Clasp analyzes global move to democracy

By STEPHANIE DOYLE

The various modes of transition to democratic rule were analyzed by Brian Clasp, an associate professor from the University of Arizona, at the Hesburgh Center for International Studies. Clasp used various Latin American countries as examples of countries in transition to democracy, in his lecture, "Democracy as a Whole: Conceptual Links Among the Stages of Democratic Rule."

Clasp stated that at one time "there was an assumption that democracy was an endpoint." On the contrary, Clasp stated, "There is no reason to assume that the advent of democracy signals an equilibrium."

Clasp had nine hypotheses addressing the stages of democratic transition. These are: transition by pact, reform, revolution, and imposition. In his hypotheses, Clasp predicted what type of transition of the range of events going on in that region," said Dennis Moore, director of public relations.

"We feel it [the situation] could get worse and get worse quickly. We feel it is going to wind things up."

Dennis Moore, director, Notre Dame Public Relations

Israel has begun a series of bombings on Lebanon which has essentially put the country in a state of war.

In addition, foreigners in notable Egypt were recently the object of attack, setting a potential precedent within that stage of war.

According to Moore, the de facto war, the targeting of foreigners in Egypt, and the unstable relationship between Israel and Hamas — the Palestinian terrorist group — to global forces for the basis of the University's decision to shorten the semester.

"There are two elements in this decision. The first is if it is an important event. We don't think so, but we feel it could get worse and get worse — see ISRAEL/ page 4

sMC HALL ELECTIONS

Runoff to end Holy Cross elections

By LAURA SMITH

The future residents of Holy Cross Hall return to the polls today for another runoff election as a result of last night's general election.

The Anna Antes and Allison Holloway tickets are the two that are participating in the runoff.

Antes, Gina Drew, Kristi Dawson, and Rachael Krouse won 36 percent of the votes. "I'm glad the voter turnout was so high yesterday," said Krouse. "We wanted to offer Holy Cross a choice, and I'm glad we made it this far. We really just want the residents to voice their opinion on this issue.

The Holloway ticket, including Mie Rinbel, Jamie McDonald, Mia Rinehold, and Mia McLoughlin won 34 percent of the votes. Erin Battison, Bridget Sullivan, Melissa Land, and Megan McLoughlin received 20 percent of the votes. Ten percent of the voters chose to abstain.

The Battison and Holloway tickets were unavailable for comment.

SMC seniors find job hunt rough

By LAURA SMITH

With commencement just two weeks away, Saint Mary's and Notre Dame seniors have many worries on their minds, not the least of which is finding that all-important first job.

According to Karen Kyle-Manier, assistant director for career development at the Saint Mary's Counseling and Career Development Center, only about 25 percent of Saint Mary's seniors have jobs when they graduate in May.

"Most students don't have jobs at graduation," said Manier. "Employees tend to hire when they have openings and students are not available until after graduation," she said.

"Also, it is hard to conduct a job search when you are a student. They're are so many demands on seniors."

Saint Mary's senior Kristen Ross is one of the lucky ones. She was recently offered a sales position with Champion International. Ross is both excited and nervous about her job.

"It's like a whole different chapter of my life is starting, just a little bit too soon," she said. Ross interviewed with Champion International at the Career and Counseling Center. Then she flew to New York for two more interviews before she was hired.

She advises other job hunters to search for something they love to do. "My job will be a big part of my life," said Ross. "I'm glad I found something that I'm excited about, and I'm looking forward to the challenge, but will be fun at the same time."

Senior Teressa Rudolfos also landed a job before graduation. Holy Cross Associates (IICA) hired Rudolfos and eight other Saint Mary's seniors for their domestic volunteer program.

"I was really impressed with the high voter turnout at the polls today," said Residence Hall Association Vice President-elect, Christine Eischenberger. "I hope everyone who voted will return for the runoffs."

Assad stalls diplomatic talks for Israel, Lebanon

By BARRY SCHWEID

DAMASCUS, Syria

Complicating peace efforts as fighting raged on, Syrian President Hafez Assad made himself "not available" Tuesday to meet with Secretary of State Warren Christopher on the latest U.S. cease-fire plan for Lebanon.

The U.S. shuttle diplomacy was stalled further when security concerns forced Christopher to cancel a trip to Beirut.

With the Lebanon trip off and no reason to remain in Damascus, Christopher returned to Washington after more discussions Wednesday with Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

Christopher has been shuttling between Jerusalem and Damascus since Saturday, hoping to obtain a cease-fire between Israel and Hezbollah guerrillas in southern Lebanon.

The fighting continued unabated, with Israeli jets striking Hezbollah guerrillas firing rockets into northern Israel.
Russian missile attack kills Chechen leader Dudayev

MOSCOW

Chechen rebel leader Dzhokhar Dudayev was killed this week in a missile attack in southern Chechnya, the ITAR-Tass news agency said today. Another Russian news agency disputed the report.

ITAR-Tass, the official Russian news agency, said the announcement was made by Dudayev's ousted government and was distributed in the Chechen capital by Khas-Bakhmed Yarkhanov, a former Dudayev peace negotiator.

"Dudayev's been killed," he said, according to ITAR-Tass. "There's no doubt about it." However, the independent Interfax news agency said the report wasn't true. It quoted Salikh Khasaev, identified as a private secretary to Dudayev, as saying the Chechen leader "is alive and working as usual. If true, Dudayev's death might radically change the nature of the war in Chechnya and the resistance to Russian rule. A symbol of Chechen defiance and one of the most wanted men in Russia, Dudayev eluded the Russians since the fall of Grozny, the capital, early last year.

According to ITAR-Tass, the statement from Dudayev's side said he was killed in a missile attack Sunday near the village of Gekhi-Chu, about 15 miles southwest of Grozny. It quoted Yarkhanov as saying Dudayev was wounded in an air strike when he was in a helicopter on his satellite telephone with someone mediating between the separatists and Russia. He did not identify with whom Dudayev was speaking.

Several members of Dudayev's inner circle also were killed in the attack, the agency said.

Meanwhile, the Russian warplanes had bombed a site in the woods near Gekhi-Chu on Sunday night or Monday morning whereas rebel commandos were meeting.

