Regina Hall first to undergo Master Plan renovations

Madeleva, Regina slated for summer construction

By NOREEN GILLESPIE

A timeline of the Campus Master Plan for renovation and expansion of Regina Mary’s is in place, and construction is set to begin as soon as May.

Regina Hall, one of four projects on the immediate schedule, will undergo redesign and improvements through renovations to student dorms in Regina North and South residence areas.

The College selected Matthews, Prueker, and Anella Inc., a local architecture firm, for the Regina project which tentatively includes improvements in windows, temperature control and electrical systems.

Room layout changes are also a possibility, Dennis said.

“We’re looking at the room layouts in Regina and seeing what rooms appeal to students, he said. “We have to wait and see what the feedbacks.”

Regina construction will begin in May after commencement.

The building is expected to be open for residence in fall of 2000.

“We have a more aggressive schedule for Regina,” Dennis said. “To be finished by the fall, we’ll have to be in there the day after (academic) move out.”

Construction is not expected to interfere with academic or residential life.

“It shouldn’t be an inconvenience,” Dennis said. “The only thing that students will see while they are here are material moving in, maybe some vamps.”

Renovations to Madeleva classrooms will begin in July 2000.

Specific renovations are still unclear, and the College is waiting for recommendations from Matthew, Prueker and Anella Inc. and an engineering firm.

“In Madeleva, we need to look specifically at safety code violations in the building,” Dennis said. “We have a number of dead-end hallways, and if this building is filled with smoke, we don’t want people turning down those hallways. The building also isn’t sprinkled. We need to make sure the building is up to code.”

Madeleva is scheduled to be completed in March 2001, meaning construction will take place during classes.

We can be in construction while students are in class. We have to work around class schedules.

The construction timeline for Madeleva will have to be more flexible than Regina’s, due to working around class schedules.

“That construction phase will most likely be longer,” Dennis said.

“The bulk of our work is...”

MAN BREAKS INTO WALSH

By CHRISTINE KRALY

An ex-St. John’s soccer coach has been arrested on a charge of breaking into rooms on the fourth floor of Walsh Hall Monday.

The 20-year-old male charged with criminal trespassing and giving police false information at approximately 1:20 p.m.

The man, who gave police up to six names, has not been positively identified.

He was held at Saint Joseph County jail until he was identified, said Chuck Hurley, assistant director of campus security.

When he is identified, a bond will most likely be set and he could be released sometime today.

University Police were called to the scene by rector Sister Patricia Johnson, who was not sure what was negative on the floor that a man was turning random knockers.

“She seemed like he was lost,” Johnson said. “I called security immediately.”

Johnson escorted the man back to her office, where he stayed until police arrived.

The man was said to be high on crack cocaine. Hurley said. When they searched him, however, police found no drugs.

“ar my knowledge, nothing was taken,” Johnson said.

Johnson said she will do anything specifically to beef up the dorm’s security. She has put a lot of reminders of locking doors to Walsh residents, something she said should be done campus-wide.

Johnson plans to build awareness within Walsh.

Ireland identifies with America

By BRAD RAGER

There are characteristics in Northern Ireland with the American civil rights movement, according to Brian Dooley, former head of press at An Taoiseach International.

From Frederick Douglass to Ted Kennedy, there have been important characters in the American civil rights movement that have identified a unique connection between the fight for basic human rights in the two nations, Dooley said.

White Americans were held in the bonds of slavery, Catholics in Ireland were being repressed by the British government and persecuted because of their religion, Dooley said.

Advocates for an end to slavery, such as the influential abolitionist Frederick Douglass, traveled to Ireland to speak about the struggle for justice in America and to see firsthand the trials of Irish peasants.

Douglass met with Irish nationalist leaders like Daniel O'Connell and spoke at a rally in Cork that drew a crowd of 5,000, Dooley explained.

The 1960s were turbulent times for both nations as well. A movement for fair housing opportunities for women in Northern Ireland in 1963. The movement which grew out of "a small protest by nine women angry at the government for the suicide of a friend who could get no housing," Dooley said.

Brian Dooley discussed civil rights relations between the United States and Ireland.

"These type of people, who were sometimes called Ulster's white Negroes would alien pattern their resistance after black movements in the United States," Dooley said.

Similar to slaves, Irish people would protest, singing "We will overcome."

Dooley noted that boycott, a tactic used in the American civil rights movement, actually came from Ireland.

And after the notorious "Bloody Sunday" massacre in Northern Ireland in 1972, representatives from Martin Luther King's group came to protest and voice their concerns.

Although their struggles were similar, the relationship between the Irish and African Americans in the United States was not always good. Dooley explained that many landowners in the 19th century were forced to choose between cheap Irish labor and slave owning.

Misiewicz takes on ombudsman role

By COLLEEN GAUCHEN

Complaints of discriminatory harassment at Notre Dame now can be directed through Kevin Misiewicz, the University's new ombudsman.

Appointed in July by University president Father Edward Malloy, Misiewicz, also an associate accounting professor, will provide an avenue through which students, staff and faculty can report allegations of discriminatory harassment.

"The idea is to come up with a sort of soft person outside the process to facilitate things," said Misiewicz. "We don't have any investigating powers; we want to help people be aware of what the process is to the extent they aren't, and help them further define what their options are rather than telling them what to do."

Misiewicz is the University's third official ombudsman, a position created about five and a half years ago. Psychology professor John Borkowski, civil engineering professor Lloyd Ketchum were the ombudspersons before Misiewicz.

All have had large families, including multiracial adopted children, Misiewicz has eight adopted children.

A member of the Notre Dame faculty since 1978, Misiewicz's accounting specialty is the uses of computers in tax practice and education; tax research tools, processes and communications; various aspects of the taxation of individuals, including estate planning; and the tax treatment of exempt organizations.

Philosophy, theology building planned

By MATTHEW SMITH
News Writer

Construction on a new building to house the philosophy and theology departments will begin after the Nov. 19 home football game.

The building will be located behind O'Shaughnessy Hall and will connect to Decio Hall on the first two floors, according to Tim Lyphout, vice president of business operations.

"The building should resemble Decio Hall, and we are excited about its opening," Lyphout said.

The 56,000 square-foot, L-shaped building will be four stories tall and contain offices for professors, along with some seminar rooms and a chapel.

"This is a very good thing for the philosophy department," said Paul Wolitman, director of graduate studies in the philosophy department. "We are now all together, in a community of common interests. We finally will have a place to call our own.

Wolitman also cited the educational advantages of the building, including increased workspace for graduate students and more seminar space for discussion.

"Interaction and sharing of ideas are essential to philosophy and theology," he said. "Also, the link between the theology and philosophy departments is important in a Catholic university."

Both departments are currently located in O'Shaughnessy Hall, which houses many Arts and Letters departments.

The new building's donor has agreed to remain anonymous, but a name may appear on the building. The $13 million project should be completed by June 2001.

scheduled to occur in 180 days. We can't possibly get that amount of work done in that time period."

The renovation will displace classes. Decio said.

"The faculty are investigating other teaching space on campus," he said. "But right now, the most important thing we can do is identify what needs to be done. We have to remember that this is a renovation, not a teardown."

A welcome center, slated for location at the corner of Madeleva and Main Street, will begin construction in fall of 2000.

The center, designed to welcome visitors to campus, will also house security but, "without a security appearance," Dennis said.

James E. Childs and Associates was selected as the architects for the project.

Official construction dates and architects are yet to be named for the fourth project, a renovation and redesign of Noble Family Dining Hall which will include a student center.

The new dining hall/student center will house the bookstore, post office, bank, student government offices, a cafe and is expected to double in size compared to the current facility.

Architectural Design Group and Ellenbe Becket are the two remaining architectural firms in the running for the dining hall project. A phone conference to select the architect is scheduled for Oct. 1.

Guiliani, Clinton face off in NY

Associated Press

NEW YORK

Art fused with politics Monday as an exhibit including elephant dung on a painting of the Virgin Mary became the latest issue in the duel between Mayor Rudolph Giuliani and Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Guiliani — who like the first lady is an all-but-declared candidate for the Senate from New York — has threatened to cut $7 million in funding to the Brooklyn Museum of Art if it goes ahead with the show on Saturday. He has called the exhibit, which also features bisected animals and a topless woman in the place of Jesus at the Last Supper, "sick" and offensive.

