Candidates make last day push

As polls open this morning at 6 a.m., voters are faced with the choice between Democratic incumbent Joseph Kernan, who is seeking his third term as mayor, and Republican challenger Michael Waite, a businessman from South Bend. Waite, who ran for mayor in 1987, is hoping to unseat Kernan but has faced several roadblocks during his campaign including an arrest for unpaid bills, a lawsuit for back taxes, and an unpaid bill. Kernan, who is seeking his third term as mayor, and Waite are running in the city mayoral election. The election is being held today.

By JAMIE HEISLER
Assistant News Editor

The expansion of Notre Dame Stadium began yesterday as workers removed the limestone blocks on the top of the stadium walls, and cut down trees in the lot surrounding the stadium.

The expansion and renovation of Notre Dame Stadium during yesterday's official groundbreaking ceremonies for the stadium's expansion, the Irish head football coach paused for a moment.

"Well, I guess my Kent State education finally came in handy," he said, smiling to onlookers.

Holtz, a 1959 graduate of Kent State, will leave construction duties to the workers of Castelle Construction Corporation during the rest of the 21-month-long expansion project, but he didn't leave the ceremony yesterday without getting a little nostalgic.

"I've been coaching here for 10 years now, and I've had a lot of great memories in that time," Holtz said. "I can only imagine the memories that other people have had going into the stadium for 40, 50 years."

The expansion of the stadium, which opened in 1930, is expected to be completed in time for the home opener against Georgia Tech on September 6, 1997. The expanded facility will hold 80,990 spectators, an increase of 22,915.

"The expansion gives more people an opportunity not just to see Notre Dame football, but an opportunity to see Notre Dame," Holtz said. "I don't believe there will be many more great memories in the new stadium."

The latest chapter in the history of the facility was closed Saturday, when the Irish defeated Navy, 35-17. Interestingly, at the official dedication of the stadium's opening on October 4, 1930, Notre Dame's opponent was also Navy. That day, the Irish downed the Midshipmen by a 26-2 score.

Workers began the project yesterday by removing limestone blocks from the top of the existing stadium walls and cutting down trees in the parking lot surrounding the stadium.

Ground-breaking kicks off expansion

By BRAD PRENDERGAST
Associate News Editor

After Lou Holtz joined other University officials in shovel­ing out a strip of grass outside Notre Dame Stadium during yesterday's official groundbreaking ceremony for the stadium's expansion, the Irish head football coach paused for a moment.

"Well, I guess my Kent State education finally came in handy," he said, smiling to onlookers.

Holtz, a 1959 graduate of Kent State, will leave construction duties to the workers of Castelle Construction Corporation during the rest of the 21-month-long expansion project, but he didn't leave the ceremony yesterday without getting a little nostalgic.

"I've been coaching here for 10 years now, and I've had a lot of great memories in that time," Holtz said. "I can only imagine the memories that other people have had going into the stadium for 40, 50 years."

The expansion of the stadium, which opened in 1930, is expected to be completed in time for the home opener against Georgia Tech on September 6, 1997. The expanded facility will hold 80,990 spectators, an increase of 22,915.

"The expansion gives more people an opportunity not just to see Notre Dame football, but an opportunity to see Notre Dame," Holtz said. "I don't believe there will be many more great memories in the new stadium."

The latest chapter in the history of the facility was closed Saturday, when the Irish defeated Navy, 35-17. Interestingly, at the official dedication of the stadium's opening on October 4, 1930, Notre Dame's opponent was also Navy. That day, the Irish downed the Midshipmen by a 26-2 score.

Workers began the project yesterday by removing limestone blocks from the top of the existing stadium walls and cutting down trees in the parking lot surrounding the stadium.
The professor to student link

I like getting the most out of my liberal arts education. I like taking a wide variety of courses, whether it be accounting, international relations, creative writing. And I like learning over the years, it doesn't always mean to fall behind (or even worse, fall asleep). There are days when even the most interesting professors can elicit yawns from their classrooms.

It's not always the professor's fault, of course. As a student, we're not always the most captive of audience. In the confusion of 15 to 18 credits, seminar papers, labs and group projects, it's easy to fall behind (or even worse, fall asleep). There are days when even the most interesting professors can elicit yawns from their classrooms. We don't always mean to do this. Really, we don't.

But help us on this one, please. Know our situation, having to attend in both LaFortune and wait for one of us to walk by. Buy us a coke. Let us buy you a coke. Invite us to come to dinner and have delicious food. Throw candy at us during class. Bring in picture-perfect refreshments. Let us eat out early some day. Have class outside. Encourage class bonding sessions.

The possibilities are endless.

Granted, I'm 21 years old and I'm asking my professors to do this for me. I'm sure more than just a mid-term/final, one semester basis. If we're bored in class, it's not just the fault of the teacher. Maybe it's time we started looking for ways to make things more interesting and informative. Take an interest in your students as people. The more interaction you have with us, the better we do. We really don't want to let you down. That's especially true when we know you well.

As students, we should be people whom professors care about, not just what we can do for the grade. It should count for more than just a mid-term/final, one semester basis. If we're bored in class, it's not just the fault of the teacher. Maybe it's time we started looking for ways to make things more interesting and informative. Take an interest in your students as people. The more interaction you have with us, the better we do. We really don't want to let you down. That's especially true when we know you well.

As students, we should be people whom professors care about, not just what we can do for the grade. It should count for more than just a mid-term/final, one semester basis. If we're bored in class, it's not just the fault of the teacher. Maybe it's time we started looking for ways to make things more interesting and informative. Take an interest in your students as people. The more interaction you have with us, the better we do. We really don't want to let you down. That's especially true when we know you well.

As students, we should be people whom professors care about, not just what we can do for the grade. It should count for more than just a mid-term/final, one semester basis. If we're bored in class, it's not just the fault of the teacher. Maybe it's time we started looking for ways to make things more interesting and informative. Take an interest in your students as people. The more interaction you have with us, the better we do. We really don't want to let you down. That's especially true when we know you well.

