Moberg continues to fight through coma at area hospital

By ERICA THESING

Senior Brent Moberg has been drifting in and out of a coma since an AZ malformation in the right side of his brain burst Tuesday morning, according to Gwyneth Murray-Nolan, a friend of Moberg. He went to the Notre Dame infirmary at approximately 11 a.m. Tuesday claim­ ing of a headache and, within min­ utes of arriving, collapsed and slipped into a coma, Murray-Nolan said.

Moberg, an R.A. in Keenan Hall, was rushed to the hospital and under­ went surgery at 1 p.m. Tuesday to release the pressure on his brain and reduce the chance for internal hem­orrhaging, according to Murray- Nolan. Since the surgery, Moberg has awakened a few times and written notes to his family and friends.

"It's in Brent's nature to fight this thing, and he's already fought his way back. Right now everything is in the air. With the information we have, I think we have a lot of room for hope."

Members support broader non-discrimination clause

By TIM LOGAN

Addition of sexual orientation to the University's non-discrimination clause and the Student Union bud­ get were among the issues taken up in a lengthy meeting of the Student Senate last night.

The body passed a resolution call­ ing on the Executive Committee and the Academic Council to address the chage to the clause as soon as pos­ sible.

"The timeliness of this action is important in order to get it on the Academic Council agen­ da," said Pambour­sen­ator Susan Roberts. The Counci­ l's agenda is set by the Executive Committee, which will hold its next meeting on Sept. 28.

While the resolution specifically deals with encouraging discussion and did not address the nondiscrimina­tion clause itself, debate quickly shifted to the pros and cons of adding sexual orientation to the clause, especially in light of the Spirit of Inclusion statement which was adopted in August, 1997.

The Spirit of Inclusion ... doesn't go far enough," said Pasquertia West senator Susan Gloss. "We need to take a more drastic action with the nondiscrimination clause itself."

Previous senates have passed res­ solutions directly supporting the addition of sexual orientation to the non-discrimination clause.

"Others present, however, were not as enthusiastic about the resolution. I'm a little concerned that we haven't fully explored this issue," said Joe Cassidy, director of Student Activities. He noted that the Spirit of Inclusion statement was assembled by a group of University administra­ tors which included lawyers and theologians to discuss the legal and religious aspects of the issue.

"It's an important issue to this campus, but there hasn't been an effort to bring in the­ ological experts or lawyers," he continued.

There was also concern about the potential benefits of including sexual orientation among the issues the University is vulnerable to lawsuits claiming dis­ crimination based on sexual orien­ tation.

"The legal implications cannot be forgotten here," said Mercy College sen­ ator Ryan Constantini. "This is going to end up being a cost of money to this school. We do stu­ dents don't benefit from that."

There was vehement disagree­ ment on that issue from some mem­ bers, however.

"You have to pay that price to treat everyone equally," said Roberts. "This will help Homosexuals! get what we all deserve, which

A corefield dances lazily in the summer breezes, while images of barns and pickup trucks pass by, shouting about smoke. A sky fills your ears and you hear the voice of Paul Harvey. "In this age of fast fashion, maybe we've forgotten the simple pleasures in life... like bowling." Suddenly, images of sweaty men and women appear on your eyes, while the muscles in their hands are easily seen by the sun. You just can't be angry in a bowling alley. You can be frustrated, and you can even be a friend who is held against her will, police said. The suspect uses any information he has to try to commit more crimes, and the occasional sounds of "oh no" and "I'm sorry" percolate up through the continuous slaming of the ball, keeping you on edge and falling, and all is well. It's very transcendent.

Bowling is one of America's national passions, and truly deserves the title as well because it is centrally done all over the country, and it actually does pass time. I know people who can spend four to five hours a night just sitting in a bar drinking, and occasionally, when their name is called, lobbying a ball at some sticks far away. You just can't help but wonder if anyone really cares or doesn't enjoy a good time? The alley is a great temple to socializing, good times, and good company, you may not care.

U. Pennsylvania task force takes aim at binge drinking

Calling upon Penn to make changes is a report from a University task force in line with national consensus on binging. The report is submitted to students and administrators with recommendations, including improving collection of data on binge drinking, notifying parents after any alcohol-related incident involving a student, and scheduling more classes on Fridays to discourage students from beginning weekend drinking on Thursday nights.

The committee's main recommendations, several committee members said, were hiring a "coordinator" to oversee and administer the University's academic, disciplinary and medical responses to problem drinkers and to offer more non-alcoholic programs, including programs that might otherwise drink.

Leaders of Penn's Greek community criticized the report, however, for blaming fraternities for campus alcohol abuse while ignoring the role of sororities. Inter- Fraternity Council President Josh Belinfante, a senior, took particular exception to the report's claim that fraternities have played a major role in a significant number of alcohol-related incidents of misconduct or life-threatening alcohol overdose.

A new report has found that the number of black students in graduate science and engineering programs nationwide fell by 20 percent between 1996 and 1997. But officials at the University of Virginia said for the most part minority enrollment in Ph.D. science and engineering disciplines has not followed national trends. The American Association for the Advancement of Science released the report, "Losing Ground: Science and Engineering Graduate Education of Black and Hispanic Americans," Friday. The report sampled 93 universities that are members of the Association's 1994 collection, and reported on the number of black and Hispanic science and engineering graduate students in those institutions. The report stated that the number of Hispanic-American science and engineering graduate students fell 18.2 percent, and that anti-affirmative-action policies have played a major role in a significant number of alcohol-related incidents of misconduct or life-threatening alcohol overdose."
Committees pinpoint concerns for coming year

Faculty Senate members will explore the implications of a two-year probation issued last spring to the Women's Resource Center. They vowed in their first meeting of the semester last night to hold the center and others that involve benefits, academics and administration — the issues that affect their classrooms and students.

The senate's permanent student affairs committee, chaired by assistant dean of the College of Arts and Letters Avra Praver, was concerned by events stemming from the Office of Student Affairs' decision last spring to put the student group on probation for two years for reportedly supplying pro-choice materials to interested students.

"This is a priority because it happens every day, and students and faculty have not fully digested what has happened," said associate professor of English Barbara Green. "We are all in fact impacted by this. It raises issues about our classrooms and how freely our students are allowed to think when they leave them."

Professor of philosophy Edward Manier agreed.

"The classroom is a privileged area where you can debate all sides of an issue. You can’t do that in a similar organization," he said. "There’s a different set of standards that applies to clubs than groups in the classroom."

Committee members discussed and considered the implications of the University’s action and its treatment of students involved in the situation. They concluded that it is possible that fact-finding was the most appropriate starting point for their efforts.

The committee also identified review of the Honor Code as warranting its attention this fall.

The members, who were particularly concerned with procedural uncertainties in dealing with violations, agreed that the Honor Code likely warrants an evaluation of some sort because it has not been reviewed since its implementation in 1989.

During the senate meeting’s committee reports, other chairmen said the issues they plan to address first include:

• The academic affairs committee, chaired by associate professor of theology Gregory Sterling, will consider Notre Dame alumni’s secure system, its space planning and proposed confer-ce alliances.

• We will try to explore the implications on academics of Notre Dame going into international "Ten," Sterling said "If we’re going to have a voice, we need to have it soon."

• The committee on administration, chaired by professor of physics (Kubin Big), reported it will address discrimination issues at the University, new confidentiality rules and concerns over a new employee drug testing policy this fall. The committee will also continue its work from last semester on the implications of the Faculty Senate meeting’s list of these issues — from age discrimination to graduate student space problems — committee.

• The benefits committee, chaired by professor of finance Thomas Cosimano assembled three subcommittees to explore growth of the Notre Dame endowment and its impact on tuition, medical benefits and retirement benefits.

• Earlier in the meeting senate chairman Michael Detlefsen, professor of philosophy, delivered his chair’s report to the general senate. He briefly touched upon four groups of items.

