Michigan security tosses ND students from game

Notre Dame students were forced to break Irish tradition at the University of Michigan last Saturday when security officers made the team sit in their seats during the football game.

Students said that security officers acted unprofessionally and overreacted to the situation. According to witnesses, the Hambright officers were not organized in their endeavor.

"Gops came down and tried to get people to sit down. They did a horrible job; they tried to get people in the back not to move first, and a couple of people did get tossed," Hambright said.

"A couple of [the officers] were just ridiculous. They didn't know what they were doing like 'You're retarded' to Notre Dame fans. It seemed uncalled-for because it looked like the Michigan student section was proceding as normal," he continued.

At the end of the third quarter, senior Ed Adams was escorted out of the stadium, and his ticket stub was taken by Michigan security. He said he did not understand the basis for the ejection.

"We were getting pelted with spitballs and cans by adult Michigan fans. Then at the end of the third quarter, ushers and uniformed police came down and started screaming, 'Sit down' to sit on the seats, so we moved and stood on the concrete," he said.

"Then we the and two others sat down, and security guards pointed at us, grabbed us and physically threw us out of the stadium. They wouldn't say why. I had my ticket in my pocket, and they ripped it out. They manhandled us," Adams said.

Security officers at the University of Michigan were unavailable for comment. Sgt. Khurum Sheikh of the Ann Arbor Police Department said that fans were escorted out of the stadium nearly every game.

"I don't have any paperwork, but almost for sure there were people asked to leave the stadium," he said.

As for actual arrests, Sheikh said that most citations last weekend involved intoxication and that no fan altercations were reported.

"We did not take any unusual assault calls that night. If they were aware of the situation, they were not at a spot to make that call," Sheikh said. "All the people we dealt with were intoxicated."

He did confirm that "a Notre Dame fan punched an officer and was arrested," but noted that the incident took place outside the stadium the evening before the game.

ND family's rallies to aid Sargent's recovery

On Thursday night, the senior class held a pep rally in the Alumni-Senior Club.

While the purpose of the rally was to raise the school spirit of seniors in preparation for Saturday's football game against the University of Michigan, it also raised almost $1,000 for Adam Sargent, a varsity lacrosse player who was partially paralyzed in an automobile accident this summer.

"We were aware of the accident when it happened," said senior class treasurer Brian McCarthy. "We felt that we should do something as a class to help. So we talked to Carrie Galick, Adam's girlfriend, and she pretty much coordinated it with us."

On the morning of May 29, Sargent, attending the first session of summer school, was driving in an education class at Saint Mary's College when a vehicle broadsided his car at the intersection of Notre Dame Avenue and Angela Boulevard.

"We were aware of the accident when it happened," said senior class treasurer Brian McCarthy. "We felt that we should do something as a class to help. So we talked to Carrie Galick, Adam's girlfriend, and she pretty much coordinated it with us."

"I am trying to generate interest about U.S. leadership to help prevent global climate change. There is a meeting in Japan on Dec. 1, of the Global Climate Change Conference of Parties. Nations will try to come to an agreement about how to reduce fossil fuel use. The U.S. has a tremendous role to play," Hirsh said.

"Getting citizens involved in the issue" is an important way to convince diplomats attending the meeting that Americans are concerned about the future of their environment, Hirsh said.

"This petition is going to the president and the Senate, and if many citizens sign it, it could have a deep impact on the future of our environment," Hirsh said.

CLC disapproves of O'Hara's response to resolution

The Campus Life Council expressed disappointment last night in vice president of Student Affairs Patricia O'Hara's response to the group's resolution on the "Spirit of Inclusion.""I'm not happy with the response," said student body president Matt Griffin. "It's inexcusable."

The response came after the council submitted its resolution to interpresident to present it as "binding" to the University policy that will be carried out and enforced in the administration of... University-administered programs, policies and procedures.

O'Hara responded to the group in a letter dated Sept. 26, reiterating the purpose of the C.L.C.

"The Campus Life Council was created by the Board of Trustees to provide a forum where students, faculty and administrators can discuss matters affecting student affairs," she wrote. "I think that the Campus Life Council exceeds its purview when it attempts to interpret a University-wide statement adopted by the officers in the matter set forth in this portion of the resolution."

Morrissey Hall senator Matt Szabo expressed his concern at the C.L.C.'s interpretation of the purpose of the C.L.C.

"Saying that the C.L.C. is out of place talking about things that deal with the entire University instead of those dealing with student affairs is a position that did not help to clarify," O'Hara said.

"For us to say it's a policy doesn't necessarily make it policy, and I think that's [her response] a fair thing for her to say," Peacher said.

Defining job success

Success. What does it mean, how do you achieve it, and how can it be measured?

As the members of the Saint Mary's and Notre Dame classes of 1998 approach their final quarter and a half, these questions become more and more important as each day passes.

For everyone the meaning of success differs depending on one's own morals, values and ideals.

As the job search continues and we find ourselves interviewing with some of the most elite companies in the world, our stress levels skyrocket. Why not? Grant or hustle and bustle of finding that incredible job, we sometimes lose sight of what makes the bottom line is we have to get the best job be best the most prestigious, highest paying salary, in a fast-paced city or somewhere our education to someday achieve all of this, times two.

President Clinton on Monday honored artists, scholars and philanthropists by awarding them the nation's highest arts and humanities medals that he said showed the United States was "a nation of creators and innovators." Clinton told guests gathered under a large tent on the White House South Lawn that the nearly two dozen recipients of the medals also celebrate the nation's achievements. The president said the country will always support artists and scholars. "It is our heritage. It must be a great gift we will never forget," he said.

As we call first that depends, but everyone must know we did it! We are successful in our job search and we now have an answer to the question, "So, what are your plans for after graduation?"

Are we pleased and accept the offer Or just satisfied and wait to see if possibly the next interview will bring us even more "success."

It's always good to have options, so we go on in pursuit of more. Until finally, we've gone through enough interviews that we could give one ourselves, and it's now time to make our decision.

We make the pro/con list, we weigh the positives and negatives of each job choice, and finally, come to a decision. A decision that could be one of the biggest we've ever have had to make.

Now, this leads me to two questions. First, are we happy with our decision? And second, can we come to a decision? Obviously, just as the meaning of success differs for everyone, so does the meaning of success.

My point in this column is not to scrutinize everyone in the job-hunting process who wants to find the best offer, because I am right along side you. However, what do I want to point out is that I feel with all of the hustle and bustle of finding that incredible job, we sometimes lose sight of what makes us truly happy.

In the end, we all want to be happy, in reaching for your ultimate goal, don't settle for anything less than what you consider true happiness to be.

The views expressed in the Inside Column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

U.S. reductions of carbon dioxide to stabilize so-called greenhouse gases would put U.S. industry at a competitive disadvantage against Europe and Japan, an economic study concluded Monday. The findings by the Economic Strategy Institute (ESI), a research organization financed largely by corporations, are expected to be used by industry groups in their arguments against committing the United States to binding carbon reductions as part of a global warming treaty. President Clinton has said that the United States will seek some tying commitments among industrial nations at a December conference in Japan, but the administration has yet to provide details.

But the issue has prompted a flurry of activity by business groups. The study's author, Paul E. Erlich, said that the study found the cost of carbon reductions was about 25 to 30 cents a gallon.

Mineral may raise HIV survival rate

WASHINGTON

Researchers say they have increasing evidence that a deficiency of the mineral selenium — found in foods including garlic, whole grains and chicken — dramatically lowers the survival rate of people infected with HIV. Scientists say the mineral plays a key role in maintaining a healthy immune system, and has been shown to fight cancer.

