ND students rally to voice support for change

Crowd advocates inclusion of sexual orientation in non-discrimination clause

By TIM LOGAN

Approximately 200 people turned out Wednesday at Hesburgh Mall to rally in support of adding of sexual orientation to the University's legal non-discrimination clause.

Nearly 20 students and faculty members spoke, urging passage of the amendment which will be de-facto by the Academic Council this afternoon.

Speakers criticized the University's current stance on homosexuality from a number of angles, including the ineffectiveness of the Spirit of Inclusion statement and the current policy's lack of basic equality for all students.

"I can think of no good reason why this change should not be made," said sophomore Malodin Orr, who noted that some other Catholic universities -- including San Francisco University and Georgetown -- include sexual orientation in their nondiscrimination clauses.

"On Thursday, I expect change," she said.

Other speakers in disputing the notion that the University should not change the clause because it would become more vulnerable to frivolous lawsuits. Such legal action, and the legal nature of the non-discrimination clause, has been one reason why the change has been opposed.

Puljic receives ND award for service

By FINN PRESSLY

The University conferred one of its highest awards, the Notre Dame Award for international humanitarian service, on Archbishop of Sarajevo Vinko Cardinal Puljic at an International Relations class on Wednesday.

"This is an expression of admiration and respect for the work you do on behalf of our community for the courage of Bosnia's men and women of faith," said University President Father Edward Malloy in his opening address. "You preach as your predecessor Paul did, that God made us of one blood, all nations of the earth.

Puljic was appointed Archbishop of Sarajevo in 1991, and in 1994 he became the youngest cardinal in the Catholic Church. During the recent civil war in the former Yugoslavia, he made frequent appeals to the international community for "decisive and credible action" to stop the violence in his homeland.

Recently, Puljic met with the leaders of Bosnia's Muslim, Jewish and Serb Orthodox communities, and established the Inter-Religious Council, which is moving towards its goal of "practical programs of cooperation."

"I am honored and deeply moved to receive the 1998 Notre Dame Award for international humanitarian service, especially when I consider the scope of the good work represented and the stature of previous winners," said Cardinal Puljic, speaking through an interpreter.

In 1992, the same year the Notre Dame award was established, Bosnia-Herzegovina declared its independence, the ensuing war led to the forty-two-month siege of Sarajevo. The subsequent cleansing that ensued had devastating effects on the Catholic church in Sarajevo.

The award ceremony coincided with the Catholic feast of Holy Rosary, and Puljic explained that the people of Sarajevo have become all too familiar with the "sorrowful mysteries."

"At the time of the war, the Archdiocese of Sarajevo had 520,000 Catholics in 144 parishes," Puljic said. "Now the number is around 200,000, but many of them no longer live in their own houses."

"Economic exploitation of poor people -- a greedy quest for land, a hate-filled nationalism -- these are just a few examples of the unjust motives that lead nations to war," he continued.

Puljic also addressed the mascot of the University, the Fighting Irish.

"I am intrigued because, in the nicknames, an ethnic group -- the Irish -- is associated with fighting," he said. "Presumably the fighting refers to the spirit of athletic competition against other universities. Of course, in our country, ethnic groups are also associated with fighting, but this has much different meaning."

"The fighting has been so deadly and so serious that we may never be able to call our sports teams the Fighting Croats or the Fighting Bosnians."

"Tonight, I invite the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame to renew your commitment in the ongoing fight for peace and justice in the world."

Puljic also discussed the impact of globalization on diplomacy in areas of the world most prone to conflict.

"Globalization may enhance the creation of new business partnerships, it may give greater access to information and the material things of this world, but it does not automatically result in the formation of committed neighbors."

The ceremony took place in the Hesburgh Center auditorium, and featured a selection of hymns sung by the Notre Dame Liturgical Choir, which concluded the ceremony with the "Prayer of St. Francis."
Compromising Pride

Last night, the senior class of Saint Mary’s College proudly presented “a” dance — in the Le Mans Hall lobby, men paraded about, women were publicly clowned, Chippenpales, complete with tap dance, stripping and throngs of screaming women were snatched away by men in the street. Notre Dame’s “finest bachelors,” as they were publicized, were more than ready to be auctioned off like two-ton heifers at a state fair.

Meanwhile, the 100-plus women who crowded into the lobby were raising their hands high as if Jackie O. ’s premises were going for $1.50.

Now that you have this vivid picture of the evening, you might be asking yourself why wouldn’t two campuses with such dysfunctional gender roles join to promote and participate in such an event?

Maybe we can shed some light on why they shouldn’t.

As a women’s college, where women should be perpetuating women, we should be portraying events like this rather than boycotting. Already, Saint Mary’s women face stereotypes of what we are supposedly like. Why would we go out of our way to support an event that clearly makes us appear in Angela Athletic Facility to cheer for our own sports teams.

But there were, we were, paying for Notre Dame’s male athletes to take us out for pizza. Perhaps Saint Mary’s women gathered together for a meet-up so that on some level, they’re not being sold to men that might not want them.

After experiencing Saint Mary’s for almost four years, one would think the officers of the senior class could attempt a fundraising activity that wouldn’t encourage women to put themselves in the inferior and degrading position of buying another human being.

We don’t know how much $365 is worth to you, but last week, at another Saint Mary’s dance, it was worth a few hours with one “hot male celebrity.” Last night, one woman bought a two-for-one, $365 deal.

So how do these men feel being reduced to a 180-pound stallion of myth? This is an interesting double standard. If women were up on the auction block and argued that it was unfair of a man to be outraged (at least we hope people would be). We would probably talk about how the woman is being reduced by how self-esteem and how unfortunate it was that they needed to reaffirm their self-worth by participating in an auction.

We laugh it off when women exploit themselves to bolster this testosterone and we joke about how male egos skyrocket with each increased bid.

We need to ask ourselves whether we are a women’s college in name only or do we truly believe in what Saint Mary’s is all about.

Last night, it seemed like we all lost a little dignity.

Administration focuses agenda on increasing diversity

BLOOMINGTON, Ind.

For the next two decades, Bob Nelms, the upcoming administration, will be held accountable for whatever strides or lapses IU makes toward diversity.

The latest released last week, the report recommends reconfiguring how the university promotes diversity, among the changes are the removal of advocacy deans, creation of a vice chancellor and the accountability of key IU administrators for the success of the new plan.

For vice chancellor of academic affairs Edwardo Rhodes, the vulnerability of administrators for the role diversity plays at IU is the report’s most important aspect.

Improving a racial climate the report calls “chilly at best” with the removal of the current diversity program, said Teri Lee, chief diversity officer in the Office of Women’s Affairs and Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual and Transgendered Student Support Services.

The Office of Women’s Affairs and Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual and Transgendered Student Support Services were not included in the plan. The report does not mention the Office of Diversity Programs, which is headed by Steve Birdlow. Birdlow, who is using the University for racial discrimination, supports changing IU’s diversity structure.

When the plan is implemented, Rhodes’ position will improve rapport among students. After receiving feedback, Nelms will release a more detailed plan in December.

The report, "20/20: A Vision for Achieving Equity and Excellence," was written by Charlotte Nelms, special assistant to the president, and a six-member investigative committee. It states that the creation of the new vice chancellor position will improve rapport among students. After receiving feedback, Nelms will release a more detailed plan in December.

RAMBLING

President to be Internet spokesperson

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.

Since proposed a budget for the University of Stanford, Linda Wilson was named one of nine people who may become the sole governing body of the Internet. If this proposal is accepted by the U.S. Department of Commerce, the proposal will give the board power over assigning Internet names, such as new domain names, to the Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers (ICANN), of which Wilson would be a member.

The House Telecommunications Subcommittee held hearings yesterday, and the Commerce Department is allowing 10 days for public comment before evaluating a number of private-sector proposals. Critics have alleged the board would have too much power and that giving seats for selecting board members are inadequate. The Commerce Department announced its intention to turn administration of domain names to a not-for-profit corporation in June.

University reforms financial aid policy

STANFORD, Calif.

By the time of her high school graduation, freshman E. T. Vekke said she was astonished. "The only big question was how I was going to pay for it."

Lettie Forster, the university’s recent changes in financial aid, allowing students to use the full value of outside scholarships to reduce loans, meant that the awards she won at graduation could follow her in her entirety to the "Farm." She worked very hard in high school and was pleasantly surprised to win a few awards at the end of the year.

That senior year, however, said that first year college student, said, "The university also lessened the amount of home equity that is factored into a family’s assets for financial aid calculations. Both Columbia University and Williams College have followed Stanford’s lead, allowing students to use the full value of outside scholarships to reduce their need for work-study commitments.

Number of community transfers rises

BERKELEY, Calif.

