SMCTostal to foster relations

By JENNIFER LEWIS

Saint Mary's Assistant Editor

For Saint Mary's students, the celebration of Antostal this year changed to SMCTostal. The Saint Mary's Student Activities Board (SAB) decided to rename the series of events due to the lack of communications between both campuses, according to Gandy Novak, student coordinator of Antostal.

"I wish there was more of an effort to bring the two campuses together for one big event," said Novak.

By that it's name to SMCTostal the SAB Board hoped that more Saint Mary's students would participate in the events at Saint Mary's. According to Novak, the SMCTostal committee tried to get such events as sumo wrestling and bungee-trampoline jumping, but the administration declined for safety reasons.

"Last year Antostal was something I looked forward to," said Regina Sophomore Colleen Quinlivan. This year I didn't even know it was taking place until later in the week.

During the previous years, festivities take place on Thursday of Antostal week on Saint Mary's campus. Because of the rain, the day's activities were delayed to Monday from 3-5 pm on the library green. This includes tie-dying, fake tattoos, and The Alpha Experience, a virtual simulation.

Habitat begins 'building blitz'

Volunteers construct home in Northeast Neighborhood

By ROB PIECUCH

News Writer

Recently, student volunteers for the campus organization Habitat for Humanity have been declining their time to the construction of a new home in the Northeast Neighborhood.

"Last weekend, students began their "building blitz," the term used by the club to describe the process of coming together to build the house. Progress has been good, according to Erika Quinn, a Habitat board member and one of the project's organizers. "Last weekend we framed the house," she said. "Sunday we finished roofing the house and framed all of the interior walls." The building site is located at 1504-56 Burns Blvd. in South Bend.

The club was founded by a number of architecture majors and currently has over 150 members. The expertise of the club's members has been a major asset, according to Quinn, "they are really a big help because they have building experience."

The campus club, which is not yet an official chapter of the national Habitat organization, has worked under the guidance of the St. Joseph County Chapter since its inception.

Gilda Nicodemus, the executive director for Habitat in St. Joseph County, has provided a great deal of assistance to the students on this, the campus group's first independent project. Specifically, she has helped in obtaining the lot for the construction site. She has also provided a helping hand in negotiating with contractors and South Bend city officials on building procedures.

The road to success for the Habitat here on campus has not been easy. The club gained official University recognition three years ago, and has had difficulty obtaining funding for the project ever since.

The turning point for the organization came about when a Notre Dame alumnus came forward with a $15,000 matching grant. The grant provided a stepping stone for the organization, as the club has raised roughly $30,000 over the last two semesters. The club also conducted a Christmas fund-raiser last semester and a JPW fund-raiser this semester.

The family who will live in the house will undergo what is known as "sweat equity." This means that the family must work 500 hours on a Habitat project, either their house or another.

Discovering your possibilities

Gorno urges students to take risks, challenges

By PATTI CARSON

Saint Mary's Editor

There will never be any greater influence than the place where you discovered your own possibilities, according to Mary Lou Gorno, Saint Mary's alumnus of 1972, who highlighted the ways Saint Mary's women continue to transform the world last night in Madeleva Hall.

In her lecture, titled "Outrageous Acts and Everyday Leadership," Gorno focused on the ways in which leaders are made.

"I know that you can perform the outrageous acts that leaders must sometimes perform—take the risks, scale the heights and not let anyone or anything stand as your obstacle...And I know that you are also willing to put in the work and dedication that everyday leadership requires, attending the meetings, making the phone calls, doing the research," Gorno said.

Gorno is vice-president at Leo Burnett, one of the world's largest advertising firms and she currently serves as the vice-chair of the Board of Trustees at the college. In addition, she is the national chair of the Sesquicentennial Campaign for Saint Mary's College. And since the students "inspire" her, she found time to speak to members of the college community last night about how they can be leaders and about how they contribute to the college through their service.

Court ruling curbs constitutional abuse

By DAVID CLAIRMONT

News Writer

The Supreme Court has taken its first step in over 60 years to curb the abusive interpretations of the constitution's commerce clause, according to Professor Douglas W. Kmiec of Saint Mary's.

In most recent case, the United States Supreme Court, in a 5-4 opinion, decided to override the 1990 Gun-Free School Zones Act. In arguing the case, yet another appeal was made to the "commerce clause" of the United States Constitution which allows the Federal government power to regulate activities which affect interstate trade.

Areas around schools which are ridden with guns tend to discourages the police. By this line of thinking, the best action would be to use a Federal action to protect children and teachers in schools while at the same time, appealing to the commerce clause for justification.

Professor Kmiec takes the opposing side, as did Chief Justice Rehnquist and Associate Justices Kennedy, O'Connor, Scalia, and Thomas in the actual case.

Kmiec said that for the past 60 years, in an attempt to address the country'sills coming out of the Great Depression and later to help the country to return to a peace-time economy after World War Two, the commerce clause has been invoked time and time again to allow the Federal government to guide the country through rough economic transitions.

However, Kmiec also said that the commerce clause has allowed the Federal government's power to grow largely unchecked and that the recent court opinion has taken a significant step in reversing this trend.

Kmiec said that the key to interpreting this case is to realize that it is "not denying the existence of federal authority in an appropriate case, just in an inappropriate case."

What are we so afraid of?
Robert Bolman

Graphic Designer

In America this search for meaning is often confused by the myriad of lifestyles around us. People live such varied lifestyles that sometimes seems as though no ultimate unifying truth remains. In an open heart and an unashamed mind, we find that many of these alterantive lifestyles and religions are just different ways of honoring the one spiritual truth.

Many here at Notre Dame firmly believe that their many different gods, and all their beliefs are the only way to salvation. They preach that they alone are right, and they close their hearts and minds to other lifestyles. This close-mindedness is one of the greatest social problems at Notre Dame.

