-Smith: Respect ND tradition on 'West Quad'

By AMY SCHMIDT
Nevada News Editor

In an effort to keep the campus a residential area, developers will strive to make the new "West Quod" respectful of Notre Dame's rich tradition, according to Michael Smith, director of facilities engineering.

- Smith addressed the Campus Life Council (CLC) yesterday at the last meeting of the 1994-95 school year, focusing on the development of recreational and residential areas for the campus area south of South Dining Hall.

"We wanted to be sure that we had a good understanding of the history of Notre Dame," he said.

The most recent plans feature a West Quad composed of four dorms, which have been established to construct Keough and O'Neill Halls, and two more dorms may be built in the future, four basketball courts, and four football/recreational fields. The new quad will also include informal recreational space just south of South Dining Hall.

Plans for Keough and O'Neill Halls were drawn on the basis of an ideal dorm size, which Smith said has a capacity of about 250 students. Smith also said that the architects had to work within the relatively small budget of $18 million.

Each two-winged dorm will include a social wing in order to facilitate food and social services. Smith also said that the West Quad will look more like the Main Quad, with an artilecture and planning of the technology infrastructure for the University's information service.

"Dr. Rapagnani joins Notre Dame as our newest major improvements in computing and the media technologies and services have put the nation's premier institutions in that regard," Smith said.

"The University is now in a position to become a world leader in the innovative uses of technology in all of our activities, including teaching, learning, research and administration, and services." Rapagnani has the knowledge, experience, and skills to guide us in this increasingly important and complex area."

Rapagnani served on active duty in the Air Force from 1967-77. His tour of duty included several years at Lawrence Livermore Laboratory and at the Air Force Weapons Laboratory at Kirtland Air Force Base, where he was involved in research programs for the theoretical analysis of flowing and pulsed chemical laser system.

In 1982-83 he was a research associate at the von Karman Institute for Fluid Dynamics in Belgium. He has authored numerous technical journal articles and technical reports related to his research.

Rapagnani earned his degree from the University of Kansas and a master's degree from the University of Missouri, both in mechanical engineering, and a doctorate in applied sciences from the Unversite Libre de Bruxelles in Belgium.

He will begin his appointment at Notre Dame on May 1.

SMC to honor four women at graduation

Special to The Observer

Saint Mary's College will be honoring four women of distinguished achievement at this year's May 20th Commencement. The four are Margaret Madelon Murphy, C.S.C., Joyce McMahon, Sally Black, and a student teacher, Will be awarded a honorary doctorate of letters.

She will also offer the keynote address at the commencement. Black, a graduate of Trinity College, an all-women's college in Washington D.C., was the first woman publisher of a weekly consumer magazine when she was appointed to the position for New York magazine in 1979. Prior to her current position, the publisher of the Catholic Association of America, Black served as president of USA Today and later became its publisher.

An honorary doctoral degree of arts will be bestowed on Murphy. Currently the president of the Center for Study of Faith and Culture in Washington, D.C., Murphy's lifelong commitment to education is evident through her jobs in higher education which include president of Cardinal Cushing College, Brockton, Mass., (1961-71), academic dean of Dunbarton College, Washington, D.C., (1951 to 1961), and assistant provost/assistant academic vice president of Boston College (1974-82).

Hank will be honored with a doctorate of humanities for contributions to Saint Mary's. Hank, a 1952 alumna of the college, graduated cum laude with a bachelor of arts in philosophy. She has served on the College Board of Trustees and is also a current member and past president of both the College Alumae Board and the College Quad Cities Alumae Club. In 1979, she served as the first national chair of The Madelena Society which recognizes individuals who contribute to the highest level of the college's Annual Fund.

