SMC Pride Week kicks off today with rally

By NELLE WILLIAMS

The winds of change are in the air for Saint Mary's Pride Day. The celebration of pride, established three years ago, has this year become Saint Mary's Pride Week.

5:30 p.m.

"We really wanted to involve the entire campus and touch on every aspect: academic, social and spiritual," student body president Nancy Middens said.

The week will kick off with a pep rally today at 5:30 p.m. on the library green with special recognition for athletes. T-shirts will also be distributed.

“The T-shirts are sponsored by the Alumnae Association of Saint Mary's College. I am excited they have been so helpful with pride week," said senior Angie Lingle.

Presentations sponsored by Students Independent Study and Research Grants (SISAR) will be given at 7 p.m. Tuesday by students and professors presenting research projects from the past year. These presentations are intended to show the community what is being done academically at the College.

Wednesday is the official "pride day" for the week and students will have the opportunity to talk with Holy Cross sisters in the dining hall.

A prayer service in Le Mans Hall will wrap up the week's events on Friday. Saint Mary's is also co-hosting the pep rally at the Joyce Center with Notre Dame that night.

“We're so excited. It will be neat to see all different aspects of [the College] during the week," Middens said.

Pro-Life group celebrates Respect Life week

By KATE WALTER

Recognizing the national Respect Life Week, the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Right to Life organization will sponsor campus-wide activities that celebrate all stages of life.

“We want to call attention to the fact that there are plenty of ways to support and promote the sanctity of life in every stage each and every day right on campus," said Right to Life co-president John Linn.

Activities began Sunday morning with the Life Chain in South Bend which took place on Ironwood Street and was sponsored by the local chapter of Right to Life.

A Pro-Life Rosary at the Grotto will take place tonight at 8:30, and will be geared toward prayer for death row prisoners. On Tuesday, a short prayer service led by Father Michael Baxter will take place at Stonebongs.

A baby shower for single mothers is planned for Wednesday. All interested in attending should meet at Library Circle at 4:45 p.m. to walk over to Hannah's House.

A group of volunteers will be leaving from Library Circle to take a tour of St. Joseph County Hospice for the terminally ill. A Cemetery for the Innocents will be set up Friday on the Hendr Bush Library lawn. White crosses will be placed on the lawn to represent the number of fetuses aborted daily in the U.S.

There will also be Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament in the Lady Chapel of the Basilica from noon to 5 p.m. Friday.

University opens new institute

By MAUREEN SMITHE

Notre Dame has established a new Institute for Latino Studies and appointed Gilberto Cárdenas to serve as its assistant provost and director of the institute.

"The rapidly growing Latino population in the United States and its vibrant and expanding presence in the Catholic Church, make the establishment of a Latino studies institute at Notre Dame a natural fit," Hatch said, adding that he considers the institute vital to the growth of Notre Dame.

Hatch also said he thinks the institute will benefit from Cárdenas's previous experience. An associate professor at the University of Texas, Cárdenas was also executive director of the Inter-University Program for Latino Research, a research consortium that has since been relocated to Notre Dame.

"We are delighted that Gilberto Cárdenas has accepted the challenge to build this institute and we believe his appointment immediately places Notre Dame at the forefront of an intellectually and culturally important discipline," Hatch said.

Cárdenas, who said he is "happy to see that there is an inviting and open environment for Latino studies," said Notre Dame needs the Latino institute to "bring teaching and research programs to the University that are needed."

In addition, he said the institute will offer service opportunities associated with academic programs.

"This institute is distinctive compared to other centers at major graduate research institutions because it is the only one that focuses on the diversity of Latino and Hispanic populations," Cárdenas said.

Both Cárdenas and Hatch said they have many expectations for the institute, including...

I could not have looked more casual yesterday. I was barefoot, wore a T-shirt and had a hooded Notre Dame sweatshirt and spent my day at the library and the basement of the South Dining Hall.

I chose this outfit for me, to be laid back and not worrying about looking good just to study. I hate to write this more column. I did not choose it for any other reason than to be relaxed and comfortable.

As I procrastinated and wasted time, my cheeks flushed with anger about looking good just to study. It sounded more like a hooch out than a study session.

I made a grave mistake earlier this year. I wore a slinky red dress. (Here’s where the female studying begins.) As I tended to my foot wounds the next day, I was just making firecrackers out of an air freshener in my dorm room officially withdrew from the university Monday and pleaded innocent to the charge Friday.

Erik Gonzales, 18, of Sulphur, Okla., said he was just making firecrackers out of an air freshener in his dorm room after he was arrested early Sept. 12. He was charged with the manufacture and possession of explosives and was released on $1,000 bond. His preliminary hearing is scheduled for Oct. 11. If convicted, he faces three to 10 years in prison, a $10,000 fine, or both.

Gonzales had been constructing an explosive device in a plastic pipe. He could be affected," she said. "Even if people do not intend explosive devices to result in tragedy, they sometimes do. Accidents are events people didn’t intend to happen."

"People abuse the word ‘bomb.’ It depends on whose hands it’s in. It’s the finger on the trigger, not the gun," he said.

Eaton said Gonzales was a mechanical engineering major, told police he grew up on a farm and enjoyed building fireworks and shooting them off.

"He said it was his hobby and he had no intent to harm anyone or destroy any property," Eaton said.

Government panel bans anti-rape ads

Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG

South African activists on Sunday slammed a decision to ban an anti-rape television advertisement some men thought was anti-male. The country has one of the world’s highest rape rates.

The Advertising Standards Authority of South Africa quashed the ad after about 30 men complained the ad implied that half of South African men are rapists, Sunday newspapers reported.

"Basically, this ad was saying that half of South Africa’s men are rapists and the other half condone rape," Peter Vundla, the committee chairman, was quoted as saying in the Sunday Times. "That is not supported by evidence and is discriminatory," even so.

Miranda Friedman, a leader of Women Against Abuse, said women would contest the decision and start challenging ads that were demeaning to females.

"We sent 250,000 signatures for stiffer rape sentences and they still haven’t been implemented," Friedman said. The decision to ban the anti-rape ad "shows us, and shows the international community, exactly where the balance of power is in this country."

In the commercial, South African actress Charlize Theron, who has starred in Hollywood movies like Devil’s Advocate, says, "Many people ask me what South African men are like.

She then cites rape statistics. About 64,000 women and girls are raped each year in South Africa, and South African women are nearly three times as likely to be raped as women in the United States, police say.

About 14,000 of the victims are girls under 18, who are often raped by HIV-infected men who believe they will be cured by having sex with a virgin.

