Saint Mary's College will be able to establish two new positions for its Information Technology staff as the recipient of a $200,000 grant from Lilly Endowment Incorporation this week.

The two positions, which are faculty and student support specialists, were made possible by the grant and are intended to serve the student and faculty needs that have developed as a result of the continuing technological advances at the College.

"This is a very significant step," said Joel Cooper, director of Information Technology. "We have completed the wiring in a year, and we've ponied up the money to make these improvements."

The two positions, which are faculty and student support specialists, were made possible by the grant and are intended to serve the student and faculty needs that have developed as a result of the continuing technological advances at the College.

"This is a very significant step," said Joel Cooper, director of Information Technology. "We have completed the wiring in a year, and we've ponied up the money to make these improvements."

One of the major duties of the faculty support specialist will be to show faculty concrete ways to utilize available technology as a teaching tool in the classroom.

"Technological advances will become evident on campus in several ways in the fall," Cooper said. "Besides being linked to the internet over the summer, every dorm room on campus will also be wired for cable television. Not only will those improvements be accessible to students during the next academic year. Additionally, the dorm rooms will be wired for a new school year, although the new system is not expected to take effect for two more years.

"We want a very nice, state-of-the-art computer facility (in the library) as well as technological renovations during the 1998-1999 school year."

The Endowment grant was part of the Strengthening Institutions Program, which awarded $2.2 million to 12 Indiana private colleges.

The Way of the Cross

Despite sprinkling rain, students celebrate Holy Week with the campus-wide Stations of the Cross Tuesday night. The wooden crosses required 12-15 people to carry during the procession, which began at the Grotto and finished at the Basilica.

FACULTY SENATE

'Spirit' statement inadequate

By JOHN RAJICH
News Writer

Last night, the Faculty Senate approved a position statement reaffirming its belief that the "Spirit of Inclusion" as given by the University administration is inadequate and needs to be backed up by protection for homosexuals in the University's non-discrimination clause.

The statement comes after the recent resignation of Father David Garrick from the Notre Dame faculty and was released now as a direct response to Garrick's resignation, according to the document. [The recent resignation of Father David Garrick ... is an indication of inadequacies in the administrations current "Spirit of Inclusion" policy as a whole and as a defense against discrimination based on sexual orientation," the statement said in referring to Garrick's allegations that he was discriminated against due to his sexual orientation.

In particular, the document calls for the University to "revise its non-discrimination document so as to include sexual orientation as a protected characteristic.

After debate as to the specific wording of the position statement and whether to mention Garrick's resignation as a specific example, the original statement was put to a vote and was defeated 32-3 by the senate, with no members abstaining.

The Senate also voted 31-
The Spirit of Sacrifice

Do you know the historical implications of Catholics not eating meat on Fridays during Lent? I don’t either. During this Lenten season I have had two recent personal events give me two different tales about how Catholics originated the tradition of abstinence from meat during Lent.

The first story goes like this. The Pope was trying to persuade the Portuguese to convert to Catholicism by going to court to see how the famous court case of fishermen— if they converted he would make sure that Catholics eat fish on Fridays. Very sly deal on both sides.

The other story is very similar. Apparently, towards the end of the 7th century, the fish market was so bad in Rome that the Pope made sure people would be eating fish on Friday— thereby helping the Roman fisherman.

Both these amateur historians gave me their historical accounts and cited them as reasons why we can see a tradition of abstinence on Fridays during Lent. They both make the point that the specific reasons for abstinence on Fridays during Lent were for symbolic and traditions as explanations.

Subsequent to the Pope’s call for a day of mourning (just as the original Lenten sacrifice), all Catholic church leaders characterized it an appropriate day for mourning (just as the original Lenten sacrifice). All these leaders referred to the specific reason for abstinence on Fridays during Lent. They both denouncèd the reasons for abstinence on Fridays during Lent, and traditions as explanations.

But whether or not it is correct to believe the tradition of any spiritual reason for abstinence on Fridays during Lent, the tradition is still a tradition.

In hindsight, that was not the best move for the university,” Stremlau said.

“With that said, she also urged the board to begin a dialogue with national Native American leadership. Stremlau referred to the chief of the Police Department and others who attended the conference.

She also said she hopes the board to break “silence” and consider that it is not too late to start a dialogue with Native American leaders.

Administrators from UT System colleges said Tuesday they were unsure of the effects of the state’s new top 10 percent admissions law. "There’s a lot we’ve heard about the new law who graduated in the top nine percent of their class but she only has a 60 SAT score. It’s just not a good situation," said Franklin J. Jenifer, president of UT-Dallas, a campus of about 15,000 students. W.A. Baker, vice president for UT-Tyler, said the new law limits the admission decisions at UT-Tyler. He said the 56 applicants who have applied to the school have all been admitted. From the 56 applicants, less than 13 percent are minorities. State lawmakers passed the top 10 percent law in 1997 to counteract the effects of the Hopwood vs. Texas court ruling that led to the end of affirmative action policies in Texas public universities. UT system chancellor William Cunningham said what’s important is that the schools are complying with the new law. “I’m very pleased with the progress and what’s going on at all the campuses,” he said.

In an effort to encourage as many students to attend college, the admissions office, the Academic Advancement Program (AAP) and the Alumni Association have banded together and intensified their outreach efforts. Traditionally, the entire month of April is devoted completely to attracting as many prospective students as possible. All admitted students are required to turn in their Statements of Intent to Register by May 1. With the decrease in the number of minorities admitted to this year’s incoming freshman class, schools have become extremely important in encouraging minority students to come, director of admissions Stan Lee Spencer said. Yield events, or activities specifically designed to increase the amount of admitted freshmen, include congratulatory phone calls, special campus tours for top admits, and overnight stays.

Admissions law may not be effective

Students who broke the law but didn’t get arrested while participating in Court Street disturbance Sunday morning still could be charged with crimes. Police arrested 34 people, 30 of whom were UT students, on the scene for their involvement in the disturbance, when a crowd of 2,500 to 3,000 predominantly students, took over Court Street. Law enforcement officials will charge people seen breaking the law on a videotape an officer made of the incident, Athens police department chief Rick Mayer said yesterday at a news conference. Mayer will meet today with his supervisors and Mayor Marc Arel to discuss measures to prevent such incidents. Director of Public Affairs and University Spokesperson Aiken was asked about the review that the 30 OU student arrests and take disciplinary action. Cardinalli requested a copy of the videotape in order to determine charges against students who might not have been arrested, but who were breaking the OU Student Conduct Code.

Senate declines ‘brain gain’ bill

An attempt to keep Nebraska’s best and brightest students from leaving the state’s capital this legislative session was defeated Tuesday in the Nebraska Legislature. Senators voted down LB1176, known as the “brain gain” bill 19-16, following an effort by Senator Jon Brumming of Omaha introduced an amendment many senators supported. Brumming’s amendment made certain sections clearer by stating the bill would give loans first to students with financial need and then to students who excelled in high school but did not have financial need. Also under Brumming’s amendment, the review board that would have to pay back loans annually rather than in a lump sum. People concerned, the bill, introduced by Senator Benes, on behalf of the governor, had advanced to the second round of debate March 31 with a 27-6 vote. Neben said he had asked the board that senators would see the importance of the bill and pass it.

Lenten sacrifice

Lenten sacrifice is a tradition that dates back to the early Christian church. Lent is a period of fasting and prayer that precedes Easter. It begins on Ash Wednesday and ends on Easter Sunday. During Lent, many Christians observe abstinence from meat on Fridays and on Ash Wednesday, beginning the season.

Meat is considered a symbol of the flesh, which is often associated with sin. By giving up meat during Lent, Christians are acknowledging their need for salvation and expressing their faith in the power of Christ to overcome sin.

In the Roman Catholic Church, the practice of abstinence from meat on Fridays is a form of penance. The faithful are asked to make an act of sacrifice for the sins of the world, particularly for the sins of those who would not convert to Christianity.

In the Eastern Orthodox Church, abstinence from meat on Fridays is a form of fasting. Fasting is a way to purify the body and mind, and to prepare for the great feast of Easter.

In the Anglican Church, abstinence from meat on Fridays is a form of self-discipline. It is a way to focus on spiritual growth and to strengthen one’s relationship with God.

Lenten sacrifice is also observed in some Protestant churches. For example, in the United Methodist Church, the practice of abstinence from meat on Fridays is a form of penance.

In some parts of the world, abstinence from meat on Fridays is observed as a cultural tradition. For example, in the Palestinian territories, abstinence from meat on Fridays is a way to express solidarity with the Palestinian people.