You do not have to look far to see this close-mindedness. The university, both students and administration, enforces written and unwritten policies of intolerance. How can Notre Dame possibly be the Institute of Higher Learning if we are upholding the holy doctrines of God when they do not practice what Jesus said was the greatest commandments:

"Love your neighbor as yourself."

This one statement demands that we be tolerant of other peoples. Jesus did not turn to the women surrounding him and say "you have no place in my church." He made them a valuable and active part of his ministry. Why then don't we try to give women the same respect? Even after all these years, many women have little place in the hierarchy of the church? Why are women treated as second class citizens in so many parishes and in many faiths? How is it that attitudes of sexism and prejudice are allowed to proliferate on this campus?

Jesus also preached the parable of the Samaritan. Why do we hold the good Samaritan in such high regard and not the good Samaritan who did not do as much? (Samaritans were the outcasts of Jewish society and hated by the Romes.) He preached that we must accept other people and lifestyles and the good that they can do. Jesus did not promote these same lifestyles, but he gave the people the respect that they deserved.

Why is Notre Dame is afraid of allowing our gay and lesbian students to congregate? Why is it then that Thomas Dooley, arguably one of the greatest people ever to graduate Notre Dame, is still hated because of the way he chose to live his life? Why is it that the glory that he accomplished in the world is over-shadowed over by the parochialism of his pastimes and in many faiths? How is it that attitudes of sexism and prejudice are allowed to proliferate on this campus?

Fourteen prisoners break out of California jail

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Fourteen maximum-security prisoners broke out of jail early Sunday and 10 got away.

Five of the fugitives were charged with murder, two are charged with rape, and three are drug defendants, said Deputy Dian Hecht, chief of security for the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department.

The four other inmates were captured almost immediately, she said.

More than 100 deputies joined the manhunt and a helicopter crew searched from the air, Deputy Rich Erickson said. All the fugitives were wearing orange jail jumpsmits.

"How the inmates are escaped is still under investigation," Hecht said.

Greenpeace Occupies Oil Platform

Greenpeace activists occupied an old North Sea oil platform Sunday to stop it from being junked at sea. The group's plan: To transform the Brent Spar, 118 miles northeast of the Shetland Islands. It is the first of the 400 North Sea oil platforms that are to be dumped at sea, with the government's permission. Police and Shell U.K. Exploration and Production, which owns the platform, were monitoring the situation. No one has been arrested. Greenpeace, which wants the platform disassembled and converted into an underwater park, says the effort is expected to be a long occupation on the platform, with the government's permission. The Greenpeace ship Moby Dick was standing by. "We have bulldozers,Fitbulls, rock and tide hauls ready to scavenge the Brent Spar," said C. W. Jensen.

McAdams: ‘Positive law’ brings just prosecution

By MATTHEW LOUGHRAN
News Writer

Transitional justice based on positive law in the unified Germany was the subject of a speech given by A. James McAdams in the Notre Dame Law School on Friday.

In the Post-Cold War world, Germany holds a unique position amongst emerging democracies, according to McAdams, an associate professor of government at the University of Notre Dame and a fellow in the Kellogg Institute.

"It is one of the only new democracies that has no fear of the former dictators regaining power," said McAdams.

He also said that there is no military power enough to control the country. This leads to large differences in how transitional justice is handled.

"The ability of Germany to take action is not that great," said McAdams. "They must try not to have a 'victor's justice' and they also desire respect for the rule of law."

This forces the courts to decide between two types of justice. The appeal to a natural, universal law is the emotional and moral choice which is both easy and satisfies the public demand for justice, according to McAdams. However, he said that this choice tends to ignore the due process by trying the dictators according to laws that were not in force in their countries at that time.

"The courts must prosecute on the basis of positive law," said McAdams. "Positive law indicates that the dictators should only be tried on their ability to follow the laws of their own country during the time that they were in power."

According to McAdams, this approach is currently being used by tribunals in Germany. It is difficult and time consuming, but satisfies justice by the doctrine of "no crime without a law."

"It is one of the few cases that can be seen as just," said McAdams. "It does not often satisfy the public demand for justice."

"I believe that justice has been served," said McAdams.

SMC Big Sis/L'il Sis program aims to ease freshman worries

By EMILY RUPFNER
News Writer

Saint Mary's Big Sis/L'il Sis program is currently in the process of selecting its participants to serve as Big Sisters to next year's incoming freshmen.

The program is a part of the Orientation process, bringing upperclassmen and freshmen together. According to Aimee Heimann, committee co-chairman, it is designed for incoming freshmen to feel an immediate part of the SMC community.

Initially, Big Sisters are available to answer questions and help students feel comfortable during their first year. As the school year progresses, the big sister may either continue as the new friend or can simply sit back and watch the new student adjust on her own, according to Heimann.

Last year's program had a few problems that left the program with not very satisfying results. With one year's experience behind them, Heimann and co-chair Kathleen Michael are seeing a better turnout. "It's the students that make this program work," states Heimann. "The more volunteers we have, the better the program will be," she said.

Enrollment for the Class of 1999 will be approximately 400 students. In order to reach the 120 to 150 volunteers, the program still needs about 200 volunteers. Sophomores through seniors are selected.

Yeltsin signs draft law but exempts 209,000 postgraduate students

Associated Press

MOSCOW

President Boris Yeltsin signed a bill Sunday extending the draft, but softened the tough conditions which require more than 200,000 postgraduate students and college graduates to serve for one year after graduation.

The exemption applies only to the 1995 draft call, which affects men born between 1968 and 1977.

Before, college students had to serve after graduation.

The exemption applies only to the 1995 draft call, which affects men born between 1968 and 1977.

Yeltsin, heeding pleas from top academics and scientists, original exempt postgraduate students until they had finished their training and defended their postgraduate projects. He also exempted college graduates who go to work for the state in their chosen field.

