He was Henry Kissinger, Sting, and "Vinnie from down the block," but in the end, he was just Henry Kissinger, who wanted to be — The Piano Man.

Superstar song-writer Billy Joel, in rather a unique question and answer session, delighted a sold-out Stassen Center last evening with a highly entertaining mix of frank discussion, humor, and music, with a little bit of dream-fulfillment thrown in.

Two arrested in connection with burglaries

Two men have been arrested in connection with a burglary at the O'Hara-Grace Graduate Residences at Notre Dame and have been linked to the Christmas Break burglaries in the Turtle Creek and Campus Village apartment complexes, according to Sergeant Chuck Hurley, assistant director of Notre Dame Security.

The two suspects are Steve Harvey, 25, and Derrick Branson, 19, both of South Bend, who fled to South Bend Police.

The two were arrested Friday at the Altimont store on Grape Road in Mishawaka after they attempted to use a Visa credit card to purchase stereo equipment, Hurley said.

"Visa representatives reported unusual activity on the card to the Mishawaka Police Department and said they were unable to contact its owner, a Notre Dame graduate student," Hurley said in a press release regarding the arrests.

Foran named new Editor-in-Chief

By BRAD PRENDERGAST

Junior Liz Foran was elected Editor-in-Chief of The Observer for the 1996-97 year by a vote of the newspaper’s General Board.

Foran, who hails from Michigan City, Indiana and lives in Farley Hall, is a sophomore in the College of Arts and Letters, pursuing a major in Sociology and American Studies. She partially subscribes to Social Constructivism and, her freshman year, Foran served as news writer and an Assistant News Editor.

As a sophomore, she worked as an Associate News Editor and last semester studied overseas in the Notre Dame London Program.

In addition to her campus responsibilities, Foran has worked as both an intern and a correspondent for the Michigan City News-Press since 1992. Mindful of the proud traditions and journalistic aspirations of The Observer — and through her work and positions of leadership — Foran said she expects to maintain the standards of the paper while taking the opportunity to improve it.

Fears of future prevents students from speaking out

Publisher's Note: This is the third in a four-part series exploring the issue of sexual harassment in American institutions of higher learning.

Flirtatious actions, suggestive comments, friendly offers — these are just a few of the forms that sexual harassment can take in a student-faculty member relationship.

In a college setting, a fine line seemingly exists between a close relationship, with the students' interests at heart, and sexual harassment. This line is crossed, however, when a professor misuses the power inherent in a faculty position.

"With students or graduate students, a professor has a great deal of power," said Sociology Chair Dr. Jennifer Cunningham. "They can help them out a lot, or really show them in terms of recommendations and grades."

This fear for their future is one of many which often prevent students from coming forward immediately in instances of sexual harassment. In several cases, students hesitate because that line has become blurred, and they are unsure of the nature of the relationship with their professor.

"Students sometimes fear coming forward because they're afraid the story will be turned around on them," Assistant Dean of Arts and Letters Avis Preacher said. "They're afraid their motives will be questioned. But they will be accused of initiating or encouraging a relationship.

But according to Associate Provost Kathleen Cannon, University policies addressing student-faculty relations prevent this from occurring.

"Sometimes it is possible to see how things can be misunderstood," Cannon said. "But the professor is in a power position, and therefore cannot use a consensual relationship as an excuse. Even if they were involved in a relationship, the power differential is still too great."

This differential is especially a factor in cases involving student and graduate teaching assistants. The close proximity of ages in these cases often keeps the TA from seeing his or her actions as threatening.

"Teaching assistants will say they were just trying to be friends with the student, and that they see being on friendly terms as the most important thing in a teacher-student relationship," Cannon said. "But we hold TAs to the same level of professional conduct as professors."

Implicit in the definition of professional conduct is maintaining a level of trust. This trust is violated when sexual harassment occurs.

"The classroom is a complicated space and involves trust, identification and exchange," said Assistant Professor of English Gloria-Jean Masciarotti. "Sexual harassment in the classroom is a very confusing situation in which students aren't sure sometimes unless the action is overt."

The classroom becomes more complicated at an institution such as Notre Dame, where Catholic morality issues become mixed with other academic factors.

"Some students who might have more defenses in other situations don't expect it here and are caught off guard," Cannon said. "They think of it as a safe environment and don't put up the same shields they might at other schools."

August, 1995. It was a cold day in South Bend, Indiana, and there was a light rain falling on Saint Mary's campus. I was on my way to class, and suddenly I stopped and looked around.

"Wow," I said in complete awe. "It's snowing!"

My friends looked at me with that she's-from-Florida-just-smile-and-amuse-her look, a light rain falling on Editor Indiana, and there was Saint Mary's News within the week.

It seems like once the snow actually does melt, rough winter it is ... when it's a chilling dream of a white there's a winter carnival. And this isn't just for The Observer.

As someone up north plans road trips to Bend weather a fight, it's kind of sad that some of my friends can laugh at most their tongue. That they've never felt the flaky snow then run across it, leaving their prints behind.

That's why I was there, to make sure the plane didn't fly too low. A fight.

It's kind of weird, isn't it, how much we expect the weather to be perfect for everything. That's why we have snow days off from classes every now and then...