In conclusion, Lenten sacrifice is a practice that has been observed for centuries by Christians around the world. It is a way to express faith, to engage in spiritual growth, and to participate in the life of the church.
Fear, anger developed as child
Gender influences how children react to situations

By TOM ENRIGHT

Speaking on the primal emotions of fear and anger, doctors V. Thomas Mawhinney and E. Mark Cummings linked childhood experiences to later adult emotional reactions in a lecture yesterday afternoon. Their joint talks made up the fourth installment of the mini medical school course hosted at Notre Dame. Mawhinney, a faculty member at Indians University South Bend, explained that culture can influence what a person fears over a lifetime.

"The media spreads with the speed of light frightening images," said Mawhinney. "We come genetically wired to look for events in the environment to be cautious or fearful about until we know more."

Mawhinney also explained the benefits of fear and pain and told how no clear line exists between fear and anxiety. He said that while others may get used to it, boys act in more overt ways such as aggression.

"A child's sense of security ... derives from the health and well-being of marital relationships as well as from the health and well-being of their own relationships with their parents," Cummings said.

Mawhinney detailed how doctors can treat toward resolution can help a child's well-being.

Krier challenges city architectural thought

By COLLEEN GAUGHEN

World renowned architect Leon Krier, in his lecture, asserted the need to bring architectural unity back to the separateness of the city yesterday afternoon.

The movement toward modularity is rooted in the nineteenth century, Krier explained, but became the standard when most buildings constructed after World War II were built in the modernist style, rejecting what had been deemed classical or traditional architecture. The advancement of technology in the age of the machine has been the driving force shaping architectural modernism, he continued, leaving no room for traditional classicism.

"One of the problems of today is that there is no debate about architecture," Krier said. "When you hear something, when you see something--your body teaches your mind."

He explained that people react profoundly to the situations around them, establishing initial relationships to objects and environments.

"People judge the world without a state of neutrality," he said, "and it is important to understand why we like or dislike."

The initial break with traditional architecture changed the way the world was perceived, resulting in confusion, Krier explained.

"It is not a matter of talent, but of concept confusion," stated Krier. "It is not buildings that destroy landscapes, but form."

According to Krier, the typological complexity associated with design has confused form with function, resulting in inconsistencies such as houses looking like churches.

"Architecture is the language of construction," he said, "and clarity of language is fundamental for any civilization to avoid confusion."

The main theme reiterated throughout his lecture was the need to stop zoning the planning of cities and bring back traditional architecture to integrate the parts into a functional, cohesive whole.

World renowned architect Leon Krier spoke on the problems of city planning, and how architecture has moved toward separation and away from integration.

"Zoning is the single element that has destroyed the country," Krier said.

"The separation in city landscapes, such as the clustering of malls and housing, inhibits community life and threatens civic unity, according to traditionalists.

"Architecture is the backdrop of our daily lives," said fourth-year student Anthony Goldsbury. "This campus is the structure of our lives here. Imagine if the Dome, DeBartalo and Grace were all in one place, the Basilica and all the chapels were in one place, and all the dorms were clumped together in one place. It sounds dumb because it is. Our cities should be as integrated as our campus."

Contemporary civic laws sanction where and where not new buildings may be constructed, which traditionalists believe tears cities apart. Krier explained that urban growth is encouraged, but not urban sprawl.

"Improvements can be made and popularity can be gained with offering traditional design," Krier said. "We need to exercise our right to choose the way we live. Otherwise, it is left to fate. There is a lot of work to do."

Krier is currently working on projects in Germany, the U.S. England, Belgium, Spain and France, and he is the personal advisor to the Prince of Wales, for whom he drew up the master plan for the development of Poundbury in Dorset.
Welfare reform changes attitudes

By ERIKA THESSING

The stereotypes associated with welfare need to be changed in order for welfare reform to work, according to Carla Williams, executive assistant for the Indiana governor.

The most important change, Williams said, is the way the children of welfare recipients view their parents. She says it is essential for children to see their parents go to work every day and earn an income, rather than accepting government handouts.

"What we are trying to do is impact the next generation," she said. "At least that work ethic is being modeled for the children. Even if we are not able to impact the adults so much, hopefully we can change the mindset of the children."

Williams used the Indiana welfare reform program as an example. The Indiana program emphasizes employment and personal responsibility by imposing strict time limits on benefits.

"We're trying to build a benefit delivery system to a 'Work First' system," she said. "We need to break up this generational dependence on the system and that's what we're trying to do with our program."

Williams also expressed the importance of changing the way taxpayers and caseworkers view welfare recipients.

"As we raise the bar of expectations, people are rising up. With welfare, we've got to rethink how we look at people and what they bring to the table. We have to change those stereotypes," she said.

"Often folks who find themselves in this situation lack hope," she said. "They don't see themselves as having something inside themselves that's strong enough to make the change. If they can't believe they have something, it's going to be much more difficult for us to help them."

Faith communities can often provide that extra support and hope, according to Williams. The state of Indiana hopes to establish links with faith communities and other local agencies to provide more personalized assistance to people who need it.

"There is a recognition that no one entity can do this alone. Hopefully families can receive the support through entities they are familiar with," Williams said.

Severe weather hits Alabama

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. - A line of fierce storms rolled across Alabama Wednesday night, killing at least nine people and injuring dozens as a tornado reduced brick homes to rubble.

Some of the injured were in church meetings that turned into prayer vigils as violent winds swept across Jefferson County, including Birmingham, touching down in pipes at a deadly and death in its wake.

Kendra Vine was with four relatives in her home in Sylvan Springs when strong winds struck the house and they hid in a basement corner.

"That was the only corner left standing, thank the Lord," she said.

Most of the damage was reported in communities outside of Birmingham. Wendy Willkor- ton, a spokeswoman for the Emergency Management Agency in Jefferson County, said five people died in Rock Creek and one in Sylvan Springs, com-

Another was killed in Prattville in north of those communities. An EMA spokeswoman in St. Clair County, east of Birmingham, reported two more dead in the Watts ville area.

Nationalists gain strength at polls

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The far-right National Front has always caused trouble for French conservatives. But now, the party's gains in regional elections are forcing the traditional right to rethink its basic foundations.

Bruno Megret/the Front's No. 2 man, knows his plan to shake up French politics is working. "I am very optimistic about the future progress of the National Front," he said Wednesday.

In a wide-ranging interview with foreign journalists, the measured, thoughtful Megret provided a stark contrast to the more flamboyant Jean-Marie Le Pen, the party's long-time leader.

While Le Pen has uttered the most controversial statements attributed to the party — calling Nazi gas chambers "detail of history," for example — Megret skids away from such statements.

"The National Front rejects racism and anti-Semitism," he said Wednesday.

The Front blames immigrants for unemployment and crime, and oper­ates under the slogan "France First." It opposes measures to unify Europe. — like the planned single currency — and presents itself as the only party that will save France's identity.

In elections last month for regional councils, it scored the same 15 per­cent it has polled in national elec­tions. But it did better in some regions, giving it clout in the election of council presidents, who are chosen by the council members.

When some come-right candidates made election deals with the Front — and won — there was such an uproar that four of them resigned. Those that didn't were expelled from their party, the Union for French Democracy.

"We are seeing the first effects of major structural changes in French politics," he said. "No longer are there two poles — right and left — but three, with the National Front, he said.

The only choice for the traditional right, he said, is to divide into two sides, one that opposes the National Front and one that makes alliances with it. Otherwise, he said, there will be further chaos.

"This is the reason I am, for my part, very optimistic," he said. Megret also presented his view of Europe under a national Front gov­ernment.

Bosnian Serbs arrested for atrocities

The NATO-led peace force on Wednesday arrested two Bosnian Serbs suspected of prison camp atrocities, and said the men were sent to the U.N. war crimes tribu­nal.

There were no Serb demonstrations or other indications of tension in the region after Wednesday's arrests, said NATO spokesman Maj. Louis Garneau. The men did not resist and no one was hurt in the military operation in the Serb-held town of Prijedor in north­west Bosnia.

Former Serb leader and No. 1 war crimes suspect, Radovan Karadzic, remains at large, although his whereabouts are unknown. Karadzic, as leader of breakaway Serb forces in Bosnia, was blamed for some of the worst atrocities of the 3 1/2-year war.

