Arias: Military rules budget

By ERICA THESING

The amount of money dedicated to militarism and the arms trade is immoral, and the U.S. is one of the worst offenders. Former president of Costa Rica Oscar Arias, former president of Costa Rica and 1987 Nobel Peace Prize laureate, said.

"The United States stands as an extreme example of moral irresponsibility," Arias said. "By maintaining a massive military industrial budget, this country sends the wrong message to other countries. He explained that the U.S. sells these weapons indiscriminately, not just to democracies or countries fighting for democracy as some politicians may claim.

"It's a matter of making money, but the sale of these weapons and that's not proper. That's immoral," he said.

Arias pointed out that one of every five American children grows up in poverty, and over 140 million Americans lack health insurance. He said those facts, compared to military spending and the notion that military leaders can receive increased funding whenever a conflict arises, are ironic.

"You could do so much with even a small portion of that money if it's re-directed," said Arias.

Part of the problem is the United States' acceptance of this behavior, former president of Costa Rica Oscar Arias discussed the impact of the United States' international arms sales in a lecture Friday.

Arias said, "The American public needs to be educated about peace because, as I pointed out, you've been involved in wars all your history, but you tell me you are a peace-loving country, a peace-loving people." he see ARIAS / page 4

NATO to investigate Dunbar's gifts to Irish

By ERICA THESING

The NCAA Committee on Infractions will ask Notre Dame to appear at a hearing in connection with the case of Notre Dame football players receiving gifts from Kimberly Dunbar, who pleaded guilty to using embezzled funds to purchase the gifts.

The University received preliminary notice of the hearing and expects to receive official notice Wednesday. No date for the hearing has been set, and the University is uncertain about the outcome, according to Dennis Moore, director of Notre Dame Public Relations.

"Nothing has been determined on that yet," Moore said. "Nothing has been decided."

The NCAA enforcement staff has recommended that the matter be considered a secondary rules violation, as opposed to a major violation. Moore stressed that this is merely a recommendation and the committee may still go either way.

"We haven't seen those documents, so we don't know what their reasoning was, but obviously based on their reviewing the case, they decided it was a secondary matter," Moore said.

If the committee does up for the secondary rules violation, sanctions could range from probation without penalties to a minor loss of scholarships. The eligibility of current players is not an issue.

A major violation could carry harsher penalties, such as loss of scholarships or television contracts. It could also include restrictions on recruiting and post-season bans.

Dunbar is now serving a four-year prison term for embezzling more than $1.4 million from her former employer, Dominion Mechanical Inc. She used the money to cover travel expenses, jewelry and other gifts for up to a dozen Irish players.

The NCAA investigation only involves Dunbar's actions after June 1995, when she joined the Quarterback Club. According to the NCAA, membership in the Quarterback Club made Dunbar a representative of the University. The Quarterback Club is now disbanded.

From football games to the Keenan Revue, the First Aid Services Team is on hand to provide a FAST response

By LAURA PETELLE

"Control, we have a black tag, two major injuries, two minor."

An episode of ER is not just a multiple casualty incident — a major disaster — staged Sunday for training purposes by Notre Dame's First Aid Services Team (FAST).

FAST provides first-response first aid care for a variety of University events, from football games to RecSports events in the Keenan Revue. FAST's 55 student members are certified in First Aid and CPR for the Professional Rescuer. Most of them are not pre-med.

At Sunday's mock disaster, FAST members practiced responding to the types of incidents that could occur in Notre Dame Stadium. When fall arrives, the arena holds over 80,000 people, the population of a small city.

"The number one injury at football games is people passing out — either from heat or from having had too much to drink or it's hot or it's cold," said Kate Bowland, 1994-99 Bookstore Basketball coordinator for FAST. "We get one heat attack per game and one death per year at football games."

"We have more resources here at the stadium than many towns have," said Brother Lou Hurick. He explained that at each game there are six doctors, six nurses and three paramedic teams available, but FAST is the first to respond when someone is hurt, according to Hurick. Volunteers see everything from frost bitten fingers to head lacerations, from heat stroke to hypothermia, from sprained ankles to unconscious drunkards.

Sunday's mock disaster featured a variety of accidents often found at football games, including a bee sting with allergic reaction, an "unwalkable bone injury" on the stairs, an unconscious drunk in the bathroom who became belligerent upon waking and a variety of people passing out from a variety of causes.

The training session culminated with a scenario where five people were injured while rushing the field. The first FAST team on the scene radioed for back-up and began triage — an assessment of the extent of the injuries — and first aid.
The Amazing Spider-Man

In American society today, there are so many pop culture icons in television, music, movies, books, comics, sports and even politics. I have become jaded with not just the number of such icons, but also the quality of pop icons today. Yet, there is one pop culture icon that I have remained true to since my childhood. Though I know it is impossible to accurately capture his true identity, I have always tried to emulate my hero: Peter Parker, also known as the superhero: the Amazing Spider-Man. To understand Spider-Man, you must understand the man behind the mask. Peter Parker, originally a mild-mannered, geeky high school student who has less of a social life than the Elephant Man. He was not someone especially special at the time. He was always being bullied at school. He didn't come from an affluent family. In fact, he was an orphan being raised by his elderly, lower middle-class Uncle Ben and Aunt May. Compared to other superheros, he was a nobody.

The last son of Krypton only pretended to be a superhero not because he had less of a social life than the Elephant Man. He was not someone especially special at the time. He was always being bullied at school. He didn't come from an affluent family. In fact, he was an orphan being raised by his elderly, lower middle-class Uncle Ben and Aunt May. Compared to other superheros, he was a nobody.

The hero we know today, the Amazing Spider-Man, is just a normal kid like the rest of us. In some superheros, I have trouble understanding who he really is. He is Peter Parker to some, the man with superhuman strength and agility and most importantly his incredible brain. His prominent powers included wallclimbing, his webshooters, his proportional spider-human speed and state of the art technology. His enemies make most other superheros look like wallpaper. Campus Habitat chapter dedicates its fifth house

Notre Dame's chapter of Habitat for Humanity dedicated its fifth house Sunday at 1902 Freeman Avenue on South Bend's northwest side.

Under the direction of faculty advisor David Kirkner, associate professor of civil engineering and geological sciences, the Notre Dame group funded and built this year's house.

Father Richard Warner, director of Campus Ministry, presided at the dedication of the house, which will be owned by Mr. and Mrs. Blue Casey of South Bend. Mr. Casey is an employee of the University.

The dedication was attended by Notre Dame president Fr. John I. Jenkins, C.S.C., the Rev. Michael Marmo, C.S.C., director of Campus Ministry, and the Rev. David M. McManus, C.S.C.

The event was followed by a dinner of 150.

Habitat for Humanity is dedicated to providing affordable housing to those who need it through the support of volunteers and sponsors.

Symposium to honor deceased professor

A symposium in honor and memory of Catherine Money LaCugna, who was invested as the Nancy Reeves Drexel Professor of Theology in the fall of 1999, will be held on Tuesday.

The symposium will feature presentations by several of LaCugna's former students, colleagues, and friends.

The symposium will begin with a keynote address from LaCugna's former student, Dr. Mary Ellen Schemper, who will speak on the legacy of LaCugna's work in Trinitarian Theology.

A panel discussion will follow, with moderated by Dr. John McGowan, and featuring Dr. Daniel Pickering, Dr. David Fish, and Dr. Mary Ann O'Donovan.

The symposium will conclude with a roundtable discussion open to all attendees.

The symposium is free and open to the public.