• First, Detlefsen updated the senate on the delayed progress of their May report to the University’s Academic Council.

• Second, Detlefsen addressed two other reports that have been produced.

• Report addressing the University’s "US News and World Report" academic rankings and proposed expansion of the non-discrimination clause.

• Although this senate paper was delivered last spring, the University would not accept the document until the minutes from last May’s Final Faculty Senate meeting were formally approved. Detlefsen reported that certification took place at last night’s senate meeting.

• Finally, Detlefsen updated the senate on the status of the Women’s Resource Center at last night’s Faculty Senate meeting.

"We have conveyed these concerns to the members of our executive committee and the will be reflected in the coming year’s work," Detlefsen said.

Each concern was revisited in the following committee reports.

• Detlefsen’s report also addressed meetings with associative provost Jeffrey Kantor regarding a campus shortage of office space.

"It may take a few years to complete," Detlefsen told the senate.

• Expansion of off-campus dial-in capabilities is complete, Detlefsen told the senate in his fourth item.

Becker: Trade with Mexico free, but not fair

By BRIDGET O’CONNOR
American News Editor

"We are in the midst of global trade and global economic—there’s no insulation from it," said George Becker, president of the United National Workers of America (USWA) last night in his presidential address for "Global Economy: A Worker’s Perspective."

Becker acknowledged that the border between Mexico and the United States was effectively non-existent as a result of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), but stressed six points that the USWA feels the U.S. should focus on to alleviate the tremendous trade deficit which has emerged since the treaty.

"Global economy with global business needs global rules," Becker acknowledged. He distanced between free trade and fair trade saying, "Somewhere along the line people move to inject another word — I think it’s fair trade."

Although the conditions between Mexico and the U.S. may qualify as free, they are by no means fair according to Becker.

"The Mexican workers are just as skilled as any you’ll find in the U.S. but the living conditions are horrible," he said. He related the conditions he witnessed on numerous visits in Mexico, which included dirt floors and a lack of electricity, running water and sewage systems.

The average worker in these areas make $4 per week, or $450 for a 14-hour workday. Although most of the factories are modern, workers are still subjected to various toxins. Women are periodically tested for pregnancy.

"They promised that this would create a whole new way of life," said Becker of NAFTA proponents. This new way of life will include the addition of jobs and improved standard of living. However, the wage level has dropped 40 percent, and two million jobs have been lost since NAFTA went into effect.

"Mexican workers feel betrayed," he said. The feeling that they want the deal to be renegotitated.

More than 500,000 jobs have been lost in the U.S. as a result of the agreement. The USWA has filed a lawsuit charging that NAFTA is unconstitutional on the basis that it actually a treaty and as such requires a two-thirds approval by the Senate. Since the agreement did not receive such an approval, the USWA feels it should be invalid.

"I’m not a protectionist," Becker clarified, but he argued that the playing field needed to be leveled in a global economy.

"Entrepreneurs and companies are searching for the lowest price" and are going to other countries to get it, he explained. Becker said that in those countries, "Workers are exploited and their economies are caged."

Because the U.S. requires that employers account for occupational safety and health, minimum wage, unemployment, and social supports such as Medicare and Social Security, it is unlikely that it will be less expensive for multi-national corporations to operate in the U.S.

Becker sinned fairness rather than freedom in trade and also asserted that the U.S. should "practice the golden rule." This, he said, meant that one-way trade with countries like Japan was unacceptable.

Becker is a member of the Executive Council of the AFL-CIO and the Executive Committee of the International Metalworkers Federation and the International Federation of Chemists, Energy, Mine, and General Workers.

Irate Italians suspend strike

ITALY

A two-month dubbers' strike was suspended Wednesday night, hours after Italian television chiefs broadcast tapes of a phone call to protest that American soap stars were speaking English instead of their usual Italian. In addition to halting the strike, the dubbers also agreed to return to negotiations according to a report by the Italian news agency ANSA. With the shows only recently returning to the air after the traditional summer break, it was exactly what viewers wanted to hear. After the lunch-hour broadcast of "The Bold and the Beautiful," which goes by the title "Beautiful" in Italy, hundreds of viewers called to demand their stars speak only Italian, said Yuri Prioli, a switchboard operator at Mediaset.

Hamas threatens Israel

GAZA CITY

In a verbal threat against Israeli leaders, the founder of the Islamic militant group Hamas said today he who ordered the killings of two top Hamas fugitives should fear for their safety. The fugitives, brothers Jamal and Adel Awadallah, were shot to death last week when Israeli troops raided their West Bank hideout. The brothers had been involved in plotting terror attacks in Israel. Hamas said it would denounce suicide bombings in Tel Aviv in retaliation. The group, which hopes to wreck the Israeli-Palestinian peace process, has killed scores of Israelis in more than a dozen attacks since 1994. In an interview with The Associated Press today, Hamas founder and spiritual leader Sheikh Ahmad Yassin, appeared to be raising the level of threats against Israel by singling out those who ordered the killings of the Awadallahs.

Teacher uses box to punish

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla.

A high school freshman has allegedly forced to endure hours in the "Slacker's Box," a 3-by-4-foot space under the classroom sink, has filed a federal lawsuit against the teacher he says put him there. The 16-year-old student, identified only as C.T.H., said he suffered severe humiliation and embarrassment because of teacher Jeff Tyler, who was fired in 1997 after school officials uncovered a videocassette, militaristic codes in his classroom. "It's one of those stories that if you tell anybody about it, their jaws drop," said Rosemarie Richard, the attorney representing the student and his parts. The "Slacker's Box" is under a sink counter where students who were punished had to sit, often with their knees tucked to their chests, the lawsuit said. The boy and his family are seeking unspecified damages.

Iraq presents new threats to U.N.

BAGHDAD

Iraq threatened again Wednesday to end cooperation with U.N. arms monitors if the U.N. Security Council did not reverse its decision to suspend reviews of its inspections reports. The Baghdad government announced last month it would no longer aid U.N. inspections of suspected weapons sites. The new threat, if carried out, would end its cooperation in the U.N. monitoring of already inspected sites.

The Security Council on Sept. 9 condemned Iraq's decision to stop aiding U.N. arms inspectors as "a totally irresponsible and contravention of council resolutions. It suspended the 60-day reviews of U.N. sanctions imposed on Iraq after its 1990 invasion of Kuwait. The official Iraqi News Agency reported. "The duration of this time will be short if the United States and Britain persist with their hostility," the Revolutionary Command Council warned after a meeting chaired by Hussein. U.N. inspectors must certify that Iraq has destroyed its long-range missiles and chemical, biological and nuclear weapons before the Security Council will lift sanctions.

Iraq withdrew cooperation with the inspectors after the chief inspector, Richard Butler, refused to certify that Iraq had destroyed its banned weapons.

Iraq's parliament called Monday for the government to put a stop to the U.N. monitoring, which would effectively close down the whole inspection operation.

Yeltsin reassures country as ruble falls

MOSCOW

President Boris Yeltsin claimed Wednesday that Russia was returning to normal, but the ruble's value plunged again and Communists warned of a new political confrontation if any "odious" reformers were brought back into the Cabinet.

Speaking by telephone with German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, Yeltsin "stressed that the situation is getting back to normal," the presidential press service said. Germany is Russia's biggest trading partner.

But the value of the ruble slid Wednesday to about 13.16 to the dollar in street trading after reaching 7.5 to the dollar the day before. The drop left the Russian currency worth less than half of what it was a month ago.

Yeltsin's assessment came as he appointed two new cabinet secretaries to the Cabinet of the new Prime Minister, Evgeny Primakov. The Russian leader has now given Primakov four deputy premiers — three of the economic ministers, the two vice premiers, and one a Communist tech-nocrat.

