Speak-out will address Garrick resignation

The debate about treatment of homosexuals at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's will enter a new chapter today at a speak-out protesting Father David Garrick's resignation and the factors he claims precipitated it.

"We're all very upset about this and we're trying to support him," said Alyssa Hellring, co-chair elect for Gays and Lesbians of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's College, which helped organize the speak-out.

"He comes to all our meetings and is very supportive. It's awesome to have a faculty voice in our group that's positive," she said. "We're upset, and we want to see what dialogue can come out of this."

The College Democrats, the Progressive Students' Alliance, GLND/SMC and the Women's Resource Center coordinated the event, which takes place from 4 to 6 p.m. at Fieldhouse Mall. The coordinators expect 300 students to attend the speak-out, and hopeful faculty members will join them and Garrick at the podium.

For the organizers, Garrick's announcement provided a catalyst for public discussion of several gay and lesbian issues in the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's community, according to a press release from the students organizing the speak-out.

Participants will also protest Notre Dame's refusal to add sexual orientation to the legal non-discrimination clause, the administration's refusal in 1993 to officially recognize the Student Environmental Action Coalition as a registered student group and the fact that Associated Students (the student governing body) was not even informed of the resignation.

The event is being held in conjunction with a movie called "FILMS/" which will screen in the Snite Museum last weekend to educate about the Holocaust. The screening is sponsored by the Notre Dame Holocaust Project, and is presented in conjunction with "It's a Wonderful Life." The movie will be followed by a discussion of the Holocaust.

The movie is being shown to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the Holocaust Survivors Assn. at Notre Dame. The event is open to the public, and admission is free.

"It's an opportunity for the university community to see what dialogue can come out of this," said Shawn Bruz, a senior from Kewaugh Hall.

"It seems like something could have been done before, but now the damage [purchasing poly styrene] has been done. In the future, the university should think about the environment more than what fits into the budget."

A main point of the rally was to encourage Notre Dame to consider environmental factors over the next time they make such a widespread decision, according to Chris Wilmes, the president of the Students for Environmental Action.

"Basically, we want to show that there are students who are willing to pay more money if it means that [the University] would be making an environmentally sound decision," Wilmes said.

Some students encouraged SDH diners to make the trek to North Dining Hall, where reusable china, silverware and trays are used.

"Bring your own plates, go to North, do whatever you can," said Sheila McCarthy, a freshman from Pasquerrilla West. Many of the speakers encouraged students to see what the dialogue can come out of this."
I am glad that I live on North Quad. Last week, before I attended classes, I decided to eat breakfast at South Dining Hall, since I was in the mood and didn’t feel like walking all the way back to NIH. I had eaten there several times last year and had enjoyed the change from the Eating Hall.

While North offers one a choice of several different menus to mix and match and a food selection ranging from Italian to Mexican, South has all the options in one room and isn’t as diverse as its counterpart. South Dining Hall also has a more traditional feel to it, with its high ceilings, raised seating area, and more archeaic make it resemble a traditional English setting. I have heard about the changes that were being made to SDH due to the addition of students to Notre Dame’s new Golf Quad, but I never expected what I ran into last week.

I entered the dining hall, it had a sort of gloomy feel to it, caused by the relative darkness that had invaded the building. Next I looked to gather my utensils and tray. The silver that I had come accustomed to at NIH was replaced by plastic, deformed utensils that were fit for a child. The tray and plate were both made of every ecolol­ogist’s nightmare material — Styrofoam.

I then went to decide on my food preferences, which, as I write these five hours of classes that lay before me. The food trays were bare of all meat and dairy items, but the food inside looked like it had been cooked a week ago. I have grown used to eating the meat that has remained in my tray, but this was ridiculous. Not only was the food that I had expected to eat also cold. The only things that could be considered edible were the cereal and the bagels.

I realize that sacrifices needed to be made by the students so that the SDH could be reopened by next fall, but that their hard earned money was not being used wisely. The school was selflessly saving money in this manner? They probably could care less and would just raise the tuition another $50.

If our administration is so concerned about running the school on money, then why not use that money to do something about the thousands of puddles that form on the sidewalks each time it rains here? Almost every student here in some way or another gives $25,000 to Notre Dame, and it is only fair that the university give us the advantage of the student.

Father Edward Malloy and the staff of the show their concern on pleasing the students so that we don’t come back from the summer complaining to our roommates about another one of the many small problems that have been overlooked by the University. I am sure that frequent visitors of South Dining Hall: If you are willing to take the walk over to North come on by and taste the food you normally eat at SDH but wait probably a few days fresher.

[Gas Brodie] (Sports, Win) TUCSON, Ariz. University of Arizona officials released student and employee Social Security numbers to two companies in their zeal to set up the new CatCard system — a move that may have violated federal law.

University attorney Michael Proctor said UA is "not making exceptions" for providing the data to Saguaro Credit Union and MCI Telecommunications Corp., and said it is likely the University violated state and federal law by releasing the information. "More likely it is a violation than it is not a violation," Proctor said. "My sense is that it probably is a violation."

Trence Bressi, a Lunar and Planetary Lab engineer, and physics senior Andrew Tubbioso began looking into the matter after they called MCI regarding the calling card features of the new CatCards and were told to verify their Social Security numbers.

Bressi said in a message distributed to some UA e-mail listers Wednesday, "Since I don't do business with MCI and I didn't release my SSN, I asked how she got the information and she replied it was released by the uni­versity." Bressi's e-mail stated, "Damage control hit a fever pitch Thursday when UA officials promised to retrieve the information. MCI is expected to delete Social Security numbers from their system today, and negotiations are underway with Saguaro Credit Union, Proctor said."

"Right now, I'm trying to stop the bleeding," he said, adding that he has not yet determined exactly how the information was released or if the release was legal. "But basically, I think we blew it," Proctor said.

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) requires that schools from releasing "personally identifiable information" without students' permission. Proctor said UA had informed in releasing the information probably believed it was legal to release Social Security numbers to service providers.

"Clearly, releasing the records violat­ed the spirit of the law," said Jruster­n lecturer Jim Mitchell, who holds a law degree. "Someone in the university would have to be monumentally stupid to release records for commercial pur­poses."

First-year physics graduate student Ryan Hooper and Michael McLaughlin will oppose Graham and Fowlie in their bid to lead the GSU. The two have no experience on the Graduate Student Council, but Hooper, the presidential candidate, does not see this as an impediment to success.

"There have been a few things (with the current GSU) for which the presentation has been poor," Hooper said. "There have been problems sometimes with getting the word out and that people didn't know what's going on.

"I think that it will be good to get people who have a different, a drastically different, viewpoint than the rest of the council," he continued. "In that way I think that it is actually an advantage for us."

Hooper labeled social activi- ties and graduate student health insurance as the main concerns of his campaign. "One of the biggest issues is the social life," he said. "We have enough information on our lives, that we need to have chances to relax and to meet more fellow graduate students.

He added that he believes that the University has to offer gradu- ate students a wider range of options in the area of health care.

Meta-analysis expert to speak on Thursday

Special to The Observer

Donald Lehmann, the George E. Warren Professor of Business at Columbia University, will deliver a lecture at 3:30 p.m. Thursday in the College of Business Administration.

Titled "The Futures of Marketing," the talk is part of the college’s O'Brien-Smith Visiting Scholars Program. It is free and open to the public.

Trained as a quantitative researcher at Purdue University, Lehmann joined the Columbia faculty in 1969 and was appointed to the Warren chair in 1985. His early work examined attitude theory and similarity judgment, as well as the methodology of test marketing, question and scale design, halo effects, ad measurement and segmentation. More recently, he has studied meta-analysis — the goal of accumulating knowledge — and he has helped pioneer and encourage the study of managerial decision-making.

Lehmann is the author or coauthor of six books and has written more than three dozen journal articles.

"Many of us grew up knowing or not knowing hard information about the Holocaust. But none of us could give shape to it," she said.

"Film gave us a shape. You had to go through the depression and emotions to start to learn about it." Angelico also pointed out that, as the last generation of Holocaust survivors continues to age, the possibility for firsthand contact with these people is limited. She explained that videotaped testimony will soon be the only link to the survivors and their stories.

"In a way, all of the next generations are in the same boat. All of the survivors are dying and all of us will be learning about it secondhand," she said.

As for the lessons of the Holocaust, especially the fact that such a complex experience cannot be summed up in a neat list of lessons. "There isn’t a ‘message’ I can give you. It’s much more important to think about the complexity than to reduce it to a single take-home message," said Professor Marica Landy from the University of Pittsburgh.