The symposium will be held in the atrium of the University of Notre Dame's Law School.

For more information, please contact the University of Notre Dame's Department of Theology at (574) 631-2501.
said. "There is a contradiction there."

This mentality may stem from the American usage of the word "war," Arias pointed out. "It is associated with constructive U.S. projects, such as the War on Poverty and the War on Drugs. He said that Americans hide their military intervention behind notions of helping democracies, when in fact that is not always the case.

"If one kills a person, it's called murder. If in the United States you kill 5,000 people, it's called foreign policy," said Arias. "I don't think we can solve all the problems through military means."

Arias was also critical of the motives behind NATO's involvement in Kosovo. He called NATO an elitist group that is undermining the role of the U.N. He urged Americans not to believe that NATO's actions in Kosovo are entirely pure, suggesting that the situation in Yugoslavia only displays on CNN American arms for potential weapons buyers.

"Certainly you are the leading force in NATO, but you are not fighting to bring democracy to Yugoslavia, for heaven's sake," he said.

Taxpayers support the "immoral" weapons trade, Arias said. He explained that in 1995, the American weapons industry received $7.6 billion in federal subsidies.

"We must allow our public policy to grow out of our ethical foundation," Arias said. "War and the preparation of war is one of the greatest obstacles to human progress."

Arias also criticized Third World countries who try to keep up in the arms race, devoting large portions of their budgets to defense. He said these countries spend $2 billion on arms and defense alone.

"It is completely irrational," Arias said. "It is immoral, it is criminal for Third World countries to be spending that kind of money instead of trying to satisfy the basic needs of the people."

He noted that half of the world's governments spend more on defense than on health.

Arias also discussed the current role of globalization, explaining that the decisions of American businesses and American consumers have international impact.

"In the past 50 years, U.S. corporations have expanded and with the assistance of the State Department have opened offices around the world," Arias said. "The challenge of the current generation is to embrace this global citizenship."

He pointed to the accumulation of wealth into fewer and fewer hands, and said that this demonstrated spiritual, moral and leadership crises. He called on Americans to recognize their global citizenship and stop the cycles of materialism and militarism.

"In this democracy, there is no room for guilt but always room for compassion," Arias said. "There is no place for renunciation but only determination. There is no stopping at simple charity."

Instead, Arias called for solidarity and for the end to unjust labor conditions, such as sweatshops. He emphasized that each person should take a leadership role in ending such practices.

"My friends, I tell you today that human advances do not come when we wait to see if others will act. ... Instead, progress begins when each of us starts to think globally," Arias said. "We can live with compassion, we can be more humane and we can indeed live in peace."

Arias is the author of an International Code of Conduct on Arms Transfers called "The Arias Plan." The Code of Conduct, which Arias is working to have ratified by governments around the globe, calls for an end of arms exports to unstable regions, human rights abusers, dictators and military aggressors. Arias also used the Nobel Prize money to found the Arias Foundation for Peace and Human Progress.

He received the Nobel Prize for his efforts toward peace in Central America.

FAST members, who work in teams of two, maintain constant radio contact with a dispatcher who sends parameters if the injury is large enough. The team which discovers the injured person does triage and radios the dispatcher and to inform him of the extent of the injury. The team then begins appropriate first aid measures while waiting back-up.

"Things come and go out of our hands pretty fast," said Rowland.

Individuals with injuries that can't be handled in the stadium are sent to Health Services or St. Joseph Medical Center.

John Osborn, one of FAST's 1998-99 RecSports coordinators, said the organization allows students to help the community in a unique manner.

"FAST gives students the opportunity to serve the University in a way not a lot of people can," said Osborn.

FAST's largest recent emergency was when pipes broke in the stadium, flooding the area during 1997's Georgia Tech game.

"We were still trying to get used to the new stadium, and then all hell broke loose," said Rowland.

When the pipes burst, there was no tap water available. Additionally, the first aid rooms had been moved when the stadium's addition was built and many of the FAST workers were new.

"It was 95 degrees and extremely, ghastly hot," she said. "We had all these people over-heating. We had no first aid room, and we had no water to cool them down. We were standing in the concourse in three inches of water."

"I remember looking at somebody who had just bought a hot dog and was putting mustard on it, and I said, 'Why don't we take the ketchup and mustard off the tables?' So we did, and we put white sheets on the tables and had a little field hospital.... I was soaked when I got back from that game," Rowland said.

Five coordinators set up staffing for various events and ensure things run smoothly. This year, senior Jon Cook coordinates special events, including races, concerts and the Keenan Reuse, Johnson, a junior, coordinates football; sophomore Tahorn and Gina Pirocco coordinate RecSports events; and Rowland, a junior, coordinates Bookstore Basketball.

Grenade kills seven on Congo soccer field

BRAZZAVILLE, Congo

A grenade launched onto a high school soccer field killed seven children and injured 13 others in a suburb of the capital of the Republic of Congo on Saturday.

A police statement said several seriously injured children, all aged 10 to 15, had to have arms or legs amputated after an unknown attacker fired a grenade launcher into a group playing on the field Saturday afternoon. The attack took place near a sports ground in Brazzaville's university hospital.

Accidental explosions of hand grenades left exposed during recent fighting in the capital between government troops and residents (trying to unseat President Denis Sassou-Nguesso) frequently injure civilians in Brazzaville.

Teen accuses parents of depriving food

DAYTON, Ohio

The eldest of four children allegedly hanged from leaving their home has told investigators of other harsh treatments by their parents, including being deprived of food and water. The children — ages 4, 8, 11 and 17 — were removed in late January from the family's home in suburban Harrison Township after the teen, Eddie Szinorecz Jr., mailed a letter to his nearby aunt saying he was going on a diet. The younger children were found to speak to each other in a broken, guttural form of English. All are native of the Philippine islands and are of Filipino ancestry. Edward and Lucinda Szinorecz, remain jailed after pleading innocent last week to four counts of non-support of a dependent, a misdemeanor.

Jury convicts father of murder

KENT, Wash.

A man who shot his daughter's boyfriend last year after she gave him a dirty look was convicted of first-degree murder. A King County Superior Court jury on Friday convicted Harminde Singh Virk, 34, of killing his 25-year-old daughter, Basanti, on May 13. Virk faces a minimum of 25 years in prison when he is sentenced next month.

During his trial, Virk testified he became angry when he saw his daughter sleeping at the kitchen table instead of studying for her driver's license test. When he caught her, the woman looked at him and "curled her lip," he said. Virk testified he retrieved a handgun in a rage, trying to scare his daughter. He said he began shooting after she once again made a face at him. Virk shot her body five times, then reloaded to fire two shots into her head. He later turned himself in at a nearby police station.

Gandhi could take helm as new prime minister

Associated Press

NEW DELHI

For years, Sonia Gandhi distanced politics and hid from public view.

When her mother-in-law, Indira Gandhi, was assassinated in 1984, she pleaded with her husband, Rajiv, against taking his mother's place as prime minister. When her husband was killed in 1991, she went into seclusion, shunning the politicians who begged her to lead them.

Yet she reluctantly emerged from the shadows to accept the inheritance of India's foremost political dynasty a year ago, when the venerable Congress Party reached its lowest point. Now, the rail­ born widow may be India's next prime minister.

On Saturday, Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee lost a vote of confidence in parliament by one vote and resigned. His fall was precipitated by the defection of his biggest coalition ally.

The Congress Party, which the Gandhi family has dominated since Indira's father, Jawaharlal Nehru, led it in the 1930s, is likely to form the next government. If so, an election will be held within months.