The new government, designed to accommodate Russia's disparate political factions, has halted fighting between the Kremlin and Communist-led opposition — at least for the time being. But it was unclear when it would spell out a plan for easing Russia's economic crisis.

"We have not yet drawn up any guidelines for our economic policy; it is only being shaped," conceded the new deputy prime minister in charge of financial issues, Alexander Shokhin.

Even the truce between various political factions remained shaky. An opposition party, led by Communist Zuyganov warned Wednesday that if any leading reformers — "the odious people who ruined Russia" — were brought back into the Cabinet, or if the government "replaced" its predecessor, political confrontation would flare again.

However, in a sign of unusual support for the government, 59 percent of those surveyed by a major public opinion center approved of Primakov's appointment, according to a poll by the independent All-Russian Public Opinion Research Center.

"Only 17 percent disapproved, said the poll, which listed no margin of error. Fifty-nine percent is a remarkably high level of support in Russia, where cynicism about government is the rule rather than the exception. By contrast, Yeltsin's approval rating has been hovering around four percent. The two new deputy prime ministers appointed Wednesday were Vladimir Rybkov, parliamentary leader of a pro-government faction, and Vladimir Buliga, who was science and technology minister in the previous government.

Both are considered moderate reformers and are unlikely to antagonize the opposition. They join two previously appointed deputies: Shokhin, a pro-government center leader, and Yuri Maslyukov, a senior Communist lawmaker who previously served Yeltsin as industry minister and now has been put in charge of economic policy.

The new government appears divided over how to handle the crisis, including whether to print more rubles to pay millions of workers owed months of overdue wages. The government has said its top priority is to end the chronic problem.

Central Bank chairman Viktor Gerashchenko has said he favors expanding the money supply so the government can pay frustrated workers and pensioners.
Clinton critics admit affairs and ‘indiscretions’

WASHINGTON

Rep. Henry Hyde, the House member leading the impeachment review of President Clinton, admitted Wednesday to “indiscretions” with a woman in the 1960s at a time both were married.

The Judiciary Committee chairman responded to a story in an Internet magazine, Salon, which detailed an affair with a woman identified as Cherry Snodgrass.

The Illinois Republican called the article “an obvious attempt to intimidate me and vowed that it would not affect any impeachment proceeding.

Salon has frequently criticized Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr’s investigation of Clinton.

Fred Snodgrass, who lives near Fort Lauderdale, Fla., broke down and cried in an interview as he described the affair that Hyde, R-Ill., had with his ex-wife three decades ago.

“It’s ridiculous. He had an affair with a young woman with three children. At least the president didn’t do that,” he said of Hyde.

Snodgrass, who divorced his wife, remarried her and then divorced again in 1971, said the affair devastated the children.

Calling Hyde a “hyper­ocrite,” Snodgrass said he suspected his wife was having an affair when she began staying out until 3 a.m. and coming home drunk.

“She was so miserable,” he said she loved him back,” he said.

The former Mrs. Snodgrass is now Ms. Cherie Soskin of San Antonio, Texas. Efforts to reach her were not immediately successful.

In a memo this week to Judiciary Committee members, Hyde warned that “some supporters of the president, possi­bly including White House staff, may be attempting to collect and disseminate derogatory personal information about members of Congress, particu­larly those serving on the House Judiciary Committee.”

The memo added that efforts to intimidate lawmakers or interfere with their official duties would violate U.S. crim­inal law.

White House press secretary Mike McCurry said the White House was not connected with the story in any way and has made it clear that anyone who peddled such information would be fined.

“People here are livid that it would even be suggested we were a source of the informa­tion and livid if anyone here attempted to be the source of that information. It is the last thing we need at this moment,” he said.

“The statute of limitations has long since passed on my youthful indiscretions. Suffice it to say, Cherie Snodgrass and I were good friends a long, long time ago,” said Hyde in a state­ment. "After Mr. Snodgrass confronted my wife, the friend­ship ended and my marriage remained intact."

Last week a conservative Republican, Rep. Helen Chenoweth of Idaho, admitted she was wrong to have a long­term affair with a married man more than a decade ago. Ms. Chenoweth has sought Clinton’s resignation since April because of the Monica Lewinsky scan­dal.

And earlier this month Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., who is con­ducting a campaign fund­raising investigation of Clinton, admitted that he fathered a child in an extramarital affair.

Hyde told a closed House Republican caucus Wednesday that lawmakers should be alert of that information.

It identified as her sitting on the former Mrs. Snodgrass and published a picture of a woman said to be Hyde’s lap. The affair was car­ried on from 1965 to 1969.

Hyde was 41, where the affair began and Ms. Snodgrass was 12 years younger, the story said.

The editors of Salon, an Internet publication, said they decided to run the Hyde story because “Clinton’s enemies have changed the rules.”

“Does the fact that Henry Hyde engaged in an adulterous affair, and tried to keep it hid­den from his family and con­stituents, mean he is not fit to hold public office? Absolutely not. And the same is true of President Clinton,” the editors said.

“The president’s attack dogs don’t know difference between breaking the law and making a mistake decades ago,” said House Majority Whip Tom DeLay, R-Texas, of the story.

“Nobody doubts the credibility of Henry Hyde; nobody doubts his integrity; nobody doubts his sense of fairness and dignity,” said DeLay, who has called for Clinton’s resignation.

Karen Johnson Cartee, a pro­fessor at the University of Alabama who writes on dirty campaigns and negative politi­cal advertising, said partisan forces likely account for recent stories about the personal lives of politicians. “It takes some of the attention away from the president’s prob­lems,” Cartee said, adding, “There’s nothing wrong the media likes better than showing politi­cians being hypocrites.”

Efforts to uncover personal indiscretions of politicians could test the public’s appetite for such details, said Robert Schmuhl, director of Notre Dame’s program in journalism, ethics and democra­cy.

“It is quite possible that the public will react negatively and say ‘enough is enough,”’ he said. “There is a tell­all culture­has to have limits.”

Israel and Palestinian officials met Wednesday at a willingness to hold a summit with President Clinton later this month but avoided pinning hopes for a peace deal on any meetings.

Clinton was hoping to conduct the talks where world leaders gather in New York to attend the opening session of the United Nations General Assembly, according to a U.S. diplomatic official in Washington, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

No U.S. invitation has extended so far, said David Bar-Ilan, a senior Israeli official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The official said the idea "was possible." Arafat later told reporters that "everything was still under discussion."

At issue is a U.S. proposal for Israel to withdraw its troops from an additional 13 percent of the West Bank in exchange for Palestinian measures against militant groups such as Hamas, which has carried out deadly attacks against Israel.

There is clearly still want to persevere because the pursuit of this is critical, the need to change the climate is essential and it's an objective that we need to work very hard to achieve," Ross said after his meeting with Arafat.

Fearing revenge attacks, Israel has been on high alert since its troops killed two Hamas fugitives last week in a West Bank raid.

The movement's spiritual leader, Sheikh Ahmed Ya'assini, told The Associated Press on Wednesday that those who ordered the killings of the two brothers, Adel and Imad Awadallah, "should be afraid" for their safety.

On Wednesday, Israel increased security at transportation drop-off points used by soldiers.

It has arrested most Palestinians, even regular day laborers, from entering Israeli cities.

Over the summer, I visited Nikolai Green, ND '91, a former student at Agatha's Parish on the west side (North Lawndale) of Chicago. As an African American Leadership intern, Nick was challenged daily. He spoke passionately about his encounters with poverty and hopeful signs of empowerment. Nick experienced connections between prayer, social justice and Sunday Bur­ gers. In an active way, Nick was living out a core component of the mission of Saint Mary's alumni about social concerns and challenges for further reflection and action. I hope this will spark further conversations about the common good that will bear fruit as learning becomes service to our neighbors and justice.

Don McNeill, C.S.C.

