Ashley: Pleasure should not be the sole intent of sex
By HEATHER MACKENZIEAssistant News Editor

“For every Christian homosexual, ebaste celibacy is the true vocation.”

Father Benedict Ashley, Notre Dame alumnus and professor emeritus, presented a theological answer to questions about human sexuality and homosexuality in a lecture yesteads afternoon. In an effort to present a Biblical understanding of homosexuality, Ashley first discussed the Scriptural interpretation of marriage.

“Marriage is to be a covenant of love that is both faithful and fruitful,” he said.

Offended Catholics demand apology after Stanford band’s antics at game
By MICHELLE GUIDOAssistant News Editor

Leland has issued a written apology for “the tasteless performance by the Stanford band ... In their sophomoric attempt at humor, the band crossed the line from funny to obnoxious and offensive.”

No sanctions have been or will be taken against the band, according to assistant athletic director Gary Migdal. Leland’s apology should not be mistaken for an apology from the band itself.

For all of its scandalous behavior over the years, the band is not in the habit of saying, “I love,” it said Bill Klish, who wrote the letter to...

For over three years now I have been able to read with pleasure Charlie Rice’s frequent Observer column. His criticisms are aimed at certain in-group endurances—not necessarily condemning his extremist opponents, but subtly making the case against agreeing to disagree. His article on Sept. 26 entitled “Stop Being PC, Treat Homosexuality as Disease” is a perfect example of this procedure.

I am not a moral relativist, but Professor Rice has gone too far. His incessant, mean-spirited attacks on students who question the school’s stance on this issue or on any others is uncompassionate. Furthermore, these same students have been killed elsewhere in the state, adding, “We don’t recall a hurricane ever having caused such damage.” In neighboring Oaxaca state, where Pauline first struck with 115-mph winds a day earlier, state government spokesman Leandro Hernandez confirmed 14 deaths, 15 people missing and thousands of homeless.

“The figure could still rise,” said Hernandez, speaking with The Associated Press by telephone from the state, where powerful Pauline ripped through homes away and badly damaged such resorts as Puerto Angel. Two weeks after dramatic Senate hearings on IRS misconduct, President Clinton plans to propose changes including new external oversight and tax accom­modation and greater citizen involvement in fielding complaints, a congressman and staff members said Thursday. In a White House announcement scheduled Friday, Clinton plans to propose changes including “citizen advocacy boards” at the IRS and an enhanced role for the Council of Economic Advisors, according to Rep. Rob Portman, R-Ohio. Portman, who was briefed on the announcement by a tax Clinton official, said Vice President Al Gore will unveil results of a National Performance Review study of customer service practices. The review will recommend new measures to increase administrative reforms at the IRS. And the president will discuss the administration’s work on improving the IRS, which predates last month’s Senate Finance Committee hearings. Portman said, Portman, who co-chaired a year ago the Trump administration’s National Service Commission, is sponsor of a bill that would create a nine-member board with private citizens to oversee IRS operations.

Air bag blamed for child’s death

An air bag that deployed when a car was sideswiped by a pickup truck was blamed for the death of a 7-year-old boy. “The air bag killed him, no doubt about it,” said Dr. Robert Edwards, Klamath County medical examiner. “He remained on life support overnight, but it effectively killed him instantly. It has killed 52 people as of Oct. 1, including 45 children, 12 of them infants, according to the National Safety Council.” Authorities believe it’s the first case in Oregon where a child passenger was killed by an air bag. Garrick Portman, 6, died Oct. 8 when the car he was riding in was sideswiped. The bag inflated, slamming into the boy’s lower chest and upper chest hard enough to break his neck. As in nearly all air-bag deaths of children, the boy was not wearing a seat belt.

Search on for missing federal plane

Search parties scoured the woods and mountains Thursday for a chartered plane that vanished while carrying eight employees of the federal Bureau of Reclamation and a pilot to a meeting in Arizona. The plane had 11 people aboard, including 45 children, 12 of them infants, according to the National Safety Council. At least 59 dead as Hurricane Pauline devastates Acapulco

Acapulco, Mexico—Hurricane Pauline, which hit Mexico’s most famous tourist resort with devastating gales and torrential rains, killed 59 people Sunday and caused millions in property damage. The island city of Puerto Vallarta was hit by Pauline’s 115-mph winds. The storm then moved into the Pacific Ocean. By Tuesday morning, the cyclone had become a tropical depression.

Marks: Cultural differences not based on genetics

By ERICA THESING

Genetic make-up does not account for differences among cultures, according to Jonathan Marks.

Marks, an anthropology professor from the University of California, Berkeley, gave a lecture last night on heredity and folk science as part of the Notre Dame Holocaust Project.

"The difference between cultures is based on history. It has nothing to do with genetics," Marks said. "Every time a geneticist tells you everything important in life is in your genes, they have a conflict of interest. Their conflict of interest is that they want your money.

According to Marks, geneticists face stiff competition for research funding and must create interest in their field. This idea first became prominent in the 1920s when people turned to eugenics to solve social problems. Eugenics is a field of science that suggests humans should use selective breeding to favor, or eliminate, specific traits.

"Eugenics represented a scientific progressive program for improving society," Marks said. People interested in this field, according to Marks, suggested the possibility of "breeding a better citizen." This idea was similar to that of Nazi Germany.

"From the standpoint of a humanist the interesting thing is how close genetics in 1930s Germany was to genetics in 1920s America," Marks said.

To prove this point, Marks used the 1916 book "The Passing of a Great Race" as an example. This book, written by Madison Grant, quickly became a bestseller with fans around the world.

"There are very few things you can imagine Theodore Roosevelt and Adolf Hitler agreeing on. This book is one of them. This book cross-cut political lines," Marks said. This book is one of the classics of American racist thought.

Marks also criticized modern examples of eugenics, such as the "Great Ape Project."

"We don't give out human rights on the basis of genetic distance. Some people argued for it in the twentieth century. You know what? They lost World War II," he said.

Marks used a trend in twin studies to further emphasize his point. He mentioned theories of identical twins experiencing ESP.

"There is pressure on people to come up with these stories. If you are an identical twin without an amazing story, you don't get on Oprah," he said.

Marks hopes to encourage geneticists to recognize the implications of their work.

"I'm calling for humanistic genetics. I'm calling for a field in which geneticists are educated into an awareness of the greater social matrix their field is situated in," he said. "That responsibility includes checking the widespread invocation of genetics in folk science. That is precisely what the geneticists of the 1920s failed to do. That is precisely what the geneticists of the 1990s must do."
Managers

answered the call to be a manger two years ago. Now he is a junior and has no regrets about his decision.
"If you want to do with the best football program in America at its most critical timelines, [managing] is one of the greatest opportunities you will have in your Notre Dame career," he said.
But don't let the enthusiasm that Klish and all the managers show for their job be misleading. Managing is hardly a cake-walk, and all of them knew what to expect when they accepted their positions.
Managers make a full time commitment, and between managing, classes, keeping up their studies and spending time with their friends, managers are often expected to somehow fit more than 24 hours into their day.

"I'm responsible for running drills with the players and assisting wide receiver coach Urban Meyer in any way possible," Byrne explained. Among other things, he works a lot with "kickers," passes to the wide receivers at high speeds.

When practice is over, the managers have to clean up after the team, secure the equipment, and finally follow them off to the late dinner session reserved for athletes in the North Dining Hall. After dinner, several managers will often get together to hit the books.

Byrne, who estimates that he works upwards of 40 hours managing every week, admitted that the schedule of a manager can be somewhat grueling at times. He mentioned that since he has become a manager, he has had "nowhere near the amount of time" he had had in the past.

"It's a combination of the time commitment and the fatigue," he explained. "It wears you out, and it isn't easy to study when you're doing.

Nonetheless, as Jen Hyduk, a junior from Farley who is also working with the football team this semester, believes that that kind of tough schedule can help to form good habits in time management.

"At first it was tough, but you adjust to it," she said. "You learn to set a schedule and prioritize, so that you can get everything done."

Byrne, who is traveling with the football team to Pittsburgh to help at tomorrow's game, felt the same way. "I have to make the best use of all the spare time in my day," he said. "I can't waste five minutes here and 10 there. If you plan your time well, you learn to get your school work done.

"You just have to realize that managing is your non-academic life," said Mike Kuharich, a business major from Knott Hall.

"It's our life. I've had a real part in it," Byrne explained. Among other things, they have managed every week, admitted that the schedule of a manager can be somewhat grueling at times. Groeke: Chooses life despite illness

By COLLEEN MURPHY

In continuation of Respect Life Week, Tammy Groeke spoke last night in the Walsh Hall chapel.