As students, we should be people whom professors care about, not just what we can do for the grade. It should count for more than just a mid-term/final, one semester basis. If we're bored in class, it's not just the fault of the teacher. Maybe it's time we started looking for ways to make things more interesting and informative. Take an interest in your students as people. The more interaction you have with us, the better we do. We really don't want to let you down. That's especially true when we know you well.

As students, we should be people whom professors care about, not just what we can do for the grade. It should count for more than just a mid-term/final, one semester basis. If we're bored in class, it's not just the fault of the teacher. Maybe it's time we started looking for ways to make things more interesting and informative. Take an interest in your students as people. The more interaction you have with us, the better we do. We really don't want to let you down. That's especially true when we know you well.

As students, we should be people whom professors care about, not just what we can do for the grade. It should count for more than just a mid-term/final, one semester basis. If we're bored in class, it's not just the fault of the teacher. Maybe it's time we started looking for ways to make things more interesting and informative. Take an interest in your students as people. The more interaction you have with us, the better we do. We really don't want to let you down. That's especially true when we know you well.

As students, we should be people whom professors care about, not just what we can do for the grade. It should count for more than just a mid-term/final, one semester basis. If we're bored in class, it's not just the fault of the teacher. Maybe it's time we started looking for ways to make things more interesting and informative. Take an interest in your students as people. The more interaction you have with us, the better we do. We really don't want to let you down. That's especially true when we know you well.

As students, we should be people whom professors care about, not just what we can do for the grade. It should count for more than just a mid-term/final, one semester basis. If we're bored in class, it's not just the fault of the teacher. Maybe it's time we started looking for ways to make things more interesting and informative. Take an interest in your students as people. The more interaction you have with us, the better we do. We really don't want to let you down. That's especially true when we know you well.

As students, we should be people whom professors care about, not just what we can do for the grade. It should count for more than just a mid-term/final, one semester basis. If we're bored in class, it's not just the fault of the teacher. Maybe it's time we started looking for ways to make things more interesting and informative. Take an interest in your students as people. The more interaction you have with us, the better we do. We really don't want to let you down. That's especially true when we know you well.

As students, we should be people whom professors care about, not just what we can do for the grade. It should count for more than just a mid-term/final, one semester basis. If we're bored in class, it's not just the fault of the teacher. Maybe it's time we started looking for ways to make things more interesting and informative. Take an interest in your students as people. The more interaction you have with us, the better we do. We really don't want to let you down. That's especially true when we know you well.

As students, we should be people whom professors care about, not just what we can do for the grade. It should count for more than just a mid-term/final, one semester basis. If we're bored in class, it's not just the fault of the teacher. Maybe it's time we started looking for ways to make things more interesting and informative. Take an interest in your students as people. The more interaction you have with us, the better we do. We really don't want to let you down. That's especially true when we know you well.

As students, we should be people whom profess
Service named key goal for SMC

By HEATHER CROSS
News Writer

Saint Mary's Residence Hall Association (RHA) proved once again that service is an important part of life at the college. At last night's meeting, hall council members discussed how they plan to serve the community and those in need during the upcoming holiday season.

The RHA's publicity committee came up with a plan to provide a discount on t-shirts to those students who donate non-perishable food items. The food will be used for either Thanksgiving dinner and Christmas gifts. But the holiday tradition continues beyond Thanksgiving and Christmas. Last week, the hall council organized a Halloween event for local children. Forty kids roamed the halls of LeMann, scaring the residents into giving them a tremendous amount of treats. The Shuhen bookstore donated Trick-or-Treat bags, while the United Limo Service donated a bus to transport the goals and goblins to and from campus.

Regina Hall has decided to center their service around monthly visits to theYWCA. Their service visits begin later this month. The hall council's holiday service project will be open for any resident to purchase a gift for a needy family. The name of the gift will be attached to a balloon, and each resident will be able to choose from the bunch of colorful balloons in the front lobby.

The RHA invites all residents to take advantage of the many service opportunities offered on campus. In other RHA news, the 100 dance rule and the alcohol issues surrounding dances are still being addressed by the council.

The next meeting of the Saint Mary's RHA will be next Monday at 9:15 p.m. on the third floor of Haggar.

New SURV leaders
support involvement

By MAUREEN HURLEY
Saint Mary's News Editor

After a slump in activity, Nicole Howet and Robin Walsh take the helm of the Student Unified Volunteer Resource (SURV), steering the service-based organization in a new direction.

SURV, a student-run service office that works in conjunction with Notre Dame's Center for Social Concerns, attempts to "initiate students in the habits of civic responsibility" that Saint Mary's College specifies in its mission statement.

Students have criticized SURV's role on campus, citing too few service projects. According to this year's co-directors, Hoewet and Walsh, the students are working to increase visibility on campus, along with student involvement.

Major goals include "getting more students involved and getting more people aware of the organization," according to Howet. She said the criticisms stem from the fact that students don't realize "we're a very small organization, that serves as a referral service."

"We don't have a paid staff, or the vehicles or means to get people places," Howet said. "We don't have enough people to do what the students think we should be doing."

SURV is expanding, however, with working with Campus Ministry and gaining the guidance of faculty adviser Sister Petrina Ferrante. Both Hoewet and Walsh stress that the current staff, consisting of five members, is not sufficient to meet the group's goals of expansion. Anyone interested in working with SURV is encouraged to attend their meetings, which take place every Thursday at 4:15 p.m. in room 250 Haggar.
continued from page 1

as visionary liberal who helped design much of Rabin's peace plan. But he has been criticized for a lack of charisma and for his over-willingness to compromise on Israeli security issues with the Syrians and Palestinians.

"He clearly doesn't want for ideas," Burrell said. "In fact, he's a very busy man, but without enough practicality."