UC officials announced Tuesday that the number of underrepresented students transferring from community colleges to UC system has sharply increased because of a statewide recruitment program. Of the 613 students that have transferred from community colleges to four-year colleges, 89 percent were participating in the Mathematics, Engineering, Science and Achievement Community College Program. In the 1996-97 school year, 90 students entering UC schools through the MESS program, a stark contrast to the 40 students in the program in 1992-93 academic year. The growing figures reflect the progression and consolidation of the program. Teri Lee, a spokesman for the program, said the program was founded to provide advice and a learning community for transfers, and help community college students to compete for positions, caring in the sciences.

ND gets ‘webcast’ capability

By ANNE MARIE MATTINGLY
Assistant News Editor

Students spending the semester in London watched Saturday’s Stanford game live, thanks to a new type of media provided by the Office of Information Technologics.

Webcasting, which is also used by CNN, sends a digital picture signal through an Internet connection to computers. The video is played using special software on a screen which is approximately two inches square.

“This is a technology that sends video over a line to a computer that has a video player on it,” said Bob Winding, senior network analyst at GIT.

Webcasts so far have included last year’s bailout/recreate mass, commencement ceremony and ROTC commissioning, as well as the Bill Bradley lecture series, according to Michael Langthorne, associate director of Information Media.

Despite the success of early broadcasts, the system is far from achieving its full potential.

“What we’re really testing out is the pipes,” said Langthorne, who explained that the Sen. Bradley’s lectures have taken place in different buildings to test the ability to send signals from various locations.

“Right now we’re in the early stage of just live broadcast,” Winding concurred.

However, both believe the technology has many possible applications.

“In the pretty short term future ... it’s likely to have more impact because of the ability to broadcast a whole variety of things into homes,” he said. “It’s think all graduations and ROTC commissionings are going to be broadcast from now on ... There’s been a lot of interest generated. But broadcasting rights are limited,” he said.

“Just like any copyrighted material, it depends on licensing,” he Winding said.

Langthorne speculated that campus groups may want to buy webcast time to broadcast various events.

“We’ll be working out a way to market this to the campus,” he said. “If someone at Notre Dame wanted to webcast, we would determine the cost per minute and they would have to prove they had the rights.”

Anyone connected to the University would be able to use the non-profit service to broadcast “just about anything that you could think of that happens at ND,” said Langthorne, who noted that the system is economical because of its large audience.

Webcast viewing software can be downloaded from http://www.nd.edu/~webcast, and students can view webcasts live from this site by providing an e-mail ID and password when prompted.
"It is more important to protect oneself from a law suit than to do what is right?" asked Jay Smith of the College Democrats. "The bottom line is very simple... It is a moral imperative that this university extend support to everyone."

Participants in the rally disagreed with those who have expressed a belief that people would sue if they were not admitted or hired by Notre Dame.

"We obviously think that we just want to sue the University," said Justin Quincy Starnes. "That's not right. We just want to be free from discrimination on this campus."

Another topic brought up at the event was the Spirit of Inclusion statement, which was adopted in August 1997 - the last time University administrators considered adding sexual orientation to the non-discrimination clause. The statement calls for members of the Notre Dame community to "welcome all people regardless of color, gender ...[and sexual orientation]."

"I was surprised at the attitude the University publishing this very moving statement and then not being willing to back it up in any way," said Janet Kourany, adjunct associate professor of philosophy.

Father David Garrick, a former president of the University, referenced a passage in the University's policy with regard to gays and lesbians.

"I think most students are still hesitant... wondering whether they dare challenge the homophobes in our community," said Garrick.

Ultimately, many of those who addressed the crowd focused on the need to create awareness and change opinion among the student body, and for the administration to respond to that opinion.

"I think our students are still hesitant... wondering whether they dare challenge the homophobes in our community," said Garrick.

"If you know someone that has these symptoms, they may be a manic or bi-polar depressive," explained DePauw.

"Whether it's depression symptoms or depression syndrome, we can help," said DePauw. "Depression in all forms isn't something people have to suffer with. There are many options for people to use to return themselves to a state of health and happiness. No better time than college to learn what those are."

The different climates and geographic locations of various students can also affect mental health state. Seasonal Affective Disorder occurs when a person comes from a sunlit environment and then lives in a state that does not have as much sunlight as they are used to. The symptoms of depression will be the same and should be treated with the same respect.

Often people use sun lamps and sit in the window to do homework to try to avoid this seasonal disorder.

Serb people prepare for attacks

As a U.S. envoy left in silence after three days of talks, a defiant President Sloboda Milosevic denounced Western pressure to end his violent crackdown in Kosovo province. His government prepared people for possible NATO air strikes, sweeping out World War II-era bomb shelters.

Following Milosevic's last meeting with U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke, the president's office said "attempts were made to overcome the differences."

The Yugoslav statement also said threats of NATO air strikes "jeopardize the continuation of the political process."

U.S. officials refused comment on the talks, and Holbrooke left for Brussels, Belgium, to meet Secretary of State Madeline Albright today.

One senior U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, described the meetings as "extremely serious and sober" and said that Holbrooke had tried to learn what steps Milosevic was prepared to take to end the crisis.

He said Holbrooke did succeed in negotiating safe passage for Selman Morina, the sole survivor of a massacre last week in which 13 other ethnic Albanian males were allegedly shot and killed by Serb police at point-blank range.

Morina, who was wounded in the leg, left the country Wednesday with 10 family members and will be interviewed by U.S. war crimes investigators in The Hague, the official said.

The government of Serbia, the republic of Yugoslavia, announced a series of measures Wednesday bringing the country nearer to war footing. It ordered government departments to increase security and threatened punishment for those who spread "fear, panic and deceit."
Members need more computer resources

By ROBERT PAZORNIK

The Graduate Student Union voiced its concern about the computer needs of graduate students at its meeting Tuesday night. The Union would like to see the computer lab in University Village, which houses the greater part of Notre Dame's master's and graduate student population, still located behind the rest of campus in that it does not have access to the newly remodeled computer center, which is available to the rest of Notre Dame's students.

"Getting RenSys connections to the Village is one thing we have been working on for a long time," said Guillaume Zinggeler, who chairs the Quality of Life Committee. "Graduate students require these technological upgrades as soon as possible."

GSU representative contact Larry Rapagnani, assistant provost of Information Technologies, and informed him of their worries about a year ago. This initiated a program which culminated in long-range plans to remodel the Village to include RenSys connections, said GSU vice president David Foyle.

"We've just trying to do our very best to meet the demands of the student body. It is quite adequate to the quality that exists on the rest of the campus," said GSU president Marybeth Graham. "We're working together with the administration to create a better learning environment for graduate students, and we hope that our positive efforts will result in improvements to the University as a whole."

At present, plans for restructuring are expected to be complete by the end of the year, but construction might not get underway until late April or early May of 1999 if the plans are approved, according to Foyle.

Another concern is that residents of the Village also have had difficulty in accessing the large, often congested computer clusters available on campus.

"I know of horror stories where some graduate students must bring children into their offices at night just to get their work done," said Jeff Squyers, GSU publications secretary. "Graduates definitely have different needs than other students.

In addition to plans for the expansion of the resident network, GSU also has announced a recent private grant of $50,000 which will be applied toward the construction of a new graduate student computer cluster in the Heasburgh Library.

"The cluster will be open 24 hours a day," Squyers announced.

"This seems to be exactly what the graduate students need," Andrea Faye, a first-year graduate student, was quick to point out that people are often being taken to remedy the existing situation, but further efforts are still needed.

"University Village is organized and does have a unified voice," she explained. "We are working hard to get our point across."

Performance seeks to capture spirit of 1600s

By M. SHANNON RYAN

Santo Mary's Eddition

As far as anyone in the Saint Mary's theater department knows, "A Secret Love" will make history when it opens tonight. Thought to be the American debut of a play more than 330 years old, the cast, crew and directors have gone all out for the occasion.

Audience members will likely feel all of the charm, romance, history and comedy of the 1660s as they are immersed in the experience of "intrigue, spying, writing and wenching," said Katie Sullivan, director and assistant professor of communication, dance and theatre. Fifteen minutes before the John Dryden show of unrequited and troublesome love even begins, "strange girls" will parade through the audience selling racy for a quarter and flirting, much like women sold fruit during the play's time period.

Prior to raising the curtain, cast members will dance to the Regency student orchestra, which will play in full costume throughout the performance. The play will even extend into the audience where an aristocratic lady and a rake will watch, and later sing a duet. Sullivan said, "We wanted to incorporate the whole world of Restoration theatre," Sullivan said, who has worked with assistant director, dramaturgy, play adapter and associate professor of English Thomas Bonnell. "We really want to bring the audience into the life and time of the period."

The intertwining love stories which form the basis of the plot should be easily identifiable with the audience, according to Sullivan. "One is touching and poignant, the other is just hilarious," Sullivan said.

