Seamus Deane, Keough Chair in Irish studies, lectured yesterday in Snite Museum of Art on connections between art and his first novel "Reading In the Dark."

Deane lecture mixes painted, written artforms

By BRIDGET O'CONNOR

In his lecture and reading "Telling the Time; Words and Pictures," Seamus Deane, the Keough Chair in Irish studies, linked the method of narration in his novel, "Reading In the Dark," to paintings by C.J. Muller and Benjamin West in the Eighteenth Century Gallery of the Snite Museum of Art. Deane's award-winning novel tells the story of the relationship between a young boy and his father, and the truth about his vanished brother.

I wanted the reader to actually see the face of the boy, the face of the father and the face of the brother," said Deane.

ND revamps on-line admissions site

By LAURA ROMPF

Notre Dame now offers an improved on-line application service and other new features following a $1.2 million renovation of its undergraduate admissions website.

"Students show that nearly half of all graduating seniors claim that they would prefer to fill out an admission application over the web," said John Drews, director of sales and client services at Shamrock Net Design. "This means that creating a well-designed and efficient on-line application is a necessity." The revamped site features an on-line application and offers a virtual tour that takes any computer user to the Notre Dame campus. It has specific sections for parents, transfer students, counselors, alumni representatives, sixth- through 10th-graders and the general public. Furthermore, the website includes audience customization and is offered in five different languages to reach the diverse population that Notre Dame hopes to attract.

"Many universities are starting to use websites, but Notre Dame has set their own standard. Their site is personalized, and one of the most comprehensive on the web," Drews said. Notre Dame offered an on-line application last year, but the decision to upgrade the process came from high demand for on-line admissions, Drews said.

Shamrock Net Design, a local internet marketing firm handled the project.

"The website is now up and running, and people are presently using it -- around 10,000 have visited the site, and about 700 students have started on-line applications," Drews said.

Shamrock Net Design was formed in 1996 by Robert Drews, Paul Berrentini and the late Brian

Gootblat lecture covers 'mating, dating, relating'

By GRETCHEN TRYBUS

Sex, passion and intimacy -- experienced through meeting, dating, relating and mating -- were the topics examined by the self-labeled "guru of romance," Ellen Gootblat, who delivered a seventh annual lecture last night in Carroll Auditorium.

A former ABC New York talk-radio host, Gootblat explained she strives to keep her audiences entertained while answering questions about college-aged relationships.

"I'm proud of what I do and I'm going to bust my chops for you tonight," Gootblat opened. She continued attempting to shed light on sometimes confusing topics of romance, friendships and family. She did this by focusing on topics such as how to be smart in a relationship from the outset. Gootblat explained her thoughts on such topics largely through a set of 17 premises.

"If you don't have a good majority of her premises in a romance, it's doomed," the former radio host claims. Her listing covers two main concepts.

"Would I ask myself out if I could?" she began, asking a question that explains one of the two main concepts: self-discovery. You must make yourself fabulous before you can be with someone else, according to Gootblat.

Relationships are meant to be easy, Gootblat continued. If a relationships is inherently bad, run from it, she recommended.

"Sweep out your house from the people who are killing you," she advised, introducing her second main point: happiness.

It is not important to have 100 people in your life; it is better to have a few that are close, she explained.

Gootblat focused her advice into some important words of
With a few keystrokes from an office in Shenley Hall last week, nearly 600 doors on campus were locked for the evening. Unlike any other night, however, the university would not spring unlocked at 7 a.m. the next morning.

Nor are they to be opened any time in the near future. Following the lead of schools such as Harvard and Penn, the university has adopted 24-hour locks for all dorms. As a result, and sights and sounds that had been the sole reserve of campus nights have vanished: a tinkle or clink from first-floor windows, Domino’s Pizza deliverymen phoning desperately for someone to hold the door, and the short, shrill beep that is unmistakably a proximity card connecting with a prok box — are now ubiquitous during daylight hours.

Most significantly for undergraduates, however, is that prok cards now have to become each student’s constant companion, a change that has not sat well with some.

“I think it’s really the butt. I don’t always have my prok card,” said Margaret Jones. “It’s really safe around here. I’m sure (24-hour locks) do increase safety, but I don’t know that there’s a need to increase safety. If you lock your door, you should be safe.”

Public Safety differs. The decision to convert to full-time locks was one the university made last year not as a reaction to any increase in crime, but rather as a prove measure for which the technology had been available.

“Barry Weiser, Public Safety’s crime prevention specialist, said activating 24-hour locks came down to one question: Why not?”

“During the day, there’s so much activity that it’s actively inviting to see your buddy coming across the courtyard and say, ‘Hey buddy, want to hang with him?’” Weiser said, explaining that the inconvenience to students is minimal.

Though there had been concerns about whether it would happen to those who need access to dorms to do their jobs — such as custodians and parcel deliverymen — Weiser said they were issued either permanent or temporary cards.

Still, many students are unbowled in their criticism of the new regime.

Hommemade bomb explodes, kills one

TERRE HAUTE, Ind.

A Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology student is facing felony charges and a visiting Caltech friend is dead after a homemade bomb detonated on the university’s campus.

Six others were injured by the blast. Police say two men built two explosives in a Skinner Hall room and then tried to detonate one in some nearby woods Sunday afternoon.

Police have questioned Rose-Hulman student Matthew Roese, 19, of Severna Park, Md., and booked him at Vigo County Jail in connection with the blast. Terre Haute Police Capt. Kevin Mayes said police believe the college is not a target.

Mayes added that the outfit is worn to be a show of power — a display of the goth and create angst for yourself with the goth. And, of course, she is a guy or a girl. I am aware of four ways in which goths dress.

A first style of dress that goths sometimes adopt is a very simple one, and that usually would like to try my hand at being a goth and create angst for yourself with the goth. And, of course, she is a guy or a girl. I am aware of four ways in which goths dress.

Frosh elections set for Thursday

Eight tickets prepare for general voting

By MEGHAN DONAHUE News Writer

The race is on and the runners are moving fast. The freshmen class elections hit full stride this week as can be told from the medley of colorful posters displayed in the main hall, the dining hall, Haggan College Center and other spots around campus.

Campaigning for president, vice president and 13 at large positions began Sunday at noon.

Elections will be held on Thursday, Sept. 24, in the Noble Family Dining Hall. Voting hours are at breakfast from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m., at lunch from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and, because of Twighlight Tailgate, outside at dinner between 4:30 and 6:30 p.m.

Presidential running mates Kelly Leonard and Meghan Meyer hope to improve relations between Saint Mary's and Notre Dame, unify the four classes, provide more participation activities and a better sense of community in the freshman class itself.

Their slogan is, "It's our future, we'll be there, will you?"

Caitie Kuben and Erin Weldon will investigate ways to donate extra food from the dining hall to charity. They are also aiming to unite the freshman class. Their new ideas fit right along with their saying, "We're not afraid to get our feet wet."

Amy Rubins and Kim Pitzeck plan to create a strong sense of community among the freshmen women, as suggested in their slogan, "We are woman, hear us roar."

C.C. Cranley and Liz Kocourek said they want to unify the freshman class with intramural hall sports. In the light of class unity and success, the pair say, "Sometimes it takes a little more to be a champion."

Connni Williams and Muffy Grant have the desire to emphasize community and want to promote class unity.

Lauren O'Neil and Galloon Bafler said they hope to appeal to all freshmen using retreats, volunteerism and movie nights to unify the class. Their motto is, "Girls just wanna have fun!"

Dana Mangunson and Hillary Chapin plan to increase class enthusiasm with freshman activities. "Thumbs up from Tom Cruise," they said.

Katie O'Connell and Michelle Nagle plan on creating a big sister program, a lucky charm for homesick friends and activities to unify the freshman class.