Even if Peres benefits from a groundswell of support for Rabin's goals, it remains unclear if it will last for months, weeks, or only until the next outbreak of violence in the region. The perception of Peres' weak stature combined with the strong beliefs of conservative Likud party members may pull the momentum away from the Labor party to the more security conscious Likud.

"Peres has been stigmatized
by Likud as a career politician and a weak opportunist," Gaffney said. "It just can't be expected that this process is going to get any easier. I don't think Likud is going to give an inch. These are hard-bitten people who believe in their ideas with a lot of force."

Technically, the peace process itself can not be completely reversed by members of Likud
because the larger agreements negotiated by Rabin, including those dealing with West Bank autonomy, are binding. But Gaffney explained that right
wingers, led by opposition
leader Benyamin Natanyahu, could easily halt the process by defeating Peres' new coalition in the house of parliament, the Knesset.

"My heart is there with Rabin's vision of a new turn, but realistically, it looks like the process is going to stall," he said. "The right was and still is very wary and they are going to exert pressure to halt it."

But not everyone accepts that vision of the future. Burrell suggested that the Israeli Likud could face a backlash because of the actions of one extremist.

"The right wing will be absolutely silenced," Burrell said.
"They won't dare raise their voice after this."

"Likud's preoccupation with security was old language," he said. "The right was and still is rather than a

Alovist who helped promote an independence movement in the 1950's. But he has been criticized by some because of his

Stadium continued from page 1

structure. Clearing the site in preparation for expanding the stadium is expected to last into mid-December.

Utility lines are expected to be installed in the next few weeks, and concrete foundation work is slated to begin later in November.

Joining Holtz at yesterday's ceremony were Father William Beauchamp, executive vice-president of the University;
Mike Wadsworth, athletic director; Chuck Lennon, executive director of the Notre Dame Alumni Association;
Jonathan Patrick, student body
president; and Dennis McCarthy, student body president.

Happy Birthday

Michael

Hoody!

All my love,

Dorie

Celebrate a friend's birthday with a special Observer ad

The E & J Gallo Winery
Management Development Program

An accelerated program designed to provide in-depth knowledge of sales and marketing management. Participants achieve assignments in areas such as:

• Field Marketing Management - (Winery field consultants responsible for developing sales and marketing strategies)

• National Account Management - (Senior sales specialists responsible for maximizing the sales of Winery products through national retail chains)

• Sales Management & General Management - (Management professionals responsible for the overall operation of distributor sales organizations)

...just to name a few

Please accept our invitation to attend an informational presentation. We will further explain the Management Development Program and answer any questions that you may have.

The presentation details:

Date: November 7, 1995

Time: 6:30 pm

Location: Morris Inn, Notre Dame Room

Attire: Casual

All majors welcome

Sponsored by The Notre Dame Marketing Club
FDA told to approve AIDS drug

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press

SILVER SPRING, Md. The drug 3TC should be approved as the first new initial therapy to treat AIDS since the original AIDS drug AZT, scientific advisers told the Food and Drug Administration on Monday.

A combination of 3TC and AZT boosted the immune system of patients and lowered the amount of the HIV virus, which causes AIDS, in their blood.

But more significantly, the drug combination showed more effect in patients who had never taken AZT than in those who have taken AZT alone, as is standard for most patients, manufacturer Glaxo Wellcome said.

The FDA advisers agreed, although they cautioned there are a lot of unanswered questions that patients must be aware of before choosing to try the combination therapy over AZT alone.

"I am very uncomfortable giving this regimen in a widespread way" because of all the questions, said Dr. Douglas Hammer of New England Deaconess Hospital in Boston.

But the committee cautioned that the drug must carry a warning that it may cause dangerous pancreatitis in children - 1.4 percent incidence in one study.

The FDA is not obliged to accept the recommendations of advisory panels, but it usually does.

In adults, 3TC does not appear to cause any more side effects than AZT alone. But the panel stressed that 3TC should not be used alone.

Glaxo is seeking approval under a special FDA program that allows drugs for fatal diseases to undergo less rigorous testing than usually required. And Glaxo wants to sell 3TC not only to obviously sick people in later stages of AIDS but also to healthier people infected by HIV.

The committee was unable to decide at what point patients should start taking the 3TC-AZT combination.

AIDS activists support the drug but urge caution in its use. Some criticized the company for not conducting tests to see if 3TC works equally well in both early and advanced patients - or the best time to start taking it.

ND alum appointed director

William Doyle, a 1985 Notre Dame alumnus from Arlington Heights, Ill., has been appointed assistant director of the University of Chicago regional development office.

Doyle studied marketing at Notre Dame and was graduated with a degree in business administration. His career so far has been in sales with the Montgomery Elevator Company of Moline, Ill. Beginning as a sales engineer in Boston, he has worked in Chicago, Miami, and Fort Wayne, Ind., before assuming his most recent position as senior sales manager in Montgomery Elevator’s Chicago office.

Doyle will assist Chuck Schur, regional director of development, in the fundraising efforts in Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, and Arkansas.

They swear it's real
The World Wrestling Federation brought its travelling circus to the Joyce Center last night. After a heated match, former champion Bob Backlund celebrated his "victory" over Marty Genetti.

Put Gallo To The Test....

☑ Accelerated path to a career in Sales Marketing Management.
☑ Outstanding Consumer Products Sales Training.
☑ Industry Leadership.

Check out the E. & J. Gallo Winery’s Sales Management Program. Interested Juniors & Seniors should attend our:

Informational Session

Morris Inn - Notre Dame Room
Tuesday, November 7, 1995
6:30 PM
Dress is Casual

E. & J. Gallo Winery
Sales Management Program

Spring Break 1996
TRAVEL FREE!!

Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas
Panama City, Daytona, Ponce
 Great low, low prices
 Free trip on only 15 sales
Call for a FREE information packet!

Sun Splash Tours
1-800-426-7710
In his Oct. 5 address to the United Nations, Pope John Paul based his plea for "freedom" and "solidarity" on the natural law concept. "Natural law... rooted in the nature of the person,... which reflects... the universal human rights, written on the human heart." Throughout his visit, he reiterated that theme. The natural law concept is something "everybody knows... is rooted in the nature of the person,... is something obvious... and provides a common standard for the law of that nature so that the law will be actuated with a purpose.