The captured suspects were identified as Miroslav Krivoka and Miljenko Radic, both indicted in February 1995 by the U.N. war crimes tribunal for the former Yugoslasia, set up in The Hague, Netherlands. Both men are charged with war crimes and crimes against humanity while holding command positions at the Omarska camp outside Prijedor, where scores of Muslim and Croat prisoners were killed and tortured in 1992.

Television images of skeletal inmates at Omarska and other Serb-run camps helped spur the creation of the war crimes tribunal in 1993.

"This action ... is yet another warning to all those indicted for war crimes who are still at large that they, too, will be brought to justice," NATO Secretary General Javier Solana said in Brussels.

He called on other war crimes suspects to surrender immediately to the tribunal.

Tribunal spokesman Christian Chartier said he expected the suspects to be transferred to The Hague late Wednesday or early Thursday. No date had been set for their arraignment.

Set up in 1993, the tribunal has indicted at least 75 suspects, the majority of them Serbs, and has 23 in custody. Some of the indictments have not been made public.

The head of the U.N. mission in Bosnia, Elisabeth Rehn, said Wednesday she thought Karadzic could soon stand trial.

Squatter crucifies himself in protest

MANILA, Philippines

A Philippine slum dweller had himself nailed to a cross for 20 minutes Wednesday to protest he government's failure to remove squatters evident from public land. Mario Galvez, 45, wearing a crown of barbed wire and a mask, was nailed to a cross for four inches, but most officials, "I want to protest as an ordinary citizen," he said.

The annual Easter event in the region Wednesday was cleared away roadblocks after a week of violence that left at least four dead. Soldiers encountered some resistance, but were able to clear the roads for hundreds of buses and trucks that had been stranded for nearly a week in the Chaparao, a lush tropical region in the heart of the country. Coca leaf farmers had used roads and fallen trees to block traffic on the main road linking the eastern mountainous regions of Bolivia. They are demanding an end to coca leaf eradication and government plans to expand coca trafficking. An estimated 99,000 acres of coca are grown in the Chaparao, and at least 300,000 people in the region depend on coca leaf cultivation for their livelihood.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif.

Pop star George Michael, the British-born heartthrob whose hits include the tune "I Want Your Sex," was arrested on suspicion of committing a lewd act in a park restroom.

The 34-year-old singer was known to be常 "out for radio," and was seen at the park restroom. The singer was known for his flamboyant style and was often seen wearing T-shirts, beers, liquor and snacks.

Squatter crucifies himself in protest

MANILA, Philippines

A Philippine slum dweller had himself nailed to a cross for 20 minutes Wednesday to protest he government's failure to remove squatters evident from public land. Mario Galvez, 45, wearing a crown of barbed wire and a mask, was nailed to a cross for four inches, but most officials, "I want to protest as an ordinary citizen," he said.

The annual Easter event in the region Wednesday was cleared away roadblocks after a week of violence that left at least four dead. Soldiers encountered some resistance, but were able to clear the roads for hundreds of buses and trucks that had been stranded for nearly a week in the Chaparao, a lush tropical region in the heart of the country. Coca leaf farmers had used roads and fallen trees to block traffic on the main road linking the eastern mountainous regions of Bolivia. They are demanding an end to coca leaf eradication and government plans to expand coca trafficking. An estimated 99,000 acres of coca are grown in the Chaparao, and at least 300,000 people in the region depend on coca leaf cultivation for their livelihood.

Cigarette companies bail out of deal

WASHINGTON

The leading American cigarette manufacturers said on Wednesday that they would no longer work for comprehensive legislation to regulate tobacco because Congress was moving in such an unfavorable direction.

The chairman of the RJR Nabisco Holdings Corp., Niven Goldstein, announced the companies' refusal in a luncheon speech at the National Press Club, saying that his company would begin aggressively advertising cigarettes and fighting for their position in court.

The three other big tobacco companies — Philip Morris Cos., Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., a subsidiary of BAT Industries, and Lorillard Tobacco, a subsidiary of the Loews Corp. — quickly issued statements supporting Goldstein's position.

The industry asserted that legislation approved last week by the Senate Commerce Committee would drive companies into bankruptcy.

passed a memorial resolution to commemorate the life and achievements of the late Nipen Biswas, a Notre Dame physics professor, who shared in the discovery of the top quark in 1995.

A proposal containing recommendations to improve drug and alcohol abuse prevention at Notre Dame was unanimously approved.

In a discussion of the Faculty Alcohol Use policy, the committee voiced its feeling that consistent inconsistencies in Notre Dame alcohol policies needed to be resolved.

An example of such inconsistencies is the fact that Notre Dame seniors are allowed to drink at Senior Bar but are unable to attend Notre Dame functions with faculty members when alcohol is available.

The committee advised a three-layered system, whereby alcohol use by students, alcohol use by faculty, and alcohol abuse by faculty are all addressed by Notre Dame policy.

The Triduum Begins...

Jim Lies, C.S.C.

Even though we are baptized, what we constantly lose and betray is precisely that which we received at baptism. Therefore Easter is our return every year to our own baptism, whereas Lent is our preparation for that return - the slow and sustained effort to perform, at the end, our own "passage" or "pascha" into new life in Christ... Each year Lent and Easter are, once again, the rediscovery and the recovery by us of what we were made through our own baptismal death and resurrection.

Alexander Schmemann

I don’t remember the day when I decided to be a Catholic... and I don’t mean the day of my baptism in the first few weeks of my life. I didn’t decide that... my parents did. I remember long ago enjoining those who converted to Catholicism because it occurred to me that they had a choice, and I didn’t feel like I did. Until I realized that the choice was mine, to claim it or not... to profess and live my Catholic faith, or not. I don’t remember a particular day on which I said, as an adult, I want to be a Catholic, I want to follow Jesus. And yet I have, most sincerely... and do. Somewhere along the line, the renewal of my baptismal promise became my own. Somewhere along the line I realized that I do believe in the God of Jesus Christ and in the God in Jesus Christ... call it grace, or bum luck... all I know is that I believe. My faith in this God is so real that I want to celebrate it... even the worst of it... because the worst of it, the crucifixion and death of Jesus, is, paradoxically, the best of it. Our very salvation is tied up in it. We commemorate this great salvific event liturgically in the Triduum.

Much can be said about the Triduum, those days which embrace the Paschal Mystery. "Triduum" in the Latin simply means "a space of three days," but as it is used in the Christian tradition it is meant to signify the three days prior to Easter Sunday: Holy Thursday, Good Friday, and Holy Saturday. The words of the tradition and of the present liturgical books convey the intensity and unity of the hours around the Vigil. These days call us to fast and pray, to keep watch, and to enter into the holy mysteries of Christ’s passion, death and resurrection. We come face to face with the very reality of our own lives, our own dying and rising. Our oneness with Jesus as members of his body, our oneness with each other, and our oneness in the death and resurrection of Jesus is ritualized in the liturgies of the Triduum and realized in our participation in them, and in our very lives as Christians.

It is during the Easter Vigil that we as a community initiate and welcome into full communion those who have, as adults, chosen to join the Catholic Church. They have been preparing for the past several months through the Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults (RCIA). Ten will be baptized and eleven others will be received into full communion with the Catholic faith from other Christian traditions. I include their names here so that you might remember them in prayer in the days ahead:

- Courtney Blake
- Jodi Cockrell
- Jesse Dang
- Libby Gray
- Chrsty Hayes
- Sophie Johannes
- Matt Meyer
- Karissa Rauer
- Jin Shacklett
- Kristin Quinn
- Alexandra Wehner

- Christy Duvall
- Erin Farrell
- Mike Hayworth
- Keith Kasamoto
- Vince Low
- Rob Mercer
- Kim Schroeder
- Heath Weaver
- Emily Wetmoller
- Garrett Zoeller

These are important days for all of us. Days during which each of us stands alone before God to renew our commitment. It is an opportunity for us as adult Christians to say yet again, "Yes, I believe!" It is an opportunity for us as a community as well to stand side by side in our shared commitment to live the call of Jesus, to re dedicate ourselves to that call, and to build the Kingdom together. Please join with me in the days ahead in celebrating the glory and greatness of these days, whether it be at the Basilica of the Sacred Heart, the Church of Loretto, a residence hall chapel, or at your home parish. We join with the whole Church not only in remembering the events of Jesus’s passion, death and resurrection, but, as the Body of Christ, we ourselves partake in them even now that they might transform our very lives.

National University Should Have Nationally Recognized Speaker

T he purpose of this letter is not to insult the character or abilities of L. Governor Joe Kernan; he is nothing less than an insubstantial citizen, Navy veteran, and political leader of Indiana. Rather, our purpose in writing this letter is to chastise the administration for its obvious ambivalence in procuring a nationally recognized commencement speaker.