Late Monday, a City Hall source speaking on condition of anonymity said the museum agreed to pull the dung-decorated painting as part of a tentative deal with the mayor. But the museum issued a statement saying no deal had been reached and that the exhibit was going to open as planned.

Earlier Monday, Clinton declared that the museum shouldn't lose its funding — money that makes up a full third of its budget.

NATO urges peace in Kosovo

Associated Press

NATO's outgoing secretary-general called on Kosovo's ethnic Albanian political leaders to stop "violence and hatred," warning Monday that Kosovo will never achieve peace without ethnic reconciliation.

In a sign of Kosovo's deep-rooted ethnic troubles, the province's main ethnic Albanian leader did not show up for a meeting with Solana.

The Kosovo Albanian political leaders should publicly reaffirm their commitment to build a multicultural, multiethnic society and we expect from them to turn actions in this direction," Javier Solana told reporters.

Solana arrived in Kosovo's provincial capital Sunday night and met with Serbian representatives. But the leader of the former Albanian Liberation Army, Hashim Thaci, failed to appear for a scheduled meeting, NATO spokesman Lt. Col. Robin Clifford said.

Clifford offered no explanation and no one in Thaci's office answered the telephone. Thaci has complained that NATO and the United Nations have not been dealing with him as the leader of a transitional government backed by his former rebel force, the Kosovo Liberation Army.

NATO — the European military alliance — has no presence in Kosovo, but it monitors elections and enforces the 1999 peace agreement.

Executioners keeping busy in 1999

Associated Press

With three months remaining in 1999, already is the dreariest year on America's death row in almost half a century. Eighteen states have executed 76 killers by year's end.

"There has been this stairway upward since the death penalty was reinstated" in 1976, said Richard Dieter of the Death Penalty Information Center, a group critical of capital punishment.

"It hasn't peaked yet... 150 is probably where things may max out over the next three to four years..." Executions last Friday in Delaware and North Carolina raised the year's total to 76, the most since 1954, when 81 people were put to death in U.S. prisons. If the year-end toll reaches 100, as Dieter said could happen, it would be the first time since 1952 people were executed in 1951. There were 68 executions last year, 76 in 1997.

States have executed 576 convicted killers since the Supreme Court ended a 1972 four-year nationwide ban on capital punishment. Currently, about 3,565 people are on death rows across the nation.

Many countries have abolished the death penalty, including Canada, Australia, France and Germany. Amnesty International said it received reports of 1,967 executions in China in 1998. more than 100 in the Democratic Republic of Congo and 66 in Iran. The organization said it also has unconfirmed reports of hundreds of executions in Iraq. Eighteen of the 39 American states with death penalty laws have imposed capital punishment this year, and once again Texas is first with 25 executions.

"What sometimes people lose sight of is that prosecutors don't give the death penalty — it takes a unanimous 12 folks [on a jury] to do it," said John Holmes, district attorney in Harris County, Texas, which includes Houston.

Holmes' office seeks a death sentence in 12 to 20 cases a year and almost always succeeds.

"We have a good sense for knowing whether it's a death-worthy prosecution," he said.
Keady: Nike ‘just doesn’t do it’ in sweatshop debate

Coach stands up to manufacturer, employer

By SAM DERHEIMER
News-Water

As assistant soccer coach at St. John’s University, James Keady faced a tough decision. His team wore Nike uniforms, but Keady discovered severe human rights violations in Nike sweatshops through his masters research paper. His team wore Nike uniforms. The awareness of working conditions in sweatshops through his masters research paper. Keady faced a tough decision. "I was told to wear Nike and drop the issue publicly or resign," Keady said. He lost the coaching job of his dreams.

Keady, speaking Monday during the second session of the University’s sweatshop symposium, called Nike "one of the grossest violators of human rights in the world." Nike has consistently shown that they will not operate in good faith toward their workers," said Keady. "St. John's and Notre Dame, by associating with such corporations, are giving a stamp of approval to this type of behavior."

Keady challenged the Notre Dame community not to compromise its Catholic mission. He urged the audience to let the administration know that associations with corporations repeatedly ignoring social justice will not be tolerated.

Keady cited three main problems inherently wrong with sweatshops: corporations' failure to pay workers sufficient "living" wages, the refusal to publicly disclose work conditions, and the refusal to allow workers in these shops the right to organize. "Only through full disclosure and education can such problems be alleviated," Keady said. "The University must be pressed on how we deal with Nike, and still follow our Catholic mission and the teachings of the gospels."

"Because I protested the way student athletes and coaches were turned into walking billboards, I was silenced," Keady said. "It is an abomination the way athletes get exploited by universities and corporations." Paige Doub, a member of the Master’s Peace Study Program, praised the message of action called for in the symposium. "I think this is an essential part of our existence on campus," said Doub. "Things happen when individual people start calling for changes. Students who pay tuition at this University deserve a voice."

"I could not allow myself to sit back while my university was making profits off the backs of the poor," said Keady. "Now I challenge the community of Notre Dame also to take action, in accordance with Catholic social teaching, on this issue."

The symposium, which can be taken for class credit, marks the continuing effort of the University to eliminate the use of sweatshop labor in the manufacturing of Notre Dame products, and is primarily organized to showcase the complex issues the University’s Task Force on Anti-Sweatshop Initiatives must deal with. Four lectures remain in the series. Todd David Whitmore, director of the task force, also spoke Monday night.

Endowment helps build campuses

Associated Press

WASHINGTON
The Lilly Endowment Inc. is donating $30 million to American Indian tribal colleges to help with construction and renovation of often shabby campuses.

The fund planned to announce the gift Tuesday as the kickoff to a $120 million campaign to raise money for improvements at 30 tribal colleges serving 26,000 students in 12 states. The drive has taken in $43 million, including the Lilly gift, said Suzette Brewer, spokeswoman for the American Indian College Fund.

Six of the 30 schools are community colleges run by one or more tribes and located on reservations. Non-Indians also can take classes at the schools, but the colleges get federal per-student funding only for their Indian students.

While a few of the colleges have newer campuses, most hold classes in aging government-issue buildings or prefabricated "portable" classrooms.

The gift from the Indianapolis-based Lilly Endowment and money raised by the fund drive will help ensure "Indian students can go to schools in facilities that are as good as their white counterparts, where they don’t have to worry about tiles falling on their heads."

Inmates hold 71 guards hostage

Associated Press

TANKAHA

Protesting the deaths of 10 inmates in a riot, left-wing prisoners held more than 70 prison guards hostage Monday in seven prisons across the country. At one of the prisons, the hostage-takers hurled stones at soldiers and unfurled a taunting banner that read, "Come over if you have the courage."

Dozens of soldiers moved into Istanbul's Umraniye prison and fired tear gas through the windows, but the government insisted that they were not planning to storm the prison and rescue the hostages.

"We are trying to end the hostage taking peacefully," said the head of Turkey's prisons, Ali Salih Ertosun. Fourteen of the guards were being held in Umraniye.

The fighting began Sunday in Ankara's Uluskar prison after inmates clashed with soldiers who raised the prison to search for an escapist tunnel that the inmates reportedly were digging.

Clashes quickly spread to other prisons after 10 inmates were killed and 28 guards and inmates were injured in Ankara, the Justice Ministry reported.

Diseases reemerge in Americas

San Juan

Once thought virtually eradicated, the diseases have re-emerged for reasons ranging from the development of drug-resistant strains to the mushrooming of vast urban areas with poor sanitation, say the hemisphere's top health officials.

"Drug-resistant strains of microbes are having a deadly impact on the fight against tuberculosis, malaria, cholera, diarrhea and pneumonia which together kill more than 10 million people worldwide each year," said Dr. George Alleyne, director-general of the Pan American Health Organization.

"This is happening at a time when too few new drugs are being developed to replace those that have lost their effectiveness," he said.

Alleyne spoke Monday at the start of a five-day conference in San Juan, Puerto Rico, where some 30 health ministers from 35 member states are expected today to consider proposals on combating tobacco consumption in the Americas.

Alleyne said smoking is now the No. 1 killer in the region, its related diseases claiming more than 600,000 lives a year.

A draft of a report to be presented today reveals that some member countries with "economic interests" blocked PAHO — a Washington D.C.-based agency of the World Health Organization — from pursuing an ambitious plan for a regional convention against tobacco.

A scaled-down plan tries to educate people and promote actions through workshops, conferences, and the Internet.