The law of our nature can be known certainly, as Thomas Aquinas put it, "by the light of natural reason, whereby we discern what is good and what is evil." (Summa Theologiae, I, II, 92, art.2) And God has provided specific directions in Revelation, including the Ten Commandments, which express the "principal precepts of the natural law." (Catechism of the Catholic Church, No. 1955)

The first, self-evident principle of the natural law is, in Aquinas' words, "that good is to be done and promoted, and evil is to be avoided." (S.T., I,II, Q.95, art.2) Unjust laws are "acts of violence rather than laws." We may be obliged to obey an unjust law "to avoid scandal to the precept of the moral order" (S.T., I,II, Q.95, art.3) and to prevent "acts of violence rather than laws." We are "free from the truth but always and only freedom in the truth..." (Veritatis Splendor, No. 65.)

The teaching authority of the Church, when she pronounces on moral questions, in no way undermines the freedom of conscience of Christians. This is so... because freedom of conscience is never freedom from the truth but always and only freedom in the truth... The Church's authority is never a standard for law and human conduct. It is a guide to the truth but not to a dogmatic conclusion.

Pope challenges mankind to obey natural law

THE OBSERVER
NOTRE DAME, IN 46556 (219) 631-7471
SAINT MARY'S OFFICE, 309 Hugue, Notre Dame, IN 46556 (219) 631-5562
1995-96 General Board
Managing Editor /Viewpoint
President Senate
Business Manager /Joseph Garity
News Editor /David Tyler
Advertising Manager /John Foster
Viewpoint Editorial /Michael O'Hara
Viewpoint Assistant /Sue Rice
Acceet Editor /Kris Nustasy
Stuart Mary's Editor /Paul Taitson
Controller /Eric Lange

The Observer is the independent newspaper published by the students of the University of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's College. It is not necessarily the opinion of the administration or editors. The news is printed in an objective and accurately possible. Unsigned editorial pages are owned by the majority of the Observer. Managing Editor, News Editors, Viewpoint Editors, Access Editor, Photo Editor, Spectrum Editor, and Saint Mary's Editors. Contributions,Guest Columns, and Opinion Pages do not necessarily reflect the views of The Observer. Viewpoint space is available to all members of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community and to all members of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community. The free exchange of opposing opinions through letters is encouraged.

Charles Rice

GARRY TRUDEAU

-Quocue of the Day-

"There is no such thing as 'natural law': this is nothing but old nonsense."

—Henri Beyle Stendhal
Irishman sheds light on homeland conflict

Matt Apple

Weird things that make South Bend our home

No clever intro to this one. And no "top ten lists" for me; I'm tired of those.

* The Sabbath. Nothing around here is open on Sunday. These folks don't really have a day off. I'm not even joking. It's a remnant of the "blue laws." I assume, among other things, that alcohol sales, which are designed to make everyone observe "the Lord's Day." Regardless of the religious intolerance inherent in this rule, I have to wonder why Illinois still allows the Colts to play on Sunday. The players and coaches, the renegade fans, all work with a sense of defiance of the Lord's Will. Of course, if there was no football on Sunday in Indiana, I don't suppose the rest of the world would change.

* Motor vehicle oddity. I have heard that in Indiana it is illegal to get out of your car, even if you need to use the bathroom, without a police inspection for headlights, brake lights, and other minor matters. These six North Eastern counties were specifically selected so that a pro union, anti-union, police were used.

During the years from 1921 to 1969 various techniques were used to discriminate against the Catholic people of this area. This included gerrymandering, someone someone someone, housing, work, education and voting rights. From this unjust society sprang the GVL rights movement of the late 60's. From this the IRA rose. In the mid 70's they had approximately twenty activists and virtually no arms of any kind. As a fact that is constantly overlooked is that for such an organization to develop into the most powerful guerrilla group in the world, with their arsenal, they had to have had the support of a large section of society. So the question is; a sole thing a guerrilla group needs to survive is public support, most importantly to provide "safe houses" and personnel. Growing up in Northern Ireland there is a great and sometimes terrifying experience. However it has taught me that I have to take some responsibility directed at me as has been tained either consciously or subconsciously to demonize those people with whom I have nothing to do. I've learned some charity.

I consider the prospect of Gerry Adams taking at this college a great opportunity for all students to hear about the struggle against the British media, not the one of bigoted self-interest, but one of peace. The party he leads has more councils on the Belfast City council than any other party. One in every three nation­alists in the North of Ireland constantly votes Sinn Fein despite the popular vote for the British media, not the one of bigoted self-interest, but one of peace. The party he leads has more councils on the Belfast City council than any other party. One in every three nationalists in the North of Ireland constantly votes Sinn Fein despite the popular vote for the British media, not the one of bigoted self-interest, but one of peace.

I consider the prospect of Gerry Adams taking at this college a great opportunity for all students to hear about the struggle against the British media, not the one of bigoted self-interest, but one of peace. The party he leads has more councils on the Belfast City council than any other party. One in every three nationalists in the North of Ireland constantly votes Sinn Fein despite the popular vote for the British media, not the one of bigoted self-interest, but one of peace.

I consider the prospect of Gerry Adams taking at this college a great opportunity for all students to hear about the struggle against the British media, not the one of bigoted self-interest, but one of peace. The party he leads has more councils on the Belfast City council than any other party. One in every three nationalists in the North of Ireland constantly votes Sinn Fein despite the popular vote for the British media, not the one of bigoted self-interest, but one of peace.

I consider the prospect of Gerry Adams taking at this college a great opportunity for all students to hear about the struggle against the British media, not the one of bigoted self-interest, but one of peace. The party he leads has more councils on the Belfast City council than any other party. One in every three nationalists in the North of Ireland constantly votes Sinn Fein despite the popular vote for the British media, not the one of bigoted self-interest, but one of peace.