Throughout the last four years, the university has emphasized the importance of being a top-ranked university composed of an international student body. With students hailing from fifty states and five continents, it is difficult to see how a former governor of any state would be an appropriate speaker. As Senior Class President Beth Nolan noted, “It’s not that the LG. Governor is incapable of delivering an interesting and enjoyable speech; it’s that as a nationally recognized university, we should have a nationally recognized speaker.

The prominence of the speaker brids a definite prominence to the commencement ceremony. How would you feel if Holiness, the Dalai Lama, were to be the commencement commencement speaker? Proud? Honored? Excited? Well, that’s how the students at Emory University feel since hearing that he will be the keynote speaker at their commencement.

University of Oklahoma students probably feel similarly since Margaret Thatcher will be their speaker. So, too, at Boston College, where Bill Richardson, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, will be speaking, and at Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., where Pulitzer Prize-winner George Will is scheduled to speak. Certainly not every student at these universities is pleased with the selection, but upon hearing the choice, their reaction, unlike students at Notre Dame, was probably not “Who?” Perhaps we would not be so disappointed in the choice of the speaker if our commencement exercise focused on the students. However, we cannot even take consolation in this. We will not have our names read, we will not have our homes announced, we will not be able to invite more than four family members, and we have paid over $100,000 and worked for four years, and apparently this university feels as though all we deserve in return is to stand up and sit down when our college’s name is announced.

Again, this is not the case at every university. Faculty Peak, Commencement Director at Vanderbilt University, described commencement exercises there. Rather than spending a great deal of time and effort in securing a prestigious speaker, “Vanderbilt prefers to focus on the student...spending a lot of time and a whole lot of money making this the best commencement they’ve ever been to. Vanderbilt has a two-hour ceremony during which each student’s name is read, honors announced, and diploma individualized conferred. The only remarks are from the Chancellor because Vanderbilt believes the focus of commencement exercise should remain on the students and their accomplishments.

The choice of our commencement speaker is linked to those names suggested over a year-and-a-half ago by senior class representatives. Certainly not everybody on this campus is pleased with the selection. The free expression of opinions and suggestions is a major component of the Notre Dame community and in all students. The free expression of opinions through letters is encouraged.

Who Will Be Courageous for Garrick, and for God?

The argument for the University of Notre Dame is also being made in my homily, and it's for the women, too. But first, I'll just say that sin is going through the first stone. Fr. Garrick made several statements that one may have to recognize social-oriented policies. This university is going to be, and how much our university all. I could not help but realize that throughout history, it is often a single person or a very small group of people who have instituted the greatest change for the benefit of humanity as a whole.

Sisters Don't Need Habits

While Julie Ferraro (no relation) is entitled to her opinion about the post-Vatican II renewal of religious life (The Observer, March 25), she crosses the line when she suggests that women religious who are "inconsolable" (not in habit) are in disobedience to the Church and to Christ, and have lost focus and lack faithfulness to their vows and to their communities. At best, her comments are misguided and insulting; at worst, mean-spirited and even slanderous.

I would hope Ms. Ferraro to converse, pray and minister with some of the women religious she is so quick to condemn before she speaks in such authoritarian tones against the witnesses, quality and integrity of their life.

‘Just War’ Theory is Christian, too

am writing in response to David McMahon’s “RTOC on Notre Dame’s Campus: A Blemish.” There are so many things that I want to say, but I think I can count on others to say them. I will limit my response to three points. But first, as this is Lent, I propose that Mr. McMahon agree fully with the words of Jesus Christ whom you and I revere. He said, “Whoever is a light and is not shining is useless, just like a lamp that is placed under a basket. (Matthew 5:15)"

Finally, the project of integrating one’s erotic life into ones own concept of one’s person is perhaps the most important project one engages in as a young adult. For the heterosexual, there are a number of readily available paradigms that one can fall back on as part of one’s reflection. A large number of students at one's university education curriculum includes the discussion of these paradigms as they occur in literature, in philosophical works, in music and in film. Corresponding paradigms do exist for gays and lesbians, but in the absence of guidance from a community of discussion, few will encounter them until late in their personal development. Consequently, homosexuals, in the absence of a homogeneous community which includes gay and lesbian professors who can provide the necessary counsel and intellectual challenge, enjoy only a quite diminished opportunity to engage in the project of self-discovery aided by the robust and fertile diversity provided. Thus, the most important benefit of the university is largely denied to gay and lesbian students, and this too is a violation of the just war tradition.

Philadelphia based DJ-producer King Louie, through Syklo 130, presents us with an album containing a mixture of rap, soul and retro funk which is laid back and relaxing although perhaps, at times, it becomes a little too much so. A good value for the money, eighteen tracks constitute an album which has some enjoyable moments but it is, on the whole, disappointing due to its failed attempt to be bigger than hip. Dealing with this downside first, the prevalence of narration and conversation on various tracks is regrettable and bland. Even worse, "E.R.A." is what appears to be an attempt at a poem read to fake applause and distant drums. Needless to say, this isn't Wordsworth. Although the intention is admirable, the banal sentiments expressed are trite and just a little bit annoying. A recorded argument on "Gettin' Into It" goes the same way and encourages the listener to question the point of these non-musical interludes.

The album's general problem is found in the fact that almost all of the tracks are indistinguishable from one another; typically a spoken exchange is followed by a familiar beat and then either rap or soul vocals take over. While this can work if blended with works of others (as can be seen in this case, an unchanging and increasingly repetitive sampleback does nothing to increase interest in the album attempts to promote. However, there are one or two good moments which redeem the project from total ruin. "The Beaming" is a mellow, well-written song with lush female vocals — a welcome change from other voices on the album. "Lose It Or Save My Life" is a radio-friendly trek which may appeal to many 70s disc anthologies, asgroup is popular enough to be worthy of a dance remix or two. The final decent track, "When the Funk Hits the Fan," appears slightly after this, as similar in many ways to its predecessor and possesses of the same funky beat. Overall, this is a mediocre album with more bad aspects than good, so try before you buy.

Depeche Mode released a recent first year which was received contrary to popular expectations. The album Ultra is not only completely new, but also it is a change from other Midge月末, but it also enjoyed accolades from the most unlikely of sources — the British press. It's for this strange reaction that this record is worth taking note of again.

Lead singer Dave Gahan always lamented, dressed in self-pity, "In Britain, we're pretty much treated like part of the furniture." That's true. Look at dates and locations of past DM tours. You'll see an average of 10 to 15 shows per year in Germany and, in a good year, three in the United Kingdom. From Stockton to Barcelona, many listeners felt Depeche Mode defined their electronic musical age of the 80s, only to see the band categorically rejected in its home country. That's why it was such a shock to see JIM's "It's No Good" single enter the UK indie top five last year and be included on music magazine'S CD of memorable hits from 1997.

Back in this country, the sixteenth Candles/Breakfast Club crowd started to take notice of them. By 1986 and "Wild, Wild West," they were "boring" and "manifestly bad, but not really friggin' bad." After this, "Little by Little" was one of the better albums and it was at this time that DM began to redefine their music.

It was at this point in their career, that DM began to redefine their music. In 1989, they released their controversial "Violator" album, which was followed by the equally controversial "Ultra." The latter was a departure from their earlier sound, bringing in elements of dance music and electronic pop.

The sound of two acoustic guitars can be awesome, especially when the guitars are skillful. As Dunn Brothers are, and their match with good harmonization. However, after hearing the entire album with nothing but guitar and vocals, the listener can be left looking for some kind of variation or added twist to the sound, perhaps a song or harmonica or other acoustic instrument to add dimension to the music.

The Dunn Brothers' easy-listening sound fits perfectly in the folk genre, and almost reaches the point of contemporary Christian with some of their songs. The album is a whole is an impressive work for a pair of Dunn Brothers students to release and their talents should not go unnoticed or without consideration. Look out for their next album, which is bound to be a hit, and is sure to be a success in the acoustic genre.

Dave Clark

Keen Sean
murder or suicide?

Some of the evidence presented in "Who Killed Kurt Cobain?"

Credit card: A credit card which Cobain kept in his wallet was missing upon discovery of his body. On starting the day of his death, someone else began using the card. The last attempt was made on April 8, the discovery of his body.

Heroin: Cobain was high on heroin when he was shot, but the dosage he took was three times the lethal level. Upon injection, Kurt would have become immediately incapacitated. This raises another point: why would he want to die in such a violent way when he could peacefully pass away in his sleep?