"We're the ones who are going to make your freshman year the best ever," they said.

After a president and running mate have been elected, they will appoint a treasurer and secretary from the interested applications. The thirteen at large positions will also be decided by the president and vice president at that time.

Presenting the problem artists face in representing time and space, Deane suggested that the use of light was one way to achieve a kind of relationship between the two concepts.

"It is possible both in painting and in literature to represent the future," Deane said. In the West painting, the light that shines on the central character is brighter than that which would be possible to shine through the clouded window in the corner of the portrait. The source seems to emanate from the base of the picture, taking on an apocalyptic or unknown quality, he continued.

"When apocalyptic light enters the painting, then the painting creates a moment when time and eternity intersect," Deane said.

That light also creates the distinction between authority and immersion in a setting. Deane presented the example of a documentary film to illustrate the difference between the two. He noted that when a local witness—one who is immersed in a situation—is interviewed, their testimony is of limited impact. When the shot broadens out and the voice of the narrator begins, however, their speech is taken as omnipotent.

Deane read a passage in which the young boy watched as his father revealed a painful secret to his sons.

"I was trying to do there was...[that] as he told it he would see the alterations of the face and the boy would be trying to control the alterations of his own face," Deane explained.

"Deliberately trying to place the mother or father in a light in oblique manner," Deane set the structure of the narrative to uncover something instant by instant.

The problem is to find some way of exhibiting the detail with such force and intensity that it is believable, but not with such force that there is no hope," Deane said.

"Like a lot of Irish people, and Irish writers. I've learned a lot about that from the great writer, Joyce," he continued. "In Joyce the present is available to us with such force that it can not be recruited into the past or the future."

"Every tiny detail actually can be recruited into a master narrative," Deane said, explaining that every scene in Joyce's writing is specific to that exact point in time and could not be substituted into other points in the novel. Seemingly holding Joyce's use of time and space in a narrative as a model, Deane said, "If you are sufficiently lucky to find that moment...to find that face lit...then you've created something that has this other dimension."

Referring to his novel, Deane said, "It is when it begins to become incoherent that its at its best," said Deane. "I would be disappointed if someone could always tell me in the story, from where the light was coming."

wisdom.

"There comes a time when you must throw in the towel, forgive yourself for things you have done in the past and move on with your life," she summarized. "You give a relationship your best shot and if it's not good enough for your partner, give up. Take your best shot back and give it to someone else."

If nothing else is gained from her lecture, Gootblat said she wanted her audiences to go away with that information. "You can't get anybody to do anything that they don't want to. You can only change your self and your perceptions of circumstances," Gootblat said, regarding the differences between men and women. She then spent part of her time considering the differences in communications styles between the sexes.

Sometimes men and women seem to speak a different language, and this is because they are different, according to Gootblat. Communication is made much easier if you read between the lines and try to understand each other, she continued.

"Get to know yourself first before you surrender yourself to someone else. That is great sex," said Gootblat. This is the view of the woman with all the relationship answers on the topic of sex, she noted.

Congo rebels seize villages

Goma

Beleaguered U.N. observers today said they had been unable to return to their base in the city of Goma for the second day in a row. Rebels had attacked Goma on Saturday, infantry and tanks churning through the streets in what witnesses described as the heaviest shelling of the 13-day-old rebellion.

The United Nations, which maintains a peacekeeping mission in the region, has been unable to find an escape route for its 400-person mission in the town. The mission is in charge of coordinating the delivery of humanitarian supplies to eastern Congo.

Police wrestle with a civilian protester Monday as politically motivated riots erupted in the streets of Kuala Lumpur.

Police, citizens collide in protest

Police in Malaysia have arrested seven people in connection with last week's violent demonstrations in the country's capital.

The arrests were announced Monday, according to the local police force, which said the seven had been detained for violating the Public Order Act.

The protests were sparked by the death of a 17-year-old youth who was killed during a riot that erupted in Kuala Lumpur on August 19.

Malaysia's prime minister, Mahathir Mohamad, has ordered an inquiry into the incident, which has sparked widespread outrage.

Police have also arrested 14 other people in connection with the protests, including four journalists.

The demonstrations were organized by the Bersih (Clean) movement, which has been calling for political reform and the resignation of Mahathir.

A group of demonstrators also tried to break into the country's parliament building on Monday, but were unsuccessful.

Malaysia's government has denied reports that security forces used live ammunition during the protests.

The government has also imposed a state of emergency in the capital, Kuala Lumpur, and surrounding areas, and has banned demonstrations.

Farmers block U.S.-Canada border

Associated Press

SWEETGRASS, Mont. Farmers and ranchers, angry about agriculture and trade policies they say are destroying their livelihood, staged a four-hour blockade Monday to keep trucks carrying Canadian grain and cattle to flood U.S. markets and undercut U.S. farm prices. Signs read: “Save our jobs, save our farms.”

“Our market just keeps slipping away from us,” said rally organizer Ron Jensen of Desert Hot Springs. “We just can’t afford to produce a bushel of grain at $2. The federal government says it costs us $3.54 to produce it.”

Blockade organizers met with U.S. Customs officials, who agreed as a matter of safety to suggest that Canadian drivers park their rigs.

Protesters left one lane of the two-lane highway into Montana open, allowing other vehicles to pass through. The rally took place as Montana stepped up its enforcement of regulations imposed on trucks transporting farm commodities from Canada.

The governor said later that starting today, Montana officials would accelerate their checks for compliance with regulations dealing with truck weight, livestock and grain.

Similar trade tensions led South Dakota state authorities to halt trucks carrying Canadian grain and livestock to make sure drivers had paperwork to show their cargoes were free of disease. Some trucks were turned back. North Dakota officials didn’t send anyone.

VA Judge upholds right to die decision

Associated Press

MANASSAS, Va. A comatose man whose family is fighting whether he should be allowed to die can be removed from the feeding tubes that keep him alive even though a nurse claims he said “hi,” a judge ruled Monday.

Judge Frank A. Hoss Jr. upheld his earlier order allowing Hugh Finn’s wife to remove the feeding tubes, but he gave opponents nine days to appeal to the Virginia Supreme Court, which they said they intended to do.

“I do not believe it advances anything new that I have not heard,” the judge said. “The nurse’s claims, which was contained in an affidavit, says he’s a human being,”

“I just can’t say OK, this is it, we’ll put you in the grave,” Mrs. Finn said. “Once they put you in the grave, there’s nothing you can do.”

The hearing was called after a nurse who visited Finn at a nursing home said he told her “hi” when she entered his room.

“I saw him smooth his hair with his hand, although he did not respond to other questions she asked.”

Gregory Murphy, an attorney for Michele Finn, said Finn does not really react but simply makes guttural noises and movements.

“If you are looking to hear something, it may be what you want to hear,” Murphy told the judge.

Joseph McGuire, attorney for Karen Finn, said Finn does not really react but simply makes guttural noises and movements.

“It’s inconvenient that Hugh said ‘hi,’ but he did,” McGuire said. “If he comes out of this .001 percent of the time, he’s not in a persistent vegetative state, he’s a human being.”
Albright, Ivanov meet in good spirits

Associated Press

NEW YORK

Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and new Russia Foreign Minister Igor Ivanov said Monday the U.S.-Russian relationship will continue smoothly despite the changing government in Moscow. Albright, who had an excellent relationship with Yevgeny Primakov, the former foreign minister who's now prime minister, said she has a rapport with Ivanov and knew him when she was U.S. ambassador to the United Nations in the early 1990s.

"We are known to each other," Albright said at a joint news conference with Ivanov before their first meeting since Ivanov was named foreign minister this summer. "And we'll get to know each other even better."

Ivanov, who was often frequent meetings with Albright, said he would continue talking frankly with the secretary of state.