Angelico agreed with this philosophy. "We have always have to keep in mind that we’ll never really understand it, but we need to learn as much as possible," she said.

"There are facts that need to be known and known well. You can’t approach the Holocaust or Holocaust films without bringing your whole soul to it.

The arts and film are especially useful in helping you feel what happened, to experience in some way what the people in the Holocaust experienced. It has to touch all those aspects of what a human being is trying to learn from this," Angelico explained.

Although film has distinct benefits in Holocaust education, there are disadvantages to it as well. Angelico spoke of a broadcast on the Holocaust that ran in the United States in 1979, then ran a few months later in Germany. The Holocaust was not taught in German schools or even discussed in German homes at that time, according to Angelico.

"I think the risks and the advantages are all wrapped up together," she said. "It was one of those breakthrough broadcasts because it reached a lot of people who never would have gone to the cinema. It maybe trivialized things in some way, but it reached so many people.

"In Germany at that time, no one talked about it [the Holocaust]. It was a big silence, so the reaction to that was enormous. It was very emotional." Landy also addressed the possible disadvantages to using film in education, or even in the general public to deal with historical issues like the Holocaust. She is concerned about Hollywood judging a movie’s popularity solely on ticket sales and not on audience reaction.

"How do we understand what the popular mode is? Maybe the popular is really unpopular. Maybe we just don’t know audiences well enough," she said.

The Holocaust Project’s spring events continue on April 19 with the Holocaust Memorial Chamber Music Festival at the opening of the Jeffrey Wolin Art Exhibit at the Snite.

Yeltsin dismisses entire Cabinet

Associated Press

Moscow

President Boris Yeltsin picked a little-known reformer as acting prime minister Monday after firing his entire Cabinet without warning. He promised that Russia's biggest government shakeup since the Soviet Union dissolved would not derail democratic and free-market reforms.

Yeltsin shocked many Russians when he dismissed the Cabinet, including his adult and loyal aide, Viktor Chernomyrdin. Few had ever heard of the man named Chernomyrdin's acting replacement, Sergei Kirienko.

Despite the shakeup, leader from Yeltsin said Russia was not seeing on the verge of a political crisis.

"There is no governmental crisis in the country," Chernomyrdin said after losing the job he had held since 1992. "This is a natural and routine process of renewing power. One thing is for sure: The course of reforms in Russia is irreversible."

Most Cabinet members were ordered to stick around -- temporarily and many, including Foreign Minister Yevgeny Primakov, were expected to keep their posts.

In Washington, State Department spokesman James Foley said Secretary of State Madeleine Albright will discuss implications of the changes with Primakov during a previously arranged meeting Tuesday in Bonn, Germany.

President Clinton, traveling in Africa, said Yeltsin's action is not likely to harm the partnership he has been trying to build with Moscow.

One symbol of U.S.-Russian cooperation has been Vice President Al Gore's frequent meetings with Chernomyrdin. Their last meeting, just 10 days ago, produced a flurry of accords and good will.

Yeltsin said he needed a fresh government to reenergize economic reforms, which he said were moving too slowly, jeopardizing the future of democracy in Russia.

"I believe that recently the government has been lacking dynamism and initiative, new ideas and fresh approaches and ideas. And without this, a powerful breakthrough in the economy is impossible," he said, speaking slowly and calmly in a nationwide television broadcast.

The Russian economy actually has begun to show signs of growth after years of decline. But as Yeltsin acknowledged, it has been too little, too late for many people.

Yeltsin fires deputies frequently, and is known for a strategy of shifting blame to others for perceived failures of his government. But Chernomyrdin had survived so long that many considered him untouchable. "It came as a total surprise," said Gennady Seyfzade, the speaker of the State Duma, the opposition-controlled lower house of Parliament.

Justice refuse to revive abortion law

Associated Press

Washington

The Supreme Court is unlikely to reverse last November's abortion decision that was based on one not least among several later in the 1995 Ohio law on abortion.

A 5-4 vote, the court held that Ohio's law on abortion, which was struck down by the Supreme Court in 1995, was constitutional.

The Supreme Court decision Tuesday was a reversal of a lower court's decision that had struck down the Ohio law.

A few weeks after the Supreme Court's decision, a federal judge in Cincinnati ruled that the Ohio law was unconstitutional.

Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, who dissented, wrote in her opinion that the court's decision was a "misleading misreading of the Constitution."
Three students from the Notre Dame MBA program did not go to bed last night.

Mark Byrcaft, Mark Lawrence and Brandon Selius most likely spent all of yesterday and last night in a room in the College of Business Administration preparing for the 16th annual MBA Invitational Case Competition.

Representatives of Brigham Young University, Duke University, University of Maryland, the College of Business Administration and Notre Dame will prepare a case in corporate strategy, for a panel of business leaders and a distinguished professor of management.

Yesterday at 8 a.m., each team was given a company profile of Southwest Airlines. They have until 10 a.m. today to compile a presentation and analysis of the airline from a business standpoint.

At this point, the first team will give a 20 minute presentation followed by a rigorous question period by the judges.

Paul Conway, a finance professor who started the program in 1982 and continues to organize it annually, emphasized that the students need to understand and utilize all facets of business in order to succeed in the competition and in business in general.

"This competition deals with various problems that they would encounter, for example, for one they must decide whether to form a merger. They will apply what they’ve used in all of their training. Marketing, financial, management, ethics, all of the facets of business will be used."

Conway said.

All of the students of the requisite MBA class Corporate Strategy and Plan are required to submit a written case analysis. From those entries, five teams of four students each were chosen for an internal Notre Dame case competition.

These five teams squared off on Feb. 24. The winning team was asked to select three members to continue to the Invitational Case Competition. The head judge this year is Michael Hitt from the department of Business Administration at Texas A&M University. Hitt also serves as president of the American Management Association. The business judges are: Paresh Chari, director of international business at Jordan Industries; Matthew Gray, vice president of Keybank National Association; Betsy Joseph, engagement manager at McKinsey & Company, Inc.; and Rick Lutcherbach, chairman and emeritus director of the Leap Group, Inc.

The competition is sponsored by Fannie Mae Corporation. Competition finals will take place in Jordan Auditorium at COBA today from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The event is open to the public.

MBA Case Competition Objectives
- Provide integrated forum for MBA experience
- Provide meaningful, inter-university competition and learning experience
- Encourage use of analytical and communication skills
- Foster and develop relations between MBA programs of different universities

SMC tuition may increase

An increase in tuition at Saint Mary’s College has been proposed for the 1998-99 academic year.

Although the final decision has yet to be made, this proposed call for a five percent increase in the present tuition.

The Board of Trustees will come to a final decision this next month, according to Dan Ousber, vice-president for fiscal affairs.

"We are looking toward an increase in the tuition," Ousber stated.

The many additional changes in the technological systems at Saint Mary’s, is one reason for the proposed increase.

"Developing electrical systems so each classroom can be linked with the Internet has been one of the most significant reasons for this change of pace at Saint Mary’s College," Ousber stated.

"Our goal is to have each of the classroom-rooms connected to the Internet," he continued.

Indiana DNR to conserve forests

Plan will target privately owned land

By JANEL KILEY
News Writer

The Indiana Department of Natural Resources recently announced its plans to initiate a forest conservation program, specifically targeting areas owned by private landowners.

"The Forest Legacy Program helps landowners, units of local government, and private trusts identify and protect our environmentally important forests, so they aren't turned into a parking lot," Larry Macklin, Director of Natural Resources, said.

"The program will replace the development rights from sellers interested in conserving their forest property. The DNR holds the development rights in perpetuity.

"In this way, the Department hopes to protect the value of forests, an invaluable natural resource. "They help conserve energy in urban areas, provide recreation opportunities for our growing population, and their aesthetic beauty enriches our lives," Macklin stated.

State Forester Burrcll Fischer said the DNR will implement the program in one of the seven areas applying for a Forest Legacy status. They will select the site where they believe resource values and the threat of development are greatest.

After meeting the eligibility criteria, to enter the program, landowners can "protect their trees rather than have the property converted to non-forested use," according to Fischer.

Titanic dominates Oscars

Associated Press

"Titanic" won nine awards and set a record by tying 11 Oscars on Monday, while Jack Nicholson and Helen Hunt won acting honors for "As Good As It Gets." The $200 million disaster epic and all-time box office champion still had two nominations to go in the 70th Academy Awards show. But it lost a chance to win the Oscar"s short film and Helen Hunt beat Kate Winslet. Kim Basinger took supporting actress for "L.A. Confidential" over Glori Stuart, and "Men in Black" claimed the makeup prize.