The future of technology and the economy were the focus of this weekend’s College of Business Administration advisory council conference, featuring keynote presentations by author and Internet guru Don Tapscott and Michael Mazarr, former director of the New Millennium Project.

"Technology is changing the paradigm that we know," Tapscott said Thursday.

"For the first time in history, children are an authority in the big revolution that is changing our institutions. We are seeing a generation gap, not gap," he said.

He named youth ages 2 to 22 the Net Generation, the first generation to grow up immersed in a world of technology.

Tapscott said that parents go to their kids to learn about the Internet and gave examples of children who are making money through the Internet, having jobs and bypassing their parents in knowledge of cyberspace.

"Three-fourths of kids in America above the age of six know how to use the computer, and 85 percent of kids know more about the Internet than their parents," said Tapscott.

"Children are no longer watching 24 hours of television like their baby-boomer parents did at their age; rather they are interactively stimulated, learning in a whole new realm, said Tapscott.

These vast developments, in what Tapscott called the ‘digital economy,’ led to discussion of business webs, disintermediation, virtual marketplaces and sales, and the Internet as infrastructure for all sectors and users as ‘investors of intellectual capital.’

He discussed the Internet economy as ‘infrastructure for all sectors’ and users as ‘investors of intellectual capital.’

Tapscott stressed that every adult and child must work together to forge this new economy with values in mind and that only then can society deal issues of privacy, censorship, intellectual property, employment, access and democracy in light of new technologies.

Mazarr, who served as editor of “The Washington Quarterly,” spoke about general trends in society in the coming century. He has worked in a range of foreign relations jobs, including serving as a congressional staffer, teaching at Georgetown University and authoring ten books.

Four members of the Advisory Council — Gary Gigot, Richard Heckmann, Clark Krouth and Tom Quinn — gave presentations on emerging issues in the global economy after Mazarr’s talk.

Father Oliver Williams, director of Notre Dame’s Center for Ethics and Religious Values in Business, concluded the presentations with a discussion of dominant ethical issues in business today.

Senior Iraqi officials begin military training

Iraq's deputy prime minister has put out his cigar, stepped out of his office and picked up an assault rifle — answering President Saddam Hussein's call for senior leaders. Since 1994, Saddam stepped in military training. Tariq Aziz along with Vice President Taha Yassin Ramadan — two of the most powerful men in Iraq — were among the ministers and senior ruling party officials who began Navy training Saturday in Baghdad, Al-Qudsia newspaper said. Iraq television showed video clips of officials searching with rifles on their shoulders. Since 1994, Saddam has called on ordinary Iraqis to volunteer for light military training as preparation to defend the nation against any U.S. threat. Millions of Iraqis have taken the three-week course. Such exercises have included light weapons training, lessons in giving a proper salute, physical condition­ing and lectures on religion, politics and soci­ety. There was no official comment on the regimen for the senior leaders.

Report questions Gore 2000 chair

Associated Press

Washington

Tony Coelho, Vice President Al Gore's campaign chairman, approved questionable contractor payments, hired his niece for a job and made the government liable for a $300,000 personal loan while directing the U.S. ambassador to Portugal and had the government reimburse $26,000 in questionable expenses to a consultant who worked in Coelho's New York City office. Coelho's rental of a chauffeur-driven Mercedes "was especially troublesome" because the cost exceeded a $500 ceiling while a fleet of six vans for the pavilion were underused.

The inspector general's report was released to the Department of Defense which is investigating Coelho's actions may have violated federal laws governing use of federal funds for international exhibitions. Tax credit provides crucial savings for working poor

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

The tax credit for the working poor that House Republicans want to convert from a lump sum to monthly payments provides crucial annual savings for people trying to get ahead, a study finds.

Half the 1998 earned income tax credit recipients questioned in the draft Syracuse University study said they planned to save at least a portion of their annual check so they could move to a better neighborhood, pay tuition or buy or repair a car.

"The EITC appears to be one of our most effective federal programs for leading low-income families on a path toward true economic independence," said Timothy Smeeding, director of the Center for Policy Research at Syracuse. "The EITC is what makes these expenditures possible."

House Republicans want to spread the tax credit payment over a year, saving $8.7 billion in fiscal 2000 and pushing the cost of the credit into the following budget year. That would help balance the 2000 budget without dipping into Social Security accounts or breaking self-imposed spending caps.

President Clinton has pledged to veto appropriations bills that change the payments. GOP presidential front-runner George W. Bush has joined Democrats in questioning whether such a change might harm the working poor.

"I think it's something that helps families in need to get their money on a monthly basis instead of one cash drop some time in the spring," said House Speaker Dennis Hastert.

But the Syracuse study suggests otherwise. It was based on interviews with 826 Chicago-area EITC recipients who used a free tax clinic to do their returns in 1998.

About 80 percent of that group expected a refund when they came into the clinic and had definite ideas of what to do with it, the research shows. Three-quarters said they would use the money to pay bills or meet household expenses, but 49 percent of those added they would save some money for bigger purchases, tuition or moving expenses.

"These uses suggest that the EITC also plays a large role in improving social mobility, a finding we did not expect," Smeeding said. "There is a large and growing recognition of the program and the potential payoff for working households."

The study found that many working people use their annual payments to open their first checking or savings account. Without such accounts, Smeeding said working poor are "less likely to be able to effectively prioritize" how to use a large check.

The study recommends that the government consider using electronic transfers of the payments to banks.

Many East Timorese still fearful of militia

Associated Press

DILI

Militiamen nabbed Manuel Pinto's three brothers as soon as they ventured back into East Timor's capital, after they were lulled into false sense of security by a radio report that the international peace force had arrived.

Now, two weeks into the peace mission, the skinny 25-year-old scouts Dili for his mother, father and five sisters still hiding in the mountains.

Living on mangoes and cassava, they are going hungry, but playing it safe.

"They're still afraid. There's just a few people here," Pinto says, gesturing at the city around him. Families line up for handouts of rice from Australian soldiers at a sports stadium, but other parts of the city remain deserted.

"I tell all my friends, we have to go," he says. "Some people, they trust me and run away. But other people, they don't trust me, and they get taken."

Pinto escaped to the hills days before the vote. He came down only to cast his ballot and then fled back, this time taking care to take some sacks of rice with him.

His family joined him in the mountains at Darlav, a three-hour journey by car and then by foot.

They were among hundreds of refugees hiding there, foraging for fruit and roots when the food ran out.

His three brothers came down the same day the peacekeepers arrived, as soon as they heard the news on the radio.

Technicalities delay peace process

Associated Press

JERUSALEM — In the first major setback in the revived peace process, Israelis said Sunday that only technical issues delay the opening of a land link for Palestinians between the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

Palestinians insisted issues of principle are at stake.