A study at the Center for Disease Prevention at the University of Miami School of Medicine showed that HIV-infected patients with a deficiency of selenium were almost 20 times more likely to die of cancer related to HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. The study of 125 HIV-infected men and women, published Tuesday in the Journal of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, demonstrated that selenium plays a critical role in the suppression of AIDS. Other nutrients such as vitamins A, B12 and zinc affect survival deficiencies in those nutrients predict survival, the study found.

The Miami study lasted for 3 1/2 years and measured nutritional factors in the 125 people every six months. Twenty-one of the people died from HIV-related causes. "It is known that nutritional deficiencies develop in the course of HIV infection," said Mariana Buarnau, assistant dean of the medical school.

The redesigned $5 bill will circulate nationwide by Tuesday, putting on schedule despite a tiny printing flaw that marred 30 million of the bills, the Treasury Department said Monday. The introduction follows the March 1996 debut of the redesigned $100 note.

A new $20 bill is expected next year and smaller denominations after that. The new $50 bill features an off-center, enlarged portrait of U.S. Grant, the nation's 18th president, on the front and Zachary Taylor, the country's 12th president, on the back.

The $50, like the $100, is packed with features designed to thwart counterfeiting. These include a new security thread, an embedded polymer security strip that glows in ultraviolet light and a yellow security string in the numeral in the lower right hand corner of the bill's front. But even the Treasury's Bureau of Engraving and Printing found one anti-counterfeiting feature difficult to reproduce — fine concentric lines behind Grant's portrait. After printing 150 million bills between late May and late August, it discovered about 20 percent had a small break in the lines around the portrait.

By ANTHONY PERRI
News Writer

Warren Baker, president of the California Polytechnic State University in San Luis Obispo, has been named the 1997 recipient of the University of Notre Dame's Father John Cavanaugh Award.

The choice of Baker sprang from an innovative approach, within the state educational system, to emphasize service, according to Charles Lennon, executive director of the Notre Dame Alumni Association.

Baker has emphasized the importance of the arts, humanities, and the social sciences in a polytechnic university, while preparing students for leadership positions in society.

According to Lennon, this "rejuvenation of community service" earned Baker the soul of the Cavanaugh Award.

The award is presented annually by the alumni association to a Notre Dame graduate who has performed remarkable public service.

Baker's life has been a testimony to the ideals of the University, Lennon said.

Baker, a 1962 graduate, earned both his bachelor's and master's degrees in civil engineering at Notre Dame. Later he received his doctorate, also in civil engineering, from the University of New Mexico.

Baker taught at the University of Detroit from 1966-1979, during which he was a chaired professor, served as dean of the college of engineering, and was vice-president for academic affairs. While at Detroit, Baker was awarded a National Science Fellowship and served for two years in the early 1970s as a visiting faculty fellow at MIT.

It was when Baker arrived at the California Polytechnic Institute, however, that his career began to flourish.

During his tenure at Cal Poly, Baker continually emphasized "diversity and educational equity," according to the Alumni Association.

He established the Equal Opportunity Advisory Council, increased faculty involvement in university governance, and established the University Advancement Office which generated nearly $125 million over the past 12 years. These and other capital improvement plans led to a Cal Poly renaissance, resulting in new instructional facilities and modernized laboratories for the school.

Apart from his direct hand in improving the university, Baker has also been involved in several other charitable service organizations.

He is a trustee of Amigos of EARTH College, a corporation established to build financial support and public awareness of the Agricultural College of the Humal Tropical Region. This college is an international university conducting agricultur¬al practices for tropical areas.

In 1995, Baker was appointed by the U.S. Senate's Joint Policy Council on Agricultural and Rural Education. As co-chairman he helped further the state's goal of increased instruction, research, and public service projects concerning agricultural practices.

In 1985, he was appointed to the National Science Board. In 1995, he was reappointed to the National Science Board.

He has also served on various other boards, scientific councils, and community committees.

Meal plans aim to bring students, profs together

By MATTHEW LOUGHRAN
American News Editor

The Student/Academic Council Committee, along with the provost's office and Notre Dame Food Services, will implement a new program this year that will allow students and professors to eat together in the dining halls.

"The Faculty Dining Initiative gives professors free tickets to get into the dining hall that they can use in order to eat inside with their students," said Brendan Kelly, academic delegate to the University's Student Activities Board.

"After students come back from fall break they will have the opportunity to use this new program. Student Affairs will distribute the tickets to heads of the departments to be used by professors."

In order to avoid professors just雄厚 this free meal ticket," Kelly continued, "the students will have to ask the professor to join them at the dining hall and then they will have to sign in and themselves. It is a way of facilitating communication and interaction between students and faculty outside of class."

Consequently, the council is running a pilot program in which student leaders (for example, heads of clubs and organizations and members of the Student Union) can get tickets from Student Activities and use them until the program's Oct. 27 start-date. "We are going to run it like that until fall break," Kelly explained. "Anyone with a position can participate and we will see how it works out."

Jewish astronaut settles into MIR

By MARCIA DUNN

SPACE CENTER, Houston

He just started his four-month stay aboard Mir and already he has a holiday coming:

"Bosh Hashana," the Jewish New Year.

"MIR SPACE STATION"

Astronaut David Wolf's mother doubts his son -- the first Jewish American to live on the Russian space station -- will be able to take time off to observe Bosh Hashana this week or the rest of the Jewish High Holy Days.

"But maybe he'll get a vision of the High Holidays closer to heaven than we will," said Martha Knejz of the Jewish Community Center of Indianapolis; Wolf's boyhood hangout.

"It's lovely thought, isn't it?"

And Wolf did take up a mezuzah, a rolled piece of parchment in a case that traditionally is attached to the doorpost of a new home. Mir will be Wolf's home until late January: He moved in Sunday -- becoming the sixth American to live aboard the station -- and spent Monday becoming familiar with the Russian space shuttle's interior.

"I doubt really if they're going to give him time off for the High Holy Days. He just isn't going to give him time off for a holiday, I really doubt that. He wouldn't want to face McVeigh if he went away on a religious holiday," said Attorney General Bill Davi.

"It's a very difficult time, but he would probably be proud of his son. He would probably be like McVeigh's father. He would probably be very proud of his son." Wolf's father, John Wolf, was placed on the FBI's Ten Most Wanted list in 1993.

Wolf also took up a mezuzah for the Jewish nursing home in Indianapolis where his aunt lives.

His sister, Anne Bergrens, said he probably won't unpack the two mezuzot. But he will open her Hanukkah gift after it arrives on a Russian supply ship in October -- a memorial and gift, or holiday candy that looks like coins.

"People don't realize when they're up there, they're just not putting out fires, so in speak, that they have lives back on Earth and it's important how borders and divisions are invisible from space," the rabbi said.

Wolf's attorneys also argued that he is a supporting player in the dead­liest act of terrorism on U.S. soil, acquiring fertilizer and other components, helping McVeigh build the bomb. They also say Nichols helped McVeigh stash the getaway car in Oklahoma City three days before the blast.

"The second, an unemployed doc­tor and engineer, certainly will think about his family, which begins at sundown," Matsch said.

"Kipper, the Day of Atonement, the following week; even if he can't be there in person, property, his mother said."