Nicholson joined an elite group of only four or more Oscars, winning for his role as the anti-social "One Flew Over the Cuckoos Nest" in "L.A. Confidential," "Ben-Hur," "Terms of Endearment" and "As Good As It Gets."

Hunt won the best actress award for her role in "As Good As It Gets." And that's Jim Brooks, one single reason, and that's the only reason really," Hunt said, citing the director of "As Good As It Gets," who wasn't nominated for an Oscar. Robin Williams won the supporting actor award as the heart-warming psychology professor who counsels a troubled young genius in "Good Will Hunting." "Ah, man, this might be the one time I'm speechless," said Williams, known for his stream-of-consciousness humor. He then managed to thank many, many people, including his young co-stars Matt Damon and Ben Affleck, quipping: "I still want to see some ID."

Affleck and Damon won the best original screenplay Oscar, and Brian Helgeland and Curtis Hanson won the adapted screenplay award for "L.A. Confidential." Basinger, the Veronica Lake look-alike/call girl in "As Good As It Gets," won for cinematography, art direction, film editing, costume design, sound, sound editing, original dramatic score, visual effects and song. "Ben-Hur" keeps the record for most Oscars, having won 11 in 1959. "Titanic"-s 14 nominations tied the record set by 1959's "All About Eve." The three-hour, 14-minute romance set on the doomed luxury liner has already smashed box office records, overtaking "Jurassic Park" as "L.A. Confidential," beat out movie history (justified for inflation), with more than $1.1 billion. It has also been No. 1 at the U.S. box office since its debut four weekends in a row. "Titanic" director James Cameron shared in the film editing Oscar.

"Honey, this is that thing I described to you," he said, addressing his 5-year-old daughter. "It's called an Oscar and it's really cool to get." The other contenders for best picture were: "L.A. Confidential," "As Good As It Gets," "Good Will Hunting," "The FullMonty" and "Terms of Endearment.

Helen Hunt receives her Best Actress Award for her role in "As Good As It Gets." Right up to here," he said, about 2 hours, 45 minutes into the show. Hunt, the only American competing against four British actresses in her category, won for playing a working mother who reaches Williams's hard heart.

"I'm here for one reason only," Basinger said, thanking the Shrine Auditorium audience. "Titanic," which was scheduled for the end of the night with a record-tying 14 nominations, "won for cinematography, art direction, film editing, costume design, sound, sound editing, original dramatic score, visual effects and song.

Handing down sentences ranging from three years to death, and found two others innocent.

The case arose from the May 1994 rebellion when southern Yemenis, led by Ali Beidh, tried to break the 1994 agreement that had united the formerly Marxist-ruled South Yemen with the conservative, tribal-based North Yemen.

After the short war, President Ali Abdullah Saleh proclaimed an amnesty for the rebels, but excluded those convicted Monday who were regarded as leaders of the insurrection. They now live in Saudi Arabia, Britain, Oman, Britain and Egypt.

Nichols pleads for reduced sentence

"I'm honored to be on any list with you, Bobby, Dusty, and you and your father Mr. Damon, and my old bike pal, Forest," Nicholson said, making the unassuming joke of the night about fellow nominee Matt Damon and alluding to his long-ago co-starring role in "Out of Africa.

Nicholson joked about suffering from doubt about whether he would win. "I had a sinking feeling all night, any buildings or property any where at anytime."

"The Daily Oklahoman and Tulsa World reported on the filing.

Nichols, 42, was convicted Dec. 23 of conspiracy and eight counts of inveiglement manslaughter in the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, which resulted in 168 deaths. He was acquitted of murder and weapons-related charges.

The jury deadlocked on whether death was the appropriate penalty. That leaves Nichols' sentence to Matsu. Nichols returns to court Wednesday for a hearing to decide what guidelines Matsu will use in determining the sentence.

Scared Mafia turncoat postpones testimony

Associated Press

Two days after his brother was killed in Sicily in a clan vendetta, a leading Mafia turncoat refused to show up in court Monday to testify in another case. Baldassare Di Maggio sent a fax to Palermo prosecutors saying he didn’t feel safe, Italian news services reported. His lawyer, Ennio Tinaglia, was quoted as saying that Di Maggio would eventually resume testifying.

On Saturday, his brother, Emanuele Di Maggio, 52, was pumped full of bullets while going down a country road outside Palermo, the latest realm of the turncoat to be slain in apparent revenge by rival clans.

Police arrest driver for being impaired

Associated Press

LAKE MEAD NATIONAL RECREATION AREA, Ariz.

A speedboat going at least 50 mph slammed into the shore early Monday on Lake Mead in far northwestern Arizona, killing four people and seriously injuring three others, authorities said.

A man operating the boat hours before the accident was arrested and removed for boating while impaired, but authorities said they hadn’t determined whether alcohol was a factor in the crash. The boat had just been sold to another man, who was trying it out Sunday, one official said. The accident occurred about six miles north of Hoover Dam on the Arizona side of the lake, which stretches for 110 miles along the Arizona-Nevada line.

The 47-foot boat was going between 50 mph and 60 mph when it ran aground about midnight, said Steve Johnson a spokesman for the Mohave County Sheriff’s Office. It wasn’t found until late Monday morning.

All of those aboard the boat were from Las Vegas, Johnson said. No names were released as of Monday evening.

Two women and two men were killed, according to Karen Whitney, a National Park Service spokeswoman in Boulder City, Nev. Three men were in serious condition at University Medical Center, a hospital spokeswoman said.

A man driving the boat was arrested Sunday afternoon and booked for boating while impaired after the boat hit another vehicle leaving a marina, said David Pfliffner, a supervising game warden for the Nevada Division of Wildlife.

Pfliffner, who made the arrest, said the man worked for Elite Marine, a Las Vegas company that had just sold the boat and was taking the new owner for a test run.

Pfliffner said he didn’t know the name of the man, whom he turned over to Clark County authorities. He said that man wasn’t aboard the boat when it crashed.

Lake Mead, which is formed on the Colorado River by mammoth Hoover Dam, is a magnet for recreational boaters. It is 110 miles long and covers 550 square miles — twice the size of Rhode Island.

New drug could cure cancer

Associated Press

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif.

Hard-to-treat cancerous tumors have proved vulnerable to a treatment that encases a drug in a syrupy mixture to keep the medicine working instead of leaking it away.

The technique also requires far smaller doses than patients usually need, so it avoids side effects like nausea.

So far the strategy has been used mostly with tumors in the mouth and throat, but it might also work against cancers in the liver and recurrences of breast cancer, said Dr. Harinder Garewal of the Arizona Cancer Center in Tucson.

Anti-cancer drugs are normally injected into the bloodstream. But that means they circulate through the body and affect normal tissue, so doctors have to limit doses to hold down side effects.

The problem with injecting such drugs directly into a tumor instead is that they are rapidly washed away by blood circulation. Scientists have studied getting around that problem in a number of ways. For example, a surgically implanted wafer that slowly leaks a drug is used to treat some brain cancers.

Garewal described another solution Monday at a conference sponsored by the American Cancer Society. He and colleagues treated patients with a mix of the standard drug cisplatin, the blood-vessel constrictor epinephrine, and a syrupy liquid that gets about as thick as honey when it reaches body temperature.

The idea is that when this mixture is injected into a tumor, the epinephrine restricts blood flow out of the tumor and the honey-like gel holds onto the cisplatin.

Clinton begins African trip

ACRA, Ghana

Buoyed by the biggest crowd of his presidency, President Clinton hailed "the new face of Africa" and its growing peace, prosperity and democracy as he opened a historic six-nation tour on Monday.

While poverty and war still trouble parts of the continent, Clinton said Americans must shake off "the stereotypes that have warped our view and weakened our understanding of Africa."

Dictatorships have fallen in many countries, Clinton said, and half of the 48 nations of sub-Saharan Africa now have elected governments. Where business was once stifled, "now Africans are embracing economic reform," the president said on a mission to applaud one of the six countries on his trip.

Winning easily both times, Clinton hailed "the new face of Africa" noted Spokesman Mike McCurry said Clinton was worried about the people in front being squeezed.

"The president said that Ghana is a journey long overdue," said McCurry. "It's a journey that he's committed to freedom and justice."

Britain's air and sea ports have been put on alert to the threat of deadly anthrax being smuggled into the country by Iraq, the prime minister's office said Monday.

The all-ports warning follows a threat by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to flood Britain with the toxin disguised inside "duty free" bottles of alcohol, cosmetics, cigarette lighters and perfume sprays, according to a report Tuesday in The Sun, a tabloid newspaper.

