Department will remain a place where people can go to learn about the past, present and future of Saint Mary’s College,” she continued.

that. We have all become friends,” Paige said. “But that doesn’t mean we’re not going to talk to any one else based on their skin color.”

Paige further emphasized that it is very difficult to be a minority in a situation in which most of her peers cannot relate to her culture. “A big source of support does lie within being with other African-Americans who do share your culture.”

This need for a support group, however, stems from the absence of awareness about African-American culture on campus; this lack of awareness has led to an unintentional but prevalent form of racism.

“Most girls, through no fault of their own, come from very conservative families and do not know how to interact with people of other cultures,” Paige said.

Several white members of the audience related their initial experiences in which they realized that there were fundamental similarities between themselves and African-American women.

Differences were also recognized.

One member of the audience told about the first time she had touched an African-American woman’s hair. “I realized that her hair was different from mine, that she had a different texture than me, and I had simply never thought about it before,” she said.

Another member of the audience commented that the production of the play “was the first time I’ve felt that I’m actually in a diverse college atmosphere. I mean, you come to Saint Mary’s and you meet yourself all over again.”

Paige was pleased with the enthusiastic reaction of the audience following the play because it seemed to indicate that at least a sizable portion of the Saint Mary’s student body is willing to address the issue of racial relations. Paige sees this as a step to eliminating the ignorance that often leads to inadvertent incidents which are, in effect, a form of racism.

Plane crash deadly for Canyon tourists

Company has fatal track record since 1980

By EUN-KYUNG KIM

TUSAYAN, Ariz. — The company whose plane crashed south of the Grand Canyon, killing eight, had four fatal crashes and 23 deaths since 1980, a federal official said Tuesday.

A twin-engine plane operated by Las Vegas Airlines plunged into the pine woods 2 1/2 miles northeast of here Monday, killing seven Taiwanese and a pilot. The only survivors, a woman and a teenage girl, were in critical condition.

A half-dozen deputies picked through mud, snow and scraps of metal in and around the broken fuselage Tuesday to prepare the dead for autopsies, lifting bodies on black tarps in the freezing weather so bad that the FAA's national office found the operation "marked" absence of pilot error, and pattern of problems at the airline's Las Vegas offices refused several requests for comment. The company issued a statement listing the names of the passengers and saying it was assisting in the investigation. O'Donnell called the airline's safety record "not particularly commendable." Comparable statistics about its safety records of other tour airlines weren't immediately available from the NTSB.

It was the fourth fatal crash of a Las Vegas Airlines flight since the company was founded in 1980, O'Donnell said. The worst was in 1983, when a plane crashed into a wall of the Grand Canyon, killing nine people.

The three earlier crashes involved pilot error, and investigators didn't find a pattern of problems at the airline, he said. The NTSB called for a full investigation of the airline following an accident Dec. 10, 1991, in which a Las Vegas Airlines plane crashed into a mountain near the Arizona-Nevada state line, killing one passenger and the pilot.

The NTSB also criticized the FAA for what it called a "marked absence of oversight" of tour operations in Las Vegas following that crash. An investigation by the FAA's national office and the office was performing up to standards, O'Donnell said.

The crash was at least the 12th fatal aircraft accident at or around the park since 1980, and brought the death toll to 95 for that period.

The airspace over the canyon is tightly regulated because of terror threats against "symbols of American capitalism." The crackdown comes as the 10th anniversary of the Feb. 26, 1993, World Trade Center bombing nears and is the midst of the trial of 11 Muslim extremists accused of plotting to wage a war of urban terrorism in the New York. Meanwhile, the federal government listed 172 people "who may be alleged as co-conspirators" in the trial of Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman and his followers. The list includes the Sudanese Mission to the United Nations.

Near the federal courthouse where the trial is underway, a small army of plainclothes officers started patrolling Wall Street in recent days, increased security sources said. Uniformed officers have been posted around-the-clock at the New York and American stock exchanges.

"We're seeing in the protection of places that, based on our intelligence, are known targets, places certain groups consider symbols of American capitalism," said one source speaking on condition of anonymity.