Let me introduce myself. My name is Don McNeill, C.S.C. I am the director of the CSC, a member of the Department of Theology, and a resident in McGlinn Hall. My passion for experiential and service learning was ignited during my senior year by Professor Frank O'Malley and in the months after graduation through a course given by Viktor Frankl (in Vienna) and by later experiencing intense poverty in Calcutta, India. These and other encounters eventually called and led me to Holy Cross. I continue today to be challenged by the questions and imagina­tion of thousands of students and alum­ nae that have participated in Summer Service Projects, Urban Plunge, Appalachia seminars, etc. The CSC itself became a reality 15 years ago thanks to student-driven imagina­tion, initiatives and leadership.

Current students continue to raise questions about service and justice. As part of an excellent teaching team, I am teaching and learning this semester in a Theology seminar. We are accompanying 28 students who returned from this Summer Service Projects (SSP) with many enriching experiences of joy and sorrow as well as questions about the need for a more humane and just world. I want to share with you important questions, insights and challenges that Nick and another student faced this summer and continue to explore.

Nick credits Father Mike Ivers and the St. Agatha community and experiences for helping him develop an intense passion for justice. The Gospel and words of Nelson Mandela came to life for Nick during his SSP. Mandela stated in his inaugural speech, "As we are liberated from our own fear, our presence automatically liberates others." Nick experienced liberation him­ self. "Mandela’s speech summarizes the greatest part of what I took away from my experience this summer. I have become empowered, not unlike the people of St. Agatha’s and Notre Dame. One of the many things that Father Mike taught me about leadership is that a leader must allow others to lead, give them power. His goal is to make St. Agatha’s a parish of the peo­ ple, by the people, therefore, regard­ less of his presence. St. Agatha will continue to function as it currently does ... I think that I was exposed to a brand new side of the Catholic Church.

Cynthia Vega, ND '00, is a junior ser­ vice pre-professional student. In the summer, I was a leadership intern, and we are exploring the background Cynthia brought to her Internship Summer Service Learning Project in Guat­ mala. She stated: "My family is from El Salvador and I had been there before. But I had never been to this area. It made me open my eyes and realize that there were a lot of things I didn’t know about."

Cynthia lived and worked in Guat­ mala with mentor John Giuliano. She taught English and dance and conducted a health study. She described her project this way: "This project focused on building relationships with people who have suffered and are still suffering due to the injustices which were a cause for a civil war, and which still exist today. My work with the people of the community gave me the opportunity to learn each person’s story. Living in their world has caused me to open my eyes to the reality of injustice in this world."

Later she added, "I guess I’ve just learned a lot this summer and have realized that social service with­ out social action will get us nowhere. I still need to know so much.

Often students feel there aren’t others in our Notre Dame community who are interested in bearing these ques­ tions or helping them explore how best to respond to the multiple feelings, complex relations and intellectually stimulating perspectives they encoun­ tered. Likewise, there are so many community teachers like Father Mike Ivers and John Giuliano who are part of Notre Dame through their challenges and commitments to the students dur­ ing the summers. How can other facul­ ty and staff on campus also explore ways of integrating the journeys and questions of students into ongoing con­ versations with other people who share a common spirit of questioning and searching for truth and justice? I hope this regular column will be one way to explore and discuss the issues, challenges and complexities around “creating a more just and humane world.”

Through such conversations, I believe that the mission of the University of Notre Dame and the Center for Social Concerns is not impossible, but poss­i­ ble. Together, let’s explore how to make the words in these mission state­ ments become reality.

Father Don McNeill, C.S.C., is the director of the Center for Social Concerns. The Center for Social Concerns’ column runs every other Thursday. The views expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.
Vinck’s Position

Confusing

“Sophie Fortin and Jennifer Weaver tried to make the case that conservatives implicitly sup­port abortion through upholding a capitalist eco­nomic system. Even if true, which it is not, this argument still portrays conservatives in a better light than liberals who explicitly support and facilitate abortion. (Not Peace. But The Sword.)”

— Sean Vinck, The Observer, Sept. 15.

Well, Sean, let me pose a question to you. Is it better, then, to underhandedly support the very practice that conservatives are supposedly against? In my view, coming out and openly voicing your true motives is significantly more courageous and less cowardly than subtly giving your support to the side other. If one has to rely on implicit rather than explicit, it seems to show that one is afraid to voice one’s own, true opin­ions. Good job on supporting your cause.

In fact, Sean, you seem to be underestimating your own views all over the place. You give examples of third-world countries as places where “the right” has to adopt the defense of the poor, stripped away from the convenience of society on the whole.” I com­pletely agree with you. The practice of defending the views of a majoritarian hypocrisy within a moral context for the comfort of the rest of society is horrible and sad.

So, Sean, tell me why, then, do you not stand up for your beliefs and fight for gay, les­bian, and bisexual rights at Notre Dame and across the world? "Why do you not urge the administration to support the WRC in its quest? These groups (gay, lesbian, bisexual, and women) are constantly swept under the carpet at the University of Notre Dame, and why is that? I can easily answer in your own words; "for the convenience of society on the whole," a practice that you yourself argue against and stand up for gay rights, then? Or maybe the next WRC meeting? Don’t be shy. Sean, stand up for what you believe.

Well, Mr. Vinck, you may say that the “left is going crazy,” and liberals argue with “dubi­ous intellectual merit,” but before you start pointing fingers, maybe you should take a look at your own arguments. You may find that you are on our side, after all. If conservative ideology is the way we have presented it, then we need to hold rallies or write editorials. We need to conserve.

To the members of the PSC and the WRC, keep on fighting. We need more people like you. And to the editor of the Observer, your column is the best thing you have ever done for the left. Thank you for that.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Statistical Data Should Back up Claims

A recent publication distributed on campus made the claim that “After President Clinton’s affair with First Lady, Michael Baxt­er is already the most popular mod­ern undergraduate theology professor.” While the Department of Theology is very pleased with the responses that most under­graduates give to Professor Baxter’s “A Faith to Die For” class, as a statistical claim, this one is false. Regardless of whether one as­sesses TCF by the number of students who are able to take the course, or the number of students who all say Baxter is the best class, TCF 268 is not at the top of the Department’s lists. This might be a good time to remind everyone that statistical claims need to be verified before being made public.

Vinck’s Attack on Liberals Full of Half-truths and Misrepresentations

This letter is in response to Sean Vinck’s column from Sept. 15, in which he decided to focus on vil­lifying shallow defenses. He states that “the arguments of the Left are unsafe, dubious and inordinately merit.” But the evidence that he presents to support his claim is, in­deed, dubious and, in some cases non-existent, as I shall dis­prove.

To begin, Vinck claims that the eco-cla­sical argument characterizes the radical Left. In reality, his trade is against the Left in gener­al, for he says, “the left is going crazy, and it’s fine with me.” He also says that the real issues of the radical left “have alienated them from the mainstream of society.” Correct me if I am wrong, but to be outside of the main­stream is the definition of a radical. These “radicals” were never in the mainstream to begin with. The point of my argument on this mat­ter is that to make a case against the Left, one must understand basic defini­tions if one is to present a comprehensible case. Vinck does not understand. The next point that must be addressed in Vinck’s argu­ment is discussion of “evil practices” occurring in this country. It is a fact that people such as Professor Munier and oth­ers who defend the option of abortion are far out of the rest of the society. He sug­gests that those who are pro-choice are pre­cisely the radical Left. The acceptance of abortion, however, is a characte­rization of most liberal thinkers. To support this point, Vinck has used examples where “the WHC does not understand that.” Socialists, humanists, homosexuals, and women are constantly swept under the carpet at the University of Notre Dame, and why is that? I can easily answer in your own words; “for the convenience of society on the whole.”

