ND, SMC students to rally for life in D.C.

Tonight 32 Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students from the Right to Life organization will be embarking on a 16-hour bus ride to Washington, D.C., to take part in the annual D.C. Pro-life March. There they will continue to voice their opposition to abortion, specifically partial-birth abortion.

Each year since the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision, which legalized abortion in the United States, the Notre Dame Right to Life organization has participated in the march.

Recent bombings of abortion clinics in north Atlanta and Tulsa are haunting the minds of many activists. Right to Life President Maureen Kramlich states firmly on behalf of the pro-life cause, "We're committed to non-violence. We condemn these random attacks. People who commit them may be anti-abortion, but in no way are they pro-life. They have no place in our movement."

Arriving in Washington Tuesday morning and leaving Wednesday night, the group has quite a full schedule. Tuesday is primarily a day of sightseeing, and there will be a lunch at Union Station for pro-life students from all over the country. The Mass for Life will be held that night in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, which is the largest church in the western United States. See PRO-LIFE / page 4

Moreau showcases prof’s art

Billy Ray Sandusky, one of two artists whose works opened in the Moreau Center Art Galleries, presented a lecture on Friday, Jan. 17, on his exhibit, "Billy Ray Sandusky: New Work of '96."

The showing is the first that Sandusky, an associate professor of art at Saint Mary's, has given at the college since 1980, his first year teaching at the South Bend campus. As an artist, Sandusky states that his works "are reflections of some of the thoughts, activities, and preoccupations" which consume his time as a father, husband, friend, artist, educator, and gardener.

Sandusky earned his bachelor of fine arts degree from the John Herron School of Art at Indiana University in 1968 and his master of fine arts degree at Tulane University in 1970. He spent seven years instructing and directing courses in Florence, Italy for the Santa Reparata Graphic Art Centre. Sandusky then began instructing at the Saint Mary's College Rome Program.

After teaching for three years in Rome, Sandusky was offered a position as a sabbatical replacement in South Bend. At first, Sandusky recalls, he thought, "Women's Catholic school? I don't think so. Sounds a little weird to me!"

Despite his reservations, Sandusky accepted the position. "In Rome I had met these fantastic students and thought, Now, these guys are pretty cool. They are good artists and serious students." Plus, I was desperate for a print shop." Sandusky stated that the most difficult part of the move was the College's location. "I was brought up in Indianapolis and left in '68 swearing to never set foot in the state again," he said with a grin. "But I figured that South Bend was cool because it is so far north it is not really in Indiana!"

He considered the time frame - the position was for only one year. "We figured we could handle it for a year. Well, that was 1980 and we're still here!"

When he returned to Indiana, Sandusky said he rediscovered the sky. "In Florence I never saw the sky — the buildings were too close; I was hemmed in. I had almost forgotten what it was like."

It was at this point that Sandusky began concentrating on landscapes. His landscapes, however, are not traditional landscapes "with the barn and field." Rather, Sandusky's landscapes are very close views of the natural environment; a "zoom-in" effect.

"These to me are landscapes because they have all of the attributes of landscapes," he stated. See SANDUSKY / page 6

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, a small business advocacy lobbying group, has called 1996 a successful year for business — and credits the outgoing 104th Congress.

Legislative items that the Chamber supported and the Congress passed included the line-item veto, the Regulatory Flexibility Act, welfare reform, health care reform, and other legislation. The Chamber considers some of these final victories and other items will receive further attention in the 105th Congress.

"Line-item veto is an open and shut case," Joe Davis, the Chamber's media consultant, said. "Welfare reform, we like to think, is an open and shut case."

These issues will not be on the Chamber's 1996 lobbying agenda, as the group feels it has make sufficient advancements with regard to these items. One of the defeats in the 104th Congress was the Senate's one-vote defeat of the Balanced-Budget Amendment. It got 66 of the required 67 votes needed to pass it to the states for ratification.

Regulatory reform and health care reform are areas that will receive continued attention as well as balancing the budget. Davis said. The Chamber supported the Kassebaum-Kennedy Act, which increased health insurance portability.

The Regulatory Flexibility Act, another Chamber victory, allows Congressional review, within 60 days, of proposed regulations targeting small businesses. Pension simplification legislation, passed in 1996, makes it easier for small business owners to sponsor retirement plans for their employees. See CHAMBER / page 4

A car bomb exploded Sunday outside a downtown cafe, killing at least 21 people and widening dozens, just hours after attackers massacred 36 villagers — decapitating some — south of the capital.

Witnesses reported a second explosion Sunday near Reghib, about 10 miles east of Algiers. There were reports of injuries, but no details.

Government security force officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said they dismantled at least six car bombs Sunday in the Algiers province.

The violence was the worst in what has been a bloody 1997 in this North African country, which a five-year Islamic insurgency has killed at least 60,000.

The car bomb exploded shortly after 8 p.m. Sunday in downtown Algiers, and was pow­erful enough to be heard across the city, which the gov­ern­ment said 21 people were killed and that 30 of the wounded were seriously hurt.

Police deluged with tips in Cosby case

As Ennis Cosby was buried on his family’s estate in Massachusetts, police on Sunday were deluged with tips after releasing sketches of sus­pect and possible witness in the slay­ings of his wife. "We have received more tips in the last four days than ever," Detective Inspector Edward F. Kay said.

Police still consider robbery the probable motive.

Animals undocks from Russian station

The Atlantis astronauts undocked from the Russian space station Mir Monday night. "Hello Friendship," called out flight director Joseph Vasquez. "We are safe." The station will begin a trip to the Space Station Freedom.

The shuttle's departure was delayed a day because of inclement weather in the New Jersey area.

How has your life changed?