The Associated Press, which had been scheduled to open Sunday, is to provide the first unfettered route for Palestinians between the two areas, and is to key something peace talks revived last month by Prime Minister Ehud Barak and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat.

Palestinians say the eleventh-hour delay is due to Israel's insistence that it issue the magnetic card passes and maintain power of arrest along the route running from the northern Gaza Strip to the southern West Bank.

"We consider these points degrading and humiliating toward the Palestinian people and the Palestinian Authority," Palestinian negotiator Jamil Tarif said Sunday. "If Israel maintains their position, safe passage is meaningless."

Public Security Minister Shlomo Ben-Ami insisted that the differences were "technical," and said he was certain that the Palestinians would come to understand why Israel needs to maintain the power of arrest.

"Israel's sovereignty should be under no discussion and our right to guarantee the security of the passage is unquestionable," he told The Associated Press. "I trust that we will find a way to iron out our differences."

He said the only differences remaining are over the passes, telling Israeli radio only that the differences were "technical" and uninteresting.

Israeli newspapers have reported that Israel wants to control distribution of the magnetic cards in order to prevent forgeries by militants planning suicide attacks.

A security adviser to Barak, Danny Yatom, predicted the opening would take place within days.

Conferences by Israeli security officials that Palestinian militants might leave the road and carry out attacks against Israelis have delayed the arrangement for four years.

Elsewhere, Israeli peace activists demonstrated against a decision to confiscate 5,750 acres of land in the West Bank village of Ida. Palestinians claim the land for agricultural use; the hard-line Israeli government offered by Barak in May designated the land for Jewish settlement expansion.

The activists urged Barak to reverse the decision.

In Jerusalem's Old City on Sunday, Prime Minister Ehud Barak swore the city would remain united under Israeli sovereignty and accessible to all speaking at a ceremony to celebrate archaeological finds, Barak quoted the Bible as upholding the Jewish claim to sovereignty over Jerusalem.

Archaeological discoveries related to the Second Temple forever bind us to our beginning as a free nation in our homeland and eternal capital," he said.

On Saturday night, Palestinian police arrested 15 members of the militant Islamic Jihad group after seizing a convoy of police from prison, sources close to the group said Sunday.

Islamic Jihad opposes peace with Israel and has claimed responsibility for deadly suicide attacks.

The Palestinian Authority has established good relations and crowds, the two countries have established good relations and have achieved a peace treaty.

Myanmar closes border after rebels released

BANGKOK — Myanmar closed its border with Thailand and reinforced its border forces after five armed rebels, who had held diplomats and others hostage at the Myanmar Embassy, were released, newspapers said Sunday.

Thailand also put its border patrol on alert in preparation for any measure after the young Myanmar militants were picked up by helicopters and set free within one mile of the frontier Saturday, the Bangkok Post said.

The group, which held 38 Myanmar and foreign hostages for 26 hours, were believed to have sought sanctuary with the Karen National Union, a border-based rebel group in Myanmar.

"I will accept them in even though they are not our group's members because they have the same passion that we do to oppose the Burmese junta government," KNU leader Lo Mya told reporters at his stronghold opposite Thailand's Tak Province.

In a statement that could lead to a rift between Thailand and Myanmar, also known as Burma, Thai Interior Minister Sarn Kachornprasart said his country did not consider the hostage-takers terrorists.

"They are student activists struggling for democracy. We have done what we have promised them," said Sanan, who was one of the government negotiators with the rebels.

Despite periodic border problems, the two countries have established good relations through the crisis and were told that they could take any action they see fit. The Myanmar government had said the takeover was an internal matter.

DERINCE — Between hugs from Turkish children and a Greek minister Sunday visited a symbol of the warming ties between Turkey and Greece, village of prefabricated homes donated by his country for earthquake victims.

George Papandreou is the first top Greek official to visit Turkey since relations thawed after both nations suffered killer quakes a few weeks apart and rushed to one another's aid.

During his visit to this small northwestern town, some six miles from the epicenter of the Aug. 17 disaster, he spoke of the quakes opening "the door to a new perspective." However, he said later during a speech in Istanbul that Greece expects Turkey to take steps to build confidence among the two countries, specifically regarding the Mediterranean island of Cyprus.

Cyprus has been divided into Turkish and Greek sectors since a 1974 Turkish invasion that followed a short-lived coup by supporters of union with Greece. Turkey maintains some 35,000 troops there.

Papandreou also inspected a Greek Orthodox church and a school in Istanbul that were damaged in the 7.4-magnitude earthquake that struck northwestern Turkey on Aug. 17, killing some 16,000 people. A smaller quake hit Athens on Sept. 7 left 143 dead.

Later, he was welcomed in Derince by Greek and Turkish flags and a sign reading: "We come." He told people there that by displaying friendship and cooperation, "we want to return to a normal life in peace."

"The door to a new perspective and hope has been opened and we have to keep this door open forever," he said.

"We first saw them as enemies, but now we realize that we are friends," said Muzaffer Aran.
Clinton wants nuclear test-ban ratification

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

As it presses for Senate ratification of a nuclear test ban treaty, the Clinton administration must overcome Republican anxiety over the CIA's inability to verify low-level underground nuclear explosions in other countries.

The administration contends the shortcomings in the CIA's monitoring capabilities give reason to ratify the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty. Republicans, who control the Senate, disagree. They also contend the treaty, signed by 154 countries, is flawed in other ways and would amount to unilateral disarmament by the United States.

Twice last month, U.S. intelligence saw signs of activity in Russia that could have indicated secret testing. The CIA was unable to say with certainty exactly what was happening.

"We don't know that there was any testing going on," White House Chief of Staff John Podesta said Sunday on CNN's "Late Edition." He added: "This is really an argument for the treaty."

After the fall of the Soviet Union, President Bush signed a limited testing moratorium to take effect October 1, 1992, for nine months. President Clinton continued the moratorium—the country's last test was in September 1992—then signed the comprehensive global treaty in 1996.

The treaty, a plank in the 1992 Democratic Party platform, went to the Senate for ratification in 1997. It languished in the Senate until last week, when Mississippi Republican Majority Leader Trent Lott unexpectedly scheduled a full Senate vote for October 12.

Struggling for the 67 votes necessary for ratification, the White House began a campaign this weekend to boost the treaty, complaining of a sneak attack by Lott in giving only 10 days to make a case.