The exemption applies only to the 1995 draft call, which affects men born between 1968 and 1977.

Spy agency interrogator suspended in death of Palestinian prisoner

Associated Press

JERUSALEM

An interrogator for the Shin Bet spy agency was suspended Sunday after pathologists said a Palestinian prisoner was tortured to death last week, security sources and Israeli media reports said.

According to the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, the suspension will remain in effect until the Justice Ministry completes its inquiry into the death Tuesday of Abu-Samad Harizat, 29, a prisoner from the West Bank town of Hebron, died four days after being detained for questioning about possible plans by the Islamic radical group Hamas to attack Israelis.

In an affidavit published Sunday, pathologist Derrick Pounder of Scotland, who participated in Harizat's autopsy, said he died of "trauma to the brain" caused by "forceful jerking movements of the head" or "violent shaking." Pounder contradicted media reports that Harizat was beaten to death, suggesting he found no signs of direct blows to the head.

Dole: Medicare reform needs urgent attention

By JIM ABRAMS

WASHINGTON

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole agreed Sunday with House Speaker Newt Gingrich that Congress and the administration should give urgent consideration to Medicare reform, separate from the budget debate.

Dole, R-Kan., speaking on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," acknowledged that it would be difficult to craft a plan to balance the budget by 2002 without including cuts in Medicare.

But with the federal health care plan for the elderly facing bankruptcy in the next decade, Dole said, "We're talking about preserving the integrity of this system and protecting this system. And we'd better do that very quickly."

Senate and House Republicans have talked of trimming $250 billion to $300 billion from Medicare spending as part of the bills both chambers will produce over the coming weeks to balance the budget by 2002.

But Gingrich, R-Ga., said Friday that Medicare should be separated from the budget process and asked President Clinton to come up with a Medicare reform proposal by May 15.

Gingrich said his goal is to pass a bill by September to save the Medicare system. The White House so far has been noncommittal.

Dole said Clinton "has taken a walk on everything this year." He said Clinton had $118 billion in Medicare cuts in his health reform proposal last year, but "this year he doesn't want to touch it because — or doesn't want to touch farm subsidies or anything else — because 1996 is election year."

Dole said there was enough bipartisan spirit in Congress to initiate real reform. "If people are concerned about Medicare, they better hope enough of us, in both parties, are willing to make the reforms necessary to preserve and protect the system."

Dole won some support from Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York, the ranking Democrat on the Senate Finance Committee, who told ABC that Medicare should not be used as a means of balancing the budget.

"It is not long for this world at the present rate of the trust funds, and we have to attend to it, and we can," Moynihan said. On dealing with the budget without addressing Medicare, he said, "We got ourselves into this mess; we can get ourselves out of it."

Gingrich said Republicans are looking at providing the elderly with numerous options, including staying with the current system, going on a voucher arrangement or letting people be responsible for their own bills.

Clinton: U.S. embargo will cut Iranian trade

Kirchners win custody battle for Baby Richard

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. — A boy at the center of a four-year custody battle was taken sobbing and whimpering from his adoptive parents Sunday by the mother who said he was never hers.

Biological parents Otakar and Daniela Kirchner picked up the 4-year-old boy, identified in court records only as Baby Richard, from the adoptive parents’ house in suburban Chicago.

The child cried, whimpered and reached out to his adoptive mother repeatedly as the court ruled that Kirchner, his biological father, was the child’s legal parent.

Some called out “monster” at the Kirchners, who met with the boy and his adoptive parents for about an hour before taking him away.

About a dozen police officers stood by.

The transfer capped a legal fight that has involved the governor, the General Assembly and judges all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The state Supreme Court granted Kirchner custody in January, ruling that the adoption was illegal because Kirchner, not the baby’s mother, had signed the birth certificate.

During prayer services and speeches in a steady rain, they said fascism’s crimes must never be repeated, its victims never forgotten.

“Never again fascism, never again war, never again Dachau,” said Max Mannheimer, a 75-year-old Czech-born Jew who survived the camp.

On over 30,000 inmates died here — murdered, worked to death, or simply allowed to starve.

Last year, Gov. Jim Edgar sided with the adoptive home and ruled the child belonged to the adoptive parents.

Kirchner had said he wanted a gradual transfer of custody to make it easier on the child, but talks broke down with the adoptive parents, known in court papers as Jane and John Doe.

The prolonged court battle over Baby Richard, like that over Baby Jessica, prompted Americans to re-evaluate adoption laws in light of the best interests of the child and the rights of the biological father.

Richard’s tearful departure from his adoptive home mirrored that of Jessica, the 2-year-old returned to her birth parents by order of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Some 2,000 people from at least 16 countries — survivors and their families — returned for the half-century anniversary of Dachau’s liberation.

The veterans’ group, he added, demonstrated clearly between the Nazi war criminals and today’s Germany.

“Josef Kohl, a human rights activist, was one of the few survivors to speak to the SS guards,” said Kirchner, a native of Austria.

Mannheimer, a painter living in Munich, called the Dachau camp “a school for killing people” that “taught the majority of future commandants of the many camps of the Third Reich and the countries it occupied.”

Dachau’s trail, Mannheimer said, led to Auschwitz, Majdanek and Treblinka,” where millions of European Jews were gassed.

The Dachau camp barracks were torn down, but one was rebuilt after the war as a display for visitors.

An 80-year-old former Belgian resistance fighter, wearing the striped cloth he wore as a Dachau inmate, sat leaning on his cane in the building, lost in thought.

“I came back to mourn others in my resistance group who died in this camp. They were all brave men,” said Emil Crappe.

A total of 1,106 Catholic priests, mostly Poles, imprisoned and were cremated at Dachau, making it the largest cemetery for priests in the world, said Cardinal Friedrich Wetter of Munich. Two of the priests were Americans.