Moreover, Vinck returns to this “weak­ness” of the left. He accuses liberalism of not justifying most of the “evil practices” that one might assume the left is responsible for. But the reason for these conditions is more directly a result of the far right’s govern­ment of those nations than it is the eco­nomic system employed (which is what Clinton/Baxter is not a political system). I will now purely from claim, that the eco­nomic system plays no role in determining the level of freedom in a given country, because it would be ludicrous. I am not well versed in trying to say that the type of government in place, its political system versus its economic system, that in no way affects, and certain­ly doesn’t undermine, the constitu­tion.

It is important to recall how this media scandal came about. The virulent Clinton-hater and book agent Lucianne Goldberg conspired with Linda Tripp to get a book out about Clinton’s sexual affair. It then became evident to these two women that Ken Starr would be willing to accept into Clinton’s bed­room (or the Oval Office hallway) in order to get “the” on the pres­i­dent since he could find no evi­dence of wicth. This woman would be charged with committing a crime— is not a punishment for misdeeds by an official. It is a con­stitutional measure designed to ensure that further damage is not done to the government or consti­tution. It thus implies that “high crimes and misdemeanors” refers to actions that threaten to subvert the constitution. Such acts, including the illegal equivocating about a sexual affair—is not a requirement for impeachment.

Starr’s report to Congress is nothing more than a political pack­aged as evidence of serious cons­titutional tickers to the public. This is ludicrous. And, in my humble opinion, is nothing more than about which reasonable, intelli­gent people cannot disagree. You may not approve of his private behavior, but it does exist as a private right.

To put final objection to Vinck’s column is his assertion that Clinton “is the visible leader of the Left...” Clinton is NOT a liberal. At best, he is a centrist. The left in this coun­try, according to Vinck, is the Clinton government. This is not the case. There is no evidence of far-right (really far-left) activity. People such as Palpatine, Richard Mellon Scalfi, Dan Burton, and many others. People who feel the need to legis­late their beliefs on the rest of us and force their beliefs on us are not something that I would consider as having any political legitimacy, as I have no problem with that. This is not a question of “should the Left be for the Left?” or “should we allow the Left to have its say?”

The Left is in this coun­try, and I believe that it is the Left that is currently, and has been for some time, the dominate and more influential in this coun­try. The political Left is a fact of life in this coun­try. However, there are many prominent disillusioned of far-right (really far-left) activity. These people include Pat Robertson, Richard Mellon Scalfi, Dan Burton, and many others. People who feel the need to legis­late their beliefs on the rest of us and force their beliefs on us are not something that I would consider as having any political legitimacy, as I have no problem with that. This is not a question of “should the Left be for the Left?” or “should we allow the Left to have its say?”

As a devout Leftist, I have to say that it is one of the most pat­terned argument from the right. However, it makes me want to see any intelligent person resist to half-truths and misrepresentations to further our frustration, the President. I do not agree with this cause or not. Sean Vinck is a man who is currently, in the process, reveals more about his convictions than those he is trying to rebuke.

Hundley homer keeps New York within half-game of Padres. 11th inning Wednesday night to give the New York Mets a 4-3 win over the Houston Astros, compelling games full of late drama. Mike Piazza hit a three-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning of the first game of a doubleheader Tuesday night. Sosa hit the third grand slam of his career, all of them

DON'T GO = YOU HAVE ANY MORE QUESTIONS.... I KNOW: WHAT DID MARK McGwire DO TODAY? DID HE GET 64?

SAMY Sosa

This was Sosa's 22nd career homer against the Padres, the most against any opponent. He went 1-for-9 with six strikeouts in the first two games of this four-game series. Before the game, Sosa was relaxed as he met with the media on the field. He had been holding seminars and conferences in the Chargers' locker room at Qualcomm Stadium, but wanted a change of scenery after striking out four times Monday night and twice while going 0-for-6 on Tuesday.

He spoke with his mother by telephone from the Dominican Republic on Tuesday night and she told him: "It's OK. Don't worry. Tomorrow is another day. Take your time. When reporters ran out of questions, Sosa said, "Don't be alarmed - you have any more questions."

Someone asked Sosa what question he might have for the media. He thought for a minute, looking up at the sky, and one said, "What did Mark McGwire do today?" Did he get 64?" He didn't, so the two are tied. Sosa will have a chance to jump ahead on Thursday when he faces rookie Stan Sparks and the Cardinals are off Thursday.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY JANHAFE....
Colorado defeats Columbus

Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Diego Giannarino's goal from about 25 yards broke a 2-2 tie Wednesday as the Colorado Rapids defeated the Columbus Crew 4-2 in Major League Soccer.

Giannarino opened the scoring in the 32nd minute, with goalkeeper Marcus Hahnemann assisting. He has three goals for the season, all in the last two games.

Wolfe Harris clinched the victory by scoring in the 89th minute from 35 yards into an empty net after Columbus goalkeeper Jon Zigler came out to challenge him.

The goal was Harris' 12th of the season, breaking the team record of 11 set by Jean Harbo in 1994.

The Rapids' other goal came in the 51st minute, with Paul Brass scoring off assists from Talg Jakins and DiGiannarino.

Nosa scored twice in the second half for the Crew to tie the game at 2-2. The first goal was unassisted and the second came off a corner kick, with Robert Warzycha and Billy Thompson assisting.

John has an MLS-leading 22 goals for the season, and his 48 points trails scoring leader Cobi Jones of Los Angeles by one.

The defeat was the second straight for the Crew (15-14), who have clinched second place in the Eastern Division and open the playoffs at home Sept. 30 against the New York-New Jersey.

Colorado (14-16-1) is third in the West and can clinch a play-off spot Thursday if Chicago beats Kansas City.

Todd Yeagley of Columbus received a yellow card, giving him 22 yellow cards for the season and meaning he will be forced to sit out the team's next game.

Colorado led 1-0 in shots on goal and 25-23 in total shots.

Summer had eight saves and Hahnemann six.

D.C. United 5, MetroStars 0

Associated Press

Defending champions Real Madrid beat AC Milan 2-0 in the final of a Club World Cup semifinal Wednesday, with Ronaldo scoring both goals.

Ronaldo was also the second regular-season goal-scorer in last season's European Champions Cup, playing a sensational lead role.

He scored five straight goals for D.C. United and Response in the second period but shot high and wide of Real Madrid's goalkeepers.

Ronaldo scored twice in the win.

The announcement of Bure's suspension was delivered in a terse, one-sentence press release issued following the team's training camp scrimmage.

The suspension is more of a formality at this point, as it will not have any real impact until NHL players begin getting paid at the start of the season.

The team's general manager, Bryan Murray, refused comment, sticking to his promise he made to the media last Sunday that he would no longer talk about Bure.

The three-time 50-plus-goal scorer, who broke into the NHL with the Canucks in 1991, has one year left on a contract that is reportedly expected to pay him about $8 million.

Bure has previously said that if the right deal doesn't come along, he is prepared to let Bure miss the entire season.

Sabras

Associated Press

Dixon Ward scored two goals Wednesday night to lead the Sabres to a 3-1 victory over Kaiserslautern of the Austrian League in the International Challenge hockey tournament.

The Sabres, Eastern Conference leaders, will face last season's Stanley Cup play-offs, were shocked early in the first period when Dieter Karl beat NHL MVP and Czech Olympic hero Dominik Hasek for a 1-0 lead.

The game served as a wake-up call for the Sabres, who scored five straight goals.

The Sabres outscored the Sabres 3-0 in the third period and blanked them in overtime, 3-0, to win their first of four possible exhibition games.

Other powerhouses weren't as fortunate. Manchester United went 2-1 and drew 3-3 against Inter Milan, which went on to win its first 15-05 semifinal match.

D.C. United goalkeeper Bodo Ilgner helped the team to a 1-0 win over Portland and New York-New Jersey United defeated Boston 3-2.

The Sabres scored twice on the night.

