Pendergast pleads guilty in point-shaving scandal

By PAUL SWAN
(The Daily Northwestern)

It was a gray, gloomy day outside, but federal prosecutors in the Northwestern point-shaving scandal got just what they wanted inside U.S. District Court in Chicago — the case's first guilty plea.

As expected, alleged mastermind Kevin Pendergast, 27, of Los Altos, Calif., pleaded guilty Thursday to one count of conspiracy to commit sports bribery, according to the terms of a plea bargain agreement.

"Mr. Pendergast has agreed to cooperate fully with the government's investigation," assistant U.S. Attorney Patrick Collins said. "We expect him to be one of our lead witnesses at trial."

Pendergast and his attorney, Thomas Foran, left the Dirksen Federal Building through a restricted exit and could not be reached for comment.

On March 26, Pendergast was indicted along with Brian Irving, 27, and former Wildcat players Kenneth Dion Lee, 24, and Dewey Williams, 25, in connection with a scheme to fix three Notre Dame basketball games during the 1994-95 season.

Prosecutors estimated that between $40,000 and $70,000 was bet on ND games against the University of Wisconsin, Penn State and the University of Michigan in February and March 1995 by Pendergast and a ring of gamblers.

Last Thursday, both Williams and Irving pleaded not guilty to all charges. Lee's arraignment was set for April 20.

After the arraignment, Pendergast was released on a $5,000 personal recognizance bond. At the government's request, his sentencing will be postponed until all trials in the case are over.

Collins said Pendergast, a former kicker for the Notre Dame football team, would normally face 15 months to 21 months in jail without a government recommendation for a reduction in sentence.

"We anticipate making a recommendation for downward departure," said Collins, who will be the lead prosecutor.

"But that is dependent on several factors — (Pendergast's) continued cooperation, his testimony at trial and his continuing

Civil suit names five former ND football players

South Bend attorney John Hosinski named five former Notre Dame football players in a $7.4 million civil suit filed against eight people on behalf of Dominiack Mechanical, Inc., a local business.

The company's owner, Jerry Dominiack, claimed that Lee Hecean, senior Jarvis Edison, Derrick Mays, Kisson Tatum and Ray Zellars knew of and profited from Kimberly Dunbar's alleged misappropriation of more than $1 million from Dominiack.

The lawsuit comes two weeks after St. Joseph County prosecutor Michael Barnes officially charged Dunbar, a former employee of Dominiack, with two class C felonies for allegedly embezzling more than $230,000.

"(The players) either partook in the conversion of, or profited from or knowingly participated in the distribution or use of these wrongfully converted proceeds," Hosinski told the South Bend Tribune.

"A great deal of evidence that we have available indicates that more than Miss Dunbar is involved in the taking of this money," he added, though did not disclose the aforementioned evidences.

None of the defendants could be reached for comment.

Dennis Moore, director of Public Relations and Information at Notre Dame, said he knew of no connection between the players and the crime.

Huerta advocates rights of farm-workers, immigrants

"If you were on a desert island, who would you want with you — an attorney, an accountant, or a farm worker?"

she asked the audience. The answer was a resounding "farm worker."

"When you sit down to eat, give a special blessing for those that feed us — their work is the most sacred work of all," Huerta said. "Why should the people who do the most important work of all have no rights?"

Huerta discussed the situation of race relations and immigration in California.

"It has not been the immigrants who did anything wrong to the economy," Huerta said. "The anti-immigrant rhetoric is a diversion so we really were not questioning what goes on in our country. Immigrants pay seven times more in taxes than they get back in benefits."

"They (the California legislature) want to make it illegal to teach children in the language they understand," Huerta said, discussing the initiative against bilingual education in

Quit, don't spit

Please don't call me in this hour ever, I'm waiting for a very important phone call.

I know - who's not?

This is the season of job applications and announcements.

This is the hour for which I am waiting will tell me whether or not my cancer is real. If I do, put away the viewfinder because there will have been, as is most cancer, self-inflicted. I will have gotten it from chewing tobacco.

I chewed for the first time when I was 12. For many, chewing is as much a part of the national past time as the hot dog. Unfortunately, for the last generation of half-smokers, chewing cancer is also a very intimate part of the game.

The pictures of this past generation of ballplayers began to hit the national media when I was almost 18. I stopped cold. These pictures, beside the characters from "Mask" and "Man Without A Face" seem downright attractive. At least they did where smoke-faces, so I stopped cold. After six years.

For those for which it is not possible, you must understand, you are weak. There is no other word for it. If you want to stop and you can't, you are weak. And one thing only. When I began to quit, I never had a "bump" on my lip. I wanted it to go away, so I stopped chewing. It may have been too late.

A work like this will completely alter your outlook on life. I think one of the funniest expressions around is when people say they "drink their coffee black" or "smoke without a filter" - that is, who quit dipping for lint — altered the saying to say he "chewed his face off," the expression lost its originality to me the moment I heard it. It was a good statement. It was said after the first few years, I would feel better not put myself in danger of any type of cancer — that the body would rid itself of any carcinogenic buildup.

Selig addresses MLB's expansion, growing markets

By DAN CICHALSKI
Senior Staff Writer

Allan "Bud" Selig, Major League Baseball's interim commissioner and president and CEO of the Milwaukee Brewers, presented his ideas on the present and future of baseball and sports in America yesterday in the College of Administration's Jordan Auditorium.

The current state of America's national pastime — and of all sports, really — can be traced to an arbitrator's decision in December 1975. Like Jim "Catfish" Hunter the year before, Andy Messersmith and Davey McNally were ruled free agents just before Christmas that year, and were no longer bound to their current teams, making them able to sign with any club.

"Baseball would never be the same," Selig said. The reserve clause had been issued various times in the '40s and '50s, but had stood the test of time to that point.

Hunter went from the Oakland A's to the New York Yankees. In the wave of free-agents that followed during the decade, other players moved around too, like Reggie Jackson, who also signed with the Brewers, in November 1976. So did the entire Los Angeles Dodgers, who moved to Las Vegas.

"There was much concern about the disparity between markets, that the best free agents would all go to the teams with the most money," Selig said. "That was a huge change right off the bat. Reggie Jackson went to the Yankees. The Brewers wanted Sal Bando, and we eventually did sign him as a free agent, and now he's our general manager."

"Baseball tried to adjust to a new era. That's frankly what this has been about," added Selig.

"Since the changes in the '70s, the makeup of professional sports has continued to shift. A team's city and surrounding area are now big factors in how much money it can generate and which players it can afford to acquire."