Groeke has been diagnosed with severe cervical cancer and at the same time is seven months pregnant with her third child. The natural choice for a couple facing this obstacle might be abortion. However it wasn't that easy for Groeke and her husband. Together they chose to go through with the pregnancy. "She is my baby. I feel her grow within me," says Groeke of her attachment with the daughter inside her. Groeke spoke of the decision she and her husband made, and they know that they made the right one.

"Our baby didn't ask to be born. God gives us the privilege to give life not to take it," Groeke said of her reasoning behind the decision.

The Right to Life Committee organized the talk with vice president Laura Antonwijk as host. The service began with songs by the Spanish Chorale and then an introduction by Antonwijk. "Motherhood and childhood are gifts to be received but also ones which we can give," said Antonwijk on the importance of life. After Groeke spoke, she was presented with flowers and a gift for her unborn daughter, Lois. The service concluded in prayer with a special blessing for Tammy, her family, and all those unborn children never given a chance to live.

Respect Life Week will continue with other services on campus throughout the rest of the week.

DePauw discusses women's depression

By ERIKA WITTORF

Every person has mood swings, but depression is not merely mood swings, according to Mary DePauw, director and licensed psychologist of the Counseling and Career Development Center at Saint Mary's.

In her lecture "Women and Depression," D e P a u w referred to a list of 10 symptoms of depression and said that if a person exhibits five of them, he or she should consider getting help.

DePauw then clearly defined depression, vulnerability factors and available treatments. Although the lecture began with a general definition of depression, the forthcoming material was focused on depression of women.

"The statistic clearly illustrates that depression is a women's health issue that deserves attention," DePauw said.

She noted that between 11 and 17 million Americans suffer from clinical depression each year. Women are twice as likely as men to experience major depression while manic depression occurs equally among the sexes.

Mental stress, infertility, premenstrual stress and postpartum issues are some of the specific reasons for increased incidence of depression in women.

Some other causes of depression are loss, life crisis, stress and general view of the world.

It is imperative to seek help before the stages of depression impair a person's daily functions, such as family or job, according to DePauw. "It is your life, and this is the only one you have. There is no do over."

Yesterday's lecture was held at noon in the Student Affairs Conference Room.

Ken Milani, professor of accountancy at the University of Notre Dame and contributor to the United Way.

"In our income tax classes and financial accounting classes, we occasionally discuss the subject of charitable contributions, but we rarely do so in terms of return on investment. Nevertheless, the returns my family and I have received from our 'investments' in the United Way over the years have been nothing short of miraculous. Fourteen years ago my son, Adam, then a senior at St. Joseph's High School in South Bend, sustained a terrible injury during a hockey game. As a result of the damage done to his neck and spine, Adam became a quadriplegic.

"The community responded to our family's tragedy with prayers, cards, meals and money. Crucial support from United Way agencies enabled us to remodel our home to accommodate the new limitations on Adam's mobility, to obtain and equip a van for him to drive, and to provide him with a variety of special therapies.

"Support from the community and from United Way agencies made it possible for Adam to focus on his studies while my family and I focused on Adam's care. He finished high school with his class, and four years later was graduated from Notre Dame as a member of the Phi Beta Kappa society. After graduation, he obtained a law degree from Duke University and returned to South Bend to practice law for four years. Now, after two years at the University of Illinois, Adam is a professor of legal writing at Mercer University in Macon, Georgia.

"I can't guarantee that if you give to the United Way your 'investment' will bring you the blessings that our family received during a time of ordeal. But I can assure you, from experience, that United Way helps miracles happen."
Counseling Center Reaffirms Position

Over the last month two presentations have been made concerning the clinical treatment of homosexuality. As a service to the Notre Dame community the University Counseling Center offers the following:

In 1973 the American Psychiatric Association stated that homosexuality is not a mental illness. In 1975 the American Psychological Association stated that homosexuality is neither a disease nor a pathological state. These positions continue to hold today and were recently (August, 1997) reaffirmed at the annual meeting of the American Psychological Association.

Thus, the staff of the University Counseling Center states:

1. That it supports the position of both professional organizations that homosexuality is not a mental disorder. We believe that by training and clinical experience, psychiatrists and psychologists are qualified to determine what is and what is not a mental disorder.

2. Given the fact that there is no scientifically confirmed evidence that a person's sexual orientation is changeable through psychotherapy, we do not provide "conversion therapy," reparative therapy," or any other similar reported treatments.

3. We are committed to providing a confidential and non-discriminatory atmosphere in which any student can actively explore sexual orientation issues.

Clinton promises handgun locks

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON In an alliance forged under pressure, major gun manufactur- ers have agreed with President Clinton and announced Thursday they would provide childproof trigger locks with all their handguns.

This will affect eight of 10 handguns made in America and it will save many young lives," the president said in a Rose Garden ceremony on a summer day he encouraged other gunmakers to follow suit.

Each year, about 1,500 children are rushed to hospital emergency rooms with accidental gun injuries. Nearly 200 children died from those wounds in 1994 alone.

The gunmakers' promise was quietly negotiated after Clinton threatened last January to press for legislation requiring child locks on handguns. To bolster his demand, the president also signed an executive order in March requiring safety locks on all handguns issued to federal law enforcement officers.

With the gunmakers' voluntary agreement in hand, the administration dropped its call for legislation. Two advocacy groups quickly objected, calling anew for mandatory federal standards.

"The big winners today are America's gun manufacturers, not America's children," said Kristen Rand of the Violence Policy Center.

White House press secretary Mike McCurry shot back, "That sounds like sour grapes." Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., a prominent gun-control advocate, joined in urging Congress to pass his bill ensuring that safety standards apply to all guns.

The White House ceremony marked a rare instance of agreement between gunmakers and Clinton.

"As is well known, this administration and the gun industry from time to time have stood on different sides of various issues - the Brady law, the assault weapons ban - and there may be other disagreements in the future," the president said. But in this case, he said, "we stand together.

"Echocing that sentiment, Richard Feldman, executive director of the American Shooting Sports Council, said, "Let's not let those issues that divide us prevent us from moving forward on those issues that we can all agree upon.

"And this is that issue.

"Feldman, talking with reporters outside the White House, said consumers should not use trigger locks on guns they keep loaded for protection.

"When you have a firearm that you are keeping for self-protection, it is in use," he said.

family," Ashley said.

"When it is separated from these purposes, it becomes addictive and deviant," she said.

Under these pretenses, homosexuality, bisexuality and even masturbation become wrong in a theological early psych-sexual relationship, it is intrinsically unethical.

"Some priests think that the only ethical solution for those victimized by homosexual feelings is for them to search for a relationship like marriage," Ashley stated. But they are merely trying to have a sort of heterosexual relationship within the context of homosexuality. It is morally wrong because the action is contradictory to the needs and purposes of marriage instilled by God.

Ashley went on to address the causes of homosexuality shown in the table above.

"Some have argued, "God made me gay, so he must want me to live as a gay." But it is false that God made anyone homosexual anymore than God made some persons blind, deaf or paralyzed. An adequate theological answer to the problem of evil does not blame God for defects, but the sinful history of the human race for which disabled persons are usually the innocent victims.

The exact causes of homosexuality remain unknown, Ashley pointed out, but it can be caused by "accidents of early psych-sexual development" and "unstable family life.

Gay activists ought to consider their responsibility to promote research on the prevention and cure of this condition rather than to discourage such research on grounds that it stigmatizes a hopeless and inescapable condition.

And according to Ashley, homosexuality does not have to be a permanent condition.

"Heterosexuality is an achievement," he said. "Every person has the chance to attain it.

But for those homosexuals who cannot achieve hetero- sexuality, there must be a logical solution.

"The greatest and worst scenario of course, is people who are sure that this is a permanent condition. How can they achieve a happy life?"

VOTE: In an area of 280,000 people who have not found it possible to achieve a heterosexual life, Ashley emphasizes, is to renounce all sexual pleasure in the name of Jesus. Ashley pointed out that people who have not yet found it possible to achieve heterosexuality from Jesus, we should show the riches of our sympathy and prayers of encouragement not to despair or to lapse into a reckless gay or lesbian way of life, Ashley said.

And for those who mistak- enly hope to achieve a kind of perma- nent same-sex relationship, Ashley said, "we should pray that they come to see it as an illness which will be transformed into a chaste friendship free from the contradictions of genital activity.