Although Gandhi did not initiate the government's downfall, she engineered the final blow. Indian newspapers said her personal lobbying on the telephone Friday night turned key votes against the government.

For the enigmatic Gandhi, it was a rare fury beyond her immediate circle. She is considered a strategist who lets her lieuten­ nants carry out decisions.

Gandhi's campaigning before the 1998 elections was credited with winning the fast-deciding, century-old party from oblivion. After the election, she agreed to become the party's president and focused on rebuilding it after years of scandal and ineffective leadership.

Although she is an intensely private person, Indians have always been fascinated by Gandhi. Her face is a favorite for magazine covers. Even during her years of silence, every private meeting, smile or word was dissected by the Indian press, which specialized on who was in favor and who was out.

Visiting dignitaries routinely called on her at her home, as if she were an older stateswoman.

If she becomes prime minister, her Italian origin will come under greater scrutiny. During the three-day confidence debate, one speaker ignored a shaving match when he referred to Gandhi as "a foreigner."

Anand Mohan, an opposition member who crossed lines to vote for the govern­ m­ ment, told reporters, "A foreign national cannot be accepted as the prime minister. If I had to choose between Vajpayee and Sonia Gandhi, I would choose Vajpayee a thousand times."

He noted that Gandhi was married many years before adopting Indian citizenship.

Although born a Roman Catholic, she shows public reverence for Hinduism, India's predominant religion. She wears saris and speaks a rough, accented Hindi.

Her daughter Priyanka, 27, helps draft many of her speeches.

Gandhi, who is 52, met her husband when she was an 18-year-old student at Cambridge in London, the first time she was away from her native Italy. During most of their courtship, she did not know he was the son of India's prime minister.

Despite doubts many have about a foreign-born leader, Gandhi has won many hearts by embracing the essence of Indian lifestyle. For traditional Indians, that means becoming a loyal daughter-in-law and member of her husband's family.

No one was closer to Indira Gandhi than Sonia Gandhi. When the prime minister was assassinated by her own bodyguards in 1984, it was Sonia who cradled the head of the dying woman.

"My mother-in-law had been the center of our universe ... the pivot of our lives," Sonia Gandhi later wrote in a book.

But when the Congress Party turned to Rajiv, then a pilot for Indian Airlines, to take the leadership of the party, she begged him not to accept.

"I pleaded with him, with others around him, too. He would be killed as well," she wrote in a book dedicated to her late husband. "He held my hands, hugged me, tried to soothe my desperation. He had no choice, he said. He would be killed anyway."

Rajiv Gandhi served a full five-year term, but lost the 1989 election when his name was linked to a payoff scandal in a huge arms deal.

He was killed during a campaign appearance in south India by a woman who detonated explosives attached to her body.

Pin­

chote faces months of detention after ruling

Associated Press

LONDON

Former Chilean dictator Gen. Augusto Pinochet faces the prospect of yet another years in imprisonment — under guard. Britain's top law enforcement of­ icial ruled Thursday that Spain can continue seeking his arrest.

The 83-year-old general must remain confined to his rented mansion outside London. guardrrem­

remaining allegations are serious enough to go forward.

Human rights groups immediately hailed the decision, saying the alleged victims of Pinochet's military regime are one step closer to justice.

"After 25 years of impunity, this definitive decision hastens the day when Pinochet will have to answer for his terrible crimes," said Reed Brody of

pant in the case. "Dictators must be held accountable for their actions throughout the world or should take notice."

But Pinochet's lawyers, Pinochet associate, alleged that Spain's case is "fanciful" and said Straw's decision was "a blow to all those trying to achieve reconciliation in Chile."

In Chile, the government

lamented the ruling and said it will continue to explore "all the judicial and political alternatives still available" to seek Pinochet's release.

But Chilean Foreign Minister Jose Miguel Insulza said there will be no reprisals. The government has sought Pinochet's release since his arrest, fearing foreign courts have no authority to try him.

Demonstrations for and against the decision went off peacefully Thursday in the Chilean capital of Santiago.

Pinochet was arrested Oct. 16, in London on a Spanish warrant alleging thousands of abuses committed during the 1973-74 regime.

An official Chilean report says 3,197 people were murdered or disappeared at the hands of his secret police after he ousted the country's elected Marxist president, Salvador Allende, in a bloody 1973 coup.

In his latest decision, Straw reaffirmed arguments that Pinochet, arrested while recuperating from back surgery, was not fit to stand trial. He also said Spain's attempts to prosecute the general did not pose a threat to Chile's sober­ ity or "its future democration." The extradition case was adjourned until April 30 to allow Pinochet's attorneys time to study the decision to determine grounds for an appeal.

Legal experts said they expect Pinochet to prepare a fresh arrest warrant in the meantime, which probably will include some of the allegations Spanish Judge Baltasar Garzon has added in recent months to bitster his case.
US reports on Kosovo death toll

Associated Press

Tens of thousands of young ethnic Albanian men — possibly as many as 100,000 — may have been killed by Serb ethnic cleansing of Kosovo, the U.S. ambassador for war crimes said Sunday.

David Schaeffer also said Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic "certainly lists" a prime target for investigation as a war criminal. Milosevic has been advised of that in New Europe or the international community until that is, that's a false hope.

Schaeffer, appearing on "Fox News Sunday," brought side-by-side photographs of the western-central Kosovo ethnic Albanian town of Jezica that he said proved mass killings by Serbs.

The photos, released Saturday by NATO, depicted an area taken at different times. In one photo, up to 150 graves had appeared where nothing existed before.

Schaeffer called it "a classic example of ethnic cleansing."

The Serbs came in, torched the town and then proceeded with massacres of individual groups of Kosovars," he said.

Aske about a NATO claim that ethnic Albanian refugees had reported 3,200 deaths at the hands of Serb security forces, Schaeffer said: "That's a very low estimate."

Based on unconfirmed refugee reports and other sources of information, Schaeffer said: "You're actually looking at the possibility of tens of thousands of Kosovars who not only are at risk, but also may actually have perished by this stage ... We have upwards to about 100,000 men that we cannot account for."

Refugees have spoken of ethnic Albanian men, largely those of fighting age, being separated from relatives before the families were forced to flee.

"We have no idea where those men are now," Schaeffer said.

Schaeffer, the United States' first ambassador-at-large for war crimes, said the United States will provide prosecutors with "as much information as possible ... to support her investigation."

He said Serbia is providing sanctuary to war crimes suspects already indicted for alleged atrocities during the Bosnian war of the early 1990s.

"The pressure is going to remain on Slobodan Milosevic until ... anyone indicted on his territory is in fact transferred," Schaeffer said.

"If there's any thought that Serbia will somehow join the new Europe or the international community until that is, that's a false hope."

Schaeffer admitted that with dozens of wars under way, prosecuting all war criminals will be a huge task.

But, he said, "One of the great challenges, I think, of the 21st century is to ensure that there is individual accountability for the commission of these crimes."

"It's going to take a lot of hard work over the coming years to get a grip on this and to establish a principle of deterrence that, hopefully, 30, 40, 50 years from now will begin to sink in."

Abortion, euthanasia and capital punishment demean the lives of countless individuals in our society. Gather with us in Eucharistic Adoration to pray for an end to the culture of death.