Mayor Rudolph Giuliani: "Every single precaution is being taken." The sources refused to say who made the threats, but Wall Street security sources said security mushrooms Feb. 2 as the alleged mastermind behind the planned bombings and assassinations issued cryptic warnings while negotiating a plea bargain.

Siddig Ibrahim Siddig Ali pleaded guilty in April, telling the judge he wanted to tell prosecutors about "a few things that are happening in the city right now," said Michael O'Connor, head of security for a downtown business improvement district.

On Wall Street Tuesday, police stopped delivery trucks to check bags before letting them through to the back of the New York Stock Exchange, not a usual practice.

Baricades had been placed to prevent vehicles from parking in front of the exchange. Exchange workers said none of their bags are being checked, and visitors were being restricted.

"People are scared," said Milton Torres, who works in the NYSE building.

He spoke with John DiTringo, who was ordered to move his Italian food stand away from the front entrance of the building on Feb. 3.

Tuesday's session of the trial of Abdel-Rahman and his co-defendants was canceled because one defendant was ill.

Changing opinions, tradition

Dear Editor:

Under normal circumstances, after a person graduates, his or her modes of thinking are set and he or she will in general be less receptive to opinions or beliefs previously unencountered. In the case of Notre Dame, most students who graduate have next to no exposure to the wide variety of belief systems that differ from those of white middle-class Catholic America.

From day one, students have expressed concern about this lack of diversity in thought, belief, and action, yet none of them proposed or pursued a solution to the crisis. In the light of the rapidly diversifying world, it is likely that few of our graduates will function well in the secular environment into which they are about to enter.

We are not about to preach to them, students who graduate will have next to no exposure to the wide variety of belief systems that differ from those of white middle-class Catholic America.

Open forum which will allow those who recognize the need for diversity and freedom of thought to openly express their differences without fear of retribution. Our fundamental goals for this forum are to preserve and encourage freedom of speech, freedom of thought, and tolerance for the benefit of the Notre Dame community and our generation as a whole. We hope to increase exposure and sensitivity to beliefs which are not predominant at the university. ST. ED’S SIX’ save day from disaster

Dear Editor:

On Wednesday, February 8, I arrived on campus at 6:30 am and returned to my car at 6:30 pm to find it had been buried past the wheels. I had snow packed tight from the snowplows.

Luckily, I had parked facing the fence in lot D2, or all four sides of the car would have been buried. As I walked around the car in amazement, six great guys from St. Ed’s offered their help.

Without aid of a shovel, and some using their bare hands, they dug the snow past the cars and the car out of the mess. It sounds easier than it was, and it took all six of them working minutes before the car was able to be driven. I didn’t get all their names, but they were led by a Pre-Med/Theology major named Ben; to all of you, thanks. I wouldn’t have been able to manage it on my own. You’ve renewed my faith in the kindness of strangers and deserve kudos from your Rector and whoever else hears of this. Once again, thanks to the “St. Ed’s Six!”

Moral elite imposes its sacred opinions

Dear Editor:

As usual, the pro-life contingent has backpedalled from the transgressions of its comrades and has ascended the moral plateau from which it now stands. Unable to justify the radical actions of their peers, they shout out righteous voices that we have sired. They ask us if we think abortion is wrong, yet they answer the question for us, labeling us as “pro-abortion.” After all, the morally elite are entitled to do this, regardless of whether or not we think it is wrong.

It’s all about imposing your sacred views on others, exemplified in full by the aforementioned “sidewalk counseling.” Sometimes, this “counseling” entails no more than threats of bodily harm and picturesque descriptions of hell. Numerous women have been followed and stalked after coming home from clinics, and teenagers’ parents are often called to alert them of their daughters’ sins. Obviously, they feel they must do all they can to save lives.

So, I answer your question. Yes, I think abortion is wrong; however, it is not my choice to make nor is it my duty to persecute others for that choice. It is a decision that must be weighed with every ounce of one’s soul. Choice is not a word dreamed up in the last year to justify abortion, it is the essence of one of our nation’s laws.