In a 120-page report Monday, Alleyne described the surprising reemergence of diseases like dengue — the highly debilitating and untreatable disease some call "breakbone fever" — that infected 770,000 people in the Americas last year and killed about 100.

"There was a time when a lot of this region was free of the dengue-carrying mosquito, but now we find virtually the whole region reinfected," Alleyne said.

He blamed excessive reliance on chemical insecticides, to which the mosquitoes have become resistant, and inadequate sanitation that provides an environment for mosquitoes to breed.

Tuberculosis, affecting 400,000 a year in the region, was another concern, "killing 137 people every day."

PAHO spokesman Daniel Epstein said increased urbanization was a factor, since people living in close quarters are more likely to infect one another.

Other diseases identified as reemerging in the last decade:

- Cholera, reintroduced to Central and South America following an absence of almost a century.
- Anthrax, plague, which has returned to Peru since 1992.
- Hantavirus, a rat-borne disease that was discovered again in the U.S. state of New Mexico.
- Drug-resistant malaria has infected a greater swath of the Amazon region, attacking entire villages in Guyana.

Bush: Father did not ask for military favor

Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas

The former speaker of the Texas House of Representatives acknowledged Monday that he called the head of the Texas Air National Guard in 1968 to recommend George W. Bush for a pilot slot during the Vietnam War.

But Ben Barnes, who later was lieutenant governor, said the request for his help came from a Bush family friend, not Royse Bush, father, who then was a congressman.

The Texas governor and Republican presidential front-runner, meanwhile, insisted again that neither he nor his father sought such assistance when he joined the Guard.

"I can tell you what happened," said George W. Bush, GOP presidential candidate. "I'm proud of my service and any allegation that my dad asked for special favors is simply not true."

"I'm not making an endorsement," he said.
Deciding about life after college

Most likely, if you're a liberal arts major, you'll make the commitment to attend graduate school somewhere around May of your senior year, and the decision-making process will cause the following reaction: "Oh, my God, I have no job. Or health insurance. Or life. And I'm out of Choos-It. Is it too late to change my major?"

"It is. Crap. Well, there has to be a graduate school around here somewhere. " More enlightenment. More knowledge! More massive, vertigo-inducing doubt! And then new, pesky questions will crop up, in no particular order. I'll try to give you a heads-up on some answers.

1) In which subject should I obtain my Master's degree?
   Your choice of Master's program should be contingent upon the real-world relevance of your undergraduate degree. Higher education is the only place in the solar system where Classical Greek History majors are taken seriously as human beings, so you should hang around as long as you possibly can, preferably until the point where the only job you're qualified for is to teach younger, equally frameworked students the "right things". You might as well go the whole nine and do so, eventually earning your B.A. in English and political science. Just what am I going to do with that? Advise the Bush campaign on the nation's Early Pre-Raphaelite Poetry issues? Of course not! I'm getting an MFA in creative nonfiction writing! There are only a few really weird universities in the entire country that ever offer such a program! My uselessness grows semes- terly! It's all fun and games until nobody hires you.

2) Are you or are you not one of the most talented, attractive people to ever graduate from this community?
   I am.

3) Is it true that I have to take a battery of standardized tests to apply to graduate school? You need to take the GRE, which is just like the SAT and ACT, only far more evil and way less fair. You have to take it on a computer, which — this is God's truth — tracks your responses, and if you're getting a lot of answers right, it makes the test HARDER. It's like kind of Bill Kirk instantaneously developing Jedi mind probe powers the second you step into a Student Affairs hearing. You're not allowed to use a calculator, and in no way are you tested on anything you actually may have learned in college. For instance, there are no questions asking you to calculate the proper font and margin corrections necessary to magically transform a two-page paper into a seven-page one.

4) Should I attend law school? Ask somebody else. I don't do lawyer jokes.

5) Why didn't I get into my first-choice graduate school? My guess would be because you stunk.

6) But you didn't get into YOUR first-choice school. This was a rare instance in which the institution, not the applicant, stunk.

7) Will applying to graduate school cost anything? My precious, precious child. Have you forgotten so much in four soggy years? Do you not recall application fees? And standardized testing fees? And, "mailing you a postcard with your name misspelled to tell you not to let the door-knobs of the admissions office hit you on your way out!" fees?

All told, your bill for applying to grad schools should read like this.

GRE, TOEFL, LSAT: application, test prep books and classes, long distance phone calls, postage and "postcard -> doorknob -> fees": $700

Cost of undergraduate degree: $100,000

Cost of requesting an official transcript for your application: $2.00 per measly piece of paper. (That's the price.)

Never mind the original hundred-thousand-dollar investment. You have to compensate the registrar's office for performing the laborious task of shoving the grades YOU earned into an envelope. Forget computer grading. Major in registering. That's where the money is.)

Too many assumptions

As a freshman here at Notre Dame, I was appalled to learn many students (and a book in such a mannerist manner) on how incommoderate and inappropriate the student body behaves and how Notre Dame (Manchester State football game) about the current student body. Mr. Misch's comments in his Sept. 23 letter are reflective of the entire student body. I was seated just one row behind him and saw almost none of the behavior that he described.

Yes, a few of students engaged in an inappropriate salute, but unlike the impression that he gives, it was not isolated by the vast majority of the students. Too many of the students left the game before the team left the field, but from my own observations, the majority of the non-student fans appeared to leave first. In fact, at least 50 people seated around me stayed until every player was off the field, showing their support for the team. Many of the so-called dedicated alum did not seem to care enough to give these players the same type of respect.

However, the view I considered the most inaccuate was the pegging of the entire student body as "a pampered, spoiled, self-indulgent cluster of arrogant, adole-to a point where it makes me wonder why we go to Notre Dame, if it is not the sole purpose for any student to come here. We come here because we think our sportsmanship deserves a $100,000 education or not, our academic does.

Breaking the barrier of silence

I am in complete support of and excited from the letter from the Sept. 27th issue. "No need to be embarrassed. We large groups of eating disorders..." but would like to add my own comments in seek to, hopefully provoke further discuss. Although today's letter was true in all its aspects, I dislike the emotional and scary message that eating disorders KILL. I need to again be emphasized and pro- voked to start changing some thing. The anonymity is one reason why eating disorders continue to be the "silent disease." By the nature of an eating disorder those directly affected by eating disorders do not speak out, do not want to admit their dependency, and feel embarrassed. Does it sound conversational to you that the skeleton is not only the emotional but also the physical's survival? Why? Does it sound like anorexia that can be physically or mentally from an eating disor der? So, where I am going with all of this? I am writing back what the other person didn't mention at all. We only disagree on two points. As was stated, I admit my desire to censure the will of the student body, not to censure their speech or free inquiry or academic freedom is not, in and of itself virtue. If anything, it leads to destructive and harmful ends for individual souls. The over reaching problem is that we are not, under any circumstances, going to be able to change the numbers. In fact, our efforts at intellectual exploration are truly "free only" when our efforts are aimed at a greater glory of God, not prostitut ed with the post-modernist dogma of relativism. We must unite our efforts to the latest fad of godless relativism. We must dedicate ourselves with the discovery of truth — the true end of University education.

CONCERT REVIEW

It's 'moe.' than just a great show

By ANDREW JONES
Scene Music Critic

Shortly past 7 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 24, the theater filled The Vic Theater in Chicago. Chants, clapping and the clink of bottles were highly audible, and the smoke in the theater was so thick one could have cut it with a knife. Tie-dyes, hemp, beads, dreads and bloodshot eyeballs were in high fashion for the buzzing crowd. The house lights dimmed, and the audience erupted as Al Schnier, Rob Derhak, Chuck Garvey, Vinnie Amico and guest percussionist Jim Loughlin, strolled out under the stage lights. moe.'s "Quest For Bay" tour had arrived in Chicago.

Formed in 1991, moe. hails from Buffalo, N.Y., and features a highly energized, improvisational bluegrass rock sound that incorporates other genres, such as jazz and reggae. In 1997, moe. was voted one of Rolling Stone's 10 hottest underground bands and began drawing the attention of many Phish-heads.

Back at The Vic, tapers formed a row of about 10 to 15 microphones stands ready to capture last Friday's jam in their entirety. Tapes and CDs of the evening's performance will begin to circulate among moe. fans a few days after the show. Typically known as a jam band, moe. thrives on its live performances. And jam they did.