Judge starts Nichols case with 'clear page'

By STEVEN K. PAULSON
Associated Press Writer

DENVER

With a promise from the judge that he is starting with a "clear page," Oklahoma City bombing defendant Terry Nichols went on trial Monday in the same courtroom where Timothy McVeigh was convicted and sentenced to die.

Nichols, 42, smiled and waved to his mother in the front row as he was escorted into the court­room where the process of selecting 12 jurors and six alter­nates began.

Prosecutors say Nichols was a supporting player in the dead­liest act of terrorism on U.S. soil, acquiring fertilizer and other components, helping McVeigh build the bomb. They also say Nichols helped McVeigh stash the get­away car in Oklahoma City.

U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch noted there were many similarities to McVeigh's trial, including identical charges that could bring the death penalty. But he said the trial is no less significant.

"This trial is important because Nichols helped McVeigh," Tomlin said. "I don't see how they could find him any way but guilty."

Attorneys questioned six prospective jurors Monday, dis­missing one woman because she had a chronic back problem. They dismissed another after a doctor submitted a medical excus­e. The process of selecting a jury from a pool of 500 was expected to take two weeks to a month.

Nichols' attorneys also chal­len ged an attempt by the govern­ment to dismiss another prospective juror who was a convicted felon, arguing that the unidentified person's civil rights had been restored.

In the courtroom and throughout the federal building, security was tight, with police making periodic patrols.

Outside, the crowd was signifi­cantly smaller than the one at the opening of McVeigh's trial. An hour before court began, there were four spectators in line, compared with about 50 for the McVeigh trial's first day.

There was a smaller media contingent too, with many organiza­tions sending smaller staffs.

The courtroom was only three-fourths full for the first day of jury selection; it was full when McVeigh's trial opened.

For Charles Tomlin, who lost his grown son, Rick, in the Oklahoma City bombing, the trial was pre­dictable. But he said the trial is no less significant.

"This trial is important because Nichols helped McVeigh," Tomlin said. "I don't see how they could find him any way but guilty."

The first prospective juror was a nurse who spoke of her concern for family members in her native Idaho, where a series of bombings had been blamed on white supremacists. She tearfully said she could impose the death penalty.

The second, an unemployed dairy farmer, said Nichols should share the same fate as McVeigh if convicted.

"If he's guilty like McVeigh, I feel he's caused enough damage and should be put to death," he said. "What got me the sentence was there were so many chil­dren in it.""
Pop Art pioneer Lichtenstein dead at 73

By ROBERT MONKOE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK
Roy Lichtenstein, a pioneer of the Pop Art movement best known for his oversized comic book-style images, died Monday. He was 73.
Lichtenstein had been hospitalized at New York University's Medical Center for several weeks with an undisclosed illness and doctors initially said Cassandra Lozano, his personal assistant, "Roy's style was known around the world. ... He took things and made them into icons. He knew that people would sort of get it, but he didn't want to explain it. ..." and ahead of me rockets will blast through the sky,..." in a Poussin print. Not to be too precious about his work was art.

Brian O'Doherty, writing in The New York Times in 1963, declared Lichtenstein "one of the worst artists in America" who "briskly went about making a sone's ear out of a sone's ear."
The verdict later was generally positive.

In 1966, Todd Brewster wrote in Life magazine that Lichtenstein was "always the most thoughtful of the pop artists, I think, and the most to say. Those cartoon blowups may have disturbed the critics, but collectors, tired of the solemnity of abstraction, expressionism, were ready for some comic relief. Why couldn't the funny pages be fine art?"

Lichtenstein "took something that was pulp and base and made an art of very high sophistication out of it," Tom Wolfe said.

Frank Stella, a fellow Pop artist, said Lichtenstein was a balloon as a tighter-pint, which culled materials and collected a cult. Their approach was in reaction to the seriousness of high art. "They were powerful, dom­inant images," Stella said.

"They really are bad American painting in the post-war period. Roy really led the way."

Born in New York City on Oct. 27, 1923, Lichtenstein was the son of a prosperous Real estate. He became interested in art during high school and studied all summer under Gerhard Marck at the Art Students League. He earned a bachelor's degree at Ohio State University and then a master's in painting — the latter was cut short by World War II service.

He worked on his own art while teaching and doing other jobs. An instructor at Americana he led him to paint African and Indians in modern­art styles.

In 1960, he moved to Rutgers University's Douglass College whose faculty included artists like Oldenburg, Allan Kaprow and Robert Watts. He was at that time introduced comic strip figures — the first Donald Duck and Mickey Mouse. He also made a map of a golf ball, a cat copied from a Kitty Litter container and a girl on a Pocohontas resort poster.

"It's true that when I looked at what I was doing, it offered my own sense of taste, ... this was, without question, to everything one had been taught about matters of style and substance, and for that...he once said in an interview with critic John Groen.

But he added, "Once I did those paintings, I couldn't work in any other way."

While the mainstream critics were not interested, collectors were. Lichtenstein's first one-man show of Pop paintings at the Leo Castelli gallery in 1962 sold out before it opened. His popularity grew from there.

Over the years he did paint­ings of mirrors, of brush strokes, of interiors, re-inter­pretations of works by Picasso, Mondrian, Leger, Monet and Cezanne. His later work quoted his own earlier pictures. A major retrospective at the Guggenheim Museum in 1993 when Lichtenstein was 70 drew great praise but also some reservations.

Lichtenstein split his time between a home in Southampton on Long Island and a former electrical factory in Greenwich Village that was converted into a studio.

The administration was doing all it could, "leaving no stone unturned, believe me, nothing, absolutely nothing."

On the other hand, Nixon confided, "I am in a (unintel­ligible) mood on that to say. "Look, it's over now, it's over, we can't find them."

"That is a delicate thing," Nixon continued. "They've got to figure we are doing everything we can to be sure that we have found every­body. But on the other hand we must not destroy the cer­tainty that they have. It is better of them to be certain, the man is gone, it is to be uncertain and to continue to have (unintelligible) over­looked."

After Hanoi signed the Paris peace accords in January 1973 it released 591 American prisoners. The agreement, permitting the withdrawal of American forces, provided "peace with honor," Nixon declared. But two years later, North Vietnam captured Saigon and the war ended with a communist victory.

Amnesty seekers await ruling

Johannesburg

After Tuesday, the big question in South Africa won't be who wants forgiveness for atrocities committed during the struggle over apartheid _ but who gets it.

From army generals to ragged guerrillas, more than 7,000 South Africans have petitioned the Truth and Reconciliation Commission for amnesty since its creation two years ago.

Their testimony on killings, torture and other atrocities has shed light on some of the horrors committed during the apartheid era. But who wants forgiveness for apartheid abuses?

Re-released Diana book prompts royal criticism

By ALI KOTARUMALOS
Associated Press

LONDON

Princess Diana was the main source for a 1992 book describing her unhappy marriage, a suicide attempt, and Prince Charles' infidelity, a newspaper reported Monday.

In a three-page story ahead of a re-release of the book, "Diana: Her True Story," The Times of London said the princess personally vetted the manuscript of the book in 1991. The newspaper carried photographs of extracts from the manuscript with annotations in what appeared to be Diana's handwriting.

Critics accused author Andrew Morton, whose best-seller shook the Tolles of London said the princess personally vetted the manuscript of the book in 1991. The newspaper carried photographs of extracts from the manuscript with annotations in what appeared to be Diana's handwriting.

The book's 1992 edition was published within weeks of Diana's death in a Paris car crash.