Black 47 brings Irish rock to ND

By KARA PAULIK
Staff Writer

Aye, for the love of the Irish. A love shared with Irish Americans for half-warm pints of stout, Yeatsian rhetoric and the immigrant Irishman will bring the Irish rock brigade Black 47 to the University of Notre Dame's Alumni-Senior Club on Wednesday night. There, fans may appreciate the politically minded Celtic rag-rag-rocket group famous for playing loud and live in East Manhattan's Irish bars.

Named after the worst year of Ireland's 19th century potato famine, Black 47 will perform songs from its new album, "Green Suede Shoes." The album is due out in early March.

To Larry Kirwan, the band's Irish-born lead singer, the album returns to the "sweaty, claustrophobic, passionate, live ideal!" where Black 47 first planted its roots.

"Green Suede Shoes" is an entire collection of Black 47 songs. One, called "Bobby Sands MP," deals with Ireland's hunger strikes, which was the first real contact with Northern Irish politics for many Americans under 40.

With rousing lyrics from the likes of "Bobby Sands MP"—Kirwan didn't wear their convict clothes, so they stripped him—through the bones—Kirwan and his five band mates bring a strong political theme to much of their music—often ranting against British economic policies.

"Part of the deal when we formed our band in 1989," Kirwan said, "was to keep the Irish question off the back burner and bring it to the front.

And that they have. When Black 47 began playing the Irish working class bars in the Bronx, Brooklyn and Queens, it hit a nerve with scores of Irish immigrants who found their original lyrics about the

APPALACHIA SPRING SEMINAR
March 10-16, 1996

The Appalachia Seminar during the spring break presents a unique service-learning opportunity. Students travel to various sites in the Appalachia region: Kentucky, West Virginia, Tennessee, and Mississippi. They work at a variety of sites which examine the political, social, economic, and cultural forces influencing the Appalachian people. There also focus on several issues including aid help, housing, construction, environmental welfare, rural health care, and race relations in Appalachia. Through physical labor and personal to person contacts, students experience the cultural richness of the area and begin to understand and analyze the social forces that influence the lives of the mountain people.

Retiring O'Meara makes last annual address

Timothy O'Meara had no long range plans. He took one challenge at a time in his 18 years as University Provost, he said in his last address to the Faculty Senate yesterday.

O'Meara, who will be retiring at the end of his term this current academic year, began his speech by offering a brief summary of his career in the Provost's Office: "We've had our ups and downs.

Throughout his address, in which he frequently asked the Senate for its input on the topics he was discussing, O'Meara pointed out some of the highs and lows the University has experienced since he first became Provost in 1968.

One accomplishment that has been made, according to O'Meara, was "a very significant improvement in the quality of the faculty."

In looking to further this progress, he said, the University must continue to ask itself, "What is the next step in improving the quality of the faculty?"

One way to do this is to increase faculty salaries, a task with which O'Meara said he had no long range plans. Faculty salaries were improved "significantly at the same time as Provost. Notre Dame now ranks about 20th in the country among top private schools in terms of faculty salaries, he said.

Another example of success O'Meara cited involved the Provost's Advisory Committee. "The way PAC is running now is that of an improvement," he said, explaining that putting senior professors on the doctor and discovered the card had been stolen in the Thursday break-in of the student's residence.

"At the same time, Mishawaka police arrived at Alltronics where the stereo equipment was being installed in a vehicle," Hurley continued. Both suspects were charged with forgery, a Class C felony, and Harvey was also charged with burglary, he said.

After they were arrested, Notre Dame Security questioned the subjects, who admitted to breaking into and removing property from the Oliver Grace residences, according to Hurley. Both are being held at the St. Joseph County Jail.

Hurley said the two men were linked to the break-ins at the Turtle Creek and Campus View apartment complexes after police found their vehicle matched the description of one involved in a stolen checks and forgery case at the Notre Dame Federal Credit Union.

"The checks were reported stolen from an off-campus student residence at Turtle Creek during Notre Dame's recent semester break," Hurley said.

Additional evidence included a 1995 Notre Dame class ring that one of the suspects was wearing which was reported stolen from a Turtle Creek apartment in the fall of 1994.

Notre Dame Security, Mishawaka, South Bend, and St. Joseph County police departments are coordinating their investigations in the two cases.

Instead, it was left-wing Irish Americans who embraced the band's self-hating and lyrical bal-

Island resident wove various verses of the first two verses of 'Scenes from an Italian Restaurant' with Silver accompanying on piano.

"It was definitely a dream come true," an elated Silver said after the show. "I was familiar with the song and I had performed in front of people before, but never 2,000. He's my idol and I just owe it to him to thank him for the opportunity to fulfill a dream."

Silver's request was the last in a long string of off-the-wall questions and invitations. Numerous female members of the audience offered their personal tour guide services while one spectator suggested a visit to Bridge's as a possible way for Joel to spend the night.

And then there was the expected Christy Brinkley question ("How do you meet a supermodel?")). There was also music - perhaps one of the more intriguing aspects of the appearance was whether or not Joel would play the infamous "Only The Good Die Young." He didn't want any time in killing the suspense. Before even fielding a question from the audience, Joel burst into a reggae version of the satirical commentary, following with the more standard version of the first few verses.