"I look forward to conducting discussions with, Secretary of State Albright in the same constructive spirit that was characteristic of her discussions with my predecessor," Ivanov said through a translator. Albright, he said, has a "very good reputation in Russia as a very credible political figure," a compliment that brought a smile to Albright's face.

Ivanov stressed that even though Russia is in the midst of major change — with a new government still being formed by President Boris Yeltsin to counter financial problems — diplomatic relations will stay steady.

Relations with the United States are viewed by Russia in a special light and is one of the priorities in our foreign policy," Ivanov said. "And we intend to continue developing those relations based on the principles of people partnership."

Ivanov said the new government will be formed this weekend hold its first Cabinet session Thursday. President Clinton and Yeltsin held their last summit just three weeks ago with the president urging the Russian leader to not abandon free market reforms.

Albright refused to comment on Moscow's latest moves, including issuing $55 million in new rubles on Monday, or the continuing vacancies in key Cabinet posts.

"It's probably not appropriate to comment on what they're doing until they have their government formed," she said. "We are waiting."

Over dinner, Albright and Ivanov were to discuss Russia's economy, fighting in Kosovo, troubles in Iraq and Iran's missile proliferation. Moscow and Washington often don't see eye to eye on these issues.

But Albright said the differences don't disrupt the U.S. relationship with its former Cold War-era foe.

"As I saw with Mr. Primakov, issues that we agree on we will be able to work together positively and on the ones we don't, we will manage the problems," she said.

Although Odeh was not physically harmed, Sachs said his client was intimidated.

"After that, said Sachs, "he said whatever they wanted him to say."

No one could be reached by phone at the Consulate-General of Pakistan in New York, which was closed late Thursday.

Odeh has told U.S. investigators that he had no role in the August 7 attacks of U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania which killed 255 people, including 12 Americans.

Odeh, who was arrested as he tried to enter Pakistan with phony travel documents, faces charges of murder, murder conspiracy and conspiracy to use weapons of mass destruction.

Sachs said Odeh acknowledges membership in a group called al Qaeda, which U.S. officials have said is part of bin Laden's terrorist network.

"But Odeh told Sachs that the organization is devoted to planting fellow Muslims, not killing Americans," said Sachs.

"He said it's against his religion to kill unarmed civilians," said Sachs.

Sachs said his client does not know Mohamed Rashed Daniel Al-Owhali, the other suspect in the attack who is being detained in New York awaiting trial. Sachs said his client does not know who is responsible for the deadly bombings.

World leaders meet at UN opening meeting

The Associated Press

World leaders opened the General Assembly’s annual debate Monday by urging an international effort to rein in the Asian financial crisis and calling for action against terrorism. British Prime Minister Tony Blair offered to host a high-level conference in London this fall aimed at eliminating opportunities for terrorists to raise money. “Effective new measures, on an agreed international basis, could make a real difference,” Blair said.

Iranian President Mohammad Khatami called for a universal dialogue to promote peace and end violence, including terrorism. Brazil’s foreign minister launched the 53rd session by saying that a few countries alone cannot bail out nations suffering from the effects of the Asian financial crisis. “Experience teaches us that inaction can have a high cost,” Luiz Felipe Lampreia said during the first day of the two-week speechmaking forum. In recent weeks, Brazil’s stock and currency markets have been battered by the economic turmoil that has seen investors fleeing Asia, Russia and other developing markets.

Japan is hoping to regain its role as financial leader in the region by implementing “measures of support” totaling about $43 billion — most of it in loans — to its neighbors, Japanese Prime Minister Keizo (Naoto) Obuchi said Monday.

President Clinton pledged the United States would do more to counter the financial turmoil, but he focused his address on the fight against terrorism. He warned Monday in the unprecedented security that greeted world leaders and will remain in place for the next two weeks. “Because we are blessed to be a wealthy nation with a powerful military and a worldwide presence active in promoting peace and security, we are often a target,” Clinton said, referring to the Aug. 7 dual bombings in U.S. embassies in Nairobi, Kenya, and Dar es Salaam, Tanzania.

“No one in this room, nor the people you represent, are immune,” Clinton said.

South African President Nelson Mandela focused on human rights abuses that millions of people around the world — particularly in Africa, where regional conflicts in Sudan, Congo and Angola threaten to spill over.

“The very right to be human is denied every day to hundreds of millions of people,” he told the audience in what was expected to be his last speech at the assembly. “Many are still unable to participate in the determination of the destiny of their family and to protect themselves from tyranny,” said Mandela, whose own country freed itself from apartheid only four years ago.

VATICAN CITY

Sainthood must wait for Teresa

The Associated Press

Mother Teresa’s church is planning lavish public commemorations for Saturday’s firstanniversary of her death, including a homage from Pope John Paul II, a memorial Mass in St. Peter’s Basilica and a television spectacular from the Vatican.

The Roman Catholic Church’s tributes — including the Italian TV special from a Vatican hall draped in the blue and white of her saris — offer everything but the speeded-up sainthood that her followers say the extraordinary nun of Calcutta deserves.

Even for Mother Teresa, the Vatican made clear again Thursday, the mandatory five-year waiting period stands.

“Rome has got its rules,” sighed Calcutta Archbishop Ivan Dias, at the Vatican for Thursday’s kick-off of the anniversary events.

Mother Teresa died Sept. 5, 1997 in Calcutta, at age 87, after a life spent aiding the poor and wretched through her Missionaries of Charity order and other good works.

Italian Cardinal Piero Laghi will preside at Saturday morning’s memorial Mass in St. Peter’s. Saturday night’s television tribute will feature everyone from U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat to British actor Ben Kingsley and Italian singers and celebrities.

The pope will open the program with remarks on the woman known in her time as a living saint.

In October, John Paul quashed speculation that the church might expedite sainthood for Mother Teresa. Rules signed by the pope himself in 1983 mandate a five-year wait after death before the process of canonization can begin.

“I think it is necessary to follow the normal way,” the Pope said at the time.

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro-Valls said Thursday the pope’s position is unchanged, despite growing calls from India — where nun’s have begun collecting supporting evidence of miracles — and elsewhere for an exception.

“‘We prefer to apply to everyone the same rules,’” Navarro-Valls said.

Capitalism, the Free Market and the Difference between Them

In my last column, I made the point that Catholic social teaching gives articulation to a perspective that does not fit squarely with either the social left or right. In the economic sphere, this has meant that the social encyclicals present a view that is neither socialist nor capitalist. The point is important to make because in recent years this claim has been challenged by neo-conservative commentators—for instance, Michael Novak in Catholicism and the Spirit of Capitalism and Richard John Neuhaus in Doing Well and Doing Good. But John Paul II’s 1991 encyclical Centesimus Annus endorses capitalism such as that practiced in the United States, a capitalism promoted by Novak, Neuhaus and their colleague George Weigel.

Their interpretation of the document turns on a specific paragraph, number 42. The pope asks, “Is it fair that, after the failure of communism, capitalism is the victorious social system, and that capitalism should be the goal of the countries now trying to rebuild their economy and society?” He immediately replies, “The answer is obviously complex, and there proceeds to give a complex answer: “If by capitalism is meant an economic system which recognizes the fundamental and positive role of business, the market, private property and the responsible autonomy of the producer of goods and services, as well as free human creativity in the economic sector, then the answer is certainly in the affirmative, even though it would perhaps be more appropriate to speak of a homoeco­nomicus economy, market economy or simply free economy. But if by capitalism is meant a system in which freedom in the economic sector is not circumscribed within a strong juridical framework which places it at the service of human freedom in its totality, and which sees it as a particular concern of that freedom, the core of which is ethical and religious, then the reply is certainly negative.”