ND policies suppress freedom

Dear Editor,

The policies of this University with regard to the recognition of student organizations is unjust and discriminatory and it should be abolished.

Recent developments in the twenty-year struggle of gay and lesbian student organizations to meet and organize and meet on campus do not suggest that University officials should “bow out.” Student organizations should be registered and funded by students.

As I have spoken with various alumni of the University and others who have examined the history of student regulations at this University, it is apparent that the process of “recognition” itself was and is precisely to exclude groups such as “Gays and Lesbians at Notre Dame” from the use of campus facilities. Yet, it has come to be used by campus officials to conveniently suppress the 1st and 5th amendment rights of students to free-expression and free-assembly for peaceable ends. At few other universities, it is apparent that rights to bureacrats as they have been permitted.

Student organizations should not need and should not request the official stamp of approval from University officials. Student funds should not be disbursed by University accountants. These are the proper roles of our student government agencies: the Student Government and the Graduate Student Union.

A safe, clean and orderly campus is an environment that students, faculty and staff share. That interest demands that student organizations be run above ground, using acceptable accounting practices, with decent regard for the security and cleanliness of University facilities. This legitimate interest of the University community does not demand that unpopular views or styles of life-even non-Catholic views-be systematically oppressed.

Nothing prevents University officials from turning current policies against any other student organization they may not like. This campus witnessed similar events in 1991 when a group of minority students organized and occupied the Registrar’s office to speed along the recognition of their organization. Students United for Respect (SURF).

This spring I encourage Student Government and the Graduate Student Union to develop and implement their own procedures for the registration and funding of student organizations. And I encourage every other student organization to stand in solidarity with GLND/SMC this spring and to refuse the University’s “official recognition.” You have nothing to lose except your chains.

Deny support, deny education

Dear Editor:

I am a student at Bucknell University in Lewisburg, PA and I just received a message from activists here at the university that campus space at your university has been denied to the Gay/Lesbian/Bisexual support organization at Notre Dame. I am writing to show the support of students around the country for such organizations.

I find it unbelievable that something like this can happen in 1995. Then again, maybe it isn’t so unbelievable. I find such action reprehensible. How can an institution dedicated to education deny its students space to pursue activities that are fully in line with that goal?

Further, as an institution that is supposed to be involved in Christian faith development, a faith that challenges its believers to love others, such action is absolutely contradictory. What have these members of your community done to deserve this banishment?

Liberal education is based on the premise that diversity is essential to a true understanding of humanity. The denial of a space at your university for this group can only have a deteriorating effect on this premise. And yes, quite frankly, it is institutionalized discrimination.

I hope your publication serves as a voice in this debate. This is definitely a disturbing development. I plan on forwarding this letter and the information I have to the administration at your university and to friends and family with ties to Notre Dame. I also hope to get this into the campus news section of our university publication.

Exclusion refutes University mission

Acceptance based on behavior

Dear Editor:

GLND/SMC’s courageous struggle for recognition by the University has inspired me to begin a similar crusade. I am starting the PSFND/SSC (Prominential Sex Practitioners of Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s).

Of course, the Catholic Church considers sex outside of marriage to be a grievous sin, and since Notre Dame purports to be a Catholic university, premarital sex is a violation of University policy. Nevertheless, there are plenty of Notre Dame students who engage in such behavior who undoubtedly feel stigmatized by the University’s proscriptive stance. They would benefit from a support group on campus.

As GLND/SMC has so eloquently pointed out, the University’s mission is to accept and support its students whatever their lifestyles may be, not trumpet the dogma and values of the Church.

Therefore, I call on the University to recognize PSFND/SSC as an integral part of the Notre Dame community. The University should honor all rights and privileges afforded other campus groups. I also call on those who support University’s policies to reconsider why their campaign does not have a logical extension of their concerns, and together we can make Notre Dame a truly inclusive community.