"It used to be the size of the market didn't matter," Selig said. "My all-time hero is Joe DiMaggio. With DiMaggio, Ted Williams, Stan Musial, there was a permanence, a stability to baseball and sports that many generations grew up with."

"Now, the permanence has vanished, nothing is guaranteed to hang around anymore. The longest labor dispute in any sport shut baseball down from August 1994 to March 1995. This cycle added a great many publicly-financed stadiums and threatening to move if they do not receive them. Some teams are spending money to no end to buy themselves a winning roster.

"Baseball and sports changed as the rest of the world did, very dramatically," Selig said. "To sports what you have is faith and hope. And on March 31 every year, you have to make sure your fans have that feeling their team can win."

"At least those fans who still come out to the ballpark. But Selig hinted that the grudge held by fans since the strike may almost be gone."

"In 1949, the greatest year all three New York teams had, they drew 2.2 million people," explained Selig, who once hoped to become a history professor. "In 1993 the Colorado Rockies drew 4.7 million. In the days baseball enjoyed its greatest popularity, teams drew 13,000 fans a game. This year we have a chance for the all-time attendance record even without the two expansion teams. We could reach 70 million fans. Last year the minor leagues broke their record with 34 million and expect 34 to 35 million this year. We could have 100 million people attending baseball games this year."

And for those 100 million fans who just might make it out to the ball game, Selig said the recent changes — which have all been for the good of the game — are not all that will come. There will be more structural changes, perhaps more expansion and further realignment. But, Selig stressed, the most important changes will be economic.

"Nobody understands as well as I do how painful the labor conflicts have been," he said.

"But what you don't want to happen is that in the World Series and playoffs, you don't want the highest payroll teams to be there every year."

"The solution to this high pay-roll problem will be revenue sharing," Selig said. Smaller-market teams will benefit from the profits of teams in larger areas, enabling them to compete financially for the star players.

"Revenue sharing is one thing all sports will need," Selig said. "We need to be competitive. It's not like any other business, you need to be competitive. It will take three to four years to complete. Next game's bottom six clubs will get $125 to $140 million from the top six."

A more permanent end to the financial disparities will come down to restructuring how much teams spend in building their potential World Series champions.

"Labor peace will be about cost restraint — in the NFL and NBA they call it the salary cap," Selig said. "We're going to need at least some degree of specific cost restraint in all sports. We need to maintain that competitive balance."

"Restricted by a tight schedule, Selig concluded his prepared remarks with some comments about the changes that have already been made, especially the divisional realignment, the addition of wild card teams in the post season, and interleague play.

"I don't ever forget criticism," Selig said, prefacing his comments about the three-division format. "The so-called purists were outraged because we were changing a social institution that was resistant to change. But today there isn't anybody that would change what's been done."

Interleague play, though, drew just as much criticism. But Selig was excited from the start.

"In January 1996 in Los Angeles, I was so happy. I'll never forget how great it felt about that. It wasn't that attendance at the games was up 23-and-a-half percent last year. It was that TV ratings were up 40 percent. It was the electricity in the ballpark, the excitement everywhere. People just loved it."

"Three-fourths of the crowd at Wrigley Field for the first Brewers-Cubs game was from Wisconsin. The crowd was just going wild. I was at home listening to the game on the radio, and I couldn't hear Bob Uecker because the crowd was so loud. I watched the Dodgers-Angels game just like any other fan. I was so happy. I'll never forget how great it felt about that."

there was no evidence linking players to the embezzlement," he said.

Hosinski told the Tribune that he named those five play­ers because they appeared to have the closest relationships with Dunbar, based in part on the frequency with which she mentions their names in her diary. Also, Dunbar has a 2-year-old daughter with Edison.

The NCAA Investigation

The National Collegiate Athletic Association is now investigating claims that Dunbar, Dominick's former bookkeeper, used stolen funds to purchase plane tickets, jewelry and tickets to high-priced sporting events for 12 former and current Notre Dame football players, including the five named in the suit, between 1993-98.

The University learned of the gifts and reported them to the NCAA on Feb. 23, and followed up with an internal investigation. The University said its search, a report of which was sent to the NCAA, revealed the gifts violated no regulations, and the players had no involvement in any illegal activities.

"It seemed clear that the players understood [these presents] as gifts from a friend," said Moore. "They had no idea of the source of the gifts."

The new lawsuit is unlikely to have any immediate impact on the ongoing NCAA investigation of the incident, according to NCAA Director of Enforcement Mark Jones.

Collins said it was still too early to discuss whether Pendergast would face jail time, noting that the final sentencing decision rests in the hands of Judge Charles R. Norgle, Sr.

One unique aspect of the plea bargain is an agreement by Pendergast to work with the FBI and NCAA for up to five years on "any and all programs designed to educate and inform students, athletes and others of the risks and dangers associated with various forms of gambling," the plea agreement said.

Pendergast would be involved, without limitation, "live speaking appearances, video-taped interviews and presenta­tions to individuals and groups."

"We want to get this program going right away," said Mark Vogel, deputy chief of the U.S. Attorney's organized crime division. "I think that (Pendergast) is going to add a credibility fac­tor.

State will not punish brothers in sexual assault

DALLAS

Two brothers cannot be punished for their confessed roles in the sexual assault of a 5-year-old girl because they are under age 10, but at age 9, the boy could face charges up to 40 years in prison, officials said Tuesday. The boys took the girl from a van outside her home, stomped her and then dragged her down a concrete aqueduct, Walsh said. Under Texas law, the brothers, ages 7 and 8, cannot be held responsible for their alleged actions because of their age. They are expected to testify against the older boy, Walsh said.

Anatomy International reports massacres by Myanmar army

BANGKOK, Thailand

The Myanmar army has tortured and killed hundreds of ethnic Shun villagers in the last two years and forced at least 300,000 to flee their homes, a new report said Wednesday. Children, elderly people and Buddhist monks among the victims, the London-based human rights group said in its report. "Witnesses described the most horrific methods of killing, including beating and kicking to death, stabbing, smashing heads in, shooting in the back of the head, and beating to death a woman over the victim's body and shooting," the report said. The military regime in Myanmar, which is also known as Burma, rejected the allegations.

4,000 Iranians protest arrest of mayor

TEHRAN, Iran

Hot inflamed passions of people demonstrating in support of Tehran mayor, who was jailed, was turned into a showdown between hard-liners and moderates in Iran's Islamic government. About 300 riot police broke up the rally outside Tehran University near the center of the capital. Witnesses said about 30 protesters were arrested, but police refused to comment.