Joel also didn't hesitate in pleasing the crowd with a handful of popular hits.

The 45-year-old long-time Long Island resident wove various verses of his best-known songs with an "Irish Girl," "Tell Her About It" and "The Longest Time" into responses to audience queries.

But Joel took care to explain that not all his hits should be taken alone.

"I don't sit down to write a single," Joel said. "I sit down and write a whole album and let the record company figure out the singles.

In addition to explaining his process of developing songs, Joel filled his answers to the questions with a substantial amount of humor. At times, Joel was more of a stand-up comic than anything, as he offered impressions of everyone from Kissinger to Sting to Garth Brook.

Also, Joel offered hilarious anecdotes from his youth, many involving his way of meeting members of the opposite set.

"I was never really the 'cool' type at parties so I usually just went off and starting to play the piano," Joel related. "And pretty soon girls would come see me. I kept saying to myself, 'I love this thing'.

In addition to those stories, Joel was quick in poking fun at his New York upbringing.

"New Yorkers have an attitude," Joel said.

"We're rude and we think we're smarter than everyone else. But we're rebels.

He did oblige the boisterous New York natives in the crowd with "New York State of the Mind," but the balance of the act featured many of his lesser-known songs, ranging from the older to the more recent.

Also included in the abbreviated play list were "Summer Highland Falls," "Famous Last Words," "Downeaster Alexa" and "Where's the Orchestra."

Surely, Joel pleased various segments of the audience with the somewhat obscure tunes, but the question was begged - when was "The Piano Man" going to play "The Piano Man?"

He saved the best for last, culminating with the melodic classic, complete with harmonica.

In an evening filled with words, both spoken and sung, it was a fitting final statement.

Scientists may have found a better way for your dentist to look for cavities. It involves passing an electric current through a tooth and all the way down your arm. Don't worry, it won't hurt.

In fact, by detecting the very earliest stages of decay, the technique could spare you the hassle of drilling and fillings, says researcher Christopher Longbottom.

It hasn't been tried on patients or even animals yet, but it was 100 percent accurate in detecting decay in 26 extracted teeth, Longbottom and colleagues reported in the February issue of the journal Nature Medicine.

So it might work better than looking at teeth or using X-rays, both of which can miss early signs of decay, he said.

Longbottom is a lecturer at the University of Dundee Dental School in Scotland. He did the work with scientists there and at the University of St. Andre's in Scotland.

The goal of the technique is to detect tiny pores inside the tooth that are created by the very earliest stages of decay. A dentist can then take steps like applying fluoride or a sealant to stop the decay process and perhaps even reverse it, Longbottom said.

To use the device on patients, a dentist would slip an electrode between teeth or put it on the biting surfaces. The tiny current would go into the tooth and down the patient's arm to an electrode in the patient's hand, and then back to the device.

A similar setup is used now to test whether teeth are alive. It causes a shiver in the tooth. The decay-detecting device would use too little current to be felt, Longbottom said.

Bombing defense says Oklahoma jury biased

OKLAHOMA CITY

Arguing that the two Oklahoma City bombing defendants cannot get a fair trial in Oklahoma, defense attorneys today asked a federal judge to move their trial out of state.

Lawyer for Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols said their clients could not find unbiased jurors in Oklahoma. The April 19 explosion at the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building killed 169 people and injured more than 500 others.

"The infection of prejudicial publicity about the bombing extends throughout the state of Oklahoma," said Michael Tigar, the head of Nichols' defense team. Tigar made opening statements in a change of venue hearing that is expected to last four days.

U.S. Attorney Patrick Ryan argued that the emotional and psychological trauma associated with the bombing is largely confined to Oklahoma City and does not extend to Tulsa or Lawton, the two cities prosecutors have proposed as trial sites. Lawton is about 90 miles west of Oklahoma City, Tulsa is 105 miles northeast.

"The defense has not, cannot and will not prove the state of Oklahoma cannot find 12 jurors and six alternates who can remain impartial," Ryan said.

Prosecutors maintain that surveys of prospective jurors show that "56 to 70 percent of the people in every venue survey said they had a totally open mind" when asked if they thought McVeigh was guilty.

"The media coverage in Oklahoma has included denunciations of Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols," said Rob Nigh, one of McVeigh's attorneys.

Prosecutors said media coverage has been pervasive throughout the country.

"This is a national story, perhaps without precedent," Ryan said. "You can't find a major newspaper in this country that has not covered this story hundreds of times."

Stephen Jones, McVeigh's lead attorney, previously has mentioned San Francisco and Charleston, W.Va., as possible trial sites.

Prosecutors want the trial to stay in Lawton but have said Tulsa would still be close enough for victims' families to attend. Tulsa also has a bigger courthouse and more modern facilities.

McVeigh and Nichols could face the death penalty if convicted on federal murder and conspiracy charges.

They were moved Monday from the federal prison at El Reno to the Oklahoma County Jail so they could attend today's hearing.

It's not the first time the defense has used the fair trial argument to seek a change in the case.