Discovery on Jupiter moon excites Galileo scientists

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON

The discovery of organic compounds on two of Jupiter’s moons increases the possibility that all of the elements for life are present on another of the planet’s moons, Europa.

The finding, from instruments on the Galileo spacecraft orbiting Jupiter, suggests that Europa may have all three of the ingredients scientists consider essential for life: an energy source, liquid water and organic molecules, said planetary scientist Thomas B. McCord of the University of Hawaii.

“This doesn’t mean there is life on Europa,” said McCord, lead author of a study to be published Friday in the journal Science. “The exciting news is the evidence that Europa may have all three of the ingredients.”

Europe is already known to have water and internal heat sources.

Dale Cruikshank, a research scientist at NASA’s Ames Research Center, said the work of McCord and his team should sharpen the research concentration on Europa, which already “is the subject of very special interest.”

“This finding increases the plausibility for life on Europa,” Cruikshank said. “It also supports the idea that there were organic molecules streaming throughout the solar system.”

The study of Jupiter’s moons is part of a growing effort by astronomers and planetary experts to find evidence of life within the solar system, particularly on Mars.

A major goal of NASA’s Mars exploration, for example, is to search for the fingerprints of life on the Red Planet. Researchers have determined that Mars once had vast pools of water and there is speculation this could have led to the evolution of life. Some believe there may be evidence of life in frozen underground water.

NASA researchers also have found what some believe may be the fossilized remains of microbes in an asteroid that fell to Earth from Mars. The interpretation of that finding, however, is controversial.

In the case of Jupiter’s moons, instruments on Galileo detected the complex organic molecules on the surfaces of the moons Callisto and Ganymede, suggesting that such organics are also present on Jupiter’s other two large moons, Europa and Io.

“Callisto and Ganymede are some of the kinds of organic molecules that could be the basis for life,” said McCord. “These are the basic ingredients.”

And if Callisto and Ganymede have those compounds, said McCord, then “it is highly likely that they also are present on Europa.”

Water and an energy source, said McCord see “two angles on the triangle of life.”

A federal jury awarded $1 million Thursday to three young black men who accused the Eddie Bauer chain of “consumer racism” for detaining them on suspicion of shoplifting and forcing one man to take off his shirt.

The jury of four whites and three blacks found that the young men were falsely imprisoned and defamed by store officials and that the outdoor-clothing company negligently supervised its security guards.

However, the jury did not find that the civil rights of 18-year-old Alonzo Jackson were violated by being forced to remove his shirt.

The verdict increases the evidence that could be the basis for life on Europa, McCord said.

The results are astounding. GE holds more patents than any other US company and is a global leader in each of its major businesses. Operating in more than 100 countries, we’re the first corporation in the world to exceed $200 billion in market value.

Challenger denounces Giuliani

By MICHAEL BLOOD
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK

Hoping to gain ground on Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, Ruth Messinger repeatedly denounced the Republican incumbent Thursday as a bully who has failed city schools, the police and the unemployed.

Giuliani countered by charging his Democratic challenger would steer New York toward the policies of his predecessor, David Dinkins, who was mayor at a time when the city was vexed by high crime and lost of thousands of jobs.

The televised debate — the first of two for the candidates — was marked by sharp exchanges on issues from police brutality to school crowding to the death penalty. Each offered a sharply divergent assessment of the city, with Messinger flatly dismissing suggestions that the quality of life in her Upper West Side neighborhood had improved — at least from her vantage point.

"Rudy Giuliani has told us every problem in this city is just about solved," Messinger said. "He neglected to recognize that many of these problems are real." Messinger emphasized that schools and other services could be improved, but offered a mostly flattering portrait of city order over his stewardship, taking credit for a lower crime rate and improved business climate.

By the debate’s end, Messinger had offered perhaps one of her best opportunities to dent Giuliani’s commanding edge in the polls.

In her opening statement, she described Giuliani as a cutthroat autocrat who governs by intimidating rivals and outwitting dissenters. She accused him of unjustly squeezing out former police Commissioner William Bratton and former schools Chancellor Ramon Cortines.

It's the spitting event of the year at the Scheibel household — the annual Taking-Of-The-Cat-To-The-Vet. It's also the time of the year, because it involves Scheibel folly, and, well, apparentlyanime. scenario enthralls.

Oh, sure getting a cat to the vet SOUNDS easy enough, but when you're Kathy Scheibel dealing with Mittens the overweight-yet-extremely-agile-raging-terror-of-a-semi-professional-Wonder Cat (who also hap­pens to chest flagrantly ... without qualms), it's one of the most difficult tasks known to man! (We have to keep reminding ourselves of this, lest we become discouraged by our losing record.)

but, the fact that we have lost this competition to our cat in an ob­scenely disgraceful fashion for the last eight years in a row certainly is not due to lack of effort. Certainly not! We take such challenges ridiculously seriously! All year long, in sunshine and snow, while normal families are doing normal family things, the Scheibels are engag­ing in rigorous training and intense strategy sessions. It's a matter of pride! We will not accept inferiority to our cat!

The preliminary heats of the competi­tion begin with the Locating-Of-The-Cat, which is altogether much more difficult than it sounds, because once Mittens receives that wacky postcard addressed to of her upcoming visit the spectator event of the year. because it involves Scheibel folly. and, well, I'm noticing as we hop medians, uproot trees, knock over fire hydrants and jump trains “Dukes of Hazard” xyle before ultimately landing in the parking lot at the vet's office.

It's the final stretch! We can see the finish line as we climb from our man­gled car and roll into the office in a swooping, gazping cloud of fur, causing somewhat of a scene as we proclaim our long-sought success. “We did it! We got the cat to the vet!” we tell the reception­ist. “Aren't you proud of us?” But, she is unable to respond, because the cat (in keeping with her face-attaching fetish) is now on the receptionist's face.

And for the first time, the cat is direct­ly in front of us and is not moving at supersonic speeds. As we look our com­petitor in the face ... we gasp in horror, realizing, “That's NOT our cat!! That's the Joneses' cat!! — WE'VE GOTTEN THE WRONG CAT!!”

At this point, however, we're willing to overlook this petty detail. “A more technically.”

“A unimportant insignificance.”

“We're just hoping that cat fraud isn’t a felony.”

Why is Notre Dame Robbing Non-Wealthy Students?

Charles Rice

emphasize the loan burden they may have to assume. But as gradation approaches, the truth comes home. Heavy debts can dictate the course of a graduate's life, determining his career path and openness to marriage and family. National surveys indicate that the situation is not likely to improve. An article in The Journal of Student Financial Aid stated that student financial aid totaled $55 billion in 1996-97, a 97 percent increase from 1985-86. Some 30 percent of this growth was the result of federal aid, which has doubled and is now 60 percent of all aid. Increasingly, student loans are unsecured and are burdened with interest charges to the total cost. Unsubsidized loans are now common in schools, and the average loan volume and one-third of all federal loans.

The burden is most acute at high-priced private universities. Three-quarters of the nation's wealthiest private universities, including Notre Dame, have four-year institutions with tuition and fees that are two or three times the national average and range as high as $30,000 and over. According to the College Board, only 5.3 percent attend schools with tuition and fees of $20,000 and over. Notre Dame, with an undergraduate tuition of $19,800, has tuition and fees of $21,000 and over. Notre Dame, with an undergraduate tuition of $19,800, has calculated its debt down close to the 1978-79 cost in real income.

Non-wealthy applicants can still count on borrowing heavily to attend Notre Dame's increasingly costly undergraduate and graduate style research campus. They may go to state universities because that is the route the research schools that are not in the research rat race. "Public colleges and universities received $1.1 billion in 1996-97. So did Notre Dame's percentage of students in higher education. They pay around $2,000 a year for housing, in real money, which was in 1978-79.

Notre Dame has imposed this doubled burden on students in pursuit of Research Greatness having only a margin of students. And this is why only a minority of those students receive University scholarships, and the average scholarship does not even come close to the 1978-79 cost in real income.

The result from private research schools is not limited to the middle class. In their forthcoming book, "The Student Aid Game," Morton Schapiro and Michael McPherson show that 38 percent of college freshmen come from families with annual income over $100,000 who are enrolled in private institutions in 1994, compared with 31 percent in 1980. From families who earned between $100,000 and $200,000, the freshman enrollment at public schools rose to over 4 percent in 1994 (from 2.1 percent in 1980. (Trusteeship, Sept./Oct. 1997, pg.33)

THE PANTHER

The Panther (Felis concolor) was adopted as the University of Pittsburgh’s mascot at a meeting of students and alumni in autumn 1909. According to George M.P. Baird, ’09, who made the suggestion, it was chosen for the following reasons: (1) the Panther was the most formidable creature once indigenous to the Pittsburgh region; (2) it had ancient, heraldic standing as a noble animal; (3) the happy accident of alliteration; (4) the close approximation of its hue to the old gold of the University’s colors (old gold and blue), hence its easy adaptability in decoration; and (5) the fact that no other college or university then employed it as a symbol.
Planning on making the six-hour trek to Pittsburgh this year to watch our Fighting Irish take on the newly revamped Panthers this Saturday? After the game you might want to head out into the city and soak in all the culture that Pittsburgh has to offer.