At a Mass, Wetter said that one of the priests, an SS man at Dachau whipped a priest with a piece of barbed wire, then wrapped it around the priest’s head, shouting, “Do you know that Christ died today?”

JERUSALEM
Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin told the Cabinet Sunday that he had personally approved plans to confiscate Arab-owned land in Jerusalem to make way for construction of two Jewish neighborhoods, Israeli radio said.

Palestinian leaders reacted angrily to the plans, announced quietly in a government publication last week. They warned the confiscations could harm the delicate Israel-PLO talks on extending the 11-month-old Gaza-Jericho autonomy to more of the West Bank.

One hundred and forty acres in two areas of East Jerusalem, near the Beit Hanina and Beit Safafa villages, are to be seized so that houses and a police station can be built.

A government committee also gave the go-ahead for construction to begin at a third site, Har Homa, between Jerusalem and Bethlehem.

Construction there was approved in principle in January. The Islamic fundamentalist group Hamas on Sunday responded with threats of more attacks against Israel.

"There must be a severe confrontation taking place in the policy of land confiscation by the escalation of blows to the occupation troops and the settler thugs," said a Hamas leaflet sent to The Associated Press.

Hamas said the "weakness" of Yasser Arafat's self-rule government was partly to blame for the appropriation and called for a one-day general strike in the West Bank and Gaza Strip for Monday.

Arab League foreign ministers will hold an emergency meeting in Cairo, Egypt, on Saturday to discuss the land confiscation, Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa said Sunday.

In a statement, the organization warned the confiscations would "blow up the peace process."

Asked why Israel shouldn't let Palestinians build on the land, Rabin replied that he didn't approve of mixed neighborhoods, Israel TV said.

According to Israeli television, Rabin said that just as he objected to the dozens of Israeli settlers moving into the Muslim quarter of the old walled city, "I don't want Arabs in Gilo or Ramot," the two Jewish areas bordering the proposed building sites.

Reports added that Rabin promised to investigate the possibility of allowing other land to Jerusalem Arabs for construction.

Jerusalem is the most explosive issue in the Israeli-Palestinian peace process, with both sides claiming the city as a political and religious capital. East Jerusalem, which Israel occupied and annexed in 1967, contains sites holy to Jews, Muslims and Christians.

Jews now outnumber Arabs in the sector by 160,000 to 155,000. Negotiations on the final status of Jerusalem are to begin by 1996.

Leaders of the Meretz Party, Rabin's dovish coalition partner, said the prime minister promised them that concrete details of plans to build housing for Jerusalem Arabs would soon be presented to the Cabinet.

"For 20 years they say they were also building for (Arabs) but in fact they confiscate their land and build only for Jews," said Communications Minister Shulamit Aloni. "We are opposed to confiscating land from Arabs in Jerusalem and anywhere else."

Energy Minister Gonen Segev backed the plans as a way to solve the housing shortage facing the ultra-Orthodox Jewish community.

"Being sensitive is a good thing, but you can't live on sensitivity," Segev said. "There is a real housing crisis."

Meanwhile, Israel announced it would seal off the West Bank and Gaza beginning at midnight Tuesday to prevent attacks during the four-day celebration of Independence Day.

The ban on Palestinians entering the country will be lifted on Saturday night, a police statement said. Israel marks the 47th anniversary of its independence Thursday.

Students given registration options

By KELLY MOORE
News Writer

With no enrollment limits and an opportunity to shop for classes, an unprecedented number of students can now make their own class selection and finding room in the classes that they need and want than do students at Harvard University or Stanford University. Since the class selection process is much more streamlined through the use of a computerized registration system, the New York Times said that "the system is brand-new." Students can pick their classes in less than fifteen minutes without having to stand in any long lines. They also have the option to drop or add classes after the enrollment period is over, which is the first time it has ever been possible. Four years ago, the system was so new that students received appointment cards and had to sign up for classes. Today, the entire process is much easier and more efficient.

Instead of registering via telephone with a representative at DART, students select their classes on a computer in the registrar's office.

ND classes available, but changes still to be made

DART. The word itself sends a shiver down the spines of many students at the University of Michigan. The system works in the same way as DART, with the difference that it will now mean something different. The word is more likely to be found in the dictionary under "defunct" than as a verb in the Oxford English Dictionary. The system is brand-new. When asked if there was a reason for the change, University spokespersons said that the students were more satisfied with the new system than with the old. The DART system at Notre Dame is a major improvement, Johnson said, over the former "arena-style" system of registering which was discontinued in 1989.

In his 1988 inaugural address, George Bush introduced what will undoubtedly be his most enduring—and perhaps most controversial—initiative. Having raised two boys to adulthood and with a deep-seated ‘“point of view” tinges of little green men from the predawn to the post-dawn, Jim Langford and his wife, Julia, are working to create a place where their urban children can feel safe and free.

The Langfords have been through a little over two years ago, Jim Langford, the director of the University of Notre Dame Press, describes the experience of the two inner-city children. Jim Langford and his wife, Julia, are working to create a place where their urban children can feel safe and free.

and reduction of the Federal welfare system and its related bureaucracy. So rather than dedicating my last column of this year to settling scores and/or political mistakes, I would like to use this forum to bring attention to what is undoubtedly one of the brightest spots of a little green men from the predawn to the post-dawn, Jim Langford and his wife, Julia, are working to create a place where their urban children can feel safe and free.

impossible in such an environment, and the joy inherent in childhood is drained away day by day. Hope becomes inconceivable and a vicious cycle of poverty, crime, and violence is created.

This lack of access to nature was one aspect of the tragedy of urban youth that the Langfords felt they could combat. So slightly over a year ago they decided to build a program, called There Are Children Here, which they would open their home and grounds to disadvantaged children.