Signaling a sharper focus to his national dialogue on race, President Clinton on Tuesday urged Americans to look to the world of sports as a way to discuss issues of race in American society. "It is important that people see that in athletics in America that the rules are fair, that people get their fair chance," Clinton said in leading off a 105-minute nationally televised discussion on the role of race in sports. An avid fan of college basketball and major professional sports, Clinton is well versed in sensitive issues like race while dominating in coaching and recruiting. He said that if professional sports wants more minority coaches but cannot find them, "then there's something wrong with recruitment." The meeting, broadcast live on ESPN, was the second of Clinton's three planned nationally televised town hall meetings on race. The first was in Akron last December. The 11-member panel discussed several topics but returned often to the relative shortage of minorities in top sports management jobs. "America, rightly or wrongly, is a sports crazy country," he said. "And we often see games as a metaphor or symbol of what we are as a people." Black men have found enormous success in American sports. Many of the best marketed and highest paid professional athletes, such as basketball's Michael Jordan and baseball's Ken Griffey Jr., are black. Yet certain settings show in the sport business, he said.

In Houston, the forum's makeup angered Latino activists who complained that too few Hispanics were represented. Falelio Lopez, a basketball star at St. John's University, was the only Hispanic on the 11-member panel.

Virginia executes Paraguayan man

A Paraguayan man who stabbed a woman to death was executed Tuesday night despite requests by Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and the World Court that the sentence be blocked. The 15-member United Nations Tribunal ruled last week that the execution should be blocked because Virginia authorities failed to notify Paraguay of Angel Francisco Breard's arrest as required by an international treaty, the Vienna Convention. Breard, 32, was executed by injection shortly after 5 a.m. Jim Gilmore refused to stop the sentence from being carried out.

Breard said delay of the execution "would have the practical effect of transferring responsibility from the courts of the commonwealth and the United States to the International Court." Earlier in the day the U.S. Supreme Court, in a 6-3 decision, also refused to block it. In Tuesday's unsigned opinion, the Supreme Court said Breard failed to assert his claim in state court that the treaty had been violated, and therefore lost his right to raise that issue in federal court.

Breard was not informed of his right to seek help from his country's embassy when he was arrested for the 1992 murder and attempted rape of both sisters in Richmond. Rulings by the World Court are not binding. The court had wanted the execution delayed while its judges decide if Breard deserved a new trial.

Albright joined the debate Monday night, asking Gilmore to delay the execution because she was concerned that the case could jeopardize the safety of Americans arrested in other countries.

"The execution of Mr. Breard in the present circumstances could lead some countries to contend incorrectly that the U.S. does not take seriously its obligations under the Convention," Albright wrote in a letter to Gilmore. Albright said Tuesday that although Breard was convicted of a heinous crime, she intervened because "we need to make clear there are foreign policy aspects." Gilmore had said he shared Albright's concern about the safety of Americans abroad, but "I'm also concerned about the safety of the people of Virginia." People are entitled to know they will be safe in their homes.

Both Virginia's attorney general and the U.S. Justice Department recommended to the Supreme Court that the execution be allowed to proceed.

California public schools. "I call this the prison preparatory program. What are they student going to do if they don't understand what's going on? They're going to drop out." "Spanish should be a required language for everybody," Huerta said. The statement was greeted by applause and cheers from the audience. Huerta then discussed the situation of women and minorities in the U.S. government. She cited statistics that women make up 52 percent of the U.S. population, but only 11 percent of top positions in business and 5 percent of the Senate.

"At the rate we're going, how long will it take us to get gender and ethnic equality in our Senate?" she asked. "Almost 300 years. Are we willing to wait that long?"

The audience answered with a chorus of "No!"

"We cannot have a democracy unless we have representation," Huerta said. "It's a responsibility we have to take. We should not wait to be invited."

Huerta then specifically discussed the positions of women in society and political discourse.

"In our society, the women are supposed to be the support system for the men," she said. "Women are not assets. We are not sex objects." "We may not want to say we are more than men, we do not want power over them," she said. "We want to help men—to want to make them independent so they do not have to depend on women. We want to make men strong by making them independent."

"As we sit here right now, somewhere a woman is getting beaten up, a woman is getting killed, because there's still the mentality out there that a man owns a woman," Huerta said.

"When a woman is liberd, the market is liberated, the community is liberated, the nation is liberated," she said. Returning to the problems of the workers, Huerta stressed the idea of respect.

"We're not taught to respect working people, and those are the people to be the most respected," Huerta said. "We become professionals to serve the working people. We're not better—we're lucky."

"The question is, what can I do with my life to make the world a better place?" she asked.

Huerta discussed some of the problems farm workers face when attempting to organize, including terror tactics, physical attacks, and the refusal of the companies to negotiate with their workers.

"We have to make things better using our collective strength," she said.
Jenky to ordain two ND deacons at Basilica

This Saturday at 1:30 p.m., the Basilica of the Sacred Heart will be the center of religious prosperity as two deacons of the Roman Catholic Church will be ordained to the priesthood in the Congregation of Holy Cross.

These two men are Rev. Mr. Gary S. Chamberland and Rev. Mr. Thomas P. Doyle. Both men will be ordained by Rev. Daniel III. Jenky, auxiliary bishop of the Ft. Wayne-South Bend diocese.

Rev. Chamberland, son of Raymond and Rita Chamberland, Jr., of Englewood, Fl., is the youngest of seven children. Both his mother and father are retired and his six siblings live all over the country — Major Raymond Chamberland, Ill., of Edwards Air Force Base, Cal.; Terrence M. of St. Barrington, Mass.; Karen of Sheffield, Mass.; Kevin who lives in Baldwinville, N.Y.; Catherine Keliing, also of St. Barrington; and Brian who lives in Canton, Conn.

Rev. Chamberland was born in New Marlborough, Mass., in 1962. He attended Dewey and Bryant Schools in Great Barrington, Mass. St. Teresa Middle School and graduated from Monument Mountain Regional High School in 1980. He entered the University of Notre Dame in 1980 and received a bachelor of arts degree in American Studies in 1984. Following graduation he served for one year as a Holy Cross Associate (lay volunteer program) in Portland, Ore. After receiving a master of divinity degree from the University of California at Berkeley, he spent two years teaching at a Catholic grammar school in nearby Alameda, Cal. He then worked as a resident director and adjunct theology instructor at the University of Portland from 1992-95 before returning to South Bend.

During formation he assisted at the South Bend Justice and Peace Center; Penrose Hospital, Colorado Springs, Colo.; Kaiser Hospital in Oakland, Calif.; Jubilee West in Oakland; and Audre House in Phoenix, Ariz., and co-directed the Holy Cross Associates in Hayward, Calif. He is now a deacon at Christ the King Parish where he helps direct the confirmation, bap­ tism, and marriage preparation programs.