The five-act play centers around the Queen of Sicily, played by freshman Beth Gervain, struggling with the combination of her status and the object of her desire. The point of the kingdom believe it is time for the Queen to marry in order to protect them from vulnerability of attack. The Queen, however, resents that she must marry a man of her own rank when she actually holds a secret love for a simple commoner.

She has elevated the man to higher rank, but even he does not believe that their love can survive. The two struggle moments of "what ifs" as the Queen tries to keep her secret from being revealed. Gervain has the difficult task of playing the role of royalty at its worst — love sick. "The Queen is not at her best," Sullivan said. "She's had no experience with love and she's impatient and snappy. Beth has done a terrifically great job with such a hard role."

The play also revolves around the comedy of Florimell, an irrepressible attendant to the Queen played by sophomore Janelle Bomhew, and her love interest. "It's a chronic womanizer and she tries to tame him," Sullivan explained.

Florimell's task lies in persuading the rakish fellow to commit himself to an experimental form of marriage. While the female characters struggle with achieving the desires of their hearts, the men bear the difficulty of communicating their feelings.

"We've all been there; we can all identify," Sullivan said. "Unrequited love, unfortunately, is universal. The chase is also a fun part of love everyone knows."

The performances of "A Secret Love" culminate a two-year project by Sullivan and Bonnell. Sullivan explained. Florimell's task lies in persuading the rakish fellow to commit himself to an experimental form of marriage. While the female characters struggle with achieving the desires of their hearts, the men bear the difficulty of communicating their feelings.

Auditions were held during the first week of the semester, and rehearsals began immediately. But this play did not include simply memorizing lines and stage directions; the actors had to learn the life of the 1600s. Sullivan worked with actors on language, dialects, customs, history and manners of the era.

"I guess I have a midwestern accent," said sophomore Kara DeBecker, who plays the running ward of the Queen, Flavia. "My voice sounds very midwestern and I had to work with using a straight dialect," she said. Sullivan has had the students working on their regional accents, "It makes you much more aware," DeBecker said. The actors have not only had to adjust to the proper language, but to bulk, elaborate costumes as well.

Long fluffy dresses will be worn by the women, while the men will adjust to the layered costumes of the time period. The females have learned the contrivances of corsets first hand as well and have experienced a few bruises from their time being pulled too tight. "They are definitely a challenge," DeBecker said. "There's not much room for breathing, but it makes you get into character more. You sit up a bit straighter and feel more like the part."

The play runs through Saturday the lights will go up at 8 p.m., with the post-performance beginning 15 minutes prior. Show time for the Sunday performance is scheduled for 7 p.m. "I am so proud of how they have all worked," Sullivan said of the cast and crew. "The way they all came together was terrific."
Justice Dept. files suit against credit card giants

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Visa and MasterCard, the nation's biggest credit card networks, are limiting customer choice by preventing banks from offering other cards, the government alleged Wednesday in an antitrust lawsuit.

The two, which account for 75 percent of credit card sales in the United States, "really don't compete with each other, ... because they're both controlled by the same banks," said Assistant Attorney General Joel Klein, who heads the Justice Department's antitrust division.

"And since the same banks issue both cards, they won't allow Visa and MasterCard to engage in head-to-head competition by developing new and better products and services," Klein said.

In its lawsuit filed in federal court in New York City, the government challenged the joint control of the credit card networks by the same group of large banks.

The government also challenged rules imposed by both Visa USA Inc. and MasterCard International that bar banks issuing their cards from doing business with smaller, competing credit card networks.

"These exclusionary rules deny consumers the ability to choose from a maximum variety of card products," Attorney General Janet Reno wrote in the lawsuit.

"America's consumers have lost out.

"In denying the allegations, Visa and MasterCard insisted their industry is among the nation's most competitive. It was unclear whether consumers would choose to "jump, said Thomas Paccinola, a credit card industry analyst at Lehman Brothers. Consumers already can get special deals on credit cards, such as low introductory "teaser" rates".

Visa was downgraded initially by the mail, he noted. Reno said the lack of competition delayed for about a decade the introduction of "smart cards," which use a computer chip to expand ways people can make purchases.

The government lawsuit grew out of an investigation almost two years ago from American Express Co.

American Express called the action "a major step toward breaking the illegal stranglehold that Visa and MasterCard have had on the card industry for years." Investors apparently agreed as shares of American Express rose $2.50, or 4 percent, to $73.25 on the New York Stock Exchange.

The two companies disagreed and said they would defend their policies vigorously in court.

"The Justice Department's assault on what is widely recognized as one of the most intensely competitive industries is entirely misplaced," said Noah Haidt, MasterCard's senior vice president and general counsel.

"Consumers have unlimited choices when it comes to credit cards," said Paul Allen, Visa's executive vice president and general counsel. "The government seeks aggressive mail solicitations by banks. Justice's Klein said the litigation also showed anti-competitive actions by the two large networks in marketing commercial credit cards for business use and in developing of a secure system of transactions for the Internet. Citing the length of time it took to introduce secure Internet credit card transactions, Klein quoted a Visa executive as saying in 1995: "If we had our group (of banks) and (MasterCard) had their group, ... (an Internet product) would be out already."

In 1992, MasterCard's executive vice president and general counsel wrote the Justice Department that "MasterCard and Visa simply do not compete in any conventional business sense," according to the lawsuit. Klein said such problems had not arisen in Europe and South America where antitrust authorities have questioned such practices and the networks have backed off.

The government asked the court to remove the exclusionary rules from the networks' bylaws and to require that banks governing an association be dedicated to one particular network.

Shares of credit card issuers for the most part dropped in trading Wednesday. On the NYSE, Capital One Financial Corp. suffered a 21 percent decline, dropping $18 to $57, while Household International, dropped $1.43 3/4, or 5 percent, to $28.56 1/4. Advanta Corp. fell $1.93 3/4, or 12 percent, to $8.56 1/4 on the Nasdaq Stock Market.

Senate approves rebel aid funds

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

The Senate voted without dissent Wednesday night to send President Clinton legislation providing up to $97 million in military aid to Iraqis rebelling trying to drive Saddam Hussein from power.

The bill, which also gives $2 million to Radio Free Iraq, passed the House on Monday and cleared the Senate on a voice vote. It awaits the president’s signature to become law.

Senate majority leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said the bill would usher in a new effort by the United States to replace the Iraqi president “through military and political support for the Iraqi opposition.”

“Passage of this bill is a major step forward in the final erosion of the Persian Gulf war,” Lott said. "In 1991, we and our allies shed blood to liberate Kuwait. Today, we are empowering the Iraqis to liberate their own country.”

White House officials have expressed some concern about the bill, including how to figure out which opposition groups would qualify, but said they support the intent. Lott specifically mentioned one group, the Iraqi National Congress, as having been “effective in the past.” He said some groups definitely should never qualify, such as the Iraqi Communist Party. Clinton would determine the actual total that would go to the rebels, up to $97 million. The money, to come from other programs, could go to defense services, military equipment and training.

The CIA aided Iraqi resistance groups after the Gulf War in 1991 and Congress earlier approved some humanitarian and political support for Kurdish opposition groups operating out-side Iraq.

Republican senators have criticized the administration as shifting its policy toward Iraq. Last winter, the administration threatened to use military action, if needed, to assure United Nations weapons inspectors access to suspected weapons sites. Critics claim the administration has recently focused its effort on keeping sanctions against Iraq in place and avoiding a direct confrontation.

TODAY WE ARE EMPOWERING THE IRAQIS TO LIBERATE THEIR OWN COUNTRY.

PRAGUE

The Czech government allowed Prague-based Radio Free Europe to broadcast into Iraq on Wednesday, but insisted the station’s location should change to avoid security risks.

Earlier this year, the United States government-funded radio station announced plans to expand its broadcasts into Iraq and Iran. But the Czech Cabinet expressed concerns because the station is in a densely populated residential area in northern Prague.

The government agrees with the RFE broadcasts (into Iraq) on condition that, due to security risks involved, the station’s location be reviewed,” Vice Premier Vladimir Spala said Wednesday.

“We think the present location is not a suitable one,” Spala said. He said consultations about a new location were already underway but no final decision was reached.

During the Cold War, RFE was popular among Czechs and others in the Soviet bloc as an alternative to the communist propaganda of their own media.

RFE began transmitting from Munich, Germany, in 1951, spreading uncensored news to Soviet-controlled countries behind the Iron Curtain during the Cold War.

It moved its headquarters to Prague in 1995, following the collapse of communism six years earlier and began broadcasting out of a prominent downtown building that once served as Czechoslovakia’s parliament building.

Mideast leaders making progress

Mideast leaders are making progress

Secretary of StateMadeleine Albright said Wednesday that Israeli and Palestinian leaders had made "significant progress" toward a West Bank accord and hope to conclude it at a summit with President Clinton next week.