It was the second time the Sabres game was held in Toronto, but the first since 1968. The 1999 game was Portland on Jan. 24 at Tampa, Fla.

In other news, the NHL announced that the 50th All-Star Game will be played on the weekend of Feb. 5-6, 2000.

"Toronto is the home of an Original Six team, the birthplace of the All-Star Game and the home of our sport's hall of fame," NHL commissioner Gary Bettman said. "It is only fitting that the All-Star celebration should return for this milestone game in the millenium season.

It will be the eighth time the All-Star Game will be held in Toronto, but the first since 1968. The 1999 game was played at the Air Canada Centre on Jan. 24 at Tampa, Fla.
Woody Hayes’ cabin to be auctioned

Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio

A log cabin once owned by former Ohio State football coach Woody Hayes will be sold at auction on the Internet.

Hayes’ son, Steven, said conducting the auction electronically would increase the number of bidders and the potential for making more money from the sale.

Steven Hayes, a Franklin County Municipal Court judge, is selling the cabin to establish a scholarship fund at the university in the name of his mother, Anne, who died in January.

The cabin was built on his great-grandfather’s 200-acre farm, Hayes said Wednesday. The coach “always wanted to build a cabin on the land. He bought the land, but never found the time to do it,” his son said.

“Some between 1977 and 1979, some of his former players came down and planned it and built it for him.”

A minimum bid hasn’t been set for the 18- by 22-foot cabin near Middleburg in Noble County, about 90 miles southeast of Columbus.

The opening bid will be more than the original asking price of $49,900,” Steve Villard, president of Complete Property Resources, said Wednesday. CPR is conducting the auction.

McGee ordered to turn over son

Associated Press

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich.

A player for the WNBA’s Los Angeles Sparks has been ordered to turn her 2-year-old daughter over to her ex-husband while court officials decide if her basketball career interferes with her parenting.

Pamela McGee, a mother of two and a starting forward for the Sparks, said the court is punishing her because she plays basketball.

Macomb County Chief Circuit Judge Peter J. Maceroni ruled this week that McGee’s ex-husband, the Rev. Kevin E. Stafford of Mount Clemens, will have temporary custody of their daughter, while a Friend of the Court investigation is pending.

Stafford’s lawyer, Peter Lucido of Mount Clemens, said Imani missed her first day of preschool Tuesday because McGee has delayed returning her to her father.

“This child cannot be on the road with a player. It’s totally against any good parenting skills” Lucido said. The Macomb Daily. "Anyone with intelligence can conceive if she’s with her mother on the road she can’t be in school, or developing bonds with anyone.

McGee, 35, has been staying with her family in Flint during the offseason. She has two residences, one in Los Angeles and another in Sacramento, Calif.

Until the court renders its decision, Imanii is not to be taken out of Michigan. McGee may have to return to California for team-related functions as early as next month, the newspaper reported.

Friend of the Court officials will investigate what affect, if any, McGee’s obligations as a WNBA player may have on her role as a parent.

Stafford, who is senior pastor at Greater Morning Star Missionary Baptist Church in Mount Clemens, could not be reached for comment.

Sparks spokeswoman Stacy Terrien said she was surprised by Maceroni’s ruling.

“This is the first time that has ever come up,” Terrien said. “I’m not sure how you couldn’t be a stable environment for your child.”

WNBA season’s only three months out of the year. Also, half the games are at home.

McGee, who grew up in Flint after her U.S. Olympic basketball player Stafford filed for divorce in 1995 and McGee returned to basketball as a career after her divorce became final.

Gymnast Sang Lan slowly recovering

Associated Press

NEW YORK

The Chinese gymnast paralyzed during a warmup vault at the Goodwill Games is learning to write her name again—using fingers that still can’t move.

“She is quite amazing—highly motivated. She is consistently in a good mood,” said Dr. Kristjan Ragnarsson, an expert on rehabilitation for spinal cord injuries at The Mount Sinai Medical Center.

Sang Lan broke her neck July 21 at Nassau Coliseum on Long Island and remains paralyzed.

“She’s very skillful,” her doctor said. “She’s working very hard on things that come very simply to us.”

Holding utensils with the help of a splint attached to her hand, the 17-year-old gymnast painstakingly feeds herself, combs her hair, brushes her teeth and is learning to dress herself. She gets out of bed with a sliding board onto a wheelchair, which she pushes around the hospital corridors.

It’s all in preparation for a new, more self-sufficient life that includes learning English from a tutor.

“We greet me very politely in English—Good morning, Dr. Ragnarsson,” the doctor said.

The bad news, he said, is that there has not been any significant change in her neurological condition such as Sang’s have.

However, the doctor said, he has heard that some people with a complete spinal cord injury such as Sang’s have regained some function.

He said the teenager is facing the bad news “with maturity.

“I’m sure there have been moments of frustration and depression, but she has kept those to herself,” he said.

Ragnarsson has also treated former New York Jets player Dennis Byrd, who recovered six years ago from paralysis after breaking his neck. But Sang’s injuries were more severe, he said.

Sang plans to get more education because she understands it’s necessary “when you have lost the physical skills,” Ragnarsson said.

She is scheduled to return from Mount Sinai by mid-October to live in a nearby hospital-owned apartment and continue rehabilitation, which now costs $15,000 a day. Her parents, who flew to New York from China after the accident, are participating in her therapy.

The expenses are covered by Goodwill Games insurance and a private fund started for her.

For now, there’s no talk about returning to China.

Oh youth, pass the bottle!
Jim Lies, C.S.C.

Are you struck by the number of people around Notre Dame who seem unable to socialize, particularly with the opposite sex, without first consuming excessive amounts of alcohol? I probably shouldn’t take up this topic here since, like sex and chastity, alcohol is one of those topics that could leave me yet again looking the prude. And yet, for some reason, I feel compelled, even obliged to say something on the topic. And it wouldn’t be on this page if it didn’t have something to do with a deep abiding concern for those who might read this column, and if it wasn’t related to the spiritual life and health of this campus.

To put it simply, alcohol on this campus is messing up people’s lives. We as Campus Ministry would be remiss if we did not have something to say about the elephant in the middle of the room. As we attempt to nurture the spiritual life of this campus with our many liturgies and programs, we would be crazy to think that our efforts are unaffected by the use and abuse of alcohol on this campus. The ways in which we socialize have everything to do with the health and life of this community, as individuals, as couples, as friends, and as the larger family of Notre Dame.

Don’t misunderstand me, I like to drink. It is, in fact, one of the few vices that I haven’t publicly forsaken. I hope my reputation for enjoying spirits far exceeds the reality at least from that which I bear, but I will never deny enjoying a few drinks with friends. Where we go wrong are those instances when we seem to depend on alcohol to give us what we need to adequately enter into a social situation. I don’t think it takes a social scientist to figure out that there is something wrong with the way we socialize on this campus, especially at SYRs, Hall Formals, off-campus parties, and even on weekend nights (including Thursdays) at the bars.

Please, please, don’t misunderstand me. I am not a prohibitionist. I do not support our becoming a dry campus. I think we would be as remiss in disallowing alcohol on this campus as we would be if we didn’t attempt to teach people about responsible drinking and personal accountability. This is an appropriate time and place to learn how to drink. But I think you know that the preparatory rituals which seem to happen on this campus before hall dances are not happening in your parents homes or before office parties or even before nights out with friends beyond these days. And while you might explain it away by saying that it’s just a college thing, I worry that you’ll walk away from this place with fewer friendships and be far less adept at the art of socializing.

If we don’t appreciate the fact that their is a direct correlation between the prevalent abuse of alcohol and the problems that we have with gender relations on this campus then we’re nuts! Many would like to say that we drink so much because the social life on this campus is so bad. I wonder if the social life on this campus is so bad because we drink so much. Aside from the fact that we often sit around with the “guys” and drink, which isn’t in itself a bad thing unless it becomes the very reason we gather, we should be thinking about how it relates to the gender relations on this campus.