Jesus is here with us in the Eucharist to give us answers—answers that will lead us to truth, happiness and peace. In this culture of death, it is easy for people to become weary and indifferent to God and His gift of life. People often fall short of their obligation to care for and nurture the spiritual and physical lives of themselves and others. Eucharistic Adoration gives a person the opportunity to nurture his own spiritual life, as well as the spiritual lives of others (through prayer for them.) Prayer also protects the physical lives of those endangered by abortion, euthanasia and other forms of violence. It is only through the grace which comes from prayer that others’ hearts can be changed from seeking death to loving life. Christ gives us the strength to press on in our battle for life. In order to be Christ-like in our service to preserve life, we must be filled with His life through prayer.

We ask you to join us in prayer for life at Eucharistic Adoration.

What is Eucharistic Adoration?

God is present to us in many ways in our world, but He is especially present to us in the Eucharist. As Roman Catholics, we believe that Jesus Christ, who lived 2000 years ago, is truly present in the Eucharist. In Eucharistic Adoration, the Host is placed in a monstrance, in order for us to be able to come and pray. Jesus is always hidden in the tabernacle, but in adoration He is exposed so that we can come and kneel before Him, face to face, and speak with God. When Jesus is exposed like this, He can never be left alone. Thus, people sign up to be responsible to come and pray with Him for a certain amount of time (usually 1/2-1 hour) every week.

Why should I go?

If Jesus were to come to the JACC, wouldn’t you come and stand in line for hours just to talk to Him for a minute? Even if you weren’t Christian, wouldn’t you be at least interested in this God so many people talk about? Well, Jesus is truly present here on campus—in the Eucharist. In ADORATION YOU HAVE THE OPPORTUNITY TO GO AND SPEAK WITH GOD FACE TO FACE. You can confide in Him, plead with Him, question Him. And if you sit quietly enough, He will inspire you with answers.

What do I do when I am there?

When you enter the chapel, you should genuflect as a sign of reverence to Jesus. It is common practice during Adoration to genuflect on two knees, instead of just one (like you do whenever you enter a chapel.) You can stand, sit, or kneel—whatever helps you pray. And then you pray. There are many ways to pray: you can pray a rosary; you can sit in silence; you can talk to Jesus—like you would to a friend. The most important thing is that you love Him and allow Him to love and strengthen you.

What does the Church think?

"Exposition of the Blessed Sacrament, whether in a pyx or a monstrance, is a recognition of the wondrous Presence of Christ in the sacrament and stimulates us to unite ourselves to Him in a spiritual communion. It is, accordingly, eminently in harmony with the worship which we owe Him in spirit and truth...."

Eucharistic Adoration on Campus:

FRIDAY: Lady Chapel in the Basilica: 12:00pm (following 11:30am Mass) - 5:00pm with a Rosary beginning at 4:15pm. (Ends with Benediction at 4:45pm)

TV cycles help kids to shed fat

Research shows television is a major culprit for kids, mesmerizing children who otherwise might burn calories while playing.

Formal exercise programs do not keep kids out of a gym or playground regularly, particularly for young children with busy parents, so scientists are hunting for home-based tricks to get kids moving, Allison said.

For his experiment, an engineer rewired TV sets to work only while the viewer was pedaling an attached bicycle. Built in computers measure how long the television was on. The TV cycles, which are back in Allison's office as he hunts money for a larger study, are not for sale.

With NIH funding, Allison delivered the TV cycles to six overweight TV fans, ages 8 to 12, and put standard exercise bikes in front of televisions for four similar children.

The kids did not diet and the television for the TV cycle group were locked to prevent cheating. Nobody nagged the youngsters to pedal or lose weight. Allison said, "We just said, 'Here you go. For the TV to work, you have to pedal. See you,'" he said.

Ten weeks later, the four kids who watched television while pedalling on the couch saw 20 more minutes a week and of only eight minutes a week, Allison said in an interview Friday before presenting his results at a biology conference Sunday in Washington.

The six TV cycle kids watched an hour a week and pedalled an hour a week. But that was not all the TV cycle kids watched.

They did not pedal when the family watched television together and there was some cheating, where parents lets kids watch a special show on a set not part of the test, Allison said.

But the pedaling kids finished the study with two percentage points less total body fat and three percentage points less fat on their legs than the other children. So those kids must have been more active during the time they spent watching TV.

"It's quite amazing they'd see any change in such a short time and in kids who did not diet," said Michael Jacobson of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a consumer advocacy group that fights obesity.

Allison says the study shows television should look for innovative ways to encourage physical activity and better nutrition.

One of his more radical suggestions is charging a quarter to ride an elevator, which might lead more people to use the stairs.

Bomb threat leads to trouble for town

BRUNSWICK

A single phone call early Tuesday morning turned Brunswick upside for town.

Someone called police to say there was a bomb in the local high school. Less than an hour later, officer Mark Lafountain could hear his heart pounding as he and several bomb-squiffing dogs were pumping through the dimly lit school.

No bomb was found. But the threat alone shut down the town's six schools for the day, forcing parents to scramble for day care and tucking an extra school day onto the summer holiday for 3,322 students.

That was one of at least six bomb scares at Maine schools over the past month, reflecting a problem across the country.

Mindful of terrorist attacks and recent school violence, authorities can no longer consider bomb threats as mere prank calls.

"In light of the significant levels of violence that our public schools have experienced for the past year and a half, it has dramatically changed the way threats are being handled," said Ronald Stephens at the National School Safety Center near Los Angeles. "Threats can no longer be taken lightly."

In East Montpelier, Vt., educators got so fed up after seven bomb threats at a high school that they decided to rethink the policy of canceling school. Instead, school was moved outside. Lunch was served from trucks and portable toilets lined the athletic field.

After five threats in two weeks last fall, Fort Dodge Senior High School in Iowa began requiring that materials be delivered in clear containers. Students are greeted by two guards posted at the building's only entrance.

In Maryland's Anne Arundel County, hundreds of students phoned in or posted bogus bomb threats, forcing nearly daily evacuations. Now callers to at least one Annapolis high school are greeted by a warning that calls may be recorded or traced.

In New Jersey, the Lower Camden County Regional School District adopted a tough expulsion policy last year after it had 50 hoaxes at its four schools. Criminal charges have been filed against 27 people, including 24 students.

There are no precise figures on the number of bomb threats at schools because educators are not required to report such incidents, said Michael Higgins, special programs coordinator for the National Department of Education.

"Even if there is no bomb to go with a threat, it's still a headache for authorities."

At least one good thing may come out of the war in Kosovo. The Serbs are tearing down their McDonald's restaur­ants to show nasty Americans how much they know about bad fast-food or a lament about Americans. This is reported to encourage, or at least one good thing may happen to encourage. The news which came to a lecture on the Church, Its Role and Dreams, the noble aspirations and dreams, the noble aspirations and dreams of our great nation. The archbishop noted this with some disappointment. The "Mickey Mouse" of America is a sign of a cul­ture too wrapped up in superficialities; it points to the fact that America seems to be abandoning many of the great cultural and intellectual traditions of Western Civilization. Speaking of Mickey Mouse, I am reminded of the comment often given by visitors to the Notre Dame campus. "Hey, this place is just like a Catholic Disneyland." Hmm.

Students Respond to Feminist, Pro-Choice Letter

Amorosa's Logic Off the Mark

Recently, Judy Amorosa wrote that "a bunch of men who have presumably never had sex in their lives are telling young women what they can and cannot do with their own female bodies." Florence, March 24.

Now Ms. Amorosa writes again (April 15). This time she argues that because every mother has the physical power to "stop the child she cannot bear," the law should make as many asinine and extraneous dietary statements as Amorosa has, I cannot help but feel the need to respond.