Father Chamberland will offer his first Mass of Thanksgiving at Christ the King Church on Sunday at 8:45 a.m. He will offer Mass of celebra­tion of his ordination at St. Peter’s Church on April 26 at 11 a.m., and at St. Raphael’s Church on May 17 at 10:30 a.m.

Second of five children, Rev. Doyle was born in Cotiville, Wash., in 1967. Son of W. J. and Donna Doyle, Rev. Doyle was baptized and confirmed at Immaculate Conception Parish. He will be celebrating a Mass of Thanksgiving there this Memorial Day weekend.

Rev. Doyle’s siblings also live in various parts of the country, and he has one sister, Katy, who lives in McConnell Tract, British Columbia. His brothers Bill and Mike both live in Spokane and his other sister, Molly, is doing a year of volun­ teer service with the Holy Cross Associates’ program in Phoenix.

He attended Alter/Hofstetter grammar school and graduated from Colville High School in 1985 where he was student body president and awarded the Beachwarming’s scholar­ ship. He entered Notre Dame in 1985, graduating in 1989 with academic honors and a bache­ lor of arts degree in philosophy.

While an undergraduate student at Notre Dame he worked with the Notre Dame football team, was president of Grace Hall, and served as student body president during his senior year. Five years prior to meeting each other, John and Anne Paulk dramatically embarked on leaving their respective gay life­ styles. Their quest for answers led them to Exodus International, the nation’s oldest organization aimed at helping men and women overcome their homosexual desires. It was there that they met, became friends, fell in love, and eventually married in 1992.

Since then the Paulks have shared their remarkable story of transformation extensively in national and international media, including Oprah, Good Morning America, ABC’s World News Tonight, and most recently, in a segment that aired three weeks ago, 60 Minutes.

John began a Christian ministry to help those who were searching for freedom from their homosexuality called the Portland Fellowship. Anne became president of the Oregon affiliate of Exodus International. Recently, John was hired by Dr. James Dobson, and he now works for Focus on the Family. John and Anne spend much of their time raising their son Timmy, who was born in December of 1996.

John and Anne will be at Notre Dame to tell their own stories of love and transformation.

View Life Through Faith

As a teenager, I was blessed in having the opportunity to help the Sisters at our parish church prepare for the great feasts of the liturgical year. This extra involvement in Christmas, Easter, the May Crowning, Corpus Christi processions, Confirmation Mass and so forth brought me that much closer to the meaning of these special days.

“Getting my hands dirty,” so to speak, helped me understand the ceremonies, the songs, the readings.

Last year, a young man I know was blessed to have a similar chance, quite by accident. One of his friends, Joe, is a junior's assistant at the parish school. The pastor asked Joe to come on Holy Saturday and help decorate the church for Easter. Any extra bodies Joe could bring along would be most welcome, also. My friend Lucas was the only “body” who answered Joe's call.

Five hours these young men spent at the church. They returned home, exhausted but smiling. I was told how they hung the huge banners, arranged the Easter flowers, draped gold bunting around the large marble Crucifix balanced on a ladder ten feet above the floor; and moved the life-size statue of St. Joseph without a dolli. Both young men looked forward to returning that evening for the Easter Vigil, instead of going on their usual outing to the roller skating rink.

Lucas even mentioned to me that he was interested in being an altar server again, something he’d done while in grade school. And he was very protective of the olive wood cross the pastor gave him, “made from the trees in the Garden of Gethsemani.” No way would he let it get broken.

To see a young man so inspired warms my heart. It’s happened before: during a summer at C.Y.O. Camp. One of the counselors was a seminarian, and became good friends with the young men in his care. Some returned home after that week, said and spoke of considering the priesthood. This touched me deeply. One boy's strategy was to find a way to be a priest, a mechanic, and fly planes all at the same time. I told him, “Anything is possible, if you put your mind to it.”

And he will, I hope, at some point. Any soul that is inspired by a positive example has a better chance to accomplish great things, fulfill dreams, hear God’s call. Just as modern comedians credit Milton Berle or Jonathan Winters for their inspiration, or would-be astronomers see heroes in John Glenn or Christa McAuliffe, so we need to see those who stand for the dignity of the poor, for the faith, for life.

Am I such an example? Are we, the community of Notre Dame? Looking out the window, I see strife and conflict in our neighborhoods, even on campus. I wish every young people took advantage of opportunities to really get involved and see how meaningful and precious faith — life — can be. I look to these souls as the future. All we can do is try to teach them the Truth, and pray.

Fishing was not the only passion that Peter pursued in his life. He was a man of many talents and interests. For years, he had been a fishing boat owner, and his passion for fishing was not just for the sport but also for the social aspect. He enjoyed being out on the water, watching the sun rise and set, and listening to the sounds of the sea. Peter was not just a fisherman; he was also a writer, a poet, and a speaker. He could captivate his audience with his stories and words. He was a man of simple pleasures, and he loved nothing more than fishing and sharing his experiences with others.

Mr. Kutz's letter mentioned that Peter was late to the meeting, which made him feel like he was already failing his task. But Peter knew that being late was not the end of the world. He had always been that way, and he was too proud to change. He believed that being late was a mark of his personality, and he was not going to let anyone change that.

Peter was also known for his eloquence. He could turn a phrase, pick a word, and make it sound beautiful. He was a master of storytelling, and he could hold his audience captive with his words. His stories were filled with humor and drama, and he could make his listeners laugh or cry with just a few words.

Peter's passion for fishing was not just for himself; it was for the people around him. He was always looking for ways to help others, and he believed that fishing was a way to bring people together. He was known for his generosity and his willingness to share his knowledge with others. He was a man of his word, and he always kept his promises.

David Weiss's letter to the editor was a call to action. He was urging the United States to help put peace process on track. He believed that peace was possible and that the United States could play a significant role in achieving it. ### Ani DiFranco In Concert

By DOMINIC CARUSO

Ani DiFranco is a heroine for anyone with a guitar, a little talent, and a dream that they can be real musicians without selling his or her soul to the corporate machine. Failing to meet the industry standard for "alternative music" (meaning generally a group of photogenic guys with a couple of cords on guitars and a slot on MTV Buzzbin.) Ms. DiFranco succeeds in creating her own music and presenting it to her ever expanding fan base unconstrained from the rules of the music industry.