Today is a very important day for all of us, a day for celebration. Today marks the beginning of change, the struggle for truth, and the hope for the future. Today is the day on which we observe the birthday of Martin Luther King, Jr., who died, however, all of us have been in some way affected by his work.

Living all of our lives in the aftermath of his movement can cloud our vision — we are able to take for granted the changes that have been made because we did not see then occur. This complacency also allows us to ignore the changes that are still to be made. This is especially true here where the minority population is so small, and we are able to take for granted the changes that have been made because we did not see them occur. Most of us think that every American is aware of his ancestry, but I imagine that everyone would feel angry, and they would be right.

I can't admit to being extremely knowl­edgeable about Martin Luther King, Jr., but I think that every American is aware of his presence and of the changes which he helped to bring about. Martin Luther King, Jr. was not only a role model for African-Americans, he is a role model for the world. He stood up for the truth with unyielding passion. He believed in something enough to give his life for it, and for his conscience. The next step in order to change it and to make things right. He made a difference.

Consider King's life. Would you have been able to fight such a charged issue as projec­tion-discrimination as King did? Would you have been able to fight such a charged issue as King did?

America has made many advancements because of Martin Luther King, Jr., but the fight is far from over. The dream which King so eloquently spoke about in 1963 has not been fulfilled. Our attempts to draw barriers have succeeded in some places, but have failed miserably in others.

King's successes were not due to some true when and gender for reasons are no longer a consid­eration in any field. The color of someone's skin matters less to everyone than the content of their character," then King will be happy. When affirmative action is a red or a handshake rather than a quota, then King will be happy. Our duty is to eliminate prejudice from our own lives. Don't accept it from others. Don't accept it from others. The world is what it is, like Martin Luther King, Jr., it is our job to make it better.

NEW YORK

President Clinton enters his second term with as high an approval rating as any he enjoyed in his first four years in office, according to a Newsweek magazine poll released Sunday. A telephone survey of 352 adults taken Thursday and Friday showed that 57 percent approve of Clinton's handling of the presidency, while 35 percent disapprove and 9 percent had no opinion. The approval rating is the high­est for Clinton in a Newsweek poll. He last scored an approval rating of 57 percent in August. Before that, he had 57 percent in a poll taken two months into his first term, and 61 percent in a poll taken at the end of his first year in office. The poll for Newsweek, conducted by the Fair­field, Iowa-based Gallup organization, stands Monday, also asked people about their expecta­tions for life in the 21st century. Asked whether the gap between rich and poor worldwide, 73 percent believed it would narrow, while only 19 percent predicted it would widen. Asked about the gap between rich and poor worldwide, 73 percent believed it would narrow, while only 19 percent predicted it would widen. Respondents were more optimistic about care for deadly diseases. Seventy-two percent predicted scientists will cure cancer, while 70 percent predicted they will cure AIDS.

Some of the text is in a foreign language, which is not fully translatable. The material appears to discuss events and developments in Algeria, including a car bomb explosion and the struggle for truth and justice. It also mentions the birthday of Martin Luther King, Jr., and reflects on the impact of his work and the ongoing struggle against discrimination and inequality.
Today, America celebrates the wisdom and memory of Martin Luther King, Jr. As the nation honors the man, it is worth remembering the challenge that the man set for the nation. King set forth his mandate in speeches throughout his life; here are two samples of his words.

"America, I don't plan to let you rest until the day comes into being when all God's children will be respected, and every man will respect the dignity and worth of human personality. America, I don't plan to allow you to rest until from every state house in this country, justice will roll down like waters and righteousness like a mighty stream.

America, I don't plan to let you rest until from every city hall in this country, justice will roll down like waters and righteousness like a mighty stream. America, I don't plan to allow you to rest until every vestige of segregated and inferior education becomes a thing of the past. Let us march on poverty until the wrinkled stomachs of Mississippi are filled, the idle industries of Appalachia are revitalized, and broken lives in sweltering ghettos are mended and remolded."

-- address given March 22, 1968, during a rally, Albany, Ga.

"Let us therefore continue our triumphant march toward the realization of the American dream. Let us march on segregated housing until every ghetto of social and economic oppression is dissolved and Negroes and whites live side by side in decent, safe, and sanitary houses. Let us march on segregated schools until every vestige of segregated and inferior education becomes a thing of the past. Let us march on poverty until the wrinkled stomachs of Mississippi are filled, the idle industries of Appalachia are revitalized, and broken lives in sweltering ghettos are mended and remolded."

-- address given March 25, 1965, at the end of the Selma-to-Montgomery march, on the steps of the state Capitol, Montgomery, Ala.

King would have turned 68 last Wednesday. On that day, members of the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's community began a weeklong tribute with a prayer service (photos below). The tribute continues today with a Mass in the chapel of Regina Hall at noon, a prayer service in Stapleton Lounge of Le Mans Hall at 4:30 p.m., a performance of the play "Black Man Rising" in O'Laughlin Auditorium of the Moreau Center for the Arts at 7 p.m., and a rally in the LaFortune Student Center at 7:30 p.m.

Giles Conwill, a professor of history at Morehouse College in Atlanta, gave the keynote address during the service (left). "Martin knew that the idea of 'an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth' would result in an eyeless people and a toothless generation." Conwill said during his speech.

Minor changes to the small business tax code were also put into effect last year. Other victories included the Freedom to Farm Act, the Telecommunications Act, the Securities Litigation Reform, and the Delany Clause, which gives science a say in regulatory decisions.

"Instead of playing defense, business actively worked for legislation that will help create jobs and strengthen the economy," said Bruce Josten, senior vice president of the Chamber. "Activism by American business was an important catalyst in helping the Congress begin to achieve common-sense reforms."

The Chamber praised the 104th Congress for working to cut discretionary spending, for eliminating 270 wasteful programs, and for taking necessary steps to reduce entitlement spending.