"suicide note": Two internationally renowned handwriting experts have agreed that there are two different sets of handwriting in the note. There is also a second note which Love found hidden under the bed a few months after Cobain's death. In this note, Cobain explicitly says he plans on leaving music, not life.

Fingerprints: There were no legible fingerprints found on the shotgun, the box of cartridges, or the pen used to write the "suicide note".

Liar: Love, whose own father has called a "compulsive liar," has repeatedly told top media publications that her husband had blown his head to pieces. However, Cobain's skull, with the exception of decay, suffered little damage. Why then would Love go around making his death much more morbid and gruesome than it really was?

Hitman?: A Los Angeles musician told Seattle police that Love had offered him $50,000 to kill Cobain. He passed a lie detector test by the world's top polygraph examiner, but was found dead, shot in the head execution style, a few days later.

Fear of Courtney: Three weeks before his death, police were called to the Cobain house where he said he was "hiding from Courtney." Three days before his death, Kurt told a friend that he was "feared" for his life.

Emmett Malloy

Over the past few weeks, two befuddling, yet secretly linked phenomena have occurred on almost a daily basis. Due to some act of God, El Niño, or my mother, the weather has become increasingly gloomy. At the same time, everything from pathetic sales picks to the omnipresence of the gory of all things ska, Muti Rutil, has radiated yours truly, the DJ Spak, to The Observer sidelines. However, as Mike Niks's '70s car and the Kurt Dogg's limp can certainly attest to, 1998 is the year of the DJ and neither the man nor the plan will prevent me from delivering one final, joyfully review to the disgruntled masses and faithful returners. Another man who is beginning to emerge in 1998 is the one and only Ice Cube. Sometimes the biggest man in rap (e.g. - the 1991 album Death Certificate) and occasionally the best comedy writer on the planet (e.g. the 1995 motion picture Friday), Ice Cube's most recent effort has combined both his cinematic and musical ambitions to bring the Player's Club to theaters and record stores nationwide. As is the case with most R&B/rap soundtracks, the Player's Club sports an all-star line-up of artists including Jay-Z, Kurupt, Master P, and of course, the indomitable Ice Cube. Unlike the norm of this genre, however, Player's Club is not merely an overhyped mix tape designed to increase the film's profitability. Instead, this soundtrack features a focused collection of upbeat hip-hop and sexy R&B that seems complimentary with movie about a southern strip club. In fact, Josh Noda says, "...as an expert in this field, I personally believe that this is the best soundtrack album since 'Shorgirls.'" The highlights certainly shine brighter than the lowlights on The Player's Club, with Changin Faces delivering a terrific song and some female perspectives, Ice Cube and Jay-Z making the dance hits, and Master P adding a little levity to the soundtrack.

But what makes this album truly outstanding is its straight, in-your-face attitude. Ice Cube has a real knack for making songs about club-hopping and all that goes with it. Love it or hate it, this is an apocalyptic battle between good and evil. As Misty Lee "Don't Call Me Sassy," Dwayne says, "Ice Cube's train's a-coming, and if you don't get on you're gonna get run over." Erupting odes and rhythmless metaphors galore. The Players Club is a solid album that will keep you movin', groovin' and doing it all night long. Much like Too Short's Cain Bean, this album possesses attitude, affection and gratitude-necessary ingredients in a truly flavorful record.

OAKLAND, Calif. — Kenny Rogers received seven strong innings and A.J. Hinch singled home the go-ahead run in the seventh as the Oakland Athletics defeated Cleveland 3-1 on Wednesday, the Indians' first loss this season.

Rogers (1-0), obtained in a trade from the New York Yankees last November, got his first win in a 1" 1/2-hour affair after the Indians completed a 6-5 victory over the A's in 10 innings that started Monday night.

Rogers allowed just 20 minutes to complete their win in the suspended game, a contest that was delayed hours by rain on Monday night and then suspended because of the Al. curfew.

In the scheduled game, Rogers allowed one run and four hits — only one after the first five complete innings. He struck out five and walked four. Mike Mahler pitched a perfect fifth inning for Ray Sudino and Tailor Hill pitched the ninth for his first save.

Cleveland starter Dave Burba (1-1) gave up two runs and five hits in seven innings. The Indians matched their best win total of the season, a 6-5 victory over the A's by opening the season with six straight wins. Cleveland will play the home opener Friday against Anaheim.

A.J. Hinch allowed a run in the seventh scored Matt Stairs, who doubled leading off. A.J.'s added a run in the eighth on an infield single by Ricky Henderson, who scored on an RBI single by Stairs.

Greg Giambi scored on a sacrifice fly in the first. The Indians tied it on a sacrifice fly by Manty Rayburn, who doubled in the sixth. In the completion of the suspended game, Mike Jackson wrapped up the victory by getting Scott Spiezio to fly to center with two on and two out. The game resumed at the start of the ninth inning.

The game ended at 12:35 p.m. PDT Wednesday, exactly 7:05 p.m. Monday. It was the first game in Oakland suspended because of curfew since Aug. 10, 1972. The game resumed under a partly cloudy sky, a stark contrast to the miserable weather of those teams on Monday and forced rain delays of 2:32 and 0:37 before it was suspended after eight innings. Rick Krivda (1-0), who allowed a 2-3-1 inning on Monday, got the win. Paul Assmuscher got the first two of the ninth inning Wednesday, and Jackson got A.J.'s at least fourth-leading four as the Indians improved to 7-0.

Tom Candiotti (0-2) allowed five runs, two earned — and four hits in four innings as the A's starter on Monday.

TORONTO, Ontario, June 6

MINNEAPOLIS

Shawn Green homered for the second straight day and Jose Canseco had four hits to lead the Toronto Blue Jays to a 9-6 victory over the Minnesota Twins on Wednesday night. The Twins have allowed four home runs in each of two runs in two, including one in a four-run first inning, to help Pat Hentgen survive the worst outing of his career against Minnesota.

Hentgen (1-0) gave up six runs in 5 2-3 innings. He hadn't allowed an earned run against the Twins since a 2-1 loss May 20, 1997. Hentgen, who is now 1-0 for his career against Minnesota, had given up just 19 earned runs in 15 career starts before Wednesday.

Pat Meares drove in three runs for Minnesota, all off Hentgen. He had been 3-for-19 with six strikeouts in his career against Hentgen.

But it didn't matter as the Twins made two errors in the first inning, another in Toronto's two-run eighth and starter TroyKawasaki (1-1) gave up five runs on five hits and four walks in three innings.

The Twins rallied in the fifth against Magadan, loading the bases with two outs, but Randy Myers came in to strike out Brent Meares. Myers loaded the bases with two outs in the ninth but picked up his second save when shortstop Scott Gonzalez made a diving stop of a ground ball by Ron Coomer and got the force out at second.

Toronto took advantage of Hawkins' wildness and the Twins' sloppy defense to take a 1-0 lead after the Twins couldn't score in the second inning.

A strong outing by catcher Terry Steinbach and another error by Coomer at third base helped the Twins score the winning run.

Hawkins' first base hit, Canseco hit a liner that right fielder Alex Ochoa was in position to catch. But Ochoa apparently lost the ball in the lights, taking away the last instant to allow the ball to go to the Mike Stanley drove in the third run on Coomer's error and Jose Cruz added a sacrifice fly on a foul ball.

Canseco's non-scoring single in the second made it 5-0 before the Twins finally ended their 23-month drought against Hentgen in the bottom half.

Todd Walker started the rally with a double to center. Steinbach walked and Meares lined a two-run double down the left field line.

In a game that was completed on Wednesday, David Justice hit a solo homerun and the Indians went on to defeat the A's, 6-5.

Oilers lose ground in playoff race with 4-2 loss

Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. - Steve Rocchi scored midway through the third period as the Mighty Ducks of Anaheim defeated Edmonton 4-2 Wednesday night, allowing the Oilers' race for a playoff position to lose steam.

The loss denied the Oilers the chance to move into a tie for sixth place in the Western Conference.

Rocchi skated around the net, shot off a check by former Duck Bobby Doan and put a shot from the edge of the right circle past Edmonton goaltender Curtis Joseph at 11:05 of the third period for his 17th goal.

Roman Hamrlik's apparent game-tying goal with 40.6 seconds left was nullified when referee Stephen Walkill ruled Ilya Smyt as in the crease.

Teemu Selanne sealed the victory with a shorthanded empty-netter at 19:01 of the third period for his ninth of the season.