"Basically, I say we have a lot to do," Albright said in Jerusalem, as she prepared to fly to Brussels to go to London to grapple with the unresolved Israeli-Serbian province of Kosovo. The summit is open Oct. 15 and could last more than one day.

"I am very realistic about having to make the hard decisions," Albright said of Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat, who will be negotiating with the direct participation of Clinton.

"Their body language has been fairly positive," she said. "But you can’t get away from the fact they do have to make the hard choices."

The summit will be held at Wye Plantation, a conference site on the eastern shore of Maryland, White House press secretary Joe Lockhart said.

There were both symbolic and solid signs of progress after nearly two years of deadlock.

Arafat invited Netanyahu to a lamb and fish lunch he hosted for Albright at a Palestinian guest house after the three-way talks.

Netanyahu smoked a cigar after the meal, and later told Israelis the food Arafat served was kosher.

A senior U.S. official said, meanwhile, that the two sides agreed on the establishment of an industrial zone in Gaza in December and the formation of an anti-terrorism committee that would include educators and journalists. The aim is to deter provocative statements on both sides.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said CIA Director George Tenet met Tuesday with Israeli and Palestinian security officials. No details were provided, but the CIA has been involved in the coordination of information about terrorism.

At a news conference, Albright said: "We are in a better position to finalize all the issues needed to conclude an agreement on the West Bank."

"The presence is going to be very much involved in a lot of the detailed work," Albright said. "He has a very special and uncanny ability to work with people who have different problems like these. He puts himself in their shoes."

House acts to halt thefts of personal identity

Lower satellite TV rates also get House OK

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

The House passed a bill Wednesday to combat what lawmakers say is one of the fastest growing crimes in the country — the theft of personal identifying information such as a name, date of birth or Social Security number.

The House also agreed to roll back for 18 months an increase in royalty fees that satellite carriers pay for network programs they carry on their systems to 27 cents per subscriber per month from 6 cents, compared with 2.7 cents per subscriber paid by cable operators.

The bill, which advanced to the Senate, would restore the fees for satellite companies to the level they were before the increase took effect in January.

Laws-makers argued that the increase was consumer-unfriendly and could increase rates and reduce competition for the cable industry, where rates have grown faster than inflation.

"At a time when we need more, not less, competition in the video marketplace, we shouldn't be burdening the (satellite) industry and its consumers with arbitrary and additional costs," said Tauzin, chairman of the House Commerce telecommunications, trade and consumer protection subcommittee.

By voice vote, the House also passed legislation to:

- Authorize Customs officials to block Mexican-registered, commuter vehicles that do not meet California vehicle emission standards from entering the state. The bill, an attempt to improve southern California air quality, advanced to the White House.

- Direct the attorney general to study, collect and report to Congress information about crimes against people with developmental disabilities. The measure, which the Senate passed in July, advanced to the White House.

- Aid the Irish peace process by offering up to 4,000 three-year visas annually to qualified applicants from Ireland, their spouses and children. The bill was advanced to the Senate.

- Direct the Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics to make grants to states to establish or upgrade computer systems that state law enforcement agencies use to identify criminals. The bill, which the Senate passed in September, also advanced to the White House.

Office increased the fees that satellite television companies pay for network programs they carry on their systems to 27 cents per subscriber per month, compared with 2.7 cents per subscriber paid by cable operators.

The bill, which advanced to the Senate, would restore the fees for satellite companies to the level they were before the increase until Dec. 31, 1999.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates the bill will reduce copyright collections by about $120 million during the period.

PAPUA NEW GUINEA

140 feared dead after landslide

Associated Press

PORT MORESBY
Up to 140 people are feared dead after a landslide buried a church congregation in Papua New Guinea’s remote mountainous highlands, reports said this morning.

The National newspaper said the congregation was buried alive in the northern part of Enga province last Friday. Eight bodies had been recovered and a 9-year-old girl was the sole survivor of the disaster, it said.

But confirmation of details was difficult because Maramuni Station is in a very remote area with no road or telephone links, it said.

The landslide reportedly occurred a few miles east of Maramuni Station during heavy rain early Friday morning, said Teata Poko, a spokesman for the National Broadcasting Commission in the Enga provincial capital of Wabag.

“The landslide is believed to have killed up to 140 people,” Poko said.

The National Disaster and Emergency Services said it was still awaiting confirmation of the disaster from state emergency authorities, who were flying by helicopter to the area this morning.

The National reported that the victims were sleeping after a prayer meeting, and included eight people from one family.

On the occasion of National Coming Out Day, October 11, 1998, we, the Standing Committee on Gay and Lesbian Student Needs, join Notre Dame’s Gay and Lesbian students in gratitude for the love and support they have received from family and friends.

As a Committee, we recommit ourselves to providing educational opportunities for the entire Notre Dame community. We will continue the NETWORK initiative begun last year. NETWORK prepares and educates individuals on campus who are willing to offer a confidential and respectful place of dialogue and encouragement regarding gay and lesbian issues. The next cycle of preparation sessions for those who would like to become part of the NETWORK initiative will take place in November. Other educational initiatives will include speakers and opportunities for discussion on issues related to sexual orientation.

We urge all members of our community to redouble our efforts to make our campus a safe and welcoming place free from harassment of any kind.

Hatred not welcome at Cavanaugh Hall

Monday night at around 1:00 a.m. I was awakened by several male voices shouting outside my window. Living in Cavanaugh I have come to realize that the guys in Zahn love to cheer outside their beloved dorm and thought nothing of it. That is, until I realized these were not the men of Zahn Hall. What I heard coming from my window was the chanting of "Faggots live in Zahn, faggots live in Zahn." I would like to remind those men that the word faggot is as hateful as nigger or Guido or kyke and the use of it is thoroughly unchristian and against everything Notre Dame stands for. I was so angry I was totally unaccept- able and I beg you to stop the practice now. You are perpetuating hatred.

And, to the woman in my section who had the courage to yell out the window, "How dare you use that word??" I say thank you. You have done Notre Dame proud.

When one thinks of the University of Notre Dame, certain words come to mind — academics, legacy, and of course, football. Another term associated with Notre Dame is Catholic. The University was founded on Catholic ideals and beliefs and to try and separate the two would be impossible. However, this leaves one unanswered problem: What is done to make non-Catholic students feel incorporated into the University?

There are many programs offered on campus that are non-denominational and are designed to incorporate non-Catholics. However, no other religious services are offered on campus and Campus Ministry has tried to supplement this.

"Over the summer, Campus Ministry sent out a survey to all freshman, graduate and off-campus students. They responded that they would like to attend other churches and synagogues in the vicinity," said Priscilla Wong, Assistant Director for Administration at Campus Ministry.

Thus, we compiled a list of all these churches and synagogues, so that, hopefully, these students can find a church they are comfortable with — one of their own faith and tradition.

This list is now available from Campus Ministry and includes the service times, plus whether or not the church provides transportation. This list is updated yearly, and is one way Notre Dame tried to aid non-Catholic students.

"On campus, we do not have worship opportunities for other denominations because there are too many to do well and effectively. We hope this list helps non-Catholic students to find worship services that suit their faith," said Wong.

Notre Dame offers other programs that are non-denominational.

"We have Bible Study and Prayer Groups that has always been inter-faith," said Wong. The Bible Studies are open to all students and will take place on Wednesday nights at 10 p.m. in the Breen-Phillips chapel," said Karen Kirner, Night Prayer organizer, and Assistant Organist of Campus Ministry.

The services last no longer than 30 minutes and will have a candle light atmosphere, a residence, choir, prayer, hymn singing and instrumentals. Students will pick a theme for the evening, and we hope this is a quiet way for students to spend time in prayer and praise," said Kirner.

"When one thinks of the University, their purpose is to build on the rich tradition of Christian communities and families which continue to find comfort, guidance and values in the Books of the Bible," states a pamphlet given out by Campus Ministry.

The Prayer Groups allow many students to come together to share faith experiences and gain spiritual support. For some students, this is a new form of prayer which has been found rewarding and enriching.

"All retreat opportunities are welcoming and open to all faiths," said Wong. "In fact, many of the retreat leaders are non-Catholic."

"I THINK NOTRE DAME MAKES ENOUGH OF AN EFFORT TO PROVIDE PROGRAMS FOR NON-CATHOLICS. IF I NEED AN OUTLET FOR RELIGIOUS ACTIVITY, I KNOW I CAN FIND ONE."

NINA VAUGHN FRESHMAN

Two new programs will also help non-Catholic students to enrich their faith.

The recently started Emmaus Program helps set up small Christian faith communities, and the members certainly do not have to be Catholic," said Wong.

Another new project is Wednesday Night Prayer service that will start next semester on January 20, 1999.

We are starting a new initiative 'Night Prayer' that will take place on Wednesday nights at 10 p.m. in the Breen-Phillips chapel," said Karen Kirner, Night Prayer organizer, and Assistant Organist of Campus Ministry.