"In 1996, incremental reforms by Congress proved the most successful, and that trend will continue with incremental strategies to guide the legislative agenda next year," Josten said.

Governor honors emeritus prof

Thomas Bergin, director emeritus of continuing education and professor emeritus of management at the University of Notre Dame, has received a "Sagamore of the Wabash" award after completing a six-year term on the Indiana Legislative Council.

The award was presented to Bergin on Governor Evan Bayh's behalf by Third District Congressman Tim Roemer during a ceremony in Indianapolis last November.

Indiana's Sagamore of the Wabash award was established during the 1945-49 administration of Governor Ralph Gates. The highest honor an Indiana governor is able to bestow, the award recognizes distinguished service to the state or its governor.

According to the Governor's office, "The term 'Sagamore' was used by some American Indian tribes of the northeastern United States to describe a lesser chief or a great man among the tribe to whom the true chief would look for wisdom and advice."

No official list of Sagamores has been kept and each governor reserves the right to select award recipients personally.

A member of the Notre Dame faculty since 1947, Bergin was graduated from the University in 1945. A native of Watertown, N.Y., he holds a master's degree in economics from the University of Vermont and a doctoral degree from Syracuse University.

In 1952 Bergin was appointed head of what was then the department of business administration at Notre Dame, with administrative responsibility for 200 undergraduate business majors.

He was appointed the Jesse Jones professor of business administration in 1961, and three years later was appointed dean of continuing education at Notre Dame, serving in that position for 16 years.

Bergin is the author of several articles and reports on economic growth and development which have appeared in a variety of scholarly and popular journals, and he has served as a consultant to numerous businesses, government agencies, and educational institutions.

Bergin and his wife, Barbara Barrett, were married in 1954. They have four children.

A trait of each of his landscapes is a line which passes in front of the picture. Sandusky stated that these lines represent that, although the outlook is very close, the image is still not entirely clear.

"As we find in life, something is always getting in the way of what we want. So I ended up putting lines or something in the way of whatever is behind it." Sandusky experienced a turning point in his career when the Lilly Foundation sent him to Rome for a year to work with artist books. It was at this time that he discovered that "it wasn't necessary to make these incredibly profound artworks, but what was important was to enjoy yourself."

Ketchum earns appointment as ombudsperson

New post entails hearing, advising harassment victims

By RACHEL RICHMOND
News Writer

In the beginning of the 1996-97 school year, University President Father Edward Malloy honored Lloyd Ketchum by selecting him for the position of Ombudsperson for Discriminatory Harassment. Ombuds, Ketchum said, is a Scandinavian word for an advocate or someone outside the system. Ketchum is the person a student or faculty member can approach in order to file complaints regarding discrimination between students, between faculty members, or between students and faculty members. His office, Ketchum commented, is a “safe place to go and talk to someone” when a person on campus encounters a problem of a discriminatory nature.

If a student or faculty member is uncomfortable going straight to the administration with a problem, that person can see Ketchum. He listens to the problem, giving the individual advice and understanding and informing the individual of his or her options. Ketchum serves only as an advocate and does not actually attempt to solve the problem. The next step involves deciding whether or not to go to administration officials to file a formal complaint. Ketchum pointed out that the specific procedures are outlined in both DuLac and the faculty handbook. Once a complaint is filed and brought before the administration, Ketchum can act as an advocate for the harassed person. All information Ketchum receives and the help he gives are strictly confidential.

Tsongas remembered for ‘common touch’

By DAVE HOWLAND
Associated Press Writer

LOWELL, Mass. — Paul Tsongas lost the common touch as U.S. senator or presidential front-runner, colleagues said Sunday of the man who blended old-fashioned liberalism with economic pragmatism.

Tsongas, who beat cancer and went on to become the Democratic presidential front-runner briefly in 1992, died Saturday of pneumonia. He was 55.

President Clinton asked a crowd at a Democratic National Committee pre-inaugural gathering to “say a prayer of gratitude” for Tsongas’ service to the American people.

“That is citizenship in the best sense,” Clinton said Sunday. “Our country is deeply indebted to him for having had available a public life and to battle through his own illness and his own pain and his own disappointment to continue to fight for America’s well-being.”

Tsongas had been hospitalized since Jan. 3 at Boston’s Brigham and Women’s hospital with a liver problem related to his cancer treatments, and he later developed pneumonia. He died free of cancer, the hospital said.

The soft-spoken son of dry cleaners in Lowell, Tsongas was one of the first nationally known Democrats to give the party a pro-business push that blended liberal and economic pragmatism, his friends said.

After undergoing an experimental bone marrow transplant, Tsongas declared in 1986 he was cancer-free.

Five years later, he became the first Democrat to challenge President Bush.

“Tsongas was a leader who stood his ground, who had integrity, who fought the disease, but to fight the disease, but to fight the disease, but to fight the disease, but to fight...” said Doug Blount, one of Tsongas’ ground crew assigned to tracking the balloon.

The adventurer took off Jan. 13 from St. Louis and has eclipsed by several thousand miles his own world distance ballooning record, 5,435 miles traveled on a 1995 flight from Seoul, Korea, to Canada.

He had hoped to become the first balloonist to fly nonstop around the globe but conceded from the start that it was a long shot.

Floating at 20,000 feet above India on Sunday, Fossett and his supporters headed back in the Midwest a day after reaching a bunch of mountains of Southeast Asia or the Pacific Ocean.

“Tsongas never lost the faith,” Blount said from the team’s headquarters at Loyola University in Chicago.

“Just don’t know. There are a bunch of different theories.”