Action ‘appalling’

Dear Editor:

As Community Service Coordinator and openly gay member of the Department of Student Affairs at the University of Vermont, I am appalled at the blatantly discriminatory decision made on the part of University of Notre Dame against its own lesbian/gay/bisexual students (regarding use of school facilities for the gay/lesbian community at the homophobe institution of Notre Dame. Homophobia creates tarnished reputation

Dear Editor:

As a straight man working on the UW-Madison campus and in the Madison community to end violence, I abhor the nearsightedness with which the administration of a university of such high standing and strong reputation should choose to so blatantly discriminate. Students pay tuition, in doing so they are providing a university with its very lifeblood-the funds with which to maintain proper facilities in which an atmosphere of honest, fearless examination of human conditions can be pursued.

Notre Dame has denied its students of both the members of the LGB community are denied access to the very facilities where they are paying and the campus as a whole is sent running for the shadows, shrouded in denial and shame. How can a faculty that turns its back to a portion of the student body because of their own selfishness and homophobia ever be expected to promote an atmosphere where learning can truly take place.

Education is the opening of the mind to other possibilities, the releasing of the soul from concerns of its own, limited ego, to accepting the variety of all things. Notre Dame has a strident over it, and only a reversal of the ban against LG will GI it.

Synchronized Swimming makes a splash

By BEVIN KOVALIK

Synchronized Swimming makes a splash as it brings a new perspective to the world of athletic competition. This sport, which combines elements of ballet, gymnastics, and acrobatics, requires a level of precision and coordination that is truly remarkable. "It is a very artistic combination of ballet and gymnastics in the water," said Megan Keenan, president of the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's synchronized swimming club.

"Synchronized swimming is the ideal low-budget sport because the club has already invested in the necessary equipment," Keenan added. "Swimmers will be competing in front of a fully recognized varsity sport, according to Keenan. Synchronized swimming is a sport that has many practices and lots of hard work, according to Keenan."

The club will be giving a free water show at Rolfs Pool to reveal the abundance of talent and give people a taste of synchronized swimming, a sport which a lot of people do not even know exists here. "After many practices and lots of hard work, this will be a great way to publicize a growing sport and really make an impression on people," Szarek said. "It is beautiful and fun to watch!"

Anyone who has perseverance and determination can do it," Szarek added.

Sharon Olds: Frank and Intimate

Acclaimed poet to share her voice at Sophomore Literary Festival

By SCOTT EDEN

Sharon Olds, a poet who has already made a significant impact on American literature, will be sharing her voice at the Sophomore Literary Festival. Her work, which often explores themes of family, identity, and personal experience, has earned her numerous awards and critical acclaim.

Olds, who has been described as "a woman poet writing from a woman's perspective," is known for her frank and intimate poetry. Her poems often reveal the complexity of human experience, and they have resonated with readers around the world.

"Sharon Olds, who has been described as 'a woman poet writing from a woman's perspective,' is known for her frank and intimate poetry. Her poems often reveal the complexity of human experience, and they have resonated with readers around the world.

Olds's latest collection, 'Suffrage,' explores the experiences of childbirth and the challenges of early motherhood. The book is a powerful meditation on the realities of pregnancy and the joys and pains of parenthood.

The Sophomore Literary Festival is a great opportunity to hear Olds speak about her work and to see her poetry in action. It's a chance to experience the raw power and beauty of her words firsthand.

The Huskies handle kayaks, 91-85

LANDOVER, Md. - Connecticut won its first game as a No. 1 team and also schools with a 91-85 victory over Georgetown on Tuesday night.

The Huskies (20-1, 13-0 Big East) took over the top spot in the country on Monday and their first game was in the same area where Massachusetts and North Carolina had lost as No. 1 teams within the last 10 days, to George Washington and Maryland, respectively.

Georgetown's Coach John Thompson II gave quite an effort in trying to stretch the streak, but Connecticut's pressure defense and versatile offense proved too much for the Hoyas, who lost their fourth straight game.