There Are Children Here is off to a solid start. Working through various organizations, including the Boys and Girls Clubs, Open Door and Head-Start programs, to identify and invite children, several groups of kids have already been out to the property. A board of directors, including Nobel-laureate Elie Wiesel and Chicago Bears star Chris Zorich, exists. An open house was held the Saturday before Easter, with Congressman Tom Roe and several other local officials among the many in attendance. Donations from both the local community and certain companies have begun to come in. There Are Children Here has secured not-for-profit corporation status and the zoning on the Langford property has been successfully changed to accommodate the program. Professor Langford has been gratified to see “what started out as my dream, become the dream for a lot of other people.”

However, the program is still in its infancy and significant needs still exist. Certain facilities to add to the overall experience enjoyed by the children are still hoped for, including a club house, ball field and basketball court. Nature trails are being constructed. A fund for operating expenses is gradually being established, and so There Are Children Here is eager for any donation "from a dollar to an endowment."

There Are Children Here represents something of critical importance to this country; private individuals working for the betterment of society on their own initiative without government intervention or funding. What’s more, the Langfords are trying to address a problem at its source rather than by treating its symptoms. They and There Are Children Here are in a battle for the preservation of the innocence and hope of children, and I, for one, can not think of a more important fight. It is my sincere hope that the Notre Dame community will choose to rally behind one of its own in this noble effort.

On a personal note, this is my last column of the 1994-95 school year. I'd like to thank all those that have read my work over the preceding eight months and, especially, those of you who have taken the time to respond to it via e-mail, phone calls, or letters. I look forward to exchanging observations and ideas with you all again next year.
Fatman: An old adage says that the journey is more important than the arrival. Fatman and Daddy have seen things that would make normal mortals shrivel into cotton masses of must in our long adventures through local movie theaters. And so in this, the arrival, we ventured to the local cinema for one last show before Fatman and Daddy, that is.

Excited to conclude the year, Daddy and I squeezed into the theater where "Destiny Turns on the Radio" looked to have potential. The film is a made-for-television spin-off of Quentin Tarantino's recent, much-discussed "Pulp Fiction". Daddy turned me on to this film in the movie along with the cute and lovable Jim Belushi. This dynamic combination was supposed to be the key to success for the movie, and it was. Belushi, towering over his red cap and tight perm for a spectacular fourth time. But whatever thank work done on this director's screen play needs to be terminated with extreme prejudice. When trying to put a film together, it is usually a prudent idea to develop a story line. Unfortunately, in "Destiny Turns on the Radio," some people forgot about this step in moviemaking. The only comparable error that the Fatman can think of is when directors sometime make a mess of a script.

Since "Destiny Turns on the Radio" is devoid of any coherent plot line, what might be some of its other, more tangible qualities? How about good acting? Well, James Belushi is in it. Well that eliminates that possibility. Then how about the score? "Destiny Turns on the Radio" has some of its momentum from "Pulp Fiction" transfer to "Destiny Turns on the Radio." No again. He's really not much of a actor, but at least he didn't win two Oscars. He didn't really play that large of a role in the movie. It's more like a supporting cast of a stylish mid-class, middle-class audience. The cars, costumes, and shooting locations are all "nice,"" to use the media to inspire the viewer to see the film. On the other hand, Daddy did win an Oscar, which is rather ominous, but done in a slick and pompous manner.

The world was disappointed by the last picture of the year. No substance and little style are not the yummy ingredients necessary for a decent film. The only factors that saved this movie were the acting consisted of the best at. Tarantino should keep to directing and acting roles and the movie is doomed to be a success.

Belles’ depth keeps keys

By CAROLINE BLUM
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's track team wrapped up one of the best season at the Elmhurst Invitational.

seasons the Belles have seen on Saturday with a 263 point finish at the Elmhurst Invitational.

When the team opened their indoor season in early February head coach Larry Szczeczkowski was overwhelmed with the number of incoming runners.

Unlike most years, however, the team's large roster refused to thin out as the season progressed, and every member was deemed valuable.

The Saint Mary's track team began their outdoor season with improvement as a theme.

At the team's first meet, the Wahash Invitational, the team began their improvement with a 111 point finish, a first place finish in the high jump from sophomore Joann Weed.

Junior Jill Jusick, sophomore Michelle Wenner and senior Kristen Donahue, and senior Joann Weed.

The next highlight of the team's season was over Easter break in the Little State Meet at IPUE.

Several personal records were set such as sophomore Francine Kivinen, who won the 800M, Kivinen's 5'2" jump in the high jump, junior Michelle Wenner's 5:01 time in the 1500M, and the 4x100 relay 54.2 time involving sophomore Courtney Powers, junior Jill Jusick, sophomore Kristin Donahue, and senior Joann Weed.

Also, record-breaker that day was in the 4x400 relay which consisted of Mellifont, sophomore Desiree Leak, Kivinen, and Wenner.

However, the team's greatest performance occurred last Saturday in their final meet of the season at the Elmhurst Invitational.

Although the invitational involved Division I and II, the Belles still scored 263 points, which was not only the most points the team earned all season, but the most points Mellifont's team had earned throughout the duration of Coach Szczeczkowski's career.

Starring in the meet were Mellifont, who shattered her school record yet again with her 32.8" throw in the shot put. Due to serious competition, however, the throw supplied Mellifont with only a sixth place.

"I'm very pleased with my performance on Saturday, but I do recognize a need for even more improvement," said Mellifont.

"I was impressed with her throw, but I know that it is still not my best," also a bit disappointed with her team on Saturday was Mellifont.

"I was disappointed in my race today," said Mellifont. "I wanted to earn my best time of my season, and I did. Overall, however, I do feel that this was a great season for us, and I hope to improve more next year. This is one of the best I have ever seen, due to the enormous depth and our great ability to work to­ ger together." Mellifont's performance was not so devastating to the competition, however, as she was awarded a second place for her 2:26.1 finish in the 800M.