Commen, author, editor, and teacher, will be awarded a doctorate of letters. In 1950, Commen co-founded Cross Currents, a well-known international religious quarterly. She has written four books, each of which explores the positive implications of the women's religious experience. These include "Women's Theology," "A Contemporary Meditation on the Everday God," "Mother Church: Where the Experience of Women is Teaching Her" and the just completed "In Search of Mary." Commen is an honor graduate of the University of Toronto. She earned her master of arts in literature from Fordham.
A new breed of Campus Security

In a valiant effort to curb terrorist activities here at Notre Dame, Campus Security has been employing new and innovative methods of surveillance and crime prevention. In the footsteps of such great universities as Miami University, security has been placed in every building, eliminating the need for a new battalion of storm troopers to cut corners on stolen backpacks in South Dining Hall, suspiciouslooking people on the sidewalks, and the ever so flimsy multiple fruit or pastery stand.

Now, an elite fighting force capable of almost any feat will be securing the campus for sagrants this fall. Who are these people? We have all seen this amazing new group of warriors roaming the campus in search of carrion. Before we have thought of them merely as indigents or interlopers reliant on a spring into action?

They have been a source of criticism and, yes, have even been apprehended perpetrators of the evils that plague this campus. They will be able, through a complicated new system of communication, to identify to police any suspicious loiterers. They will even be issued their own identification cards.

Attorneys for Qubilah Shabazz accused an FBI informant Monday of exerting money from the government in an attempt to build a bomb and murder an FBI agent. Shabazz's lawyer said the FBI relied on him only to try and buy his silence.

Meanwhile, the while of the best band off to training, other prospective applicants would be providing security at football games, mass meetings, and events with police monitors. Eventually, perhaps within five years, it will be the squirrels who decide to cancel all these new fad programs.

While the squirrels on campus may look small and be limited to the students, they have many physical factors which favor them. They are fast, they are sneaky, and they can climb any tree on campus. Furthermore, this new force of squirrels will also cut tuition. As long as they are ready, human security officials may become virtual obstacles on campus.

Squirrels require less food, twelve or more can fit into a single room, and they don't demand any special rights or social security. Support Campus Security strongly by supporting the new squirrel force. Understand the importance of law enforcement lies in a communion with nature.

Militant broadcaster says his group sent fax about bombing

Dexter, Mich.

A custodian who broadcasts a militant shortwave radio show said Monday that his group was behind a cryptic fax sent to a Texas congressman the morning of the Oklahoma City bombing.

Mark Koercke, speaking to the media for the first time since broadcast reports that federal authorities wanted him to question, said his group sent the fax to elaborate.

Neighbors spotted Koercke loading boxes and boxes into vehicles with several other people, then driving away from his house around 1 a.m. overnight. Hours later, he picked up a pizza at a diner.

"He was wearing his black fatigues, acting all cocky," said Mary Montez, a Deer Park resident.

Koercke took personal and didn't report to his maintenance job at a University of Michigan dormitory in nearby Ann Arbor, his supervisor said.

He said he had contacted the FBI each day since Saturday and "they've had no interest in talking.

Sheriff's Sgt. Dan Minzey said the FBI did not contact him, nor had he planned to question Koercke nor to search the two-story home Koercke shares with his wife and children.

FBI spokeswoman Dawn Mortiz in Detroit could not confirm that federal authorities had disregarded all interest in Koercke.

"We're not in a position to answer that right now," she said. "We're not giving out a list of people we're interested in questioning."

The oblique fax sent to the office of freshman Rep. Steve Stockman, R-Texas, appears to be a report from the scene of the bombing: "First update. Bag 7 to 10 floors only.

Seven people on scene - RM 607.

FBI Bomb threat received last week.

Perpetrator unknown at this time in Oklahoma."

It carried a time stamp that, if accurate, would indicate it was sent slightly more than an hour before the bombing.

Fisher said he did not believe the fax was sent before the bombing. The time stamp on the document said 08:59 because "the time on the fax machine has not been set for daylight savings time," Fisher said.

Oil firms gain in working with EPA

By MATTHEW Loughran

Oil companies have got to find a way to challenge the environmental movement in America in a positive way, according to William Douglas Ford, the Executive Vice-President of American Oil Co. (Amoco).

Ford, a 1966 graduate of Notre Dame who spoke yesterday in DeBartolo Hall, said that trying to challenge the environmental movement is like trying to create a product in a market limited and regulated by sensationalist media and an ignorant public is a challenge to oil companies.