The alert was issued March 18, the same day a British intelligence document revealed an Iraqi plot to smuggle large quantities of anthrax into "hostile countries," the Sun said.

Prime Minister Tony Blair's office confirmed that the document on which The Sun's story is based is authentic.

"Obviously that has to be taken seriously, but we do not believe there is cause for alarm," she said.

The U.S. State Department had no comment late Monday on whether America was also a target.

Anthrax is a deadly bacteria that normally afflicts animals, but the organism can be used as a weapon by releasing spores into the air.

Earlier this year, the United States and Britain had threatened military strikes against Iraq over Baghdad's refusal to allow inspectors to examine suspected weapons sites, including chemical weapons facilities.

U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan last month negotiated an all-ports warning, but said on customary condition of the alert.

Discovery of Moon Water Raises Not-Serious Questions

SOUTH BEND (Associated Press) — A South Bend newspaper's recent article concerning water on the moon has sparked a nationwide debate.

Earlier this month, scientists announced that an American spacecraft had found relatively large amounts of frozen water on the moon. In a reaction story, the newspaper asked local residents for their thoughts on the discovery.

"Everybody's real excited about the water," responded one man who wished to remain anonymous. "I can't wait to eat some moon fish."

The man, dubbed John O'Boy by the media, and his statement lie at the center of what has become the latest scandal to tarnish the Clinton presidency.

In a brief but forceful statement, the president yesterday denied any role in any moon-fish cover-up. "I never told anybody to lie, not a single time, never. These allegations are false, and I need to go back to work for the American people. Thank you."

But the president's denial has not satisfied opponents, who are demanding that the Attorney General appoint a special prosecutor to investigate the moon-fish scandal.

"The American people are going to rise in revolt when our fishermen lose their jobs because we're getting all of our fish from the moon," said Pat Buchanan.

Some Republicans in the Senate have yet to announce their position on the issue. Yesterday, debate on important health-care legislation was suspended as senators and their legislative aides flipped through Bibles, looking for any reference to moon fish.

The controversy surrounding the discovery of water on the moon has caught the academic community by surprise. "Usually, what we do is attach 'gate' to the scandal, and that's the name we give it," observed one professor. "If you add 'gate' to 'water,' you get Watergate, and that name's already taken."

At the Vatican, officials were asked for a statement regarding the moon-water scandal. "We should have something for you in fifty years," said a spokesman.

Meanwhile, People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, PETA, in a statement made by five nude supermodels, expressed concern about moon-fishing techniques. "We refuse to support moon fishing until the industry develops methods that are safe to moon-dolphins."

But there are those who say they can never support the industry. In a letter to students, the University of Notre Dame said, "We are called upon to love our moon-fish-eating brothers and sisters, we cannot condone such conduct."

All of the bad press has prompted moon-fish companies to hire a spokesperson. A thin-again Anna Nicole Smith appeared on weekend news programs promoting moon fish as part of a low-fat, balanced diet.

"What we're seeing here is the product of a vast, chicken-wings conspiracy," Smith said. "Poultry companies are afraid they'll lose business once the moon fish industry takes off."

As Smith spoke, a student named John Doe was seen talking on the phone. "I'm so glad that Disney is planning a full-length animated feature about the moon fish. Of course, in the movie, the moon fish will be moon mermaids. "We think the kids will learn a lot," said a Disney press release. But not if their parents are Southern Baptists. In Atlanta yesterday, a convention of Southern Baptists renewed their boycott against Disney, calling Disney's "moon-fish fixation" evil. On Wall Street, the value of Disney stock increased by 25 percent. This fall, NASA is sending a team of civilians, representing a cross-section of the public to form the first moon colony on the beaches of the moon ocean. The Notre Dame community has expressed its desire to make one of its own a space pioneer. Students have planned a "Send Jim Collett to the moon" rally for today.

Father David Garrick Should Still Be Here
A Call to Non-Discrimination

Last year, with a grass-roots effort that culminated in an April 21 rally at the Dome, Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students, alumni and faculty alike called for a change. We urged the administration of this school to address the policy that omits sexual orientation from DuLac's official non-discrimination clause. In our struggle last spring to bring the issue of non-discrimination to the forefront of this University's consciousness, we were often asked if we really believed that discrimination here went on at Notre Dame. It was hard for people to believe that anyone would break the as yet written "Spirit of Inclusion." With his protest-through-resignation, Father David Garrick has given the Notre Dame community a harsh reminder that any spirit can be broken.

I did not get enough chances to meet Father Garrick. On the handful of occasions that I did hear him speak, I was struck by the power and inspiration of his words. Father Garrick was a vocal contributor at the open forums and panel discussions that have brought the University of Notre Dame College Democrats last spring. He is a true champion of justice and I applaud his efforts and wish him the best of luck in the future. Notre Dame will truly miss him.

Father Garrick did leave the door open for his return, however, if the administration is willing to amend its policies. In his own words, "You never know where this story will end." Will the administration allow the open door in his face? Will it continue to turn its back on Catholic teaching by refusing to specifically enumerate human rights to all members of the Notre Dame community regardless of sexual orientation? These are the questions that must be asked of our administration. The "Spirit of Inclusion" letter was most definitely a step in the right direction, but this should not stop Father Garrick from making it all too clear that further steps must be taken. We know this is a sensitive issue and that there are serious questions that must be discussed. Is our University willing to continue to discern the concerns of its students and faculty? How many more individuals of the caliber of Father David Garrick will we have to lose until something is done? Assuredly, as an organization intensely concerned with human rights, the Notre Dame College Democrats will continue to further the issue of non-discrimination on this campus. I urge all students with similar concerns to do the same.

The Truth Will set us Free

As a Notre Dame alumna living in South Bend, I have had occasion to hear Father David Garrick preach. I found his message eloquent. It was presented beautifully. I am not more of his homilies, but I find it hard to believe that there would be many complaints. After all, he received a quality Notre Dame education (class of 1966). And as a Communication and Theatre professor, he is employed by this University to teach people the art of public expression. Isn't it a paradox, then, that a "poor preaching" charge would be brought against him? I just don't buy it.

It is more plausible to believe what Father Garrick says: that he was ostracized for being an openly gay priest.

I am appalled that Father Garrick would be forced from his ministry to such an extent that he felt resignation was his only option. However, I am suspicious of the "spin" that Dennis Moore, University Director of Public Relations, appears to be applying to the story. On behalf of the University, Moore elaborated that it was a contract clause which stifled Father Garrick. But Campus Ministry operates Sacred Heart — not the Congregation. What is Moore's reason for distancing Campus Ministry from Father Garrick's resignation in this matter? Could it have to do with the University's decision to adopt the unenforceable "Spirit of Inclusions" rather than to change the non-discrimination clause to include sexual orientation and legally protect people like Father Garrick?

The irony in it all is that the message which I heard from Father Garrick was that Jesus knew very well that power would be a sinful corrupting temptation within him, yet he offered himself to the world with biblical analogies how Christ set an example of servitude for his disciples. It strikes me that His example is not being followed here at Notre Dame.

The fact of Father Garrick's resignation and the implication that either Campus Ministry or the University is in the wrong is certainly not the end event for Notre Dame. In the name of decency, and as an alumna, I want to know the truth behind the resignation. Who gave the order that Father Garrick no longer be allowed to preach in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart? That individual should have the integrity to come forward with their evidence of "poor preaching."

Given Reason Doesn't Make Sense

This letter has to do with the resignation of Rev. David A. Garrick, C.S.C., from the University. It is often fairly simple to determine the truth or falsity of a given claim ask yourself whether it makes any sense. In this case, Fr. Garrick was told that he was officially removed from his priestly responsibilities on campus because of the poor quality of his homilies. Now ask yourself if that claim makes any sense. If it does, how many priests will be left on campus by the end of the semester? In this case, it is the United States:

Come clean, Campus Ministries! You are not obligated to retain any priests' ministerial functions, but if you are going to remove him, you are obligated to tell him the truth about why. Your first attempt did not fool anyone. The whole campus is watching and waiting for your second one.

A Friend and Confidant

Thursday's lead story about the resignation of Father David Garrick surprised me for two reasons. First of all, it was surprising to learn that Father Garrick, who was one of my professors here, was no longer teaching. I have never had problems with Father Garrick, and I know that this campus is really good. Well, administration of the University of Notre Dame, let me tell you some stories about the man who was driven out of a job by your ignorance.