The neo-conservatives were quick to write on this paragraph to argue not only that the pope’s thinking and their own are in accord, but—in no small part of hubris—a claim to have discovered the pope’s thinking and imposed their own. The neo-conservatives seek to define Marxism on the level of pure materialism by showing how a free market society can achieve a greater satisfaction of material human needs than communism, while equally excluding spiritual values. In reality, while on the one hand it is true that this social model shows failure of Marxism to contribute to a humane and better society, on the other hand, insofar as it denies an autonomous existence and value to morality, law, culture and religion, it agrees with Marxism in the sense that it totally reduces man to materialist values. This is the case with some, but not all, versions of liberation theology.

The root of the neo-conservative misreading of John Paul’s is his propensity to collapse the pope’s distinction between capitalism on the one hand and the free market economy or the other, a distinction which the pope makes in paragraph 42, and that is much clearer when we view his exposition of it in his encyclical of a decade earlier, Laborem Exercitis. In this 1981 document, he defines the free or market economy as a market economy which is situated in a comprehensive social context that has recognition of the primacy of the whole person over simple material well-being and of the common good over individual interest. Capitalism, by definition, reverses the priorities. “Precisely this reversal of order, whatever the program or name under which it actually occurs, should rightly be called ‘capitalism’” (paragraph seven). John Paul then continues this usage in Centesimus Annus, when answering the question of whether the collapse of communism in 1989 constitutes a victory for capitalism. This is why he speaks of an economy that is “circumscribed within a strong juridical framework,” he states that it is “more appropriate to speak of a market economy, market economy or simply free economy” rather than “capitalism.” What is at stake is not merely semantics for John Paul, but a normative distinction that must be upheld if there is to be any clarity in economic thought from a moral perspective.

The view expressed in this column is the view of The Observer. It is the view of those who observe the world and do not necessarily those of The Observer. Now, it is important to point out that many economic theorists on the left have also collapsed the distinction between capitalism and the market economy, although they try to claim that they are following without revision, Catholic teaching. This is the case with some, though not all, versions of liberation theology. In reality, while on the one hand it is true that this social model shows failure of Marxism to contribute to a humane and better society, on the other hand, insofar as it denies an autonomous existence and value to morality, law, culture and religion, it agrees with Marxism in the sense that it totally reduces man to materialist values. This is the case with some, but not all, versions of liberation theology.

The views expressed in this column are those of the author and do not necessarily those of The Observer.
I feel sure this must be an oxymoron. For being the virtual controller of a major university, I am surprised at your lack of knowledge of my purpose. I am assuming that the purpose of this institution is to educate you. We know that Notre Dame students do not deserve your respect or mercy. But if you were to buy a copy of this paper, you might learn something.

The primary distinction between "bad" information and misuse is that the latter doesn't exist. There is no such thing as "bad" information; only bad actions. Factual knowledge in and of itself will not lead to good actions. Actions may be influenced by information and actions may be sinful, but information alone is never "bad." However, purposefully withholding information in order to restrict informed decision making is most definitely bad. It prohibits critical thinking and encourages ignorance.

Regarding the religious aspect of the argument against making certain types of information available to students, I am told that tested faith is much more meaningful than tested failure. Yet, one is restricted from exploring information regarding the decrees of that faith it is established that, underdeveloped, immature faith relationship is bound to form.

I feel that Notre Dame cannot care so much about women's issues. The lack of a university-run and funded women's center, the underreporting of rapes on campus, the endorsement of homophobia and the absolutely regulated gender relations on campus led me to believe that these topics were unimportant to the Administration. Still, I feel that the number one role of being a flaming liberal:Oppression by any other name is the same. Right is the only name.

I'm no Communist, but the WRC machinations small like McCarthyism to me. Or maybe it's just all those burning witches.

Former University of Michigan scholarship football player Elwood Reid exposes the brutality and twisted sub-culture of college football in his book, "If I Don't Six."

By KRISTI KLITSCH
Scene Editor

According to first-time author Elwood Reid, most good fiction comes from the life of its author. In his new novel, "If I Don't Six," which was released last month, this literary theory comes to life.

Reid graduated from the University of Michigan in 1989, after spending four years as a part of the Wolverine football team. As is evident in his novel, Reid's football career was more than just team camaraderie and playing time on the field.

Reid, a native of Cleveland, Ohio, was recruited as an offensive tackle for Michigan during his senior year in high school.

"When I started college, I was your stereotypical dumb jock," Reid said. "I was at a large university playing football, and I felt like a traitor wanting to read, write and take class seriously. It was my job to play football and I had to take it seriously."

All this changed during Reid's third season when an injury left him unable to play football for the next two years. But for Reid, this injury was a blessing in disguise, because it allowed him to enjoy other facets of college life outside the football field.

"For most kids, college is a time of coming to age, and a time to discover other worlds," Reid said. "But football is such an intense experience, when you play football you don't get that coming to age."

"My injury really allowed for a second college experience. Once I was released from the clutches of football, people began to accept me as much more than just a dumb jock."

It was this personal experience as a Wolverine football player provided the backdrop for his novel "If I Don't Six," giving the book an inside look at the world of football.

"The book is really about a guy coming to age in a sports obsessed culture," Reid said. "I wanted to write a book about something that I knew, but also about something that everyone has in common. Most people have some passion for sports, so it was a topic that everyone could tap into," he added.

In "If I Don't Six," the personality and experience of Reid is transformed into Elwood Riley, a working class kid recruited to play football for the University of Michigan. Although the book appears to be autobiographical, Reid insists it is a work of fiction created out of actual experience.

"The book is not meant to be a pedestrian non-fiction," he said. "Most of the book is fiction and made up. I'm not interested in degrading the reputation of the University of Michigan."

What the book is meant to be is a raw look inside the world of college football, an alternative to the all-American impression that so many Americans hold about the sport.

"This book asks questions about football, and if you are a hard-core fan, it might affect you," the author said.

"The book tells what I consider to be a realistic look at a college football player and team, instead of a glossed over TV image of an all-American sport," Reid said.

In our society, violence is a part of the sport. When young athletes get into trouble, we are all surprised. But we live in a universe of little moral consequence and these things shouldn't be a surprise."

Although the text is saturated with Reid's personal experience and knowledge of the sport, Reid went through the agonies of much unsuccessful prose before writing the text of "If I Don't Six."

After graduating nine years ago, he worked a cornucopia of jobs, including a carpenter, bar-tender and bouncer, while trying to break into the literary world.

"I had the idea that if I took a job and put a suit on, I wouldn't be able to write when I got home. Instead I used by body in my job so that my mind would be fresh, and it just made my desire to write even stronger," he said.

In the infancy of his writing career, Reid wrote several short stories, which will be published in a short story collection next year, as well as two unfinished novels. In the spring of 1996 Reid hired an agent and sold "If I Don't Six" to Doubleday publishing house.

"It took me a long time to get where I am today," he said. "I received more than 300 rejection letters before I even had an agent."

Reid received a masters degree in creative writing from the University of Michigan in 1997, and spent the 1997 academic year teaching a composition class at U of M.

He admits that his greatest hope is that he will make his readers think about what they are reading.

"Nowadays, too many authors think that they have a license to bore. I want people to think. Even if it makes them angry, at least I am getting a reaction," he said.

Reid will appear tonight at Barnes and Noble Bookstore on Grape Road to read excerpts from his book and other short stories. He is currently working on a second novel, while touring the Midwest on his book tour.

"So far I have been really lucky, the reviews have been really good," he said.

A thought-provoking look behind college football's glamour

"If I Don't Six"

By ALLISON KRILLA

Elwood Reid's first novel, "If I Don't Six," captures the essence of the American male psyche as he portrays the violence and injustice of a big-time college football system through the eyes of Elwood Riley.