I consider the prospect of Gerry Adams taking at this college a great opportunity for all students to hear about the struggle against the British media, not the one of bigoted self-interest, but one of peace. The party he leads has more councils on the Belfast City council than any other party. One in every three nationalists in the North of Ireland constantly votes Sinn Fein despite the popular vote for the British media, not the one of bigoted self-interest, but one of peace.
Backpack or Shoulder bag? Which do you use?

"Backpacks, because two straps are twice as fun."
John Gordon, Sophomore, Keenan

"I use a shoulder bag because it's easy to get my stuff in and out of, and it's convenient."
Mary Wendell, Senior, Cavanaugh

"A shoulder bag is easy on the strenuous muscles and chicks dig it."
Alex Montoya, Senior, St. Edward's

"I would have to choose a bookbag because it seems to me that you can fit more books in it."
Joe Olegario, Freshman, Alumni

"Shoulder bag. I like the style better. It's easier to pick up and run."
Sarah Corkrean, Sophomore, McCandless

"Bookbag. It's easier to carry. You can carry it different ways."
Natalie Nolan, Freshman, Regina

By MEGAN FERSTENFELD

I t's with you nearly every waking hour, by your side or underfoot. You see it even more than you talk to your roommates or best friends. To lose it would be catastrophic and possibly emotionally scarring. It’s your bookbag, that trusty old piece of canvas or leather that holds little less than your life.

Indeed, bookbags are an integral part of academic existence here at Notre Dame, as students must carry their materials to class day in, day out, rain or shine. However, no two bags are alike, as any ND or Saint Mary's student can and will attest. Rather, they are just as unique and highly personalized as the individuals who carry them. What prompts students to pick a particular bag? As it turns out, everything from lifestyle and function, to appearance and brand play a role.

The two most common types of bags on campus are backpacks and shoulder-strap bags, each having their own set of advantages and drawbacks. Students who prefer backpacks say they are more comfortable and can hold more books. One junior stated, "I had a shoulder bag once, but when I had to walk long distances it became annoying because I had to constantly readjust it." In addition, students who bike or blade to class find that backpacks are essential. "I have to have a backpack to ride my bike, otherwise I can't stay balanced," Pangborn resident Kimberly McGhay confided.

Fans of the shoulder-strap variety also are convinced that theirs are the superior bags. They are "much easier to carry because you don't have to fumble with all those straps—you just sling it over your arm and go," sophomore Sean Westen joins. Moreover, they look "less studious and more classy," according to one senior. Finally, shoulder bags supposedly have more places and pockets for essentials like pens, pencils and calculators, which are necessary features for students who are concerned about organization.

As far as physiological advantages, Dr. K. Ronald Stedman, D.C., of the McKinley Spinal Center believes that backpacks are more beneficial. A backpack is "probably better because it allows you to evenly distribute the weight of your load," he says. However, any bag carried improperly for a long period of time can cause damage. Symptoms of misuse can be as mild as neck pain or headaches, or as severe as scoliosis (curvature of the spine) and thoracic outlet syndrome (painful compression of the blood vessels, nerves, and muscles in the lower neck). While this should raise significant cause for concern, not too many students actually take their health into account when selecting a bag.

Instead, choice of bookbag appears highly correlated with one's major or future plans. It seems that business majors prefer to carry shoulder bags because they "look better for interviews." Or, it may be because they more closely resemble the briefcases and attaché cases that these students anticipate to be carrying after graduation. On the other hand, science majors, along with those in Arts and Letters, really show no tendency toward either type.

Finally, there is the case of students in ROTC, who are in a class by themselves. They are not permitted to carry any accessories on their uniforms, so they have to make certain adjustments. Some students go to the trouble of purchasing military issued "map cases", which are after all, khaki-colored shoulder bags that can be worn on field uniforms. Others simply copy on the days they have ROTC clases, and carry their backpacks in one hand in the loop on the top, although sophomore Army cadet Mike Tierney admits that this practice "really starts to hurt your wrist after awhile."

Trends also seem to develop among age groups. For example, many students remember that in high school, it was considered "uncool" to wear a backpack over both shoulders. One freshman commented, "Until my last year, it was definitely a social faux pas to be seen carrying your backpack properly. Upperclassmen, too, have noticed certain changes in bookbag popularity and usage over the years. They report that more people switch to shoulder bags as they get older, and that the backpack begins to phase out. This does seem to hold true, since most professors carry shoulder bags. For instance,....

A Personal History

Age 6: Go off to First Grade with you adorned with your favorite straps are worn to maintain little shaky
Age 13: Proceed to Junior High with one in a shoulder in an attempt
Age 16: Fit in with the best as you slide ways carrying a generic keyring or button from you optional Age 18: Arrive at college and procès an expensive, yet worth it, or...
    Arrive at college with your trusty bag, that nostalgic remnant
Age 22: Glide confidently through Grand adorned with your new sh that box with your diploma
Age 27: Confidently place your brief... but never forget how you Spanish professor Kevin Bauman recalls that he carried a bookbag while still in school, but now prefers to use a single-strap case to transport his papers and books to his four classes.

Finally, brand name has some share of influence over the bags that students buy. The most popular ones on this campus are Jansport, L.L. Bean, Eddie Bauer, and High Sierra. Most have lifetime guarantees on all their bags, which is an attractive option for college students whose bags are inevitably subjected to a great deal of wear and tear over the course of many semesters.

Also, unique to this university, is the special edition Jansport bag embroidered with the interlocking "ND" and Notre Dame seal, available at the Hammes bookstore. One student confesses to have bought it, because it was the only one he could find on campus, and he needed one in time for the first day of class. Another student, however, purchased hers out of unconditional affection for Notre Dame.

"When I go on the airplane I like to let everyone know where I go to school," she says.