The band began the first set with a high-paced version of "Brent Black," which featured Derhak on lead vocals. While Derhak is not the world's greatest vocalist, his deft bass lines never ceased. He stepped away from the microphone to get with his fellow band mates during the opening song, and jaws dropped as he plunged into a five-minute bass solo.

Guitarist Chris Amico, the audience watched as he demonstrated his ability to slap, finger pick and furiously articulate the fingerboard of his bass. Derhak's band mates bopped their heads as they provided rhythm for his solo.

While the band conveyed a high sense of energy in "Brent Black," it did not connect with the audience very well. During other tunes such as "Stranger Than Fiction" and "Opium," moe.'s energy was inconsistent.

For example, guitarist Schnier and Garvey often manipulated their delay pedals, a tool that can easily mask mediocre soloing skills. Also, the light show for the first set was generally poor and featured nothing unique.

The band ended the set with "Recreational Chemistry," during which Loughlin drew the crowd's attention on the bongos. Loughlin seemed to be the only musician not detached from the performance by the end of the first set.

Returning to the stage for the second set, moe. performed "Seat Of My Pants." Already, it was clear the band was more involved in its jamming. "Seat Of My Pants" featured less delay pedals on behalf of the guitarist, and Garvey proved to be a true master of the instrument. Garvey soloed on his Fender Stratocaster with a blazing intensity that triggered an intensity in the band's overall feel.

The group brought the crowd to life performing "Happy Hour Hero," during which Garvey's phrasing was funky and precise, but "Vodette," with a segue into "Four," proved to be the climax of the show. These two songs exemplified tight, lengthy jams that sustained intensity whether the jam's tempo was mellow or fast-paced.

Lighting director Chris Ragan provided fabulously psychedelic eye-candy as swirling triangles swept across the crowd in sync with the music and sharp purple light searched every corner of the Vic. The crowd grooved through the entire second set. The night ended with a 15-minute version of "Meat," during which Amico displayed his talents as a percussionist.

For an encore, moe. did what they do best: a jam that segued into the popular "Rebubula," featuring another bass line of incredible virtuosity that only Derhak could pull off. There could not have been a better song to end the show.

The band had The Vic on fire, and the crowd was thoroughly impressed by moe.'s performance. So if you're not an audiophile who can't listen to anything but LPs, get out and groove to moe. the next time it's in the area.

Surrender to the buzz of the performance, melt away in the lights, melt away in the jams.

Campus radio stations provide alternative listening

By RICK SILVESTRINI
Scan Music Critic

Searching the radio dial in South Bend can be a painful process for music lovers, particularly for alternative fans. While there is more than enough country, classic rock and bad top 40, South Bend radio has almost no outlet for alternative music. This musical void can be frustrating for Notre Dame students accustomed to hearing exclusively alternative stations at home, some get to the point where they no longer tune the radio on.

But Notre Dame, unlike most other universities, is fortunate enough to have two student-run radio stations that offer at least some alternative programming: 88.9 FM WSND and 640 AM WVFI, which broadcast exclusively on the Internet at http://sinfm.nd.edu/.

Alternative fans have to work a little harder to hear their favorite type of music on either station. WSND only broadcasts their self-proclaimed "unique blend of college rock and modern alternative music" during its Nocturne shows from midnight to 2 a.m. Only computers equipped with a RealAudio 62 player can hear WVFI, and even then, only between the hours of 10 a.m. and 1:45 a.m.

Despite those difficulties, campus listeners have found both stations to be proverbial diamonds in the rough.

"I've actually listened to both Nocturne and some stuff on WVFI," said Joe Koll, a Zahn Hall freshman. "The music selection is definitely way better than anything else on the radio."

While WSND offers classical and fine-arts programming during most of the broadcast day, the station goes alternative when the Nocturne shift starts at midnight. It features a mix of famous bands like The Smiths, Lenny Kravitz and The Byrds, and campus bands like The Florida Evans Show and The Promise Ring.

"We try to mix it up," said co-Nocturne director Jeremy Sony. "We definitely don't want Nocturne to be just alternative top 40 for four hours, so we make sure to add stuff that's good but that people haven't heard." WVFI, on the other hand, is back on the air after equipment failure shut it down last fall. The station offers a wide range of shows and musical types including alternative music.

"We've got a lot of good people doing all kinds of shows. Metal, ska, reggae - you name it and I bet somebody at WVFI has a show for it. And you don't hear most of it anywhere else," station manager John Forgash said.

While WSND presents most of the station's musical selection, WVFI gives its DJs much more freedom in selecting their own music, which results in the station's refreshing variety.

"The majority of the stuff I play is my own," said WVFI DJ Steve Martin. "I think it's great that WVFI lets the DJ really run his own show. I can be more creative with the music."

That creativity is really the difference between Notre Dame student radio and the rest of the South Bend market. Instead of test-marketed and over-hyped songs in a variety of formats, WSND and WVFI provide a valuable and much-needed alternative to an otherwise dull South Bend radio dial.

ALBUM REVIEW

'Ring'-leader of emo pack debuts second album

By JOHN HUSTON
Scan Music Critic

There's a word that should be creeping up on mass-consciousness soon: emo. Emo, for those who don't know, is indie-rock with emotional lyrics. The Promise Ring is at the head of the emo pack, propelled by the pop genius of its third album, Very Emergency.

Along with fellow genre-mates Get Up Kids, Sunny Day Real Estate and Jets to Brazil, The Promise Ring creates hauntingly emo music that sets it apart from the others, though it is the group's ability to write the perfect hook.

Each song is a piece of candy, like a Wether's Original - sugary enough to satisfy the taste buds, but after it's gone one is left craving more. Hours could be spent thinking up ways to find another Wether's Original to satiate a watering mouth.

The same goes for the new Promise Ring album - it's nearly impossible to get the chorus of the second track, "Emergency," out of your head. But wouldn't someone who ate 10 Wether's Originals in a row get sick to his stomach? Nope. It's very hard to get sick of The Promise Ring.

Luckily, the band serves up a variety of candy-coated emo songs for the listener to suck on. Some are happy and bouncy like "Skips a Beat." Some are melancholy like "Things Just Getting Good" and "All of My Everythings." The others are everywhere in between.

Besides taking great, the Promise Ring is good for you too! Davy Von Bohlen, singer/guitarist, includes some throat-provoking, lyrical gems. In "Living Around," Von Bohlen reveals, "I'm losing my voice talking to you about talking to you.

The Promise Ring's music is generaly smarter, more honest and more emotional than most of the "alternative" that gets attention today. Very Emergency is an incredible album and a superb introduction to "emo." The whole emo genre is a goldmine of incredible music that is just waiting to be thrown in front of the public's ears, and The Promise Ring is emerging as the king.

Yankees lose third straight, fall to Devil Rays

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Since clinching a wild-card berth, the New York Yankees have looked nothing like a playoff team. New York made three errors and stranded all of Tampa Bay's runs to score with two outs as the Yankees lost their third straight game, 3-2, Monday night.

Fred McGriff and Bubba Trammell homered and Martinez drove in three runs for the Red Sox, who has won their last 17 of 18 games in New York — including all nine at Yankee Stadium — before winning the final three games of the four-game series.

The Yankees rallied to win the opener 4-3 in 11 innings Friday on rookie Alfonso Soriano's homer, and clinched their fifth straight playoff berth when they swept the four-game series.

Since then, they've looked sluggish, losing three straight to the last-place Devil Rays.

The Yankees have six games remaining to tune up for the playoffs and wrap up their third straight first-half title in four years. New York's magic number remained at three after Boston downed Baltimore 5-4.

The Yankees (94-60) are one game behind Cleveland for the AL's best record in the AL and only one game ahead of Texas for home-field advantage in a potential post­matchup.

Mike Mussina (11-1) allowed one run in 2 2-3 innings in relief of EliaD for the Yankees, improving his lifetime career record to 7-1.

Hideo Ikiu (11-7) was knocked out after two innings for the second time in four starts, jeopardizing his spot on the post­season roster.

He retired the first two bat­ ters in each inning before get­ ting into trouble. He walked Jensen and eso Canseco with two outs in the fifth inning, and then followed with a 31st homer, giving him 100 RBIs on the season.

White Sox hit two run­ners home in the eighth, but Ray Durham hit into a double play.