From reading her letter, it is apparent that she has no clue of what in the name of God she is speaking. She begins by arguing that "men have no part in the creation of life other than a 'right-to-choose.'" and says that this is almost meaningless. Is she aware of what she is trying to argue? Without that meaningful act, she, in this highly commodified world, is nothing but a worthless creature. In fact, I'd say that she would then be fit for the refuse heap.

The role of the sexes are equal in child bearing. While men may not have to deal with the physical strife that woman must undergo, I highly empathize with women in that. Even though there is loving male husband, he will hear it emotionally with her. After this original, confused remark, she makes an inane statement about absentee and abusive fathers. What she lacks does that have to do with her argument? Because a small percentage of men are idiots who do not understand these, they weird, all we are put to be done like? The whole argument, from structure to content, is bunk. She tries to overgeneralize and denigrate the role of men in child-bearing to suit her own feeble purposes. Further, it is apparent that she has little to no understanding of sex and the creation of life. She contradicts herself throughout the remainder of her argument.

First, she tries to lift women above or degrade men to below women. (Note: I am not presenting a chauvinistic view that men SHOULD be above women or anything as foolish as that. In fact, I believe they are equal.)

Her conclusion is ridiculous. She assumes, AGAIN, that ALL men have little or no regard for their children. There is only an insane bond between mother and child. From where this estranged idea come? It is from this relationship between mother and child that her contradiction stems; her lack of understanding of her own words becomes boldly obvious. She is correct in stating that there is definitely an intense bond between mother and child — the bond between father and child being irrelevant in this part of my response.

Control plays a large role in her case against life. Women have control over life. Yes, they can help create it, a natural and beautiful act, but women can destroy it? How? I wasn't aware that they had this power. Sure, a machine inserted into that uterus can destroy it; a coat hanger will do an equally destructive job. But she says that a woman has the power to choose to obliterate her ability to bring life into the world. How? Does not aware that one could will a pregnancy away. The simple fact is, women DO NOT have that power. It was NOT granted to them.

I am not held hostage, as Amorosa says, to women's power over life because I have as much as she does. I no more destroy the child than I help create in my future wife's womb than I can take credit for fully creating it.

If she truly understood what the creation of life means, Amorosa would not be able to destroy her own child. She speaks of an interest that women will hold with a child inside them; she calls it lighting it the ultimate gift, but she has no understanding of that ultimate gift.

Amorosa makes this plain in her closing paragraph. All of the pro-lifers should help suffering people who are "real," she says. They are "real" people who have suffered. Am I to understand that women have a bond that precludes everything else in the world with a person who is not "real?" Am I to punish everyone who may have suffered. It shows that she does not really get what happens during sexual intercourse between a couple. If you cannot see it, then it doesn't matter, is that it? The child in a womb appears as nothing more than a bulge in the abdomen, so it's simply a matter of terminating its existence; like plugging an annoying pimple that crops up from time to time.

Reread your words, Judy. Think about what you are saying. I hope you do not have children unless you understand this. I hope that for YOUR sake. Until you, you are not fit to take part in your divine creative role. Understand your power, but do not glorify yourself.

"Edtv"

Director: Ron Howard
Starring: Matthew McConaughey, JennaElfman, Ellen DeGeneres, Woody Harrelson and Dennis Hopper

In this out-of-five-shamrock review, Scene Movie Critic By Joe Larson, the movie "Edtv" is reviewed. The review highlights the main character, Ed, who is a normal guy turned into a live television show. The movie is described as having Woody Harrelson's coolness, Drew Barrymore's coolness, and the conflict of people wanting to have their life on TV.

- Core: More cool, and Josie doesn't have any tables. Most importantly, the coolest guy in school asks her to prom. With the help of Rob, Josie makes it in, begins to experience life on the other side. It is invited to the coolest parties and hangs out at the coolest lunch table. It is still enjoyable to watch. Savvy.

"Never Been Kissed"

Director: Raja Gosnell
Starring: Drew Barrymore, Molly Shannon, David Arquette, Michael Vartan and John Reilly

In this out-of-five-shamrock review, Scene Movie Critic By Casey McCluskey, the movie "Never Been Kissed" is reviewed. The review highlights the main character, Josie, who has always been an overachiever. She attends a high school and becomes part of the cool group. Having a few more years of experience under her belt now, Josie is ready to return to high school and become her own person.

- Core: The first day of high school for Josie is full of the same embarrassing moments that she experienced throughout her first year. Josie learns that she really has not reconciled herself with her "Josie Grossie" image. Her few more years of experience have not helped her become any more cool, and Josie does not have any tables. Most importantly, the coolest guy in school asks her to prom. With the help of Rob, Josie makes it in, begins to experience life on the other side. It is invited to the coolest parties and hangs out at the coolest lunch table. It is still enjoyable to watch. Savvy.
Welcome to "Dark City," a place that at first glance reminds the viewer of Tim Burton's Gotham City from the first two "Batman" movies. It is a magical, mystical area where the sun never seems to shine and the good people of the city are outnumbered by all the bad ones.

"Dark City" is not just a town without sunlight, and it's certainly not one of those action films based on Mother Nature's destructive acts like tornados, earthquakes or God-sent floods. It is a film about what makes humans so special, what makes them human. It is the story of John Murdoch, one of the only persons who is not a brainwashed inhabitant. As it turns out, the city is controlled by a person from another world who wants desperately to be human. They are called the "Strangers," and they conduct experiments by mismatching people's memories with others.

The Strangers also have an eerie power known as time-warping. The power to time enables the Strangers to literally stop time in the city, causing everyone to fall asleep instantly. While in their subconscious state, the people become ginera pigs at the hands of the Strangers, who inject unconsciousness with hypnosis, sharp needles into the forehead to change their personalities and lifestyles.

Yet, the Strangers have a problem when someone wakes up during the experiments and ruins their "mindswapping." Former police detective John Murdoch, who does exactly this, wakes up before his life is completely altered, and along with the recollections of his old life, he has also been handed the identity of a prostitute killer and public enemy number one. He's new at the mercy of Strangers and humans as he tries to find out who he was before his mind was changed.

Murdoch acquires the power to "time" which aids him in his quest. This allows him to remain awake while the rest of the town is in a comatose trance, as well as to be able to move things, such as the ground, the architecture of the city and any-one who does not look at him right, with his mind.

The film boasts a stellar cast where everyone shines. Newcomer Rufus Sewell ("Carrying on") plays the hero, John Murdoch, an average guy who wakes up in someone else's shoes and wonders if his entire life has been a lie. The luminous Jennifer Connelly ("Labyrinth") and "Higher Learning" plays John's supposed wife who tries to fall back in love with the man she believed to be her husband.

William Hurt ("The Big Chill" and "Children of A Lesser God") portrays police inspector Frank Rurnstead, who is driven to uncover the secrets that the Strangers hold over the city. Kiefer Sutherland ("Young Guns," "Flashdance") and "A Few Good Men") is Dr. Daniel Schreiber, the disfigured psychiatrist who tests out his own people and aids the Strangers in their research.

Ian Richardson is the King Stranger as Mr. Book, and together with another Stranger known as Mr. Hand, represents the chief adversaries of John. The real wonders and awe-inspiring aspects of "Dark City" are the city itself and the Strangers who control it. The nightly transformation of the city is some of the most exciting footage in the film. The Strangers themselves are also visually marvelous. They remind viewers of how scary and deadly piles of zombies with British accents garbed in black leather overcoats and fedoras that float in the air and brandishing daggered canes.