You may want to visit The Andy Warhol Museum, located on the North Side at Sandusky and General Robinson Streets—just across the 7th Street Bridge from downtown Pittsburgh.

The museum features extensive permanent collections of art and archives. Temporary exhibitions, which may include the work of other artists, are presented on a regular basis.

The Andy Warhol Museum is essential to the understanding of the most influential American artist of the second half of the 20th century. It is also a primary resource for anyone who wishes to gain insights into contemporary art and popular culture.

More than 500 works of art and extensive displays of related archival material are shown together and offer the viewer an integrated presentation of the development of Warhol's work with emphasis on specific thematic concerns.

Warhol's contribution to the history of art included the use of popular and everyday imagery, photographic techniques, and serial repetition. It has scarcely been recognized that he also created a kind of hybrid "abstract" painting with his later series of Rorschachs, Camouflages, Crosses, Eggs, Shadows, and Oxidations, in which color, pattern, and shape play a primary role. These paintings and prints reflect Warhol's interest in wallpaper and decoration. The Eggs and Crosses also evoke his family's observance of Easter ceremonies during his years in Pittsburgh.

In the 1980s Warhol experimented with diamond dust as a material which could give the surfaces of his paintings and prints additional reflective qualities, glamour and value. Widely different meanings could be read from its use on his portraits or on Shoes, his poignant images of women's discarded footwear. Warhol never lost his capacity to confound simple expectations by making the abstract real, by turning something tawdry into something grand, or by presenting the spiritual in the guise of contemporary worldly images.

Warhol's preoccupation with collecting is legendary and his archives reveal his equally obsessive habit of never parting with anything. The vast assortment of items assembled by Warhol over 40 years now forms the single most extensive archive of an artist of the second half of the 20th century.

The archives contain artist's materials, tools and supplies; business records; scrapbooks; issues of Interview magazine; photographs; clothing; furniture; collectibles; audio and videotapes; published materials; including books by and about Warhol; and acetates and silkscreens.

The Archives Study Center is the definitive source of research material and information on Andy Warhol and his work. It is also a primary resource for the study of the Pop Art movement, as well as for an understanding of the profound changes in journalism, rock music, celebrity culture, fashion, and other aspects of popular culture influenced by Warhol.

In his last works Warhol often returned to hand painting on canvas, a practice he had largely relinquished after he started to collaborate on paintings with the younger artists Jean-Michel Basquiat and Francesco Clemente, who also worked in New York. Each artist would add his contribution before passing the painting on to his colleague's studio, so that the style and hand of each was overlaid by the work of the other. Recognizable portraits, signs, logos and lettering all became part of their game.

In 1985 and 1986, Warhol continued an extensive series of paintings and drawings of Ads and Last Suppers in which sacred and profane imagery, which had long been a central part of his work, were arranged together in ways which Warhol had not attempted earlier. His Last Supper/Punching Bag sculptures, a collaboration with Jean-Michel Basquiat, which have not been exhibited before, combine these symbolic references to the body and spirit.

Andy Warhol founded Interview magazine in 1969. An avid reader of movie magazines and tabloids since his youth, Warhol transformed his obsession with Hollywood and fans into a monthly review of popular culture. Having used movie stars and sensationalism in his paintings, he now ventured into celebrity journalism.

Historically, many aesthetic movements gave rise to journals, such as the Vienna Secessionists' Ver Sacrum, Surrealism's Minotaure, and various Fluxus publications. These served to disseminate the movements' ideologies and provide an additional forum for creative expression. Warhol's magazine, initially titled interVIEW: A Monthly Film Journal, was dedicated to film reviews and interviews with movie stars and directors. Within a few years, the coverage expanded to include other aspects of Pop culture, embracing fashion, art, music, television, gossip, and celebrity nightlife—especially New York's notorious disco, Studio 54. Warhol and Interview's editors pioneered and developed the concept of celebrities interviewing celebrities: Mae West by Capote, Bette Midler by Armistead Maupin, Truman Capote was both subject and conductor of interviews.

When asked who read the publication, Warhol replied, "Our friends. And whoever is on the cover." Appearing in the first year were Jane Fonda, Robert Redford, Bianca Jagger, Bette Midler by Armistead Maupin. Truman Capote was both subject and conductor of interviews.

BALTIMORE

Check the temperature and the thermometer, this Indians summer isn't over yet.

Marquis Grissom hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning off Armando Benitez Thursday night, giving the Cleveland Indians a 5-4 victory over the Baltimore Orioles in Game 2 of the AL championship series.

With the Indians trailing 4-2 in the eighth and on the verge of being bounced behind 2-0 in the best-of-7 series, Grissom hit a shot into the stands at Camden Yards crowd and surely sent living rooms and bars into a frenzy.

Cleveland, which came back from a 2-1 deficit to beat the World Series champion Yankees in six games in the opening round, benefited from two walks and a controversial call in the eighth that upheld Grissom's shot. Benitez struck out pinch-hitter Jeff Branson to open the inning facing sandy Alomar. Alomar then struck out Tony Fernandez and appeared to hit a grounder that was awarded first base.

Grissom, who went 3-for-4 and drove in 1-1-1 to the deepest part of the ballpark, bunted the Indians out of the dugout.

In last year's playoffs, Benitez (a middle reliever grand slam to Albert Belle in Cleveland's 9-4 win in Game 3. Cleveland's Mike Jackson got two outs in the eighth and Jose Mesa pitched the ninth for the save. Following a travel day Friday, the series will resume at Jacobs Field on Saturday. The Indians will send ace starter Mussina to the mound against Greg Maddux for the first game of a three-game series.

Until Grissom's dramatic shot, it appeared Baltimore's new shortstop and its old star pitcher would push the Indians a little closer to the World Series.

Mike Bordick responded with a sixth-inning tie with a two-run single, and Cal Ripken Jr. added a first career postseason shot — as the Orioles took a 4-2 lead into the eighth and turned it over to their bullpen.

It was 4-3 when Kipnis leads the out after the seventh inning this game.

Manny Ramirez hit a two-run homer in the top of the first inning for Cleveland, which stranded seven runners through the first four innings and was awarded first base.

With the score tied 2-2 in the eighth, the Orioles loaded the bases against starter Charlie Nagy on two fielders and a walk. Bordick, whose off-season activation as a free agent came during a 3-2 pitch from shortstop to third base, batted Nagy in the fourth inning shortstop to right field on a line drive.

Two runners advanced on a walkoff sacrifice fly, and the Orioles loaded the bases against starter Nagy in the first inning for two runs on Grissom three-run homer.

Morris faces possible jail time

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
Associated Press Writer

ROCKWALL, Texas (AP) — Baltimore Ravens running back Byron "Bam" Morris is expected to turn himself in this week in response to an arrest warrant issued as part of an attempt to revoke his 10-year probation on a drug conviction.

Morris' attorney, Jay Ethibington, said his client might also turn himself in early next week but is taking the matter very seriously. Ethibington said Morris could surrender as early as Friday or as late as next week.

District Attorney Ray Summ of Rockwall, 25 miles east of Dallas, sought the arrest warrant. He said Morris' probation should be revoked because he violated two conditions of his probation by using alcohol and by failing to report to his probation officer seven times from July 1996 to August 1997.

Ethibington said he was reviewing his client's probation reporting records. "We anticipate there will be some explanation to this and part of it may be merely a misunderstanding," he said. "We are not prepared to contest the allegations, but we certainly are analyzing them to a great extent."

Sumrow said he has not decided what punishment to recommend and wants to meet with the probation officials who supervise Morris to determine "what they think is best to help him get back to where he needs to be." Morris pleaded guilty to marijuana possession after his arrest in March 1996 on Interstate 30 near Rockwall. An officer found more than 5 pounds of marijuana in the trunk of Morris' car. The player was driving towards his hometown of Cooper, 75 miles northeast of Dallas, when he was arrested.