They persuaded a federal appeals court to remove the original judge, U.S. District Judge Walter Roettger, after raising doubts about his impartiality because the bombing had damaged his courtroom and chambers.
Spy agency uncovers big bucks in its books

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

The Senate Intelligence Committee will consider making the nation's spy budgets public and giving the CIA chief greater authority following a report that a spy satellite agency kept $2 billion in unspent funds.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., the Intelligence Committee's chairman, said Tuesday he and the panel's vice chairman, Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., are considering legislation that would end the long practice of keeping the budgets of the CIA and other spy agencies secret. In addition, the panel will look at proposals by CIA Director John Deutch to increase the director's power over some of the various intelligence-gathering agencies.

"The more I see of this the more it becomes apparent that there is no solid reason for that secrecy," Specter said. "It is in the context of public disclosure and media attention that we really figure out what is going on."

"We're going to have to make some structural changes to give the director of central intelligence more authority over the whole intelligence community, including the NRO," Specter said.

Warlords target refugee aid

By SAMIR KRUJIC
Associated Press

BOGOTA, Colombia — Clinging to power, President Ernesto Samper convened a special session of Congress Tuesday to try to rally support. Opposition lawmakers accused him of trying to dodge justice.

Samper is defying demands that he step down over mounting evidence that he won office with drug money, casting Colombia into a crisis severely testing its democratic institutions.

He appealed to Congress to investigate him immediately, telling lawmakers "I'm not prepared to negotiate my innocence."

But in his strongest admission yet that his campaign was tainted, Samper said it was important that Congress establish "who, when and using what channels contaminated it."

The president denies he solicited millions of dollars from the Cali drug cartel during his 1994 campaign, and called Congress back from a three-month recess to speak to legislators.

During his half-hour, nationally televised speech, Samper said death threats against him and his family had intensified in recent days, and he cited a September attack on his house in which two bodyguards were killed.

He said the international press had portrayed him as "nothing less than a criminal."

"The day that we accept that verdicts can be reached outside the halls of justice, we're returning to lynching without the right to be heard," Samper said in accusation, putting his hand to his heart at one point.

After his speech, legislators loyal to Samper gave him a five-minute standing ovation. But opposition congressmen met with his back to the president during the entire session.

Outside, about 1,500 supporters marched carrying Samper campaign signs and Colombian flags and shouting "Workers with Samper."

Marcelo Izquierdo, a Liberal senator and former Samper aide who has admitted taking drug money for the campaign, gave a passionate speech after the president, calling him a liar. He also said what he said was campaign receipts for his candidacy.

A panel loaded with political supporters absolved Samper in Congress, arguing there was not enough evidence to prove guilt.

A new probe could be opened if government prosecutors provide new evidence.

"We'll take part in a trial, but not a debate that leads to nothing," said Sen. Jaime Arias, president of the opposition Congress.

Evidence likely would come largely from the former campaign manager, Fernando Botero, who brought on the crisis last week by saying Samper knew about the contributions from the world's biggest cocaine gang.

Following the revelations, a dozen ministers and ambassadors quit in protest, and students, housewives and peasants took to the streets to demand that Samper resign.

Presidential elections are still inter­viewing Botero, and it could be months before the president's enemies to lawmakers. Only Congress can judge the president.

Even if Samper resigns, it is not clear what impact his departure would have on efforts to stop Colombia's powerful drug trade, fueling Colombia's leadership.

U.S. law against traffickers must still stiffer sentences and have their property seized for any hope of permanent change.

"It took Colombians 15 to 20 years to get where it is with such rampant corruption, and it will take 15 to 20 (more) years to bring narcotics trafficing down so that it is no longer an overbearing issue in our bilateral relations," U.S. Ambassador Myles Frechette told Tuesday.

Many Colombians believe the evidence is now so overwhelm­ing that Congress, shaken by a probe of drug corruption within its own ranks, will decide to rule against the president.

Excavators discover pyramid under museum

By DALIA BALIGH
Associated Press

SAQQARA, Egypt

The Egyptian government ordered the removal of an unfinished museum Tuesday after archaeologists realized it was being built on top of a 2,700-year-old cemetery.

"We started to excavate around the site and we discovered archaeological artifacts such as mummies," said Zahi Hawass, the antiquities director at Giza and Saqqara. "The archaeological artifacts that have been found are enough to stop this building.

The site is near the 4,600-year-old step pyramid at Saqqara, the first step pyramid and a lesser cousin to the Great Giza pyramids.

Egyptian archaeologists feared the museum would clutter the landscape near the pyramid, which is 19 miles south of Cairo, and could destroy uncovered ruins and artifacts.

Workers recently uncovered burial grounds next to the museum's pillars as well as black mud bricks that surround the cemetery and Greco-Roman funeral masks and pottery.

On Tuesday, boys carried sand from excavation sites near the museum's scaffolding-encased concrete columns. Pottery, some dating to before 500 B.C., dotted the area.

Even as Culture Minister Farouk Hosni announced the decision, workers found a clay coffin with a child's skeleton inside.

"We will remove the building," he told reporters near the pyramid. He said the museum would be built nearby.

The museum will house Pharaonic relics found in the Saqqara desert and a model version of the step pyramid and ruins that surrounded it.

The project was approved in 1990 by the Higher Council for Antiquities on the condition it be built underground, and that the area be checked for remains before construction began.