Riley, whose only escape from his blue-collar family life in Cleveland is a football scholarship to the University of Michigan, finds himself trapped in a world of manipulative coaches and female groupies drawn in by fame, subjected to the athletes' cruelty and forced to deal with players too numb to care what they do to themselves or others. It is a world in which the six-foot-six, 275-pound Riley knows he doesn't belong.

It's a cab-r22 for Riley, who must choose to sacrifice his intelligence and ignore his conscience or risk the threat of "Six" by losing his scholarship or getting maimed. As his freshman year progresses, the downward slide of college football life accelerates, and Riley witnesses his father's declining physical and mental health from the monotony of his factory job.

Seeing his father surrounded by the "could've been" pushes Riley farther from the blue-collar life his high school friends see as inevitable. He wants a University of Michigan education, but can only afford it with the tuition assistance football provides. Yet, it is on the football team that Riley finds men who have been brainwashed to do anything for the glory of the Maize and Blue — men who have succumbed to violence, alcohol and performance-enhancing drugs.

Within the web of decisions about his future, Riley deals with the typical first-year college student problems: choosing classes, a long-distance relationship with his girlfriend Heather, making friends and his budding romance with Kate, the football coach's daughter.

In his first attempt at novel writing, Elwood Reid does a real job revealing the harsh realities of big-time college football, with escalating episodes of violence and manipulation that make "If I Don't Six" a real page-turner. However, while the story itself is compelling, some interest in or knowledge about college football is a must before diving into Reid's novel.

With a variety of twists and turns, the novel rarely suffers a slow moment and can be read in one sitting, although not by the faint of heart. Reid's "no holds barred" approach to violence leaves little to the imagination. This can be especially disturbing when you consider the subject matter of college life and athletics.

Reid, a former college football player himself, constructs a story so teeming with detail that it's important to remember that "If I Don't Six" is fictional.

John Dufresne, author of "Love Wars the Mind A Little," gets to the core of field's work, saying, "If you still cherish the romance that our prestigious universities are cultivating scholar-athletes, then you haven't looked this Wolverine in the eye."

This novel is a fabulous distraction from the mid-semester grind, and it will undoubtedly force you to start thinking.
Toronto's Clemens wins 15th straight decision

TORONTO Roger Clemens earned his 200th victory, winning his 15th straight decision, Monday 15 as he pitched the Toronto Blue Jays past Cal Ripken and the Baltimore Orioles 3-1 Monday night.

In marking the end of his streak of playing 2,632 straight games, Ripken returned to the Orioles dugout for the fourth time in his 20-year career with three hits and 2,875 career total.

Toronto stayed four games behind the AL wild-card race. The Red Sox beat the Yankees 4-3 in Boston in the first game of a doubleheader.

Clemens (20-6), looking for his record fifth Cy Young Award, has the winningest streak in the majors since Gaylord Perry won 15 in a row in 1974 for Cleveland.

Clemens, a four-time 20-game winner, tied Atlanta's Tom Glavine for the major league lead in victories. Clemens also leads the AL in ERA (2.93) and strikeouts (260).

Last season, Clemens became the first AL pitcher to lead the league in all three categories. Detroit's Billy Hough did it in 1945.

After starting the season 5-6, Clemens is unbeaten in 21 starts dating back to May 29. Clemens pitched eight innings, allowing seven hits and one run. He struck out 14 in the first seven innings, Dan Plesac one out for his first save.

Shawn Green hit his 33rd home run of the year and hit his 35th for a 2-0 lead in the third.

Scott Erickson (15-13) struck out a career-high 12 in a complete game. He gave nine hits and walked three.

Hurl Baden hit an RBI single in the fifth inning. Craig Redbek single home a run in the Toronto sixth.

Seattle 5, Oakland 2

Pinch-hitters Rob Ducey and Charles Gipson delivered con- secutive RBIs in a three-run fourth inning, giving the Indians the win at the Oakland Athletics 5-2.

Jose Panagua (2-0) pitched a scoreless eighth and Mike Timlin came on in the ninth for his 17th save.

Foster Fielding/Buddy Groom, Gipson laced a single down the right-field line to score pinch-runter Gipson. Shane Monahan doubled in Gipson with a sacrifice.

Heredia (3-3) went seven plus innings, allowing three runs on six hits. He walked none and struck out five.

The score was tied at 2 in the eighth when Ibanez's one-out pop up dropped between three A's fielders down the third-base line for a double. Ducey then hit a drive high off the right-center wall for a go-ahead double that chased Oakland starter Gil Heredia.

After starting 1-2, Fielding was looking for his third straight victory. He went seven innings, allowing eight hits and two walks while striking out six.

Ken Griffey Jr. hit the hard three times, but went 0-for-4 and grounded out on 53 home runs.

San Fran 8, Pittsburgh 1

Jeff Kent hit a three-run homer and Orel Hershiser pitched seven strong innings to break a six-start winless streak, leading the San Francisco Giants past the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-1 Monday night.

The Giants moved with 3 1/2 games of the idle New York Mets in the NL wild-card race with their fourth victory in five games.

Kent has 30 home runs and 122 RBIs, making him the only player in major league history besides Rogers Hornsby and Tony Gwynn to hit 30 home runs in his first 200 at bats.

Hershiser (10-10) had been 0-2 in his six starts since last victory, a 3-2 win over Florida on Aug. 16. He allowed one run and six hits, walked three and struck out five.

The Giants went up 1-0 in the first off Jose Silva (6-6) when Marinov tripled and scored on a single by Bill Madlock.

Mueller's two-run double in the fifth put the Giants up 3-0. Kent tripled and scored on a single by Bill Madlock.

Facing Buddy Groom, Gipson hit a towering home run over the left-field bleachers for a 4-0 lead. Gipson followed a 1-2-3 inning scored a run in the sixth on Kevin Young's RBI double.

Joe Carter's two-run homer in the seventh, a pinch-hit single by Jeff Babko, made it 7-0. Carter has 15 home runs this season, including four with the Giants and 393 for his career. Two of his home runs came against the Giants, the only pinch-hitter, the only pinch-hitter, the only pinch-hitter.

Silva lasted 4 1-3 innings, allowing six runs on five hits with four walks and one strikeout.

Detroit 7, Kansas City 5

Joe Randa scored the go-ahead run in the eighth inning on a three-run single by Scott Scaggs that beat the Kansas City Royals 7-5.

CarlisBeltran tripled twice for the Royals, who hit four triples — including four of its last five. Detroit won for the eighth time in 10 games, including four of its last five.

Randa singled off Steve (0-2) to start the eighth and went to third when shortstop Mandy Lopez misplayed a one-out ground ball by pinch-hitter Luis Gonzalez.

DeanCrow (2-2) got the last two outs of the seventh before leaving after a leadoff walk in the eighth.

Todd Jones, the eighth reliever in the game, returned to the bullpen and tied the record set by Bill Lee's seven in a row.

The Royals scored four runs in the sixth to tie it at 5. After Lopez singled with two outs, Matt Williams tripled and then scored on Beltran's single. RyanKerrigan singled Beltran with a single.

RickFick, called up from the Triple-A Toledo Mud Hens on Saturday, capped a four-run third inning for Chicago with a liner to right.

Joe Carter's two-run home in the seventh, a pinch-hit single by Jeff Babko, made it 7-0. Carter has 15 home runs this season, including four with the Giants and 393 for his career. Two of his home runs came against the Giants, the only pinch-hitter, the only pinch-hitter.

Silva lasted 4 1-3 innings, allowing six runs on five hits with four walks and one strikeout.

Detroit clinched the AL Central title, the first since 1984 and first under manager Jim Leyland.

Detroit won for the eighth time in 10 games, including four of its last five.

Randa singled off Steve (0-2) to start the eighth and went to third when shortstop Mandy Lopez misplayed a one-out ground ball by pinch-hitter Luis Gonzalez.