A lifelong resident of Buffalo, New York, Ms. DiFranco's first experience with music were not from the narrow spectrum of radio or television but from intimate encounters with live performers. Working musicians from Buffalo bars and other small venues often spent the night at her family's home on their way to other gigs.

These close relationships and first-hand experiences lit Ms. Difranco's own passion for recording. tape containing raw songs about her own experiences, ranging from relationships to tragic events. Ms. DiFranco decided to release the first album alone, without the financial support of a record label, which would continue for her next ten albums and one EP.

This perhaps is the most charismatic aspect of Ani DiFranco: her refusal to give in to the corporate animal. Her control over her own music is absolute, Ani decides when her albums come out, what songs get released, what merchandising looks like and where it is produced (usually in her home town Buffalo), which singles get pressed, and which songs become videos. Ms. DiFranco's seventeen person company "Righteous Babe Records" is a "small business that puts music before rock-starism and ideology before profit."

Other artists that supposedly have their own label stream successes. After being a guest on both Late Night with David Letterman and the Conan O'Brien Show which was included on the first track of the Live From A.D. (1) Ms. DiFranco's usual fan base of near cultists, ardent fans attracted by her "feminist lyrics" and passionate guitar strumming may be augmented by those who haven't been with her every step of her way.

However, politics, sexual orientation, and financial concerns aside, the biggest attraction to Ani DiFranco is her music itself. It is difficult to name any one for possibly limited to several songs that adequately capture the range of Ms. DiFranco's ability to produce music. She has performed regularly, with drums and bass, and with an orchestra. Her albums have included spoken word, dance remixes, and a double live album. Her songwriting is deeply personal, and the listener can hear the honesty and depth of emotion poured into each song.

However, Ani DiFranco is, first and foremost, a live performer. A liter ability to relate with the crowd, which is often a concert hall filled to capacity, is masterful. Songs performed live can sometimes bear previous little resemblance to their studio counterpart. Her constant touring has honed this ability to a razor edge unparalleled in the indie music industry, especially for a performer of her age. Ani DiFranco show live is an experience. Her natural charisma, energy, and vitality all come through far more clearly than on her studio work. Live, she will convert those who had been skeptical of her fans to ardent followers. Missing her tonight at Step Ani DiFranco Center at eight will be missing a future legend.

Ani's latest offering

The eccentric and outspoken Ani DiFranco has reinvented herself yet again with her 11th album, Little Plastic Castle. Laced with hints of ska, latin and jam-based rock, not to mention a plethora of studio effects, her latest album is her most eclectic yet. While she explores various genres music with a more controlled confidence, DiFranco still preserves her most defining characteristics of melding unique guitar melodies and graphic lyrics throughout the album.

The album begins with the title track, "Little Plastic Castle," in what appears to be an understated piece about life's lessons and their con­stant presence. She sounds poignant and emo­tional a top her Gibson four-string guitar, an appropriately understated instrument. DiFranco then foreshadows what is to come on the remainder of the album as horns burst in with a half-time ska texture at the chorus: expect the unexpected. On the third piece, "Gravel," which also appeared on her previous live release, Living InClip, she reduces her formula to the three-piece band, and her lyrics are quintessen­tial Ani: "Let me count the ways that I adore you. You were never a good lay, and you were never a good friend but what can I say, I adore you." Spoken word pieces "Fist" and "Pulse," affirm her mastery of the English language, which should place her name in the vocabulary of great 20th century female lyricists.

Her songwriting has constantly improved, and the variety of styles that include listener-friendly hooks "As Is," "Loom," and "Independence Day") contrast well with the aforementioned groove-oriented pieces that serve more as back­drop soundscapes for her spoken word than pieces in- and- of-themselves.

Adding texture and color to DiFranco's sound are regulars Andy Stochansky on the drums and Jason Mercer on bass, both veterans of her past two tours. However, a bevy of other musicians include percussionist Jerry Marotta, of Peter Gabriel and Indigo Girl fame, and trump­eter Jon Hassell. Most noteworthy is Hassell's performance on "Pulse," as he layers some ethereal phrases over an improvised bridge section. The organic ten minute extended jam functions as a well-placed denouement for DiFranco's typi­cally brief and to-the-point pieces.

While "Little Plastic Castle" is DiFranco's most instru­mentally and lyrically eclectic album, it also reaffirms that her acoustic guitar work, lyrics and vocal melodies are her forte. She stays close enough to this that the added instru­mentation and variety of styles generally com­plement her and do not detract from the perform­ance. All things considered, this is her strongest and most consistent effort yet. Don't miss her live performance tonight at Stepan Center.

David Garza

David Garza's latest recording effort, This Euphoria, marks his major-record label debut on Atlantic Records. Garza, a Texas native, is finally receiving the recognition he deserves as a musician after hav­ing produced on his Wide Open label for almost ten years. For those unfamiliar with his seduc­tive, movement-inducing tunes, Garza performs the self-proclaimed "Latin-funk thing." As an accomplished guitarist and singer - the cultural intersection of Jimmy Page, Mexican folk music and 1980s pop deconstruction - Garza moves freely among acoustic saha grooves, bass-dri­ven dance riffs, and dreamy love songs à la Richie Valens. Regardless of the stylistic form chosen, songs by Garza ensure absolute listener pleasure.

This Euphoria is a 13 track mixture of previ­ously released songs and other songs released for the first time. Garza's latest musical trend of combining bass, drums and guitar with some kitschy lo-fi sampling (don't miss the Casio key­board loop) appears in songs like the slyke title track "This Euphoria," the driving "Close to the Dark," and the fast-paced "Discoball World" filled with "dreadlock white girls and laptop loru­ers." The result is pure Davfd magic as it inspires the smooth motion of bodily extremities.

The older songs on the album fluctuate between remaining true-to-form and bordering overly produced. "Slave," a delectable reggae number also found on the Great Expectations soundtrack, shows Garza's musical diversity while maintaining a style consistent with its orig­i­nal release.

However, other tracks like "Core" and "Baptiste" have lost their intoxicating reverb excess in favor of a safer, produced influence. Not to worry; the songs that have undergone the most change since appearing on the earlier albums Blind Flip In Motion and Conmigo main­tain their essential Davfd beauty albeit in an altered form. Some change in the songs' perfor­mance keeps things fresh for Garza, but that experimentation might fit better into a live venue than it does on the album.

This Euphoria comes with high recommenda­tions and should soon find its way into all music lovers' CD collections. The album has the poten­tial not only to focus national attention on a tal­ented young star but also the long-neglected diversity of the Austin music scene which proudly holds the title of "live music capital of the world." The energy-packed live showmanship of Garza will not disappoint as he opens for another long under-appreciated musical talent, Ani DiFranco tonight at Stepan Center. So take in some rhythmic Texas sunshine in the form of David Garza tonight, and be sure pick up This Euphoria as a souvenir of that brilliance.