Anybody in our neighborhood who thought he was tough hadn’t yet played Ernest in football. Though younger than most of us by a couple years, he was strong and quick enough to shake any of us. Even if we did get hands on him, though, nobody could really tackle his burly form alone — except maybe Leo or Tookie. Our arena for “Ernest-ball” was a vacant lot next to his house. “Vaccant” was just a manner of speaking. It was actually full of weeds, bricks and broken bottles. I suppose it was more vacant than some of the other lots. The main thing is, it suited Ernest just fine. Jake, jake, whump. FWAP! Nothing is more than my back.

“How you doin’?” Tookie. Why? Ashy guys just always seem tougher. In fact, if you ever saw a couple years, he was still strong and his burly form... It was just a manner of speaking. It was actually full of weeds, bricks and broken bottles. I suppose it was more vacant than some of the other lots. The main thing is, it suited Ernest just fine. Jake, jake, whump. FWAP! Do we need to eat chicken?

I was dismayed to see columnist Mike Marchand's calumny of discord over the suffering of animals. In his Observer column, "Your Style of Eating," is this columnist's view of a new moral understanding of our relationship with others. In the introduction, he acknowledges that the suffering of animals may not be as great as we are led to believe. However, he continues, "I believe that the suffering of animals is not only real, but also significant, and that we have a moral obligation to do something about it.

Marchand's argument is based on his belief that animals possess a form of consciousness that allows them to experience pain and suffering. He states, "Animals have the capacity to feel pain, just as we do. They are capable of experiencing joy and sadness, and they have the ability to learn from their experiences. This consciousness is not just a matter of instinct, but a reflection of the complexity of the animal mind."

Marchand also contends that the suffering of animals is often caused by human actions. He writes, "We have become accustomed to thinking of animals as objects, to be used for our benefit. But animals are not just objects, they are living beings with their own consciousness and emotions. It is our responsibility to consider the impact of our actions on them.

Marchand's call for action is based on his belief that it is not only ethical, but also compassionate, to spare animals unnecessary suffering. He states, "We have the power to prevent the suffering of animals, and we should use that power. It is not just the right thing to do, it is the compassionate thing to do."

Marchand's argument is compelling, and it is clear that we have a moral obligation to consider the suffering of animals. However, it is important to note that this argument is based on assumptions that may not be universally accepted. Some of these assumptions include the belief in animal consciousness, the idea that animals have a right to exist, and the premise that suffering is not merely a product of instinct.

In conclusion, Marchand's argument is a powerful reminder of our responsibility to consider the suffering of animals. It is important for us to reflect on our actions and consider the impact they have on the lives of others. By doing so, we can work towards creating a world where animals are treated with the respect and compassion they deserve.
ABC gets hit with ‘Once and Again’

By FRAZIER MOORE

NEW YORK

Last week’s “Once and Again” started with Lily, the 40-year-old single mother played by Sela Ward, exploding with an anxious confession: “I have no idea what I’m doing.”

Well, what she’s doing is nothing less than picking up the pieces of her life after the breakup of her marriage. She’s rebuilding her identity and coping with guilt for what divorce has done to her two daughters. Dearest of all, she’s risking romance with Rick, a similarly dam­aged single father of two.

So that’s what Lily is doing on “Once and Again,” which airs Tuesdays at 10 p.m. EDT on ABC, then repeats Fridays on cable’s Lifetime at 11 p.m. EDT. And she must be doing something right. A critical favorite long before its debut, the series gave ABC the highest rating among adults 18-49 of any network’s premiering dramas in four years.

What that audience encountered was a refreshingly adult drama with the wry humor and bitter-sweet hon­esty befitting its creators, Edward Zwick and Marshall Herskovitz, until now best known for the age-defining “thirtysomething.”

Viewers also found a splendid cast, headed up by Billy Campbell as Rick and Ward in quite a change from her flamboyant role on the sometimes raucous, sometimes wacky “Sisters.”

But could the sleekly gorgeous Sela Ward make Lily’s plight convincing? The matter was settled in the pre­miere episode’s first moments:

“All I ever wanted, I think, was to be safe,” Lily mused. “That’s the funny thing, because I never chose the safe thing. I would try, and somehow it would always end up being unsafe.”

Reminded of that pregnant speech, Ward laughs. “That,” she declares, “was the first paragraph in the script and the thing that hooked me. I went, ‘Oh my god!’”

This is how I feel: Everything in my life is about safety! And I kept reading and the writing was so good. I couldn’t get it out of my head.

“This is what’s so interesting about Lily: You get to explore her insecurities and neuroses, and then trans­form that. With this role, you have somewhere to go.”

In important ways, “Once and Again” is a very grown-up drama. It dares to tilt toward being about adults who have kids, not about kids who have parents.

The payoff: Everything becomes more complex. And richer.

This week, just watch Lily and Rick, laden with responsibilities, try to find a night they’re both free for a date.

And as they separately anticipate sex with each other, hear Lily fret to her sister, “I’ve got two kids! How can I take my clothes off?” While, elsewhere, Rick’s business partner is pressing him portentously, “What’s her body like? Two kids?”

Which is not to say that, besides its stretch marks and bulging Filofaxes, “Once and Again” doesn’t also deal with universal issues: love, family, trying to learn from one other.

The series is deft in tracking parallel issues as they unfold for different generations. This week we see Lily and Rick in the car outside a restaurant, making out like teen-agers—while, back at Rick’s house, his teen­age son Eli is in bed with a girl. Clearly, this isn’t just a show about divorce.

“I’ve never been divorced,” says Ward.科尔led up on the sofa in a Manhattan hotel’s bar, she bathes a sore throat with hot tea as she reflects on her series’ poten­tially broad appeal.

“I didn’t get married till I was 35. But before that, I would have serial monogamy of three, four years at a time. I feel like I’ve been divorced three times over.

“You don’t have to look far for divorce and all the people it affects,” she notes. “And kids can totally relate to being in a family of divorce, with their parents dating.”

Even with her brown eyes a bit watery and her apologies for being a little spaced, the flush Ward still glows. Those eyebrows arch like boomerangs. Her smile is luminous.

A native of Meridian, Miss., she first found success modeling, then moved into acting with roles in such features as “Nothing in Common,” “The Fugitive” and “54.”

For five seasons she played Teddy, struggling artist and recovering alcoholic, on NBC’s “Sisters,” for which she won the 1994 Emmy for Best Actress in a Drama.

And now she wants the world to know: There’s life after 40.

“I’m sort of loaded for bear,” says the 43-year-old Ward, tapping a Southernerism, “because I’ve been ex­ecuting this documentary for Lifetime on beauty and ageism.

“We’re living in this youth-obsessed culture where the message we get — especially from the entertain­ment industry and advertising — is that our life is over at 40. And I resent it.”

With her documentary, which Lifetime will air next spring, “I’m doing my little part to give a woman, or a man, a chance to think: You know what, I can make a different choice.”