It quoted Khaneyev, Dudayev's military prosecutor, and Khamad Kurch Choev, a rebel athlete, native in Moscow, died in the air strike.

Dudayev was known to have been in the Gekhi region, where the Chechnens had a field headquarters, in March.

Clinton releases intelligence budget

In an unprecedented step toward public accountability, President Clinton is authorizing Congress to make public the "bottom line" annual appropriation for U.S. intelligence agencies, the White House said today. "Reflecting the president's determination to promote openness in the intelligence community, he has authorized Congress to make public the appropriation— the bottom line figure — for intelligence at the time the appropriations conference report is approved by Congress," press secretary Mike McCurry said. The step apparently would not reveal spending totals on individual components of the nation's intelligence-gathering machinery. McCurry said the president also has authorized Congress to form a cabinet-level Committee on Foreign Intelligence to "establish priorities on the nation's long-term intelligence needs." Clinton's actions are based on the recommendations made by the Brown Commission, chaired by Defense Secretary Brown, which studied the roles and capabilities of U.S. intelligence.

Amish 'car-stereos' irritate neighbors

MIDDLEFIELD, Ohio

Amish teens are turning their peaceful, quaint buggies into three-wheeled boom boxes, carrying radios so loud that some are powered by car batteries. Residents have complained that it's impossible to tune out the blaring music from the passing buggies, and their slow pace only makes it worse. "It could be two o'clock in the morning and you'll hear the sound coming from the field, and you ask yourself how far away it is," Rick Rone, owner of a local drug store, said. "I'm getting sick of this traffic and turning into an old fuddy-duddy — and kids will be kids." The village council in this town of about 2,000, more about 10 miles west of Cleveland, has sent several complaints and turned the problem over to police. Councilwoman Linda Smallwood said the buggy owners could be cited for violating the village's noise ordinance, but for now police are being asked just to warn them. Roose stated he plans to tell the young Amish who come into his village to turn down their radios, and most promise to oblige.

Police ignore man's pleas for help

BOSTON

Richard Kelley was relieved to see a police cruiser pulling up behind him. A stroke had numbed his left side, and he was struggling to control his car. He expected the officers to help. Instead, he claims, the police dragged him out of his car, pronounced him drunk, ignored his cries for help and held him at the state police barracks for several hours. He says the deputy left him paralyzed and in need of constant medical care. Kelley, 51, was convicted of disorderly conduct in 1994 after telling STATE POLICE a passerby that he was returning to his home in Plymouth from a fishing trip. In Bradford, he lost control of his car and his bag a gun. According to police reports Kelley shot up his car and handcuffed him. Kelley "was unable to exit the vehicle on his own," Donnely wrote in his police report. "I told them, 'I need help! I need help! My left side doesn't work. '" Kelley told The Enterprise of Brockton. At the barracks in Bradford, he repeatedly fell off a bench, and the desk sergeant and other officers taunted him, he alleges.

Actor killed in thief of locket

LOS ANGELES

"Killing Fields" actor Dr. Haing Ngor may have been shot to death over a gold chain and locket rather than his political activism, the Daily News reported Tuesday. Ngor, 55, was shot in Los Angeles because his wallet, stuffed with $3,000 in cash, was untouched. But unidentified sources told the Daily News that a member of a gang called the "Los Angeles Officers" shot Ngor when he refused to turn over the chain and locket. Ngor, born in Cambodia's Killing Fields, was shot in the slaughter in November 1970 in the Killing Fields, about the slaughter in Ngor's homeland. Ngor had spent time in Cambodia after winning his political activism, the Daily News reported Tuesday. Council passes amendment

By DEBORAH SCHULTZ
Assistant News Editor

Hall Presidents' Council unanimously passed an amendment to the Undergraduate Student Body Constitution which will restructure the Judicial Council, at the HPC meeting last night.

The amendment calls for the creation of the additional position of Judicial Council Vice President. The position, created to facilitate better organization of the Judicial Council, will be filled by the head of the Student Government Counsel Department. Previously, the Judicial Council President was also the head of that department.

Vecchia: On the heels of successful freshman year, will continue to sit in on senate meetings, but will not have voting power.

Student Senate approved this amendment at their meeting last week, and in order for it to be passed, HPC had to approve it with a majority vote.

In other HPC news, the HPC co-chairs informed the council of the budget proposal results they received at the campus budget meeting.

"We met on Sunday with all the clubs and organizations on campus that submitted proposals for funds. A total of $400,000 is divided up among all these clubs and organizations," said HPC Co-Chair Mike Tobin.

Of the $42,500 that HPC requested, it received $30,370.

$4,000 is from the shirt fund, a charity fund. The remaining $26,370 is broken up as follows:

• $2,370 for HPC projects
• $1,000 for administration
• $11,000 for special projects
• $13,000 for hall allocations

FBI arrests Naval spy selling U.S. information

By MICHAEL SNIFFEN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON
A Navy machinist mate who served on nuclear missile submarines has been arrested by the FBI and Navy investigators after trying to sell top secret information to a U.S. agent posing as a foreign spy, the FBI and Navy said Tuesday.

"No classified defense information was successfully provided ... to any foreign interest or government," the FBI said.

The FBI identified the man as Machinist Mate First Class Kurt Lossenthien, currently on active duty as an instructor at the Navy Nuclear Power School in Orlando, Fla., where submarine crews are trained. He was arrested Monday.

U.S.: Only nukes can destroy Libyan plant

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON
The United States has no military means, short of a nuclear attack, to destroy a facility in Libya that American officials say is intended for chemical warfare, a senior Pentagon official said Tuesday.

"We could not take it out of commission using strictly conventional weapons," Harold Smith Jr., overseer of the Defense Department's nuclear, chemical and biological warfare programs, said in a breakfast interview.

At best, he said, a conventional attack would disable the facility for only one month.

Smith said it would be more than two years before the military has a non-nuclear weapon capable of destroying targets as deep as the Libyan plant, which is being built in the side of a mountain near Tarhunah in northwestern Libya.