Truly, it is amazing how many factors actually play into the decision to buy something as simple as a bag. But it doesn't stop here. On campus, once a student has selected his or her bag, it often becomes a creative outlet for personal expression. As junior Angela Turner puts it, "My bag is truly an extension of my personality." One of the most common artistic practices is to decorate one's bag.

For example, junior Kim Sturm has patches from all the Himalayas, a high school, Notre Dame JanSport, a high school bag is in handy when you least expect it.

Many students have buttons proclaiming political messages or ribbons that represent their affiliation with a certain cause, such as SADD or Right to Life. Some students have buttons monogrammed, a service offered by L.L. Bean for only $5.00 for up to ten characters. One such female student reports that she likes having her bag embroidered with her initials because "it makes it more personal." Taking the award for being most individualistic of all is sophomore Tim Fusco, who carries a PEZ dispenser attached with velcro on his backpack so he can give his friends in his classes PEZ candies throughout the day.

Some students also harbor special attachments to their bags. For example, one girl has a whole seam of hers held together entirely by safety pins. When questioned as to why she didn't simply get a new bag, she replied, "I just couldn't bear to part with the old one." Another student, a sophomore in Fanner, uses a bag that has a zipper broken on the middle pocket. While he admits it is rather annoying to have his bag perpetually open, he says, "It is a means for picking up women. Though, before I always approach me and try to zip it." Obviously, some students just don't know when it's time to move on.

Whatever their preferences, though, students all agree that bookbags are not always used for strictly academic purposes. Many take their bags on weekend or overnight trips because, in the words of one junior, "They are the perfect size for transporting short distances."

Finally, students have been known to utilize their bookbags for the illegal purpose of smuggling items out of the dining halls. Don't the workers ever wonder where all those quantities of cereal, glasses, books, and canvas bags are going?

It is reported that some off-campus students have entire dishware collections bearing the Notre Dame colors and insignia, all transported to their apartments via seemingly innocent bookbags. And so why do many students take their bookbags out for a walk before partying on Friday and Saturday nights? Finishing up work in the library, of course.

It's easy to go through the day without even noticing they are there, yet bookbags really do play a role in the life of a student. They more than serve their intended purpose, and often come in handy when you least expect it. So, whether you are walking to Delbartorio or going on a trip to the Himalayas, "don't leave home without it."
The Observer • SPORTS

Tuesday, November 7, 1995

Irish look to knock off top-ranked Huskers

By BETSY BAKER

Spicy Writer

Our Dame will finally have a shot at No.1 Nebraska. No, it’s not in football.

The 14th-ranked Irish volleyball team traveling to Lincoln tonight to meet the No.1-ranked Cornhuskers. The Irish will take their 22-5 record up against the 2-28 team of Nebraska today. The Irish have hopes of an upset that would give the Irish great momentum heading into their final weeks on the road.

The match against the nation’s top team will provide enough of a challenge for the Irish, but they must also enter what is possibly the most difficult arena for any opposing volleyball team, the Nebraska University Coliseum, with its 5,000 seat capacity, is consistently filled with screaming Husker fanatics.

It’s probably the best place to watch college volleyball, said May’s head coach Terry Pettel commented in a pre-season interview, “I think the building lends itself to playing volleyball as an event and not just a match.”

The Irish got a taste of the spirit of the Coliseum last season as Nebraska hosted the NCAA Midwest Regional. Although the Irish were defeated against last year’s national runner-up Penn State, the zeal of the Nebraska fans was felt.

The Observer accepts classifieds every business day from 8 a.m. to noon at the Neese office, 314 LaFrance and from 3 p.m. to 8 p.m. at Hagar College Campus. Deadline: noon on the last day of each month. All spaces must be pre-paid. The charge is 2 to 10 cents per character, including spaces.

Irish's loss was at the hands of defending National Champion Stanford, who also defeated the Irish in a four-set match.

The Irish will be playing without 6-2 middle blocker Jennifer Rousseau. Rousseau, who led the team with 80 total blocks, tore her ACL.

Brown expressed the excited, yet laid back attitude of the team. “We’re working hard, but at the same time I know we have nothing to lose playing against the no. 1 team in the country.”

Will the Irish be able to stop Nebraska? The Irish will find out this weekend. The match will begin at 7 p.m. at the Coliseum.
Cocks outlast Studs in overtime match

By TIM MCCONN

Many games throughout this interhall season have featured smash-mouth offenses and tough defenses. These same games have been low-scoring, dramatic affairs.

The semi-final contest between Flanner and Stanford went beyond that. Neither team could break through the other's defense, and it took an exciting overtime period before the Cocks could finally overcome the Studs, 8-0.

Both teams tried to run right at the other. Flanner used the combination of tailback Dave Lichota and fullback Steve Rodriguez. Each combination was steady, but the defenses didn't allow any big plays on either side.

"It was tough all day long," said Flanner right end/defensive lineman Taylor McDonald. "I was really nervous just because the game was so close the whole way through."

With close to four minutes remaining in the game, Stanford forced Flanner to punt. But the Stanford returner fumbled, and MacDonald recovered.

The Cocks then drove down the field, as quarterback Scott Lupo combined with Lichota and Hrovat to bring the team down to the ten yard line. With less than 30 seconds on the clock, their fake field goal attempt was foiled, sending the game into overtime.

In order to determine the winner, each team received four chances to score from the 10-yard line.

With noisy crowds amassing down near the end zone, Flanner went first. After Hrovat gained a yard, Lupo faked the hand-off to Hrovat and the reverse to Lichota. While rolling out, he connected on a pass up the middle to give the Cocks a 6-0 lead. On the ensuing play they completed another pass for the two-point conversion.

Then it was Stanford's last chance. After two consecutive rushes and a five-yard motion penalty, the Studs were still at the ten. On third and goal, they lined up with three receivers on one side and two on the other. This spread out the Flanner defense, leaving nobody to cover the middle. Brown went in and found the snap, followed his linemen up the gut, and seemed to be heading for the endzone, but he lost the ball and Flanner recovered.