Morris was suspended by the NFL for the first four games of this season after a drug test revealed in January that he had used alcohol. However, Sumrow said Morris signed an agreement when he went on probation that no privileges attached to those records are waived.

He said he was surprised that Morris is facing a possible prison stint. Kevin Byrne, a Ravens spokesman, said the team "will try to learn more about the situation as fast as we can, and we will react when we learn more."

Torn rotator cuff ends Alex Fernandez's season

MIAMI — Florida Marlins pitcher Alex Fernandez's season ended suddenly today when doctors discovered a fully torn rotator cuff, an injury that could finish his career.

The 28-year-old right-hander underwent an MRI on his pitching shoulder after last­ ing just 2-2 innings Wednesday in a 7-1 loss to the Atlanta Braves in Game 2 of the National League championship series.

"I feel bad for the organization and the team," Fernandez said. "I feel sometimes I let the team down, now that I'm not there for game six.

UNC coach Dean Smith retires

By DAVID DROSCHAK
Associated Press Writer

Dean Smith retired today as North Carolina's basketball coach after 36 years, two national championships, more victories than anyone else — and just nine days before the start of practice.

"I enjoy basketball. I enjoy coaching basketball," Smith said. "It's the out-of-season stuff I didn't handle well.

"I've been saying for the last eight years or so maybe it's time to go do something else."" And today he shocked basketball fans everywhere by deciding to do exactly that.

Bill Guthridge, Smith's long-time assistant, will succeed him.

"He has learned well from the master and he is ready and eager to do the job," Athletic Director Dick Baddour said.

Guthridge said Smith had had enough of public appearances, autograph signing and speech-giving.

"It's all the little things that were Dean out," he said.

Baddour said, "I had one weekend from last Oct. 15 to May 13, I canceled something. I took a weekend with my family. That's when children and grandchildren are free."" Guthridge, 60, said he was anointed Thursday as Smith's handpicked successor, "Smith's blessing. He inherits a skilled, veteran team. He knows that one seat happened to be.

"I'm the luckiest guy in the world... to be at the University of North Carolina," said Smith, who just last season broke Adolph Rupp's career victory mark of 876.

Among those attending the news conference were current players, Georgetown coach John Thompson, who coached Smith in 1976, and Philadelphia 76ers coach Larry Brown, who played for the Tar Heels.

Smith even got a call from President Clinton. "There is nobody like you," Clinton said. "But not just because you won, but because of the way you did it. We all respect and admire you so much."" Michael Jordan, who played on Smith's 1982 championship team, called him "a father fig­ure.

"He's made an impact on so many players, it's hard to count."" Smith said he was ready to move on, to let someone else do it with his blessing. He inherits a skilled, veteran team. He knows that one seat happened to be.

"I've had a unique opportunity," Smith said in March, "and I've had a unique career as well. I've been up and down and it's not quite the way I saw it coming," he said in March, "and I was from the coaching job in April, because every April I am probably fired. So you wait to see, but you're not sure. We are in August. For 36 years I guess I was never sure."

Smith and Guthridge have been virtually inseparable through the years, with Guthridge turning down several head coaching opportunities on the front of Smith's staff. Smith sits atop of the team's management.

He took the Tar Heels to his first Final Four last season. He also guided the team to his 130 Atlantic Coast Conference tournament title during the 1996-97 campaign, which was his first 0-3 league start.

The Tar Heels are considered contenders for a national title, which Smith has already won five times.

Kris Lang, a senior at Gastonia Hays High School who plans to play for UNC during the 1999-2000 season, got the news first.

"Coach Smith left a message for me and when I called him back right after that, I think he was retreating," Lang said.

"He said he hoped I understand, and I said I did. And he told me he was still going to be the coach. I think he's ready to be coaching anymore.""

Smith's former player, Adolph Hupp's, also posted an NCAA-fed 27 straight 20-win seasons.

Smith, who plans to honor his contract through 2001, said earlier this year that he didn't plan to honor his contract through 2001. "I take each year as it comes," he said in March, "and I make the most of the coaching job when I'm there.""
‘Madman’ Green sues Tyson

By SAMUEL MAULL

NEW YORK

Mike Tyson said former opponent Mitch Green came after him like “a madman,” grabbing him and ripping his shirt. Tyson described a violent “He believed him,” Tyson said. “I’m getting out of here.” He tried to block my way. He followed me outside ranting and raving. He grabbed my shirt and ripped it. “I believe I struck him then,” Tyson said in reply to questions by his lawyer Robert Hirth. “I believe he went down.”

Green and his lawyers contend that Tyson hit him merely because he approached and asked for a rematch. They said Green was frustrated because he had been virtually blackballed for two years by Don King.

“Do you recall how many times you hit him?” Hirth asked his client. “I don’t know. Once or twice.” He said he hit Green again, and Green went down for 30 to 40 seconds. Meanwhile, Tyson said, he fled to his Rolls-Royce and locked himself in. “He beat on the window,” Tyson said. “He ripped my sideview mirror off. I was pretty upset. He was screaming and ranting and raving while he was punching the window. I got out of the car.”

Tyson said he hit Green again. “He went down. He didn’t get up that time,” Tyson said. Green sat with lawyers, sometimes shaking his head as if disagreeing with Tyson, but restraining himself much more than at most other times during the trial. He and Tyson occasionally looked directly at each other.

Salt Lake City rebuilds support for 2002 Games

A poll conducted for the Deseret News in late September found support for the Olympic effort had dropped to 53 percent from 62 percent in late July. That’s when Olympic committee chief executive Tom Welch resigned and then pleaded no contest to a spousal abuse charge.

Last, the organizing committee announced sites for the cross-country skiing and biathlon events, voting unanimously for Wasatch Mountain State Park, some 27 miles southeast of Salt Lake City in the Heber Valley.

In the weeks following Welch’s resignation, the committee moved its chairman, Frank Joklik, into Welch’s spot. That prompted the resignations of two top financial executives, one a respected former state budget director. Last week, Leavitt appointed a new coordinator, John E. Fowler, a former general authority of the Mormon church. And the governor and Mayor DeeDee Corradini announced auto dealer Robert Garff as the new chairman of the committee.

Now, the governor says, it’s time for a fresh start. He drew parallels between Utah’s euphoria over the Jazz reaching the NBA Finals last spring, “We rose up spontaneously behind the Jazz and were united. It was because the Jazz are our team. Well, the Olympics are our Games,” he said.

taste of narrowly missing the Central Collegiate Hockey Association's playoffs last year lingering in their mouth, and their sights are set on accomplishing what they failed to last year.

"We have to take the first step tonight," said Dushabek. "We have to show everyone that we are competitors and that we are going to be a presence in the CCHA."

Notre Dame returns its two top goalies and 18 other players who accounted for 77 percent of the team's goals, and with a strong freshmen class, fans are justifiably sanguine about this team's prospects.

During the past six weeks the team has basically focused on fundamentals: skating, defense. We're working on stuff that is important," said Dusbabek. "Another focus is the team's offense. They dropped 12 one-goal games last year, and they hope that increased offensive output will alleviate this situation.

"We only averaged something like 2.4 goals per game last year," said Dushabek, "which isn't a lot. But we are going to change that this season." We always had good games with the Irish as they look forward to the remaining games in the Big East season, our conference. They always played well against us in the past. We need to play with confidence and control the tempo of the game in order to win."

They are led by Gabriel Gervais, a sophomore from Brossard, Quebec. He has scored nine goals and added two assists on the season. The Irish defense needs to contain Gervais in order to stop the Orangemen's attack.

This game is key for the Irish as they look forward to the remaining games in the Big East season.

Six out of the last seven games are against conference opponents, and it is important to gain momentum as they approach this critical part of their season. "From a Big East perspective, we are where we want to be. We are undefeated and have yet to give up a goal in conference play," Coach Berticelli commented.

"However, where we are has nothing to do with where we need to be," Berticelli continued. "We need to stay focused from game to game because, in our conference, anything can happen."

Orangemen tied Villanova. Despite their record, they are a very sound team fundamentally and always put up a challenge for their opponent.

"Against Syracuse, we need to continue to do what we have done all season," Coach Berticelli stated. "We have always played well against Syracuse. They always played against us in the past. We need to play with confidence and control the tempo of the game in order to win."

Hatcher signs two-year contract with Dallas Stars, ends stalemate

Associated Press

DALLAS

Defenseman Derian Hatcher ended his holdout Thursday, signing a two-year contract with the Dallas Stars.

"We're glad to have Derian sign for two years," Stars general manager Bob Gainey said in a statement announcing the signing of the All-Star defenseman. "He has been a big part of our organization for the past six seasons and we look forward to his future contributions."