Control tower confuses planes

By ALI KOTARUMALOS
Associated Press Writer

MEDAN, Indonesia

The pilot said "right." The control tower thought "left." Seconds before an Indonesian jetliner crashed into a jungle, killing all 234 aboard in the country's worst air crash, it appeared no one knew which way the plane was supposed to turn.

An air traffic controller momentarily confused two planes as he gave instructions for a turn, according to a transcript of the plane's final radio conversation obtained Monday.

The controller was handling two other flights at the same time - one arriving and one departing from the two-runway airport. A transcript of the confused exchange between Capt. Rachmo Wiyogo and the controller portrays a distracted moment that caused the crash.

The flight data and cockpit voice recorders - which should indicate what the crew and plane were doing up to a half-hour before the crash - were still missing three days after the disaster.

Government officials had no comment on the transcript. But the official news agency, Antara, quoted sources as saying the crash may have been caused by human error.

The last minute and a half of the conversation, conducted in English, showed repeated misunderstandings about which direction the pilot was turning.

The conversation ended when Rachmo cried out, "Allahu akbar!" - "God is great!" in Arabic.

As details of the final conversation emerged Monday, weeping relatives threw flowers into a mass grave of 48 bodies mutilated beyond recognition.

At another point, the air traffic controller thought the plane was doing up to a 200-kilometer an hour scream. At that moment, according to witnesses, the plane smashed into trees and exploded.

"It's obvious that the plane was flying too low and left the flight path," said the Garuda pilots' union chief, Shadrach Nababan.

Rachmo, a senior pilot with 15,000 flying hours over 20 years, was being considered for a job as a flight instructor, Nababan said.

An airport official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the plane's instruments could have indicated where the runway was, and that the 100-yard-wide haze should not have been a factor.

"The smoke is not a strange problem for a pilot," said Nababan. "There are instruments on the airplane and at the airport that can be used."

One young girl tried to elbow past police to the edge of the pit. "Papa, papa," she sobbed, as the officers held her back. She tossed flower petals into the pit, unsure which coffin bore the body of her father.
The Letter Which Truly Deserves Attention

So... has everybody read the letter? NO. I am not talking about the Syner and Fuller letter, so please don't turn the page in disgust just yet.

I am speaking of the OTHER letter, which was printed in The Observer the same day as the notorious "parasite" note.

Ah. What letter, you ask? You mean there was another letter?

Yes, there was another letter, one that had an important message, and that was completely and totally overshadowed by the ravings of those esteemed Notre Dame sophomores. The letter I am speaking of was written by Saint Mary's sophomore Erin Donnelly, and the subject of that letter was that "racial slurs had defaced a fellow student's private property," to quote from the letter.

Okay, maybe it's just me, BUT ISN'T THAT KINDA A BIG DEAL? If it is a big deal, you certainly wouldn't guess it from campus reaction. What was campus reaction on the subject?

Nothing. Absolutely nothing.

I don't know why this was so. Perhaps people got so angry after reading the first letter that they completely forgot to read the second. However, let's put these two issues in perspective: Two really ignorant and sadly misinformed Notre Dame women write to vent their own personal anger by calling Saint Mary's women parasites, doing worse, just parasites. (Calling us parasites doesn't make us parasites, you know.) A Saint Mary's student is attacked by a hate so virulent that her private property is destroyed, simply on the basis of her skin color. Hmmm... Which one do YOU think is more important?

The first issue got lots of attention. Apparently, 50 or more letters were sent to The Observer regarding the anti-Saint Mary's letter. We women from the college got together and composed a letter, to be published on the following Friday, in conjunction with Saint Mary's Pride Day. We all wore nice white and blue ribbons to show the world that we really liked our school.

Again, I repeat, the second letter probably didn't even get read by 5 percent of the student body. I don't mean to belittle Saint Mary's Pride Day, or any of the commotion made over this issue. All the attention allowed the hostility to come to the forefront so that it could be handled and dealt with.

What I find disturbing, and to be honest, what I am ashamed about, is that racism has a lower priority on our campus than our supposed "rivalry" with Notre Dame women. Are our values really that skewed? Our aim in holding Saint Mary's Pride Day was to show PRIDE in our college. Our response to racial incidents on this campus is nothing to be proud of.

Both types of hostilities are based in arrogance. However, there is an important difference—the hostility against Saint Mary's women is a small problem that is confined mainly to this community. Racism sticks with people their entire lives. I highly doubt that any one of us will spend the rest of our lives in all-white communities. In fact, I have seen projections that show that whites will be a minority within the next 100 years. Yes, Notre Dame and Saint Mary's are mainly white—that doesn't mean they are ONLY for white students.

In her letter, Donnelly makes the following point: "As independent, intelligent women we need to take the opportunity of a new president and act upon the issues we see here on our campus... it is now obvious that the issue of multiculturalism also needs to be addressed. As adults we must act. We cannot wait for the administration to change things. This is 0 Hillary Clinton!" She is right. This is our school, and only we can help fight racism on campus.

And perhaps the best time to start is now. This week is Multicultural Week, with events planned almost every day this week to highlight multiculturalism. These events are for EVERYBODY, so at the risk of sounding trite, I will conclude by saying that the best way to stop racism is to keep an open mind about others. Get to know some "students of color." You might be pleasantly surprised.

Viktor Frankl on Being Human and Imaging God

brief item that came across an e-mail list I subscribe to. It announced the death of Viktor Frankl, on Sept. 2, at the age of 92.

Frankl was considered by many to be one of the last of the great Viennese psychiatrists, among them Sigmund Freud, Carl Jung, and Carl Gustav Jung. Frankl was a survivor of the Nazi concentration camps in which his parents, brothers, and sisters and many other family members were all killed. He went on to author “Man’s Search for Meaning” and became one of the leading psychotherapists of his day.

His work grew directly out of his camp experiences. It explores the moral character of our response to situations which threaten to undermine our inner selves and our human freedom. He found, both in his own life experiences and in those of others, that at its very core our humanity involves our connectedness to others. Even when people experienced their lives through the lens of Judaism, their existential experience was shared by those of us who are Jewish.

Viktor Frankl’s insight was that at that time in our history our forebears, we have linked our notion of what it means to be human to a text from the Bible—Psalm 14 (verses 2 and 3)—our eyes carry weight. My eyes are different from your eyes, not just in size, but in the particularity of their construction.
Dear Lola,

I am writing in response to the letter submitted by "Klepto from Keough." (Observer 9/23.) I too am a kleptomaniac, and I wanted the opportunity to tell "Klepto" that there are others on campus who are struggling with this smuggling disorder (including my roommate). Will you please print my letter? Thank you.

Dear Klepto from Keough,

Welcome to the world of pilage, and congratulations on your dining hall successes. My roommate and I are confessed kleptomanics, and I myself have championed an ND tray. Our next mission: a dining hall chair. I understand the difficulty you face everyday, having to steal your eyes on that chair that you just want waiting to be stolen. You don't have to go through this alone. We must get together sometime to discuss our mutual hobby.

— Plundering in McGlann

Dear Plundering,

Now you're published. Good luck with that chair, I hear the dining hall staff have eagle eyes.

Dear Lola,

I am a freshman from Chicago (who isn't?) and I've talked my problem to death with my friends and have nowhere else to turn. I hope you can help. My boyfriend and I have been together over two years and the thought of breaking up when I went away to college was unbearable to both of us. He goes to U. of Chicago, so it's not that far. At first we could bear the distance, but last week he called me and he wants to see other people! He says he doesn't want to hold me back from all the wonderful opportunities ahead of me. I want so badly to make it work, but I feel him pulling away. What should I do?