Hosni said an investigation would determine why those conditions were not met. The government halted construction a month ago after having spent nearly $18,000 on it.

The museum's pillars were raised just 550 yards away from the pyramid, and officials in the area discovered the building was more than three stories higher than it was supposed to be.

Moral laws transcend the legal when it comes to abortion

Cristiane Likely

My grandmother told me 'if you aren't ready to raise a child, then you're not ready to have sex.' I truly believe that to this day. Once that sperm fertilizes that egg, it isn't just about the woman anymore, there's a life, that, because of your actions, you created. When I was about thirteen or fourteen, I used to know this girl who went to my parent's church. She had to be about seventeen or eighteen and her reputation of being a bad girl pre­ceded her. There really isn't any other discrete way to put it. She used to brag about her sex life and her various conquests to our little group of younger teens. One time she told us that she had had two abor­tions, because she wasn't ready to have a child and she wanted to go to college. She thought she was crazy, and went about my way. Today she is married and has a son who's about a year old. She never went to college and has since dedicated her life to the Pro-Life cause. I talked to her about it and she told me that not a day goes by that she doesn't think about the children she literally killed because of her own selfish needs. She told us they would have been seven and eight years old now. She told how much she regrets doing what she did. All she can do now is to talk to young pregnant women and hopefully educate them about alternative options to abortion and pray to God for forgiveness. Maybe I am just too harsh, but how can anyone kill a little baby. If anyone has ever held a sleeping baby in their arms and looked into its innocent eyes, then you know what I mean.

Matt's experience is similar to that of other college-aged males prone to hair loss. This male pattern baldness typically sets in with the maturing of the family. For example, if a man's mother or father lost his hair, it is more likely that he will.

of Michiana offers another alternative to hair replacement surgery. They offer hair replacement similar to the method used by Club for Men. Clients are made to look their best, their hairloss is affixed to the ending. The human hair is placed in the membrane. This provides a natural look. Hair replacement services for women are also available. Services for women are not an option, but some services for women include:

- More concern about hair loss
- Concern about thinning hair
- Concern about baldness

"It's pretty obvious, but there have to be so many others who've been treated for it," said brain, a senior. "But usually it is not something that we talk about."

"Guys start losing the hair on their head an they start growing it everywhere else," explained Bill, a sophomore. "It's not something that I stay up late at night worrying about, but it does make me nervous when a bunch of hair goes down the shower drain."

William Kirk, Vice-President of Student Affairs, remembers that hair loss was a concern for men when he was a student.

"I remember guys losing their hair in college and it was an issue," he said. "My father is bald and I think that I am slowly losing my hair and it's a vanity issue, but I'm not sure that I would do anything about it."

"Most of those experiencing hair loss at Notre Dame handle it with style."

"They wear it short," said Kilmartin. "They don't try to pull it over."

"They have accepted the color and sport the pulled over hair and baseball caps."

"My roommate brushes his hair over and it looks horrendous," said Matt. "I would try to tell him that it looks worse, but he would never listen to me."

"For some, losing their hair doesn't mean losing their perspective. They are simply readjusting their attitudes about hair.

"I don't like to think of it as a receding hairline," confessed Tim, a senior. "I like to think of it as a preceding forehead."

"I just keep it really short to disguise it," said left, a senior. "People can probably tell that I am losing it, but it makes me feel better."

Others have resigned themselves to the inevitable.

"My position is that if it's going to go, it's just cut it off: I'm not into the cosmetic thing," said Matt. "As long as the rest of me is in one piece, hair is probably the least of my worries."

Foul play involved in Hoosiers' narrow victory

By STEVE HERMAN
Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Indiana's offense slipped as the clock stopped.

The Hoosiers hit 24-of-35 foul shots Tuesday night, but Indiana's best offense came in the final 1:18. As the Hoosiers hit 24-of-35 foul shots, they hit 24-of-35 foul shots.

"We didn't cut our swimming and moving like we did in previous games," said Brian Iverson, one of five Indiana starters scoring more than 10 points. "The last 12 minutes were standing, not really cutting..."

Indiana's last six points came on free throws. For the game, the Hoosiers hit 24-of-35 foul shots to just 11-of-18 for the Hawkeyes.

Indiana (12-8, 3-5 Big Ten) bloomed to 16-point lead in the first half, missed his second foul shot with five seconds left, but Patterson rebounded the ball to set up his own free throw with less than one second on the clock.

"This part of the game that I'll get most attention to is that last 12 minutes, because we didn't get the kind of work on the backboards we've got to have and we got to slowing down things a little bit," Indiana coach Bob Knight said.

"From my standpoint, as 디스 마이로우에 되어 있어 보이는 것으로 하면, 것은 사실이지만, 그 28000 피트에, 갑작igsaw으로 그린 단락을 어떻게 해야 할까요?" said Mijucevic, a 47 percent free throw shooter for the season.

Brown now casing in on being in right place

By JAIME ARON
Associated Press

DALLAS
Once his football career is done, Larry Brown wants to be an actor. He has a college degree in theater, and he's still taking lessons.

But Brown's career is far from being finished. In fact, it's just taking off.

Brown began casing in on his Super Bowl MVP award -- and practicing for his second career -- on Tuesday by kicking off a stay in New York with an appearance on "The Late Show with David Letterman."