Though one might be confused in the final sequences of the film, it becomes clear that there is a method to director Alex Proyas' madness. While Paul Verhoven just a different tactic in his science fiction/action movie, "Total Recall," starring Arnold Schwarzenegger, the two have the same basic plot, and both spent a week love story. Both include genius action scenes which make up for the tense attempts at romance.

"Dark City" is worth the rental for its fresh look at the characteristics that make humans who they are and for a deep look at the workings of the human soul.

Lamont Bryant leads an experienced defensive line that may produce a stronger pass rush in 1999 for the Irish.

a role in the passing game, with Jabari Holloway and John Owens, in particular, making some catches. There was also an emphasis on third-and-long situations, Davie wanted to test his young offensive line as well as his quarterback.

Davie said he is pleased with his team’s spring performance and said they are in good shape at this juncture of the season.

"If we keep the attitude we have right now, then I think we can get to where we need to be. It’s going to take every second — we’re going to squeeze everything out of them next week,” said Davie. “A week from now, spring football is over but we’ve got a week left and we’re going to squeeze every ounce out of them.”

Notes:
• Junior tailback Darcy Levy provided an offensive surprise Saturday. He played sparingly in the first scrimmage and as of Saturday looked to be the fourth running back behind Fisher, Driver and Terrance Howard. However, the speedy Levy, who ran the second-fastest 40-yard dash behind cornerback Brock Williams in the off-season, had several nice runs.
• Defensively, Shane Walton showed he will have a tough decision to make in the fall. Walton, the leading scorer on the Irish soccer team as a freshman, played with the first team defense Saturday. With exceptional speed and an aggressive nature, he has caught the attention of coaches and teammates.

“He’s got the respect of his teammates,” said Davie. “He’s not bashful and he’ll come up there and hit you. He’s taking advantage of his opportunities and he’s made some positive impressions with us.”
• On the first play of the day, defensive end Jason Ching injured his thumb. Offensive tackle Casey Robin suffered an ankle injury.
• Cornerbacks senior Lee Lafayette (sprained ankle) and junior Brock Williams (hip flex-or), who returned to the team last week after breaking an undisclosed team rule, also missed Saturday’s practice. Offensive guard Mike Gandy did not play. Senior Matt Brennan replaced Gandy on the first team offensive line unit.
• Sophomore Sean Mahan has moved from defensive tackle to offensive guard. Saturday, he worked with the second unit alongside P.J. Scott, who was moved from defense to offense over the winter.
• The scrimmage once again began with an emphasis on special teams. Senior Jim Sisson struggled kicking field goals, going two-for-four, not including a fumbled snap on the first attempt after which holder James Caputo picked up the ball and attempted a throw.
• Sophomore David Miller went a perfect three-for-three on his field goal attempts.
• Davie said that this week players will begin with scrimmage of kickoffs. This should help determine the fall returners.
• Davie also spoke of the NCAA Committee on Infractions which will soon inform the Irish of their fate following the Kimberly Dunbar incident.

“It’s not something I’ve put a whole lot of thought into. I really don’t see it as an issue of a change,” said Davie. “Until we’ve got the final response back and all the mechanics are completed from the NCAA, I’m going to hold comment.”

Tony Driver has successfully made the transition back to tailback and is battling Tony Fisher and Darcy Levy for the starting job.
Dusseau paces Irish past Cadets, 15-7

By MIKE CONNOLLY
Associated Sports Editor

When the Army rolled into Mouse Krause Stadium Saturday, Notre Dame's lacrosse big-gun, senior attacker Chris Dusseau pounded the Cadets with a career-high five goals. Dusseau's five goals paced the Notre Dame offense, which exploded for 15 goals on the day.

"We did a lot, much better job on offense today," head coach Kevin Corrigan said. "With the exception of a few mental mistakes, this was our best 60-minute effort of the year."

The Irish went into the game needing nothing less than their best effort against the 19th-ranked Cadets. Losses of three straight, the Irish are in danger of not qualifying for the NCAA tournament. Saturday's win put the team on the right track, earning them its first of the three wins necessary to qualify.

"It was an important win for us," Dusseau said. "We had to show that we know how to win again. We had to play like the team that almost beat the No. 1 team in the country (Loyola)."

To win the game for the Irish was the offense. They controlled the ball for most of the game and made few mental errors. By getting quality shots every time down the field, the Irish put themselves in a situation where they set the tempo.

"We played well on offense today," Corrigan said. "We almost always got quality shots. We didn't settle for average shots — we were always looking for the best shot. Even when we shot quickly, we didn't shoot quickly because we felt rushed. We shot because a great scoring chance opened up early."

Dusseau's five goals on the game paced the Irish offense which also had sophomore Tom Glätzl and Todd Ulrich score multiple goals with four and three, respectively.

Dusseau opened the scoring for the Irish with a goal one minute, 18 seconds into the game. After being knocked to the ground in front of the net by an Army defender, Dusseau held onto the ball — and his composure — as he calmly flipped the ball over the shoulder of Cadet goalie Jeff Brooks.

Glätzl followed Dusseau with a goal less than one minute later. The sophomore attacker, who is tied with Dusseau for the team lead in goals at 23, crossed with fellow sophomore attacker David Ulrich behind the net. The Army defender followed Ulrich, leaving Glätzl free to break around the right side of the crease and fire a shot past Brooks.

Glätzl answered and Alex Fyle Army goal on an assist by Steve Bisbcho. The man-up goal was the first of three in the afternoon for the Irish as they converted 60 percent of their man-up situations, on which the Irish have been working on hard in practice, according to Corrigan.

"We went 0-6 against Ohio State on Tuesday in the man-up," he said. "So it was nice to see us play well on man-up but we still need to be more consistent when we have a man advantage."

Army scored again with four minutes left in the first quarter on a goal by Ryan Huziak. Todd Ulrich pushed the Irish lead back to two on a great individual effort to lose his defender and beat Brooks.

Ulrich's goal triggered an offensive explosion for the Irish as they scored the next three goals and four of the last five first-half goals. Glätzl got two more goals while Todd and David Ulrich each got one.

The third quarter belonged to Dusseau. Dusseau tallied his second goal of the game six minutes into the second half off of an assist by Revere La Nona.

Lee Dingman answered to bring the Cadets within five, 9-4. Dusseau earned a hat-trick when he converted Ned Webster's pass into a 10-4 lead for the Irish. Dusseau's third-quarter domination did not end with that goal, however. He struck for the fourth time with less than one minute left in the third quarter to extend the Irish lead to seven.

Despite his amazing day, Dusseau deferred all praise to his teammates.

"I am only as good as everyone else on the field," he said. "The other attacker and the midfielders kept setting me up in good positions and I got a few goals. The defense also played great today. They shut down the Army attack and gave us a ball so that we could do the things we needed to do on offense."

Corrigan understands the value of his senior co-captain.

"Persistance is the way to describe Chris' game today," he said. "He missed four lay-ups early in the game because their goalie made some great saves. But he kept at it and he got some goals."

"In starting making spectacular goals after missing some easy ones in the beginning. But that is the type of player Chris is, he will keep up the intensity and keep coming after you," Corrigan said.

The two teams traded early fourth-quarter goals before Dusseau pounded the ball through the pipes for the fifth time. Steilman Oakley and Ben Savage added a late goal to answer two fourth-quarter Cadet goals. With the 15-7 victory, the Irish have put themselves back on track for a possible NCAA bid.