Libyan leader Moammar Kadafi says the tunnels under construction at Tarhunah, 40 miles southeast of Tripoli, are part of a project to bring water from desert aquifers to Libya's northern coastal cities.

But in congressional testimony last month, CIA Director John Deutch described the site as the largest underground chemical weapons plant in the world.

Defense Secretary William Perry earlier this month said the United States will not allow Libya to begin operating the plant, which is still under construction. U.S. officials have said it will be ready for operation in about a year.

In a report on the Libyan project this month, Time magazine said it was virtually invulnerable to conventional air or ground attack because it is inside a mountain.

Time said only a direct hit on the mountain by a nuclear warhead would destroy the plant. When asked about that report, Perry said recently the plant was vulnerable to U.S. attack at least until it is completed.

Without mentioning the Tarhunah project by name, Perry said in a speech Tuesday on U.S.-Israel relations that the Clinton administration would not necessarily stop at punitive economic measures to prevent Libya, Iraq and Iran from realizing their goal of developing chemical, nuclear or biological weapons.

"If necessary, the United States is fully prepared to take other, more drastic, preventive measures," Perry said in an apparent allusion to military force. At the Pentagon on Tuesday, spokesman Kenneth Bacon said a report that the United States was considering a nuclear attack against Libya.

"There are many steps to stop this facility in Libya before we get to military options," Bacon said. "We have already launched diplomatic initiatives. ... There also are business and economic ways to choke this project.

Mass mourns alum Cackley

A memorial Mass in honor of John Cackley, a former executive director of the Notre Dame Alumni Association, will take place on campus this Saturday. The Mass, arranged by the alumni association, will be held in the chapel of the Sacred Heart Parish Center at 10:30 a.m.

Cackley, a 1937 graduate, recently died in Albuquerque, N.M. A reception will follow the Mass from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the University Community Room of the parish center.

Not all seniors are as lucky as Ross and Radostits. For these seniors the job search could be a struggle. According to Manier, an additional 50 percent of Saint Mary's graduates will find jobs by September. "Saint Mary's graduates definitely do well in the job market," said Manier.

They are bright, motivated, and possess good interactive and communication skills. Many jobless seniors maintain a positive attitude and a sense of humor about their situation. "I'm not worried about finding a job," joked Kelly Kilmer. "I'm buying a ticket of lottery tickets. And I can go to Senior Bar and use all my rejection letters to buy drinks." Manier advises seniors to take advantage of the resources on campus before they leave.

"I will work with the career office, line up faculty and staff references, and use the Alumni Resource Network to get a list of contacts," she said. "And remember, network, network, network."

quickly. We feel it is prudent to wind things up," he said. Sixteen Notre Dame students have been studying in Jerusalem this semester through the Notre Dame program. Their housing is located at the Bethlehem checkpoint on the border between Jerusalem and the West Bank. According to Tracy Tiemeier, one of the students, the majority of the group feels it is unnecessary to leave Israel early and was initially upset at the manner in which the situation was handled. "We're very upset, and understand that the University is looking out for our best interests, but we feel we're safe," she said. "We feel the violence, and it's scary, but we're at a place where we're protected.

When the decision was made to shorten the semester, the students were on a trip in the Negev desert. They were informed of the decision on their return to Jerusalem, and in response, 14 of the 16 signed a letter to the University administration which questioned the reasoning behind the decision. The students were also disturbed by the fact that they were not consulted when the decision was made. According to Tiemeier, the students' parents were informed of the situation first. The administration didn't contact us directly but contacted our parents... They [the University] decided Thursday night, and we found out Sunday night," she said. Harold Pace, the father of one of the students in Jerusalem, was informed of the situation over the weekend. While he was disappointed that his daughter Leann could not complete the semester, he expressed support for the University's action.

"I think the University really had a lot of good sources for the information, not only from within the University but also through the director in Jerusalem and from within Israel," he said. In a letter responding to the students' concerns, Tom Bogenschult, director of the international study programs, stated, "I had hoped to alert you to these concerns before you left for your field trip to the Negev, but was told that you had just left.

In the meantime, we felt sufficiently alarmed to take decisive action as quickly as possible... The decision was not taken lightly, and was reached after full deliberation and consultation with a wide range of informed people."

Classes for the students were initially scheduled to end on May 5, after which the students would have been given five additional days for travel. Since the students' return from the Negev, they have been restricted in their actions for the duration of their stay in Jerusalem. "This week we're confined, and we haven't heard about our flight. It's supposed to leave between April 29 and May 1, but the travel agency is still trying to reschedule it," Tiemeier said.

"A lot of us had traveling plans through Europe and Greece so it's been pretty rough. Now we're trying to make the most of our last week." Although the semester is ending early, the students will not lose credits as a result, said Moore.

"They're winding things down so it shouldn't affect the outcome of the term. It's not an evacuation, simply a shortening of the semester," he said. Students are now completing their papers and taking finals in preparation for the nearing end of the semester, according to Tiemeier. While they understand the concern, the group still maintains that they would prefer to complete the original length term. "We see intellectually what they're saying, but we still don't see why they have to send us home early," she said.

Dole wins Pennsylvania primary amid GOP doubt

By JOHN KING

Bob Dole won Pennsylvania’s presidential primary Tuesday but it was of little solace to supporters of a campaign trying to cure an internal Republican funk that has exposed doubts about the nominee and the GOP’s broader election strategy.

Dole clinched the GOP nomination by winning 25 consecutive primaries in March, leaving little drama for Pennsylvania — or the 11 presidential contests still to come.

Any chance for fireworks in Pennsylvania ended with Pat Buchanan’s decision not to campaign there, even though he remains an active candidate.

Pennsylvania’s 73 GOP convention delegates officially run uncommitted to any candidate, but many were Dole backers and most, if not all, were expected to back him at the August GOP convention. Dole entered the day with 1,202 delegates, well beyond the 996 needed to clinch nomination.

Early returns showed Dole handily beating Buchanan, President Clinton, who long ago clinched renomination, had no major opposition and coasted in the Democratic primary.