The crew has kept in touch with the balloonist by computer, although they lost communications for several hours early Sunday.
Festivities precede Clinton inauguration

By TERENCE HUNT
Assistant Press Writer

WASHINGTON

On the eve of his second inauguration, President Clinton celebrated with throngs of supporters Sunday and announced, "maybe this will be better the second time around." Bundled against icy winds, tens of thousands of visitors thronged the capital for parties, music and fun. Eager to recreate the enthusiasm of four years ago, Clinton urged revelers to have a good time. "I hope every day for the next four years you will be immensely proud of what you did to make this day come about." Bill Clinton

The biggest of all was a lavish, Hollywood-style gala for the president and Hillary Rodham Clinton at USAir Arena. They brought along their 16-year-old daughter, Chelsea. "You're three of the coolest people I know," co-host Whoopi Goldberg cooed to the Clintons. The star-studded guest list also featured Mikhail Baryshnikov, Candice Bergen, Aretha Franklin and Michael Douglas.

Clinton will be the first Democrat since Franklin D. Roosevelt to hold the White House for two terms. But unlike his fresh start four years ago when Democrats controlled both houses of Congress, the president begins his second term facing an unfriendly Republican House and Senate as well as legal and ethics investigations that could ensnare his administration.

In an interview, the president said he hoped his inaugural gala that takes place Sunday night will help flush the poison out of the atmosphere and get people to thinking about the folks that sent us all here.

Gathered with supporters, Clinton recalled "the darkest days of '94 and '95" after Democrats were devastated by Republican victories that gave them control of both houses of Congress. Even then, he believed his presidency would get a second chance, he said.

"I hope every day for the next four years you will be immensely proud of what you did to make this day come about." Bill Clinton

American wounded in rebel assault

By CHRIS TOMLINSON
Associated Press Writer

RUBUGE RI, Rwanda

Aid workers packed to leave this northeastern town Sunday after Hutu militiamen executed three of their Spanish colleagues and wounded an American in the most serious rebel assault in Rwanda in more than two years.

The victims of Saturday night’s attack on three aid offices were medical volunteers with the Spanish branch of Doctors of the World. Three Rwandan soldiers also died. There was no report of casualties from the other two aid groups hit — Doctors Without Borders and Save the Children.

With Hutu militiamen resuming their attacks and beginning to target foreigners, what had appeared to be a peaceful return of more than a million Hutus from 2-1/2 years in exile has turned violent.

Nitin Madhav, 28, of Pittsburgh, was shot in the leg during the attack. Doctors amputated his leg above the knee and flew Madhav to Nairobi, Kenya, for further treatment.

Madhav, a program director, was on his first assignment and had been in Rubuguri only two days, said Dr. Brooks Taylor, regional medical officer for the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi.

“I want to go home,” Madhav said as he was put into an ambulance at the Nairobi airport. Taylor said Madhav may be flown to the United States in a few days, depending on his condition.

Fearing more violence, some aid workers in Rubuguri loaded their possessions into trucks and moved to the capital Kigali, 60 miles to the south-east. Doctors of the World said it was suspending operations in northwestern Rwanda.

“It’s an immense tragedy for us … a terrible barbarity.” Concha Colomo, the organization’s deputy chairwoman, said in Madrid.

Other agencies have also expressed outrage and are considering closing down their offices.

The British branch of Save the Children, CARE and at least eight other agencies left Rubuguri Sunday.

Malvo Nozeman, spokeswoman for the Dutch arm of Doctors Without Borders, said the attack reminded her of the slayings last month of six Red Cross workers in Russian republic of Chechnya.

“It is very, very tragic,” Nozeman said.

Arafat: Hebron deal to bring peace with Israel

By SAMAR ASSAD
Associated Press Writer

HEBRON, West Bank

Yasser Arafat returned to Hebron for the first time in more than 30 years Sunday and joined 60,000 Palestinians in celebrating the first anniversary of the handover of the last West Bank city from Israeli military control.

In a conciliatory gesture toward Jewish settlers, he said the accord — which gives Palestinians control of 80 percent of the city and Israel 20 percent — was a new step toward peace.

“The first fruit of months of bitter wrangling between Arafat and the government of Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, long a critic of the peace process begun by his dovish predecessors,” Arafat thanked Clinton, saying: “I don’t think I could have done this without you.”

Arafat thanked Clinton, saying: “I don’t think I could have done this without you.”

“I declare Hebron a liberated city,” Arafat announced. He leaned forward over the crowd, making victory signs with both hands.

Seeing him — I thought my heart would burst,” 50-year-old Suleiman Jabari said.

Arafat’s conciliatory words contrasted sharply with a speech by the Palestinian security chief on Saturday. Jibril Rajoub accused the 500 settlers who live in the settlement of 130,000 Palestinians of fomenting “hate and violence and terror.”

He suggested Hebron would be better off without the settlers, saying “they are big stones on our chest, and we have to take them off.”

Arafat condemned Rajoub’s speech as inciting violence.

Netanyahu welcomed Arafat’s words, telling CNN he was “struck by the fact that his tone is different.”

“I certainly would have liked to have the Palestinians and Israelis strike a friendship. I think the test is Hebron,” Netanyahu said.

Settler spokesman David Wilder, however, said that if Arafat were serious about conciliation, he would fly Rajoub. He called it “despicable” that Netanyahu had given the PLO leader control of the biblical city and said Arafat’s visit marked “a day of national mourning for the Hebron settlers.”

Arafat flew into Hebron on Sunday afternoon, waving to the crowd from the window of his helicopter. Wearing his black-and-white headscarf and green khaki uniform, he sat atop the open sunroof of the car, reaching into the crowd to shake hands and throw kisses en route to the police station.

Later, he toured the part of the city and visited city hall, where supporters slaughtered two calves in his honor.

Arafat said the Palestinians’ next goal is to take control of the 70 percent of the West Bank still in Israeli hands — mostly rural areas — and establish an independent Palestinian side with Jerusalem as its capital.

“I call on all of you to come together to build this independent Palestinian state,” he said. “We will continue until Jerusalem.”