Senior Chris Dusseau scored a career-high five goals Saturday in Notre Dame's 15-7 win over Army.

ended the first half 11-1. About 15 minutes into the second half, managing to score five baskets before Malicious Prosecution put the game away 21-6.

Inside scoring proved to be the deadly weapon, as Cole ended the game with seven points and Cousy added five from the paint. Haigh, Vanhooland and Newcomb each added three for the win.

Malicious Prosecution has advanced in each round with ease, but expects to face some tough competition in the Round of 64. The team has been focusing on improving its offensive strategy in preparation for closer games. "It's been fairly smooth so far, but that will probably change with the next round," Cole said. "We're focusing more on getting our offense together and not so much on what the other squads are doing. We are going to check out some teams before we play again, though."

At the No. 29 spot, Jumbalaya came out strong in their game on Saturday.

Captain Nick Burns, Ben Deshalske, Tim Kress, Mark Ewald and Jay DeAngelis scored on steals and fast breaks to catapult themselves into the Round of 64.

Burns took the ball to the hoop scoring a team-high six baskets, while DeAngelis kept the team on the offensive coming up with seven rebounds.

"Overall we played well as a team today," said DeAngelis. "We controlled the boards and hit our shots." Jumbalaya led 11-2 at the half and never looked back, ending the game with a 21-6 win.

Jumbalaya swept past the opening round of the tournament without a struggle, but had to work for its second-round win.

"We saw some good competition in our second-round game," said DeAngelis. "It was a little rough — the other team played well and the weather was horrible. We haven't seen anything too tough yet."

In other Round-of-128 action, No. 19 Moe-Tang Clan squared off against Fine Fingers of Funk at Stepan Sunday.

Paul Rub, Pete Ryan, Pat Healy, Brian Bierckman and Tim Murting of Moe-Tang Clan had early trouble on the offensive, throwing up several off-target shots.

Domination on the boards kept the team in the game until the players got their offensive play back on track. Murting led the team with eight rebounds.

Moe-Tang Clan led at the half 11-5 and Tossed off Fine Fingers of Funk with a 21-11 final score.

Ryan led the No. 19 team to victory with seven baskets and six rebounds. All teams still in the tournament hit the courts at Stepan today in the Round of 64.

The intense second round concluded this weekend. After the third round today, the Round of 64 will be set.

Notre Dame takes two of three from Boston College

By BILL HART
Associate Sports Editor

Notre Dame kept up its trend of come-from-behind victories this weekend, rallying to take two of three games from visiting Boston College.

The victories keep the Irish in first place in the Big East.

"Truthfully, I feel like this was a great series," head coach Paul Mainieri said. "We didn't take games lightly. They just came out there and did a great job. It turned out to be a tremendous series for our club.

"The first game of Saturday's doubleheader started off promisingly as the Irish got a quick 1-0 lead. Junior shortstop Brant Ust opened up scoring by singling home freshman Sroo Stanley.

In the top of the second, however, the Eagles opened up the floodgates on pitcher Aaron Helmam with six runs, two of which earned. The visitors were poised to strike again with the bases loaded and two outs before junior Eric Olson hit a ground ball to the shortstop to end the inning.

The Irish earned one run in the top of the third, when sophomore Ace Porzel scored an RBI single by first baseman Jeff Felker that got lost in the clouds.

While Helmam got back in a pitching groove, the home team kept chipping away at the visitor's lead. In the sixth, Porzel hit a three-run homer to cut the gap to 6-5.

The Eagles scored one run in the top of the seventh, but the Irish forced the game into extra innings with two RBI singles by Stanley and sophomore infielder Ben Cooke. It would be as close as the lead as the team would get, however, as the visitors would hold the Irish in the bottom of the eighth and ninth.

In the bottom of the eighth, Ust started off with a double and later scored off a triple by senior Jeff Wagner. After Wagner scored off a single by Felker to tie the game, another error in the infield put a second run on the board.

O'Toole hit a three-run homer, his fourth of the year, to give his team the first lead of the day.

"Honestly, I feel like this was a great series," head coach BILL HART

In the top of the ninth, right-hander John Corbin allowed two hits before striking out seven in the bottom of the inning, earning the save.

In the bottom of the inning, the Eagles scored two more runs, one off of Stanley and the other off of a sac fly by O'Toole. O'Toole hit a two-and-a-half hour rain delay, the Irish scored one run to score two more runs, one off of Stanly and the other off of a sac fly by O'Toole.

A steady stream of scoring set up a mammoth eighth inning for the Irish. They scored four runs, with two outs and five hits by catcher Paul O'Toole, later scored on a perfectly laid bunt by Stanley.

O'Toole was able to score later in the inning, off a dribbler by Ben Cooke that was mishandled by an Eagle infielder.

In the top of the ninth, right-hander John Corbin allowed two hits before striking out seven in the bottom of the inning, earning the save.

In the bottom of the inning, the Eagles scored two more runs, one off of Stanley and the other off of a sac fly by O'Toole. O'Toole hit a two-and-a-half hour rain delay, the Irish scored one run to score two more runs, one off of Stanly and the other off of a sac fly by O'Toole.

A steady stream of scoring set up a mammoth eighth inning for the Irish. They scored four runs, with two outs and five hits by catcher Paul O'Toole, later scored on a perfectly laid bunt by Stanley.

O'Toole was able to score later in the inning, off a dribbler by Ben Cooke that was mishandled by an Eagle infielder.

In the bottom of the eighth, Ust started off with a double and later scored off a triple by senior Jeff Wagner. After Wagner scored off a single by Felker to tie the game, another error in the infield put a second run on the board.

O'Toole hit a three-run homer, his fourth of the year, to give his team the first lead of the day.

I might as well be honest with you. Of the "Big Four" sports in the U.S. right now — baseball, basketball, football, and hockey — I know, by far, the least about the game played on ice.

That being said, I can't get around writing about hockey this week for one important reason: One of the best to ever play the game, Wayne Gretzky, retired after his New York Rangers concluded the regular season on Sunday with a 2-1 overtime loss to the Pittsburgh Penguins at Madison Square Garden.

You know this guy is something special just by looking at his nickname: "The Great One."

You also know he is something special when the NHL announces that no team — not just the Rangers or any of Gretzky's former teams — will ever be allowed to issue No. 99 to a player again. This honor means even more considering the select company he now joins.

That company consists of just one man. Jackie Robinson.

One of baseball's greatest players of all time, whose significance goes far beyond the field, broke the racial barrier in Major League Baseball in 1947. His number, 42, also will never be worn again in his sport.

To earn this nickname and have his number retired to the special way — as if just having your number retired isn't enough — you would figure that Gretzky had to be greatly amazing on a pair of skates.

And, in the course of his 20 year NHL career, he was. Gretzky's name appears before 61 different individual marks in the NHL record book.

The Great One also won four Stanley Cups with the Edmonton Oilers back in the 1980s. Like I said, I don't really follow hockey that much, and that was no different before my 10th birthday when his Edmonton teams were winning all those cups.

They were so good that, for those of you who are big fans of the original Nintendo and remember the classic hockey game "Blades of Steel," I always used Edmonton. Even though that game, like most of pre-Tecmo Bowl era Nintendo, was not based on the real teams.

You know his teams were good if they were influencing video game button for bragging rights in your neighborhood. My favorite stat, however, is one that was given before this last game by the folks at Fox who, by the way, appear to have finally given up on that whole misguided "Fox Trax" puck tracking thing.

When young Wayne Gretzky was just a 10 year old, he played in some league that had a 69-game season. His goal total for that season? 368. Yeah, you're right. That's more than five goals a game for the entire season — when he was still six years from driving.