Rangers 3, Mariners 2

Lee Smith hit a go­ ahead run with the eighth­inning sacrifice fly as the AL West champion Texas Rangers won their fourth straight game, 3-2, over the Seattle Mariners.

The Rangers (93-63) moved 30 games above .500 for the first time since the 1996 season.

John Wetteland set a club record with his 43rd save of the season, breaking the mark he set last year. He also tied his career high, accomplished twice in the past.

Joaquin Gonzalez doubled with one in the Texas eighth off Merv Rettenmund for his 18th save of the season. He had saved 19 of 22 games for the first-place Mariners since coming off the disabled list.

Martinez improved to 8-1 and lowered his ERA to 2.35. He has been in the rotation for 24 consecutive starts, his longest streak since 1997.

The Mariners' starter Freddy Garcia left a 2-2 game after seven innings. He gave up nine hits, struck out five and walked two.

Red Sox, Orioles

Pedro Martinez struck out 12 to give him a career-high 352 strikeouts, breaking the Red Sox at a tie for the AL record. Martinez improved to 8-1, his third straight win.

Boston holds a six-game lead over the idle Oakland Athletics in the wild-card race with seven games left for each team. Martinez leads the majors in wins and ERA (2.08) and tops the AL in strikeouts. This is probably his last full outing of the regular season.

The game featured a bench­clearing showdown in the sev­enth inning after Brady Anderson, who had been hit by a pitch in the first inning, scored on a passed ball and brushed by Martinez as he tried to reach base.

Garcia glanced at Anderson as he walked back to the bullpen and his teammates at home plate up­plied GarciaCederstrom stayed behind to brush the play­ers, the dugouts and the bullpens emptied into the stands.

Rangers starting out Albert Belle, the next batter and Martinez's leadoff hitter, and the crowd erupted. Derek Lowe pitched the ninth inning for the 150th save of his career.

Garcia allowed only one earned run, his third in five starts, in seven innings.

SEA reached the AL wild­card playoff for the first time, the only AL team to avoid the last-place race since 1991.

Washington finally beat the Red Sox 5-4, Baltimore 3-2 and the New York Yankees 5-1 in 11 innings. The only AL team to avoid the last-place race since 1991.

'98 NFC champs off to 0-3 start

Associated Press

SUNWANE, Ga.

Forget the Dirty Bird. These are the same Falcons.

Hardly resembling the team that was in the Super Bowl a mere eight months ago, the defending NFC champions have quickly recaptured a look of incompetence that's more familiar in Atlanta.

"We've got to get this thing turned around," safety Marty Carter said Monday, "if we're going to go." That's looking more and more unlikely after Sunday's debacle in St. Louis, when a team that was 4-12 a year ago routed the Falcons 35-7.

The game wasn't even close as the Rams scored on their first four possessions and outgained Atlanta 311-67 in the first half.

"I thought St. Louis beat us in every phase of the game," coach Dan Reeves said. "I thought the Rams were playing a different speed than we were.

After falling behind 17-0 in each of their first two games, the Falcons trailed 26-0 to the Rams. The offense struggled once again, this time it was compensated by a complete breakdown on defense.

"We ran into a buzz saw in St. Louis. We [were] bombs away," the Fame's defense was epitomized by a three-play sequence in the first half.

With his team already leading 7-0, Kurt Warner threw a 39-yard touchdown pass to Terry Helt on third-and-10. After Todd Lyght intercepted a pass from Chris Chandler, Warner connected on a 61-yard pass to Todd Johnson on the very next play with a 46-yard scoring strike to Isaac Bruce. On the first play of St. Louis' next drive, matchup Faulk broke free and Warner ran to set up another TD.

"I think the Falcons secondary looked like the Kepson Kids," in the words of free safety Eugene Robinson. During a bye week, St. Louis came up with a game plan that caught Atlanta completely off guard.

A lot of teams are attacking us like they expect us to be in certain coverages," Carter said. "They're exploiting the coverages we're using."

 Granted, the Falcons have been plagued by factors beyond their control. All-Pro running back Jamal Anderson is out for the season with a knee injury, while Chandler is hobbling with a sore hamstring.

"Chandler missed one game, tried to play Sunday and wound up being knocked out again before halftime. He is questionable for next weekend's game against the Baltimore Ravens. "It's not very good," Chandler said Monday. "I have no idea about playing. I'm just trying to get it better before it gets worse."

Mentally, the entire team is suffering a severe case of shell shock. Although the Falcons have never put together consecutive winning seasons during their 34-year history, no one expected a start like this.

"When you are losing, you never have the confidence," Reeves said. "I have said many times, winning breeds confidence, losing brings around the wrong kind of things: people second-guessing you, people talking about how bad you are playing. That is all you hear and all you read."

Certainly, this is not what Carter had in mind when he signed with the Falcons as a free agent after a lackluster season in Tampa Bay and Chicago.

"It's difficult to come into a situation where the team did as well as this team did a year ago, to come into a situation where expectations are so high and then collectively produce, so little," he said. "Maybe it could have been so much higher.

"It's difficult to come into a situation where you have to play well and then collectively produce, so little," he said. "Maybe it could have been so much higher expectations. That's the most difficult thing. We're on every sports show, every channel.

Tennessee looks at cheating allegations

Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.

Defensive back Joey Dickey was suspended on Tennessee, which in recent years has uncovered charges in its advanced degree programs and a telephone card fraud count, among its athletes, is now investigating whether tutors did schoolwork for football players.

Tennessee president Wade Gilley announced last month, said Monday the school is following up on a tip and has turned this matter over to the university's general counsel's office for review.

"Once this review is complete, the university will announce its findings and, if necessary, take appropriate action," he said.

Alleged tutor Greg Slocum said Monday that Dickey had run across the class that entered in 1992 who play for the Tennessee Titans.

"Of course you have tutors that had different programs and their tendencies. They try to help the players get out of trouble," said Slocum, who added that the police are doing something to present the issue in determining the eligibility of Scott and the Titans.

"If it is anything about football, then I am glad to talk to you," he said about a dozen reporters who met him in his office. "The players are not going to allow it to be a distraction."

ESPN reported Sunday that internal university memos show high-level administrators in the athletic department were told of four cases in which players may have done schoolwork for at least five football players, possibly violating the university's honor code and NCAA rules.

None of the information was passed on to the proper campus authorities charged with investigating possible rules infractions, said Malcolm McNair, NCAA compliance officer for Tennessee.

The incidents dated to 1995, and it was unclear whether any of the players were on the 1998 national champion team. Three of the five players have transferred, according to ESPN.

Meanwhile, four Tennessee redshirt freshmen, including kick returner and NCAA champion with Leon Sanderlin, were held out of the Memphis game on Saturday and placed on indefinite suspension as a result of the school's internal investigations.

The NCAA is aware of the allegations.

"It is pretty early at this time to know where any of this may go," NCAA spokeswoman Jane Tarkowski said.

"Typically any of these kinds of scenarios is it is very common that the university and the NCAA will be in touch.

It's unclear what action might be taken by the school or the NCAA if the allegations are proven.

In June, Minnesota quarterback Tom Hukwas was resigned under pressure amid accusations of academic fraud in the men's basketball program.

Tennessee has investigated allegations of academic fraud before.

In 1992, the university recalled advanced degrees to two University of Tennessee Space Institute graduates who provided government contracts to a professor who sup-
Miami's Underwood stabs himself

Associated Press

LANSENG, Mich. Dimitrius Underwood, the first-round draft pick who left the Minnesota Vikings after one day in training camp, apparently slashed his neck with a knife, police said Monday.

Police found the defensive end, who later changed his mind and signed with the Miami Dolphins, Sunday afternoon after getting calls that a man was yelling for help.

Underwood was covered with blood as officers approached.

"He was somewhat de­spair­dent," police spokesman Lt. Ray Hall said. "He was upset, physically upset."

Hall said Underwood apparently cut his neck at the home of the mother of his twin 17-month-old children. No one in the home saw him cut himself, but several people in the neighborhood saw him running down the street afterward.

Police took Underwood to Sparrow Hospital, where he was listed in fair condition Monday after undergoing surgery Sunday. No further information was released at the request of the family.

"This is real rough for the family," Hall said. "They're going through a real rough time, like any family would at a time like this."

Lt. Ray Hall
police spokesman

The 22-year-old player coop­er­ated with police when they "found him about 1 p.m. Sunday, and has spoken with the police since," Hall said. He declined to say if Underwood gave them a reason for his actions, but said he had no clue to completing their inves­tigation.