Contract terms were not disclosed.

Hatcher, 25, is in his fourth season as the Stars' team captain.

He played in 63 games last season, scoring three goals and adding 19 assists with 97 penalty minutes. He also made his first appearance in the NHL All-Star Game.

Hatcher sat out the Stars' first four games because of the stalemate. He had asked for $5.2 million over two years, while the Stars were offering $4.8 million.

Dallas, which was 1-2-1 without Hatcher in the lineup, last week signed veteran defenseman Craig Muni to a one-year deal.

Younger brother of Pittsburgh defensiveman Kevin Hatcher, Derian has played his entire six-year career with the Stars. In 378 career games, he has 40 goals, 91 assists and 808 penalty minutes.

He was the Stars' first-round selection, eighth overall, in the 1990 draft. He will begin practicing with the Stars on Friday.

To make room on the roster for Hatcher, Dallas assigned forward Patrick Cote to the Michigan K-Wings of the International Hockey League.

Cote, 22, hadn't appeared in a game for Dallas this season...

Die-hard fans rewarded by new policy

Special to The Observer

Student seating at University of Notre Dame men's basketball games will be on a general admission basis beginning with the 1997-1998 season. The policy will reward students who show enthusiasm by showing up early for games with the best seats in the student section.

"We wanted to provide all students with the same opportunity to have the prime seats in the stands," said Notre Dame's director of tickets and marketing Jim Fraleigh.

In accordance with this new policy, Notre Dame allowed a pre-ordering of student season tickets by sending applications to the students' parents. Regular student issue for season tickets will occur Oct. 14-15 at Gate 10 of the Joyce Center between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Season tickets are priced at $44 each for the 11 home games when classes are in session, and students may purchase one ticket. Married students may buy two tickets, but must show a marriage license at the time of purchase. Pre-ordered tickets may be picked up at the Joyce Center Oct. 13 or any day after that at the Joyce Center.

When students enter the Joyce Center for basketball games, they will enter Gate 8 by presenting their student ID and game ticket. Lines will not be allowed to begin until four hours before each contest. While students are in line, they may hold a position for themselves and three other students.

The 1997-1998 University of Notre Dame men's basketball team will begin its season with a "Midnight Madness" practice session on Friday, Oct. 17, in the Joyce Center. The event is free and open to the public.

The 50 minutes leading up to the first Irish practice will include give-aways by Continental Express airlines, University Park Mall and adidas. Two Notre Dame season tickets will also be given away. In addition, the first 1,000 people entering the building will receive a free t-shirt from adidas and First USA credit card company.

At midnight, the first opportunity for the teams to practice under NCAA rules, head coach John MacLeod and his Irish will conduct a half-hour practice session, including slam-dunk drills and a 10-minute scrimmage. The Notre Dame women's volleyball team will play North Carolina at that same night at the Joyce Center and the building will remain open until the completion of "Midnight Madness."

Notre Dame battles Boston College, Providence

By BILL HART
Sports Writer

Notre Dame's volleyball team returns to Big East action this weekend with road matches against two conference opponents.

On Friday, the Irish will head to New England for the first time this season to face Boston College.

The Eagles have struggled throughout the year, clinging to a 5-14 record going into Saturday's match. They started their season with a seven match losing streak, and just recently bounced back from another six match streak last week.

In conference play, BC beat Rutgers in five games on Friday before losing to Seton Hall in three games on Sunday. The Eagles are led by senior Amy Laurence, who scored 15 kills in the victory over the Scarlet Knights, and freshman John El-Illay, who had a total of 22 kills and six blocks over the course of last weekend.

The Irish have a 3-0 record against Boston College, defeating them in three games last year by a score of 15-7, 15-5, 15-10.

"They're a relatively young team," head coach Debbie Brown said about the Eagles. "They've got two pretty good outside hitters. I think if we play hard and stick to our game plan we should be able to defeat them in three.

On Sunday, the Irish will face off against Providence, a team which is looking to improve on last year's performance. The Friars are currently 15-7 on the season, after losing to Rutgers in five games Sunday.

The defeat ended a nine-match winning streak for them which began on Sept. 19. The only other conference match Providence has competed in was a three game win against Seton Hall last Saturday.

The Irish have faced off against the Friars only twice, but have defeated them both times in three games last year by a score of 15-7, 15-6, 15-5.

They are led by setter Colleen Lee, who recorded fifteen kills, 45 assists and 30 digs this past weekend.

 Providence hosts Syracuse tomorrow before facing the Irish.

"They're in a very similar situation as Boston College," Brown remarked about the Friars. "They have a couple players they go to a lot. I think if we key on them and put a lot of pressure on them, we should be able to play them well.

Notre Dame, currently 10-5 and still undefeated in conference play, hopes to extend a nine-match winning streak for them which began on Oct. 7, with four players scoring between 19 and 23 kills.

Sophomore Mary Loeffler totaled 19 kills on just two hitting errors in the match.

"I think at this point we're playing pretty well," Brown said. "During the BU match we did a lot of good things, and we learned a lot. We were under a lot of pressure after we were down 2-1 and were losing 6-0 in the fourth game, but we came back and won it. I think this will be very significant when we play even tougher teams later on.

The six-year, $125 million dollar contract signed by the Minnesota Timberwolves Kevin Garnett shook not only the basketball world, but the whole sports world.

Garnett, a 21-year-old prodigy who was an All-Star game alternate last year, was given the richest contract in the history of the game. He was given this contract by the Timberwolves due to the fact that he holds as a potential superstar starring for a relatively young franchise in a small market city.

In other words, had the Timberwolves not given in to Garnett’s demands, he would have gone away faster than Notre Dame football’s national championship aspirations, and left them without a franchise player.

How does Garnett have this power? Well, under the NBA collective bargaining agreement, any NBA rookie is eligible for free agency in three years. This rule, which first took effect with the class of 1995, has forced many NBA general managers to take tough decisions. However, this rule, combined with Garnett’s $125 million dollar contract, has also forced many high school recruiters to evaluate if entering the NBA at 18 in one-sport athletes is the best way to the NBA and the big money.

The fact of the matter is that Garnett himself should be a junior in college right now. Instead, he is earning an annual salary in excess of $20 million.

As a high school basketball phenomenon, would you choose to play for and study at a college like Notre Dame, Duke, or Michigan, where you would have to endure the academic rigor or make a name for yourself in the world of college basketball, or would you prefer to be in the NBA making $20 million a year? Garnett evidently... let me think for a minute.

Kobe Bryant, rookie sensation of the Los Angeles Lakers, was a bilingual student with an 1100 SAT score. Although he had his choice of any college in the free world, Bryant opted for the NBA, and for good reason. Next year, Bryant will also be in the final year of his three-year deal with the Lakers and will be eligible to become a free agent.

The Lakers, burdened with contracts to Shaquille O’Neal, Robert Horry, Elden Campbell, and Nick Van Exel, will most likely be unable to re-sign Bryant. As a free agent, Bryant might just eclipse Garnett’s record contract.

So who’s losing here? Is it the athletes jumping from high school to the pros and raking in millions? No. It is the teams willing to pay the millions to sign those athletes? Naturally. The loser here is the game of college basketball. Perhaps the greatest college basketball players are slowly overcoming the crush.

With yesterday’s news of the retirement of Dean Smith, arguably the greatest college basketball coach in history, college basketball suffers another devastating loss. The North Carolina Tar Heel coach said that he felt the time was right for him to retire. He’d been in the game for a long time and had seen the game evolve from what it was when he began coaching to what it is today. Perhaps he retired because he knows what lies ahead in the future based on all that he has seen in the past. Perhaps he knows that the Kevin Garnetts and Kobe Bryants are slowly overcoming the Big Ten rules.

Irish seek consistency against weak Hoyas

Gerardo returns to line-up after time off due to ankle injury

By KATHLEEN LOPEZ
Assistant Sports Editor

Consistency is the order for the Irish this weekend, as they head into the nation’s capital to take on a weak Hoyas team.

"We are just trying to get better," captain Kate Sobiero said. "Mainly, we are trying to not get stuck in the rut. Last year, we got stuck in the rut and never improved. That’s why we didn’t beat North Carolina the second time. We never improved."

Losing eight starters is tough on any team, it has been especially tough on the Georgetown Hoyas. They are 2-7 thus far in the season and 0-6 in Big East play. The Hoyas are coming off a tough loss to the West Virginia Mountaineers 1-0. Tomorrow, they play one of the toughest teams in the nation, the Irish. Currently, the Irish lead the series 4-0-1.