Of course, choices are what Lily faces in excess. It isn’t safe. But it’s fascinating.

Lily Manning (Sela Ward) and Rick Sammier (Billy Campbell) are two newly single parents who get a sec­ond chance at love in the evocative in “Once and Again.”
Irish break away from Sooners

By BILL HART
Associated Sports Editor

Jarious Jackson is no stranger to come-from-behind situations.
In the two years the fifth-year Irish quarterback has started for the Irish, coming back from second-half deficits has almost seemed to be the rule, rather than the exception. But this year, the patented comebacks that Jackson has composed fell just short of victory. It looked like he was the same player this weekend, when the Oklahoma Sooners took a 38-14 lead with 10 minutes, 1 second remaining in the third quarter.

But this time, Jackson would not be denied a win.

"I said we've got to get this victory," he said after the game. "I said if I have to put an 'X' in my arm after the game, we're going to get this victory this time.

This time, Jackson pulled out possibly the best comeback of the decade, leading a second-half charge to defeat the No. 25 Sooners, 34-20.

"This was a huge win for us," head coach Bob Davie said. "Because of the way we won. We played a good football team and we fought through a situation we have been in for three previous weeks and we won.

Following the Sooners' only score of the second half, the Irish started their comeback on their own 19-yard line. Seven plays later, Jackson threw a rollout pass to tight end Jarrius Jackson to give the team a 23-yard gain. Four plays later, Jackson hit a pass to wide receiver Jabari Holloway. The ball seemed to momentarily stall, but the Irish defense was lined up in a nickel personnel in the game. Jabari ran great routes, and I just gave him the ball.

After fielding the kickoff to their own 32-yard line, the Sooners attempted to regain some breathing room and keep the team in front for good. But the visitors only got as far as the Irish 35, before two incomplete passes and one for short gain forced them to punt. The well-executed drive put Lafayette's gift back into his own hands.

But Jackson again took the ball, and had a chance to get nicked personnel in the game. Joey ran great routes, and we have to give our players credit. They fought and their will to win out did ours.

After senior Jim Saxon's field goal attempt hit the upright and bounced wide late in the fourth quarter, the Sooners took over at their own 20-yard line.

With one last shot, Heupel tried to lead his team back to the Irish end zone. But four straight incompletion passes sent the game for the Sooners.

"It wasn't as well as Josh is capable," Stoops said of Heupel's effort. "Josh knows it and we say it all the time. He has got to have people around him. We have to get receivers open and make plays. I haven't seen us since I have been here go four straight incompletion passes."

While Heupel had three touchdown passes for the game, setting the new team record with 16 on the year, his 22-of-40 performance for 168 yards with one interception fell short of his season average.

"He's an accurate guy," Davie said about Heupel. "But whenever you get nervous is when you're a guy like that can run with the football. Basically threw him to run with it. I think he is tremendously accurate with a good arm, but it makes it easier when you face someone who doesn't want to run the football.

Jackson combined rushing and passing to confuse the Sooners defense. He had 107 yards rushing and 276 yards in the air. Jackson completed 15 of 21 passes for the day. But for Jackson, being able to help put the team back on track is a more valuable than individual accomplishments.

"I've got to go out and play as hard as I can," he said. "That's what I wanted to do every single play: I wanted to give all my energy, and do it to the best of my ability, and I think I accomplished that.

IRISH INSIGHT

Bobby Brown and an Irish fan celebrate Notre Dame's 34-30 win over Oklahoma that put a stop to Notre Dame's three-game losing streak and Oklahoma's five-game winning streak.

New life for fans, coaches, team

As the final seconds ticked off the clock in Notre Dame Stadium, head coach Bob Davie and receivers coach Urban Meyer could be heard shouting, "It's over! It's over!" and hugging as they jumped up and down on the Irish sidelines. After four weeks of questions regarding his play-calling and clock manage­ment, Davie finally had a chance to enjoy a victory and the rewards of coaching.

"It's a lot easier tonight when I get home," Davie said after the game. "This will be the first night I can watch ESPN and catch the highlights. It will be fun to go home and see what other people did across the country without having to turn the volume down.

The volume on the Davie house­hold TV may have been loud Saturday night, but it wasn't as loud as Notre Dame Stadium was on Saturday afternoon. Two weeks ago against Michigan State, the Spartans faced a critical first down late in the fourth quarter with the game still in doubt. If the Irish could force the Spartans to punt, there was still a chance of a Notre Dame victory. With such a crucial play coming up, one would figure that the crowd would be loud — but it wasn't. Two weeks ago, the crowd was merely apathetic.

But this week was a different story. The game was still in doubt with just a little more than two minutes left on the clock. The Sooners faced third-and-10 from their own 20 yard line. Trailing by four, quar­terback Josh Heupel had to lead his team 80 yards if the Sooners were to go 4-0. This week the crowd responded to the crucial situation. The keys were out, the fans were on their feet and the stadium with life in every player on the field. From Jarious Jackson who could feel the momentum swinging our way.

"I thought our fans did a great job," Davie said. "We haven't made it easy for our fans this year. But to come out in the second half and still see that stadium sold out — you could feel the momentum swinging our way.

Davie often says that Irish fans are the best in the country but until this week, they hadn't looked like the best in the country. They hadn't even looked like the best in the county. Penn High School has had better fans than ours the past few weeks.

But this week, it was completely different. There was life in the stadium. And that life extended beyond just the sidelines.

Sophomore tackle Jordan Black said last week that winning would "really put some life into this team." There was life in every player on the field. From Jarious Jackson who battled through a toe injury and the humming turnovers of previous weeks to put together a near flaw­less game to defensive back Lee Lafayette, who had been picked on by opposing quarterbacks in previ­ous games, but responded to grab the interception that turned the game around for the Irish.

It was a big game for the Irish, there was a different Irish team on the field Saturday. Trailing by 16 points in the third quarter, the Irish could have quit. They had seen previous comeback attempts fail and it would have been easy for Notre Dame to just give up and accept their fourth loss on the season.

"It was a gut check for them and the kids really responded in the sec­ond half," defensive coordinator Greg Mattison said. "They have had great character all year. They have battled and battled for us. They could have quit. It would have been easier for them to say 'I'm not going anymore.' But instead they battled and I was really proud of them.

The Irish battled back against adversity and earned the right to finally enjoy a victory.

"It's just about enjoying the win," Davie said. "It's about the guys going home and enjoying this win. For tonight, this makes things bet­ter."

The views expressed in this col­umn are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.
Fisher and company rush past Sooners

By TIM CASEY
Sports Writer

This year's Notre Dame running game may not bring back memories of the Four Horsemen. They will never be confused with theBatman/Brooks/Watters backfield of the early '80s.