Last semester, my life was a wreck. I had received a scholarship to come here, and it was the only way my parents could afford to send me to college. The terms of my scholarship, however, required that I maintain a 3.0 grade point average. I had been studying for a particular test for a week, and after I failed the test, my G.P.A. dropped down to 2.5. I was certain that my scholarship was gone. On top of that, I was miserable with my social life. I had just gone through an extremely painful rejection, I was having difficulties with my parents, and I was always mired in dirt. I was seriously considering transferring back to a state school and putting this entire university behind me.

And then Father Garrick talked to me. On the day of a particularly bad test, he noticed that I was visibly upset and he took me out of the hall after class and talked to me for over 30 minutes. He listened to me cry. He prayed with me. He gave me encouragement. He gave me suggestions. He gave me hope. He told me that if I did lose my scholarship, he would somehow find a way for me to still attend Notre Dame.

And so I stuck with it. And things got better. My social life is still nothing to brag about, but I've managed to bring my G.P.A. up to a 3.4, which will keep my scholarship, and I am definitely planning to attend Notre Dame next year. I think it is fairly safe to say that Father Garrick changed my life for the better.

Which makes me wonder why the University felt that Father Garrick was such a terrible professor. I could tell you some stories about the other professors I have had here. Some professors who do not care when nobody shows up for their classes, and professors who are perfectly happy to let their students fail. I could make a difference instead. But I doubt it would help. I could tell you that Father Garrick is quite possibly the best teacher I have ever had, but I don't think that would make a difference either. I don't think it is already too late. I think that the polly­ makers and paper-pushers of Notre Dame are just too closed-minded, immoral, and archaic to accept what every other Catholic college and university already realized — that homosexuality is only one part of a person's life, and it is not even close to the most important one.

It is ironic that the front page of the paper also contained an article questioning why Notre Dame is not one of the major Catholic campuses in the nation. I believe that the answer to this question can be found on the very same page.

VIEWPOINT
Farley Hall Players give a lesson in Greek mythology

By REBECCA N. MITSCH

The Farley Hall Players presented Euripides’ production of “Helen” last Friday and Saturday nights in the LaFortune Ballroom.

After holding University-wide auditions, the Farley Hall Players embarked on two months of rehearsal before their debut performance.

Directed by Jarice Woods, the production is an interpretation of Euripides’ classic, written around 412 B.C., during the Greek Golden Age. The play is a defense of Helen of Troy, whom history and many myths blame for the cause of the Trojan Wars.

Several stories and interpretations have been used to explain what actually happened to Helen. Euripides’ interpretation maintains that it is the work of the gods, namely Hera, that brought about a second Helen to take the place of the true Helen of Troy, who was to be exiled in Egypt. The story centers around Helen’s misfortunes and her ability to ultimately take control of her own destiny.

In an attempt to bring a Greek classic to life for a modern audience, the cast and crew were constantly learning about classical Greek society and the text they were using.

According to Joseph Joy (Menelaus), everyone was involved in “keeping up with Greek practices, society, and pronunciation.” He felt that this way, the portrayal of Greek tragedy would bring to life a beautiful language and culture that is “not just decorative, but useful.”

The anti-war message resounds throughout and is especially highlighted in the discourses of the chorus. According to Woods, the message to be conveyed is that the Trojan Wars “were fought because the people wanted to fight, not because of Helen or some great cause.”

The chorus, comprised of women slaves taken during battle, understand the true nature and tragedy that war has brought them. They lament their lost freedom caused by war and identify with the suffering Helen must bear because people believe her to be the cause of the Trojan Wars.

Woods says she attempted to portray strong women characters even though “in situations of war, people don’t really have the power to make all the choices affecting their lives.”

For Helen, the invocation of fate and fortune has created a situation which she apparently has no control over — being exiled in the land of Egypt and being forced into a marriage with Telecymenus (Quincy Gerard Starnes). Yet, despite the hand dealt her, Helen proves her strength of character and adds a feminist slant to the production. “Euripides liked strong women; not pathetic or pitiful ones,” said Kelly Steele (Helen).

When her true husband Menelaus is shipwrecked in Egypt, Helen comes to understand the truth of the situation, and she devises a scheme to ensure a safe escape. In an amusing comment Helen adds that she may devise a plan if “even a woman may utter words of wisdom.” Overall, the production was a beautiful rendition of a classic, although there was some difficulty in understanding dialogue.

“The portrayal of Helen was difficult to understand at times, which detracted from the overall presentation,” said Notre Dame student Sarah Doorley.

However, most audience impressions were favorable.

One viewer, Sarah Forge, responded that she enjoyed seeing the acting rather than just reading the classic, as is done in her Greek Classics in Translations class. She also commented that the simplicity of the set and costumes was well done and cited the chorus as a highlight of the drama. “[The chorus] was well portrayed and used an echoing technique that reinforced the emotion of the situation,” said Forge.

“The depiction of the gods was interesting, as well as their influence on the fate of characters,” added Doorley.

Doorley also found it striking that “individuals could overcome a seemingly hopeless situation, as in Helen’s captivity, and take control of their own fate.”

Panthers up streak to 13 wins

Associated Press

MIAMI -- Keith Primeau scored two goals as the Carolina Hurricanes beat the Florida Panthers 3-1 Sunday, extending the Panthers' losing streak to seven games.

Carolina, which had lost four of its last five games, moved into a tie with Philadelphia for the New York Rangers in the Eastern Conference. Both teams trail Ottawa by five points in the race for the conference's final playoff spot.

Florida, which also has a 15-game winless streak, moved within two points of the Islanders for the Atlantic Division lead.

Primeau also had two assists and Carolina goalie Eddie Jovanovski stopped 36 of 37 shots.

The Hurricanes took a 1-0 lead on Martin Gelinas' goal at 6:16 of the first period. Gelinas had a shot on net at the left side of the right rebound, then moved in and finished off his own rebound to beat John Vanbiesbrouck.

Carolina led 2-0 on Primeau's redirected goal at 15:30 of the first period. Primeau's goal resulted from a chance created by Gary Roberts from the right circle.

Florida pulled to 2-1 when Chris Chelios sliced the puck into the right roof of the net. However, the Panthers lost Dave Gagner and Jovanovski to penalties, setting up a 4-on-3 power-play play that Carolina seized upon with Primeau scoring from the slot.

The Atlanta Coast Conference basketball tournament is over, and now all of the spoils have been distributed.

The final item returned in the trenches belonged to the North Carolina Tar Heels, who were the jersey banner of former Duke player Grant Hill.

The banner, stolen Feb. 26 from the rollers of Cameron Indoor Stadium, was recovered from UNC-Chapel Hill student Katlynn White, 18, of Durham, N.C. Sunday and returned to Duke on Monday.

A man who returned the banner only as "John" called the campus police dispatcher around 2 a.m. Sunday from a central campus number. Police later found out from the UNCG Student Union, police Lt. Larry Caldwell said.

The Hill banner was part of a rash of basketball-related thefts from the UNC and Duke campuses this year.

A replica Michael Jordan jersey was stolen from the Smith Center on Jan. 31. A few days later, on Feb. 4, someone broke into Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski's office and stole six practice shorts and a Nike mesh "Atlantic Coast Conference" Team poster valued at $20,000.

Jordan's jersey and the poster have been recovered in recent weeks.

UNC students Benjamin Ihartemeier, 20, and Candice Merry, 19, along with student Charles Bailey, 22, of Kitterl, have been charged with felonious breaking and entering a vehicle and entering a vehicle in connection with the theft of the poster.

Ojdicke leaves Canucks, heads to New York

Associated Press

VANCOUVER (CP) - The Vancouver Canucks dealt left wing Gino Odjick, their all-time penalty minutes leader, to the New York Islanders for defensemen Jason Strudwick on Monday.

Odjick, who has compiled 2,027 minutes in penalties over eight seasons with Vancouver, had been the club's longest-standing player following last month's trade that sent Trevor Linden to the Florida Panthers.

"I don't think I will ever forget this part of my life," said Odjick. "I didn't think I would have to play another game in that jersey." Hill, who played four years at North Carolina, was dismissed from the team in 2001 after a videos were shown of him being involved in various incidents.

Odjick said his biggest challenge this season will be adjusting to the style of the Islanders defensemen, led by Mike Keenan.

"We're a pretty respectful group of people," Odjick said. "It's going to be a different style game for me, for sure. It's going to be a fun experience."
DAYTON, Ohio
North Carolina State pulled off its second straight upset, knocking Connecticut out of the NCAA tournament 60-52 Monday and advancing to the women's Final Four for the first time.