So predictable were the results that Dole didn’t even stage a primary night celebration, instead thanking Pennsylvania Republicans in a statement that ignored recent turmoil in the Republican ranks over Dole’s skills as a candidate and the party’s strategy for dealing with aggressive congressional Democrats.

“You showed that the Republican Party is unified, it is focused and it is ready to take its message of positive, conservative change directly to the American people,” Dole said.

That upbeat assessment ran counter to this evaluation of the Republican mood from a senior Dole adviser: “It’s ugly out there.”

Indeed, it was House Speaker Newt Gingrich who went so far as to use the term “funk” — a word President Clinton offered not too long ago when he was trying to explain his own political troubles.

“We are going through a Republican period of being in a funk,” Gingrich said Monday night.

But Gingrich reminded his audience that if big early leads always held up, the 1988 election would have produced President Dukakis.

Still, there is no disputing that Dole and his party have had a rough stretch.

For starters, Dole’s early clinching of the Republican nomination hasn’t translated into momentum: Recent national polls show Clinton with as much as an 18-point lead over Dole in a head-to-head matchup, and a comfortable lead in a three-way race with Ross Perot.

Surveys also show persistent doubts about the Republican Congress and high negative ratings for Gingrich, whom Democrats try to link to Dole at every opportunity.

And Dole’s plan to use his post as Senate majority leader to make his case against Clinton has had more snags than successes so far, as Democrats have put Dole and fellow Republicans on the defensive by demanding a vote on raising the minimum wage.

That is just one example of GOP strategists in developing a coherent election-year legislative strategy. Nervous about the pounding the party took from Clinton in last year’s budget fight, some Republicans are decidedly more cautious this year.

Dole, for example, complained over the weekend of being “blindsided” by the decision of some 20 House Republicans to back a minimum wage increase.

The GOP blunders on the minimum wage, and problems developing a broader legislative strategy, have renewed debate within the party over whether Dole should step down as majority leader, or at least turn over day-to-day management of the Senate to Republican Whip Trent Lott.

Dole has steadfastly resisted such advice.

On Monday, William Bennett, the author and former education secretary, said Dole’s Senate role was “a trap” and that within the party, “there’s very little enthusiasm about Bob Dole.”

Dole campaign manager Scott Reid attributed the criticism to “some inside the Beltway people trying to get their names in the paper.” He said that for most, the party was cocooning around Dole.

But many state GOP leaders share Bennett’s concerns about Dole’s skills as a candidate and communicator, though they are reluctant to be so blunt publicly.

Democrats halt term limits

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press
WASHINGTON

Popular with the public, a proposed constitutional amendment to place term limits on members of Congress was blocked Tuesday by a Senate Democratic filibuster. Republicans sought political advantage in the aftermath.

On a 58-42 vote, two short of the 60 needed, lawmakers refused to stop debate.

That left the bill in limbo, and aides and lawmakers alike said Majority Leader Bob Dole would soon pull it from the floor.

"We'll bring it up again next year if need be," Sen. Fred Thompson, R-Tenn., said shortly before the vote. Elected to the Senate in 1994, Thompson led the fight for the measure, which enjoys support in the 70 percent range in public opinion polls.

All 53 Republicans and five Democrats voted to curtail debate on the proposal. All the votes against were cast by Democrats.

Term limits advocates outside Congress had long wanted a vote, the better to target candidates for the next few election cycles.

Said Paul Jacob, head of U.S. Term Limits, "I think those people who voted no ... are going to find that if they're up for election this year, this was not a very good vote for them."

The measure would have limited senators to two six-year terms and House members to six two-year terms, effective on the amendment's ratification by the required three-fourths of the state legislatures.

The Constitution does not limit the length of congressional service. Lawmakers generally accumulate power through seniority, gradually rising through the years to chairmanships of subcommittees and full committees.

Those posts confer enormous power over federal money and programs.

The term limits proposal was part of the House Republicans' Contract With America that helped fuel the GOP election successes of 1994. Even so, the GOP-controlled House rejected it last year on a 227-204 vote, well shy of the two-thirds majority needed.

Senate passes health insurance coverage

By DIANE DUSTON
Associated Press
WASHINGTON

The Senate unanimously passed legislation Tuesday to protect millions of workers from losing health insurance when they change or lose jobs.

Late additions also would create tax breaks for the chronically ill.

The measure now goes to a House-Senate conference committee to work out substantial differences with the House. But the rare 100-0 vote puts the full force of the Senate behind its version as negotiators begin the blending process.

And one controversial Senate provision — requiring insurance companies to treat mental illness the same as physical illness — apparently won't be a problem. Senate sponsors from both parties said it would have to come out.

The bill's success contrasts sharply with the failure two years ago of a wide-ranging proposal by President Clinton to overhaul the nation's health care system.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole worked with Finance Chairman William Roth to expand the bill with new deductions for the self-employed and for terminally or chronically ill people.

The core purpose of the legislation, sponsored by Sens. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., and Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., is to assure that people who lose or change their jobs continue to be able to purchase health insurance, even if they have an existing medical problem.

The bill does not regulate the cost of that insurance, but would stop companies from refusing to sell policies to workers with health problems.

The practice has prevented millions of people changing employers or striking out on their own.

Dole said he regretted the Senate turned back his effort to include a House provision setting up tax-exempt medical savings accounts, but indicated he would continue to push for them.

Egyptian police shoot two massacre suspects

Associated Press

ASSIUT

In an hours-long gunbattle amid sugar-cane fields, police Tuesday killed two men they believe participated in the massacre of 18 Greek tourists near the pyramids.

Four policemen died and 14 others were wounded. It was the bloodiest day since assailants opened fire on the tourists outside the Europa Hotel in Cairo last Thursday, a savage reminder that Egypt's struggle to halt Muslim militants' violent campaign continues.

Al-Gamaa al-Islamiya, or the Islamic Group, claimed responsibility for the attack, saying it meant to kill Israeli tourists outside the hotel. Police have arrested hundreds of suspects.

The government has sent thousands of police to avenge the Israeli massacre of 18 Greek tourists near the pyramids.

In an hours-long gunbattle over the area of the fire recorded only a slight radiation increase, said Nikolai Komschensky, a spokesman for Ukraine's nuclear regulatory agency.