"Lately, we haven’t been playing tough which we need to do," said junior Shannon Boxx.

Notre Dame, currently ranked second in the nation, is riding a high streak into the nation’s capital. The Irish remain unscathed thus far in the season with an 11-0-1 record. The team's main focus is to improve on its performance against Boston College, only defeating the Eagles by a score of 2-0.

"We were disappointed with Sunday's performance," said sophomore Jenny Streiffer. "We need to work on being more competitive."

The Irish have four players nominated for the Missouri Athletic Club Sports Foundation Player of the Year. Last year’s winner was former Irish player Cindy Daws. This year’s nominees are Streiffer, Sobiero, sophomore Jen Grubb, and senior Holly Manthey.

Most impressive for the Irish this season has been the play of the freshmen. Freshman Meotsi Erikson recently received Big East rookie of the week honors. She ranks fifth on the Irish scoring list.

Irish fans can rest assured because junior Monica Gerardo will return to the lineup. There was speculation that the return of Gerardo was due to ankle injury. Gerardo returns to the starting lineup after time off.

"They all come up for us big," Sobiero said about the freshmen. "They spark us in the bench area as well."

"We've got six weeks now and we're just ready to lace them up and hit somebody other than a teammate," added sophomore defender Sean Molina.

None of the players cited patriotism as a factor in this game, and no one is billing this meeting as a "United States versus Canada," winner-take-all tilt. In fact, a good number of players on Notre Dame’s roster hail from Canada.

Irish head coach Dave Poulhin heads into his third season behind the bench and has again recruited a talented freshman class. Two incoming freshmen, forward Jay Kopishcke and defenseman Ryan Clark, who scored three goals in the victory.

"We overcame a great deal of adversity against TCU," Berticelli commented. "We came from behind in difficult situations three times in the game and in order to win the team came away with a great deal of confidence.

The game against Syracuse will be the first Big East game for Notre Dame in nearly two weeks. Notre Dame has posted a record of 4-0-1 against conference opponents, which puts them in second place in the Big East. The most impressive stat for the Irish this season is that they have yet to give up a goal against a Big East opponent.

The next test for Notre Dame is the Syracuse Orange. They bring a record of 4-4-1 on the season and 2-4-1 in the Big East. Most recently the Irish defeated the Orange on Oct. 4.

Irish return to Big East with new confidence

After nearly a week off, the Notre Dame men’s soccer team will be back in action when they face Big East opposition at Syracuse on Saturday at Alumni Field.

Notre Dame is coming off of a fairly productive weekend. Last Friday, the Irish played the Southern Methodist Mustangs, currently ranked fourth in the nation, in a 1-0 game, with the lone goal coming with just one minute left in regulation.

"After the SMU game, we realized that we don’t need to be intimidated by any team," Coach Berticelli said. "We shouldn’t play scared and be overly conservative."

Sunday provided Notre Dame an opportunity to rebound from the loss when they faced the Texas Christian Horned Frogs. In a high-scoring game, the Irish were able to win in overtime 4-3. Much of the credit goes to senior co-captain Ryan Turner, who scored three goals in the victory.

"We came away with a great deal of confidence," Berticelli commented. "We came from behind in difficult situations three times in the game and in order to win the team came away with a great deal of confidence.

The Boys of Winter are back.

The Irish enter the weekend coming off a week of hard work and six long weeks of practice this fall, they finally face their first test tonight when the Western Ontario Mustangs roll into Canada.

"We’re fired up. We’re ready to go," said sophomore forward Joe Dusbabek.

"We’re going to work with what it’s like."”

The boys are a threat due to their physical ability. Assistant coach Dave Poulhin heads into his third season behind the bench and has again recruited a talented freshman class. Two incoming freshmen, forward Jay Kopishcke and defense man Ryan Clark, scored three goals in the victory.

IRISH ON THE OFFENSIVE...

Quarterback Ron Powlus and the Irish are licking their chops in preparation for a Panther defense that allows nearly 400 yards per game.

Before one starts to dwell on all the negatives surrounding the Irish offense, perhaps it is best to take a second look at some of the positive aspects...

All right, back to the negatives.

The running game, once the backbone of Notre Dame football, has been the biggest difference between last year's 8-3 squad and this season's 1-4 bunch. In the past, the Irish were able to take advantage of a game nearly by shoving the ball down the throat of the opposition. However, as the team's four-game losing streak illustrates, a successful rushing attack has become a thing of the past.

A lot makes matters worse, the passing game, which was supposed to be the backbone of second-year offensive coordinator Jim Colletto, seems to bear a striking resemblance to the one Lou Holtz floundered with over the last three years. With this in mind, is it time to give up on the Irish offense and let the ballhawks take their turn with them?

"We have not given up, and we definitely don't want our fans to give up," said quarterback Ron Powlus. "We're going to get this thing right, and we will definitely that will start on Saturday."

There's no reason it shouldn't be. Despite building a 3-2 record, the Pittsburgh defense still has its share of holes in it, namely the linebackers and defensive backs. The Panthers gave up nearly 300 yards rushing to the well-renowned power known as Houston and relinquished 321 yards through the air to run-oriented Nebraska.

Pitt coach and offensive guru Walt Harris has rejuvenated the football program, but it has come through an emphasis on offense. Meanwhile, the Panther defense, which gives up nearly 400 yards per game, may be just an eyelash better than the unit the Irish scored 60 points against a year ago, including a whopping 40 in the second quarter.

With Autry Denson coming off his best game of the year and with Ron Powlus returning to the state of his endless high school accomplishments, perhaps this is the week the Irish offense returns to prominence.

"We need to be able to control the ball and keep our defense off the field," said head coach Bob Davie. "Secondly, we've got to be able to score some points. We've got to be able to run the ball better, and I think that will open up the pass game."

If so, there might just be some positives to talk about next week.

— Mike Day

PANTHERS ON THE OFFENSIVE

Last year the Panther offense was simply horrible, ranking 99th out of 111 teams in total offense.

This year it returns nine starters and nine new men in the middle of the pack. Walt Harris' squad ranks 63rd with a total offensive average of 356.6 yards a game which is better than Jim Colletto's unit, which averaged 356 yards a contest.

"I like their offense, they've got nine starters back," head coach Bob Davie said. "Walt Harris has done a good job. He was coordinator of Ohio State; they did a lot of similar things.

The Panthers are lead by senior signal caller Pete Gonzalez, who has improved from his dismal season of two years ago in which he completed just 43 percent of his passes.

Through five games Gonzalez is completing 61 percent of his passes for 174 yards a game and he can also hurt opponents with his scrambling ability. He is averaging over three yards a carry and just under three yards a pass per carry.

"I think Gonzalez is really a competitor," Davie noted. "He's a player that's been in the program for a long time."

Gonzalez' backfield mates form a very capable senior duo. Dwayne Schulters has given defenses fits, averaging over 136 all-purpose yards a game by not using his speed and quickness. West is there with his durability.

West has amassed over 2,500 yards in his career and will likely finish fourth in Pitt's record book, looking up at names such as Tony Dorsett and Craig Schulters.

"Ironhead" Heyward. "They've got two good tailbacks in Billy West and Schulters," Davie said. "Both of those guys are talented and they've got good athletes at tight end. They're a good offensive team."

Defensively the Irish are still beat up and are still at least a week away from the return of Hobbie Howard and Corey Bennett. Linebacker Ronnie Nicks is questionable as are defensive backs Ivory Covington and A'Jami Sanders.

So the best defense for Davie and Co. maybe a good offense as he hopes the defense can stay fresh with the help of its offensive counterparts.

"I think it's pretty obvious we must control the football," Davie explained. "We need to be able to keep our defense off the field. When our defense is fresh, they're able to hang in there and bend but don't break."

"When they get worn down as they have in the second half of the Michigan game and the Stanford game," Davie continued, "we collapse a little bit. But the Pitt that the Irish will be going up against and not Michigan State, Michigan and Stanford. It's Pitt and the Irish should never collapse before the Panthers."

— Joe Cavato

MATCH-UPS

Quarterbacks

Gonzalez has been a different player since Harris was hired, improving his completion percentage by 12 percent. Powlus has not been as effective on turf in his career.

Running Backs

Schulters and West form a potentially dangerous tandem for the Panthers. Injuries have hurt the Irish, and Driver will have to start to make some noise.

Receivers

Surprisingly, this unit has been one of the only positives for the offense. Murphy has been a playmaker for the Panthers and has a knack for finding the end zone.