"The services last no longer than 30 minutes and will have a candle light atmosphere, a residence, choir, prayer, hymn singing and instrumentals. Students will pick a theme for the evening, and we hope this is a quiet way for students to end their day if they are stressed out and want to end the day in prayer and praise," said Kirner.

"We welcome non-Catholic students and hope they will see this as a place where they can go to worship and praise," she added.

Do all these programs actually help non-Catholic students feel included? When asked, many of them do not feel out casted or not included because they are not Catholic.

"I do not at all feel excluded because I am not Catholic," said freshman Becky Varnum. "The only time I feel left out is when a lot of people go to mass and I am secluded. Sometimes I wish there were other services on campus I could attend."

Varnum also defended the Catholicism of the University.

"I don’t believe Notre Dame needs to make any changes. People come here knowing it is a Catholic institution, and you get what you expect," she said.

Some students say being non-Catholic does cause uneasy feeling at times.

"I feel a little awkward living in such a Catholic dorm," said freshman Nina Vaughn. "But it’s my personal choice whether I want to take advantage of opportunities, and there is no discrimination if I chose to participate."

"I think Notre Dame makes enough of an effort to provide programs for non-Catholics," continues Vaughn. "If I need an outlet for religious activity, I know I can find one."

It seems, then, that although Notre Dame does not offer non-Catholic campus worship services, there are activities one can participate in to enrich their faith while in college.

"I just recently discovered that Georgetown is a Catholic school," said Varnum. "However, this wasn’t what I was looking for. I would never be made with Notre Dame because it prides itself on its Catholic heritage. Before I even came here, I knew the emphasis would be placed on Catholicism.

The Collegiate Guide to Good Manners

By MIKE VANEGAS

The college environment is a rude awakening on almost every front of one's life. Higher class expectations lead to sleepless nights, caffeine-soaked mornings and overall bad behavior. This of course breeds the poor etiquette and bad manners that flood most college campuses, including ours.

It is amazing how disappointed I was when I started college two years ago after living with a clean bedroom, a clean mouth and a polite demeanor for 17 years. But now is the time to get the word out that good behavior does exist.

The first arena for this lesson is the dorm room. This will greatly improve any spots that have been created with a roommate.

First of all, one should take a shower every morning, and usually every evening or night. It is understandable that one might only get one shower a day because of a busy schedule, but two should be the goal. And for those overachievers out there, 24 hours is enough time to take three or four showers. But one is the minimum. By the way, washing one's face and slapping on a layer of deodorant is not a qualified shower.

Another tip for the college student is to throw stuff away. In particular, one should trash any uneaten food that will not be eaten at all. This includes the leftover grab 'n' go food such as hard cookies or spoiled milk. This is also a helper when it comes to refrigerator cleanliness.

For morality's sake, all cans should be eliminated the morning after they were emptied. This not only will get rid of that unpleasant smell, but it will also help you forget that previous night.

The next step in creating a friendly college environment is word substitution. This is mainly directed to those people who can not seem to finish a sentence without the obligatory four-letter word.

Take a look at this thesaurus for clean language:

Four-letter word #1: shoot, crap, poo-poo, geez

Four-letter word #2: fudge, fiddle-faddle, make love, do it.

Four-letter word #3: (this one is most acceptable in its true form) dar, dang, in an extended form, one can use: goddamn, dangit, well golly gee willickers

Five-letter word #1: witch, gun (as in son-of-a-gun), female dog

This is a good start to cleaning up the air waves of our college campus. If all else fails, one can always say exactly the opposite of the intention of their profanity, but add a 'not.' For example, one can say "You're not a nice person who can not go to heaven" or "That's a bunch of really good information that did not emanate from a bull." Take your choice. You can even make a game out of it.

Or you can simply follow the old adage, "If you don't have anything nice to say, don't say anything at all." But we're in college now, so that's really no fun.

The final step to a good relationship with humanity deals with everyday interpersonal relations.

Do not trip people. Do not laugh at people for no good reason. Do not spit on people. Do not punch a guy in the face because he looks at you the wrong way. And do not look at people the wrong way.

One last piece of advice: Try not to take people seriously when they tell you how to live your life. In fact, if someone does try to tell you how to live your life, swear at them with a lot of four-letter words. Then trip them, spit on them, punch them and don't shower for two days. That will make life a lot easier for everyone.

Hey, You Seniors: It’s Not Over Yet!

Jim Lies, C.S.C.

This missive, though quite obviously directed to our seniors, welcomes the interest of all who have read thus far. It is intended to appeal primarily, however, to those whose days among us are numbered, but, please God, has something to say to us all. During each mid-semester break, we tend to take stock and marvel at how quickly the semester has gone. I have little doubt that most of you seniors are gasping in horror at the speed with which these days, not only this semester but throughout your years here, have passed. My intention is to assure you, as I intended to in the title, that it’s not over yet!

There is more time than you think as long as you choose to use it well. The danger in these days is that you might think that it’s too late to try something new; or, especially for you off-campus folks, too late to get involved in something on campus that you haven’t up to now. The great danger for all of you is that you might deny yourself an opportunity to enter into some of the experiences that make this place unique in all the world. Oh, I know, you’ve heard it all before, but the fact of the matter is there’s a difference between hearing and listening, between knowing and experiencing.

Some of the most important experiences with which Notre Dame graduates walk away from this place happen in the waning days of their senior year. Some of them happen in the classroom, in moments of discovery and of genuine enlightenment. Some happen among friends as you begin to realize the significance of the relationships you’ve formed here and the fleeting opportunities that you may have with them. Some happen because we dare to step on out of the ordinary course of our established routine and take on the extraordinary.

As to what that is, I suspect you would get a different answer depending on who you ask, and since this is my column, you’re getting my answer! The area of life at this university that deeply engages a good portion of our campus, though not nearly all, are those opportunities we have to pray, retreat and serve together. The time has come for many of you to decide who you are and who you want to become. The end of one’s college career engenders a deep reflection on just what matters most. We are who we are, however, in large part, because of the choices we make: for classes; for friends; for service; for worship and prayer; for employment; and, ultimately, for vocation.

It’s not too late to begin asking questions and considering options. It’s not too late to get involved in experiences through Campus Ministry and the Center for Social Concerns which could ultimately affect the direction of your life, and certainly your character. It would be a great shame if we walked away from this place without getting at the most important questions of life. The opportunities are all around us; the choice is ours. Not only because such a choice would most assuredly enhance your days here, but because of its potential to greatly transform the life that you will live beyond this place.

Please God, that which you have the opportunity to engage in here will inform the deepest questions of faith and of justice and of social responsibility. Please God, the opportunities that you have and will yet experience here will enlighten your discernment over some of the most important decisions of your young lives. I only encourage you to do two things: first, join us in the respective Senior Retreats in the spring semester. It’s not over yet. The second thing that I would encourage you to do is to throw wide the possibilities for your future. As you discern the next year or two of your life, you have the luxury of considering opportunities that will, later, probably not be available to you. The opportunities for a year or two of service are many. You will find many valuable resources on this campus: the Center for Social Concerns, the Alliance for Catholic Education (ACE), Holy Cross Associates, and even Campus Ministry which will again offer a year-long internship for a recent Notre Dame graduate. Even beyond a year of service, this is the time for those of you who have long considered, if only casually, religious life or priesthood to consider a year to try it out and to enter into structured discernment about one of the most important decisions of your life.

For all of you, whether you choose to step outside of the normal course or not, it is the time to engage in conversation with trusted friends and mentors, to pray, and to revel in the opportunities that this place and these days afford you. So that when you are long beyond these days you can be confident that you took full advantage of all the opportunities that Our Lady’s University had to offer.
Caminiti’s 10th inning blast powers Padres past Braves

Associated Press

ATLANTA

This time, the San Diego Padres saved Trevor Hoffman.

Ken Caminiti hit a solo home run in the 10th inning and the Padres overcame a rare lapse by baseball’s premier closer to beat the Atlanta Braves 3-2 Wednesday night in a rain-delayed Game 1 of the NL championship series.

On an evening when starting running sent the game into extra innings, Caminiti trotted around the bases after connecting with one out in the 10th off Kerry Ligtenberg.

It was the fourth postseason homer of Caminiti’s career, and helped him alone for failing to come up with a key throw that let the Braves tie it.

Ruben Rivera’s double and dash home on Jim Leyritz’s dribbler gave the Padres a 2-1 lead in the eighth. But in the ninth, Hoffman, who converted 33 of 34 save chances this season, could not protect the edge and gave up Andruw Jones’ tying sacrifice fly.

In fact, Hoffman could not even close out the game. With two outs in the 10th, he walked pitcher Tom Glavine — pitch-hitting because the Braves ran out of position players — and Donne Wall relieved.

Wall, who had only one save this season, walked Chipper Jones before retiring Andres Galarraga on a fly to center field.