Griffith Joyner dies at age 38 from heart failure

Associated Press

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. - Florence Griffith Joyner died Monday at age 38 after dazzling Olympic track with speed and flamboyance that took track to new levels.

"What Florence brought to the track was a flash and a flair that we didn't have, which was probably good for the sport and got attention for us," said Olympic sprint champion Evelyn Ashford, one of her main rivals and her Olympic teammate in 1984 and '88.

"We were dazzled by her speed, humbled by her talent, and captivated by her style," added President Clinton. "Though she rose to the pinnacle of the world of sports, she never forgot where she came from, devoting time and resources to helping children — especially those growing up in our most devastated neighborhoods — make the most of their own talents.

Along with her sister-in-law, six-time Olympic medalist and world heptathlon record-holder Jackie Joyner-Kersee, Griffith Joyner turned the 1988 Seoul Olympics into a personal showcase.

Griffith Joyner still holds world records in the 100- and 200-meter dashes. She set the 100 mark of 10.49 seconds in the quarterfinals of the 1988 Olympic trials at Indianapolis, and since then, no one has beaten 10.60. At Seoul, she won the gold medal in a wind-aided 10.54.

She then smashed the world record in the Olympic final, checking in 21.34. Marion Jones, with a 21.62 at the World Cup in South Africa earlier this month, is the only other woman to run the 200 in under 21.70.

She also won a gold medal in the 400 relay and just missed a fourth gold medal when the U.S. team finished second in the 1,600 relay, which Griffith Joyner anchored.

"People are still trying to reach the records she set more than 10 years ago. It's an amazing legacy. Many have tried and all have failed in terms of her records," said Carl Lewis, who won nine Olympic gold medals.

"This (her death) is something that impacts the sport when the sport is hurting very, very bad.

At the 1988 trials, where she ran the three fastest 100-meter times ever by a woman and set the American record in the 200, she also made her mark with her apparel.

One eye-catching outfit was a purple bodysuit with a turquoise bikini brief over it, but with nothing on her left leg, a design she referred to as "one-legger.

At the Olympics, she painted three of her fingernails red, white and blue, and she painted a fourth gold to signify her goal. At the 1981 World Championships in Rome, she caused a sensation by running the first two rounds in a skin-tight suit similar to a speedskater's togs.

"She liked her fingernails and pretty hair," said Ashford.

Griffith Joyner was born Dec. 21, 1959, in south Los Angeles, one of 11 children whose father was an electrical technician and mother was a teacher.

She graduated from Jordan High School in Los Angeles in 1978, attended Cal State Northridge for two years, then graduated from UCLA in 1983 with a degree in psychology.

She married Al Joyner on Oct. 10, 1987. They have a 7-year-old daughter, Mary Ruth.

For many years, she was coached by Bob Kersee, husband of Jackie Joyner-Kersee, but Al acted as her coach after the 1988 trials.

After her performance in Seoul, Griffith Joyner was voted The Associated Press Female Athlete of the Year for 1988 and also won the Sullivan Award as the nation's top amateur athlete.

Los Angeles Times Special Program

LOS ANGELES - UCLA coach Bob Toledo, whose third-ranked Bruins have won a school-record 12 straight games, has signed a two-year contract extension, the school said Monday.

Toledo, 32, in his third year as coach of the Bruins, is under contract through the 2003 season at a salary of $453,000 per year.

"I'm not going anywhere," said Toledo, hired to succeed Terry Donahue on Jan. 4, 1996, after serving two years as UCLA's offensive coordinator, "I love UCLA. Hopefully, I can stay here until I'm 62 and then retire.

Toledo said he signed the extension in June, but it wasn't announced until his weekly meeting with reporters on Monday — two days after the Bruins (2-0) beat Houston 42-24.

Before coming to UCLA, Toledo spent six seasons (1985-88) at the University of Oregon, serving as assistant head coach, offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach. In five years (1989-93) as offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach at Texas A&M.

Toledo wasn't the first choice to succeed Donahue, but the job after such big names as Colorado coach Bill McCartney, a UCLA graduate and Northwestern coach Gary Barnett withdrew from consideration.

The Bruins were 5-6 in Toledo's first year as head coach, and lost their first two games last season before winning their final 10, including a 29-23 victory over Texas A&M in the Cotton Bowl.

TORONTO

It was a short furlough for Cal Ripken.

A day after ending his astonishing streak of 2,632 consecutive games, Ripken was back in the starting lineup for Baltimore on Monday against Toronto, the same team he faced when the streak started on May 30, 1982.

The SkyDome crowd rose to its feet when Ripken trotted to third base in the bottom of the first inning, and he responded to the ovation with a wave of his cap.

Then in his first at-bat, he singled off Roger Clemens in the second inning. It was Ripken's 2,874th hit, moving him ahead of Babe Ruth into sole possession of 34th spot on the career list.

With time to contemplate his decision, Ripken was sure he made the right move in ending the streak Sunday night.

"No regrets, no second thoughts," he said Monday during a pregame news conference. "I felt great about how it went. It was a great celebration instead of a sad event."

He admitted feeling strange about watching a game from the dugout, and sounded relieved to be returning to the field.

"I still consider myself an everyday player," he said. "I have a lot of baseball left in me."

Ripken closed his record run by removing himself from the starting lineup in the Orioles' final home game of the season against the New York Yankees.

The move came more than three years after he broke 2,130-game streak of Yankees iron man Lou Gehrig—a record that had stood for 56 years.

Baltimore manager Ray Miller said he and Ripken had spoken a couple of times over the past month about the idea of taking days off.

"I told him this a couple weeks ago ... that 10 or 12 games off, or maybe 15 games, you would be 10 percent better," Miller recounted Monday. "I just think that common sense tells me you would be fresher."

But Miller said he planned to start Ripken for the rest of this season, and he marveled at what his third baseman had accomplished.

"The streak is mind-boggling," Miller said. "He's 501 games past an insurmountable number. No one will ever make 2,131."

Ripken isn't so sure.

"If I did it someone else can do it. I don't see myself as superhuman," he said in Baltimore after watching an Orioles' game from the dugout for the first time since May 29, 1982. "There's no telling how long Ripken could have gone. Gehrig's disease. Ripken was completely healthy. He just got tired of the controversy surrounding the streak — more than one columnist called him selfish — and decided that spring training in 1999 might be more fun if he didn't have to talk about playing another full season.

So, without tipping any of his teammates except Brady Anderson, his best friend on the Orioles, Ripken walked into Miller's office a half-hour before the game and asked to have his name removed from the starting lineup.
Sanders leads Cowboys to 31-7 win

FORT WORTH, Texas

Tony Romo completed 20 of 29 passes for 223 yards and two touchdowns, and the Dallas Cowboys won their second straight game, 31-7, over the New York Giants on Sunday. The victory moves the Cowboys to 5-1 on the season.

Romo, who missed the past two games with a rib injury, was 7 of 7 for 90 yards on his first series. He connected with Rod Smith on a 19-yard touchdown pass in the first quarter. Romo then found Terrell Owens for a 45-yard gain on the Cowboys’ second possession of the game.

The Cowboys took a 17-0 lead in the first quarter when Romo threw a 13-yard touchdown pass to receiver Braylon Edwards with 1:14 left in the period. The Cowboys’ defense held the Giants to just 170 total yards, including just 95 yards passing by quarterback Eli Manning.

In fact, TIAA-CREF’s 0.33% average fund expenses are less than half the average expenses of comparable funds. It’s why Morningstar—one of the nation’s leading sources of annuity and mutual fund information—says, “TIAA-CREF is cheaper than any other [variable annuity] policy, and is even competitive with the cheapest mutual fund complexes, though it offers far more benefits.”

TIAA-CREF sets the standard in the financial services industry.