The 4x100 relay composed of Jusick, Donahue, Weed, and sophomore Theresa Zamarrelli ran a fourth season record with their 53.8 time.

The 4x400M relay earned fifth place for their performance which involved Mellifont, Leak, and Wenner.

Other fifth places were awarded to Wenner in the 1500M and freshman Lori Mraz for her time in the 400M hurdles.

Most impressive to Coach Szczeczkowski was the fifth place finish of Jusick in the high jump.

"We never had anyone place in that event," said Szczeczkowski. "I'm really impressed with Jill. She has increased steadily throughout the season, along with the relay teams."

One disappointing aspect of the Belles' meet on Saturday was that it was the last for seton captain Joann Weed.

"That was a blow to the leadership of Joann next year," said Mellifont. "She has really guided and encouraged us throughout the season, as well as being a lot of fun."

Weed ended her career at Saint Mary's with a personal season record in the shot put of 317".

"I really feel like we had a memorial season this year. We earned more points in one season than any other track team has before," said Weed.

"On Saturday, we broke the school record for the most points scored in one meet, which was a great way to end the season as well as my college career."

The leading point scorers of the season involved Kivinen in first place, Mellifont in a close second, and Wenner in third with Jusick and Weed not far behind.

Coach Larry Szczeczkowski ended the season with words of praise to his '95 team.

"I attribute the team's success this year to their spirit and sense of commodore. This is the greatest group of athletes that I've seen in years, and I'm sorry to see the season end," said Szczeczkowski.

Lack of offensive output hinders Irish

By NEIL ZENDER
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame softball team won six straight games in Indiana to win the conference. The Hoosiers then proceeded to a double­ head, win­ning 2-0 and 3-1 respec­tively.

"We did not deserve to win today," Coach Liz Miller Perkins said. "It was probably the worst overall performance we've put in. We weren't here to win, we were here to play. Those are two entirely different things."

The Irish fell 2-0 in the first single was followed by Mellifont's performance.

At the Elmhurst Invitational, the Irish scored as they averaged over four runs per game. "That's something we've done well all year," Miller said. "We're pleased with that today. Part of it is that we were/i in the fourth frames but once again failed to score. It was unusual considering the Irish can score as they aver­ gage over four runs per game.

He makes things happen. It's that simple.

In the first half of Saturday's Blue-Gold Game, the Blue team offense was lethargically inefficient. But Stafford decided it was time to take things into his own hands, quite literally. What he took into those hands was pretty impressive, namely five Ron Powlus touchdown tosses. "I was just able to get open," Stafford said. "It was a lot of fun. I was fortunate enough to have a good day."

For Stafford, who was named the offensive player of the game, it's all about attitude. The attitude adjustment between the first and second halves was very apparent. But what concerns Stafford more is the change between this upcoming season and last season. If this spring is any indication, Stafford will be happy. "(The game) tells us that we have a chance to do something special," Stafford noted. "All of us have the right attitude. It is not what is said, it is what is not said. I see (Paul) Grasmanis. I see Powlus. It's in their eyes."

"It's also in Stafford's eyes. Chay grass全力 players live great plays," said the Stafford. "I say that every night before I go to bed. I want to make great plays.""}

Stafford explodes for five touchowns

He made more than his share on Saturday. To be more specific, the 5-foot-9 flanker snared 14, 37, 3, 9, and 15-yard touchdowns. And with ease.

He doesn't post the most impressive 40 times, but he got behind the defense. Defensive lineman has a better vertical leap, but when the ball was up for grabs, it was Stafford's and no one else's.

"I just want to make the offense more potent," the fifth-year senior-to-be said.

So, in his drive to be more productive, Stafford started with the little things, like his uniform number.

Wearing no. 24 last season, he decided a change would be appropriate so he switched with defensive back Ty Goode to a more receiver-like no. 81. "I know someone else who had success with this number. I'm just trying to emulate my game after him."

Stafford's evocation of Tim Brown's name is some heady stuff, but the ever-efficient Stafford sees real potential on this offense. "With the offensive line, it's a matter of attitude," said Stafford. "Well run the ball well and now Ron knows he has someone else to throw to."

The other main reason for the confidence is the team's mental state.

"We're playing for each other this year. The closer we are, the more success we'll have."
Wake-Up
quarterback Ron Powlus hit senior wideout Charles Stafford for five consecutive touchdowns to lead the Blue team to a 35-21 victory. "In the second half we just turned up the intensity, and we came through when we needed to," Powlus said of the comeback. "Charlie (Stafford) had a terrific day. Both those guys, Charlie and Derrick (Mayes) make it so much easier on me." I was disappointed in the sharpness and crispness of the first half," Holtz explained. "In the second half we played much better."
The lack of a more lopsided game could also be attributed to the play calling. "We were very limited today," Powlus commented. "The defense was the same all game and we didn't show much of fense at all." As the spring season came to a close, Holtz was very pleased. Especially after the offensive play in the second half of the game. "This has probably been the most productive spring practice I've had," he said.
INJURIES: Wideout Derrick Mayes provided a scare to Irish fans as he left the game with 3:50 left in the first half holding his left arm. After the game he answered the injury question by placing a sign to the sling around his left shoulder that said, "I sprained my shoulder." Doctors said he only needed to rest the shoulder and should be OK in a week or two. Along with Dusty Zeigler, defensive tackle Melvin Dansby also did not participate in the game. Rich Kazcenski filled in for Zeigler and Cliff Stroud started for Dansby. Stroud paced the Blue defense with four tackles in the first half.
SPECIAL TEAMS: The Irish may have found their man for kick-off returns. Back-up quarterback Wade Smith fielded the initial kick-off of the game at the seven and returned it 53 yards before being pushed out of bounds.
On a more serious note, senior walk-on Scott Palumbo punted four times for over a 44 yard average.
In A ZONE: Outside linebacker Bert Berry showed some flashes of pure dominance in the third quarter. After nose guard Paul Grammas left a quarterback fumble, Berry picked the ball from mid-air and dragged running back Clement Stokes for 17 yards. In the Gold team's next offensive series, Berry stopped Stokes for a seven yard loss. Tackled quarterback Tom Krug on a roll out and then sacked Krug for a five yard loss.
If he can maintain such level of play in the regular season, he could become one of the most dominating defensive players in collegiate football.
OF NOTE: Neither defensive back Allen Rossouw or Ivory Covingtton did anything to solidify the cornerbacl slot across from Shawn Woods. Whereas on the other side of the ball, Clement Stokes led all rushers with 49 yards Sunday. He was the only offensive spark for a gold team that was given 21 points at halftime. Running backs Robert Farmer and Clement Stokes continued an impressive spring season by running well during the Blue-Gold game. Farmer rushed eight times for 47 yards and Stokes carried the ball 15 times behind the second string line for 60 yards.