The Huskies, who had won all seven games since losing All-American Nykesha Sales to a ruptured Achilles' tendon late in the season, blew a 10-point second-half lead.

Chasity Melvin scored eight points of her 18 points during the 14-0 run that brought the Wolfpack (25-6) back into the game. The Huskies (34-3) took a 40-36 lead.

Connecticut tied the game twice after that run, but was clearly rattled. North Carolina State scored its last eight points on free throws, as the Huskies were forced to foul repeatedly.

Summer Erb and Jones each had 12, and Tyesha Lewis had 11 for North Carolina State.

Durant and Paige Sauer led Connecticut with 11 points each.

North Carolina State used its tenacious defense to stay close in the 1st half, holding Connecticut — which averaged 84 points a game this season — to a 28-23 halftime lead.

Erb was a major factor in neutralizing the Huskies' offense. She came off the bench five minutes into the game, and in less than three minutes had three points, four rebounds and had forced Connecticut's best rebounder, Paige Sauer, to the bench for the rest of the half with her second foul.

North Carolina State, making its ninth NCAA appearance, had never reached the final eight until knocking off No. 1 seeded Old Dominion 55-54 on Saturday.

It was the 10th straight NCAA tournament appearance for Connecticut, and the fifth consecutive regional final for the Huskies.

The loss ended Connecticut's tradition of winning on coach Geno Auriemma's birthday. The Huskies had previously won all three NCAA tournament games played on March 23.

The $247 million, 72,000-seat stadium is expected to be completed in time for the Browns' first game.

NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue also announced that the league hired Joe Mack as player personnel director of the Browns. Mack held that position with the Washington Redskins form 1989-94 and helped build the Carolina Panthers expansion team as assistant general manager in 1994.
PALO ALTO, Calif. — After a 56-year wait between trips to the Final Four, the rush is on at Stanford. Setting aside their shock and disbelief at Stanford’s season sweep over Rhode Island in Sunday’s Midwest Regional championship, scores of people turned out Monday to begin a lunatic quest for a ticket to the final and semifinal game this weekend in San Antonio.

Stanford’s 97-77 and advance to Saturday’s meeting against Kentucky, which needed a stirring comeback of its own to beat Duke Monday to get on the bandwagon for the championship. "It was just a phenomenal game and the Final Four is something very special. This is going to be in the record books," said Matt Etheridge, a financial analyst from Palo Alto, Calif. "I mean, they’re just going to go down on the field, because they were just on fire."

The players had Monday off and were asked about the worst game they have had in the last 10 minutes. "I felt like being unfazed in that way, but had a feeling there was going to be a game we were going to lose," Etheridge said. "I’m not going to say this is the game, but we are going to go down on the field, because they were just on fire."

The fans in the stands and even players down on the bench because they were looking up at us trying to figure out what was happening and we were giving us a blast. "Somebody was even more involved in the basketball game than the basketball game," Etheridge said.

Many students were away on spring break and there were few tangible signs around campus indicating the school was in the Final Four. But the athletic department and its office were inundated. Stanford received an allotment of 3,500 tickets to the Final Four and for now, students, alumni, season-ticket holders and boosters were being given priority to purchase them.

"The phones have been non-stop since we opened this morning. Business is very strong and it’s very exciting," said assistant athletic director Bob Carruesco. "It was just a phenomenal game and the Final Four is something very special. This is kind of unchartered ground for us, so you just go through it and enjoy it as you go along."

While Stanford’s women’s team has six Final Four trips and two national titles in the 1990s, the men’s team earned a 47- year SEC tournament drought after winning the title in 1942. "Somebody would have thought you’re a lunatic if you said five years ago that Stanford would be in the Final Four," Etheridge said.

Etheridge said the championship push by the men’s team helped ease the sting of the Stanford women’s first-round ouster by Harvard, which became the first No. 16 seed to beat a No. 1 seed when it eliminated the Cardinal. "I guess that’s the counterpoint to all this," Etheridge said.

"Losing in the first round was pretty tough for them," Etheridge said.

The men’s team and coach Mike Montgomery arrived home late Sunday to a boisterous welcome from some 200 people gathered outside Maples Pavilion, the school’s basketball home. The players joined other students in taking the day off Monday to resuming preparations Tuesday for their meet with Kentucky. The team is scheduled to leave for San Antonio on Wednesday.

LEXINGTON, Ky. — The astonishing comeback against Duke was nothing. The hard part now comes for Kentucky basketball tickets. The Kentucky travel agencies that had already sold out by the end of the day.

Pippen leads scoring in dunking of Celtics

Associated Press

CHICAGO

Scottie Pippen scored 27 points, including 14 on soaring, forceful dunks, as the Chicago Bulls defeated the Boston Celtics 111-88 Monday night for their sixth consecutive victory.

Michael Jordan added 24 points and Dennis Rodman had 14 rebounds to go with a season-high 12 points for the Bulls, who have won 14 of their last 15 games against the Celtics.

Antoine Walker scored 26 points, but Boston still lost for the seventh time in eight games. The Celtics, who lead the NBA in turnovers forced, hurt themselves with 22 giveaways, which the Bulls converted to 34 points.

While Chicago (52-17) has built on the NBA's best record, Boston (30-38) fell live games out of the final Eastern Conference playoff spot.

Pippen grabbed 11 boards, as the Bulls outrebounded Boston 46-27, and had six assists in one of his best all-around games of the season.

After offseason foot surgery forced him to miss the first 35 games, Pippen has helped the Bulls go 28-6.

When he first returned, he was reluctant to go inside. But he has been driving to the basket with reckless abandon in recent weeks and was looking to dunk whenever possible Monday.

During one four-possession stretch of the second quarter, Pippen had three jams.

Rodman, whose previous season-high was 11 points, had only one fewer than that in the first quarter as Chicago led most of the way.

Toni Kukoc had 17 points and 10 assists for the Bulls, who shot 54 percent.

The Bulls are 8-0 against the Celtics at the United Center. Boston's last win at Chicago was on April 22, 1994—the next-to-last regular-season game at the old Chicago Stadium.

Iverson close to bankrupt in points against Pistons

PHILADELPHIA

Allen Iverson was held to a career-low four points Monday night as the Detroit Pistons, behind 20 points from Joe Dumars, defeated the Philadelphia 76ers 94-79.

Iverson shot just 2-for-14 for the Sixers, who came back from three 16-point deficits but could never quite catch the Pistons.

Grant Hill had 17 points and 11 rebounds, while Brian Williams had 14 points and 13 rebounds as Detroit won its third in a row.

Derrick Coleman, activated Monday night after missing eight games because of a sprained ankle, led Philadelphia with 25 points and 13 rebounds.

Joe Smith, back after missing three games with an abdominal strain, had 10 points and five rebounds in 23 minutes.

The 76ers, who lost their third straight, made just 35 percent of their shots (26-for-74).

Detroit was outscored 27-18 in the third quarter, but a three-point play by Jerry Stackhouse gave the Pistons a 79-66 lead with 7:31 remaining in the fourth.

The Pistons outrebounded Philadelphia 16-5 in the first period and 26-18 in the opening half.

Rose scolded for communicating with Reds

Associated Press

SARASOTA, Fla. — Pete Rose’s little talk to Cincinnati Reds minor leaguers this month resulted in a reprimand, not a fine.

NL president Len Coleman, acting on the behalf of acting commissioner Bud Selig, told the Reds of the decision Monday.

The Reds had admitted that a minor league coordinator invited Rose to address the players March 11. Under the lifetime ban Rose agreed to in 1989 for gambling, baseball’s career hits leader is not permitted to do anything affiliated with any professional team.

Reds managing executive John Allen admitted the club was in error, took the blame and called it an honest mistake. The Reds sent a written report soon after the violation.

“We made it very clear what happened and I told them ultimately it was my fault,” Allen said.

Selig spokesman Rich Levin said baseball accepted the club’s explanation.

Rose is permitted to watch players work out, just like any fan. He wanted to see his son, Pete Jr., who is in the minor-league system.

Donnie Scott, the coordinator who invited Rose to talk to the players, was unaware it violated the ban.

The matter could damage Rose’s attempt to get back into baseball.

He has applied for reinstatement, but baseball’s executive council has not considered the application, which would...
Deaf player looks to earn spot with Braves

Associated Press

KISSIMMEE, Fla. — With Curtis Pride you can’t take your eyes off the eyes. There is no wonder, constantly probing everything from a pitcher’s curve to a teammate’s changeup to clear up your questions. There is no equalizer in his world of silence.