On Wednesday, Brown will be on "CBS This Morning" and Conan O'Brien's late night show. Thursday, he'll do "Live With Regis and Kathie Lee" in the morning then at night sit courtside for a Knicks-Magic game.

Friday begins with a quick trip to Washington to be on Black Entertainment Television, followed by another promotion-al appearance in New York.

He'll finally come home Saturday, unless other things -- like possible visits with Jay Leno or Charles Grodin -- come along.

"I'm enjoying it," Brown said Wednesday in a telephone interview from his hotel room.

"I'm a real laid-back person, so I'm having fun but keeping it in context."

Brown is so laid back that he hardly fits in the same locker room as Deion Sanders, Michael Irvin and other extroverts.

With Sanders playing opposite him at cornerback, Brown is not even the best-known player at his position on his team.

And considering there's a successful NBA coach named Larry Brown, he's not even the most famous person with his name.

"I think people noticed me before, but now everybody does," Brown said. "I find it flattering. I'm not a guy who has an ego or lives for this, but I can enjoy it."

Brown first made a name for himself in 1991, when he went from 12th-round draft pick to starter. He started on Super Bowl winners the next two years, then took harsh criticism when Dallas didn't three-peat in part because he was burned by Jerry Rice in last year's NFC title game.

Brown was supposed to lose his job this season with the arrival of Sanders, but an injury to Kevin Smith kept him in the lineup.

A bigger distraction than Deion, though, was the premature birth of his son, Kristopher, who weighed only one pound at birth and lived less than three months.

Good things began happening again for this good guy during the NFC title game when he made up for a first-quarter blunder with a game-saving interception.

Then, in Sunday's Super Bowl, Brown had two interceptions and returned them for a record 77 yards. Both set up touchdowns. The first helped Dallas go ahead of Pittsburgh 20-7, and the second sealed the 27-20 final.

For that effort, he was named the game's top star, as teammates Troy Aikman and Emmitt Smith had been in previous Super Bowls.

But they were no help preparing Brown for this avalanche of attention.

"They did not warn me," Brown said, laughing. "It's been hitting me by storm."

Brown's agent, meanwhile, is ready. He's been working since August to prepare his client Brown to be an unrestricted free agent, and he's sure Brown will be able to cash in on this success.

"I felt like over a month ago Larry became the No. 1 UFA (unrestricted free agent) candidate based on the things around him," Scott Casterline said.

Casterline said he wouldn't be surprised if Brown can get a deal worth $3.2 million a year, as Eric Allen got from the New Orleans Saints last year.

But this is even going to be better for him because he's going to be the top guy (on the market) and nobody else will be close," Casterline said.

For the first time in his career, Brown won't be dedicating his entire off-season to preparing for football.

Instead, he's finally ready to carve out time for acting.

Realizing he's in New York now and planning on spending lots of time on TV sets, Brown added: "I've got to take advantage of my opportunity. Anybody can play an athlete. I'd like to do more challenging roles."

For now, he'll just continue playing the role of Super Bowl MVP.

Keeping Dallas out of trouble

By MELISSA WILLIAMS

DALLAS Police and educators will be taking extra steps next week to deter violence or truancy when the city honors the Cowboys with a Super Bowl victory parade.

Dallas Police Chief Ben Clark said 800 officers will be assigned to parade duty. The procession is scheduled to begin at 2:30 p.m. CST on Feb. 7. Members of the department's gang units also will wander through the crowd to identify gang members and keep them under surveillance to prevent a recurrence of the violence that marred the Super Bowl parade of 1993.

The Dallas school district is considering allowing students to watch the "Dr Pepper Presents "Dallas Salutes the Boys"" parade on televisions in class so they won't leave early. Classes end at 3 p.m. throughout the district.

"We're working on some creative ways and police will have officers out looking for trouble," said Robert Hinkle, spokesman for Dallas schools.

The downtown course will take the Vince Lombardi Trophy winners and their entourage south of Reunion Arena to Young Street and then to City Hall, which has been renamed "Cowboys Plaza." A committee planning the celebration earlier selected Feb. 5, 6 or 7 as possible dates, but left the final choice to the Cowboys.

The team agreed to the celebration after defeating the Pittsburgh Steelers 27-17 Sunday in the Super Bowl at Tempe, Ariz. The parade will feature players and cheerleaders on nine floats, marching bands and a float carrying the Super Bowl trophy.

Police on horseback will escort the players' floats. The city will pay $100,000 toward the cost of this year's parade and corporate sponsors have ponied up $255,000.

The excess above the original $271,000 projected tab will not go to reduce the city's share — a fact criticized by City Councilman Paul Fielding.

Instead, it will be spent on extra like decorative floats, banners, balloons and free pompons for fans along the parade route, said Robert Shaw, a Dallas businessman who is leading the parade committee.

Marketing the comeback of the Magic man

By E. Scott Reckard
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES

Magic Johnson has always been among the most popular superstars, but the stigma of the AIDS virus made him an advertising outcast. As he returns to the Lakers four years later, have times changed?

Spalding Sports Worldwide, which has had Johnson under contract since 1980, stopped selling his endorse rubber basketballs with his name a year after he retired.