guys are the future of the tournament, and if any of them join forces, they will be dangerous. Jimmy Keenan (Diamondbacks) may be the best true point guard out there, followed closely by Adin McCann (We’re the Truth). Paul Rainey (Cactus Jack) is a fantastic slashing who has already signed on with Models INC, the sequel. Jarvis Edison (CASH) was the smoothest of the fresh football players, and John Haigh (All-Bookstore) looks to be “guru” II.
The Best Talker. No one was more entertaining than Chuck Stafford (Pink Sky). A lot of players jaw with each other and the referees, but Stafford is the clear winner for his interaction with the fans. “I’m a man, so you have to get a man out here to guard me,” was one of his best lines.

The all-instance team. These guys would dive on the ground if they saw a penny. Dave Baker (Diamondbacks) and Rich Probst (Wooden Shoes) headline this group, joined by Jason Hanley (Showtime), Jason Woodward (Woody & 4 Other Stuff) and Brad Fish (NBT 2).
The “We love to hate them” team. Some of the best players certainly don’t endear themselves to the crowds, no matter how spectacularly they play. Models Williams was definitely the most despised, especially following the controversy in the finals. The Ziolkowski twins (C.C.E.) will always have a spot on this squad, although they improved their bad boy image this year. Nate Walters (ARCOLA) drew derision for his “underwear” headgear. The university administration will take the final spot for forcing the move of the elite eight games from traditional Bookstore to Stepans.

Best and Worst shots. Pat Walsh’s (Woodys) rainmaker to beat Cactus Jack’s was the most dramatic, while Lamar Justice’s (C.C.E.) wide open missed dunk killed his squad’s chances in the final night.

Best dancer. Owen Smith (Models INC.) is the hands down winner, as his moves before the final were worthy of Michael Jackson.

Crowd favorite. Everyone loved NBT’s Mark Zatavatski, as the big lineman’s wacky socks and fast break rumbles brought some needed levity to tense games.

Most quotable. Tracy Graham (Models INC.) made the boldest statement in guaranteeing victory before the Sweet Sixteen had been made. This bravado was refreshing among the usual “We played well as a team” quotes favored by the rest of the field. Honorable mention goes out to Joe Haigh.
The “Walk softly and carry a big stick” team. This squad is the antithesis of the trash talkers: you might miss them on the court, except of course they are lighting you up. This could double as the unsung hero team. Greg Midget (Models INC.), Pat Kenney (Rebel Alliance) and Matt Collins (Showtime) were towers of strength for their team in understated fashion. Jean Joseph (Pink Sky) and Jason Newcomer (SWOOSH) form a backcourt that was quietly effective.

The all-Star team you’ve never heard of. Some people get the spotlight, others are missed. These guys are ones to watch next year: Kevin Janicki (KERDDOG), Keith Eastland (Cactus Jack’s), Ryan Bolf (Wooden Shoes), John Heilman (We’re the Truth) and Dan Fannon (DOS KLOSSAS).

Best play of the tourney. No one will forget Zatavatski’s flamboyant no-look pass to Haigh off the break in the championship. For those keeping score at home, Haigh blew the layup.

The Best Talker. No one was more entertaining than Chuck Stafford (Pink Sky). A lot of players jaw with each other and the referees, but Stafford is the clear winner for his interaction with the fans. “I’m a man, so you have to get a man out here to guard me,” was one of his best lines.

The all-instance team. These guys would dive on the ground if they saw a penny. Dave Baker (Diamondbacks) and Rich Probst (Wooden Shoes) headline this group, joined by Jason Hanley (Showtime), Jason Woodward (Woody & 4 Other Stuff) and Brad Fish (NBT 2).

Best and Worst shots. Pat Walsh’s (Woodys) rainmaker to beat Cactus Jack’s was the most dramatic, while Lamar Justice’s (C.C.E.) wide open missed dunk killed his squad’s chances in the final night.

Best dancer. Owen Smith (Models INC.) is the hands down winner, as his moves before the final were worthy of Michael Jackson.

Crowd favorite. Everyone loved NBT’s Mark Zatavatski, as the big lineman’s wacky socks and fast break rumbles brought some needed levity to tense games.