Symposium Theme

Religious actors and communities have emerged in the post-Cold War world as powerful sources of legitimacy for religious hatreds and ethnonationalist violence on the one hand, and as defenders of human rights and agents of conflict resolution and peacebuilding on the other.

This symposium will examine the dual roles of religion in deadly conflict, consider their interrelationship, and explore policy implications for interreligious cooperation, security and human rights initiatives.

Sobrero invited to national team camp

By ALLISON KRILLA

Notre Dame's heralded pitching staff has been solid throughout the team's recent 16-1 run, but it's the clutch hitting that is responsible for its 26-10 mark on the year.

Last night the Irish added a doubleheader sweep of Manhattan, taking the first game 11-1 and the nightcap 3-2.

Larry Zimont provided the heroes with two home runs, the first two of his career, in back-and-forth at-bats.

In the second, Zimont took an Eric Fike offering deep to left field scoring deep two of four Irish runs in the inning.

"I was happy for Larry Zimont," said head coach Paul Mainieri. "I know he's been waiting to hit that long ball for a long time. He got two home runs in the first game, and he had a big hit in the second game. It was great. I was really happy and proud of him."

Zimont's second dinger came in the fourth inning — another shot pulled over the wall in left.

"It was just a nice feeling to be able to come out and get a chance to play," said Zimont. "And to actually hit a couple out was relieving."

Notre Dame (26-10) jumped out to a 10-0 lead, allowing Irish reserves extensive playing time, including St. Joe graduate Matt Nossbaum, former Mike Najmian and relief pitcher Pat Davis, who saw action at first base.

Lefty Tim Kalita combined with John Corbin and Mike Carlin for the seven-inning game, blanking the Spartans until the seventh when pinch hitter Eugene Peoples singled, advanced on an error and scored the team's lone run.

Pitching dominated the second game, as Scott Cavey picked up his first win and Big East rookie of the week Aaron Heilman tossed one and one-third innings for his fifth save.

"I thought Cavey had a real quality start," said Mainieri. "He made one bad pitch, a high fastball in the strike zone to [Matt Dyeri], and he hit a double for two runs, but otherwise I thought he pitched really well."

"What can you say about Aaron Heilman — he’s done it all year for us. He’s been a tremendous weapon."

Allen Greene knocked in the game-winner, a two-out pinch-hit single in the fifth that scored Ben Cooke from second. "Last year Al started all but one game; it was against Purdue, and I think the same thing happened," said Mainieri. "I put him in the game as a pinch hitter, and he won the game. I might have to consider doing that on a regular basis."

The Manchester sweep comes on the heels of two Big East wins over Villanova (9-4, 14-10) and a 4-1 defeat of University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

Against UWM, catcher Jeff Wagner slammed a two-run homer in the fourth inning, his 38th career dinger, to break the Notre Dame record previously held by Frank Jacobs (1989-91) and Mike Amrhein (1994-97).

of the season, it looked as if the Irish were poised to start another one of their scoring streaks that have led them to victory several times this year.

Instead the Orange went on to 14-4 haltime lead. During that stint, five different people scored for Syracuse, including the fourth and fifth goals for Szyluk, and the Irish were behind scoreless for the last 16 minutes of the half.

The beginning of the second half looked just like the end of the first, with Syracuse scoring the first three goals of the half to build their biggest lead of the game at 17-4. At 19:13, 27 minutes after the last Notre Dame goal, freshman Lael O’Shaughnessy scored on a free-position goal to make the score 17-5.

The teams traded goals back and forth over the next 19 minutes, with neither team scoring more than two in a row.

The Irish got the last goal, however. With the ball down in the Notre Dame area, senior Holly Manthorpe picked up the groundball and passed downfield to a streaking Sarah LaSueur who went one on one with Syracuse’s goalie and beat her.

“Sarah’s goal was important because it shows that we worked hard to the end. It proved we were mentally tough,” stated Coyne.

Irish sweep Seton Hall in conference home opener

Special to The Observer

Notre Dame’s softball team opened its home Big East schedule with a 7-0 and 8-0 doubleheader sweep of Big East South Division opponent Seton Hall on Saturday at Ivie Field. Freshmen pitchers Jennifer Sharron and Melanie Alkire threw complete-game one-hit shutouts for the Irish who pounded out 21 hits, including four doubles and four triples. Freshman Lizzy Lemire sparked the Irish offensively in the first game as she hit 3-3 with a triple and four RBI. Freshman Danielle Klayman went 3-3 in the second game with a triple, two runs scored and two RBI.

The two wins moved Notre Dame into a tie with Villanova for first in the South Division. Seton Hall and Notre Dame were scheduled to play a doubleheader on Wednesday, April 9, and a single game on Saturday, but rain on Wednesday shortened the three-game series into a Saturday doubleheader.

Notre Dame improves to 19-18, 6-3 in the Big East while Seton Hall falls to 12-16-1, 0-11 in the conference.

Sharron faced just three batters over the seven-inning minimum in the first game as she allowed just one hit and struck out six Pirates to improve to 8-0.

Jerry Giampaolo sparked the Irish once again in the second game with a triple to lead off the first, followed by an RBI single by Alkire. Klayman later made it 2-0 in the first with a single to send home Amy Laboe, who had walked to reach base.

Seton Hall threatened to cut the lead in half in the third inning when Jenkins-Beaver walked, went to second on a sacrifice bunt, advanced to third on a groundball but was stranded at third.

Notre Dame built a 5-0 lead in the fourth as the Irish took advantage of two Seton Hall errors to score three runs on three hits. Klayman tripled home Lemire in the fifth and a single in the sixth, Lemire ended the game after five innings. After Nakabayashi broke up Alkire’s no-hit bid in the top of the sixth, Lemire ended the game by the eight-run rule with a sacrifice fly to score Laboe in the bottom of the sixth.

Notre Dame splits holiday weekend matches in ACC

By TIM CASEY
Spokes Writer

The women’s tennis team continued its long road match against Atlantic Coast Conference teams by splitting their matches with Wake Forest and Duke.

The Irish scored one of their biggest wins of the season on Thursday against 11th-ranked Wake Forest.

Five of the six singles players recorded victories, as did all three doubles teams.

At first singles, Jennifer Hall scored a straight set victory over Nicola Kaiwai by 6-2, 6-1. Hall, the Irish's unseeded junior qualifier for the NCAs in both singles and doubles last year, second singles player Michelle Dasso improved her unseeded dual record to 20-0, with a 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 win against Maribel Verhulst.