Arafat thanked President Clinton, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and Jordanian King Hussein for their help in reaching the Hebron agreement. He told CNN later that he and Netanyahu are now “friends and partners in the peace process.”

In an early snag, the Israeli army delayed supplying the Palestinian police with submarine guns because officers had been in for stolen Israeli guns, Israel army radio reported Sunday. The army and Palestinian officials did not comment on the report.

Time changes everything, even time itself

I realize that I'm not altogether that qualified to write a column on aging since in the greater scheme of things, I have not done much of it. Nonetheless, the widespread recognition of growing steadily older has occupied many thoughts in recent weeks as I tried to come to terms with impending graduation and, God forbid, subsequent adulthood.

I suppose that we all tend to think of ourselves as a few years younger than we actually are. Jokes about people "celebrating their 30th birthday" are common enough to be cliché, while cosmetic products designed to combat the visible effects of aging (even among those who aren't old) are a multi-billion dollar industry. Essentially there seems to exist a sort of lag or gap between the passage of time and our recognition of it. The passage of the calendar and the mind's perception of time's flow; we experience in ourselves, and that which is, or has been, measured by the tick of the clock. We often imperceptibly aging. For example, this past Christmas break I watched the first of my high school friends get married, congratulated several other friends on their birthdays, and graduated from a good college; it was an echo of weeks on my college life becoming some sort of perversely "chronometric" outline. In any case, after my friend's wedding, a cynical associate kept trying to convince that "this is it from here on out... life is about to become one long work week inter­rupted by a cycle of weddings, baby showers and funerals." I'm not sure that I entirely accept that read on adulthood, childhood on I knew that I would go to college. Needless to say, the net effect of all this time seemingly the perceived passage of time. Once again speaking from a personal perspective, my four years of high school were, as gauged in internally kept time, easily double the length of my college experience. College time is more complex than either childhood or adolescent time since it regularly speeds up and slows down depending on the situation. For example, this past Christmas break - too long to be steadily entertaining yet too short to get a job - set a new record on my mental clock for the slow passage of time. In sharp contrast to this stands the semester I spent abroad in London which, if measured in calendar time, took about five months but seemingly lasted only a couple of weeks of my internal chronome­ter. Yes, college time seems to stretch and contract years regularly between the place of a Ferrari on the Autobahn and the speed of an Amish buggy out for a Sunday drive. And now I'm faced with the prospect of setting my internal clock onto adult time. This impending reality hit me like a slap in the face over Christmas break as I watched...

Welcome back, GH fans...we may have taken a vacation, but our friends in Port Charles sure didn't, so onto the action: Katharine refuses Mac on his next coupling, and her former coupledom now broken up (a notion she forgot to tell our saloonista). Brenda is also in a funk, so she Intlues her little ring to her so that she can pursue a new romance with Brenda. (Hey, Sonny, the ring never stopped you before, you know.)

After Sonny's touchy gesture, however, a mysterious man emerges from the bushes and exhales to Sonny: "You're ringing to her so that she can pursue a new romance with Brenda. (Hey, Sonny, the ring never stopped you before, you know.)"

Brenda tells Sonny goodbye for the final time (is the SIXTH time she's used those exact words...) and she Intlues her little ring to her so that she can pursue a new romance with Brenda. (Hey, Sonny, the ring never stopped you before, you know.)

Holtz coaches North in Hula Bowl showcase

By BEN DIPIETRO

HONOLULU

Andy Russ came to the Hula Bowl as a punter. Four field goals later he may have earned himself a shot as an NFL kicker.

The Mississippi State punter, pressed into kicking duties for the All-Star game, booted four field goals and was named most valuable playerable player in the South's 26-13 victory over the North.

"I'd like to get a shot at least," says Russ, sales and field goals of 42, 47, 28 and 31 yards. "It's great to be able to come out here and kick four field goals. I was hoping to make one or two in this game, but to make all four is unbelievable.

"I didn't have a great punting game. Now that I saw I can kick, maybe I can make it as a place-kicker, too." The USC quarterback Brad Otton and Fresno State's Jim Arelanes lost another battle as the North took a 20-0 halftime lead. The South's defense, led by six All-Americans, was an undeniably North offensive line missing three players and two backups. "This game was over," says Sarkison of Brigham Young four times his weight.

"I wanted the Northwest with just five offensive linemen, as three players off the line were injured, including first-team All-America Colorado center David McMahon. It affected us. We had five offensive linemen that played the whole ballgame. We only have five defensive backs," North coach Lou Holtz said.

"I don't believe in other kickers. I believe in kicking. They game. They punted the ball and it rolled and we didn't field it and then they got a 30-yard field goal. I was yardage on their punt return game, and that has to do with field position."

The South also was missing Colorado quarterback Jon DiPietro, leaving Holtz without a needed offensive weapon.

"I thought our offense was real tired," Sarkison said. "I was real tired."

NHL

All-Stars showcase offense

By MIKE NADEL
Associated Press Writer

SAN JOSE, Calif.
There was little defense and even less checking. The goatsies were shellshocked. And Wayne Gretzky was on his line.

It was the perfect scenario for what probably was Mario Lemieux's final appearance in the NHL All-Star Game, and he didn't disappoint.

"It's something I'll cherish for a long time," said Lemieux, who had two goals and an assist Saturday in helping the Eastern All-Stars showcase offense.

It was the perfect early-time, the All-Star Game became a typical run-and-gun affair.

"It's a shootout," he said, "and that's the way it's been for all-c about 10 years." That's the way it's been for 10 All-Star contests.

Saturday's 18 goals were the third-most ever and provided a stark contrast to what's taking place in the NHL this season. Scoring is down a half-goal a game from a year ago and shutouts are coming at a record pace.