Ford stated that many of these expensive regulations are not necessary, and he cited the fact that, "only about five percent of the population has the scientific knowledge to understand the data." This problem, he said, is why the environmental movement more power at the expense of the oil companies who also have to deal with unregulated competition in the market.

Ford said that this cost will balloon if EPA successes lead to new, scientifically valid alternatives.

Regulations by the EPA have forced many states to adopt alternative fuel laws. Regulations by the EPA have forced many states to adopt alternative fuel laws.

Ford stated that the best way for regulations to be met at a low cost to taxpayers and oil companies is for the oil companies to work in cooperation with the EPA to find new, scientifically valid ways to rid the world of pollution.

CAMPUS BRIEFS

Scott Mainwaring, professor of government and international studies at the University of Notre Dame, has been appointed a fellow of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars.

As part of the Wilson center's residential fellowship program, Mainwaring will make a comparative study of Brazilian politics and democratization. He is one of just 31 fellows selected from a pool of 811 applicants from 86 countries. The Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholarly was created in 1968 by Congress as the nation's official memorial to its 28th president. In addition to the fellowship program, the center conducts conferences and publishes The Wilson Quarterly and Dialogue.

Mainwaring joined the Notre Dame faculty in 1943 after earning his bachelor's and master's degrees in political science from Yale University, and his doctorate from Stanford University. A fellow in the University's Kellogg Institute for International Studies, he is the author of The Politics of Brazil: 200 Years of Political Development (Princeton University Press, 1980) and co-editor of five other books.

Thomas Bergin, director of continuing education at the University of Notre Dame, has received a certificate of recognition and special honor award from the National Education Association Association (NUCEA). Bergin received the award in ceremonies during the NUCEA's annual meeting in Anaheim, Calif. A member of the Notre Dame faculty since 1947, Bergin was graduated from the University in 1945. A native of Watertown, N.Y., he holds a master's degree from the University of Vermont and a doctoral degree from the University of Syracuse. Bomb death toll to pass 200

By DAN SEWELL
The Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY

Searchers found the body of a Marine today, still in uniform and sitting at his desk in the ruined federal office building, and the White House said it feared the death toll might possibly top 200.

The hunt for more suspects in the bombing stalled as two leads that investigators were chasing overnight didn’t pan out. White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta, speaking at The Associated Press annual meeting in New Orleans today, said it was possible the final toll might surpass 200. He said he based that on a report from federal emergency officials that 150 to 160 people were still missing and presumed to be “still within the building.” It might be Saturday before all bodies were pulled out of the rubble, he said. Hopes of reaching the wreckage of a second-floor day care center were pushed back yet another day until Tuesday. Hansen said it would take workers with chain saws and jackhammers at least that long to remove a three-story high pile of rubble packed on the area where the center had been. As the nation observed a day of mourning on Sunday, there was more bad news. Besides those killed in the bombing, another person, nurse Rebecca Anderson, 37, died Sunday from head injuries suffered trying to help after the blast. More than 400 were injured in the bombing.

The denim-clad ghost of Le Mans lives on

As I sat in room 401 Le Mans Hall, I felt a part of the folklore tradition at Saint Mary’s. It occurred to me that there may be some truth to the haunting legends of this nineteenth-century mansion. There may be some truth to the graveyard spirits and Saint Mary’s imaginative folktales.

It’s a ritual for freshmen to hear Saint Mary’s imaginative folktales. Then and whenever the members of the fourth floor culture, woven into the hall’s folklore tradition not as fiction, but as a part of the college’s history.

The ghost keeps folklore tradition alive, with a pale complexion, dark circles under his eyes, and dirty light hair cut as a angel pin and pendant of Italian glass. It is the independent newspaper published by the students of the University of Notre Dame du Lac and Saint Mary’s College. It does not necessarily reflect the opinions of the administration or student faculty of the university. The paper is open to anonymous and defamatory articles. The paper is published weekly on Thursdays and distributed as a complimentary publication. The paper is available on the Notre Dame du Lac campus and to all members of the Notre Dame du Lac community and to all readers. The free expression of varying opinions through letters is encouraged.