But Saturday, facing an Oklahoma defense yielding 263 yards and 15.3 points per game — seventh in the nation — the Irish brought back flashes of an earlier, more successful period of their football history.

"For us to win, we have to run the ball," Bob Davie said on Saturday. "It was a little bit cloudy and rainy in Notre Dame Stadium so we just decided it was time to get back to Notre Dame football."

And that they did.

Sophomore tailback Tony Fisher eludes an Oklahoma tackler en route to a big gain. Fisher was the game's leading rusher with 140 yards on 26 carries.

Starting at their own 2-yard line with 4:33 left in the third quarter, the Irish had run 9 of their first 10 plays of the game to put the Irish at the 10-yard line. After being stuffed on an option run, Jackson scrambled out of the pocket for a 10-yard touchdown run to provide a much-needed lift.

Down 10-7 early in the third quarter, the Irish did not panic. Instead of showing signs of becoming down to the game plan and running the football. In the second half alone, they rushed for 162 yards.

"You have to stay in your offense and do what they can't do," Davie said. "We couldn't all of a sudden change our offense."

Driver's first touchdown was also his first carry of the day, as he reduced the Oklahoma lead to 30-28 with less than three minutes remaining in the third quarter.

The best was yet to come for Fisher, Driver, Jackson and company.

Starting at the next 2-yard line with 14:45 left in the game, Jackson drove the Irish down the field in Elway-esque fashion. Facing third-and-2 from the Irish 33-yard line and unable to find a receiver, Jackson took off up the middle for a 23-yard gain and the first down.

Of 11 total plays in the series, eight were rushes, culminating in another one-yard touchdown run for Driver. Ahead for the first time since early in the first quarter, the Irish never looked back. Notre Dame ran the ball on each of its last 10 plays from scrimmage, as it literally ran out the clock.

"We were going to try to run the football today," offensive coordinator Kevin Rogers following Saturday's game. "Every question that's been asked to me is 'Why can't we run the football.' Probably some of that reason is that I'm too impatient. But today we stuck with the plan."

Coinciding with the sudden emergence of the running game, the offensive line turned in a solid performance. The guys in the trenches cleared holes for the backs, enabling Fisher, Driver and Jackson room to operate.

"If you are going to be an offensive lineman at Notre Dame, you have to be able to run the ball," said offensive tackle Jordan Black. "For years that has been our bread and butter. "You can put anybody in the backfield and if we don't do what we are supposed to do, then the back isn't going to look good," Black continued. "This week we did our jobs and you got to see the potential and talent."

After starting with three losses in four games, any sense of confidence can help the Irish. According to Davie, Saturday's running performance could be a confidence booster for his team.

"I think those backs had a lot to do with our confidence because they were running good," Davie said. "That was what got us into trouble early in the year because we haven't had confidence in our running game. But hopefully we can build on this."
Jarious Jackson runs over Oklahoma cornerback Pee Wee Woods for a few of his 107 yards rushing on Saturday. The Irish quarterback's rushing total was his highest of the season and the third 100-yard rushing game by an Irish player this season.

Back to winning ways

There were no boos or bowed Irish heads after Notre Dame's 34-30 win over Oklahoma Saturday at Notre Dame Stadium. The return of Joey Getherall to the line-up and Jarious Jackson's return to his 1998 form led the Irish to a thrilling, come-from-behind victory over the No. 25 Sooners. A 98-yard touchdown drive capped off by Tony Driver’s second touchdown of the day gave Notre Dame the victory that finally snapped its three-game losing streak and returned the Irish to their usual winning ways.

Irish flanker Joey Getherall signals one of his four first downs on Saturday.

Sooner linebacker Rocky Calmus (20) and linebacker Rodney Rideau wrap up Irish receiver Bobby Brown in Notre Dame's 34-30 win over Oklahoma.

That really is disgusting

By BRIAN McLAUGHLIN
Scene Writer

Have you ever wondered what a stoutigian is? Have you ever contemplated how much you really can be accomplishing with a strip of raw liver and a few rubber bands? Do you want to know how one would go about eating a monkey's brain?

A nonviolated person would probably answer these questions with a resounding "NO!" However, those intrigued by what was just written ... well, they're sickos. But they're also in luck. They have a book that honestly has been written.

"That's Disgusting," written by Greta Garbage, bills itself as "an adult guide to what's gross, tasteless, rude, crude and lewd." Yet, this forlorn disclaimer does not even begin to describe how far beyond the bounds of decency the book goes.

When first reading the book for review, one could figure, "How bad can it be?" It was published by a legitimate publishing company and received indirectly through the University. However, these doubts are quickly swept away by the first page of the book, which gives a comprehensive list of the most bizarre protological experiences.

They are shocking, sickening and delightful to tell the truth. After being blown away by how over-the-top the book's content is, the reader finds himself laughing out loud over and over again with each turn of the page. It is also quickly realized how difficult reviewing it would be since even a description of what is written in "That's Disgusting" would probably be deemed unprintable any newspaper.

The book is really a series of short anec­dotes and lists which cover the most disgusting aspects of human behavior and characteristics. It is a world record of the gross, recording the most nauseating things people have done throughout history, as well as the most sickening details of the human body and its workings.

The quick stories and lists are arranged by categories, so one can go right to whatever sparks one's sick fancy. Whether those interests lean more towards castration or defecation, there's something for everyone in this book.

Well, maybe not everyone. In fact, most people would probably find "That's Disgusting" to be disturbing, obscene and outright offensive — even this reviewer had to wrinkle his nose and give a displeased groan. But a few of the more extreme passages.

The author probably realized this when writ­ing the book, as Greta Garbage is obviously a person who intended to protect the true author from excessive amounts of hate mail and denunciation from associates in the writing world.

Indeed, in this modern, civilized nation, Garbage's work raises to an extremely small audience. But despite its size, this audience will no doubt enter the book with furious passion, due to the book's direct, in-your-face approach.

However, even as a work in tastelessness,}

AP ENTERTAINMENT BRIEFS

Spears denies breast implants rumor

NEW YORK

Singer Britney Spears says that a growth spurt, not breast implants, have contributed to her increased proportion.

"When I first signed with the record label, we took a lot of photos, and those were the pictures that got used. I weighed 105 pounds; I weigh 130 now," said Spears on "Entertainment Tonight." Spears, who's "Baby One More Time" album has sold more than 5 million copies, says the rumors bothered her for a while.

"In some interviews I would just start crying," she said. "I'd be like, 'Why are you being so rude to me?' After a while people stopped saying stuff. But for a while it got really tough.