“I want to be known as a good ballplayer,” he said. “It’s not that I’ve brown eyes blazing defiantly, ‘you won’t get me.’” Pride, who is trying to earn a spot on the Atlanta Braves bench, believes no crack of the bat but considers himself no different than anyone else on the field. He may not hear the cheering of the fans, but he longs to earn a permanent job in the major leagues.

“People always have a question mark over me because of my disability,” said Pride, who reads lips and speaks quite clearly despite his hearing impairment. “It’s frustrating I want people to look beyond my lips and looks quite clear.

Pride is convinced he would have been major league regular by now if not for his disability. He’s just 25, not 30.

Don’t get the impression, however, that he sits around cursing echos for his plight. His parents instructed him at an early age not to make excuses.

Cordero looks to mend ways, save career

Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. - Wilfredo Cordero, searching for a team since Boston dropped him for wife beating, finally found one Monday when the Chicago White Sox agreed to a $1 million, one-year contract.

Cordero received a 90-day suspended sentence and was ordered to attend regular counseling sessions after beating and threatening his wife last June.

"I realize what I did was wrong," Cordero, 26, said in a statement Monday. "I recognize that I've made mistakes and have worked hard to change. With the support of Chicago's fans and the White Sox, I see this as a tremendous chance to redeem myself and my reputation."

He continued, "I want to do everything possible to assure the club and the White Sox fans that they'll not be embarrassed by my performance on or off the field."

Cordero, who made $3 million with the Boston Red Sox last season, is expected to arrive at White Sox camp Tuesday. "Will and I met with White Sox officials in Tucson and he spent a good deal of time with the employee assistant people with the White Sox and got a good feeling for people in a situation like his," said Jeff Moorad, Cordero's agent. "The White Sox situation stuck out like a positive one to allow Wil to get his career back on track."

Montreal also made an offer and two other clubs expressed interest. Cordero was swayed by the chance to play first base and DH with the White Sox.

The option year could be worth $2 million to $5 million, depending on his plate appearances this season. The 1999 salary is guaranteed if he gets fewer than 200 appearances this season, and he would get the maximum if he has 305.

Cordero hit .281 with 18 homers and 72 RBIs last season. "I was more concerned about the man and where he was in his life," Manuel said. "I wasn't trying to make a deal, that's not my area. I guess one thing led to another and, 'Do you like him as a player?' and I said, 'Yes, I like the player but we got to make sure the man is helped.'"

General manager Ron Schueler said after extensive testing the White Sox were convinced Cordero is remorseful and that he will follow an after-care program.

"I wish I could say it was all financial but it wasn't. We had to make sure everything was in place and he had to follow all those guidelines," Schueler said.

The White Sox, concerned with lagging attendance and creating a more fan-friendly team, tested and interviewed Cordero earlier this month during his visit to Tucson. Cordero played winter ball but will probably not be ready for two or three weeks.

He will have to win the acceptance of his teammates and deal with hostility, perhaps at home, and certainly when the White Sox go on the road. "It's not something I've obviously done," third baseman Robin Ventura said of Cordero's past problems. "But if a guy can come in here and if the good feeling on the team will take care of it."

"If the team helps him, you somehow get to find a way to make this work. We'll see how it goes," Moorad said.

Ruben Sierra, whose playing time as a DH could be affected by Cordero's arrival, said the past is just that.

"If he helps the team, it doesn't matter," he said.

Manuel said the White Sox, who already have the moody Albert Belle, could become the most disliked team in the American League.

"If they're booing one White Sox member, they are booing the whole club. It could easily be a distraction or a positive thing," Manuel said.

"If we misunderstand it and let a guy stand out there alone and get booed or ostracized or whatever, then I'm not going to separate ourselves from the individual like, 'Well, I'm clean and he's not.' Then I think we're going about it the wrong way."

Schueler said the contract was negotiated by team chairman Jerry Reinsdorf.

"After a great deal of thought, consideration and analysis, we are convinced that Wil realizes his actions were wrong, is taking the appropriate steps to overcome any personal problems and can be a positive and productive member of the White Sox organization," Reinsdorf said in a statement.

He has shown remorse regarding his actions and is sincere about continuing the undergo treatment. Our organization is willing to provide him with a second chance as long as he continues to show sincerity in undergoing treatment and addressing his problems.

In six seasons, Cordero is a 279 career hitter with 58 homers and 287 RBIs. The White Sox signed the controversial Belle last year to a five-year, $55 million deal. His career has been marked by emotional outbursts.

They just had some things in sudden had quick goals and Then they [Vanderbilt] all of a starters which could play a positional Susan Napolitano and Michelle Dillow combined for a total of 10 goals and eight assists. The Irish tried to rally just prior to half with back-to-back goals from freshman Courtney Calabrese and Kathryn Perrella to cut the lead to three. Then freshman Lael O’Shaughnessy scored in initial stages of the second to make the score 8-4. It seemed as though every-time the Irish mounted some form of attack, the Commodores answered. Notre Dame got outshot by Vanderbilt 34-27.

"There were spurts where we were playing good transitional game," Manthei said. "At times we had a high work rate and were successful. Then they [Vanderbilt] all of a sudden had quick goals and we couldn’t react. We couldn’t defend against that. They just had some things in their arsenal that we hadn’t faced." Manthei chalked up a single goal in the Vandy contest. Freshman Carrie Marshall saw the majority of the action at goal.

In 45 minutes of play, she registered 10 saves. Junior Beth Murray saw limited action against the Commodores. She registered five saves in 15 minutes of play.

Turnovers reflect why the score was so lopsided. Notre Dame had 15 turnovers versus Vandy’s nine. While the Commodores caused 12 turnovers, the Irish forced only nine. Notre Dame is ready to defend its home field and establish their first home victory. The quest begins today at 4 p.m.

and makes me want to train harder." Gallo, who was named the most outstanding swimmer at this year’s Big East Championships, followed up her outstanding performance in the 500 with an even more impressive performance in her best event, the 1650 freestyle. The Irish’s leader, who posted the sixth-best time out of the 30-swimmer field in that event during the regular season, couldn’t equal that feat, but nonetheless placed ninth in a time of 1:02.62. and once again earned all-American recognition.

Gallo also qualified in the 200 freestyle event and finished 40th.

Suddarth, who earned all-American honors by placing 13th in the 200 breaststroke as a freshman, duplicated that effort and took 11th as a sophomore.

Suddarth established a new school record (2:33.81) in preliminaries and then shattered that record in the finals, recording a time of 2:31.47.

"I was looking forward to that race all season and focusing on it for the past month," said Suddarth. "I’m happy with my performance, but I felt I could have swam better and I was looking to place in the top eight."

Suddarth also swam her way into the 100 breaststroke finals in a time of 1:01.82, once again breaking her own school record. Her eighth-place finish in the 100 finals (1:02.03) was yet another all-American effort by the sensational sophomore.

"I was confident heading into the meet after my performance last year," said Suddarth. "I knew I had it in me. I’m just happy that I was able to put it together and execute the race I wanted."

Suddarth’s accomplishment is even more impressive considering the fact that the 100 breaststroke finals heat was the fastest in NCAA history and was won by Georgia swimmer Kristy Kowal (1:01.91), a gold medalist in the World Championships.

"It was exciting to race in that heat," said Suddarth. "There was a lot of hype and I thrive on that. I perform best under pressure."

Junior Brittany Kline joined Suddarth in the 100 breaststroke, placing 25th (1:03.83), while freshman standout Carrie Nixon swam to a 27th-place finish in the 50 freestyle in her first NCAA appearance. Nixon was also 26th in the 100 butterfly (55.80).

"Carrie has made a great transition," commented Suddarth. "To come out that fast as a freshman is really impressive. She has three more great years ahead of her."

A week earlier, sophomore diver Gina Ketelhohn led a strong contingent of Notre Dame divers, cracking the top ten in the NCAA Zone C Diving Championships held at Miami University. After placing 33rd in the competition a year ago, Ketelhohn showed dramatic improvement, finishing ninth in the three-meter event with a score of 407.95. Rhiana Saunders dove to a 12th-place finish with a 380.5 total. In her first-ever NCAA appearance, freshman Jessica Johnston finished one spot behind Saunders in 133rd place. Kari Richards rounded out the Irish squad placing 50th.

This weekend’s NCAA Championship marked the end of another record-setting season for Notre Dame and closed out Gallo’s remarkable career. The Irish will definitely miss their leader, but shouldn’t lose a step with the likes of Suddarth, Kline, and Nixon waiting in the wings.