Said McDonald, "It was nice to beat Stanford. I just can't believe we're playing in the championship game."

Fisher QB Alfredo Rodriguez, shown here carrying the ball in an earlier game against Carroll, threw a 28-yard touchdown pass to Dan Karson in Fisher's 7-0 upset of Zahm.
Irish get fourth seed in tourney

By DAVE TREACY
Sports Writer

It's that time again. The University of Notre Dame women's soccer team has advanced to the NCAA tournament for the third straight year, receiving the fourth seed. The Irish have a long history of preparation themselves to host the winner of the Wisconsin-Minnesota match-up, which takes place next weekend, on the 17th or 18th of November.

"I thought we'd be a three seed," said Irish head coach Chris Petrucelli. "SMU got it, but I felt that we deserved it on strength of schedule. But they are undefeated at this point."

The Irish will concentrate on their opponent two or three days before the contest. As of now, the squad looks to solidify their own game.

"We're only going to be concerned with ourselves for a while," said Petrucelli. "We're going to go over fundamentals and combinations and put a lot of stress on playing together."

If Wisconsin beats Minnesota, the Irish will face a team they have already beaten this year, a 1-0 contest in Madison. The Irish did not play the Big Ten champion Gophers in 1995. Another rematch with the University of Connecticut is a distinct possibility in the round of eight. The Huskies also received a bye in the first round with the fifth seed overall.

Notre Dame will play their matches in Alumni Field until the final four, which takes place in Chapel Hill. If all goes according to plan, Notre Dame will face North Carolina in the tournament semi-final round, allowing Notre Dame a chance to avenge a loss to the Tarheels earlier this season.

The Notre Dame showing in the Big East tournament has given the team a huge boost entering the NCAA's. "I felt that we couldn't win the national championship unless we won the Big East. Our team has really come together as of late, and I think that the momentum and confidence we're accumulating will take us through the tournament. Winning the Big East was a necessity," Petrucelli said.
Pre-Christmas Sale
All in-store Merchandise 20% off

IRISH EXPRESS

The place to go for ALL your NOTRE DAME
sportswear & accessories!

LaFortune Student Center
(219)631-8128

IRISH EXPRESS
HOURS

Wed. Nov 8  12 – 6 pm
Thur. Nov 9  12 – 8 pm
Fri. Nov 10  12 – 6 pm

We Accept both Visa, MasterCard and Discover FOOTBALL

Krug takes over at the helm

By MIKE NORBUT
Sports Editor

Sometimes, Lou Holtz might as well be blindfolded when he's picking out plays. At least, that's the way he feels when Tom Krug's at quarterback.

"When a play is called, a coach would like to know what to expect," the Irish coach said. "Sometimes, with Tom Krug, you don't always know what to expect.

But, regardless of how he feels about the situation, Krug is most likely his quarterback for the rest of the season. Superman hasn't been around lately to reverse the rotation of the earth, which would be the only way to bring Ron Powlus back this season.

Powlus underwent surgery Sunday on his left arm, which was fractured against Navy Saturday on a third quarter sack by the Midshipmen's Fernando Harris.

Harris sprung free on a blitz up the middle and got around tailback Autry Denson's blocking attempt to make the play. "Autry Denson raced a little slow to the guy inside," Holtz said. "In fairness to him, he's a freshman. We felt we didn't give him enough reps on it."

Krug's impressive performance in the second half helped to ease the team's pain of losing their star quarterback, as well as to make players focus on what's upcoming.

"I feel terrible for Ron and his family," fullback Marc Edwards said. "But we still have a game against Air Force and a bowl game to play."

And a long time to get ready for both. The two-week preparation for the Falcons has already begun, which will do nothing but help his new quarterback gain experience. It will also be a timor for freshman Jarious Jackson, the highly-touted option-running wizard, to work in with the starting unit. It could possibly lead to some playing time against Air Force.

"The question is, is there a chance Krug and Jarious Jackson both might play against Air Force?" Holtz said. "Yes, there's a chance. We'd like to win, and we'd do whatever we can."

The best that can happen is that a Tony Rice can blossom out of that freshman build over the next two weeks and lead the Irish to a 10-2 record.

Krug's impressive performance in the second half helped to ease the team's pain of losing their star quarterback, as well as to make players focus on what's upcoming.

"I feel terrible for Ron and his family," fullback Marc Edwards said. "But we still have a game against Air Force and a bowl game to play."

Krug's impressive performance in the second half helped to ease the team's pain of losing their star quarterback, as well as to make players focus on what's upcoming.

"I feel terrible for Ron and his family," fullback Marc Edwards said. "But we still have a game against Air Force and a bowl game to play."

And a long time to get ready for both. The two-week preparation for the Falcons has already begun, which will do nothing but help his new quarterback gain experience. It will also be a timor for freshman Jarious Jackson, the highly-touted option-running wizard, to work in with the starting unit. It could possibly lead to some playing time against Air Force.

"The question is, is there a chance Krug and Jarious Jackson both might play against Air Force?" Holtz said. "Yes, there's a chance. We'd like to win, and we'd do whatever we can."

The best that can happen is that a Tony Rice can blossom out of that freshman build over the next two weeks and lead the Irish to a 10-2 record.

Krug's impressive performance in the second half helped to ease the team's pain of losing their star quarterback, as well as to make players focus on what's upcoming.

"I feel terrible for Ron and his family," fullback Marc Edwards said. "But we still have a game against Air Force and a bowl game to play."

And a long time to get ready for both. The two-week preparation for the Falcons has already begun, which will do nothing but help his new quarterback gain experience. It will also be a timor for freshman Jarious Jackson, the highly-touted option-running wizard, to work in with the starting unit. It could possibly lead to some playing time against Air Force.

"The question is, is there a chance Krug and Jarious Jackson both might play against Air Force?" Holtz said. "Yes, there's a chance. We'd like to win, and we'd do whatever we can."