Allman Brothers' graves cause trouble

MACON, Ga.

Duane Allman's and Billy Oakley's relatives are so adamant about protecting their grave sites, they bought the land immediately surrounding them and claim it's private — no trespassing.

"We don't want anyone [kicked] out of Rose Hill, but don't deface the graves. Don't have sex on the graves," said Lars Anderson, an attorney for the two relatives of the two Allman Brothers Band founders.

They filed in separate motorcycle accidents in the early 1970s.

Macon Mayor Jim Marshall says the cemetery is public property and the hundreds of people who flock to the graves each month are welcome.

Davis continues strong Aristea reign

NEW YORK

At 65, Clive Davis is the man with the Midas touch in America's music scene and an ear for what kids want to hear.

The Aristea Records president invested millions in hip-hop in the early '90s, and claims chart-topper Puffy Daddy among his proteges. On the folk-pop front, Sarah McLachlan's album "Surfacing" has sold 7 million.

When Davis took a chance on 1970s guitarist Carlos Santana, Santana's album "Supernatural" hit the Top 5.

And in June, Aristea recorded its most profitable year — $425 million in sales and $69 million or platinum albums.

"An artist has to be able to fulfill in person the magic on a record," Davis told Time magazine in this week's edition.

Davis' latest addition to Aristea, the artist formerly known as Prince. The artist's new album debuts next month.

Bush speaks mind on '20/20'

NEW YORK

Sam Donaldson got former president George Bush to admit he has "a vulgar streak" and exchanges Monica Lewinsky jokes.

The ABC newswoman interviewed Bush for "20/20." Although I couldn't get [Bush] to tell me the latest one he had heard, I think he is at the point in his life where he has the freedom to say exactly what is on his mind," Donaldson tells the Oct. 9 issue of TV Guide.

Serena beats Venus for Grand Slam Cup

Associated Press

MUNICH, Germany

Serena Williams beat older sister Venus for the first time in their professional careers Sunday to capture the Grand Slam Cup and a $900,000 payday.

The U.S. Open champion won 6-1, 3-6, 6-3 in a family final in which the players' mother applauded at the end.

Venus, at 19 one year older, applauded Serena and the sisters embraced at the net after the match, but did not show much emotion during play.

"This is exciting, this is what we always wanted," Serena said during the awards ceremony.

"Congratulations, Serena, the U.S. Open champion," Venus said.

Venus earned $400,000, meaning the family budget grew by $1.3 million.

This was the second sister-sister final in the history of professional tennis. In the first, Venus beat Serena 6-1, 4-6, 6-4 in Key Biscayne, Fla., in March. She also won their two nontitle matches in 1998.

Earlier, Greg Rusedski used his big serve to overpower Tommy Haas in four sets in the men's final, taking the richest prize in tennis.

Rusedski fired 29 aces to win 6-3, 6-4, 6-7 (5-7), 7-6 (7-5) and end another 16-match winning streak. Venus ended another 16-match winning streak when she beat Serena in March. Venus was the only top player Serena had never beaten.

Serena, the more muscular of the sisters, won her fifth title of the year. She was all over Venus from the outset, winning 12 of the first three points and holding Venus to three points in the first five games.

But her game deteriorated in the second set and Venus evened the score. In the third set, Serena broke serve for a 3-1 lead, missed two chances to go up 5-1 and needed three match points to win in 1 hour, 45 minutes.

Rusedski, who never got past the round of 16 in a Grand Slam tournament this year, entered the Grand Slam Cup when five qualifiers, including Pete Sampras and Patrick Rafter, withdrew because of injuries.

Carlson’s goals highlight Irish exhibition victory

Special to The Observer

The Notre Dame hockey team struggled to find the net in the early going before pulling away for a 4-1 victory over visiting Wilfrid Laurier University, in exhibition action Friday night at the Joyce Center Fieldhouse.

Notre Dame, which opens Central Collegiate Hockey Association play at the Joyce Center on Thursday versus Michigan, spent much of the night on the power play, converting twice on seven chances. Junior left wing Dan Carlson assisted on both of the power-play goals and led the victory with a shorthanded, empty-netter.

The Irish owned a dominating 52-13 edge in shots on goal, including a 37-5 margin during the final two periods. Notre Dame’s total shots attempted nearly hit triple digits, as the Irish launched 98 total shots in the game, compared to WLU’s 31.

The Irish opened the scoring midway through the second period, cashing in their third power-play chance of the night. Junior defenseman Ryan Clark, who made his first appearance for the Irish since last December due to a shoulder injury, got things going with a pass from the right to left circle. Junior left wing Dan Carlson then fed the puck on net and senior center Ben Simon, who was filling the slot, deflected the puck out of the air and past goaltender Chad Marshall.

The Irish stretched to a 3-1 cushion four minutes later, when a shot from junior left wing Chad Chipchase kicked off the back boards, deflected off the skates of backup goalie Trevor Francis and ended up in the goal. Sophomore center Brett Henning and senior right wing Joe Dusbabek picked up assists on the fake play.

Carlson capped the scoring with 17 seconds left to play, firing from outside the blue line into the open net. Kimento, making the first start of his Irish career, collected seven saves in the opening period while facing just two shots on goal in the second 20 minutes. Freshman Tony Zasowski closed out the game, stopping all three shots he faced.

The Irish defense thwarted all four WLU power-play chances, with the Golden Hawks managing just two power-play shots on goal. Notre Dame racked up 18 power-play shots on goal in its seven man-up chances.

Watch out, NFL, the real Randy Moss is back.

The All-Pro receiver was at his finger-pointing, chest-thumping, touchdown-catching best Sunday, leading the Minnesota Vikings past the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 21-14.

Moss tied his career-high with a 61-yard catch for a touchdown. He added a 27-yard score and also had a 21-yard reception against triple coverage that set up Andrew Glover's TD.

"When you put up 21 points in the first quarter, that's exciting," said Moss, who earlier in the week criticized offensive coordinator Ray Sherman's game plan.

Moss had only nine catches for 123 yards heading into the game but had four for 120 against the usually stingy Tampa Bay defense.

Ravens 19, Falcons 13, OT

The NFC champions dropped to 0-4 when Stoney Case threw a 54-yard pass to Justin Armour in overtime after Falcons coach Dan Reeves passed on having Morton Anderson try a 53-yard field goal with 49 seconds left in regulation.

The Falcons went three-and-out to open overtime, then Case found Armour behind corner- back Ronnie Bradford and safety Eugene Robinson. The Falcons played without starting cornerback Chris Chandler. Backup Tony Graziano left with a concussion in the second period. They also lost Pro Bowl cornerback Ray Buchanan, who was ejected after Case hooked up with Patrick Johnson on a 52-yard touchdown.