If we’ve come to believe that it’s “normal” to enter into an evening with a person of the opposite sex, much less end it, seriously wasted then we need to think again. Too often, the drinking is inversely proportional to how well one knows the other person. And when we go out, already intoxicated, with the person we know least well, we’re in no condition to meet them, and we end the evening early, probably looking the fool, or at least not knowing them any better than when we started.

What will you walk away from an evening like that with? And how often have you done things in relationship that you would never have done but for the fact that you were drunk? At the time it seems to heighten our courage, but more often, upon reflection, it impairs our judgement, especially regarding physical expression. How often would we like to have those moments back when we didn’t consider it’s worth and do with it what you will. But trust me, time for friendship is too fleeting to waste it.
Veteran QB Hostetler leaves Redskins camp

ASHBURN, Va. — Discouraged 15-year veteran Jeff Hostetler cleared out his locker Wednesday, apparently leaving the Washington Redskins after his demotion to third-string quarterback.

Hostetler left Redskins Park and drove home to West Virginia after a morning meeting with coach Norv Turner. By noon, Hostetler’s locker was bare and his burgundy nameplate had been removed.

“Jeff and I met this morning. I excused him from practice today, and really that’s where we’re at right now,” Turner said. “I’ll know more tomorrow.”

Turner said he did not know why or if Hostetler would return. He would not discuss the details of their conservation, other than to say it concerned Hostetler’s frustration over being relegated behind Trent Green and Gus Frerotte on the depth chart.

Hostetler’s sudden departure caught his teammates off guard.

“I know he was disappointed with being the third. He had made that clear,” Greene said. “That’s got to be a tough situation for a veteran who has accomplished all that he has.”

A bizarre twist of fate has put Hostetler’s road at a dead end with the Redskins. Turner talked the 37-year-old quarterback into returning for another season — and thus turning down an offer to retire and become a television commentator — by promising Hostetler he would be less patient this season if Frerotte struggled. Hostetler sat on the bench 13 weeks last year before starting the final three games, and that was only after Frerotte broke his hip.

But Hostetler injured his knee in the final exhibition game in August and couldn’t suit up for the season opener against the New York Giants. So when Frerotte threw back-to-back interceptions and hurt his shoulder, it was Green who got the call.

Green played well, followed it up with another good performance in a losing cause Monday night against San Francisco, and is now the starter for the foreseeable future.

With Frerotte at No. 2, there’s little chance that Hostetler could play for the Redskins any time soon. His options include retirement or a request for a trade, an enticing prospect given the rash of quarterback injuries in the NFL this season. Turner said Hostetler did not ask for his outright release.

Elway questionable for Sunday

DENVER — Veteran Bubby Brister would start if Elway can’t play, with rookie Brian Greene in reserve.

Coach Mike Shanahan, who said he would prepare only one game plan regardless of which quarterback executes it, said the Broncos “probably won’t know for sure about John until he actually takes a snap and tries to go through some drops. In a perfect world, we’d like to have him go through a Friday practice. But we don’t want to push him where we aggravate the hamstring.”

Elway, injured in the fourth quarter of last week’s 42-23 victory over Dallas, suffered a similar injury in 1996. That season, he tried to play through the injury, but when it lingered he finally missed one game a month later.

“[The injuries] are different,” Elway, 38, said. “On the last one, I was able to stay in and finish the game. That’s the thing that scares me about this one. I was able to stay in. But the last hamstring was torn and this one is not. So it’s hard to compare.”

Asked if he expected the Raiders to stack the line of scrimmage and try to stop running back Terrell Davis if he can’t play, Elway said, “No. There’s only so many things they can do. We’ve got too many weapons with [wide receivers] Rod (Smith) and Shannon (Sharpe) and Ed (McCauley). The same thing happened with Dallas. They tried to take the pass away and we ran it. Then when they brought everybody back in to take the run away, we threw it. We’re real fortunate in the fact that we’re pretty balanced.”

Last week, Davis ran for 191 yards and three touchdowns and Elway was 16-of-22 for 268 yards and two touchdowns and also ran for one.

The Broncos finished with 515 yards and rank second in the NFL in total offense behind San Francisco.

Based on outward appearances, Davis expects Elway to play on Sunday.

“Just seeing him walking up and down the locker room,” Davis said, “he doesn’t seem to be limping or hobbling. So my guess is that he will play.”
McGwire again fails to homer

ST. LOUIS

Jason Christiansen barely avoided giving up a McGwire's 64th home run, but he got enough help against the Pittsburgh Pirates.

McGwire, who hit homer No. 63 of his season the previous day, flied out to the warning track against the Pittsburgh reliever Wednesday night as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Pirates 4-0.

On Tuesday, McGwire ended his six-game, 18-inning hitless streak with a pinch-hit single in the ninth inning.

This time, McGwire hit a high fly ball that fell short for the final out in the seventh, stranding two runners. With a record 63, he remained one home run ahead of Chicago's Sammy Sosa, who played later at San Diego.

McGwire was 0-for-3 with a walk, his 15th of the season. He needs 15 walks in the final nine games to tie Babe Ruth's 1923 major league record.

McGwire walked in the first, took a called third strike in the second and also flied out to center in the sixth.

Ellis Burks' two-run double off Clooney broke up a scoreless tie in the seventh, andDOB. McGwire brought home another run with a squeeze bunt as the Cardinals won for the 12th time in 17 games.

Matt Morris (6-5) allowed four hits in seven scoreless innings. Mike Busby worked the eighth and Jesse Orosco finished up.

Pirates reliever Todd Van Poppel (1-2) retired one of the three batters he faced in the seventh. Pittsburgh has lost 10 of 20.

Like his teammates, McGwire had little luck against Pirates starter Chris Peters, who allowed two hits in six scoreless innings. Peters retired 14 of the last 15 batters he faced.

Morris retired the first nine batters, four of them on strikeouts. He walked Peters to load the bases with one out in the fifth, but got out of the jam by starting a home-to-first double play on Tony Tomak.

Expos, Maruns 3, 2

In what might be their last game in Montreal, the Expos rallied for two runs in the ninth inning to defeat the Florida Marlins, 3-2.

Robert Peterson got the pinch RBI single and Jose Vidro drove in the winning run with a double to rally the Expos.

are against the move. Then there's the television contract Notre Dame has with NBC. The Irish have a contract through the 2005 season, which was, in terms of ABC's broadcast of all Big Ten games through 2011. In my opinion, it's important to take a look at this all from a historical standpoint.
Looking back for more than a century, Notre Dame stopped the Big Ten have had quite a history together, and it's almost always been less than cordial.
Back in 1895, the presidents of the universities of Chicago, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Northwestern, Purdue, and Michigan established the "Western Conference," which was part of an ongoing effort to reform the NCAA/ Western Conference in collegiate athletics. Almost immediately after the conference's foundation, Notre Dame applied for admission. It was promptly rejected, due to the fact that the University was not large enough and that it had "unfair player eligibility rules." A year later, Notre Dame amended its "Athletic Constitution" to comply with conference standards. Meanwhile, the Western Conference kept taking on new members. Adding Indiana and Iowa in 1899, the league was renamed the "Big Nine." In 1909, after Michigan withdrew over a rules dispute, Notre Dame stepped in again as a replacement. However, they were rejected again, this time for unknown reasons.
This prompted Fr. Thomas Hartley from the University of the Notre Dame to write the Big Nine that "the Irish would like to look at this all from the extra gate receipts were placed to go to charity, a bold cause considering it was the height of the Great Depression. While some may say that this is all just "ancient history" and should be ignored, these facts still make an important point. Notre Dame had overcome their prejudices by making their first bowl appearance in 1966. But until this day, there is evidence to show that Notre Dame's schedules and their opponents. In a match up with Michigan, Pitt was scheduled to take place at Soldier Field. The Notre Dame schedule is a little-known rule that forced boundaries in search of opponents. In a match up with Pitt, which has appeared nationally on ABC's "Iron Bowl," the match up with Pitt was declared null and void.
After years of bad seasons, the Pitt-State rivalry had diminished. Pitt's (2-0) and unranked Panthers (1-0) are merely coincidental. Pitt enjoyed its best recruiting class in nearly a decade last winter, stealing away for the first time in years a few players that Penn State wanted — namely, running back Brandon Williams, who will start Saturday, and linebacker Amir Purrify.
But Penn State still gets most of the players it wants from the Western Pennsylvania, such as star linebacker Brandon Short, who grew up a Pitt fan in McKeesport but, with pro offers, couldn't bring himself to play there.
And until Pitt loses the recruiting field in its own backyard, the area that sustained the Panthers throughout their run of Top 10 finishes in the 1970s, the Penn State rivalry will be one in name only.
"Hopefully, some day we can once again make it a rivalry," said Harris, who coached against Penn State as Ohio State's head coach in 1971.
"I hope that they'll come to our bowl game," said Pitt's Athletic Director, who will coach the Panthers against Penn State in Ohio State's head coach in 1971.
"I hope that they'll come to our bowl game," said Pitt's Athletic Director, who will coach the Panthers against Penn State in the Liberty Bowl last season.