"Our attention is turned toward safeguarding his good mental health," Hall said.

Underwood was arrested by Lansing police about 7 p.m. Saturday for nonpayment of child sup­port. A $500 bond was posted for him about three hours later, but Underwood refused to leave the jail in Mason for another hour, spending the time talking to another inmate, Hall said.

Police had no trouble arrest­ing Underwood or taking him to the county jail, Hall said.

Underwood played at Michigan State for three sea­sons before missing his senior year with a sprained ankle. The Vikings made Underwood their second first-round draft pick, and 29th overall in April.

He signed a five-year, $5.3 million contract Aug. 1 but walked out of training camp the next day. Underwood told coach Dennis Green he had no desire to play football.

Michigan State football coach Nick Saban on Monday hinted that Underwood's ambivalence about playing football may not be new.

"I think Dimitrius' behavior over a little bit of time here has been a little bit unusual," Saban said. "We tried to help the guy last year. The Dolphins have tried to help him now, and I've talked to him on several occasions. Maybe now someone can help him and he can do well."

PGA
Boston benefits from Ryder Cup

Associated Press

BOSTON
Despite its image as a white­collar event played in a wealthy town before corporate titans, officials in Brookline and neighboring Boston say the Ryder Cup was a pot of gold that will benefit every­thing from local parks to youth programs.

As the tents came down at The Country Club, and the nation basked in the glow of Sunday's incredible U.S. victo­ry, the Boston area was left to ring up its share of the profits from a week of golf mania.

"It's been an event of this magni­tude," said Patrick Moscaritolo, president of the Greater Boston Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Local merchants have yet to tally up exact figures, but Moscaritolo estimated the Ryder Cup generated $150 million in spending in the area, including $1 million in room taxes — many of them spending corporate money — packed local hotels, restaur­ants and shops.

Ryder Cup attendees — 30,000 of whom flocked to the course daily — booked roughly 7,000 hotel rooms per night for six nights last week, he said. That's just under half of the Greater Boston area's total of 15,000 hotel rooms.

Revenues generated by hotel, meal and merchandise taxes also gave the local econ­omy a shot in the arm, Moscaritolo said. And business was brisk for area workers, from waiters working longer hours to taxi drivers shuttling visitors around.

A Ryder Cup corporate event at Boston's Franklin Park raised more than $1 million for the city, to be set aside for Parks Department scholar­ships and children's programs.

Then there are the future rewards the city will reap after putting its best face for­ward. "The visitor industry could be cashing checks from Ryder Cup well into the next decade," he said, pointing to an audience that included many CEOs and managers of international companies. "These are high-end decision makers. They can come back with family members and friends ... and bring conven­ions and meetings here."

In Brookline, where the stor­ied Country Club will receive an estimated $5 million for hosting the event, town officials have no complaints as they ticked off a list of improvements made possible by the Ryder Cup.

Under an agreement with The Country Club, the town will receive up to $3 million for work on town land for park­ing and hospitality tents, said Town Administrator Richard Kelliher. When it hosted the U.S. Open in 1988, Brookline received $146,000, he added.

The money will go into the town's treasury, and roughly $750,000 is earmarked for the municipal Putnam Meadows golf course, which adjoins The Country Club and was shut down to provide parking and tents, Kelliher said.

About faith... about the Church... about God... about the frequently asked questions

What does the Bible’s Book of Revelation tell us about the coming of the Millennium?

We need not suppose the author had or was given by God knowledge of the distant future. Therefore, readers are all specialists about how long the earth is to last, or how long it will be before Christ comes back, or when the end of the world will come — specialists based on the Book of Revelation. Nevertheless, these speculations have been popular for 2,000 years, as it is the nature of some individuals to jump up with the Book of Revelation in their hand and announce that they now understand the numerical message and the time of its fulfillment. Thus for all 6 interpretations have been wrong: the world is still here.

The basic meaning of the apocalypse is one of hope in a time of perturbation. Using symbolic language, such as that of great beasts, dragons, floods, fire, etc., the author describes his time as one of severe affliction and suffering produced by evil. Amidst this, he wishes to reassure the readers that God has control of all things, thus his images of a heavenly book in which all things are written down, of a period of time in which the evildoers are defeated, of a period of time that can never be set limited, of a time of God’s victory over the forces of evil, or even of good times that can overcome the bad times. He is writing to the persecuted and suffering groups that they are not to despair, for God will bring all things to an end and his victories.

The Book of Revelation does indeed have something to say to us as Catholics Christians. It is not the end of anything, but a chance to make a new beginning. It is not a time of despair, but a time of great hope and trust in the goodness of God and the power of God’s love and for all people. We celebrate the year 2000 as a Year of Jubilee, and we are challenged to live in the spirit of joy and hope that springs from the knowledge that God does intervene to permeate our lives and our world.

St. Ed's failed conversion gives Sorin 7-6 victory

By RACHEL BIBER
Sport Writer

Sorin's duo of Luke Beuerlein and Greg Carney started right where they left off last week. Carney hauled in a long pass downfield from Beuerlein on the opening play of the game. Receiver Antoine Tobias, however, put the points on the board this time, allowing Sorin to squeak by St. Ed's 7-6.

After Beuerlein's opening bomb to Carney left the Screaming Otters at first-and-goal, Beuerlein connected with Tobias for the score.

"Luke just drilled it in between the two defenders," said Tobias. "It was a great throw.

Carney kicked the extra point, which proved to seal the win in the tight game against the men of St. Ed's, who now tumbled to a record of 0-2.

Solid defensive play by Ernesto Lacayo set up St. Ed's only score in the fourth quarter. Lacayo intercepted a pass intended for Carney, allowing quarterback Tim Greene to hit Mike Knott for the six points.

"There was confusion on the sidelines," said Sciola, captain of St. Ed's. "It was a nice play by the defensive back."

Sorin's win was not assured until the last offensive threat by St. Ed's was squelched in the fourth quarter by the strong play of Brent Smith. With St. Ed's-plowing downfield as the seconds ticked away, Smith intercepted a pass to ensure an Otter victory and a team record of 2-0.

"The ball kind of floated out there," Smith said. "And I ran up and picked it off." Fisher 0, Siegfried 0

Both offenses failed to score, causing the game to end in a 0-0 knot. Both teams fell to 1-1 with the tie.

"It was a well fought game," noted Fisher captain Dean Kuroki. "Our defense played well."

Yellow flags were a constant sight in the game, preventing both sides from surmounting a strong offensive drive.

"We played well on defense, but penalties kept us from putting it in the end zone," Smith said.

Some last minute offensive spark almost sent the Ramblers off the field in victory celebration. Peter Aguiar missed two 40-yard field goals.

"I hit the kicks solid," Aguiar said, but "I should have made them."

With 1:31 to play, Siegfried retrieved the ball off a Fisher punt, and on fourth down, Aguiar's field goal went wide left from the 45-yard line.

After a turnover by the Green Wave with 13 seconds to play, the Ramblers' attempt at victory was sunk when Aguiar's 46-yard field goal attempt fell short.

The Ramblers' offensive woes are a continuation from last week's performance, and they have yet to score a touchdown this season.

"We had a positive defensive showing," said Smith, "but our offense has to step it up if we want to win the championship."

Knot 7, Zahm 0

The bizarre play of the day occurred in Knot Hall's 7-0 blanking of Zahm, evening the Juggernauts record to 1-1, and sending the Zahmiers to a record of 0-2.

At the start of the fourth quarter, Zahm sent a punt into the Juggernauts' territory and watched as it rolled towards the sideline.

Assuming the ball would be downed, Zahm's special teams acted as if the play were complete, and them just watched as Brandon Landas swiped the ball and sprinted downfield for a Juggernaut score.

The Zahmiers stood silent and stunned as the Knot Hall sideline exploded in celebration.

St. Ed's ball carrier is brought down by a Sorin defensive player. Sorin defeated St. Ed's to better its record to 2-0.

"The kicking team didn't drop it," said Knot Hall captain Mario Suarez. "Everyone assumed it would be downed."

"They were letting it roll dead," said Landas, "so I just picked it up and ran down the sidelines."

The game was sealed late in the fourth quarter when Kyle Trotter knocked the ball from Zahm quarterback Dan Burke on a solid defensive hit in the backfield. Paul Ryan then recovered the fumble, handing the Juggernauts an emotional victory.