Ryan Klesko walked with one out in the Atlanta ninth and surprisingly tried to take third on Javy Lopez’s single to left. Rivera’s throw beat him, but Caminiti did not catch the throw and Klesko — his nose bloodied from colliding with Caminiti’s shoulder — was safe.

Andruw Jones, whose home run gave Atlanta an early 1-0 lead, swung away on a 3-0 pitch and hit a sacrifice fly. Hoffman pitched two innings and wound up with the win. The game ended at 1:43 a.m., pushed back by a two-hour, one-minute rain delay at the start.

The win was a good omen for the underdog Padres. The last five teams to win the opener of the NLCS have gone on to the World Series.

San Diego sustained a loss, however, when 50-homer man Greg Vaughn limped off in the fifth inning because of a strained left quadriceps. His status was day-to-day, and Rivera replaced him.

Game 2 will be Thursday night, with Braves nemesis Kevin Brown pitching against Glavine. Last fall, Brown beat Atlanta twice at Turner Field in the NLCS for Florida.

Steady rain, lightning and thunder threatened to cause the first rainout in the two-year history of Turner Field. After a delay of 2 hours, 1 minute, the field was ready and the game began, though it started raining lightly in the last two innings.

The bad weather might have helped hold the crowd down to 42,117 — about 3,000 short of a sellout and the smallest in Atlanta postseason history. But even before the storm came, the game was not expected to be sold out.

Padres starter Andy Ashby and Atlanta ace John Smoltz dueled evenly into the seventh with the game tied at 1. Rivera, usually Tony Gwynn’s late replacement, opened the eighth with a double off Smoltz. Caminiti followed with a fly to medium right-center, and Rivera tagged up and tested Andruw Jones’ strong arm.

Rivera’s head-first slide barely beat the throw, though his momentum carried him a couple of feet off the bag. But third baseman Chipper Jones was busy raising his glove to show the umpire that he’d made the tag, and Rivera scrambled back to safety.

That brought up pinch-hitter Leyritz, whose six postseason home runs included three in the first-round win over Houston.

Leyritz tapped a ball to the right of Dennis Martinez, and the reliever ran to field it. Martinez looked at Rivera, but elected to throw to first baseman Galarraga.

Rivera immediately broke home and again slid in headfirst, beating Galarraga’s wide throw. Galarraga was charged with a double error, for leaving the bag early and his bad throw.

Gwynn picked on a familiar victim for an RBI single that made it 1-1 in the fifth. A leadoff single by Carlos Hernandez, a sacrifice by Ashby and a costly two-out walk to Quilvio Veras brought up Gwynn, and the eight-time NL batting champion lined the first pitch to left field.

For Gwynn, it was his second hit of the night and he’s now 30-for-65 (.455) lifetime against Smoltz.

Atlanta averted even bigger trouble, though, when right fielder Michael Tucker followed by making the defensive play of the game, a backhanded, leaping catch as he ran into the fence on Vaughn’s drive.

Atlanta went ahead in the third when Andruw Jones led off with his fourth career home run in postseason play.

Despite his fine pitching performance, allowing one run through seven innings, John Smoltz received a no-decision last night as the Padres beat the Braves in extra innings.

Bears yet to find remedy for third-quarter blues

Associated Press

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — Alonzo Mayo knocked the ball free, a Lions player scooped it up and the streak continued.

Those third-quarter blues. The Chicago Bears just can't seem to find a way to beat them.

"It's a good point to bring up, because we are struggling," center Casey Wiegmann said. "We're making crucial mistakes in the third quarter, a lot of fumbles. We've just got to clean that up. It's not us not moving the ball, it's just us making mistakes."

Lots of them. Chicago (1-4) has yet to score in the third quarter this season. In the Bears' last 10 games, they have been outscored 95-0 in the third quarter.

They lost their first four games of this season despite leading at halftime of each game.

"I would like to believe it's a huge coincidence," tackle Andy Heck said. "Some attention needs to be paid to it, but I don't think much more than. Hey, when you come out at halftime, make sure you're ready to go, which we are. I haven't seen anybody not ready to go."

So what's the problem? No one's quite sure. It isn't lack of effort, and there's no truth to the rumor the Bears are drinking some strange flavor of Gatorade at halftime. One player suggested they just stay out on the field at the half and pretend the second quarter is really, really long.

Whatever the reason, the third quarter has been troublesome for both the offense and the defense. The offense has stopped its own drives with fumbles and no gains, while the defense has given up big plays.

Against the Lions last weekend, the offense fumbled twice in the third quarter, leading to two scores. The defense gave up a total of 17 points.

"It was like, what the heck are we doing? This thing just got away," fullback Ty Hallock said. "To our credit, we worked real hard ... and we got a win last week that we desperately needed. Hopefully that will carry over into the next few games."

The Bears followed up one of their worst quarters this season with one of their best. After giving up the two fumbles and 17 points, Chicago rebounded and scored three straight touchdowns for the 31-27 victory, its first of the season.

So much for the theory the Bears were making the wrong adjustments.

"There's no halftime, as we all know, between the third and the fourth quarter," coach Dave Wannstedt said. "We just made plays in the fourth quarter. What can you say? And we didn't in the third."

The Bears hope last weekend's win will help solve their third-quarter problems. They've broken their streak of bad luck, so now maybe everything else will fall into place.

"And if the problems persist? That depends on if they win or lose."

"The reality of it is that regardless of any circumstances, it really doesn't matter about any individual quarter," Hallock said. "It's the end result."

Wiegmann agreed.

"We can have zeros all year long," he said. "If we still get a W out of it, that's all that matters to us."

TRILOGY

We wanted to get a head start on introducing ourselves at the career fair.

Founded by fine college students in 1989, the company has grown to more than 500 employees by hiring graduates from the best schools in the country. We're revolutionizing the way products are bought and sold for Fortune 500 companies such as Arrow-Packard, Chrysler, Boeing, AT&T and Lotus and John Deere.

We're looking for top candidates from around the country to join our re-engineering revolution. Candidates should be extremely aggressive and creative. Strong communication and presentation skills are required along with the desire for continuous development. We're looking for bright and talented people from varied backgrounds. Only the best need apply. For more information, check out our website at www.trilogy.com.

Meet us at the Career Fair, where interviewers will be available for one-on-one conversations. For more information, contact anne.letzich@t trilogy.com.

Knoblauch miscue ignites Indian rally, ties series

"The ball-strike stuff stunk for both of us," said Evans, "but that stunk for both of us."

"I don't think you could have sneaked it in there," Evans added.

The Indians had a four-hit lead in the bottom of the 12th inning, a situation they had found themselves in against the Yankees in the ALCS.

"I'm pretty shocked .... I was kind of dumbfounded. The guy's running inside the line on his bunt attempt, and Enrique Wilson broke a 1-1 tie by scoring all the way from first base as Knoblauch stood at the bag pointing and arguing, instead of picking up the ball.

Did the umpires make the right call? Crew chief Jim Evans said it's all a matter of interpretation.

"The fact that he was literally on the base or half a step from the base, he has the right to be in that position," said Evans, who watched the play from right field.

"Is it a throw that would have made him retire, and how close is he to the base? He has the right to be in fair territory that close to the base."

That's different than section 7.09 (k) of the Official Playing Rules, which states: "A runner is required to have both feet within the 3-foot lane or on the lines marking the base."

Fryman clearly was in fair territory, not the lane on the foul side, during his entire route on his wheel-barrow out there for a megaphone to tell his right fielder, and 11 in a row overall, were the Indians' second baseman Chuck Knoblauch, pictured here turning a double play, was involved in a controversial play that allowed Cleveland to score the game-winning run in the top of the twelfth inning. The Indians went on to win New York and to knot the ALDS at 1-1 as the teams head to Cleveland for game three.

Knoblauch blew his on-campus interpersonal skills. "I think he was literally on the base or half a step from it," New York manager Joe Torre said. "I don't think you could have sneaked it in there."

This was the second time that the Indians had a four-outing homer off Cone — the first time the Yankees trailed this postsea- son — but Scott Brosius' RBI double tied the score in the seventh and chased Nagy, who had been working on a four-hit shutout. Cleveland, blown out 7-2 in Game 1 — had lost a postseason opener for the eighth straight time. Yet, the Indians have excelled in comebacks, fighting their way into the World Series twice in the past three years. The Yankees, who had won their last four postseason games and 11 in a row overall, wereandi. Torre was especially angry at John Shulock, the first-base umpire, and Ted Hendry, the plate umpire. "If I were on the other side, I would have made that call," said Fryman. "If I were on the other side, I would have made that call."
Mayes injured on punt return

Associated Press

GREEN BAY, Wis.

Green Bay Packers receiver Derrick Mayes will undergo an arthroscopic exam to assess damage to knee ligaments he injured on a punt return.