The Ducks increased their lead to 2-0 at 5:24 of the first when Fraser skated past Hamrlke to put a rebound of his own shot past Shatalenkov for his third.

Shatalenkov cut the deficit to 2-1 when he took David Karpa's pass just inside the red line, skated down the right wing two strides past the blue line and put a slap shot past Joseph for his ninth.

Marha tied the score 2-2 with an unassisted goal at 14:21 of the second period, taking the puck off Joseph's stick as the Edmonton goaltender tried to clear the puck.

Dallas 2, Washington 1

Jamie Langenbrunner's goal with 1:32 left in overtime lifted the Dallas Stars to a 2-1 victory over Washington on Wednesday night, ending the Capitals' five-game unbeaten streak.

The Capitals had tied it with 5:23 left to regulation on Andrei Skrudland, obtained on March 24 in a trade with the New York Rangers, notched his sixth on a slap shot from the top of the left circle that rolled into the net off the glove of Kozig.

The Stars had tied it at 11:19 of the third period for his ninth goal.

Langenbrunner scored the game-winner on a wrist shot from the slot.

The Stars, attempting to get back on track following a 2-5-1 slump, improved to 30-12-6, better than the Detroit Red Wings in the race for the best record in the Western Conference.

Washington is trying to hold on to the fourth seed and first-round home-ice advantage in the Eastern Conference playoffs. The Capitals maintained the position by one point over three teams, Montreal, Boston, and Buffalo, a 3-1 winner Wednesday night over Carolina.

Washington tied it 1-1 when Petr Benda stole the puck from defenseman Darrell Syder and passed to Nikolsichin, who blasted a shot between the post and goaltender Ed Belfour.

But Dallas got its second straight victory when Jere Lehtinen caused a turnover in overtime behind the Washington net and passed to Langenbrunner, who fired the puck past Ola Kozig for his 22nd.

Dallas took the lead at 1:21 of the second on Brian Sutter's first goal for the Stars.

Skrudland, obtained on March 24 in a trade with the New York Rangers, notched his sixth on a slap shot from the top of the left circle that rolled into the net off the glove of Kozig.

Rocchi 2, Edmonton 1

The Ducks scored first-period power-play goals and Joseph made 20 saves for Edmonton in front of an announced capacity crowd of 17,154 at the Anaheim Arena.

The Oilers remained tied with San Jose and Chicago for seventh with 70 points.

Smyth pushed in a rebound of Bill Guerin's shot to open the scoring with a power-play goal 2:18 into the first period, 10 seconds after Drew Bannister's cross-checking penalty.

The Oilers increased their lead to 2-0 at 5:24 of the first when Fraser skated past Hamrlke to put a rebound of his own shot past Shatalenkov for his third.

Upcoming matches will challenge Irish

By M. SHANNON RYAN
Notre Dame Editor

Hoping to construct a renewed win streak, Notre Dame will attempt to utilize their next three matches as building blocks to success.

The level of intensity will rise with each match as the Irish visit Ball State today, No. 7 Texas on Saturday, and No. 6 Illinois on Monday.

"We have a hard stretch of matches ahead of us," said coach Bob Bayliess. "We need to play through in each one of them. We want to control our quality of play."

So far this season, the Irish have basically been able to play dictator over their grueling schedule. Although not including their losses to Boise State, Notre Dame has jumped to 10 spots in the ITA rankings to No. 14 and boasts a 13-4 record.

The match will seem more like a science project than a sport when the Irish experiment with their lineup against the unranked, 4-10 Cardinals.

Jakub Pietrowski, who plays No. 2 singles and No. 1 doubles, will take the bench due to a sore elbow that has sidelined him for two years.

By placing Pietrowski on reserve and bumping up the lineup with Andy Warford filling it at No. 6, the Irish plan on utilizing the senior in the next two tougher matches.

"Not playing Pietrowski will be a big loss for us," Bayliess said. "He’s been one of our leaders.

Matt Italy will fill in for Pietrowski in doubles and the duo will be pushed down to No. 3.

The Cardinals, who were picked to become the repeat Mid-American Conference champions, will most likely suffer a disappointment with the loss of Bryan Smith, who is ranked in the top five.

The Irish will most likely execute a bulldozing over Ball State before taking the next step against Texas.

"It’s really tough to play down there," said Ryan Sachire, Irish $290P in the nation. "We’re not used to that heat, and they got lots of people out for their matches."

Sachire will most likely face Paul Martin of England. Martin is known for his hard serves and effective forehand.

"I’ll need to be consistent," said Sachire. "I’ll have to try to put the pressure on him."

Besides the weather, Notre Dame will also have to battle Texas’ quick courts and tendency to alternate the lineup.

Martin Nick Crowell, R.J. Sontag and a new French player who is usually at No. 3 are all capable of changing positions.

They have a pretty loaded lineup at any and every position," said Bayliess. "They’re a team with enough talent to sneak the national championship."

If Notre Dame can turn around their four-game losing pattern to Texas, they may accumulate enough momentum to make it to Illinois without a plane.

A possible national championship preview match will take place against Illinois as the Irish engage in the pinnacle of their regular season.

The Fighting Illini and the Fighting Irish may leave the courts bloodstained in the furious battle of the rivals.

"It’s the match we look forward to the most," said Sachire, whose team has won the last eight meetings against Illinois. "It will be an intense match. A lot of it is basically for bragging rights."

But this year Notre Dame may be humbled.

Illinois is currently ranked first in region, holds a 10-5 overall record and are 3-0 in the Big Ten conference.

The players also threaten an imposing challenge. Their top three are all over 6'9" tall and deliver some of the biggest hits in all college tennis.

Oliver Freelove defeated Sachire in the all in straight sets, and Galvin Sontag, whom the Irish heavily recruited, boasts the team’s strongest serve.

Freelove and Sontag, along with Ryan Sachire, are all ranked within the top 10 in the nation.

Although Illinois has recorded wins over top ranked teams like Northwestern, UCLA, Pepperdine, Mississippi State and UNLV, the Illini have crumbled against the talent of Southern Alabama. Boise State, Georgia, and Stanford.

The match outcome may again depend on weather, however.

"The key ingredient for us may be in it doesn’t rain," Bayliess explained.

Danny Rothschild and the Irish will take on two top-10 opponents in the next few days.

Notre Dame began the scoring in that inning when a double by Todd Frye scored Brant Ust and Dan Leatherman to tie the game.

The hits by Porzel, who also scored twice, and Frye, who was 3-for-3 with a run scored, seemed to wake up the rest of the Irish bats. "Porzel and Frye seemed to get everyone going," Mainieri said. "Once we got those clutch hits, it seemed as if everyone was ready to hit."

During the inning, the Irish sent 12 players to the plate, and everyone either scored a run or drove one in.

With catcher Mike Knecht batting and Porzel on third, the Irish took the lead on a bizarre play. Knecht tried to lay down a squeeze bunt with Porzel breaking for home, but Knecht fouled the pitch off. When Knecht tried to do it again, the Cougars were ready for it and called a pitcher.

Porzel was caught between third base and home with nowhere to go. But when Cougar catcher Scott Hordecki chased him back toward third, his throw to third baseman Craig Majdecki was muffed, and Porzel was able to scramble home with the run.

The missed throw was one of two errors by Majdecki in the inning, which led to five unearned runs for the Irish. When the inning was finally over, the Irish had a commanding 9-1 lead.

"We were down to our last several outs," Mainieri said, "but it wasn't a desperate situation for us, because we knew we were going to score runs at some point."

Game notes:

• Jeff Felker and Dan Leatherman both had eight-game hitting streaks snapped last night. Felker walked twice and Leatherman walked once.

They were the only two starters for the Irish not to get at least one hit.

• Playing first base in the ninth inning, Felker dropped a high throw from Ust and was knocked down by Majdecki, the base runner. Felker suffered a brushed hip and is questionable for tomorrow's game. He didn't think he's putting any extra pressure on himself.

• A pitchout from John Indriolo was a key factor in this game, hitting a 2-run homerun in the bottom of the 6th inning. In the extra innings, Olivett came back to score and the Belles were unable to answer and ended up losing 7-6 in the 8th inning.

Olivett was an important conference match up and the team was generally happy with its performance.

"Both games really were a team effort," said Shevik. "We all played really well. We would have liked to have taken both, but even though we lost the second game, we were glad to be able to come back."

On Saturday, the Belles have an important game against Alma, the number one matched team in the MIAA. "It is one of our biggest games because they are ranked number one in the conference," said coach Ruff. "If we play solid ball, we will take two from them."