After constant taunting by the Zahm contingent, Suarez was impressed by the play and behavior of his team.

"We put in a class act today," Suarez said.

Landas, who ran the ball in for a touchdown, saw the jeers of the Zahm crowd as motivation for his team, making the victory even sweeter.

"It made it fun," Landas said. "It was the icing on the cake when I made the touchdown."

Taylor's score gives Belles tie

By MOLLY McVOY
Assistant Sports Editor

Excitement continues to be the word of the day for Saint Mary's soccer. The Belles finished Monday's game in a 1-1 tie at Beloit College, going into double-overtime for the second consecutive time.

The Belles are off to their best start in the history of the program with a record of 6-1-1. "It's really exciting this year," junior Laura Paulsen said. "We have a lot of potential and we're using it.

The Belles scored early in Monday's game, and seemed to dominate play on the field. But after a goal in the first half by freshman Lynn Taylor, the Belles could not add on.

Belleti came back to score with 13 minutes left in the game to tie it up. "We sent the game into overtime, where neither team scored, sending the game into double overtime. The game was called at a tie because of the poor weather in the second overtime.

"We're a little frustrated because we should have beaten them early," freshman Heather Muth said. "We wanted to finish the game because I think we could have won.

Muth scored the winning goal in Saturday's double-overtime victory against Adrian College. The Belles won that game 1-0.

Once again, the Belles dominated play, outshooting Adrian 45-9. Adrian's goalkeeper, Sarah Mauk, stopped the offensive with 20 saves.

It was not until two minutes remained in the final overtime that Muth scored, with an assist by Paulsen.

Saint Mary's was thrilled with the victory despite the difficulties.

"It was really exciting," Muth said. "We had really good passing and it's just getting to the point where we need to finish.

The Belles' next league game is a home match against Albion College on Oct. 6. Here the Belles are confident the home field advantage will give them the edge.

"I really appreciate the fans who come out to watch us," Paulsen said. "The support really motivates us.

Albion is the MIAA leader in soccer this season. Saint Mary's tied Albion in the team's only meeting last season.

Water polo team sweeps matches

Owen Staff Report

The Irish swept all four games with wins of 75-25, improving their record to 7-2. Goalie Brendan Doherty made more than 60 saves as the club defeated Western Michigan 21-9, Kalamazoo 19-12, Findlay 9-3 and Toledo 10-5.

Nick Maloney contributed 13 goals for Notre Dame over the weekend. Matt McNicholas led all scorers with 19 goals.

Cycling Club

The club also travels to the University of Illinois this weekend.

Ultimate Frisbee

The Ultimate Frisbee club had a great weekend in both men's and women's play at the Purdue Sectionals. In men's action, dominant play from the Big Ten in the opener against Illinois "B" controlled the game as the Irish fell 13-2.

The next college opponent was Purdue, and the Irish continued to roll, winning 13-3. The best play was Cory Padgos's huge hard drive, a perfect 65-yard throw for the score to Bob Collin.

Steve Honkans led the Irish in Sunday's finish against Indiana with eight scoring chances as the Irish won 13-4, sweeping all college competition.

The team dropped three matches to strong adult teams in Wisconsin and Illinois. The women lost to Wisconsin 20-0, but bounced back to defeat Purdue 8-7 and Indiana 7-2. The club travels this weekend to Indiana State.

As we write this, history is continuing to be made. It isn't the end of the world, although some groups of fans, it might be signaling the approach of the end. In enough, it's really exciting.

Almost...

No, this is a culmination to a long championship history of sports history.

As we write this, the Detroit Tigers play baseball, for the last time at the corner of Michigan and Trumbull in Detroit, where some form of a baseball field existed since 1896 and where the current stadium has stood since 1912. I'm writing this article as I light the game against the Kansas City Royals on my computer.

It's the bottom of the fourth and the game is tied at two. But that really doesn't matter to me — or anyone in the stands there — today.

The outcome of this game won't be a culmination for the rest of baseball, unless you're tracking the race for last place in the American League Central.

"This week I've heard a lot of talk about the implications for baseball, unless you're tracking the race for last place in the American League Central. I have no idea what the implications are. That's just a formality. The Tigers are the Tigers."

Karim Garcia just homered in the bottom of the sixth, putting the Tigers up 4-2. It doesn't matter if the Tigers hang on, but it's fun talking about how they were going to do it, or how they did it. Let's just hope putting domes on stadiums doesn't mount a comeback.

Lewis looks for first win of season against Lyons

By JASON KROMPINGER
Sports Writer

There will be a lot of intense women's interhall football action this Tuesday night, and it will start off at 7 p.m. with Lyons Hall squaring off against Lewis. The 0-2 Chicks are led by team captain Beth Wild, and are coming off a couple of tough losses which taught the team valuable lessons.

"The first game was a real learning experience, and our defense really improved in the second game," Wild said.

The young team has sophomore Rachel Mahoney at the helm and Rosemary Sage anchoring the offensive line. On defense, junior Katherine Harcourt leads the way.

"Our freshmen are doing well and helping us a lot," said Wild of her team's newest members. "They will continue to improve as the year goes on."

Welsh Family vs. Walsh

The 1-1 Welsh Family Hall will take on the Wild Women of Walsh at Stepan on Tuesday night in the third interhall football game ever for the majority of the Welsh players.

The Whirlwind, coming from a dorm with 95 freshmen, are captained by Maria Felomeyer. Katie Rax and Stephanie Eden, who also splits time at wide receiver and quarterback for the team.

"We have a lot of youth," said Rax, "but a lot of the freshmen are key players."

Another first-time player is junior Alison Tullis, who Rax described as "awesome" on the defensive line. Also strong on the defensive line (which doubles as the offensive line) is Kelly Keegan.

"Our defense is playing exceptionally well," said Rax.

Besides Eden, Rax consistently throws in Sarah Letti, who has held strong at receiver for the past two years for the Whirlwind.

Welsh goes into the game against Walsh having lost its last game against Pasquerilla East, but spirits are high.

Pasquerilla East vs. Pasquerilla West

The Purple Weasels of PW jump into their intense rivalry against the powerful PW Pyros, led by Anna Bergman and Liz Plummer.

"This is really a rebuilding year for us," said PW captain and receiver Kori Yelle. "We'll definitely be up for this game."

The PW offense is led by sophomore Andy Will at quarterback, who before this year had never played the position. She will have Yelle and talented sophomore Amanda Fallet to look at. Gallen made the switch to defense in PW's last game in 1998 and came up with an interception.

On defense the Purple Weasels are solid and are led by Kathleen Wexin at middle linebacker, who will have to work hard to contain the Pyros' athletic quarterback. Still, the team's inexperience was apparent in its first game.

"We had a lot of players that had false starts, and we didn't have our defense ready," said Yelle. "The younger girls had no idea what the game was going to be like."

Yelle added, however, that the team appeared much calmer in the second game. All records will be tossed aside as these two rivals face off.

A player for the Pasquerilla West Purple Weasels attempts to run past Pasquerilla East's defense. The two teams face off tonight.

Irish doubles team Taborga, Taborga take doubles victory over Welsh

By STEVE DILLENBURGER
Sports Writer

Pasquerilla East proved themselves worthy of any challenge as they knocked off Welsh Family, 26-6. The Irish victory placed them in first place after two games

They again started off the game by sweeping in the opening minutes. They put six points on the board when Elizabeth Pleimann sound Mrs. Melissa German for the game's first score. Molly Ross added the one-point conversion and the Pyro's never looked back.

The Whirlwind had a tougher time getting its offense going as the PE defensive line pressured the Welsh quarterback all game. The Pyro's turned the game into a rout as the first half wound down. Pleimann connected with Kerry Hanley for one touchdown and Pleimann added another as PE mounted an insurmountable 19-0 lead by the half.

PE scored another touchdown in the second half, and its defense kept up its intensity for the majority of the second half as the Pyro's cruised. Welsh was able to find a gap in the PE defense in the second half for the final touchdown.

Lyons, Pasquerilla West 0 Defensive dominance was the theme of the PW and Lyons game.

The teams battled to a scoreless draw on Sunday. The game was marked by offensive futility and defensive pressure.

"Our defense played really well, and our offense is looking to step it up next week," Badin's freshman linebacker Katie Bears said. "We have a loss and a tie now we want a win."