It's considering making a $100-plus Johnson commemorative ball, like those from All-Star Games, said John Doleva, Spalding's managing director for leisure products. A decision will wait until after Super Show, the sporting goods industry's biggest trade show, in Atlanta this weekend.

And watch for Johnson's gleeful smile and amiable patter to pop up in ads promoting his own line of bargain-priced sports shoes and apparel from MVP Sports. MVP, of which Johnson is part owner, will preview them Sunday at the Super Show.

Roberto Muller, a former Beebo International president whose marketing firm is working for MVP, insists there's no connection between Johnson's return and the new products. A comeback was never mentioned when work on the product launch began half a year ago, he said.

"One of the things you can absolutely count on in his home even when he was ill," Muller said Tuesday, hours before Johnson was to put on his Lakers uniform to play the Golden State Warriors.

Muller added, though, "He should be wearing the shoes tonight."

"If the tremendous goodwill in Los Angeles among fans who remember the Lakers' "Showtime" glory days, regional advertisers might find a Johnson tie-in to be, well, more profitable," regional executives say.

But local ads, "tools of the trade" ads for basketballs and self-promotion are quite different from major campaigns for nationwide companies.

And while Johnson's agent, Lon Rosen, says some such offers are still coming in -- he says Kodak wants to use Johnson in ads tied to the Olympics -- most experts are skeptical about the prospects.

"All except the most aggressive advertisers will stay away," says Marty Blackman at New York's Celebrity and Confection Co. But big questions remain about Johnson's abilities in the National Basketball Association.

He is 36 years old and 27 pounds over his former playing weight. He is switching from corporate America to figure there are plenty of other players -- the Michaels, Hakeem and Shaquilles of the world -- who make better endorsers without the prospect of offending middle America.

"It's not so much the issue of HIV and AIDS," said Stephen Dixon, whose DK Group in Washington, D.C., arranges sports tie-ins for clients like AT&T, Visa, Kodak and Marriott.

"It's how Magic was so outspoken about how promiscuous he was and all of his escapades. That just opens up a whole can of worms."

Blackman agrees, saying, "He didn't get this by falling down on a Boy Scout expedition. There are going to be people who say, "Hold on here -- how did he obtain this horrible disease?"

"He allows that some advertisers might get aggressive and break up their normal campaigns with a one-shot spot."

"If I was going to use Magic Johnson I would do it with a short, quick campaign -- maybe use him with another player welcoming him back," Blackman said. "I'd run it for 30 days. That way, I minimize my risk."

Johnson shows little interest in anything except longer-term promotional deals, though.

"He won't do the one-shot things," Rosen says.

If big advertisers get spooked, it will be nothing new.

Pepsi-Cola and Confection Co. crushed a Johnson ad for Nestle Crunch after learning he had the AIDS virus.

A spokesman said at the time the company feared Johnson, not the candy bar, would get the attention.

The company with the longest endorsement ties to Johnson, sneaker maker Converse Inc., let his contract run out in 1994 without airing another commercial after the news broke. However, Johnson also had promised the relationship by complaining publicly about Converse's marketing approach.

And Miller Brewing Co., which had signed Johnson for a "Think When You Drink" public service spot, had second thoughts about the ad and doused it.

By the first time Johnson "unretired," in a later aborted October 1992 comeback, he was reduced to the second-tier of endorsements: trading cards, sports memorabilia, a print ad for a foodmaker with Larry Bird.

Pepsi-Cola Co., which also had a long advertising relationship with him, briefly revived a TV ad with fans shouting, "Go get 'em, Magic," when he rejoined the Lakers in 1992. That comeback fizzled before the season started, with some NBA players complaining they might be exposed to AIDS.

David Burns of Burns Sports Celebrity Service in Chicago praises Johnson's energy in promoting AIDS relief causes, but also thinks there's little chance many advertisers will dare hire him.

"Any celebrities that have a negative association with their name are less likely to be asked to represent a product," Burns said.

"And AIDS is so complex. Even someone with curable cancer, it's only the medical companies that would be really interested."
Storm continued from page 20

The Irish struggled mightily from both the 3-point arc and the free throw line against the Mountaineers, hitting season lows in both categories.

Solutions to both problems need to be found before the game with the Red Storm.

"We had people who were wide open who did not get the basketball," said MacLeod.

"We also need somebody else to become a consistent outside threat beside Ryan Hoover."

Pete Miller has shown some promise as that complementary player, but suffered through a miserable performance against West Virginia, missing all seven of his 3-point attempts.

However, the disappearance of Hoover from recent second half stat sheets is also a concern for MacLeod. Against Miami, Hoover tallied only two points after the break, while all 11 of his points against the Mountaineers came in the first half.

"Even with Hoover getting slowed down by an overplay (and they really sold out on him), we’ve got to do a better job of getting him the ball, because he’s really hot right now," said MacLeod.

The Irish will need all the points they can get from Hoover to compete with the high scoring Red Storm.

St. John’s places three players in double figures, headlined by sophomore sensations Zendon Hamilton (19.9 ppg, 11.2 rpg) and Felipe Lopez (16.6 ppg).

"Zendon is the leading offensive rebounder in the conference, and they picked up another big, strong body, Mike Minisiefield, at semester," said MacLeod.