Marissa Velasco and Tiffany Gates continued the Irish's win streak at third and fourth singles, Velasco defeated senior singles member Nicola Kaiwai and reigning ACC champion at fourth singles, Lyle Aydin 6-1, 6-4. Gates bounced back from a first set underachiever loss to beat German freshman Dorothee Kius 6-7(4), 6-1.

Freshman Kim Guy made her collegiate debut at sixth singles and扶出了 Line Lhiring by a 4-6, 6-4, 6-2 margin. Guy had been a highly ranked junior player prior to enrolling at Notre Dame.

Coach Jay Louderback was elated with his team's performance, especially Guy and Gates.

"Everyone played well against Wake Forest," said Louderback. "Kim Guy played her first dual match of her career and showed a lot of character coming back from a set down. Tiffany Gates came back well also from a first set loss."

The three doubles teams were all impressive in victory. Gates and Hall teamed up at first doubles to record a 8-1 victory over Kaiwai and Aydin. The second doubles duo of Dasso and Velasco continued their strong play, beating Milton and Ulfring 8-6.

The closest match of the day occurred at third doubles. Notre Dame's Katie Olson and Kelly Zalinski pulled out a 9-7 win against Terri Hietch and Jackie Houston.

With the NCAs coming up, Coach Louderback sees a victory like the one against Wake Forest as crucial.

"This was a huge win for us," said Louderback. "It will help us with confidence and with the NCAA regions and selections coming soon, a win of this caliber is very important. A convincing win against a team ranked 11th in the country is impressive."

Saturday, the Irish traveled to Dukе to take on the third-ranked Blue Devils. This time they were not as fortunate against top competition, suffering a 6-1 defeat.

Duke features one of the deepest and most talented teams in the country, evidenced by its runner-up finish in the prestigious national indoor tournament where it lost to number one ranked Stanford. The Blue Devils are 18-3 on the season, with their other losses coming against second-ranked Florida and fifth-ranked Texas.

Junior all-American Vanessa Webb led the Blue Devils at number one singles, scoring a 6-3, 6-3 victory against Hall. Webb's impressive credentials include currently being ranked third in the singles rankings and reaching the quarterfinals of the NCAs singles tournament last year.

Dasso suffered her first loss of the season against junior Kristin Sandersen in straight sets 6-4, 6-4.

Sandersen is ranked 41st, while Dasso is 19th in the latest singles rankings.

Notre Dame continued to give it all they had in the final four matches, Duke's Megan Miller beat Velasco at third singles 6-1, 6-2, while Gates lost to Karen Laddstein 6-2, 4-6. Miller is only a freshman, but has built an international reputation as one of the brightest young players in the world.

She has been ranked as high as 19th in the world in junior singles rankings and competed at Wimbledon in 1995 and 1996.

Five singles player Kathy Still, another freshman, defeated Zalinski in a close match 7-5, 6-2, while Guy lost to Laura Elder 6-4, 6-4.

Notre Dame's lone win came at third doubles, where Zalinski and Olson won their second match of the weekend by a 9-7 margin against Ellen McGann and Brooke Nieber.

Despite the loss, Louderback remained optimistic.

"Duke is certainly one of the top teams in the country," said Louderback. "Their coach said that they played their best match of the season against us and I wasn't surprised. They were very impressive. However, we played them close and if we play them again at the NCAs, it won't be their home match and I'd be surprised if they played as well as they did on Saturday. I think our team is still very much ready for the season-ending tournaments."

Notre Dame Law School Courtroom
Younger teams taking control

By KATHLEEN Sports Editor

Youth seemed to run rampant on Stepan Courts yesterday. Some of the new teams looked sharp and outwitted the upperclassmen. Ill Tempered Sea Bass dismissed DUI and 15th-ranked Sea Monsters, were not deterred by the sight of the fouls as this contest went on.

"We were going for an intense game and a big crowd," freshman B.J. Kloska looked for Gaffud.

Freshmen David Hynd, Thomas Slabach, and Matt Yung all chipped in hugely. The team's fast-paced offense and passing ability overwhelmed DUI. While Ill Tempered Sea Bass controlled the pace of the second half, DUI still played an intense defense. This game proved to be a physical one. Both teams lost sight of the fouls as this contest went on.

"I don't think we were used to calling them," Crinion replied about the lack of foul calling. Despite the flagrant fouls, Ill Tempered Sea Bass advanced, 21-14.

Annual favorite Dos Goldkamps played in Saranwrap and clear packing tape, following up last year's game played in duct tape. Dos Goldkamps' opponents, Big Head Jeff and the Monsters, were not deterred by the clear costumes and advanced. In Memory of McConn encountered an intense opponent in Chektostal. The 15th-ranked team faced an intense back-and-forth struggle in the first half. It proved to be a surprising game in the early rounds with the ranked team struggling against a Cinderella hopeful.

"We know a couple of the guys so we knew they were going to be tough," junior Scott Panichelli, member of In Memory of McConn said. "They were a little surprising. Mostly we talked about hustling more and getting rebounds. This is only the second time we have played together. We were trying to get in the flow."

Freshman B.J. Kloska looked sharp, sinking a majority of the shots but the team's second half points. The second half was what secured the win for the seeded team. Chektostal watched as the rebounds and the shots did not fall their way. The 8-1 run made by In Memory of McConn proved too much for their opponents, and they advanced, 21-13.

Practice pays off for a few Belles

By JANICE WEIST
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's tracksters faced a tough meet Saturday at Calvin College.

The reason? They headed into competition with only four Belles; however, they still made their mark.

Senior Mary Davis made the most of her first outdoor track meet this season by taking home two first place finishes. With a time of 12.64, Davis bested her opponent from Alma College and Calvin College in the 100-meter event. She crushed the opposition again in the 200-meter with a time of 23.96.

Junior Sarah Gallagher chalked up a time of 31.51 in the 200-meter dash while also competing in the 100-yard hurdles.

"The hard work we've put into practice is really starting to pay off," said Gallagher. "Because there are so few people, we all have to work harder for recognition among the other schools."

Sophomore Alyson Trebar received blue-ribbon honors after launching the javelin towards a mark of 113 feet. Trebar also leads the Belles with 35 total points. And after setting a new personal best of 120 feet, 3 inches last Wednesday, Trebar is not stopping there.

"I've been throwing the javelin since sophomore year in high school and up until now, my goal has been 120 feet," said Trebar. "Now, my new goal is to break the school record."