Coach Mike Holmgren said the exam on Mayes' injured right knee will be done Thursday.

"We know there's ligament damage," Holmgren said. "But because the situation is complicated by the fact Derrick previously had surgery on the knee in high school in 1988, we're going to do a scope in order to make a more definitive diagnosis.

Mayes injured his knee returning a punt late in Monday night's 37-24 loss to the Minnesota Vikings.

He was in for the punt because regular returner Roell Preston had muscle cramps.

While Mayes is sidelined, Bill Schrondor will fill in as the Packers' No. 3 receiver.

Autry quits NFL after being cut by Bears

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA

Darnell Autry, who led Northwestern to the Rose Bowl in 1995 but never cut it in the NFL, quit football today to pursue an acting career.

Autry, 22, was cut by the Chicago Bears on Aug. 24 and signed by the Eagles on Sept. 9. He never made it off the practice squad for Philadelphia, which is 0-5 heading into Sunday's game against winless Washington.

"Darnell is interested in pursuing a film career," said his agent, Gary Wichard. "I think he's decided, rather than sit around and wait to get on the field, he wants to pursue his other love: acting."

Autry, who studied acting at Northwestern, was selected in the fourth round by the Bears after leaving Northwestern before his senior season — against the advice of coach Gary Barnett. He struggled as a rookie, rushing for 319 yards on 112 carries in 12 games.

Although he never made it in the NFL, Autry will be remembered for raising Northwestern to national prominence with the Wildcats' Rose Bowl appearance in 1995. Northwestern lost to Southern Cal, but Autry was a finalist for the Heisman Trophy.

The Eagles signed him to the practice squad when running back Aaron Hayden was placed on injured reserve. Philadelphia signed fullback Mike Reed from the practice squad and added running back James Ricci to the practice squad to take Autry's place on the 53-man roster.

Boed caught three passes for 31 yards in the preseason but was deactivated for the first five games. Boed, 26, has been hampered by injuries after a stellar career at Auburn.
Elway returns to practice
Associated Press
DENVER
John Elway ran off the prac­tice field Thursday, saying, "I made it. I didn't hurt anything today."

For the fourth straight week, the Denver Broncos were as much concerned about the physical condition of their quarterback as they were about the upcoming opponent. And for the second straight week, there was good news at midweek.

Elway practiced Wednesday and was listed as prob­able for Satur­day's game against Seattle. However, he also prac­ticed last Thursday before he developed sore­ness in his lower back that lingered through the weekend. Elway didn't play in the 41-16 win over Philadelphia.

In all, Elway, 38, has missed the last two games and parts of two previous games because of his injuries.

"I've come a long way since Sunday," Elway said. "I'll try to practice and get back in the flow of things this week, but I also want to be real careful with it because it's not totally gone. I still feel it. I don't want to do anything to set myself back."

"I want to continue to make the strides that I've made, I'm hop­ing to be able to go (Sunday)." Elway said his back was still more of a concern than the hamstring.

"It's the two­­jury theory," he said with a smile. "You can only put too much stock in one thing at a time."

In Elway's absence, veteran Bubby Brister has played well. Last week, he threw for four touchdowns, and he ranks first in the AFC in passing with eight touchdowns and only two interceptions.

Coach Mike Shanahan said Elway gambled a couple of times out there. A couple of times he had some pass rush and he kind of scooped to the side and ran downfield about 15 yards. It looked like he was 22, 23 years old again. So that was a good sign.

"I'm sure there's a little tight­­ness and soreness, but he made it through practice and he practiced well."

With less than 2 minutes remaining in the game, Howard had the ball with excellent field position at the Cavanaugh 35-yard line. Following a costly pass interference penalty by Cavanaugh, Veselik hooked up with Nors for 23 yards and a first down at the Cavanaugh two-yard line. Dropping back again, Veselik avoided the rush and fired a bullet to Julie in a touchdown.

"We're very excited about giving up that last touchdown," Howard coach Nate Medland said. "Our offense is scoring more points and gaining more yards every week. I am really proud of these girls."

Radin 6, Brenn-Phillips 6

Defense was the story of the Battle of the B's as neither offense could find its rhythm. Both defenses managed bold the offenses in check and frustrated the opposing quarterbacks.

Jill Schuler's interception stopped a late Radin drive just short of the end zone, preserving a 6-6 tie. On the last play of the game, Schuler out jabbed a Radin receiver and stole away Radin's chance for an upset.

Radin quarterback Priscilla Clements, gaining just 61 yards and throwing an interception, completed only 33 percent of her 12 passes and a touchdown. Jenny Choi did not fare much better, throwing as many interceptions (two) as she did completions.

The Radin defensive effort was spear-headed by its defensive line. Molly Norton and Nicole Desman led a pass rush that accounted for three quarterback hurries, two tackles for losses and a quarterback sack.

When Choi managed to avoid the rush long enough to throw a pass, freshman linebacker Helena Pan prevented Choi's passes from reaching their final destination. Pan turned in a dominating defensive effort. She knocked three passes to the ground and intercepted two others. BP only once managed to complete a pass to a receiver on Pan's side of the field.

"We are a fresh man dominated squad," Radin captain Katie Dillenburger said. "It's great to see them make big plays"

In addition to Schuler's game saving interception, she also contributed three tackles.

But the cornerstone of the BP defense was the defensive line. Jennifer Wahoske, Megan Speaks and Katie Donohoe combined to form a terrifying trio that sacked Clements twice and frequently hurried her passes.

Both teams had their greatness on the ground. Badin's defense was led by Priscilla On a one yard run by Clemmson midway through the second half. Following a 30-yard pass that got Radin to the one-yard line, Clements kept the ball himself and lunged across the goal line, giving Radin an early lead 6-0. Choi's passing game may have struggled, but her option attack was brilliant.

Throughout the afternoon she made perfect pitches to her tailback Fancesca Delayo. Delayo averaged over eight yards-carry and scored BP's only touchdown of the day on a 14-yard scamper early in the second half.

"We were disappointed with the tie today," Choi said. "We really expected to win. We just need to put this game behind us and get ready for the next game."

Pangborn 12, Walsh 0

In a weekend that saw many previously undefeated NFl teams fall, Walsh Hall was dealt its first loss of the season by the ladies of Pangborn Hall.

Pangborn's defense shifted the Walsh attack while Jill DePaul's 144 yards of total offense led the Pangborn offense. Sophomore defensive tackle Erin Prisectrek terrorized Walsh quarterback after the half. Contributing two sacks and five tackles-for-losses, she led a defense that limited Walsh to a mere 56 yards of total offense. Pangborn coach Sergio Delloyo said. "She made a lot of big plays for us today."

The Pangborn defensive secondary rarely allowed a Walsh receive to open frustrating the Walsh passing attack. Panell completed only three of his 12 pass attempts and was intercepted twice, including the very first play of the game.

"The Pangborn offense, not to be outshone by its defensive counterpart, put up impressive numbers of its own. Quarterback Jill DePaul completed seven of 14 passes for 92 yards and a touchdown. Deloyol also demonstrated her strong running game as she rushed for 52 yards and another touchdown.

The live bright spot for Walsh on the afternoon was the second half play of its defensive line. Refusing to give up, Gina Morton, Sue Beesoney and Jackie Schmidt broke through the Pangborn offensive line numerous times in the second half.

Schmidt alone had three tackles for losses. Thanks to the play of the Walsh defensive line, Pangborn did not score in the second half.

The defensive line played tough but we just made too many mental mistakes today," Morton said. "We missed too many flags and didn't make the right reads. We have to cut out these mistakes before the playoffs start."

Players and owners could decide fate of season today

Announced Press

NEW YORK

Is there any hope for the start of the NBA's regular season?

Back at the bargaining table for only the second time in almost three and a half months, owners and players might find out the answer today.

Talks were set to resume at a midtown Manhattan hotel, and both sides were extremely pessimistic that any progress would be made to find the first unionized games because of a labor impasse in league history.

"We're not coming with anything," NBA deputy commissioner Russ Granik said. "We're waiting to hear what they have to say. So I don't know what to expect.

The last formal bargaining session was held Aug. 6, and owners walked out of the room after reaching the players' proposal.

Union director Billy Hunter said his side, too, will not be coming with any new concessions.

"We're prepared to address their concerns, we really are," he said. "But I'm not going to bid against myself.

They have taken an intransigent position in which they are not inclined to respond to anything other than what they are demanding. It's not going to be a concession deal where they make demands and we concede.

The owners and players have only a couple of days to come up with a deal that will save an 82-game season, and such a breakthrough seems unlikely with the sides far apart on the main economic issues.

The regular season is scheduled to begin Nov. 3.

"I've always felt I've been ready," said Williams. "I do know I can catch, but I'm not the kind of guy who's going to back down. I keep it hyped. I like to talk. I like to celebrate. Every play, you've got to play like it's fourth-and-five and they're going for it. That's my game."