Keeping the Red Storm front court off the boards will be a key for the Irish, who turned in a stellar effort themselves with 23 offensive rebounds against West Virginia. However, interior foul trouble, especially for Matt Gotsch and leading scorer Pat Garrity (17.3 ppg), has been a problem.

Such tactical difficulties, however, can be corrected, and MacLeod is confident that his team’s attitude will not need similar fine tuning.

"This is a battling group," he said. "They will bounce back."

that we have the potential to beat them. We just didn’t show it out there tonight."

Gruber’s second goal of the night, with 1:54 remaining, pulled the Irish to within one of the Falcons. However, Bowling Green survived an offensive fury in the remaining minute to drop the Irish to 8-15-3 on the season.

"Tonight was kind of indicative of the type of season we’ve had," said Gruber.

"We played pretty well, but it seemed that they wanted it a little more than we did. It’s a shame that we couldn’t pull it out especially with Jamie Ling getting the mark."

Ling’s special night ended with a hollow feeling, as the unwanted guests spoiled the Irish dinner party.

Now the Irish will have to hit the road at Illinois-Chicago on Friday night in order to keep out of the cellar in the conference.

Belles rebound to split pair of meets

By LAURIE KELLEHER
Sports Writer

This past weekend the Saint Mary's swimming and diving team took on Kalamazoo College and University of Chicago. On Thursday they lost to Kalamazoo, but bounced back on Saturday by defeating Chicago, despite being short-handed.

On Thursday, the Belles personally improved from the previous weekend. While they had many good races, the Belles could not defeat Kalamazoo who was stronger in numbers.

“We all improved on our swims,” said Shannon Kelleher. “We lost many people to illness, injury, and travel. I'm glad that we held up as well as we did.”

Kelleher placed first in the 1000 freestyle and third in the 500 freestyle. Also strong in the distance events was Allison Smith winning both the 500 freestyle and the 400 IM. Betsy Wright placed fifth in her first 1000 freestyle and got a personal best in the 500 freestyle.

Katie Rose placed second in the 400 IM and the 100 back.

The win was impressive because of the relatively few swimmers at the meet and the grueling meet they had just two days earlier.

Two days later the Belles defeated the University of Chicago. Among the top finishers were Smith, Kelleher, Rose, Cheeseman, Wright, Mitchell, Allyssa Caneally, and Tara Thomas.

Three unanswered goals bowl Irish over

By MIKE DAY
Sports Writer

The loss put a damper on a night in which senior center Jamie Ling made Notre Dame history. The team leader in points and assists recorded his 150th career point Tuesday evening, becoming just the 13th Irish player to accomplish the feat.

"It is a great feat for him, and he really deserves it for what he's done in four years here," said sophomore left wing Steve Noble. "He has worked so hard to achieve it, so it's kind of a letdown that we couldn't pull it out for him tonight."

Ling's accomplishment came early in the second period with the game knotted at zero. He combined with junior left wing Tim Harberts to set up Gruber for his fourth goal of the year. For Ling, it was his 30th point of the season and the second of three assists on the night.

"This is a great accomplishment for him," said Gruber. "He has really earned it, and the team has rallied behind him this year. It is something that he deserves for the kind of effort he gives night in and night out."

After Bowling Green tied the game at one, the Irish answered back to take a 2-1 lead. Just as he has done throughout his career, Ling found the right man open at the right time. On this occasion, the recipient was defenseman Ben Nelsen, who recorded his second goal of the season.

With the Irish faithful already looking about dessert, the Falcons swarmed down on Notre Dame like a pack of hungry vultures. Early in the third period, they erased all hopes of an Irish upset with three scores in just a five minute span.

"We had a little bit of a letdown that we couldn't pull it out," said Noble. "We know we made mistakes, but we made them with the game on the line. We need to focus on our extra effort, and I don't think that confidence is going to be a problem," he explained. "We're going to get revved up and go right after St. John's. You can't just put your head down and say 'Woe is me.'"

Unfortunately, they will find themselves desperately needing a win to break out of their recent slump.

Notre Dame (6-10, 1-8) traveled to Madison Square Garden tonight to take on St. John's (8-8, 2-6) in the first of three consecutive road contests that may define the Irish's season.

Over the weekend, St. John's realized its potential for the first time, upsetting No. 9 Georgetown 83-72 in the Garden.

"They are a team that is making a move after struggling early," explained Irish coach John Macleod. Notre Dame is a team currently heading in the opposite direction, following a close loss at Miami last week with a disappointing outing at the Joyce Center against West Virginia on Saturday, falling 69-59 to one of the more beatable Big East squads.

All of which makes it imperative that the Irish come away with a win from the road trip. However, despite the rocky start in conference play, MacLeod does not expect his charges to give up the fight easily.

"I don't think that confidence is going to be a problem," he explained. "We're going to get revved up and go right after St. John's. You can't just put your head down and say 'Woe is me.'"

Woeful would be an apt word to describe the Irish shooting tonight, as they were a team that is finally beginning to define the Irish's season.

As Notre Dame embarks on its second most arduous road trip of the year, the timing could not be worse for the Irish, who desperately need a win to break out of their recent slump.