Most quotable. Tracy Graham (Models INC.) made the boldest statement in guaranteeing victory before the Sweet Sixteen had been made. This bravado was refreshing among the usual “We played well as a team” quotes favored by the rest of the field. Honorable mention goes out to Joe Haigh.

game as Models controlled the backboards and muscled NBT2.
"He made them so much stronger," said NBT's Tom Hinehart. "He killed us in the first half and played great defense on Zat.""Zat was remarkable yesterday (Saturday) and we knew we had to stop him to have a chance," said Models' Conrad James, who had 3 points and 5 rebounds.
Zataveski, an intense competitor with a fun loving attitude, could not get into the flow against Wynn as he managed only 2 points. His semifinal performance consisted of no-look passes and fast break layups as he carried NBT into the final.
"He made them so much firepower. However, Models had critical offensive rebounds, including Owen Smith's follow-up basket to end the game. Smith's fourth point and first rebound of the day ended the contest.
"The key was rebounding," explained Bookstore MVP Jason Williams. "We had four athletes that they couldn't stop."
Williams, running the point for Models, scored six points in front of a hostile crowd. Every stoppage in play resulted in loud insults directed toward the flamboyant Williams.
"What they say up there doesn't predict what I do in life, but it will prepare me for it." "The whole campus was against him," said Graham.
"We had confidence in him and I stood by him the whole way. He doesn't get enough credit."
"The crowd just pumped us even more," added James. "It made us play harder because we had to rely on each other. We knew people were against us from the beginning when they booed us walking out of Flanner." NBT had the crowd going in their favor at the outset as Haigh hit two long jumpers to open the game. Every steal or basket by NBT was followed by loud cheers as the lead changed hands four times early.
"I'm used to playing with the crowd against me, but I guess they just rooted for the underdog," said the affable Zataveski. "We were having fun putting on a show and I loved it."
Once Models settled down, the forward trio of Greg Midgett, James and Smith converted numerous tip-ins to take an 11-9 halftime lead. Midgett finished with three points and nine boards.
"We both wanted to guard him and try to contain him," said Fish about Williams. "I loved the challenge, but he hit his free throws to clinch it."
After a rain soaked tournament, the No. 1 seed ended where they started.
"The best team won and it showed on the court," concluded commissioner John Albrighton.
Irish on brink of Great Western League title

Colley's seven points keys win over Spartans

Senior Marc Pasquale (left) helped the Irish defeat Michigan State as his goal stopped a Spartan run of five unanswered scores to secure the Notre Dame win.

The road to the NCAA lacrosse tournament took a brief pit stop in East Lansing last weekend.

For the third year in a row, Michigan State fell to the Irish, leaving Notre Dame one game away from the Great Western Lacrosse League title.

The story of the day was the offensive dominance of Randy Colley. The tri-captain scored six goals on the afternoon, and dished off once to give him seven points against MSU.

Colley and the rest of the offense had no greater ally on the day than the weak MSU defense.

"They just had poor backside defense, and we were able to take advantage of that with some good plays. They played bad defense off the ball," said attackman Will DeRiso, who scored two goals in the contest.

Tim Kearney, who amassed four assists against the Spartans, opened up the scoring for the Irish ten minutes into the first quarter. The man-up goal, assisted by Will Colley, was the only goal of the period for either team.

The second quarter was a different story. Notre Dame jumped out to a 7-0 lead on goals by Colley, Brian Griffith, and DeRiso.

With 2:18 left in the half, MSU got on the scoreboard on a goal by Chris Clark, who ended up with three goals for the Spartans.

"We had a lot of movement, which created lots of opportunities," said Kearney. "Their defense wasn't handling us too well, and our middies did what we wanted to do offensively and defensively."

Michigan State began a run in the second half, closing the margin to 7-5. The streak was short lived, as the Irish man-up offense ended the run with a strong possession and goal by Marc Pasquale. Colley found the net twice before the end of the third, and also scored to open the fourth quarter.

Much of the day's success came from the crease play of Alex Cade. "Alex came up big for us. He had lots of key saves, especially in the first half, that kept the momentum in our favor," Kearney said.

The Irish can close up the GWLL with a win next week over Ohio State. A win will give Kevin Corrigan's squad their fourth straight NCAA bid.

Models gives NBT nothing but trouble

By DOMINIC AMOROSA

If you can walk the walk, then you can talk the talk. Models INC. began Bookstore Basketball XXIV as the No. 1 seed, remained No. 1 after the sweet 16 reseeding, told everyone that they were No. 1 and ended the tournament as the 1995 champion. Along the way, Models INC’s Tracy Graham guaranteed a championship no matter who or where they played:

Yesterday, Models INC. proved that they were the best and made Graham a prophet, as they beat NBT2 21-16 in front of a huge crowd at Stepan.

"I knew we were going to win because man for man we had the best team," said Graham. "I could put a guarantee on that because we were so confident."

"You’re allowed to be cocky when you win," said NBT2’s Mark Zataveski.

"I never even thought about losing until they hit 20," commented NBT2’s Mr. Bookstore Joe Haigh. "It’s disappointing, because we expected to win."

Graham became a sideline cheerleader yesterday as Renaldo Wynn stepped in for Models. Wynn’s physical presence, along with his five points, made the difference in the 21-16 win. The victory backed up their claim that they were the best team in the tournament.

Blue team rejuvenated with halftime wake-up call

By THOMAS SCHLIDT
Assistant Sports Editor

When the Irish left the field for halftime, there were murmurs of disappointment and worry. How could the Blue team, made up of the first team offense and defense, end the first half with the scoreboard reading 0-0.

Surely the offense missed the leadership of center Dusty Zeigler along the offensive line, but his absence shouldn’t cripple them that much. What did this say about their chances against better defenses in the forthcoming 1995 season.

When the teams took to the field for the second half there was a noticeable difference. Mysteriously the Gold team had a 21-0 lead, and Lou Holtz had returned to the field from his seat in the press box.

"It should have been 35-0 at halftime and then I would have had them switch jerseys," Holtz said of the score change.

"They must have known that," he joked and then continued. "But this shouldn’t happen. We wanted to get the intensity up in the second half."

Thus Holtz had to change the score himself and it worked. The blue offense woke up and...