The combos won the doubles point with Rothschild and Freeman, and Horsley and Sachire picked up the wins. Patterson registered a 6-2, 6-4 victory, while Horsley robbed Ray Jarmillo of a win, 6-0, 6-2 in singles. Eric Enloe, at No. 5, blasted Takeshi Itoh, 6-3, 6-3.

In Saturday's semi-finals, the Irish plucked Harvard out of the tournament, 4-2. Sachire, Patterson, and Horsley all reeled in two-set victories, after the No. 2 and 3 doubles earned the first point of the match against the Ivy Leaguers.

Patterson served Thomas Blake a 6-3, 7-6 termination at the No. 1 spot. Horsley chased down Scott Clark, 6-2, 6-4 while Patterson caught John Doran, 6-4, 7-5.

In the finals, Notre Dame sprung to a quick start, sweeping the doubles. Patterson and Pietrowski earned their first doubles win of the competition, 8-4, while the No. 2 and 3 pairs again flexed their strength. The Rothschild-Freeman duo and the partners of Horsley and Sachire defeated both their opponents in 8-1 wins.

Singles, however, seemed like a different match. Or maybe even an entire different game from the Irish perspective. "Boise State) came right out of the blocks and started attacking," Bayliss said. "Then it became a war."

Patterson and Horsley again proved their dependability in singles, with solid wins.

After Pietrowski, Rothschild, and Enloe lost, the match was put into the hands of Sachire.

Despite his usual success, Ryan Sachire suffered a pivotal loss to Boise State in the Classic's finals. The pivotal battle took place on center court where Sachire and Boise State's Dan Mercker fought for bragging rights of Blue-Gray champion.

Tied at 3-3, Sachire clung to the hopes of victory, but wound up slipping off the rope in the tug-of-war match, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4.

"It was fun to be out there," Sachire said. "It's a situation you dream of, but I feel bad I wasn't able to come through for the team."

The Irish can take solace, however, in their performance. Adjusting to the weather which consisted of high winds and lows of 40 degrees, Notre Dame advanced their winning tally to nine out of their last 10. They also signed their names among the nation's top teams with their strong wins.

"The matches were hard fought, and Boise State was a strong team," Bayliss said. "We played well, and we're not going to dwell on the loss."

Irish look for cooperation from Mother Nature

Baseball team hopes to play first game in 13 days

By ALLISON KRILLA
Associate Sports Editor

Just consider it pitching on 12 days rest.
For the first time since a 4-3 win against Southern Illinois on March 11, the Notre Dame baseball team will take the field for a game. The Irish host Cincinnati at Frank Eck Stadium with only 16 games under their belts nearly two months after the 1998 season began.

Since the Southern Illinois contest, the Irish have fallen victim to the weather. Rain or snow forced the cancellation of seven games, including two Big East conference doubleheaders in Providence and Connecticut last weekend.

Short of building a second dome on campus, the team is faced with only two alternatives — practicing indoors and praying for dry days.

"We got outside yesterday for the first time in about two weeks," said catcher Jeff Wagner. "It felt good to be out there; we've been getting sort of cramped up practicing inside."

This week's somewhat favorable forecast holds well for the Irish, who are scheduled to play four games in the next three days.

After its home-opener against Central Michigan on Feb. 25, Notre Dame hit the road again for a seven game swing in Evansville, Ind., and San Antonio, Tex., before returning home for nine straight games.

"It's a lot easier playing at home," said Wagner. "We just roll out of bed and go to class and head out to the ball field. It's a lot more relaxing."

The Irish have been itching to return to the diamond, boasting seven wins in their last eight games.

"Early in the year our pitching was looking good, but our hitting needed some adjustments," said Wagner. "Then our hitting was down and our pitchers were struggling. In the last few games, we've really put our pitching and hitting together."

Sophomore Brant Ust leads the team at the plate, batting .350 on the year with 12 RBI and three HRs. Juniors Wagner and Allen Greene have also put up big numbers in the young season, hitting .339 and .308, respectively, with 13 and 12 RBIs.

Wagner is tied for the team lead with four home runs.

But senior captain J.J. Brock has been the recent offensive hero for the Irish. Brock earned Big East Player of the Week honors after going 8-for-16 with two homers and six RBIs in San Antonio.

A core of juniors leads the Irish pitching staff, which has a deceiving 5.50 ERA that dips to 2.47 when excluding the three rocky outings against national powerhouse Miami.

Alex Shilliday paces the staff with a 2.70 ERA and 37 strikeouts. In his last two games, Shilliday allowed one earned run, walked two and fanned 19.

Brad Lidge earned Big East Pitcher of the Week accolades after tossing seven shutout innings in a 8-0 win over Southwest Texas State.

After an up-and-down campaign in the early season, the coming homestand provides an opportunity for the Irish to extend their three-game win streak before a home crowd. But only if the weather cooperates.

Mother Nature might not like baseball season, but she likes it when you recycle.

MEN'S TENNIS

With a color scheme in mind, the Blue and Gold finished in second place at the Blue-Grey Classic, leaving three out of four of their opponents black and blue in the process.

In the Thursday through Sunday tournament at Montgomery, Alabama, the meisters were not disenchanted with their red-ribbon finish after a narrow 3-4 loss to Boise State in the finals.

"Getting to the finals was a tremendous showing for us," coach Bob Baylies said. "It was exciting but hard to lose (with the match) that close and in that magnitude of competition."

Ten out of the top 25 teams in the nation competed in the tournament, including No. 2 Illinois. Notre Dame defeated Tulane, New Mexico, and Harvard before they lost to Boise State.

"Even the teams that were there and undefeated were very good, strong teams," Baylies said.

Brian Patterson, playing No. 3, and No. 6 Matt Horsley's weekend performances would have to be placed under a microscope to identify any flaws.

Compelling wins in all of their singles matches, they brought the outstanding level of Notre Dame's play, which boasts a record of 12-3, into focus for the nation.

"Absolutely terrific," Baylies described Patterson and Horsley. "Brian played a high-quality game. Matt became a real rock for us. He's really anchoring the bottom of the lineup."

The chemistry in pairs proved potent once again. As Notre Dame won every doubles point in the dual matches, Danny Rothseheid and Vijay Freeman and Ryan Sachire and Horsley defeated every opponent in pairs competition.

"It was nice to always have the 1-0 lead," Baylies said. "We've concentrated more on doubles in practice and made changes that strengthened the line-up."

Beginning Thursday, the No. 21 squad rolling to a 4-1 victory over Tulane. The Irish gained the doubles points before Jakub Pietruczuk, Brian Patterson, and Matt Horsley drowned the Green Wave in singles.

Sachire was the only Irishman sucked into the tide with a respectable loss to.

Sophomore Matt Horsley won all eight of his matches in Alabama, helping advance the Irish to 12-2 on the season.

Robert Summerson, the No. 2 player in the nation, "He's a very good player," sophomore Sachire said. "I think I should have been more patient. I had my chances. If I would've taken them, it could have been another story."

In their second day of outdoor competition, the Irish lived out the same tale of success as they roared New Mexico 4-1.

Again, doubles proved successful, and Patterson and Horsley fired by their opponents.

"I think I'm getting back to how I was playing in the fall (before a wrist injury)," Horsley said. "I'm glad I had Establishing dominance at home is key to the competitiveness of any team. The women's lacrosse team has yet to establish its dominance on its home field. With only three remaining home games, the Irish are trying to obtain a win which will give them the needed boost for their next three road games.

"We definitely play more difficult teams at home," senior Holly Mantei said. "We have to work hard for sixty minutes and that gets a little extra pressure on us at home. It is good because a young program needs to face this."

Swimmer Gallo glides into all-America role

The No. 21 Notre Dame women's swimming and diving team capped off its most successful sea- son in school history with outstanding individual performances at this year's NCAA Champion- ships.

The Irish sent their largest contingent ever, as four swimmers qualified for the presti- gious meet held at the University of Minnesota this past weekend.

All four of the Irish qualifiers (Linda Gallo, Shannon Sudduth, Carrie Nixon, and Brittany Kline) led the Irish's 200 medley relay team to a 19th place finish (1:56.04) in a race that was basically a warmup for the swimmers.

"That race was a lot of fun since Linda and I got to swim events we usually don't get to," commented Sudduth. "It got us into the racing and swimming nerves."

Senior captain Linda Gallo made some waves in her first-ever NCAA appearance, earning all-American honors in two events. In the preliminaries of the 500 freestyle event, Gallo finished 13th with a time of 4:47.55, just one second from the time set to qualify for the final.

"Linda is an awesome leader and it's great to have her race," said teammate and fellow all-American Shannon Sudduth. "She works so hard