Of course, expenses are only one factor to consider when you make an investment decision. Morningstar also noted our commitment to “consumer education,” and "solid investment performance.” Because that can make a difference in the long run, too.

At TIAA-CREF, we believe people should be able to spend more in retirement, not on their retirement company. Today, over two million people count on that approach to help them build a comfortable and secure future. So can you. To find out more, call 1-800-842-2276. We’d consider it a compliment.

Battling Bands end on bad note

PRAIRIE VIEW, Texas

The marching bands of Prairie View A&M and Southern University were suspended from their next two football games Monday, two days after a brawl among the musicians.

The fight, which occurred at halftime during students' neutral-site game in Beaumont on Saturday, resulted in thousands of dollars in damage to instruments and uniforms.

Both schools are investigating, but Southwestern Athletic Conference Commissioner Rudy Washington acted swiftly.

In addition to the suspensions, Washington demanded written reports on the incident be on his desk by next Monday.

"We felt something had to be done, because actions like that will not be tolerated at our games," SWAC assistant commissioner Lonzu Hardy said, noting the action was necessary despite the drawing power of the conference's entertaining marching bands.

Band members may face the games as students, Hardy added.

Calling the melee a "tragic incident," Larry Raab, Prairie View vice president for university operations, promised a thorough investigation.

"PVAMU takes student safety and security very seriously, and we intend to ensure that our students and fans are adequately protected at any university-sponsored event," Raab said.

Raab said the fighting started when the Southern band, leaving the Lamar University field after performing, charged through Prairie View musicians who were lined up on the sideline ready to begin their performances.

They marched vigorously into our band members," he said.

But Southern band director Isaac Gregg said the Prairie View band members blocked his group's exit from the field and then attacked drum major Terrell Jackson, who sustained minor injuries.

When the fight erupted, students used their instruments as weapons, assaulting each other with drumsticks and trombones.

Several students either received medical attention on site or were treated and released from a Beaumont hospital.

On Monday, Southern Chancellor Edward R. Jackson held both bands accountable for the fight, which occurred during Southern's 37-7 victory that extended Prairie View's losing streak to 80 games.

"After viewing videotapes from various sources, it is evident that errors were committed by both sides," Jackson said. "At this point, it is important to determine who did what or who hit whom first. Guilt is not that critical."

Jackson added that "Southern University does not tolerate violence of any type."

fourth place last weekend. Returning from an injury, junior Alison Klemmer ran to 11th place and is just starting to get her racing legs back. Sophomore Erin Luby were 13th and 16th, respectively. These finishes show the determination of the women to improve with each meet. Luby improved six places from the previous meet and with Klemmer and junior Nicole LaStelle recovering from injuries and returning to full duty, the Irish will be a team to reckon with when the big meets come up later this fall. "You don't want to peak as a team right now. You want to build momentum for final meets," Deeter said.
If the Irish runners haven't peaked yet, their competition should be wary. The men and women have won both meets they have attended this year and are set on the goal of proving they are a national power.

six-all. On the ensuing two-point conversion, Costanza battled his way into the end zone for the winning score. "He was the difference in the game," commented Min.
If Keenan hopes to win more games in the future, they will need to come up with the big plays, much like they did on this day. As Min hopes, his team will have improved enough by the end of the season to compete for another championship.

Sorin 10, Knott 7
The Sorin Otters play well with adversity. On Sunday, adversity is exactly what they got. After fumbling on their first play from scrimmage and then giving the ball up on their first punt reception, they were soon behind 7-0. "In the first half, we had a lot of mental mistakes," said quarterback Pete Belden, who finished 7-12 passing.
Throughout the first half, the Otters seemed baffled by the Knot defense and were unable to get any running game moving. With the running game nonexistent, Sorin resorted to Belden and the passing game.
With time running out in the first half, Belden stripped back and found receiver Andy West open for a 40-yard touchdown reception. "Andy was huge," Belden said.
West then came up big again, this time in the fourth quarter: With 20 seconds left in the game, the score was still tied at seven. Sorin was faced with fourth-and-one from the 12-yard line, when West was called upon to kick the winning field goal. He calmly walked out and converted the three points to seal the victory.
After the game, talk was not only of Andy West's amazing efforts, but also of two freshman defensive backs, Doug Lawrence and Dave Fiorini. Their two interceptions not only ended Knott drives, but also gave Sorin momentum.
As Belden put it, "They really stepped up.
The Otters have a full two weeks to enjoy their thrilling victory, as they have a bye next week. Following the bye, Sorin faces off against Keough, who were 14-3 losers to Zahm.
Dillon destroys Carroll/St. Ed.'s in season opener

By TED FOX

The Dillon versus Carroll/St. Edward's contest at Stepan North was in all respects a one-sided affair, as Dillon rolled to a 34-0 season-opening victory.

The tone for the entire contest was set on Dillon's first two plays from scrimmage, gains of 10 and then 12 yards on the ground. This early success rushing gave the squad confidence in its ground attack, one dimension that the coaches and captain Omar Munoz stressed as a necessity coming into the season.

Leading Dillon's offensive ground attack, one dimension that the coaches and captain Omar Munoz stressed as a necessity coming into the season.

Leading Dillon's offensive ground attack was Durham "Slash" Alexander, who rushed for two TDs despite sitting out the last quarter and a half.

Surprising everyone with his immediate production was freshman quarterback Colin Conway whose 40-yard touchdown pass to close out the first half put the game permanently out of reach for Carroll/St. Edward's victory.

Carroll/St. Edward's Ed's captain Tom Nerring said that his young team needs work learning its defensive assignments and aggressiveness on the defensive front.

In the end, however, "Dillon seemed to be hitting on all cylinders," Nerring said.

Zahm 14, Keough 3

In its clash against Keough, Zahm Hall got out to a 14-0 lead by the half and never looked back, winning 14-3.

Leading Zahm to victory in a game, that was described by captain Colton King as "phenomenal this afternoon," said PW's defensive coordinator. "The rookies also got some quality minutes. I am very pleased with their effort."

When Lucke could escape the PW rush, her favorite target was senior Mary Hepburn (3 catches, 60 yards) for the PW 45.

Hepburn demonstrated tremendous athleticism throughout the game as she frequently avoided would-be-tacklers, turning 5-yard passes into 15-yard gains.

Lewis' defense, led by Liz Schlosser's two QB pressures, one sack and eight tackles — including two for losses — kept Lewis in the game. The Chicks limited PW to a mere 53 yards of total offense.

Lewis had one last chance to win the game with 54 seconds left when a poor PW punt gave Lewis excellent field position at the PW 45. Lucke executed a flawless hurry-up offense, connecting with Schlosser twice, to move the ball to the PW eight with 18 seconds left. However, Lewis' last-second heave thwarted Lewis' chances.

In its clash against Keough, Zahm Hall got out to a 14-0 lead by the half and never looked back, winning 14-3.

Walsh defeats Howard, 6-0

By BRIAN HOBBS
Sports Writer

The Howard Ducks had trouble putting points on the board, Sunday's interhall match up was expected to be intense, but no one could predict the trial later that resulted.

Looking to maintain the consistency that provided them with an undefeated season last fall, the Wild Women would have to quickly find a receiver to replace last year's sensation Mario Rodriguez.

After several trips up and down the field, the half ended in a scoreless draw. It would not be until midway through the second half that Walsh quarterback Carolyn Purnell would hook up with Nani Au for a ten-yard strike to break the score tie. A failed conversion would keep the game interesting; however, Walsh freshman quarterback Jill Veselik wasn't going to throw in the towel. Herazzleazzle scrambles under pressure kept a defensively oriented Howard team alive.

Amy Krayer, captain of Walsh and the Howard Ducks Wild Women would have to was performance but admitted, "the first couple of plays were really nerve-wracking."