Montreal's Mark Recchi and Owen Nolan of the hometown San Jose Sharks each scored three goals. Four players had two apiece: Lemieux. Dale Hawerchuk, John LeClair and Pavel Bure.

Recchi was named MVP to the disappointment of the fans, who favored Nolan even though the West lost.

The award, however, probably was one of the few Lemieux doesn't want to win. He said he'll never win MVP in his career because "I'll be doing that at the top of his game. He leads the league in goals (50) and assists (79) and is one of the few left in the NHL who can carry the entire load." Lemieux does retire this spring, he'll be doing so at the top of his game. He leads the NHL in points (79) and assists (50).

"Mario's been the Jean Beliveau of our era," East team mate Mark Messier said, referring to the classic Montreal star of the 1950s and '60s. "Nobody's played with the pure grace, elegance and power that Mario possesses. He's got a style all his own."

With Lemieux setting the early tone, the All-Star Game became a typical run-and-gun affair.

Oladuwon, Rockets hand Bulls 5th loss

By MICHAEL LUTZ
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON
Hakeem Olajuwon had 32 points and 16 rebounds despite his religious fast, and the Houston Rockets closed out the final six minutes with a 19-2 run to defeat the Chicago Bulls 102-86 Sunday. The victory snapped Chicago's nine-game winning streak and Houston's four-game losing streak - dating to 1994 - against the Bulls.

Olajuwon, a Muslim, is observing Ramadan, a period of fasting that including no liquids between sun up and sun down.

But it didn't seem to bother him down against the Bulls. Olajuwon played the entire third quarter and after taking a brief rest, returned to help put down Chicago's final charge. He played 39 minutes.

Clyde Drexler started slowly, but finished with 17 points. 11 assists and 10 rebounds for his 23rd career triple-double.

Michael Jordan, who had 26 points, gave the Bulls their first lead since early in the fourth quarter when he drove for the basket with 7:12 to play and drew a foul from Sam Mack.

Jordan sank both free throws and a technical foul called on Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich, who thought Jordan should have received the foul.

That gave Chicago an 84-83 lead, but Olajuwon made four straight free throws to start the Rockets' charge.

Kevin Willis, starting for injured Charles Barkley, followed with a basket, and Mario Elie hit a 3-pointer for a 92-84 lead while the Bulls continued to fade. Both Elie and Olajuwon had eight points during the final run.

The Bulls played without Dennis Rodman, who was suspended for at least 11 games and fined $25,000 after he kicked a cameraman Wednesday night in Minnesota.

Barkley sat out the game for the Rockets with a sprained right ankle he received in Thursday night's game against Minnesota.

The火箭s took a 55-51 halftime lead and built it to 65-55 with 7:15 left in the third quarter. But Steve Kerr hit 11 points in the quarter - including 3-of-3 3-point shots - and the Bulls cut the deficit to 75-73 at the start of the fourth quarter.

Bill Wennington scored 14 points for the Bulls, but Scottie Pippen was only 2-of-14 from the field and finished with 5 points.

The Bulls beat the Rockets 110-106 in their first meeting this year on Jan. 11 in Chicago for their worst loss of the season.

76ers’ Iverson tallies career-high in defeat

By HANK LOWENKRON

INDIANAPOLIS

Even Allen Iverson’s best game of the season couldn’t slow the 76ers’ inexplicable freefall.

Iverson scored a season-high 37 points Sunday, but it wasn’t enough as Philadelphia lost its 12th straight game, 111-107 to the Indiana Pacers.

Philadelphia has now lost 22 of 23 games despite a talented lineup which includes Iverson, the league’s top rookie, Jerry Stackhouse and Clarence Weatherspoon.

Iverson, who had 18 of his points in the fourth quarter, sparking a comeback after the 76ers had fallen behind by 25 in the third period.

The speedy guard finished just 9-for-24 from the field, but was 17-of-19 from the foul line.

“We just didn’t come out in the first half and play hard. We’ve got to start taking the effort we have in the second half and putting it in the first half,” Iverson said.

All five Indiana starters finished in double figures. Reggie Miller and Rick Smits led the Pacers with 20 points apiece, while Derrick McKey had 17.

Weatherspoon had 18 points and 10 rebounds for the 76ers, who trailed 77-52 when Indiana’s Dale Davis hit a jumper with 5:35 left in the third period.

But then Iverson brought the 76ers back and the Pacers went nearly five minutes without a field goal in the final quarter after Travis Best was forced to leave after spraining the big toe on his left foot.

“It wasn’t complacency. We couldn’t stop them. All of a sudden, Iverson gets off and it’s tough. We weren’t getting stops and we started controlling the game,” Indiana coach Johnny Davis said.

The 76ers came close despite shooting 42 percent from the field, boosted by a 65-48 rebounding advantage.

Reserve Adrian Caldwell had 13 rebounds for Philadelphia.

“I hurt it by putting too much pressure on the big toe when starting to run,” Best said. “My foot is really sore and I hope to be ready for the next game (Tuesday) at Milwaukee.”

The Pacers shot only 29 percent in the final period, making 11-of-37 attempts.

“I’ve seen it all. We weren’t very effective in the first half and in the second half everything picks up,” Philadelphia coach Johnny Davis said. “The defensive rebounding picked up, we played better defense and we got to the free throw line. With us, we’re just inconsistent.”

Free throws helped the Pacers survive the charge as Indiana scored its first 10 points from the line in the final 1:42. Miller hit four straight to put Indiana ahead 103-94 with 1:22 remaining.

The Pacers seemed to break the game open when Jalen Rose scored nine points in the second quarter when Philadelphia went more than five minutes without a field goal. Indiana put together an 18-2 run, starting after Rex Walters made a three-point play for a 24-22 lead.

Indiana scored 14 straight points, taking a 42-24 advantage on a hook shot by Erick Dampier.