Texas wins, ties Angels in AL West

Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas

The Texas Rangers beat the Anaheim Angels and tied the wild AL West.

Texas finally caught Anaheim in the standings trailing for the last month Wednesday night with a 5-3 victory.

Todd Stottlemyre, Royce Clayton and John Wetteland all acquired at the trading deadline exactly for games like this, led the Rangers, who'll play the Angels again on Thursday.

Both teams have 11 games remaining — four against each other.

The Angels had been alone in first place since passing the Rangers on Aug. 14. Anaheim led by as many as four games on Aug. 26, but have dropped six of their last eight with five coming on its current seven-game road trip.

Stottlemyre (4-4) pitched his best game for Texas, allowing six hits in eight innings. Clayton drove in two runs, scored once and made a nice defensive play at shortstop and Zeile doubled, another issue.

John Wetteland came in for the ninth and gave up a two-run homer to Matt Walbeck.

Chuck Finley (11-8) lost for Los Angeles, allowing six hits in seven innings, walking three and striking out six.

The Angels seemed to feed off the momentum of Tuesday night's 6-5 victory over Baltimore in which they overcame an early five-run deficit and walking five.

Pat Meares had an RBI groundout, and Paul Molitor doubled for his 1,000th hit. Rochester's New KCary in the ninth to bring Detroit within 6-5. Paul Assenmacher got the final out for his third save.

Tony Saunders pitched six scoreless innings and the Tampa Bay Devil Rays beat the Boston Red Sox 7-6 Wednesday night for their first victory over the Yankees.

The Yankees were the only AL team that had been shut out this season. New York won the first six games of the season series, including four straight at Tropicana Field.

Andy Pettitte (16-10) struggled again for the Yankees, losing for the fourth time in six decisions. He gave up at least five runs for the sixth straight start, leaving after six innings with Tampa Bay ahead 6-0.

The loss meant the Yankees cannot set the major league record for wins in a season. At 104-46, the best they can do is tie the mark of 94 victories by the 1960 Chicago Cubs.

The AL record is 111 by the 1934 Cleveland Indians. Saunders (6-14), who went 16 starts without a victory early in the season, allowed five hits, struck out three and walked five. He is 5-5 since the All-Star break.

Mike Piazza pitched 10 innings and Roberto Hernandez worked the ninth for Tampa Bay. The Yankees were shut out for the fifth time this season.

Pettitte allowed four earned runs and tied his career high with six walks. He's second in the majors with 42.

Freshman Walton earns respect for Irish offense

By ANTHONY BIANCO
Sports Writer

Just two weeks into the season, the Irish have a freshman whose play makes him look like a veteran.

Shane Walton, a forward from San Diego, Calif., leads the Irish attack with five of the team's 12 goals. Starting in all four games thus far, he has scored in each of the them. His necessary contributions has earned him consecutive Big East rookie of the week honors for the two weeks the conference has given out the award this year.

"I think if I'm playing well, the team will do just fine," Walton commented. "Right now, I'm still getting comfortable with the team. They're doing everything they can do to help me achieve that,"

It's ironic that for a freshman still relying on upperclassmen to get him settled, it is the team that counts on Walton to help rejuvenate the Irish attack. Quick and athletic, Walton represents a "go-to" forward on the field. When a drive breaks past the midfield and makes its way to the net, Walton is usually in the equation that has, more often than not, resulted in a shot on goal.

Whether scrambling in the box or in the air, the Irish have counted on the freshman to get the job done.

"His contribution is very apparent," said co-captain Matt Johnson. "In the past, we really haven't had someone to go to and count on to score a lot of goals for us. With Shane, we can count on him scoring the goals."

But the total result for the team extends way beyond just the goals that Walton knocks in himself. His explosive style is exactly what Notre Dame was looking for to spark the offense. Thus far, the team is averaging three goals a game, almost twice as many as they scored last year.

Opponents are aware that although Walton leads the offense, the threat to score is just as great among all the attackers. Forward Ryan Cox has returned to the lineup after injuries sidelined him last year to crank out two of his own with five assists. Prior to an injury against Northwestern, Scott Wells has stepped up with a goal and an assist in two games. Andrew Aris, Ben Recklage, and Reggie McKnight have also had similar opportunities this year.

"Everyone's really pretty comfortable with Shane. He's adapted well to the way we play. He's really been a positive contribution to the team," commented Cox.

The Irish hope that as teams focus their defense on containing Walton, the play will continue to develop.

"I think its going to be tough for him to score as the season progresses. The teams are going to see that we go to him,"

Belles run up in Kalamazoo

By KATHERINE LEWANDOWSKI
Sports Writer

After coming off a successful and exciting tournament weekend in St. Louis, the Saint Mary's soccer team was ready for anything. Although the 20-member team came out strong, they were not able to match the aggressiveness of Kalamazoo. They played tough, but the Belles were still defeated 10-0.

The offense worked hard at keeping the ball up field, but they were unable to get past the stingy Kalamazoo defense.

On defense, the Belles were tested time and again. Goalie Joanne Wagner was truly tested throughout the entire game. She came through with an impressive 19 saves.

"All we need to do is focus more as a team," said Wagner. "More importantly, we need to forget about the past and concentrate on our future as a team. We have a very talented and strong group, and once we do, we'll be fine."

ND should 'Just say No' to Big Ten

By BILL HART

One of the most interesting facets of Notre Dame's rich athletic tradition is that our football team continues to maintain its status as an independent. When I left school for the summer, I felt fairly secure that Irish football would retain that status for years to come.

So, you can imagine my surprise when I opened my local newspaper in August to find out that the Big Ten may be interested in adding Notre Dame as part of an expansion.

In fact, I was shocked to discover that talks between the two organizations have been going on since April.

Of course, there would be some advantages to joining the Big Ten, and not all of them apply to football. As the most western member of the Big East, most Irish teams have to travel great distances to play conference matches in basketball, soccer, and other sports. Most of the schools in the Big Ten are closer to home, and within driving distance.

In football, the conference contains a number of top-ranked teams. No less than five schools to this year's pre-season top 25 poll come from the Big Ten.

There would be a few disadvantages as well. The football team would have to play a conference schedule, which would cut down on the non-conference, inter-regional rivals. When the Irish travel west to play USC or head up to New England to face Boston College, alumni from that area who aren't able to fly back to campus come flocking to see their team play. For this reason, most alumni (and that will include all of us students eventually)