— Confused in Cavanaugh

Dear Confused,

This happens very often, and many others are feeling exactly as you do now. It's tough. I know. You say you feel him pulling away. There is a commonly held view that men are like rubber bands: they feel a need to be independent, so they pull away and stretch and stretch like a rubber band. Whether they've fulfilled that need and can't stretch anymore, the need to be intimate and then Snap! they bounce right back. The hard part is the tension in between. Distance complicates it further. It sounds as if he's really telling you that he's holding him back. What to do? Let him go. It's true but true: if it's meant to be it'll happen again, if not, then it wasn't. I promise that once you get used to the idea, you too will begin to enjoy the freedoms of being young, single and surrounded by incredible people. The last thing: give yourself time. There is no instant remedy for a broken heart. The sun always shines brightest after a storm.

We know you have problems. You're flunking chemistry, your roommate flosses her teeth 24/7, you can't dance, a diet of Apple Jacks and yo-cream isn't doing it for you, you are being stalked, you can't dance, a diet of Apple Jacks and yo-cream isn't doing it for you, you are being stalked, you can't dance, a diet of Apple Jacks and yo-cream isn't doing it for you, you are being stalked, you can't dance, a diet of Apple Jacks and yo-cream isn't doing it for you, you are being stalked, you can't dance, a diet of Apple Jacks and yo-cream isn't doing it for you, you are being stalked, you can't dance, a diet of Apple Jacks and yo-cream isn't doing it for you, you are being stalked, you can't dance.

You need to ask LOLA. Remember she's not a real doctor, she has a master's degree in therapeutic touch. Hmmm... Drop off or mail your questions to The Observer, 314 LaFayette.

Wend Kuuni (1982)

In Gaston Kahn's film, Wend Kuuni is the name given to a young, mute boy who is found in the bush. Set in the west African past when the Mosul civilization was at its height, the film weaves the story of Wend Kuuni's life with his adoptive father (and especially with his adoptive sister Pongeret) with the details of Mosul village life to provide both a sympathetic portrait of Mosul culture and a critique of the role it assigns to women.

Drawing on the conventions of an oral storytelling tradition, and employing a style of editing and cinematography that emphasizes the characters' relation to their social and natural environment, the film produces an excellent example of an alternative to Hollywood filmmaking style.

Trouble in Timmies!

By MICHAEL PEPPARD Accent Writer

As September gives way to October, the hounds are on full swing, and the campus music scene is starting to come alive. Each year produces different conversations between campus bands; some years a dialogue develops between two musical Gillies, and other years we students are swarmed by a cacophony of diverse groups. This year offers no lack of diversity, but the band that has been around the longest will soon emerge as the dominant force. Stomper Bob has again, and they have finally evolved into the musical experience that their talent has always warranted.

Under the leadership of senior bassist Matt Buttell, senior keyboardist Joel Cummins, and sophomore percussionist Mike Mirro, Stomper Bob has returned strong, expanding its musical horizons but still entertaining like veterans of the industry. Upperclassmen may remember them as a solid college rock band, built out of fine establishments like Bridge's, Jazzman's and Euphoria. Indeed, they will still fre­quent the old watering holes, but their sound is all new.

Although the triumvirate of Buttell, Cummins and Mirro could have formed quite a jazz combo on their own, the Stomper Bob evolutionary process mandated some new personnel. Senior Megan McCormick joins the band as a female lead singer, blending with the Glee Club-trained voices of Buttell and Cummins for a solid vocal trio. While the band may have lost some flashy stage presence with the depar­ture of Nina McIowell, they have gained much more with the refined intonation of McCormick. Similarly, the band lost its lead guitarist Ricky Zalamea to the real world, but recruited the spell-binding Brendan Mowery from this year's freshman class. As their new sound demanded, they traded in Zalamea's rugged, hard-rocking guitar riffs for Mowery's theory-based yet still funky solo jams.

So what is this new sound? While Stomper Bob's live act could mistakenly be labeled as rock, it is more aptly described as jazz, ska or jump-swing, depending on who you walk into their show. And that is where the final two members of the new Stomper Bob fit in. Juniors Keith Syka, alto saxophonist, and Phil Erskine, trom­bonist, have been added to comprise the swinging horn section. These two additions enable scoring sounds on popular tunes like David Lee Roth's 'Just a Gigolo' and Madonna's 'Material Girl' or other jams like Patsy Clark's 'Wa-Wa Man' and Maceo Parker's 'Pass the Peas.' The band found Syka and Erskine, along with guitarist Mowery, in the Notre Dame Jazz Band at last year's Collegiate Jazz Festival and this year's tryouts. Buttell comments that "when you work with jazz musicians you have no limitations the talent we found in these jazz musicians made some from any genre sound funkier and more exciting.

And exciting they are. Their first two gigs were among the finest performances in the band's history, and their potential for growth is electrifying. Buttell and Mirro glue the band together with a unified funk rhythm, while Cummins tickles the ivories, dancing in and out of his music theory training. The vocal lines are super as always, colored by McCormick's well-formed stylizing. The two horns are learning to play well off each other. Erskine bringing an experienced foundation to Syka's waiting sax. But the all-star thus far has been the spider-fingered guitarist Mowery, who is sure to be a mainstay on the campus music scene. Haunted House is scarier than January weather

By JOEY CRAWFORD Accent Writer

This year, the scariest thing in Michiana is not the incumbent winner, in fact it actually has nothing to do with the weather at all. The reign of terror began Sept. 20 with the official opening of the Niles Haunted House, which has been free of charge and open to the public the past couple of years. The house, which is located at the Old Bell School in Niles, Mich., has been completely renovated with new sound is all new.

The Haunted House has funded two college scholarships at Niles High School and two at Brandywine High School.

The Haunted House will be open every weekend through November 1, between the hours of 7 p.m. and 11 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, and from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. on Sunday. Weekends will be added to the schedule as Halloween approaches. In addition, lucky children under 12 will receive a mini pumpkin is they go on the hayride.

This is the 18th year the Haunted House has terrified the souls of Michiana. Not only has it been a source of entertainment for thou­sands, but it has also benefited the community. Last year the project raised over $5,000 for area charity groups and other charities. Proceeds benefited 44 local service organi­zations from any genre sound funkier and more exciting.

The Haunted House offers visitors with favorite scenes from classic horror movies such as "Cujo," "Scream" and the not-so-classic "Lost World.

For those with a lower fright threshold, there is a Small Scares Fun House that is ideal for younger children. Founded last year, it has decorated rooms, revolving floors, face painting and an unusual petting zoo. The Small Scares Fun House is also the home of a variety of events including a pumpkin carving demo, magic shows and Halloween storytelling. In addition, lucky children under 12 will receive a mini pumpkin is they go on the hayride.

The Haunted House has properties for writing union and Sound - Leonard Maltin.

Weekends will be added to the schedule as Halloween approaches (important to note, all times are Michigan time!). The cost is a mere $4.50, well worth it for the scare con­sidering a movie costs $7. Additional tours for that night are $2.

Both projects are located at the Old Bell School on Bell Road, a quarter mile west of Bell Plaza and Shelton's Farm Market, between U.S. 33 and Third Street. So next time you think there is nothing to do in South Bend, take the 15 minute drive up to Niles some night, and be prepared to be scared out of your wits. That chemistry test or that English paper won't seem so important.
Carr voices opinion on Big 10

Michigan coach wants to see 12th team, divisions

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. - Michigan coach Lloyd Carr would like to see the Big Ten add a 12th team and begin divisional play as soon as possible to provide more inequities in current scheduling.