It goes back to first semester on a cold November night. At precisely midnight, Saint Mary’s seniors, Maureen Bransfield and Corcoran, were awakened by a loud banging noise. "It sounded as if someone had a hammer and was pounding on our ceiling," said Bransfield. Passing off the noise as pigeons, the two ignored the disturbance.

That is until two nights later, when the women went to bed, at the same time, after midnight. The banging began. Soon later, Bransfield and Corcoran became locked into a nightly pattern of repetition, believing they were dealing with something from the past. Naive romanticism, maybe.

 Stranger occurrences were yet to come. In December, Bransfield and Corcoran left their room at the same time to take showers. When they returned to their room, it was locked from the inside. The lock is a dead-bolt that can only be locked with a key from the outside. Both the women’s keys were found by a Resident Director inside the room.

There is also the saga of the black glove. Bransfield had found a mysterious glove on her dorm room floor. She left it there as she and Corcoran fell asleep. After a night of banging, the glove disappeared along with other objects such as an angel pin and pendant made of Italian glass.

Officially, Saint Mary’s has declined to comment on the issue, but neither the college nor the women can find an explanation for the banging.

For years, residents of the fourth floor have shared a concern about a certain presence, namely an elderly man who has been spotted roaming the halls. The man, whose identity is unknown, has been described as tall and lanky, with a pale complexion, dark circles under his eyes, and dirty light hair cut in a "milky" form, after midnight. It must clarify, no official documentation of this man exists on college records.

The legend of the man in overalls is a tale of cultural inheritance. A tale of the past, brought in as a possible explanation for the present. The banging that frequently occurs in room 401, this character has now gained recognition by some as a permanent resident of Le Mans Hall.

Hypothetically speaking, let’s say the banging is an act of this man. Overall, his haunting form appears to be relatively harmless. Neither Bransfield nor Corcoran have been possessed. The ghost has not taken control of their actions—so far there has been no sign of either going into convulsions, showing extraordinary strength, or yelling excessive curses. The only harm done has been a loss of sleep. Plus, Bransfield and Corcoran can prevent the noise by going to bed at separate times before midnight.

The ghost of Le Mans is part of fourth floor culture, woven into the hall’s folklore history. Looking beyond the belief of ghosts, it’s important to note what this legend tells us about the women of Saint Mary’s. It shows the women a sense of history, that they’re concerned with holding on to the identity of a dorm that is over a century old. The ghost keeps folklore tradition alive, which is not an easy trick.

Next year I will live on the fourth floor in Le Mans. Perhaps I will have the privilege of encountering the man in denim overalls. This would enable me to experience the richness of Le Mans folklore legend not as fiction, but as fact.
What makes your dorm the place that it is? Is it the structure itself? Or the number of people living in the dorm? Is it the tower and hall staff? Or the friendly and hard-working housekeepers? After seventy years of experience, the men of Morrissey Manor would tell you that a dorm is all of the above and much more. Few dorms on campus can claim a life as long as Morrissey's. And as the dorm celebrates its seventieth birthday this year, the entire campus can take a glimpse into the character that makes the Manor the place that it is. This character arises from the combination of the building, traditions, and residents.

Built in 1925 as a dorm for sophomores, Morrissey Manor was one of three buildings referred to as the "Gold Coast" at the time. Morrissey, like Howard Hall and Lyons Hall, was very unique architecturally. According to rector Joe Russ, CSC, this unique architecture is one of the many things that make the Manor the dorm that it is.

Morrissey's Gothic design includes a square tower rising through the center of a library with a copper cross in one corner, a trait the dorm shares with the low school building. The hall above the front entrance is much like that of a medieval manor, and a Latin inscription above the balcony proclaims that the Manor is a house of God. In addition, the east and west exteriors of the building sport copper-framed windows, and the stonework on the tower and chapel walls proclaims the Christian nature of the dorm with carvings of fish, pelicans, crosses, and the sacred heart of Jesus.