The Observer/Manuela Felker suffered a bruised hip and is questionable for tomorrow.
Co-captain Tracy Melby turned in a third-place finish among the Irish.

Freshmen perform well in Invitationa1

By GENE BRTALIK

Throughout the course of an season, freshman members of a team are expected to develop and eventually add to the team when various members aren't performing to their ability.

Sarch was the rare last weekend when the Notre Dame women's golf team traveled down to Indiana to take part in the Indiana Invitational.

The team finished sixth in the 15 team tournament, posting scores of 314, 322 and 316 for a combined total of 953.

The women were only one stroke higher than Wisconsin's 952 and seven behind fourth place Minnesota.

The Irish stood in fourth place after the first round due largely in part to an outstanding performance turned in by freshman Mary Klein. Klein shot a 3-under 71 on 6,134 yard course and was in a three-way tie for first after the first round. The 71 ties the lowest round by a Notre Dame woman's golfer in the history of the program.

Klein played the second round later that day, finishing with an 80 which was good enough for a second place tie. In the final round, she shot a 79 and finished the tournament with a 230 and a fifth place finish, the best of her short career. Her 54-hole score was the fifth best score ever and was two strokes better than the 54 hole score of 232 set by her sister Crissy Klein in the 1991-1992 OU Invitational.

The team didn't seem to be rusty after having a three week absence from tournament play. Senior Katie King continued her strong play with a total of 240 and a 23rd place finish. Following King on the leaderboard were sophomore Andrea Klee (245), senior Tracy Melby (249), and sophomore Beth Looper (256).

King and Klee both remain on pace for the first and third best season stroke averages in Irish women's golf history with a 79.95 and 80.53, respectively. Klee also leads them in spring stroke average with a 77.00.

The Irish stood 11th in the district before last weekend's play. Their next two tournaments at the University of Illinois and Ohio State will give an indication of whether or not the team will receive an invitation to participate in the NCAA East Regional this May.
Runners seek revenge at Miami Invitational

Irish hope to identify competitors for Big East meet

By KATHLEEN O'BRIEN
Sports Writer

On Saturday, the Notre Dame track and field team will have an opportunity to turn the tables on Miami (Ohio) in the Miami Invitational after losing to Miami in a home quadrangular last weekend.

Seven teams will participate in the Miami Invitational, including Western Michigan (which also beat the Fighting Irish in the Notre Dame home meet), Central Michigan and Louisville. It is a scored meet, but according to distance coach Tim Connelly, the Irish will be concerned more with developing athletes to be able to better compete later in the season than with scoring points.

"As far as the field events, I'm going to start narrowing down," said field events coach Scott Winsor. "We need to come up with who's going to be competing at the Big East meet."

Some likely contenders for points in the field events are Mike Brown in the pole vault, and Jennifer Engelhardt and Kellee Saxen in the high jump.

"Our main focus is the Big East meet, and has been all season," said 800-meter runner Phil Misika, who took first in last Saturday's meet. "A few of us half-milers haven't run the times we would like at this point in the season, so this meet is another chance to do just that — run those times."

Connelly will put some younger runners such as Bridget O'Brien and Erin Olson in the 5,000-meter run. O'Brien and Olson ran well in the 3,000 last week.

For the 1,500 meter run, he will stick with the team of Erin Luby, Erin Newman, Cara Motter and Patti Rice. Nicole LaSelle will compete in the 3,000 meter run in her first race back after a cross country injury.

"I just want to get her competing and get her confident again," Connolly said. "This is asking a lot in a relatively short amount of time, but I'd like to see her headed in the direction of scoring at the Big East, and potentially being an NCAA qualifier."

The sprinters will also look to improve upon their times as the season is progressing. The 4x100-meter relay squad of West, Errol Williams, Chris Cochran and Kevin Reher which won last weekend will compete with the goal of having smoother handoffs. Williams will aim for a personal record and NCAA qualifying time in the 110-meter hurdles.

Notre Dame’s crew team has quickly become one of the largest and most popular club programs on campus

By TIM CASEY
Sports Writer

As one of the most popular club teams on campus, the crew team epitomizes what is good about Notre Dame’s club programs. Despite not being recognized as a varsity sport, the team’s popularity and dedication cannot be questioned. The team consists of 96 men and women in both the novice and varsity divisions, which makes crew the largest and most popular club programs on campus.

The team’s endurance, which makes crew the popular sport here at Notre Dame.

The head races are contested with a staggered start, meaning that the teams compete against the clock instead of all racing at the same time. This year, the team traveled to Philadelphia to compete in the Head of the Schuylkill. They raced against very tough competition, including many college and club teams and against the United States national team.

The team also traveled to Austin, Texas, during spring break to begin the spring season. In the spring, the team competes on shorter courses, usually 2000 meters in length. The team has been busy as of late, competing this past weekend in Chicago against Minnesota and Northwestern, and two weeks ago, hosting a race with the men taking on Michigan and the women competing against Grand Valley College from Michigan.

And they looked very impressive this past weekend. In varsity competition, the women’s lightweight team came in second, while the men’s lightweight team placed first. The novice rowers fared well also, with both women’s open teams winning their heats as well as the men’s open team winning their race.

The team will continue its busy schedule in the upcoming weeks, as they travel to Oakridge, Tennessee, to compete in the Southern Intercollegiate Rowing Championships on the weekend of April 17th-19th.

The next weekend, the team will compete in the Midwest rowing championships in Madison, Wisconsin. On May 8-10, the team will send one boat each to Philadelphia for the Dad Vail regatta and to Worcester, Massachusetts, for the Champion Intercollegiate regatta.

President Mike Kroeger is in charge of the team, while Rob Mareck and Beth Wood serve as captains of the men’s and women’s teams. The women’s coach is Bing Cheng and the men’s coach is Mark Mangelbrod.

The women’s team is looking forward to next season, when they will become the latest varsity team on campus. The benefits of being recognized as a varsity team include better equipment, more opportunities to race, and in general, much more funding to help defray costs and help spur interest in crew.

Women’s crew is growing as a varsity sport around the country, as is evident by the newly sanctioned NCAA women’s rowing championships.

Notre Dame has hired a coach for their newest varsity team; all the women know him well. This year’s novice coach, Martin Stone, will serve as the women’s varsity coach and bring many years of experience to his newly appointed position.

Junior Colleen Kraft is one of the women who is excited about the prospects of a varsity team—“We are all looking forward to next year. It will help things tremendously and we’ve been lucky to get to know and train with our coach before the season begins.”

Catcher Jeff Wagner is one home run shy of Notre Dame's all-time career high mark.

Wagner

As much as hitters are praised for their successful at bats, they are criticized more for the times they fail. His freshman season, Wagner struck out 43 times in 181 at bats, a man season, Wagner struck out the coaches — and the major praised for their successful at bats. This season, Wagner has drawn more walks (14) than per strikeout has dropped to 9.75.

"Wagner's a legitimate power hitter at important times," Notre Dame head coach Paul Mainieri said. "A lot of his home runs have tied and won games. He's a great hitter and a tough out. He's been his whole career."

Whenever he hits that next home run to move him out of the three-way tie with Jacobs and Mike Ankrum — who hit his 37th home run last May in a 4-3 win over Seton Hall in the Big East tournament — Wagner may not have too long to savour the spot at the top of the list. With Brant Ust sitting on 22 home runs just halfway through his sophomore season, Wagner, like Ankrum, might be playing with the player who will one day break his record.

"If anyone were to break the record," Wagner said. "I'd want it to be him. We'll see what happens. It's been exciting.

"Ireland's in the last three seasons have exploded for three of the top five home run sea- sons in school history, with last year's squad setting the record at 66. In 31 games so far in 1998, Notre Dame has sent 45 ferrency games this season for of Irish win ballgames.

It's been a pleasant surprise." Easter Sunday. A lot of us thought we wouldn't have a chance to hit that record home run.

"If Wagner's the leading home run hitter in all of college baseball, then he can go back to hitting singles and doubles to help the Irish win ballgames.

Irish shutout in doubleheader with Boilermakers

By BILL HART
Assistant Sports Editor

Sometimes a team’s hitting can thrive against an opponent. In other cases, it can go completely stagnant.

Unfortunately, the Fighting Irish softball team saw the latter scenario yesterday, as they were swept in an afternoon doubleheader by instate-rival Purdue at Ivy Field.