"When I look at the schedule, I think there are some definite advantages that certain teams have and I think they have an opportunity to go to play a role" in determining the champion, Carr said at his weekly media luncheon Monday. "That's why, in my view, I think we'd be as good as we can add a 12th team.

"I hope the presidents and athletic directors are looking at this direction." Carr doesn't like the league's current scheduling format, with 11 teams playing eight conference games, and every year's schedule has two schools it doesn't face in a particular division.

Of the five unbeaten Big Ten teams currently ranked in the top 12, only No. 6 Michigan and seventh-ranked Penn State don't play No. 11 Iowa, and Iowa also doesn't play 12th Michigan.

"I know I'm going to be accused of second-place division winning," Carr said. "I'm just stating a fact, and it's pretty easy to see." The Southeastern Conference and the Western Athletic Conference have, among others, successfully used divisional play capped by a championship game among division winners.

The Mid-American Conference went to a 12-team, two-division format this year.

"Hopefully at some point we're going to get to where we have two divisions and have a playoff," Carr said.

Michigan opens Big Ten play this weekend at Iowa. It's the first road game of the season for the Wolverines, and it will feature a reunion of sorts.

Fifth-year Indiana coach Cam Cameron was a 10-year assistant at Michigan, working with former Michigan staffs of Bo Schembechler and Gary Moeller.

"Cam's a bright guy," Carr said. "I think we're all going to mix it up. I think he'll do a great job at Indiana. Michigan is 3-0 after a nail-biting 21-14 win last week against Notre Dame. The Wolverines survived despite three fourth-quarter turnovers.

"I don't ever remember winning a game where we turned the ball over three times in the football championship game on the short end of the field," Carr said. "Certainly if you're going to punt one that something we've got to work on.

Carr said Notre Dame's defense helped force the first two Michigan teams while the third was just bad timing on a handoff.

"There are a lot of things to correct and we have a short time to do it. Obviously we're getting into the Big Ten race and that's something that's important for all of us," Carr said. "These games are going to be a lot more difficult, and hopefully we'll be ready for them." Michigan is 1-3 after losing its Big Ten opener 27-26 at Indiana on a last-second field goal.

Ohio State freshman wide receiver Ken-Yon Rambo pleads innocent Monday to misdemeanor charges of drug abuse, disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

The back-up receiver and kick returner did not appear in Franklin County Municipal Court because he was held on $2,000 personal bond and entered the plea for him.

Rambo faces a maximum of 120 days in jail and $1,100 in fines if convicted on all charges. A trial date was not set.

The injury-prone receiver lined up after a fight outside a downtown restaurant Sunday morning. Police said he was carrying marijuana.

His status on the team, at this point, is not jeopardized, according to athletic director Andy Landers.

Landers said Ken-Yon will have to go through the legal process, but do not believe, and coach (John) Cooper concurs, that the circumstances warrant his suspension or dismissal of the team," Geiger said.

According to witnesses, Rambo attacked another man outside a bar after a fight late Saturday night.

Police said they arrived at the River Club Restaurant about 2:30 a.m. Sunday, saw several people fighting and repeatedly ordered them to stop. Rambo and Charles Lewis, a junior at Ohio State, refused to quit fighting and scuffled with officers, police said.

She added that the team did not have to do with skills or the lack of skills but rather with the attitude the team must focus mentally in order to win.

Every team is a challenge from week to week, one must show up mentally and physically for every game, every game and every match for the rest of the season," Joyce commented.

The $50,000 will likely go to Montantes' two sons, 4-year-old Marciano and 2-year-old Sonny. The money would be the biggest payday the boxer ever had.

Tammy Brunette, Montantes' girlfriend and the mother of his sons, said he was setting up a trust fund for the boys.

Vernon leads Irish in victory

Special to The Observer

University of Notre Dame sophomore Mike Vernon ran away with tournament medalist honors in record-setting fashion while leading the Irish to a comfortable 36-stroke victory in wind- and rain-affected final-round action Monday in the Big East conference men's golf championship held at Blackthorn Golf Club.

Notre Dame claimed its third straight Big East title behind the historic effort of Vernon and steady play from seniors Brad Stanis and Bryan Weeks, with each earning a spot on the seven-member all-conference team. Notre Dame's George Thomas also repeated for runner-up honors.

Vernon completed his first round with a tournament-leading, two-under 70, leaving him two shots ahead of three other golfers.

Vernon — who had to three-putt just once in the 36-hole tournament — then carried a one-under 71 in the second round, despite harsh wind conditions that reached over 30 miles per hour. His 141 total bests the 18-year-old Big East championship record of 142 rounds set by Providence's Matt Zinn at Willamantic Country Club in 1979.

Notre Dame golfers have captured five conference tournament titles during the 1990s, with that group including Mike O'Connell Jr., Chris Baynton, Brian Donohoe, and Bill Moore.

Vernon's three-under 141 also represents the best 36-hole tournament score by a Notre Dame golfer in any competition since Mike O'Connell Sr. totaled a 147 at a 1964-65 quad meet hosted by Xavier University. Western Illinois, and Iowa, and Vernon's 141 equals the third-best recorded 18-hole score by an Irish golfer since 1963, with Tony Costigan, also noted in this year's other recorded sub-140 score, a 136 in a 1962-63 quad meet hosted by Northwestern, Ball State and Bellarmine.

After a clarification of first-round scores, Notre Dame headed into Monday's completion of the opening round with a 19-stroke cushion on Georgetown and a 22-stroke lead on Villanova and Seton Hall. But Stanis bogeyed his only remaining hole, Vernon bogeyed 17 and Weeks finished with three straight bogeys, yielding the Irish a team score of 295 in the play-five, count-four format. Georgetown, meanwhile, played even-par over the course of the first-round completion, making up five strokes on the hosts en route to a first-round medalist finish.

As the second round began to unfold, Notre Dame pulled away from the field amidst a day known for gusting winds that often quickly changed direction, adding to the challenge of the 7,105-yard course, which included tough pin placements throughout the 36-hole event.

Stanis proved his worth as Notre Dame's No. 5 man, a role in which Vernon excelled as a freshman last year. Stanis finished all alone in third place with a 148, after an impressive final-round 73 that included nine pars and a birdie over the first 10 holes. Weeks, who exactly matched the second round two shots behind Vernon, made the turn at two-under before carding three straight bogeys en route to a 79, good enough for a 151 total and share of fourth.

Seton Hall rallied to its run-up finish behind a round 75 from its No. 3 player, giving the Pirates' 312 second round was ranked out by a 78 from Mike Costigan, a 79 from Ed Shannon, and an 80 from Scott Cowley.
Defensive play of Soupers helps Crime sweep Chicks for first win

By KATHLEEN O'BRIEN
Sports Writer

Assisted by the many penalties called against Lewis, the Off-Campus Crime turned its play around Sunday, defeating Lewis Hall for the team's first win of the year.

The game was determined on the first possession, as quarter-back Jennifer Roe ran for a 45-yard touchdown on the third play of the game. Off-Campus then failed on its two-point conversion. Later in the first half, Lewis began its possession with a 10-yard run, followed by an incomplete pass and a short pass. Captain and quarterback Liz Talaricio's 20-yard pass was then completed to Carrie Upp for a first down. Lewis was fighting hard to maintain its possession, but turned its ball over to the defense.