"We see no reason to be concerned now," he said.

Fire officials said the fire posed no danger to the Chernobyl plant, still in operation a decade after a reactor exploded, killing at least 30 people outright. Another 5 million people were exposed to radioactive fallout, mostly in Ukraine, Belarus and Russia.

No injuries were reported in the fire, which burned several acres before being put out after about 7 1/2 hours. It was not clear how much damage was done to the villages, officially off limits since the plant disaster.

Firefighters said the blaze was probably started by a cigarette dropped by one of the families visiting graves near the village of Tosvy Li, about six miles northeast of the plant.

Old women sobbed and tried to shield grandchildren from the smoke as flames engulfed homes they were forced to abandon to shield themselves from the radiation.

The fire spread quickly through five villages in the 18-mile exclusion zone around the plant, carried by strong winds blowing toward Kiev and its 2.6 million residents. It burned pines and buildings in one of the areas most heavily contaminated with radioactive cesium.

The West has long pushed for Ukraine to close Chernobyl, but the energy-starved former Soviet republic says it needs the electricity and jobs the plant provides.

Dr. Fred Mettler, a University of New Mexico professor who led a 1990 study into the health hazards of the Chernobyl disaster, said the risks from radiation were minimal.

The cesium contamination from the 1986 accident mostly is in the soil, and not likely to be carried by smoke from burning buildings, Mettler said by telephone.

"I would be surprised if anybody would get enough of a lungful to significantly change their normal cancer risk," he said. The environmental group Greenpeace, however, said fires can carry radioactive material to previously uncontaminated areas.

"This is clearly a danger to the health of people, not only in Ukraine," spokesman Antony 2

Top ten: Suggestions for avoiding 'the real world'

Well it’s my last column of the year, and to keep the trend, I suppose I should give it a little sense of finality and farewell. After all, I do have friends graduating from the Law School this year, and I must explain to them all before they depart, so I guess this will be my way of saying: “See ya later.”

Kirsten Dunne

This is the first school year at Notre Dame in seven years that’s come to a close without me. I still miss it terribly. I also miss being in a school environment where you will most likely be better off as far as being aware of what I call the “real world.”

To be honest, I think that many of you who are graduating are venturing out into the “real world.” My sympathies are with you. But if you think about it, you’ll no doubt know that a decent percentage of you who’ve figured out a way to avoid this fate, and you therefore still have a certain amount of freedom.

And what, precisely, are you going to do with that freedom? You don’t know! Never fear! Constantly reminding about my own freedom and pondering the things I am precluded by, my job, from doing, I’ve come up with some suggestions for you. Here they are.

10. Write Top Ten Lists. Dave Letterman’s idea has become a craze nationwide, and who’s to say you couldn’t create these lists all on your own and glean just as much satisfaction? My dear friend Angela and I figured this out in law school, and we let ourselves, we had fun! When classes became boring, we’d think of ten things we’d rather be doing, sometimes throwing in a rhyme scheme. When a professor had a good double entendre theme running through a lecture, we made a list of the best phrases. Sometimes we needed to distract the professor and paper out to the bars, often making several new friends with our crazy lists. Of course, one can carry this hobby into law school, and Angela and I probably did just that, but it’s lots of fun. Try it!

9. Follow your favorite group. Why should touring with one’s favorite band be strictly a Deadhead thing? I received offers to see Ministry in Detroit and Indianapolis, and I’d have done it for that job of mine, I’d have been there in a heartbeat. If you’ve ever seen your own favorite artist in concert, you know why the magic it entails. At the recent Ministry show here in Chicago, I met some neat people — people unlike the upright, snail sensitive sort I see every day in my profession. It is a society to a couple of parties. And best of all, I got to see the beautiful, mysterious Al Jourgensen in person, and his presence took my break away. Now, while you may not love this dynamic duo as I do, I imagine there’s some band out there that affects you like mine. It definitely affects me. If you are unemployed, and have some money saved up, tour with them.

8. Try to locate vampires Word has it that a governmental agency in my very own state of residence has been set up to uncover the approximately 50 vampires believed to be living here. This might be tricky to follow up on but if I had nothing else to do I’d certainly take the time to check it out. Maybe I’d find the key to immortality? Maybe I’d meet Lestat! Maybe I’m nuts? True, but I wouldn’t care if I were also immortal.

7. Compile snarky, useless statistics. If you’re still in college you can probably create these lists all on your own and glean just as much satisfaction? My dear friend Angela and I figured this out in law school, and we let ourselves, we had fun! When classes became boring, we’d

6. Get in touch with old friends. Sometimes you can rekindle friendships with long lost pals thereby enriching your happiness and your social life. My experience has shown that, more often, two people have grown so apart that there’s no basis for a friendship anymore. Never fear! It can still be a rewarding experience. Your friend might have gained a lot of weight. Perhaps he’s managed to get himself hitched, or has a dead-end, boring job. In these scenarios you may not have a good friend any more, but at least you’ll have a good laugh. And an improved self image to boot.

5. Have fun with your hair. I suspect most of us would like to try cool things with our hair, but fear that it would interfere with our jobs. But hey, if you don’t have a job, there’s no interference to speak of, so get funky.

4. Take walks. For me, anyway, walks are a great way to unwind. When it’s sunny, and the temperature’s around 50 or 60 degrees, I can’t think of any thing better than putting on my walkman and treading all over creation.

Okay if you don’t have to work, you don’t really have to unwind either, true? Not necessarily. Tracking down vampires can be taxing.

3. Start a 1-900 number. The bad side to not working is obvious: NO MONEY! So make some, but do it the easy way, and get the added satisfaction that you’re making fools out of others. You don’t have to be all that creative to start a 900 number; nor do you incur huge startup costs. You just need a little initiative, and you’re set. Hey if your really lucky, you may NEVER have to work. Now that’s what I call 1-900-WAY-COO!

2. Sleep. "You can sleep all day you’re dead," the early-morning people in my life have told me. Even if that’s true (which I debate), what’s the point to waking up at 6:30 a.m. when you have no energy to do anything but yaw! I’d much rather rise at noon and feel rested, so I could spend the rest of the day enjoyably. I love sleeping, and if I wasn’t working, I’d do it A LOT. If you’re unemployed, make it a priority to catch up on Zs.