When most kids were struggling to stay on their feet on double-bladed skates, when he was still just Wayne and not "The Great One," he was turning the light on over five times a game.

I think when I was 10, I was in 4-kall and hit a triple once. I was pretty stoked for the next month. I think if I had been a 10-year-old Wayne Gretzky, I don't think I would have slept for a year.

And given what he's done in the last 28 years, against the best players in the world, not the kid from down the street, I think I'd be suffering from almost 30 years of sleep deprivation.

Maybe that's why he decided to retire. Maybe he just wanted to catch up on all those years he hasn't gotten all those years of being on that hockey high. Maybe he's just finally letting all the records, all the titles, all the accolades, sink in.

So now, at the age of 38, Gretzky retired in a fitting scenario. Against the Pens, he recorded an assist on his team's only goal. But in overtime, Pittsburgh's Jaromir Jagr, whom many say is the game's best player — took the torch from his predecessor and ended the game with the sudden death goal."

But in overtime, Pittsburgh's Jaromir Jagr, whom many say is the game's best player, took the torch from his predecessor and ended the game with the sudden death goal.

In the end, it was a game of beginnings. It was the beginning of a new era for the NHL and the beginning of "The Great One" at last catching his breath.

I guess everyone woke on Sunday.

Wondermutts tame Doherty in second round, 21-17

By KERRY SMITH

Matt Doherty and his Bookstore Basketball team Lebo's Legends stepped onto the Storan courts this weekend in front of two of the largest crowds in the year's tournament.

Despite the rain, fans poured out to see the former NCAA champion in the second and third rounds.

Lebo's Legends team captain Jed D'Erolle and Rich Staica wrote Doherty a letter asking him to be a member of their team for the day he was hired as the new men's basketball head coach.

"I'd heard a lot about Bookstore Basketball," said Doherty. "And then my first day on the job I got a letter from Jed and Rich that was really touching, so I called them and said I'd love to play with them."

In Friday's second-round match-up with Ducks II, the Next Generation, Doherty, along with D'Erolle, Staica, Ted Romaine, Jesse Holter and Tom Kilroy, did not disappoint.

Playing big down low, Doherty led his team on the offensive and defensive. Passing with precision, he was unselfish and moved the ball well.

Doherty combined on-target outside shooting with strong play at the post for 14 rebounds.

"Coach was hugging me on the boards," said Doherty. "He was like a titan down low."

One man can't win a basketball game, however. Following Doherty's lead, the rest of Lebo's Legends stepped up and put on a solid performance.

Doherty's strong play under the basket, pulling down 10 rebounds and knocking in five baskets.

"Jed's a good player," said Doherty. "He has some good hall skills."

Romaine, at point guard, was a scrappy player and made five steals to keep the team on the offensive. Staica added five points to the final score.

Lebo's Legends led Ducks II, with players J.P. Cooney, Kevin Leonard, Billy Irvine, Bear Simms and Grants Wheeler at the half 11-5.

Ducks II, named in honor of Cooney's father's championship Bookstore Basketball III team, the Ducks, refused to be intimidated by Lebo's Legends and never let down.

Cooney turned on the heat late in the second half, sinking three unanswered baskets, but it was not enough as Lebo's Legends earned the 21-11 win.

"It was a hard fought battle," said Staica after the game. "But in the end we went slugging-bunting and gutting five of them."

Ducks II was disappointed with the second-round loss, but had fun on the court.

"It was fun playing against (Doherty)," said Cooney. "I think he actually taught me a little bit about Bookstore Basketball."

Although he was a big crowd-pleaser, after the game Doherty wasn't thrilled with his team's performance, describing it as "very weak."

"My legs are shaking right now... that's why these guys are holding me up," said Doherty. "Hopefully we'll come back stronger on Sunday."

Sunday's third-round game brought different conditions, a different opponent and a different outcome for Lebo's Legends. Pouring rain flooded the basketball court, making rain play difficult for Lebo's Legends and Seth Greene's Wondermutts team.

Staica and players Shannon Stephens, Gennaro Harca, John Minne, Anthony Brannan and Pat McDevitt.

In a close match-up where the lead never fluctuated beyond four points, the two teams battled it out for control of the game.

Competitive from the outset, a couple of controversial calls intensified the rivalry between the two teams.

"The students are great -- they're really competitive," said Doherty. "I was really getting into it with the other team. I hope Doherty's not any enemies."

The Wondermutts double-teamed Doherty to try to contain his dominance on the court and combined shining precision and scrappy play to earn the 21-17 win.

"We tried to push the ball up the court and get it in to the hands of Minne," said Thara. "And when we stayed tough defensively, "

Stern's potent outside shot, giving him four points, caused Lebo's Legends trouble in the second half.

Doherty finished the game with five points and nine rebounds.

Regardless of Lebo's Legends loss, Doherty proved to be a winner in the eyes of his teammates and the crowd.

"It was great of coach to come out here and play with us. It shows the students just what kind of coach he's going to be," said Staica. "He's really down-to-earth and wants to get to know the students. It's going to be a fun time here during his coaching career."

"I hope I get invited back next year," said Doherty, "I really enjoyed playing with these guys," said Doherty. "Nore's home is a fun place to be a student and to work, with the enthusiasm and the creativity of the students. It's great.

While Doherty's playing time at Notre Dame may be over for now, he has a great look ahead of him as he steps into his role with the men's basketball program.

Starting positions remain up for grab

By TIM CASEY
Sports Writer

As the spring season enters its final week, this year's young team has depth and parity at several positions.

On defense, all the skill positions except quarterback are still up for grabs. The starting spots at tailback (Tony Driver and Tony Fisher), fullback (Joy Goodspeed and Tom Lapinski) and receiver (Bobby Brown, Irvin Johnson, Baki Nelson, Javon Hunter, David Goines and the injured Jay Mondini) most likely will not be determined until late August.

Unfortunately, the young line-backing corps and especially the cornerback spots have several players still fighting for playing time.

Bob Davie said the depth and competition for playing time has had a positive effect on his football team.

"There's a competition at a lot of positions. You've got to play a price to set foot on this field," said Davie after Saturday's scrimmage. "I think there's some young guys that are pushing the older guys right now. There's more competition than we've had in years and I think this will help this football team.

The stars of Saturday's second scrimmage were the defensive line. Led by returning starters Brad Williams, Lance Legree, LaMont Bryant and Anthony Weaver as well as an improved Grant Irons at defensive end, this year's line looks like the strong point of the defensive unit.

All five players are taller than 6-foot-5, at least 250 pounds and had no trouble putting pressure on the quarterback. While the offensive line is young, the defensive front displayed its strength.

With the switch to the 4-man front this year, Greg Mathison is taking advantage of his solid line. "I don't think there's any question that our defensive front has the ability to make plays, and that's something we've been lacking, particularly in the last couple years," said Davie. "I'd like to think we're making some progress there. I know they've bought into more of an attack mode. I like the productivity of our front.''

This scrimmage focused on the passing game and last Saturday's, which emphasized the running and option attack. With good conditions, Jarious Jackson and Arnaz Battle both looked better in the passing game than last week. The Giants have been able to see their athletes make some progress in the passing game since the all-star game after the Gator Bowl. We have all been working out four days a week and I missed spring break because of it, but I have to admit, it's all been worth it.

The hard work especially paid off for Pettigrew, who was drafted by the New York Giants with the 19th selection in the 1998 NFL Draft.