So far this season, Williams has shown that "he's got game."

He made five solo tackles against Stanford and has registered 15 tackles on the season, but just like any other second-year player, he has some room for improvement.

"Brock played hard, didn't always play smart," said defensive backs coach Tom McMahon. "He came up with some tackles. I think this is a growing-up period for him. You grow up when you're playing in games. He's got a snap in his step and he loves a challenge, I hope it rubs off."

In the Purdue game, Williams looked like he had great position on a Drew Brees' pass to the endzone, but just when it looked like he had a sure interception, Randall Lane stripped him of the ball and turned the Williams' pick into a Purdue touchdown.

Following the play, Williams was visibly upset, but since then has bounced back in a big way.

"He's a tremendous competitor. He doesn't want to get beat," said McMahon. "When he does get beat, he doesn't believe he did."

The next test for Williams will come this weekend when he lines up against Tariq McDonald and all-American candidate Lionel Jackson, who already has 13 receptions for 160 yards.

Despite the bobbled interception that led to a Purdue touchdown, Brock Williams' presence gave him his first start in the Irish defensive backfield a week later against Stanford.
Oakland's QB George could miss five weeks with injury

Associated Press

ALAMEDA, Calif.
The Oakland Raiders may be missing quarterback Jeff George longer than expected.

Coach Jon Gruden said Wednesday that George has a torn left groin and that it's impossible to predict when he'll return. Two days earlier, the Raiders had described the injury as a strain and held out hope George could play this weekend.

"I just have a muscle tear, it's more severe than we had hoped," Gruden said. "I don't know how long it will linger."

George was knocked out of Sunday's 23-20 victory at Arizona with the groin injury, had a tear, Gruden said. "I don't know if it's a strain or a tear like that, but I'll deal with it and rehabilitate as fast as I can," George said. "Especially the way things are going now, you want to be out there." George's injury means Donald Hollas, who was 12-of-22 for 184 yards in the last three quarters against Arizona, will make his first NFL start since January 1992. He will be backed up by 39-year-old Wade Wilson and Pat Barnes, who was activated Wednesday as a running back. Napoleon Kaufman is bothered by a sprained left ankle that Gruden said still was swollen on Wednesday, though Kaufman said he expects to be fine by Sunday.

Kaufman's backup, Harvey Williams, has swelling in his right knee.

So Calvin Branch, a defensive back who played running back in college, worked on offense Wednesday and could be used as a running back in an emergency this weekend.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY

David Caruso (Jan. 17), Sigourney Weaver (Oct. 8)
Happy Birthday! This is not the time to look back and see what you did at the work. You need to go out and take action. Making use of your hands-on experience is important, so you may want to get involved in a leadership position. Your numbers are 14, 23, 32, 41.

Aries (March 19-April 19): Your friends will be very reordered into your work, you will share and will enjoy where you do more than what your boss asks you. Advancement is beginning.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): You will be emotional regarding the changes in your environment. You will feel back to where you were.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): You will have one or more story going around your home. Get these ideas cleaned out and the walls painted. The innovations will lift your spirits.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): (June 21-July 22): Your involvement with large groups will play a major role in your present attitude. Your partner may not be as strong in the same direction you are.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 21): Put your efforts into your work and be extremely flexible. Your personal life will improve if you are more active, flexible and open.

Virgo (Aug. 22-Sept. 22): Work hard to hold on to your dreams. You need to take a realistic look at your life.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't be picky in your personal life. Get involved in helping the less fortunate. You can expect that your life will be better if you do more than what you are expected to do.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make sure that you don't abstract yourself into a corner by spending more than you can rightfully afford.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Try to be more flexible in your personal life. Get involved enough to have your mind opened.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will need to find a steady path to order to complete the goal.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't be picky in your personal life. You need to find a steady path to order to complete the goal.

Pisces (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): You will meet some new friends or lovers through relatives. You should consider taking a more active, flexible and open approach.

Belles drop hard-fought match in three games

Despite tough defensive effort, Belles fall to Hope College at home

DANA KIDNEY
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's volleyball team fell short of a win last night against visiting Hope College in three games: 15-11, 15-8, 15-13.

However, head coach Jennie Joyce was very pleased with the team's play overall. "Despite the loss, we played awesome defense at the net and on the floor," Joyce said. "We're playing at the level we need to play at in order to beat teams and be competitive in our conference."

"We played a great game, and we all knew that we could've won," freshman Julie LeBeau said. "With a little more effort, we would have pulled it off." The Belles were able to keep every game close. The Belles could have won any of the games if they had converted more of the freshmen errors.

"Hope is a great serving team, but we fought back, and our aggressiveness never died down," Joyce said. "We struggled on our offense though. Our serving could've been better."

Although the team did not serve well, freshman Suzanne Marin and junior Agnes Bill led the Dutch, contributing four service aces a piece.

The Belles defense was what kept them in the game. "I thought we played so well. It looked like we were totally there," Bill said. "We executed well, and there were lots of digs. Our poor service was our weakness tonight, for sure."

Freshman Angie Meyers and junior Joyce Ozbolt each contributed solid defensive efforts. Meyers had 28 digs while Ozbolt's 15 block touches and 15 solo blocks kept the Belles in the game.

"Overall we played great defense and we came up with some awesome blocks," Meyers said. "We faced Hope earlier in the season, and this time we played much better, even though we still lost."

"We played well, but we struggled with certain things," Suzanne Martin said. "Our defense was great, hopefully that will carry over to this weekend's tournament."

The Belles go into the Saint Mary's College Spectacular tournament this weekend to face several tough conference teams.

"Before this weekend, we need to step it up a notch and be more aggressive," Meyers said. "We need to focus more on servers and talk more on the floor too."

"If we keep up the good play at the net and our good defense this weekend," LeBeau said, "We will definitely come out on top." Joyce agrees that the Belles need to work on a few things before this weekend's tournament.

"We need to get our offense clicking," Joyce said. "We also need to come with our complete game defense and offense."

Krilla outguns Veselik in Cavanaugh Victory

By MIKE CONNOLLY
Sports Writer

Cavanaugh 14, Howard 12

In the most exciting game on Sunday afternoon, Howard's two point conversion try fell just short and Cavanaugh escaped this battle of great quarterbacks with a 14-12 victory.

Cavanaugh senior quarterback Allison Krilla put her team on the board first. Following an excellent punt return that gave Cavanaugh the ball at the Howard 11 yard line, Krilla fired a 7-yard strike to Kristin Patrick, who then executed the option to perfection. Krilla pitched the ball to Kristin Patrick, who crossed the goaline to give Cavanaugh a 7-0 lead.

Howard freshman quarterback Jill Veselik answered Krilla's drive with fireworks of her own. On the last play of the first half, Veselik avoided the Cavanaugh rush and took off down the sideline. Avoiding seven would-be- tacklers, Veselik rushed for an incredible 70 yard touchdown run to bring Howard within one, 7-6.

Unflazed by Veselik's heroics, Krilla opened the second half with an impressive drive of her own. Completing four of her five attempts in addition to eight yards of rushing, Krilla increased the Cavanaugh lead when she hit McNally on a 30-yard bomb to put Cavanaugh up 14-0.

On Howard's next possession, Veselik found her favorite target Vanessa Nero for a 10-yard gain. Nero had five catches for 74 yards on the afternoon.

Howard looked as though it would answer Cavanaugh's drive on its next possession but an excellent play on fourth and eight yards by the Cavanaugh defensive line-stuffed Veselik in the backfield, stopping the Howard drive.

Looking to put the game away, Krilla led Cavanaugh right back down the field. Completing both her passes and rushing for 17 yards to put the ball at the Howard 8 yard line, it looked as though nothing could stop Krilla's attack. But on Krilla's very next pass, Veselik, who played both ways, stepped in front of Krilla's intended receiver and returned the interception 17 yards.

Williams brings emotion to 'D'

By BRIAN KESSLER
Assistant Sports Editor

"It was all about attitude." Brock Williams words following the Stanford sum up the way he plays football — with emotion.

"Brock is a feisty little guy," said head coach Bob Davie. "He brings something to the field." Brock Williams words follow.

Williams has been a whirlwind of emotion to the defense of the Irish this season, despite the loss of Allen Rossum and Ivory Covington.

"Brock brings a lot of fire to us," defensive coordinator Greg Matison said. "He makes it fun, and defense is supposed to be fun. You almost have to have fun on defense. I want to see our defense get excited, and our offense get excited."

"Williams can definitely play some defense," says Comparini.

After making his first start against Purdue, Williams has quickly become a reliable corner.

Although the Belles defense was what kept them in the game, Joyce agrees that the Belles need to work on a few things before this weekend's tournament.

"We need to get our offense clicking," Joyce said. "We also need to come with our complete game defense and offense."