With a little over two seasons left in her college career and her best throw a little under four feet shy of the school mark, she has plenty of meets left for shattering records.

Sophomore Shanis Long landed a second place finish in the 400-meter hurdles with a personal-best time of 1:15.53. "We have worked hard in practice and it really showed in our performances," said Long. "I think everyone was pretty pleased."

ARIES: Some of the information you’ve received may be in error. Check it before you base any decisions on it. By this afternoon, the truth should be apparent.

TAURUS: There’s still talk going behind the scenes. Yesterday there was more speculation than fact. Now it looks like the other way around. Stay tuned in, or you don’t accidentally make a move in the wrong direction.

GEMINI: There’s too much for you to do by yourself, and there’s no point in trying. You’ll just make the problem bigger. You need to divide this chore up among several people.

CANCER: The workload is intense, but you’re learning a great deal. There are changes underway and you need to be alert in order to use them to your advantage. You’ll also need to use skills you’re learning.

LEO: Finally, conditions are getting better. You’re in a good mood, and so is the one you love. If you don’t have a sweetheart, you could be in for a big surprise.

VIRGO: You and your mate—any nucleus you might have—are stirring things up at home. It’s disruptive, but exciting! It’s nice to see the change occurring that you’ve been looking forward to for so long.

LIBRA: A surprising development this morning could really tickle your funny bone. Don’t create a disruption! There’s still work to be done, and you’ll have higher profile character.

SCORPIO: A co-worker you’ve been handling with seems to have the advantage. This could actually be a treasure, but it might simply be a memory you’ve been repressing. If you’re wondering why you behave a certain way, maybe you’re about to find out.

SAGITTARIUS: You’re much stronger, and it looks like you’re winning. Don’t lose track of what you’re doing, however. Gather all the information you can to support your idea. The details will do the convincing.

CAPRICORN: A secret you’ve been looking for is starting to emerge. This could actually be a treasure, but it might simply be a memory you’ve been repressing. If you’re wondering why you behave a certain way, maybe you’re about to find out.

AQUARIUS: One thing you’re learning is how to get more money. Actually, even if you had plenty, you’d find ways to spend more. That’s because you have big ideas. You don’t need a loan. You need a federal grant. And that could be exactly what you’re learning how to get.

PIECE: Others rely on you when the going gets tough. That’s because you’re sympathetic and always seem to try to help others. That’s going to be very much appreciated now.

VOLLEYBALL

Scrimmage provides chance to test new scoring rules

By BILL HART
Assistant Sports Editor

While it may be several months away, it is never too early to start thinking about next season.

The Notre Dame women's volleyball team will have that chance this evening, with a two-hour scrimmage against the Michigan Wolverines in "the Pit" at the Joyce Center.

The two teams will compete as part of a nationwide study by the NCAA, in which a newly-proposed rally scoring format will be introduced. In rally scoring, a point would be awarded for either team following every serve. Under the current NCAA scoring system, points are awarded only to the serving team if rally scoring is implemented only in the event of a deciding fifth game.

"The new system will have its good points and its bad points," head coach Debbie Brown said about the proposed format. "There will be some radical changes that will take some getting used to, so this is a good idea by the NCAA to test the different options. A lot of teams will get the chance to try it and then choose to grow and run."

Three rally-scoring formats are being tested at select schools throughout the nation this spring, with the NCAA using recommendations from those schools to arrive at a final decision on changing the format. At the present time, the changes would take effect at the start of the 1999 season, instead of the 1998 regular season or NCAA Championships.

In the format played out in the scrimmage tonight, the first two games will be played out to 50 points, with a team needing to win by two points to take the game. The two teams will switch over when the leading team reaches 25 points, and automatic 45-second timeouts will occur when the leading team reaches 15 and 40 points. Each team will have one additional timeout. If the match is tied after the first two games, a 10-minute intermission will precede a 15-point, win-by-two tiebreaking game, with a 45-second timeout when the leading team reaches eight points.

"The primary benefits of the rally scoring are that it will make the game frame more predictable," Brown remarked. "The game will be more exciting with a point awarded on every serve. For me, it's a little tough to envision the change because it is a departure from traditional defensive strategy where you earn the side out and then served for points."

"But I think the NCAA realized it was time for a change," Brown continued. "Rally scoring will also make college volleyball much more attractive for television broadcasts, which is something that can only help the growth of the sport."

The scrimmage against the Wolverines will begin this evening at 7 p.m. in "the Pit" between the north and south domes of the Joyce Center.

WOMEN'S LACROSSE

Irish unable to handle Syracuse's speed

By GENE BRTAIUK
Sports Writer

Speed kills. The women's lacrosse team found out first hand how true that statement is.

On Saturday, the Irish lost to the Syracuse Orangewomen 28-9 in a game between two fledgling women's lacrosse programs.

In its first year of existence, Syracuse (7-3) was expected to experience the same problems the Irish had head coach Tracy Coyne had in their first year. But after spending the past year with the team, Syracuse head coach Lisa Miller recruited 17 freshmen and her upperclassmen are some of the best in the country. Miller's team used its speed and height to defeat the Irish 16-4.

"Their speed killed us, and they capitalized on our turnovers," Coyne commented.

"We didn't get enough shots and we were no good shooting team."

The game started off as if it was going to be one of those close battles for the Irish. After Jennifer Szyluk scored the first goal 49 seconds into the game, Notre Dame junior co-captain Kerry Callahan scored the first of her four goals on a free-position shot and the Irish were up one.

Syracuse answered Callahan's goal with two straight, jumping out to a 3-1 lead. Callahan responded again pulling the Irish within one, but the hot trick and freshman Courtney Calabrese scored her second-twenty goal and increased their lead to four.

Williams runs best time again

By KATHLEEN O'BRIEN
Sports Writer

Just when it seemed like Errol Williams had reached his peak, he surprised outsiders with yet another breakthrough performance.

Williams, a senior and indoor All-American, ran his best time of the year in the 110-meter hurdles at the Miami (Ohio) Invitational Saturday. His time of 13.65 is an NCAA automatic qualifying time which sprouts and hurdles coach John Miller called "the highlight of the meet."

"Errol Williams is now ranked third in the country, so he ran very well," said Notre Dame track and field coach Joe Piane. "We were very pleased with his performance."

Junior Nadia Schmiedt also was at the top of her stride, winning both the 400-meter run and 400-meter hurdles, with her best time of the season (59.94) in the hurdles. Freshman Carrie Lentz took second behind Schmiedt in the 400-meter run, while senior Berit Junker was right on her heels in the hurdles at just over 60 seconds. On the men's