Notes: Indiana has defeated the 76ers six straight times in Market Square Arena and won 11 of the past 12 meetings between the two teams.

Iverson’s previous high was 36 points at Dallas on Dec. 5. He topped that by making the game’s final nine points in the second quarter when Philadelphia went more than five minutes without a field goal.

Terrapins top Demon Deacons with buzzer shot

By DAVID DROSCHAK
Associated Press Writer

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. - Laron Profit made a 3-pointer at the buzzer and No. 11 MarylandF (15-2, 5-1 Atlantic Coast Conference) leaves top-ranked Kansas as the nation's only unbeaten team.

The Terrapins (15-2, 5-1), led by Sarunas Jasikevicius' 19 points, blew a 19-point first-half lead. The Demon Deacons went up 1-6 run to start the second half, grabbing their first lead at 34-32 with 15:28 left.

Maryland's 9-2 run late in the half seemed to seal the game, but Jerry Braswell sank a 3-pointer and Tim Duncan hit a bank shot and two free throws with 17.3 seconds left to tie the score, setting up the last-second heroics by Profit, who shoots 31.3 percent from long range.

Keith Booth drove the baseline and was cut off by Ricky Peral as the clock ticked down to about four seconds, but the senior forward kicked the ball out to a wide-open Profit on the right side of the 3-point arc, where he made the shot as the buzzer sounded, setting off a wild celebration by the Terriers.

Profit made a 3-pointer and Tim Duncan hit a bank shot and two free throws with 17.3 seconds left to tie the score, setting up the last-second heroics by Profit, who shoots 31.3 percent from long range.

The loss by the Demon Deacons (3-4, 0-4) didn't come easily. Despite starting the second half with a 12-2 run, MarylandF couldn't fire its club up as they trailed 32-30 after a 15-2 spurt midway through the half.

The Terrapins' tournament run included a 12-minute stretch in the second half which included consecutive 3-pointers by Jasikevicius, 52 seconds apart.

Even a technical foul against the usually mild-mannered coach Dave Odom couldn't fire his club up as they trailed 32-30 at intermission, shooting a miserable 21.7 percent.

The Wake Forest fans kept out of its shooting slump, managing only two baskets in the final 13 minutes.

Wake Forest, confused on offense by Maryland's press, managed only two baskets in the final 13 minutes and three over the first 13:47 as Maryland jumped out in its 27-8 lead behind Jasikevicius' 14 first-half points.

Maryland's runs included a 10-0 start to the game and a 15-2 spurt midway through the period as the Terrapins made 5-of-6 shots after Wake Forest tried a zone defense against them. That hot streak included consecutive 3-pointers by Jasikevicius 52 seconds apart.

Despite starting the second half with a 12-2 run, MarylandF couldn't fire its club up as they trailed 32-30 after a 15-2 spurt midway through the half.

The Demon Deacons had never scored more than 34 points in a game this season.

their first short-handed goal of the season; freshman defender Nathan Borgea recorded the first goal of his budding college career; two freshmen walk-on, John Dwyer and Andy Jurkowski, recorded their first points of their careers; and, most importantly, the Irish recorded their first Central Collegiate Hockey Association win of the new year on Saturday night. When all the smoke cleared, Notre Dame retained eighth place in the CCIAA.

On Friday night at the Joyce Center, the Boys of Winter brought a strident student section to their feet early in the game as they jumped ahead 3-0 in the first period. But then the “impostor” Notre Dame team, the one that head coach Dave Poulin has branded all season as sluggish and hesitant, was too tough and they could not get the equalizer. "We didn’t play consistently," stated Noble. "We’re capable of winning, but we show glimpses of it, but we get rattled. We have to win close games. But the blessing is that we get to play them again." Noble was waiting on the blue line when the Nanooks flubbed a pass. "Marvel" was able to take the puck into the net and neatly tucked a wrap around past Nanook goaltender Molina past Nanook goaltender for kicking. Noble increased the Irish lead to 3-1 when he one-timed the puck into the net. And then the game ebbled to miffy Friday night’s game. After taking a 3-0 lead, the Nanooks scored quite quick to cut the lead to 3-2. "I wasn’t surprised," stated Poulin. "It’s different this year. We’re a step behind the Nanooks in the physical battles and their shots make you tense." "We know we can win," said Poulin. "This game showed us that. We got a little bit off track and keep it and not get the other things going. That sounds like a good game. The Boys had a fight towards a fight for the playoffs."

"My first thoughts were that we're better than this and we should have dominated from the start," Morgan expressed.

Head coach Muffet McGraw stopped the bleeding with a timeout and put her star center Katryna Gaither and guard Mollie Peirick on the bench as Sheila McMillen and Kari Hutchison entered. "I needed to get my head in the game, I sat down and I came in ready to play," Gaither remarked.

Senior forward Beth Morgan broke the seal on the basket after the Irish had missed their first four from the field. Pitt's center Latia Howard put in two of her 13 to push the score to 14-2. Gaither remarked. "Coming in and did a really good job rebounding and going to the basket," McGraw commented. "She did exactly what we needed and I think the rest of the team followed along her line of thinking."

"Coming off the bench and knowing that we were down I knew we needed to get going," McMillen remarked. "So I tried to do whatever I could to get the team going."

And that was exactly what she did as Howard's bucket with 15:20 remaining in the half was the only points Pitt put on the board until 1:39 left in the half. During that stretch the Irish got their offense clicking and the result was their 31-0 run.

"It was the exact reverse of what happened in the first couple of minutes," Pitt coach Kirk Bruce explained. "We got our transition game going and I think that opened things for us," Morgan assessed.

"I was very pleased with the way the team responded to the 10-0 start," McGraw said. "I thought we played with tremendous intensity and I thought that was as well as we have played, particularly in transition."