1. Lighten up! There’s nothing like a job — especially an office job — to make you mix up your priorities big-time. You constantly kiss up to the boss, or to clients you despise. You cancel doctor’s appointments because they interfere with work. You spend hours in idle invitations to socialize in order to shmooze up to politicians. C’mee a break! You should do what YOU want to do. Don’t let others determine every detail of your life for you. While this can be difficult if you’re at the bosses’ mercy for your income, the unemployed have no excuse for caving in to others’ expectations of them. In the words of my soulmate Al Jourgensen, “Be your own person.” In my experience, to do otherwise is disastrous.

Well, there have you it, folks. Even if you’re not leaving ND/SM, you won’t be hearing from me for a few months now. To those who are leaving — especially my friends — I wish you the best of luck. And I wish each and every one of you a pleasant and completely unproductive summer. Later, guys.

The question is, "Do girls make passes at guys who wear glasses?" the answer is a definite yes.
"I think it's the Clark Kent syndrome," explained Saint Mary's sophomore Delilah Welch. "You're mildly attracted to the clumsy, eyeglass-wearing type of man.
"But Clark Kent isn't the only one catching more than a few glances these days. Ethan Hawke, Sylvester Stallone, Antonio Banderas and E.R.'s Anthony Edwards have all been tagged for their eyewear.
"Sylvester Stallone is the perfect example," said senior Ana Elmufdi. "He used to be Rambo-rough. After 'Tango and Cash' he started wearing suits and glasses... He looked all clean-cut, good looking, and that's all because of the glasses.
"Maybe there is something to a good pair of glasses. Banderas made his debut to many American audiences as a stuttering, eyeglass-wearing young man in the movie 'Women on the Verge of a Nervous Breakdown.'
"Edwards hit the entertainment scene as one of E.R.'s top docs sporting glasses and a decidedly balding heard, neither of which have been a deterrent to any of his fans, and even Tom Cruise has shown up in some of his recent movies wearing frames.
"But explain sex appeal to your average grade schooler. Junior Adell Carter explained how hard it was for him to deal with getting glasses at a young age.
"I got them in fifth grade and then I lost them on purpose because I hated them so much," he said. "My friends used to tease me and beat me up." Carter was so traumatized that he didn't put on glasses back on until twelfth grade.
"One thing that was really bad was that I had a hard time reading the chalkboard and used to have to sit up in front of the class. And I had a hard time playing sports.
"But that was before he grew. He reached 5'7" in the sixth grade and over 5'11" in the seventh.
"That was when my friends stopped making fun the way.

The sun starts to shine. Faded Levi's turn into baggy khaki shorts as roller blades replace muddy bobby sox. People once again on staying cool and avoiding the summer squint. Nothing, all, is worse than going for a run, a drive or a read in the sun and feeling like your suddenly turn into the before picture hanging on a plastic surgeon's wall.
So avoid the possibility of wrinkles and weakened vision. Put on your shades, your blue blockers or your wanna-be Chanelers and be prepared to greet the sun in comfort and style. People have, after all, managed to turn the basic, necessary pair of sunglasses into art for the eyes.
In the 50's, Marilyn Monroe sported her cat eye specs. Women in flowing dresses and full cut bathing suits complete with matching caps wore them, too, fulfilling the Hollywood image of the complete, suntanned beauty. Jackie Kennedy's oval shades filled the early 60's with the sleek, sophisticated look that was fitting for those Peter Pan collar days.
The 70's saw mirrored sunglasses appropriate for the bright lights of the disco while lacking over so groovy with a slick leisure suit. And then came the baby boomer years...the decade of punk and pink and green whales and jelly bracelets. Sunglasses became large. Big. They were a germatologic nightmare, but that was worse than going for a run, a drive or a read in the sun and feeling like your suddenly turn into the before picture hanging on a plastic surgeon's wall.

Senior Luis Castillo hasn't had to overcome any of the hurdles that Carter has, but wearing glasses still bother him. "I think I got them my freshman year here. Most of the sunglasses a la

José Feliciano just for the effect. But he says,

"sunglasses are something different. I think I do wear those just to look cool. The feeling is about the same (as compared to regular glasses) but when you wear sunglasses it makes you look more cool."

But other men aren't quite so impressed by guys who wear glasses.

"It's a pitty," according to Notre Dame sophomore

John Fernández, explaining some women's strange attraction to men in glasses. And while Fernández may just be bitter because he doesn’t wear glasses himself, even those who do take a slightly different view.

Jason Sanks, who has been spotted on campus with and without, isn't impressed either. "I think I look kind of dorky. I like them for formal functions but not for anything casual."

And while the men in Hollywood and even on campus

not all girls see

glasses as a reason to make passes. Saint Mary’s junior Tracy Hollingsworth thinks that they are more of a hassle than anything else.

"A person without glasses seems more open," she said. "A person who wears glasses seems more inhibited, like they are hiding from the world." And although she calls herself an "equal opportunity dater," she admits that her own boyfriend has perfect 20/20

eyesight.

So do men with glasses have an advantage over those who don’t? Freshman Mark Limon doesn’t think so. "I don’t judge a guy by his eyeglasses," she said, pointing out that it is more a question of who he is and not what he wears. Hollingsworth agreed and not what he wears. Hollingsworth stated.

"When it comes down to it, it’s all about what’s on the inside."

"It's a situation that happens, but it doesn't automatically fix $1,000 for being ejected Sunday. We're still working on it." George Karl said his team does not need Kemp to beat the Kings. "But it would make a lot if we had him," he added. "I must respond to their ruling and move forward. We've got to forget about it.

Kemp practiced with the team Tuesday but declined to discuss the suspension.

"We've got to forget about the ruling and move forward. I don't think it's going to make that big a difference," Karl said earlier. "I saw a wrestling match that was being made of the incident. I saw a wrestling match between two players who were fighting with each other. Kemp gave the Sonics a 63-59 lead with 3:45 left in the third quarter against Denver. Returning downtown, Karl and Kemp met with a forensic psychologist. Karl also threw a forearm and the two scuffled until coaches, who were watching, restored order. Denver won 99-88."