Howard 10, Pangborn 0

In the first game on Sunday, undefeated Howard improved its record to 2-0 by beating a young Pangborn team 10-0.

The key player of the game was Howard quarterback and defensive back, Jill Veselik. Veselik intercepted two balls and threw a touchdown pass to wide receiver Julie Wernick to give Howard the first score.

"We played really well and our defense was really strong," Veselik said after the game.

Howard went on to remain undefeated when they take on Fairway Wednesday.
Several players are knocked to the ground in an interhall football game between Keenan and Stanford. The Knights won 20-0 in a major rivalry.

Ellsworth, faced with a fourth-down situation, showed excellent poise in evading the rush, moving to his left and floating a perfect ball in the direction of Gentine, who made the grab with ease.

The Keenan defense, however, took no time off, as it continued to make its neighbors’ afternoon a miserable one.

Facing fourth-down half way through the third period with the ball at midfield, Stanford decided to go for it.

When a last-gasp pass attempt fell at the feet of its intended target, the game, for all intents and purposes, was over.

Not content with its 14-0 lead, Keenan continued to apply pressure, perhaps in an attempt to show the rest of the league that this year’s Knights are in fact every bit as good as the two previous editions, both of which captured interhall titles.

Captain Herb Giorgio intercepted a tipped pass as the third quarter expired, as the Keenan defense forced a sixth Stanford turnover.

“Our defense played very well,” said Keenan player and coach Doug Min. “I keep telling them that they have to force turnovers and get our offense back on the field, and that’s exactly what they’ve been able to do. We’ll be in every game if they continue to play like this.”

With the fourth quarter about to expire and Stanford scrambling for precious yards, Doug Min picked off a pass for his second interception of the game, and weaved his way 37 yards for a touchdown that put an exclamation on the tail end of a dominating effort.

McGwire hits 61st in loss to Cincinnati
Associated Press

CINCINNATI, Ohio
Dwight Young homered and knocked in a career-high five runs as the Cincinnati Reds scored eight unanswered runs to defeat the St. Louis Cardinals, 9-7, at Cinergy Field.

The Reds have now won five games in a row. Mark McGwire hit his 61st home run of the season for the Cardinals, who lost their fifth in a row.

Cincinnati is now tied with idle Houston atop the NL Central division at 94-63, and also has a 3 1/2 game lead over idle New York for the wild card spot and will begin a two-game series in Houston on Tuesday.

Stan Belinda (3-1) got the win, tossing one inning, giving up no runs and no hits while striking out one and walking one. Dennys Reyes recorded the final out for his second save.

Expos 8, Marlins 4
Michael Barrett’s three-run double highlighted a six-run eighth inning, as the Montreal Expos rallied for a come-from-behind victory over the Florida Marlins at ProPlayer stadium. The Expos’ first win in five games finally provided Montreal skipper Felipe Alou his 600th win of his managerial career.

Trailing 4-0, Vladimir Guerrero laced a two-run single in the sixth off rookie starter Reid Cornelius to cut the Red’s lead in half. The Expos completed their comeback in the eighth. Cornelius retired the first two batters before yielding a single to Peter Bergeron, and was promptly replaced by Vic Darensbourg.

Darensbourg faced just one batter, walking Jose Vidro, before being pulled in favor of Hector Almonte. Almonte did not fare any better as his wild pitch put runners on second and third. The righthander then intentionally walked the dangerous Guerrero to load the bases.

D’backs 10, Rockies 3
Brian Anderson worked around nine hits and Bernard Gilkey drove in three runs as the Arizona Diamondbacks beat the Colorado Rockies for their sixth straight win.

The NL West champion Diamondbacks won for the eighth time in nine games and for the 17th time in their last 21. Arizona is 42-15 since regaining first place on July 24.

By MATT OLIVA

The Notre Dame volleyball team managed a split in this weekend's matches against Wyoming and Colorado State. The Irish (16-3) went to five games to knock off the Cowgirls 15-8, 6-15, 15-11, 15-8. They then traveled to Fort Collins, Colorado where the 17th-ranked Rams defeated the Irish in three games.

Against Wyoming the Irish totaled 65 kills, led by Christi Giron who had 21 kills in the five game match. Senior captain Mary Leffers contributed another 12 Kills and a .400 hitting percentage while teammats Kristy Kreher and sophomore outside hitter Marci Bambach each added 11 kills. The Cowgirls kept the match close by adding 72 kills as a team and an overall .291 hitting percentage.

Defensively for the Irish, captains Denise Boylan and Leffers each had seven blocks, while Kreher and Junior Jenna Coughlin contributed 11 digs for the match.

"Wyoming played a lot better than we thought they were," said Kreher. "We struggled with defense and passing, but were able to pick it up."

The Irish were out as lucky against Colorado State. The Rams impressed to a perfect 13-0 by defeating the Irish in straight games 15-9, 15-7, 15-7.

The Irish started out fast, taking a 7-2 lead in the first game. The Rams then went on a 13-2 run to the eventual win in the first game. They carried that momentum over to take games 2 and 3.

"After we got out to that lead, they really picked it up and played well," stated Kreher.

Once again junior outside hitter Christi Giron led the Irish with 13 kills and 11 digs. Bambach also added eight kills and Leffers tallied seven blocks in the box. "They played incredible," said Kreher. "We made a lot of hitting errors and did not play like we have in the past, but we know we will play better.

The Irish begin their Big East tournament schedule this Friday against West Virginia. They take on Pittsburgh Sunday.

"Our team is pretty confident going into our Big East games," said Kreher. "We had a great practice last night and it really brought up our team morale. We are looking forward to playing this weekend."

Sophomore Malinda GorakTi goes up for a block in a weekend match for the Irish. Notre Dame beat Wyoming before falling to Colorado State.

Cavanaugh defeats Farley, 8-6

By STEVE KEPPEL

The game Sunday between Cavanaugh and Farley wasn't decided until a flurry of events in the game's last few minutes gave Cavanaugh an 8-6 victory.

"It was a battle of the defenses," said Farley captain John Ross.

The first half was filled with defense with each team's offense struggling to move the ball consistently. The score at the end of the half was 0-4 in favor of the second half. Cavanaugh's "chaos defense" came out fired up. During the first series Cavanaugh's Meghan Rhatigan picked off a tipped Farley pass and ran it in to give the Chaos a 6-0 lead.

It looked like both defenses were going to continue to hold each other back in their own territory for the remainder of the second half. But after a big fourth-down sack, Farley got the ball back with two minutes left in the game about 40 yards from the end zone. After a few short option runs, Farley quarterback Moghan Sheehan fired a 40-yard pass that got her team down to about the 2-yard line.

With less than a minute remaining, Cavanaugh's defense set in for the goal-line stand. After a 10 minute injury delay, an offensive penalty, and a pass interference penalty, Farley ended up first-and-goal at the one with 50 seconds left to go.

On second down, Meghan Sheehan took the shotgun snap and lobbed a pass into the middle of the field. Sheehan's pass was caught by center Tricia Freiburg who hollered her way into the end zone for the tying touchdown.

Farley ran the ball well Sunday, but the Chaos defense was too strong as Cavanaugh won 8-6.

Keenan routes Stanford, earns bragging rights

By KEVIN BURCHOU

When the Keenan Knights beat their arch-rival Stanford Griffins 21-17 on Sunday, they won much more than their 14th consecutive inter­hall football game. They garnered an entire year's worth of building bragging rights.

In a much-anticipated renewal of one of the league's greatest rivalries, it was only Keenan that came to play.

Plagued by a rash of turnovers, the Griffins were unable to sustain a sustained offensive attack.

Senior defensive back Joe Klopp pounced on a Griffin fumble in the game's opening minutes, and it was all Knights from that point on. Just five plays later, tailback Nick Costanzo scampered to pay dirt from seven yards out to put Keenan up 6-0. Kicker John Ross's successful extra-point made the score 7-0.

"My line opened up a huge hole," said Costanzo of the scoring play. "Mark Staats [at center] and [right tackle] Mike Gallins gave me room to run all day. The whole line played awesome."

The second quarter began in the same fashion as the first, with Stanford again turning the ball over. This time it was Keenan corner-back Kevin Carney who intercepted an errant throw at midfield.

Later in the quarter, the Knights extended their lead as freshman quarterback Billy Ellsworth got the ball to senior wideout John Gentine on a 22-yard scoring play.