Several key aspects of that transition offense was the Durners' defense which caused 20 first half turnovers, and Peirick who had seven first half assists on her way to a nine assist and 11 point afternoon.

"I thought Mollie had a great game, particularly at the point," McGraw praised. "When she had the ball in her hands things went very well for her."

Morgan and Gaither were the main benefactors of Peirick's deliveries as Morgan poured in 12 first half points on her way to 18 while Gaither had 15 points to go along with nine boards in just 24 minutes.

The Irish went into the locker room and we can't do that to any team," McGraw commented. Morgan echoed her coach's senti­ments, "I think we were very disappoint­ed with the second half. We were pretty excited with how we played but we played like we played in the last 20 minutes took away from it."

The contest also saw the return of Kristina Ervin to the Joyce Center floor. Ervin was a four year letter winner for Debbie Browne's volley ball team but she was also an all-state basketball player in high school.

With the roster down to nine players Ervin will provide another body at prac­tice and will dress for the home contests. McGraw's squad will be back in action this Tuesday against Rutgers at 7 p.m. The much traveled Irish will hope take advantage of playing at home.

"We're going to get some rest," McGraw stated.

"We haven't had a true day off since Christmas day so we need a break and we're going to come back on defense and I think we need to shoot the ball a little better," Morgan assessed.

Notre Dame will be looking for their sixth win in a row against the Scarlet Knights who were the only Big East squad besides the currently top-ranked Connecticut Huskies to knock off the Irish last season.

The Knights have three returning starters from that team that had a record of 13-15. McGraw will also hope to keep their mark in the Big East perfect as they go for their eighth win in conference play.

and 11 rebounds for the game. "Notre Dame beat us up real badly," Boeheim admitted. "I thought we'd have to play great today just to have a chance to win. They just completely dominated us (in South Bend), then they dominat­ed us here today. Their big guys dominated our big guys, and they're a solid defensive team."

Forward Derek Manner and com­pany also succeeded in sweeping the glass on both ends, out­rebounding the Orangemen 46-29 for the game.

"The biggest fault of the game was that we didn't do a good job on the boards and I think that was the most telling single feature of the game," Boeheim said.

Another significant statistic came from the charity stripe. Notre Dame went 17-22 on the afternoon for a .773 percentage at the line compared to a meager .419 and .579 total for Syracuse. The Orangemen did even worse from the field on .350 shooting, including .238 (5-21) from beyond the three point arc.

Syracuse point guard/quarterback Donovan McNabb appeared late in the game and converted 3-4 free throws for his only points in the game and the season.

Orange Crush

Just thinking of the Syracuse Orangemen basketball team now brings a smile to the collective faces of Notre Dame’s squad after their second defeat of the Orange in 16 days.

If only they all came that easy.

The Irish, helped by an early 14 point run, held the lead for the last 36 minutes of the contest, showing the killer instinct and offensive spark Notre Dame fans have been waiting for in the 73-58 victory over an outmatched SU team. The win is only ND’s second Big East victory of the season improving their conference record to 5-5.

The combination of consistency and surprise in the Irish offense kept the Orange at bay. Syracuse had to contend with both the Big East’s leading scorer, Pat Garrity, and an upstart sophomore who seized his opportunities with ease, Gary Bell. Garrity barely missed a triple-double in 39 minutes of play, tallying 22 points, 13 rebounds, and nine assists, and his ball-handling abilities helped in the transition game.

"The transition points were huge for me because this season I’ve had a lot of trouble in the half-court offense because of double-teams," Garrity explained. "Something (Irish coach John MacLeod) has been really getting after me about is getting easy baskets in transition. It not only helps my confidence but also everybody else’s, and he always says ‘they can’t double-team you in transition’.

Bell, after missing his first shot, connected on seven of his next eight, all in the second half, to keep Syracuse out of serious striking distance. The Orange came within five points on two occasions early in the second half, but two Garrity free throws followed by a dunk off a nice feed from point guard Admore White, along with Bell’s touch shooting, dispelled hopes for a Syracuse comeback.

"I’ve been pretty comfortable shooting the basketball for the past week or so in practice," Bell offered. "I’ve been really stroking it."

"Gary Bell was especially encouraging, especially being able to hit open shots like he was and taking it at them, and that really kept us in the game down the stretch," Garrity said.

"We were in a pressing situation where we have to try to get back and defend and it’s going to leave us some open shots, and (Bell) made them. But they were pretty easy shots," White added.

Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim said, "White had a good game at the point both offensively and defensively, dropping in 11 points and dishing six assists while harassing Orange guard Jason Hart into a horrible night, preventing the Syracuse offense from really getting started. Hart, a sophomore, shot 2-10 from the field for four points and coughed up eight turnovers. "This was a game of offensive ineptitude," Boeheim evaluated. "We just didn’t do anything on the offensive end, and that was really the difference in the game."

Vaunted big man Otis Hill struggled in the first half for the Orange, scoring all of his team-high 14 points in the second period. The center tri-umphed Matt Gotsch, Phil Hickey, and Marcus Young dominated the smaller SC frontline, and recorded 10 points

Early bench-led run pushes Irish past Panthers

By JOE CAVATO
Sports Writer

Last season the Notre Dame women’s basketball team defeated the Pittsburgh Panthers by margins of 39 and 37 points in the schools only two meetings. Early on in Saturday’s contest it appeared that the Panthers (7-12-2-0) were not to be embarrassed again as they were up 10-0 practically before the opening tip had been controlled.

However, the third time was not nearly the charm as the home team would not be denied as they responded with a 31-0 run which paved the way for their fifth win in a row to give them a season record of 15-4 and a perfect 7-0 in the Big East.

In the early going Panther guard Alexia Balsch dialed long-distance twice to help the visitors light up the scoreboard with ten points in the first minute and a half.