Over this past weekend, the Notre Dame Rowing Club announced their presence to the very competitive Southern Intercolligate Rowing Association. The crew traveled to Knoxville, Tennessee to compete in that league’s championship, and they competed very well.

Thunderstorms and driving rain postponed Saturday racing for close to four hours. However, the Irish proved that they could prevail in such conditions, even against high-caliber competition. In fact, men’s and women’s teams placed close to the top of the field.

The biggest race for the Irish was the men’s heavyweight four. Led by David “Robby” Robinson the squad captured the golden medal performance in the Southern Championships.

In the men’s novice race of the day, another medal was turned in by the freshman men’s 8 as they placed in the final results.

The Notre Dame Rowing Club finished well despite giving up an advantage to some SIRA crews who have the opportunity to practice year round. The less than beautiful South Bend weather kept the team off the course for the majority of the weekend.

“Throughout the winter we did a lot of training and conditioning,” the vice president of the club, the admiral David Robinson said. “We did a lot of weight lifting and an endless number of hours were spent on the stairs in the engineering building.”

Much of the unexpected success of the Dinos can be attributed to the outstanding leadership of coaches Mark Manglesdorf and Bing Cheng.

"This is a banner year for the crew. This level of success has not been seen by Notre Dame for over five years," expressed Robinson. “Some of our success is a testament to the coaches. They are both really dedicated, and since we are a club, we have to rely on volunteers.”

The Rowing Club hopes their success continues to grow as they will be competing again this weekend. This time, the Irish will travel north to Madison, Wisconsin for March’s Midwest Sprints. This championship race for their own league provides the Irish with the chance to race in the National Championships in Worcester, Massachusetts.

The top two finishers from each race will make the trip to Massachusetts. The team’s best chance looks to be the men’s lightweight 8 with the likes of Dino Casumano, Jim Swartz, Andy Murray, and others looking to improve on their silver medal performance in the Southern Championships.

Manglesdorf and Cheng are hoping their rowers can rise up to the occasion and the competition as participating in the National Championships would be a big thrill for the entire crew.

Parker was named the Big East Pitcher of the Week yesterday, becoming the first Notre Dame player to win the Big East’s weekly honor.

Parker didn’t allow a single base runner through the first 4 2/3 innings of Sunday’s win, his sixth of the season. Parker had a no-hitter going until the sixth inning, and two of the three hits he surrendered on the afternoon were bunt singles. Parker also struck out 11 Hoyas batters on the afternoon, seven of which accounted for the final nine outs.

Notre Dame split with Northern Illinois

Notre Dame bats come to life in second contest

Notre Dame's softball team suffered its first shutout loss of the season in game one (2-0) but rattled off an 8-2 win in the second game of a doubleheader against Northern Illinois.

With the split, the Irish now stand at 41-12, while Northern Illinois is 24-14. Head coach Liz Miller was denied her 700th career win and instead stands at 699-206 (.772) in her 21-plus seasons of coaching.

Miller will get another chance to win her 700th career win on Thursday when Notre Dame travels to Northwestern for a doubleheader.

Notre Dame squandered early scoring opportunities in the first game as the Irish stranded runners at third in the first two innings and a runner at second in the fourth. These were the only chances Notre Dame would have to score in the game.

Northern Illinois was more opportunistic as their first two hits resulted in runs. Angela Porcelli led off the fourth inning with a single and scored when her single got past center fielder Jenn Giampaolo for a three-base error.

It would be the only run the Huskies would need in the game, but they added an insurance run in the fifth when Tammy Pytel singled, advance to second on a sacrifice bunt by Barbara Fredrickson and to third on a wild pitch. She then beat out a suicide squeeze for the second run of the game.

Angie Zuppann (11-4) pitched a complete-game shutout for Northern Illinois. Angela Benedo (14-5) suffered the loss for Notre Dame as she also went the distance.

In game two, Notre Dame pounded out 12 hits on the way to an 8-2 win. Jenna Knudson highlighted the offensive output for the Irish as she stroked a three-run double in the fourth inning to break open a 3-1 game. Katie Marten went 4-4 and scored two runs and Meghan Murray was 2-4 with two runs scored and a two-run single in the first inning which she scored Marten and Kara McMahon.

Kelly Nichols (5-1) pitched a complete game in her first start of the season. She scattered 11 hits by Northern Illinois and allowed the Huskies just two runs. Kim Weale (6-3) pitched a complete game in the loss for Northern Illinois.

Women’s Bookstore heats up

Women’s Bookstore Basketball is a great opportunity for women who love the game of basketball, who play for the competition, and who just want to have a good time.

Women’s Bookstore Basketball has often been referred to as Bookstore’s “Little Sister.” Lookout for the Manhole Cover, the book all about Bookstore Basketball, provides the small history of the women’s division. The women’s division began in 1978, which was also the first year for Notre Dame Division III Women’s Basketball.

Typically, there are 30 to 35 teams that play in the tournament, taking place the week of April 11, and of the finals of the main Bookstore Basketball Tournament. This year there are 40 teams, and this number should reach 100 in the near future. The same rules that apply in Bookstore Basketball also apply in the women’s division.

Only one player who has dressed for an NCAA Division I basketball team within the last 15 years is eligible per team; the athlete must have no NCAA eligibility left to compete in the event. Also, like the rule that applies in Bookstore Basketball also apply in the women’s division.

Unfortunately, the rules have been changed around in the past because the tournament is small and has been unorganized. It is important that Women’s Bookstore runs along side the Bookstore Basketball Tournament, so that it may continue the tradition and bring in more teams. So far, the 1996 Women’s Bookstore Tournament has proved to be an improvement compared to past years, but the women’s league still has a long road ahead of them.

Shelley DeMott, a member of the ’95 Women’s Bookstore champion team “The Top 5 Reasons to Play Bookstore Basketball,” says that she’s looking forward to this year’s tournament.