In the first game, neither team was able to establish any kind of offensive momentum until the fourth inning, when Purdue’s Skeeter Nixon reached first base on a throwing error. After advancing to third off a single and a fielder’s choice, a double by right fielder Mandy Smart scored her and teammate Lynn Tortorelli. It turned out to be the only insurance Boiler pitcher Sheryl Schewe needed, as the Irish bats were silent for most of the game.

“I think that Purdue was much more aggressive with their bats today,” head coach Liz Miller said about the visitors’ performance. “They came out swinging hard right from the first pitch, and they swung hard throughout both games.”

Despite a strong performance from pitcher Jennifer Sharron, whose record falls to 7-6 on the season, the Irish offense struggled, leaving only enough hits together for the team to score. The only bright spot in the hitting lineup was left fielder Danielle Klayman, who went 2-for-3 in the first game with a double in the fifth inning.

Despite winning, Purdue actually had a worse hitting performance, going 4-for-26 for the game.

In the nightcap, the Boilermakers continued to dominate the Irish, taking a 4-0 win to sweep the doubleheader. Unlike the previous game, Purdue used three runs in the first inning to take a commanding lead.

Assistant coach Lynne Sharron needed insurance for the Boilers, as Purdue scored an unearned run off of a single by Laura Bottino. The next batter then flew out, and stopped the bleeding for the Irish.

The closest the Irish came to scoring was in the bottom of the inning, when Amy Laboe and Kristin Mercier were both hit by two consecutive pitches from Purdue’s Jenny Dens.

Even with runners on first and second, the home team was unable to capitalize, as Jenny Deno regained control of the game and stranded them on base.

At the top of the next inning, the Boilers scored another run to put the game out of reach. “The Purdue pitching staff shined once again, with Deno pitching a three-hit complete game for the Boilermakers,” John Bottino said.

Nichols replaced Beassolo in the bottom of the first and stayed in control from the second inning on, allowing only four hits over six innings.

It was the poor hitting performance for the Irish, however, that prevented them from scoring. Over the course of the afternoon, the home team went 0-for-8 in the box. When runners were in scoring position, Notre Dame went 1-for-17.

“We got overawed and just didn’t do a very good job in those situations with pitch selection,” Miller said. “We were swinging at poor pitches in those situations. I think we swung at the first pitch almost every time.”

With the afternoon, the Irish fall to 17-18 on the season.

The sweep marked the first time Notre Dame was shut out of a doubleheader since 1992.

The Irish will have a chance to redeem themselves this afternoon when they host conference rival Seton Hall for a doubleheader at 4 p.m.

John and Anne Paulk

In Love and Out of Homosexuality

“As a lesbian, I found hurt people just wanting someone to love. As a Christian, I found loving people just wanting to heal my hurt.”

- Anne Paulk

Five years prior to meeting each other, John and Anne Paulk dramatically embarked upon leaving their respective gay life styles. Their quest for answers led them to Exodus International, the nation’s oldest organization aimed at helping men and women overcome their homosexual desires. It was there that they met, became friends, fell in love, and eventually married in 1992.

Since then the Paulks have shared their remarkable story of transformation extensively in national and international media, including Oprah, Good Morning America, ABC’s World News Tonight, and most recently, in a segment that aired three weeks ago, 60-Minutes.

John began a Christian ministry to help those who were searching for freedom from their homosexuality called the Portland Fellowship. Anne became president of the Oregon affiliate of Exodus International. Recently, John was hired by Dr. James Dobson, and he now works for Focus on the Family. John and Anne spend much of their time raising their son Timmy, who was born in December of 1996.

John and Anne will be at Notre Dame to tell their own stories of love and transformation.

Number three seed Full House, which now has assumed regular-season crown in Big Shore West, received some "breaking" news when they heard that they will be without Irish defensive end Brad Williams for the remain­der of the tournament. Williams suffered a broken ankle yesterday at football practice.

Despite the loss of Williams, off Shore drilling rolled to victory 21-5, with Irish kicker Jim Samson faking the void left by Williams. The team is now in search of a fifth.

Aside from the day's big story, it was mainly a battle between the sexes on Stepan.

Cajes Gose, composed of sophomores from Welsh's inter­hall squad, faced Team 256 made up of Alumni sopho­more.

They weren't ready for a game," sophomores Erika Niocoli and Stephanie Eden said about their preliminary round opponents, Team 256. "Not all girls can run in costumes. They weren't ready for a battle against women."

The game started off casually, but after the first couple of sequences Team 256 realized that this team meant business. As the game progressed, the crowd started to pull for Cajes Gose and Team 256's frustra­tion became more evident.

Eden and Sciola commanded their team from the guard position, calling for punts and fakes at random. Cajes Gose real­ized that the height advantage of Team 256 was too much, so they took their game to the outside.

Eden and Sciola were joined by fellow sophomores April Olsen, Jill Wermick and Caroline Grady. Cajes Gose's tenacity and sheer will kept their game close. They relied heavily on the outside shot and it kept the game close.

When the game started out, the crowd appeared sparse but by the end of the game there wasn't an empty spot on the perimeter of the court.

I lack of height down low ended up hurting the Welsh team in the end and Team 256 advanced, 21-16.

Another battle at Stepan took place between an all male and female team.

"Breaking" news at Bookstore regarding Full House

Three errors, three wild pitches, three walks, one sacri­ifice fly, one stolen base, a thwarted squeeze play, four lose hits and one double.

And all of that in one inning.

Thanks to some gifts from the Chicago State defense and some timely hitting by Irish batters, Notre Dame (21-19) scored eight runs in a wild sev­enth inning last night to defeat the Cougars 21-11.

But if the seventh inning was a storm, then the calm before­hand lasted for a full six innings. In those innings, the Irish stranded nine runners on base, and in three of the innings the Irish had runners in scoring position with less than two outs and were unable to get them runners home.

In the meantime, the Cougars were able to score five runs, making the most of several infield hits.

"Irish starting pitcher John Corbin got hurt by a couple of infield taggers," Notre Dame head coach Paul Mainieri said. "But in Chicago State's third, Corbin was able to get the big hits when those runners were in scoring position."

The Cougars would have gotten more if not for Corbin's ability to get batters to hit the ball on the ground. An Irish double play in the second inning saved one run, and another ground ball out ended the third inning with two runners aboard.

Mainieri also cited the pitching of Mike Naumann — who threw five innings in relief and won — as his key. "They hit a lot of ground ball outs, and that's key. When you're not a strike­out pitcher, you need to throw strikes that are going to be hit, but not hit too hard. Mike did that, and we were able to play good defense behind him."

Naumann varied the use of his fastball, change-up and slider to keep the Cougars from hitting him hard, and he went to the fastball in crucial situations.

"I was just trying to hit my spots, but I relied on my fastball the most because it tails away from righthanded batters," Naumann said.

Mike Carlin has helped the Irish to a 21-10 record, which includes a win over Chicago State yesterday.

Mainieri said of the walk­on freshman. "He got a lot of ground ball outs, and that's key. When you're not a strike­out pitcher, you need to throw strikes that are going to be hit, but not hit too hard. Mike did that, and we were able to play good defense behind him."

Naumann varied the use of his fastball, change-up and slider to keep the Cougars from hitting him hard, and he went to the fastball in crucial situations.

"I was just trying to hit my spots, but I relied on my fastball the most because it tails away from righthanded batters," Naumann said.

Wagner on target for new record

With his next home run, Jeff Wagner will become Notre Dame's equivalent of Hank Aaron.

Of course, he'll be hit 717 dingers behind Hammerin' Hank, but for the Irish, 38 home runs will set the individ­ual career mark.

"I don't classify myself as a power hitter," Wagner said Tuesday after hitting his 10th home run of the year in the 4-3 loss to Ball State. "I take pride in having a good eye at the plate and swinging at good pitches."

Wagner's numbers testify to all three aspects of his hitting game. His freshman year, the 6-foot-2, 210-pound lefty from Louisville, KY hit 10 home runs and followed that with 17 the next year. The Irish record for one season is Frank Jacobs' 20 in 1991.

While hitting the long ball, Wagner has maintained a respectable batting average, hitting .287 in 1996 and .374 last season. With a 2-for-5 day Wednesday in the 11-5 win against Chicago State, Wagner raised his '98 average to .342.

"He does a good job of getting a good pitch to hit," Irish hitting instructor Cory Mee said. "He gets good cuts and an aggres­sive hitter. Being a good hitter, the pitcher makes you get your­self out. He tries to get you to hit the pitcher's pitches. Being disciplined, (Wagner) works the count like most good hitters."