Off-Campus quickly turned the ball back over, but Lewis once again was called for two penalties. The second penalty was declined by Off-Campus because the pass had been intercepted on the play. The first half ended with a score of Off-Campus 6, Lewis 0.

Lewis started off the second half with four straight possessions, and seemed in good position to score. On the next play, the Chicks were hit hard by a 10-yard penalty. Safety Kevin Souers for Off-Campus intercepted Talaricio's pass to keep the Crime in the lead.

Off-Campus was unable to reach the end zone, but on Lewis's first play on its next possession, Souers once again intercepted the ball, running it back for a gain of 10 yards. This time, it was the Crime who was stopped by penalties on consecutive plays. Lewis was fighting hard to score as the game clock wound down. Upp made a reception for a first down. After one incomplete pass, Kelly Dillon caught a pass and ran with it for a 40-yard gain.

Lewis had two more complete passes and almost made it into the end zone, but couldn't get the ball to fall into the right hands. Off-Campus ran down the clock for the 6-0 win.

Off-Campus head coach John Steele said, "I'm really happy with our girls, and with our offense for finally coming together. Our defense came up big for us at the end with two interceptions."

Stephen Putthoff, another Lewis coach, added, "Now we're going to put this one behind us and move on to Pasquerella East."

Meehan tosses game-winner

Breen-Phillips gives Badin its first loss

Despite having two touchdowns taken away due to penalties, the Breen-Phillips Banshees still pulled out a 6-0 win against the Bullfrogs of Badin Hall. The Banshees remained undefeated, improving their record to 2-0-1.

Breen-Phillips quarterback Katie Meehan found tight-end Megan Speaks in the back of the end zone for the game's first and only touchdown. Meehan has nine touchdowns and two interceptions on the season.

Meehan, who also plays defensive line, made a few key tackles for the Banshees, but still had game on the other side of the ball. Meehan's defensive efforts were complemented by the game's other stars.

Carolyn Clements and pass and put a stop to a potentially dangerous Badin drive.

The Banshee's defense played tough throughout the game to prevent the shutdown. Wide receiver Natalie Kelly, one of the team captains, called two touchdown passes, but both were called back because of penalties.

Badin's captain and middle linebacker Fred Maloney was the key tackle for the Banshees. "The team was not motivated and didn't come out ready to play. We didn't execute as well as we could have and didn't put it all together."

Badin was short one receiver due to injury, but Clements still played a good game. Stephanie Frigon had an interception for the Banshees.

Badin will test its luck against Pangborn, which remains undefeated this season.

Walsh gets third win against Pangborn

Brenda Phillips gave Badin its first loss

The Wild Women of Walsh prevailed for a 6-0 victory in a hotly contested battle against Pangborn Hall on Sunday afternoon. The tone of the game was set from the very beginning when a player from each team was ejected in the first two series. Both teams were upset with the referees, but played through the controversy.

At the end of the first half, the teams were involved in a scoreless tie. Both defenses came to play, but it was the long pass that was the downfall for Pangborn. Walsh's quarterback, Carolyn Parnell, and Luz Rodriguez were a dangerous duo all afternoon. Parnell connected with Rodriguez late in the second half for the only scoring of the day. The conversion failed, but Walsh's defense was able to hold off a late threat by Pangborn. Captain Sarah Morrill had an interception for Walsh and was the team's leader on defense.

Pangborn's captain Natalie Young was impressed with the play of Walsh's Rodriguez: "She is a really great receiver and they killed us with the long passes."

Walsh's quarterback Jen DePaul played well in a losing effort. Pangborn was solid on both sides of the ball despite the fact that it doesn't have a full roster and has to play a lot of people both ways. Pangborn dropped to 3-0 while Walsh improved its record to 3-0.

Sorin College beats Siegfried

Fourth-down conversion proves successful

By KATHLEEN O'BRIEN

Sorin College, ranked seventh going into Sunday's game, defeated eighth-place Siegfried 7-0. Both teams previously had records of 0-0-1.

Early in the first quarter, a Sorin fumble gave Sorin possession inside its opponent's 25-yard line. Siegfried's quarterback fumbled to hold the line to bring about fourth down with heavy pressure.

The next play featured a close rundown, but the quarterback found his receiver and completed the pass for a first down. Sorin ran the ball across for a touchdown and scored the extra point to go ahead 7-0.

Hindered by rain, the remainder of the game proved a back-and-forth possession battle between the two teams. Both sides had difficulty gaining yardage against offensives and defenses, and the second half featured failures to achieve first downs and forced punting on both sides.

Following the game, Siegfried's coaches reminded the players they need to get more fired up both on the field and on the sideline. The team received a bye this weekend, while Sorin will face a very strong Fisher team.

PW's offense too much to handle

By MATT YUNG

After Sunday's rain, the Pasquerilla West and McGlinn interhall football teams faced off. PW attempted to rebound from last week's tie, while McGlinn had its sights on improving to 2-1. McGlinn started the game with the ball. On its first drive, McGlinn failed to gain any yardage against a fired up Purple Weasel defense, and resorted to punting the football.

PW quarterback Liz McKillop ran the option on PW's first two plays. On PW's second play, McKillop pitched the ball just in time for running back Allison Kriegel to find the daylight she needed to race 20 yards into the end zone. To the Weasels' dismay, officials called back the touchdown after freshman Kori Yelle threw an illegal block. The penalty hurt PW's drive, which resulted in a punt, but the play shook the confidence of the McGlinn defense.

Both teams' second offensive drive was similar to their respective first drives. McGlinn was again held to a three-and-out by the blitzing PW line backers.

When PW got the ball back, defense was able to hold the pass. Kriegel ran another option, for another set of five yards, which was again called back. After the penalty, PW went to the airways. After hitting an array of PW receivers, McKillop threw a tight spiral into the sure hands of Mary LaFlin's hands, who muscled through a defender and marched into the end zone. LaFlin's touchdown was the only score in the first half, and gave PW a 6-0 lead.

PW had the first possession of the second half. On the drive's third play, McGlinn freshman cornerback Leah Asche made an incredible leaping interception and run-back to raise McGlinn's spirits. McGlinn had excellent field position and hoped for a needed score. That potential touchdown attempt was stopped by PW defensive back Kim Rosenkoetter and sophomore Olberholzer recorded a sack and batted away a would-be first-down pass to stifle McGlinn's end zone dreams.

Both defenses were extremely tough throughout the game. PW's Mary Hepburn, Lauren Volter, and Mary Kenney, as well as McGlinn's Ash made big plays to stop the offense. The decisive difference was in the caliber of the offenses. PW's McKillo made McGlinn hesitant with her hard snap count, and her exceptional corp sof backs and receivers were able to move the football. PW finally got another big play near the end of the game when McKillo handed the ball to Erin Place for a long, but quick, touchdown run. The score put PW up 13-0, which was the game's final score.

McGlinn QB Courtney Blake best described her team's play. "Our defense made the stops it needed and gave our offense opportunities, but our offense failed to convert when we needed points," she said.

Pasquerilla East will maintain highest ranking after victory

Welsh falls to Pyros 35-0 in offensive rout

By TIM CASEY

Pasquerilla East showed Sunday why it is the highest ranked-team in women's interhall football. PE ran out to a quick lead and never looked back in a 35-0 win over Welsh. Junior quarterback Elizabeth Plummer had another great performance with four touchdown passes and another touchdown on a run. Plummer threw a 30-yard bootleg and connected, on the conversion to make it 6-0.

She then ran one in from 40 yards out and again made the conversion to take a 16-0 lead into halftime.