Offensive Line

The Big Uglies need to rekindle the spark against Pittsburgh in which they averaged 321.7 rushing yards. This year Powlus has had time, but Denson has had no room.

Defensive Line

The injured and undermanned line for the Irish ranks 83rd in rushing defense. Pitt managed to hold Penn State to just 107 yards on the ground.

Linebackers

Coakley leads Pittsburgh's corps and has help from inside linebacker Phil Clarke. All things considered, the Irish unit has done fairly well, and we still have Kory Minor.

Secondary

A tough one to call. Both are simply awful. The Panthers get the nod by virtue of their seven picks.

Special Teams

Last year, ND's special teams ran wild in part of a 40-point quarter. Pittsburgh has not improved since last year's game against the Irish.

Coaching

Davie and Harris are both in their first seasons. Last year Pitt was 4-7, now they're 3-2, while Davie inherited an 8-3 team but is 1-4.

Overall

Pittsburgh has beaten three awful teams, and the Irish have lost to three good teams. The Panthers' loss to Temple makes it impossible to give them the edge.
Bryant steps it up

By BETSY BAKER
Associate Sports Editor

Tomorrow is Lamont Bryant’s 21st birthday. There could be no better present for the junior outside linebacker from his teammates than a much-needed victory from the struggling 1-4 Irish.

In fact, it is safe to say that he would settle for a couple of points from the Irish offense and let his defensive company do the rest.

That has been the story for the Irish defense this season thus far. Plagued by inexperience, lack of size, and injury, the defense has been one of the brighter spots in the rather dull season, stepping up its performance under less-than-ideal circumstances, and keeping the Irish in games that otherwise were out of grasp.

The 6-foot-3, 243-pound Bryant is one of the main reasons for this. Bryant and classmates fellow outside linebacker Kory Minor have been two of the key players who have resurrected an Irish defense that allowed 1,133 total offensive yards in its first three games into a stabilizing force against the toughest schedule in the nation.

"He brings the highest level of intensity and that's why he'll be a great player," Bryant said at the end of spring practice.

Bryant, whose intensity can also be seen on the field as he refused an interview citing the fact that he "doesn't mess with the media," had big shoes to fill when returned for fall camp this year. With the graduation of Kimo Tuma, Lyron Cobbins, and Bert Berry, the linebacker corps was one of the most depleted areas on the Irish squad. Bryant has been looked at to fill in the spot left vacant by Berry, who is now playing for the Indianapolis Colts.

The adversity he, along with the whole team, has encountered this season is nothing new to Bryant. On the way to pre-season camp his freshman year, Bryant was involved in a car accident that sidelined him with a season-ending injury. His resilience, in addition to his intensity, has added to the Irish defense's ability to rebound from its sluggish early performances this season into a legitimate threat to opposing offenses.

Bryant has brought the lessons he learned while sitting out a season to his play this year, and has allowed his level of play to springboard off a successful spring campaign into what he hopes will be a successful overall career with the Irish.

Still, Bryant knows that in order to do so, he must maintain the focus and intensity that has gotten him thus far — a task that is not very easy in the middle of a four-game losing streak.

"I feel like the only person that can beat me is myself," Bryant said at the end of spring practice. "The only way for that to happen is for me to go out there and stick to my playbook and do what I'm supposed to do."

With some further development, and maybe a little bit of birthday luck going into his 22nd year, Lamont Bryant will become of those great players.

Over the past couple of weeks, several members of Pitt's receiving corps have stepped up as legitimate targets. Against one of the best secondaries in the nation in Ann Arbor, Rocky Brown, Malcolm Johnson, and Reki Nelson all raised their level of play.

Last week, Brown and Johnson managed to break free and gain some yards after the catch, and they have now combined for 51 receptions, one less than the top tandem of receivers nationwide combined on the year.

They will certainly have the opportunity to continue this upward trend against Pitt, which gives up 238 yards a game in the air.

Forget the Gipper, ND needs one for the sake of it

Here we are. Mid-terms have come and gone quicker than expected. Some other things that have come upon us rather quickly, and they are the four losses by our football team.

Four, that's an awful lot of losses for early October isn't it? Although we feel simply awful about this four-game losing streak and we've had an earful from everyone we know that hates the Blue and Gold, there is no one that feels worse than Bob Davie, except maybe for Ron Powlus.

In Davie's first year as head coach, everything that could possibly go wrong has.

After apparently finding a game-breaker in Joey Cavato in Joey Getherall in the opener, he goes down for the next three games and is still not at 100 percent. Davie also lost his defensive leader in Bobbie Howard as well as many other key players.

An offensive unit that scored 30 points a game last year has been as effective getting into the end zone as Florida State is at keeping its boys out of jail and away from agents.

We haven't won a game since buying our books, and Davie is in a more dire need of a win than John MacLeod is in buying his fresh scoring threat to go with Pat Garrity.

When most of the Irish signed their letters of intent, they figured it would take at least a year and a half to make four starts, and that they would have to worry about where they would spend New Year's.

But even if Davie and Co. pull off a miracle and have one of the biggest upsets of the year, the Irish will be spending their second consecutive New Year's at home.

In all fairness to the squad, the schedule has been absolutely brutal. With this schedule, the team could be 2-3 and still be pretty darn good.

Michigan State has been called this year's Arizona State. Michigan is a top 10 team and is always talented. We knew that Stanford in Palo Alto was going to be a tough task. Now even our win over Georgia Tech, who is now in the top 25, looks like an upset.

However, that Purdue loss sticks out like a sore thumb, and the Irish got a couple of good, old-fashioned ass-kickings from Michigan State and Stanford. What the Spartans did to us looked like what we used to do to teams.

It was boring, but it won football games.

Things are looking up a bit though as the Irish are done with the most difficult part of the schedule. Those first five opponents are a combined 15-3, while the next opponents are 18-15.

So there is a glimmer of light at the end of the tunnel.

That glimmer is represented in the Pittsburgh Panthers. Pitt is much improved from last year when Notre Dame scored 40 points in the second quarter on its way to a 60-6 thrashing. That defense returns seven starters, but Davie probably wishes that all 11 of the defensive starters returned after watching his team score just 70 points all season.

The Panthers are 2-2 with its most impressive win coming over the Miami Hurricanes at home. But the Hurricanes, who looked like just another team that Florida State abused last weekend, have taken as big a slide as the Irish have since the days of Jimmy Johnson and Tony Rice.

This is the week for the Irish. It simply has to be.

The Panthers should run into a team that is hungrier than any other team that Pitt has faced this year. Davie and Co. will be fired up not because it is Davie and Powlus' return to Pennsylvania, but for the simple reason that they will be playing a team that they can beat.

This is the second team on the schedule that we should simply dominate—that old bigger, stronger, faster theory. But that theory should have been in effect in West Lafayette.

But this weekend the players are in desperate need of a win which Jim Colletto hopes that his offense will take advantage of playing Pitt.

If the team can show any of the character they showed in the first half in Ann Arbor, they should be able to dispose of the Panthers. It probably won't be a 60-6 annihilation, it may even be a barn burner, but regardless, it should be a win.

And at this point, a win is all that it would take to leave all those involved in the Notre Dame program more than content.
Big Ten showdown at Happy Valley

SEC battles highlight weekend

No. 7 Ohio State at No. 2 Penn State

The Buckeyes proved their strength with a character-building, road win over Iowa last Saturday. That should improve their confidence even more as they stroll into Happy Valley to face a team that they have beaten two years in a row, including a 38-7 trouncing last year. John Cooper is 3-1 versus Penn State.

The Nittany Lions will certainly be the more rested team, though. While Ohio State was battling with a gritty and talented Hawkeye squad last weekend, Joe Pa’s troops got a bit of breather in Champaign against the Illini. Curt ISue has crossed the goal line eight times in just four games for Penn State and quarterback Mike McQueary has already thrown for 1,609 yards and is the second-rated passer in the nation.

For the winner of this game, the only thing standing between them and the Rose Bowl is the state of Michigan. Trips to East Lansing and Ann Arbor remain on the slate for the Buckeyes, while Penn State will get the Wolverines at home, three weeks before closing the season at Michigan State.

No. 1 Florida at No. 14 LSU

With both SEC championship and national championship implications, this battle in the bayou is a critical contest for both teams. Obviously for Florida, a loss would severely damage their title hopes, while tossing them into the rabble. The LSU offense is a battle as well. If the Tigers can hold the Gators to less than 135 yards against Auburn last week.

This is the first stop on a treacherous three-week stretch for the Gators. They will travel to Auburn next Saturday before returning to the Swamp to take on Georgia