The win was the 18th consecutive Big East regular season victory for the Hoyas, who have five games left in an attempt to become the first league team to go unbeaten. The first time Georgetown had ever lost two straight league games at USAir Arena where it has been playing since the 1981-82 season.

The Huskies started the second half with a 17-5 run for a 50-42 lead with 17 to play. They kept the lead behind an acrobatic performance from freshman guard Allen Iverson and a solid career-high effort from freshman forward Bobby Hurley.

The Huskies, however, turned up the pressure near midcourt and the plan to have the big men bring the ball upcourt against it started to unravel. It also helped Connecticut that Ray Allen's leading scorer, started to go.

Top ranked UConn celebrates its first victory as number one. Kevin Ollie (12) scored 21 for Jim Calhoun's Huskies.
Minutemen picked off by Colonials, 80-78

By JIMMY GOLEN

Alexander Koul and Nimbo Hammons combined for 34 points before fouling out and leaving their George Washington teammates to protect an 80-78 victory over No. 5 Massachusetts.

The Colonials also beat UMass on Feb. 4 to end the Minutemen’s 16-game winning streak and knock them out of the No. 1 ranking. But instead of revenge, UMass got its first loss on campus in 42 games — dating back to a Jan. 8, 1992 loss to West Virginia — and its first loss ever at the Mullins Center.

Kwame Evans scored 20 points, Koul had 18 and Hammons had 16 for George Washington (16-9, 9-4 Atlantic 10).

Lou Hoe had 22 points and 12 rebounds and Michael Williams had 19 points for the Minutemen (18-3, 9-2).

George Washington led almost the entire game and opened a 14-point lead in the second half before UMass began chipping away.

The Colonials had a 77-67 lead with 49 seconds to go before Tyrone Weeks’ put-back cut the deficit to single digits. Antoine Hart hit one of two free throws for George Washington, then Williams’ basket made it 78-71.

Edgar Padilla and Hart each hit two free throws before Padilla’s dunk made it 80-76. UMass fouled Hart again, and he missed both shots.

Weeks’ tip-in made it 80-78, but with only 0.1 seconds left on the clock, and the Colonials only had to inbound the ball to become the first Atlantic 10 team to sweep UMass since 1992.

Koul fouled out after 18 points with 2:20 left and the Colonials leading 71-63. Dana Dingle hit both free throws to cut the lead to six, but the Minutemen couldn’t get any closer until the final seconds.

A brief shoving match interrupted the game with 10:57 to go and Hoe on the floor with what appeared to be leg cramps. The officials cleared up the fracas and assessed Donta Bright and Evans technical fouls.

Hoe left the court but returned a minute later to key a 10-0 Massachusetts run that cut the lead from 14 points to four, 57-53 with 7:23 left. He scored his first time down, then threw a baseball pass to set up Padilla’s dunk that made it 57-47.

Williams hit two free throws to cut it to eight and added a 3-pointer that brought UMass within 57-52 with 8:52 left. Hoe made one of two free throws before Koul got a tip-in for the Colonials’ first basket in more than three minutes.

LEXINGTON, Ky.
Mississippi State finally beat the Wildcats of Kentucky in raucous Rupp Arena.

Marcus Grant scored a career-high 23 points as the No. 23 Bulldogs scored a 76-71 upset Tuesday night, defeating No. 4 Kentucky for the first time in 17 games in the building.

"This is the biggest win of my career," said Grant, a senior forward who made 6 of 8 3-pointers and had seven assists. "I've beaten Arkansas three times. It doesn't compare."

Mississippi State (16-5, 8-3 Southeastern Conference) also regated its first victory over Kentucky in Lexington since a 77-72 overtime win in 1967. Kentucky (17-4, 9-2) had won 12 straight in Rupp Arena, including 10 this season.

"This is very special," Mississippi State coach Richard Williams said. "I think after we have had some time to think about this, we'll really understand what a great win it was."

Mississippi State beat Kentucky at its own game — a tenacious defense that forced the Wildcats to shoot 36 percent from the field, including 26 percent (9 of 34) from 3-point range.