Named after Reverend Andrew Morrissey, CSC, President of the University at the turn of the century, the hall is alive with character inside as well. The lobby consists of wooden panels, including several painted with the seals of both Oxford and Cambridge, and a fireplace. Sitting in the lobby, one can almost hear the voices of the many young men who have spent time conversing there over the years. The Morrissey chapel also seems to be a special place. Dedicated to Saint Therese, the chapel, with its noticeable lack of chairs, promote the idea of family. The cross found in the chapel was designed by well-known Notre Dame artist Ivan Mestrovic.

Traditions are taken seriously by the residents of Morrissey Manor. Whether old or new, traditions passed down from class to class are important in promoting dorm unity and furthering the sense of community that already exists in Morrissey. Some of the older traditions include the Breakfast Club, Film Fest, and Christmas SYR. Every football season, the residents of Morrissey gather for cereal and song at Breakfast Club on the morning of the first home game. The Christmas SYR is undoubtedly Morrissey's premier social event every year.

Some of the newer traditions unique to Morrissey include the Polar Run and Morrissey Unplugged: The Polar Run, a mile dash around campus in February wearing only shorts, was begun several years ago to raise money for the Jesuit Hip scholarship fund. This year, the residents of Morrissey ran to raise money for the University Scholars and Memorial Scholarship fund. Morrissey seems to be the dorm with mostly Morrissey performers, occurring at least once a semester. This past weekend marked the first time this event was held outside.

Morrissey resident Dominic Tocci explains, "The traditions we have here in the Manor are what makes living here great. The rooms are small and there is no air conditioning, but we are comfortable here. Morrissey is a place where an individual can feel at home." A tradition of service also exists in Morrissey. The dorm has a long-standing relationship with St. Hedwig's Outreach Center, a place for children on the west side of South Bend. Morrissey men visit the center every Monday and Thursday to provide support for the kids there. Many Manor men also choose to do service on their own or after they graduate.

Forgotten stories about haunted towers and rats in the basement. Morrissey is obviously a place where a community of believers live together, study together, and compete against one another. What is important to the men who live in Morrissey is the camaraderie that won this year's Fisher Regatta or last year's Interhall Football championship. And that is what being a dorm at Dame is all about.

So, next time you look at your dorm, think about the many things that give your dorm character. Think about the traditions, the people who come before you, and the people who will come for years after you to inhabit the place you now call home.

Olympics next for NBA's winningest coach
By WENDY E. LANE
Associated Press

Lenny Wilkens wasn't invited to try out for the Olympics in 1960. On Monday, he was encouraged to coach the team at the 1996 Atlanta Games.

The announcement, rumored for months, came at the Kentucky center during a 15-minute season in which Wilkens moved ahead of Red Auerbach to top the NBA All-Time coaching victories.

"Do look forward to participating in this huge event," the Atlanta Hawks coach said. "Certainly, being an assistant coach on the 1991 team whetted my appetite to do it. It's just a tremendous honor."

USA Basketball president C.M. Newton said three assistant coaches are to be announced in June, from one of the NBA and two from college - and the Olympics team will be picked in late July or early August.

The 57-year-old Wilkens - called the end of his college career with the Friars when he was the MVP in the NIT, but wasn't invited to try out for the Olympic team.

"It was a big disappointment after the time he said, 'Every youngster in college would have loved to be on the Olympic team.' I never thought much about it later," Wilkens said in completing his staff and selecting the players for the '96 team. "I met with the same committee that picked us for the '92 USA Basketball's men's senior national team committee - will make the final determination.

"We're committed to selecting the best team," Newton said. "It probably will be all NBA players, but it will truly be open to every player in the nation."

Magic Johnson, the former NBA star who played on the 1984 Olympic team, when he revealed he had HIV, has said he would like to be on the 1996 team as well.

The intensity starts Thursday with Seattle's opening-round set with the Los Angeles Lakers, who return to the post-season after staying home last year for the first time since the 1976-77 season.

In the second straight year, the Seattle SuperSonics could bungled out of the playoffs in the first round. So could the defending NBA champions.