McGlinn's defense was strong to start the second half with another touchdown stripe to make it 22-0. On its next possession, Plummer threw another TD on a great catch by the tight end. The game ended with yet another touchdown pass to make the final 35-0.

The PE defense shut down Welsh all game long despite Welsh's variety on offensive play-calling. PE's defense was led by sophomore Stephanie Trauman who had some key sacks and supplied tough pressure on Welsh's quarterback back, sophomore Stephanie Eden.

Sophomore receiver Kristen McGregor and junior tailback Ann Searle played a major role in Pasquerilla East's offensive explosion. Welsh played with much intensity throughout the game, but McGlinn's defense was led by defensive standout junior Jodi Lucena. Eden and sophomore receiver Sarah Leit led the Welsh offense.

Lyons withstands Cavanaugh rally

By TIM CASEY

Sunday's game between Cavanaugh and Lyons was really two games in one before the delay and after. Before lightning and rain interrupted play, the Lions were in total control. They ran out to a quick 6-0 lead early in the first half when senior quarterback Kathy Tschang threw a short touchdown pass to senior Kim Rosenberg.

On their next offensive possession, Lyons continued moving the ball with ease, highlighted by a halfback option pass from sophomore Katy Yanez to freshman Lindsay Goodwin, who made a spectacular diving catch to make it 12-0 before the 20-minute delay.
Knights shut out Roos in 16-0 thriller

By ANTHONY BIANCO

Despite both teams’ fine finishes the week before, Keenan Hall dominated the Kangaroos of Keough in the second week of play with a 16-0 victory.

The contest began with a Keough possession that lasted only three plays, being shut down by a solid Keenan defense. Keenan’s offense took over, putting together a drive that lasted much of the first quarter. “Our passing game was clicking early,” comments Keenan captain D.J. Hartman.

Led by freshman quarterback Craig Venvertloh, the Knights’ passing game carried them during the drive. It was capped off with Venvertloh’s pass to split end Nelson Rivera.

Scoring right before a heavy downpour, the Knights decided to go for a two-point conversion rather than bring out their kicking team. They were successful, making it a 8-0 ball game. That was all the Knights needed on this day.

The second half brought more domination by the Keenan offense. Due to the rain, the Knights favored their running game this time around. One of such drives resulted in a for Klopp rushing touchdown. Scoring on another two-point conversion, Keenan made it 16-0.

The Kangaroos threatened late in the game with an offensive drive of their own, but the Knights again stepped up. The clock ran out after Keenan’s quarterback keeper O’Neill’s offense had a successful two-point conversion, bringing the score to 16-0.

The fourth quarter brought another opportunity for the Knights to score, but their offense stalled. They were held to just 16 yards of offense, and the game ended with the Knights victorious.

Senior quarterback Stephan Molina connected withTravis Alexander for a touchdown pass of nearly 30 yards, eventually running it in for the game-winning score.

In the second half, the Knights dominated the Kangaroos, outscoring them by a score of 16-0. The game was highlighted by a strong running game from the Knights, who managed to score points on every possession.

Zahm leaves O’Neill scoreless

Zahm Hall shut out O’Neill 16-0 Sunday at Stepan Field. This, the second straight win for Zahm, buoyed its record to 2-0, while O’Neill becomes 0-1 to start its season.

Zahm head coach Jerry Fitzpatrick was pleased with his team’s performance.

“The guys did a great job today. They had a responsibility to fulfill and fulfilled it successfully,” Fitzpatrick commented.

O’Neill began the game with several third-down conversions but failed to score. Zahm then stepped in, quickly gaining momentum. A 30-yard pass helped inspire the team’s drive, and two plays later, Zahm ran for a touchdown, making the score 7-0.

O’Neill’s offense then had another chance, but a costly fumble allowed Zahm to take over once more. Completing a pass, Zahm moved about two yards off the goal line and ran the ball in for a second touchdown.

O’Neill’s offense opened the second quarter strong, but on a fourth down short by one yard the quarterback keeper failed, and O’Neill started another drive. After a failed pass to the end zone, Zahm brought in its kicker for a field goal, upping the score to 16-0.

The fourth quarter brought about several lucky breaks for O’Neill’s weakened offense. On two occasions, O’Neill was forced to punt but regained possession due to penalties called against Zahm. Each flag, the first thrown for roughing the snapper and the second for roughing the kicker, was a 15-yard automatic first down for O’Neill. Failure to capitalize on these errors, however, brought the game to a close with a huge victory for Zahm.

Dillon 8, Off-Campus 0

In a game dominated by the defenses, Dillon Hall was finally able to score for the victory against Off-Campus. Playing on a slick field after a mid-afternoon downpour, there was no scoring until the last four minutes. Dillon was called for a penalty, and it became third down and about twenty yards. Senior quarterback Stephan Molina connected with Travis Alexander for a touchdown pass of nearly 30 yards. The two-point conversion was run in by Greg Kuzma.

Alexander said, “The defenses were playing really tough, but we finally hooked it up for a big bomb.”

Dillon, ranked fourth last season, moved up to 2-0, and will face Keough Sunday. Off-Campus dropped to 0-2 on the season.

Domination is the word which comes to mind in the Irish series with the Hoosiers. Currently, Notre Dame leads the series, 7-1, which continues tonight in Bloomington.

Last year, the two squads met twice, once in regular season and once in tournament play. The last meeting between the two occurred in the first round of the NCAA tournament with the Irish trouncing the Hoosiers, 8-1.

The Hoosiers will do their best to douse the Irish’s hot streak. The team is coming off a 4-0 victory against the Villanova Wildcats and a 8-1 trouncing of the Rutgers Scarlet Knights.

The freshmen poured in huge performances this past weekend. Anne Makinen had four goals, three of which came against the Scarlet Knights.

Freshman Meotis Erikson had two goals in the Villanova contest while her freshman Monica Gonzalez had one. Both Erikson and Gonzalez contributed to our goal against Rutgers.

Weekend play for the Saint Mary’s volleyball team brought a win and a loss as the Belles traveled to the Carroll College Triangular that also included North Central College.

Although the Belles got off to a slow start, it was a different team that showed up to challenge Carroll College in the final match of the Saturday event. The Belles played North Central College first and lost 15-1, 12-15, 15-12, and 15-10.

Coach Jennie Joyce, commenting on the low score of the first match, said that the team did not come ready to play. However, the Belles redeemed themselves with strong offensive efforts coming from 5-foot-4 freshman setter Megan Jardina who had 28 assists, and sophomore middle Joyce Ozbolt who added 30 assists and three service aces. Contributions from sophomore Mary Rodovich and senior Betsy Bill led the defensive game which came against Villanova.

The Belles are returning nine of their starters and are looking to improve on last year’s record of 11-11. They finished seventh in the Big Ten.

Weekend play for the Saint Mary’s volleyball team brought a win and a loss as the Belles traveled to the Carroll College Triangular that also included North Central College. Although the Belles got off to a slow start, it was a different team that showed up to challenge Carroll College in the final match of the Saturday event. The Belles played North Central College first and lost 15-1, 12-15, 15-12, and 15-10.

Coach Jennie Joyce, commenting on the low score of the first match, said that the team did not come ready to play. However, the Belles redeemed themselves with strong offensive efforts coming from 5-foot-4 freshman setter Megan Jardina who had 28 assists, and sophomore middle Joyce Ozbolt who added 30 assists and three service aces. Contributions from sophomore Mary Rodovich and senior Betsy Bill led the defensive game which came against Villanova.