"We played the zone because we had to attack their pressure with a small lineup," Williams said. "You take a gamble with the zone.

Alan Henderson scored 28 points and had 11 rebounds as Indiana beat Ohio State 69-52 Tuesday night for coach Bob Knight's 500th career Big Ten victory.

Brian Evans added 14 points and Michael Hermon ran for the Hoosiers, 15-9 overall and 7-5 in the Big Ten. Indiana won its second game in a row for the first time in over a month. The Hoosiers had alternated wins and losses in their nine previous games.

In his 24th season at Indiana, Knight improved to 300-114 in Big Ten games. Tony Watson scored 19 points and Riecy Dudley had 12 points and 10 rebounds for Ohio State, 5-17 overall and 1-11 in the conference. The Buckeyes have lost 10 of its last 11 and 14 of the last 17.

The Hoosiers, who matched their total of last year with just their third road win, stretched a two-point margin at the half with a 10-2 run at the outset of the second half.

The first two trips down, Indiana posted up guards Hermon and Steve Hart and each hit baskets inside. Then Charlie Miller scored his first points of the game on a 3-pointer.

After Ohio State broke through at the 16:57 mark on a baseline jumper by Watson, Hermon hit a 3-pointer to push the lead to 37-27.

The Buckeyes scored the next three points before Watson picked up his fourth foul. Indiana then reeled off seven of the next nine points — Hermon, Villanova's Chuck Kornegay scored six of his 14 points in overtime, including a reverse layup with 8.7 seconds left that gave No. 15 Villanova an 89-87 Big East victory over No. 11 Syracuse Tuesday evening.

Kornegay missed a final shot and Syracuse's Michael Lloyd drove the length of the floor as the final seconds ticked off, but his shot was blocked by Jason Lawson as time expired.

Kornegay got the rebound after Lawrence Moten's missed shot and then scored on a tip-in at the other end of the floor to give the Wildcats an 87-85 lead with 1:17 remaining in overtime.

Moten tried another 3-pointer and missed, but came up with the rebound and drove the lane for a basket to tie it with 34.9 seconds left.

Moten finished with a career-high 36 points for the Orangemen and became the school's career scoring leader with 2,177 points, 34 more than Derrick Coleman.

The Wildcats scored 10 points in the final 2:52 of regulation to tie the game at 80.

Lloyd missed a driving layup as regulation ended.

Kerry Kittles, the Big East's No. 5 scorer, and Jason Lawson each had 20 points for Villanova and Eric Eberz had 17.

Villanova (18-5, 11-2) is undefeated since losing to Syracuse (17-5, 10-3) on Jan. 9 in the Carrier Dome.

Syracuse took its first lead at 61-60 after Todd Burgan's steal and pass to Moten for a layup.

Moten's free throw with 5:32 left capped a 16-6 run that vaulted Syracuse into a 73-66 lead.

The Wildcats closed to 78-74 on Alvin Williams' steal and a layup with 2:29 left, and cut it to two on Lawson's two free throws with 1:22 to play.

Eisler is not the lone reason for Notre Dame's current two game conference winning streak. In the span of three months, Lorenz has made the transition from inconsistent front liner to up and coming superstar.
“Terry Lorenz has worked hard from day one,” said Schafer. “He finally seems to be getting his way to being mentioned in the same breath as Michigan hockey careers at Notre Dame.
“Defensively, I've been doing the same thing all year, and I've gotten some lucky breaks on the offensive end,” said Lorenz. “But our recent success has been a total team effort.”
Lorenz seems to be well on his way to being mentioned in the same breath as Michigan State's Anson Carter and Michigan's Brendan Morrison. At this point, the only hole in his game may be his often inconsistent intensity. He sat out Saturday's game after receiving a one game suspension for his role in Friday night's bench clearing brawl.
“I appreciate that he is willing to protect his teammates, but he is a player that we can't afford to lose,” said Schafer. “He is becoming a team leader, and I think he will have an even bigger impact in the future.”
Despite the great improvement that each player has made over the course of the season, both Eisler and Lorenz have set lofty goals for their offensive end.
“Individually, I'd like to be a little more consistent offensively and remain steady at the defensive end,” said Lorenz. “As a team, we hope to make the top six (in the CCHA) next year.”
Eisler adds, “I look forward to upsetting one of the top teams, like Michigan or Michigan State. I would also love the opportunity to play in the NCAA tournament.”
Eisler and Lorenz are quickly becoming the foundation of a bright future for Notre Dame hockey. Indeed, the sky is the limit.