The toughest road for an NBA Finals is the one leading from the West, where four of the league's Five Best 30 teams are combatting for coaching victories.

continued from page 12ing higher teams this year than the past two years (when they have made the field). Plus, we played one of the toughest schedules in the country. It seemed like every week we were up, against a ranked team. Because today's scheduled season finale with Western Michigan was canceled and the MCC journey was played in the fall, the Irish will not have any further opportunities to prove themselves. That may hurt.

There are a lot of good teams this year who had great years," Louderback noted. "A lot will depend on the conference tournaments, especially the Big Ten and SCC. Those teams will have more chances to get good wins." So far for now, it's wait and see. But the Irish are confident. "We will practice all this week," Louderback confirmed. "The kids come out east Tuesday but we are confident."

Prenarianing the baseb&ll sea- season is slowly winding down. The Bell's have decided to restate their goals for the rest of the season in the hopes of bettering their record through their remaining three game series.

"A lot will depend on the season in the hopes of bettering their record through their remaining three game series."

Saint Mary's has seven games remaining on their schedule, including match-ups against Kalamazoo College, Calvin College and a rescheduled game against cross-town rival Bethel College.

The Belles had a team meet- ing to try to determine exactly what was needed to complete the season victoriously. "We will continue to play tough teams the rest of the season," Patrick said. "We are physically capable of performing well, but I think much of the problem is mental. We need to start having fun and the rest will come."

Freshman Debbie Dziekan voiced her opinion about the team's last games. "I really think that we have a great mental attitude. But we really need to come out these last few games. I am confident we can do it, but it will take effort on everyone's part."

The Belles will begin their journey down that path when they take on Kalamazoo College on Tuesday at 3:30 in Kalamazoo.

Despite loss, NCAA hopes alive

By TIM SHERMAN

Second chances don't come along very often in the world of athletics. Usually, it's do or die. Fortunately for the Irish women's tennis squad, such was not the case on Sunday. Notre Dame died, but the quirky thing is, they may still have life. In a match that probably would have secured an automatic berth to the NCAA Tournament, the Irish fell to 25th ranked Indiana in Bloomington by a rather lopsided 6-3 count.

"We didn't play very well," Irish coach Jay Louderback said. "We struggled, especially in our singles play. Notre Dame won just two of the six singles matches against regional rival Indiana. Junior All-American Wendy Crabtree (no. 1) and senior captain Laura Swab (no. 3) provided the singles wins for the Irish. "We really dug ourselves in a hole with our poor play in the singles," Louderback noted. "I'm just glad we played better in the doubles."

Even the improvement was not enough though, as just the number one doubles was swept by the Irish.

"I'm just glad we played better in the doubles," Louderback noted. "I think we have a definite chance at one of those bids," Louderback said. "We have a better record in terms of beatings in the doubles, especially in our singles.

Junior Holyn Lord combined with Wendy Crabtree to earn a 6-4, 6-2 win at number one doubles in Sunday's match against Indiana. McCrary 6-4, 6-2. Despite the tough loss, Notre Dame's journey hopes are still very much a possibility.

"With our 14-10 record and a very demanding schedule, better record in terms of beatings in the doubles, especially in our singles," Louderback noted. "I think we have a definite chance at one of those bids," Louderback said. "We have a better record in terms of beatings in the doubles, especially in our singles.

Irish net last MCC championship

By B.J. HOOD

The shorthanded Notre Dame men's tennis team claimed its seventh MCC championship over the weekend. Despite the absence of five key players, the Irish won five of the six singles matches and one of the three doubles matches.

"I think everyone came together," Jakub Pietrowski said. "We had some guys missing, and we went out and got the job done." At number one singles, Mill Sprouse defeated Northern Illinois Sunu Thomas 6-4, 6-3 to claim the title. After defeating Butler's Nathan Schaffner, Jon Jay O'Brien was hosted by Marty Engel of Northern Illinois in the number two match, 6-1, 6-2.

Jakub Pietrowski defeated Northern Illinois' Paul Berka 6-2, 6-3 for the number three singles title. At number four singles, Steve Flanigan was victorious over Wisconsin-Green Bay's Willie Cakans 6-7, 6-1, 6-3.