Unfortunately, the enforcement of some questionable blocking calls left the Howard offense demoralized. A stellar performance by Emily Berg and the rest of the Howard defense provided the offense with one last shot at the endzone. Led by Veselik the Howard offense quickly found themselves in the red zone with time running short. In the final tension minute, quarterback Jackie Schmitt, Melissa Beiting and the rest of the Walsh defense staged a momentous goal-line stand to close the door on a 6-0 Walsh Hall victory.

Pangborn 12, Badin 0

This late afternoon contest provided spectators with what was to be the most controversial game of the day.

Badin Hall clashed with понравлннъе that would boast the appearance of four quarterbacks. After an early injury on a rule infringement tackle, Badin sophomore quarterback Prissy Clement's season ended with a dislocated knee. Clements' replacements had never taken game snaps and were shaky in their performance.

Additionally, a long break for the injury delayed Badin's spirits. But on the other side of the tokens, the break provided the Pangborn defense valuable time to regroup. Quarterback Jill Depaul and the rest of her Pangborn offense had already put 12 points on the board with the aid of sophomore receiver Julie Carbol and freshman running back Lynn Canario at the time of the injury.

Captain Michelle Kippers said, "It is a testament that the defense could maintain their heads throughout the break." Deprived of halftime, since injury time was so long, a decimated Badin core failed to put any numbers on the board and Pangborn wrapped up their first victory of the season. Katie Dillenberger knows her Badin squad will have to quickly move on and "teach new quartermbacks the plays." She admitted that the team is now feeling, "a little under the gun."

In contrast, Kippers and the rest of the "rock stars" Badin team are looking forward to the challenges. They are abroad.

Lyons 24, Breen Phillips 0

In a game that broke from the day's tradition of hotly contested battles, Lyons Hall crushed Breen Phillips 24-0. Lyons' captain Katy Yanoz attributes the scoring bonanza to a well-established running game.

"We were able to get the running game open early, which opened up our passing," said Yanoz.

Yanoz was key in the establishment of the run scoring first on a 10-yard dash. Tight-end standout Meghan Chandler scored twice in a row, while teammate Angela Bauer took a pass in from her tailback position. The strong Lyons defense led by sticky-fingered Lisa Thomas, who contributed with two picks, and linebacker Chrissy Scotti.

BP captain Jenny Choi admires that the loss was "a real wake up call for us."

The role of cellar-dweller is not unfamiliar to this BP squad. However, they worked their way up from dead last in the fall of '97 and admit they are used to being the underdog. Jessica Martin proved to be a ray of hope for the BP defense contributing a key pick. Choi dismisses BP's rough debut to a SYL the night before.

"The dance played a factor, people were a little sluggish," said Choi.

Irish take first at Invitational

By M. SHANNON RYAN

Same Mary's Editor

In 90-degree Texas heat, Notre Dame's men's tennis team made its own fire at the Rice Invitational.

In the first tournament of the year, the Irish displayed a strong singles showing with a consolation A-Flight win and a B-Flight victory.

Freshman Casey Smith blasted by Baylor's Cozzi Bibza, who was forced to retire after two sets against Smith. Smith used his powerful forehand to deliver the 6-4, 7-6 loss to Bibza and earn the B-Flight championship.

In the process, Smith used his first collegiate tournament to impress his coach. "He had a very strong tournament," head coach Bobby Bayliss said. "He shows a lot of potential and I've showed some bright points for the future."

The future is also promising with the addition of freshman Andrew LaFlin. After losing to Bibza in the first round, left-hander LaFlin rebounded to claim the consolation draw with a 6-1, 7-6 take of Texas A&M's Gonzalez Anderson. "He showed he can compete with anyone," Bayliss said. "He's as solid on the courts as anyone we have."

The freshmen will provide a support system to the already strong backbone of upperclassmen. "The strength of our team is definitely our depth," Bayliss said.

Although junior all-American Ryan Sachok cruised eighth nationally, sat out along with injured Matt Horsnly and Brian Ryan, the team provided veteran stamina. In Flight A singles, Andy Warford terminated Texas A&M's Cody Hubbell, 6-1, 6-1. Hubbell had beaten Warford's younger brother, Luke, on Saturday.

"Andy Warford has improved significantly," Bayliss said, noting the senior's dominant volley and backhand.

Bayliss hopes to see Warford's backhand service returns improve and add to his already overpowering forehand.

In addition, sophomore Matt Daly displayed his improvements since last year. Daly finished third in B-Flight consolation singles by defeating Rice's Prakash Venkataaram 6-1, 7-6. Junior Bob Warn also performed well, winning the D-Flight consolation after sophomore teammate Ashok Raju was forced to retire.

The only area of disappointment came with doubles, where the Irish all bowed out early.

Bayliss said he is not discouraged, however, because the team has not had significant practice time to work out the kinks.

Irish runners dominate weekend meet

By ALAN WASILEWSKI

Last Friday, the Notre Dame men's and women's cross country teams took first place in the National Catholic Invitational held as the remnants of the Notre Dame Golf Course. Over 25 teams from catholic colleges and universities across the nation competed in searching temperatures under the frigid September sun. The weather was hot, but the Irish runners cruised the competition with a dominating performance.

The top five men from Notre Dame all placed in the top ten. Sophomore Ryan Shay took first with an outstanding time of 23:46. Shay was chased most of the way by Colin Jones from Lewis University, who was literally right on his heels. "He was sitting on me and even stripped on the back of my feet a few times," Shay said. "I knew that I would be able to distance myself in the last mile, though." Shay is now the two-time defending champion of the National Catholic. About last year's winning run of 24:52. "I was not behind Shay was the pack of Irish runners who ran together for most of the race and finished no more than six seconds apart," Shay said. "We ran strong to the finish line after finishing sixth in the previous meet."

Right behind Waterson were seniors Tony Arce, Tim Englehardt, and Ryan Maxwell.

"It was a good beginning race. We ran as a pack and we pushed hard with the Loyola runners," Maxwell said.

Loyola Chicago ended up 30 points off the winning Notre Dame score of 23. The Irish runners seem to relax running together in the park.

"This meet was a good opportunity to get the group together," Arce explained. "Now we have a good base, a lot of miles under our belt."

For junior Joanna Deeter, it was just another first place finish in the National Catholic. Deeter is now the three-time defending champ in the National Catholic. Deeter pointed out the game's improvement, however, was never really challenged for the entire race. She recorded a time of 17:25, a full 25 seconds ahead of the closest competitor. When asked if it was difficult to run without close competition, Deeter pointed out the team achievement before her own. The Irish took first in the meet, beating Loyola Chicago by 22 points. "This was a team building run. We were determined to improve from last year's race and we did," Deeter said.

The five scoring finishes registered by the women were all in the top 16 of the run. Junior Pati Rice finished sixth following her team up.

Knights edge Studs in opener

By WES JACOBS

Coming off Keenan's 1997 interhall football championship, many expected them to again dominate foes in 1998. 1998 brings a new season, however, not to mention new teams. Sunday's hard-fought 8-6 victory over Stanford illustrates what the 1998 season for Keenan looks like. "We lost some key players," Doug Min explained. "As we've been saying all year, we need to look at the season one game at a time, and improve week to week." Close games will be the norm in 1998. With the consistent improvement, however, Keenan could once again be a team to reckon with some playoff time.

Its first game was nothing short of a defensive struggle. The teams traded punts, playing the game of field position. At halftime, the score remained knotted at zero. Stanford came out strong to begin the second half and took control of the ball. For much of the third quarter, they pound out running plays and marched down the field. Soon enough, Keenan found themselves in a 4-6 hole. However, as champions do, they climbed out of the hole. Running back Nick Costanzo led the way, tying the score at 8.