Between the pipes, freshman Matt Eisler has provided hope for the Notre Dame hockey team's future.

Early in the season, both Eisler and Lorenz were expected to make their first career starts in their places.
Miller may be the spark MacLeod is looking for. Another possible change the Irish could make to shake things would be a starting assignment, to Matt Gotsch.
Freshman Pat Gerrity leads the Irish in scoring with 13 points per game and seniors Lamarr Justice and Jason Williams average about eight each.
Keith Kurowski averaged about 10 points per game before a heart problem sidelined him for more than two weeks. He saw limited action Sunday against Kentucky and his minutes will likely continue to mount in future games as his conditioning returns to normal.
Notre Dame still appears destined for an NIT bid, though it likely will have to win at least two of its remaining four games to secure that spot. Fordham in New York and Marquette and Loyola at home will complete the Irish schedule.

Irish seek revenge on bedeviling Bulldogs

By JASON KELLY
Associate Sports Editor

Butler has bedeviled Notre Dame more than any other opponent during coach John MacLeod’s tenure. In the last four years, the Irish have beaten UCLA twice, North Carolina, Missouri and Indiana among other highly-regarded opponents. But, in that same span, they have never beaten Butler.

Last season, Notre Dame lost to Butler 67-57 at home after winning back-to-back games against UCLA and Georgia.

It is a drastically different scenario this season with the Irish reeling from two of the worst defeats in their history in their last three games. But there will be a few familiar faces.

Like Travis Trice, Butler’s leading eligible scorer who averages 11.7 points per game, the Irish will have no trouble recognizing Trice, who victimized them last year with 16 points off the bench in the Bulldog’s victory.

Junior Chris Miskel (11.2 ppg) came off the bench to score 16 in a 67-57 Bulldog win at the Joyce Center last year. Butler (14-8) will have a size advantage over the Irish at almost every position, which could spell trouble for the Irish on the boards.

Irish experience a bit of winter solace

Hope shines through for Notre Dame hockey

By MICHAEL DAY
Sports Writer

Somewhere behind the shadows, beyond the eye of the storm, beneath the wreckage of a losing season, have emerged a pair of Notre Dame hockey stars.

The duo is the future of Irish hockey. They are the little solace one gets in a 9-21-1 season. They are none other than sophomore left wing Terry Lorenz and freshman goaltender Matt Eisler.

Both players are currently at the top of their games. Eisler is coming off his most remarkable performance of the season. The freshman goaltender saved 47 of 51 shots against Ohio State to earn Defensive Player of the Week honors in the CCHA.

Despite the recent accolades, there was a time when the freshman goaltender struggled to make a name for himself.

“I just couldn’t get into a groove in the early part of the season,” said Eisler. “It was partly because of injuries (bad ankle, pulled groin) and partly to the adjustment of college life.”

But once he got used to life and hockey at Notre Dame, there was nothing stopping him. Eisler and the Irish defense have allowed an average of just 2.17 goals a game over their last four contests. He is a major reason why the team has catapulted to fifth in the CCHA in power play efficiency and penalty killings.

“The team has a lot of confidence in him and has really responded well around him,” said head coach Rick Schafer. “Matt seems to be coming up advantage will be its size. With 6-5 guard Jason McKennie and 7-2 center Rolf van Rijn, the Bulldogs boast one of the nation’s most potent rebounding teams.

They lead the Midwestern Collegiate Conference in rebounding margin, averaging more than nine boards per game more than their opponents. Ryan Hoover will not play for the Irish after suffering a sprained ankle.