Ron Menticia had a great weekend at number five singles, with two 6-0, 6-0 victories. Andy Chimura claimed the number six singles title with a victory over Mark McGrew of Northern Illinois 6-2, 6-2.

The tandem of Sprouse and Pietrowski won number one doubles. Freshmen Danny Rothschild and Christian Jordan won third place for the Irish at number two doubles, and junior Marco Magnano and freshmen Vojay Freeman also took third at number three doubles.

The final standings of the ten teams had Notre Dame at number one, followed by Northern Illinois, Butler, and Wisconsin-Green Bay.

Sprouse, Pietrowski, Flanigan, Menticia, and Chimura were named to the All-MCC team. On being named to the team, Pietrowski said, "It's an honor. It will be my only chance to play in the NCAA tournament of the move to the Big East."

Peale said everyone is playing well and focusing on regions that take place the second weekend of May, which will be the next weekend for the Irish. "Everyone just needs to try to play their best. On any given day, any team can win."

BOOKSTORE BASKETBALL

Intensity up as field goes down

By DOMINIC AMOROSA

In NCAA Basketball, teams compete all season to reach a tournament referred to as March Madness. At Notre Dame, Bookstore Basketball teams compete three or four games to reach the round of 64. Now, games are played with referees in front of hostile crowds. The large crowds become attracted to unknown teams but their favorities tend to stay up their game. Ranked teams might finally be challenged at The College Bookstore and the Final Four at Stepan gets serious today.

"Now the tournament gets competitive," said Bryan Corbett of no. 2 seed Rebel Alliance. "Every game will be a battle and the concentration levels will be a lot higher. These types of games determine who is going to be there in the end." "Teams will need more skill instead of brute force," added Jean Joseph of no. 5 seed Pink Sky Pirates. "The referees come into play and teams won't get along with anyone funny business."

A 558 team field has dwindled down to sixty four. The winners of these games will advance to the round of 32 and be guaranteed a seed next year if three players remain on the team. However, many of the ranked teams are senior dominated and play for the moment. Some of these teams rely on size and strength, while others need speed and quickness to compete at this level. Some of the teams press full court, while others walk the ball up and pound it inside. Others don't even feel like they belong at all.

"We put our team together to have a good time," commented Vanilla Thunder's Brian Ford. "We're looking forward to the game, but I don't think we'll that good." Ford's squad, led by offensive tackle Chris Clevenger, will face no. 10 Malicious Prosecution in the last game of the night at 11:00 PM.

Teams win Bookstore Basketball games with strong defense and timely baskets. Great players create awe among the spectators, but teams win basketball games. "Which ever team can run and play the best defense will win it," said Kerbdoig's Davide Delgrande. "It will be physically tough with all of the athletes competing.

"You have to play tough defense to win Bookstore," echoed Corbett. "You can't rely on comebacks in the second half as much because the competition is better.""Sweter Than Candy, a second sixteen team, relies more on outside shooting and fast breaks than a physical presence. "Size is a big factor," explained Colin Rittgers of Sweeter. "We need to compensate with fast-breaks and team play."

Yesterday, no. 6 seed DOS KLOSKAS found out what it's like at this level. In a game defined by physical play, KLOSKAS clawed away from Voodoofreaks 21-17 to be the first team in the field of 32. The guard brother tandems of Mike and Jeff Kloska versus Voodoofreaks' Chris and Benji Hammond ended in a standoff, but KLOSKAS size on the inside made the difference in the game.

"We managed to get the ball inside in the second half and that was the difference in the game," said KLOSKAS Pete Coleman. "They took us out of our game and played real well.

In another sixty four game, Ezekial 25:17, led by quarterback Ron Powlus defeated Pass the Beernuts 21-13. Powlus and Steve Misetic paced the win with 5 points each.

The marathon game of the day occurred at the Bookstore courts as The O'Malley 29ers slid by Five the Hard Way 28-28. All of the remaining teams will need to utilize every weapon in their arsenal in order to survive the round of sixty four and continue on the road to Stepan.