The best that can happen is that a Tony Rice can blossom out of that freshman build over the next two weeks and lead the Irish to a 10-2 record.
ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

CROSSWORD

Tuesday, November 7, 1995

FOUR FOOD GROUPS OF THE APOCALYPSE

DAVE KELLETT

MOJO DIXON

THE OBSERVER

TODAY

page 15

YOUR HOROSCOPE

JEANE DIXON

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1995

(For your personalized dailyastrology based on your own date of birth, 1-900-786-7866.

MOJO DIXON

TEN YEARS OF YOUTHFUL LIVING

 Исследования показывают, что ежедневное употребление

яиц может предотвратить развитие некоторых type 2 diabetes. Но есть исследования, которые показывают, что употребление яиц может увеличить уровень холестерина

в крови. Это может привести к сердечно-сосудистым заболеваниям.

Важно помнить, что употребление яиц должно быть разумным.

В идеале, человек должен употреблять яйца в количестве не более

3-4 в неделю. Более частое употребление может привести к повышенной концентрации холестерина в крови.

Важно также обратить внимание на вид яиц, которые употребляются.

В коммерческих яйцах, которые содержатся в яйцах, содержится много холестерина. В домашних яйцах, которые содержатся в

яйцах, содержащихся в яйцах, содержится меньше холестерина.

В целом, употребление яиц может быть вредным для здоровья

и приводить к сердечно-сосудистым заболеваниям. Но употребление

яиц в разумных количествах может быть не вредным и может

предотвратить некоторые заболевания.

Важно помнить, что употребление яиц должно быть разумным и

включать в себя умеренное употребление.

В целом, употребление яиц может быть вредным для здоровья

и приводить к сердечно-сосудистым заболеваниям. Но употребление

яиц в разумных количествах может быть не вредным и может

предотвратить некоторые заболевания.

Важно помнить, что употребление яиц должно быть разумным и

включать в себя умеренное употребление.
Two in a row for Lyons

Lyons beats PE 12-0 in last IH game in old stadium

KATHLEEN LOPEZ
Sports Writer

It was the last game held in old Knute Rockne stadium, and an intense game it was. The Women's Interball Championship game between Lyons and Pasquerilla East was close until the end, when Lyons came out victorious 12-0 and defended their Women's Interball Football title. "It was an intense game," stated Lyons' Jenny Layden. "The game was close all the way."

Lyons came out charged for the game, and made it known on their first offensive possession that they would not relinquish their title easily. They chose to run the option three out of seven plays for large gains. Then, on fourth down, quarterback Julie Byrd found receiver Kerry Callahan open in the end zone for the touchdown. The extra point attempt failed, and Lyons went up 6-0.

The Pyros matched up well against Lyons, but they could not find a rhythm. PE bobbled or dropped most of their punt and kickoff returns, accounting for poor field position on each of their offensive drives. The Pyros' offense centered around their running game. Running back Ann Searle was given the hand-off numerous times, and she accounted for a first down and about twenty yards in rushing. The Pyros' defense caught on quickly to PE's game plan, stopping Searle and keeping the Pyros from getting anything started in the first half. PE mounted a comeback in the second, with the majority of yardage coming from Pyros' quarterback Elizabeth Plum- mer and Searle as they advanced to the Lyons' twenty. But the Lyons' defense stopped PE for three

Setting an example

Sophomore Carey May stepped into collegiate volleyball's toughest position with little experience, and has led the Irish to a top-twenty ranking

By BETSY BAKER

S he is an unknown hero. She has led the 22-5 Notre Dame volleyball team in every match thus far, with the exception of one in which she sat out due to illness. She entered this season with only 18 matches under her belt and has stepped up into one of the most demanding positions in collegiate volleyball. She will lead the Irish against the top team in the nation, Nebraska, tonight. She is setter Carey May.

May has taken over the job of starting setter for the 1995 season after last year's starter, senior Shannon Tuttle, suffered a career-ending shoulder injury, and has led the Irish to a number 14 ranking and an undefeated 5-0 record in the Big East. She remains the lone setter on the team with senior co-captain and defensive specialist Brest Hessel filling in for May in emergency situations. The 5-foot-9 sophomore from Rancho Santa Fe, California, began this season having played in only 29 of the 127 total games played by the Irish in the 1994 season. However, May has stepped up and with confidence led the offensively diversified Irish this season.

"I knew after school got out last year that Shannon [Tuttle] was going to be out and Carey would be the starting setter," Irish head coach Debbie Brown said.

May gained some experience in the four tournaments the Irish competed in last spring, leading the Irish in nearly all but one after Tuttle's shoulder began to bother her.

I knew the confidence would have to come with experience." - Carey May

Fisher upsets No.1 Zahm

Green Wave defense produces a 'swarm' of its own, en route to 7-0 blanking of Bats

TIM MCCONN
Sports Writer

Well, folks, it's over. As everyone has heard at one time or another, "all good things must come to end." The problem for the Zahm Bats was, though, is that it ended one game too early.

Despite a defense that had allowed only three points all season and a big-play offense, top-rated Zahm could not overcome the upset Green Wave of Fisher, who posted a stunning 7-0 win. This is the same Fisher team that Zahm had defeated 22-0 in the first week of the season. Nobody told that to the guys in green, though.

Behind a workaholic offensive line, Fisher's offense pounded away, making good on their promise to take it right at the vaunted "Red Swarm". Although they did not rack up tons of rushing yardage, their constant running attack wore Zahm down enough to allow for the one score Fisher needed on the day.

"We knew they could shut down the run better than other teams, but we weren't worried," said tailback Dayne Nelson. "We just knew that would open up passes, and it showed."

With time winding down in the half, the game was still scoreless. Zahm's Mike Bailey intercepted a Fisher pass at his own 22-yard line, giving the ball to the Rahid Bats with 1:40 left in the half. After three plays that netted a total of six yards, they faced a fourth and four, on their own 28-yard line.

Rather than punting, the Zahm coaches decided to go for it in hope of

see MAY / page 10

see FISHER / page 11