DeMott also expressed her disappointment in past years because of the lacking coverage of Women’s Bookstore and because there are more female athletes at St. Mary’s and Notre Dame who play basketball who do not participate in the tournament.

Even though there are only 40 teams, basketball players like Stacy Fields and Carey Poor, along with a talented team of law students, will be competing in Women’s Bookstore Basketball. Be sure to watch this week’s games, especially the championship game on Sunday before the main Bookstore Championship.

Irish tune up for NCAA tournament

By KATHLEEN LOPEZ
Sports Writer

Well, the season of firsts have come to a close. This is the first time ever that the Irish have won the Big East. The first time that the Irish have had a player named player of the year, and the first time that the Irish have had a coach named Big East coach of the year. There is still one first that the Irish are looking to capture. The Irish want to win the NCAA tournament.

The women's tennis team put an end to their regular season yesterday. The Irish hosted Western Michigan, just a day after capturing the Big East championship. Western Michigan did not prove to be much of a test for the Irish, as they easily prevailed, 8-1. The Irish now have extended their record to 22-6.

This past match was the last regular season match for the team before the NCAAs. The Irish are looking to ride their winning streak into the NCAA tournament which is scheduled to start May 18. This meet was the seniors final home match, so all of the seniors suited up for the match.

The doubles line-up took on some new faces for this meet. Junior Erin Gowen and sophomore Kelley Olson started at the No. 1 doubles seed. Gowen and Olson coasted to an 8-4 victory. Freshman Jennifer Hall and senior Meredith Siegfried also managed an easy victory, 8-3.

The only loss for the Irish came at the third spot in the doubles competition. Sophomores Molly Gavin and Darcie Sweet fell to Western Michigan's Sommer Stier and Bridget Loughrin, 6-8.

The singles competition went smoothly for the Irish. Hall coasted to a straight set victory over Audrey Smith, 6-1, 6-1. Senior Holyn Lord annihilated her Western Michigan opponent, 6-0, 6-0.

At the No. 3 singles position, senior Wendy Crabtree quickly dismissed WMU's Kristin DeVall, 6-1, 6-1. Freshman Marisa Velasco had a straight set victory over Western Michigan's Hillary Schaffer. Velasco shutout Schaffer, 6-0, 6-0.

Senior Sherri Vitale made her long awaited return. Vitale sustained a wrist injury against Northwestern in February. Apparently, the wrist was better because Vitale defeated WMU's Stier, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2.

Baseball games can be very long. The Irish found this out the hard way yesterday, taking a 3-0 lead into the fourth inning before being lambasted by host Illinois, who scored at least one run in the next five innings to run away with a 13-3 victory.

"They squandered more scoring opportunities early on, which kept them in the game," commented head coach Paul Mainieri of his team's fielding.

The Illini's big inning shook up Irish starter Gregg Henebry, who was yanked in the fifth after surrendering seven runs, three of which were unearned. Reliever Brad Lidge would fare no better, however, as he was rocked for six runs on five hits in just over three innings of relief work, putting the game out of reach for the Irish.

"They have a real good team," commented Mainieri of the Illini, who entered the game with a composite .335 batting average. "We had some bad luck in the middle of the game, and it got a little out of hand."

The Irish's fielding was also a little out of hand, as they committed five errors on the afternoon.

"What can you say, we made a few errors," commented Mainieri of his team's fielding, which has given him plenty of headaches this season.

The loss dropped the Irish to 31-12 on the season, and obscured a 4-5 performance at Frank Eck stadium. The offensive barrage and near automatic shooting from the perimeter.

"We came in all freshmen, so we were hoping to surprise some people," said Reed of the Zealots. Said, "We weren't too intimidated playing Monk's team. We scouted them before, and we were hoping that the age factor would work in our favor." said Mainieri, whose team has given him plenty of headaches this season.

"It's better to win than to lose, but nobody got hurt so that's okay," he said.

Three times was not a charm for No. 23 Zeus, Apollo, and Three Others Who Appear to be Mere Mortals, who lost 25-23 to the team formerly known as Dickens Cider Still, now officially changed to Jesus Loves Me. Zeus, Apollo... nearly pulled off their third consecutive extended victory, after winning their first two 22-20 and 23-21, but in the end they found themselves on the other side of coin. Run Eniste of Zeus, Apollo...

"They squandered more scoring opportunities early on, which kept them in the game," commented head coach Paul Mainieri of the Irish in the fifth, mounting a five run attack which was keyed by a three-run homerun by Illini first baseman Brett Laurvick, who tagged Irish pitching for four hits and four RBI on the afternoon.

The Illini's big inning shook up Irish starter Gregg Henebry, who was yanked in the fifth after surrendering seven runs, three of which were unearned. Reliever Brad Lidge would fare no better, however, as he was rocked for six runs on five hits in just over three innings of relief work, putting the game out of reach for the Irish.

"The loss dropped the Irish to 31-12 on the season, and obscured a 4-5 performance at the plate from the sizzling Randall Brooks, who entered the game batting a blistering .410. Brooks personally accounted for almost half of the Irish's nine hits on the afternoon.

"We just have to bounce back," said Mainieri, whose Irish will play their final 13 games in the friendly confines of Frank Eck stadium. The Irish will get that chance to bounce back when they tangle with Division III St. Norbert in a doubleheader this afternoon at 4:00.

Notes: Notre Dame sophomore pitcher Christian Parker turned in his best performance of the season against Georgetown, tossing a three hit complete game shutout.

Yesterday, Parker was justly rewarded for his effort.

Many seeded teams have finally been tested in Bookstore XXV and some of them have failed.

Jamie Haigh and second seeded NBT3 coasted to a 21-13 victory over Dead Flying Elk to advance to the round of thirty-two.

"It is disappointing for us to lose like that," Eniste said. "We gave it all we had, but in the end, they were the better team."

"Our ball-handling and hustle allowed us to pull it out in the end," Bill Wagasy said. "They were a very athletic team, and it was a great game."

"It was pure heart," an elated Dan Sullivan added.

Although the 25-23 Jesus Loves Me victory was the hardest-fought game of the day, it was a toss up for the most exciting game of the day.