Johnson danced over Buchanan and as he was about to spike the ball, Buchanan jumped to his feet, put Johnson in a bear hug and slammed him into the ground. Buchanan also powered Johnson in the back of the head before an official pulled him away.

Visiting Baltimore improved to 2-2.

Rams 38, Bengals 10

At Cincinnati, Akbar Hakim tied a Rams record by scoring four touchdowns, three on passes from Kurt Warner, the fourth on an 84-yard punt return. Hakim had touchdown catches of 9 and 51 yards in the first half and an 18-yarder in the third quarter.

Warner, a former Arena Football League passer, became the first quarterback in the last 50 years to throw three touchdown passes in each of his first three starts. He went 17-for-21 for 310 yards, improving his passer rating for the season to 125.

Isaac Bruce had six catches for 152 yards for the Rams (3-0-0). The Bengals (0-4-0) became the first NFL franchise to lose 100 games in the 1990s, breaking their tie at 99 with the Rams.

Cowboys 35, Cardinals 7

Host Dallas got some revenge against the team that knocked it out of last season's playoffs.

Raghib Ismail's 63-yard touchdown catch sparked the Cowboys (3-0), then defensive end Greg Ellis went 98 yards with a fumble return.

Arizona (1-3) continued to struggle, falling behind 21-0 for the second time this season and committing five turnovers. Jake Plummer threw three more interceptions, increasing his league-worst total to 12. Dallas has now beaten Arizona in 17 of the last 19 meetings.

Ellis' game-sealing score was his second in two games. He also had an 87-yard interception return in a 24-7 victory over Atlanta.

Jaguars 17, Steelers 3

Jacksonville (3-1) won for the first time in five visits to Pittsburgh as its defense got two safeties to outscore Pittsburgh's stumbling offense. The Steelers (2-1) have lost four straight at home, their longest streak since 1970.

Both safeties came on hits against Kordell Stewart. Mark Brunell also threw a short touchdown pass and Mike Hollis hit two field goals. But both offenses struggled.

Patriots 19, Browns 7

Terry Glenn overcame two costly first-half fumbles with a club-record 13 receptions for 214 yards at Cleveland. He caught a short pass from Drew Bledsoe and turned it into a 54-yard TD on the first play of the fourth quarter as New England (4-0) finally pulled away from the expansion Browns.

Cleveland (0-4-0) took its first lead of the season on a 64-yard hookup by rookies Tim Couch and Kevin Johnson. But they couldn't stop Bledsoe, who was 28-for-42 for 389 yards.

Bears 14, Saints 10

Shane Matthews found Curtis Conway for two touchdowns in the last 1:48. Matthews connected with Conway on a 7-yard pass with seven seconds left, bringing Bears fans, who had been booing a quarter earlier, to their feet. Offensive tackle Blake Broekmeyer went to the corner of the end zone and screamed at the fans in celebration as Saints coach Mike Ditka threw his clipboard in disgust.

There's something you should know. In the morning, you are unbelievably grumpy. And that's pretty much what I expect. So, because I like you, may I suggest you start the day with a CROISSAN'WICH! It's filled with mouthwatering sausage, egg and cheese. And that should make anyone less cranky. Even you? If it doesn't, then we're on to Plan B. And you don't want to know Plan B.

Brown keeps Irish defense rock solid

By MIKE CONNOLLY
Associate Sports Editor

Brown had some difficulty adjusting to her new defensive role but with the arrival of Waldrum and his four-back defensive alignment has helped her. "It's been hard but I have had the help of the coaches and the formation that we are running this fall lets me get forward more," she said.

Her offensive instincts are still visible in her defensive play. Against Villanova she set up a goal by Meotis Erikson and picked up a goal of her own late in the game. She now has three assists and one goal on the year for five points.

Having the offensive capabilities of a former midfielder on defense is an asset to the Irish, according to Waldrum. "She is so comfortable coming off the backline and helping with the attack." Brown has used her skill and intensity to become a cornerstone on the Irish defense.

Sorenstam wins Albany Classic

Associated Press

NEW ALBANY, Ohio
Solid with everything but her putter until the closing holes, Annika Sorenstam withstood a challenge from Mardi Lunn to shoot a final-round 66 Sunday and win the New Albany Golf Classic.

Sorenstam had just three bogeys in the tournament and birdied four of the final seven holes to finish at 19-under-par 269. Her 6-under-par final round followed rounds of 68, 69 and 66. The victory, her second of the year, was worth $150,000 from the inaugural tournament's $1 million purse.

Last year's player of the year parred six holes in a row after building a three-stroke lead with a birdie at the par-3 fifth hole. Lunn, playing in the same twosome, pulled even with three birdies over that span.

At the 398-yard, par-4 12th hole — which ranked as the hardest hole on the course — Sorenstam's middle-iron approach landed on the front of the green and rolled within 2 1/2 feet of the cup.

After lipping out or narrowly missing short birdie putts on the three previous holes, she holed the putt to take the lead.

Sorenstam skirted trouble on the next hole when her drive went well right of the fairway and into the trees lining the par-5 13th. She was able to salvage par by slicing a shot into the fairway, finding the green in regulation and two-putting from the front of the green.

Sorenstam had torched the front nine the first three days of the tournament, playing it in 12-under while mustering just 1-under on the back nine. But in the final round, she was 2-under on the front side and 4-under on the back.

After moving into the tie with her birdie at the ninth hole, Lunn parred eight of the nine remaining holes — missing four birdie putts inside 15 feet. She shot a final-round 67 for a 16-under 272.

points in taking third. Notre Dame was only five points behind co-champions Michigan and Georgetown.

“We beat a team that was ranked ahead of us, and almost beat two teams that were ranked well ahead of us,” said men’s head coach Joe Piane. “I think we came out significantly better. We need to beat Michigan at districts.”

Junior Ryan Shay earned his second individual title of the year, becoming the first Notre Dame runner to win the men’s competition since 1964. “It’s not like we haven’t had some awfully good cross country runners at Notre Dame,” said Piane. “Shay has the potential to be an all-American and finish high at the nationals.” Shay ran 23:52 in the 8K meet, outdistancing Jay Cantin of Michigan by only two seconds at the end.

“A lot of the guys in the race I hadn’t competed with yet this season, so I really didn’t know what to expect,” said Shay. “When it came down to the last mile, I felt really good and hadn’t exhausted myself. I was confident in my kick and knew if it came down that, I could win.”

Deeter, Shay sweep up at Notre Dame Invite

By KATHLEEN O'BRIEN Assistant Sports Editor

The Irish cross country squads cleaned up the competition in the adidas/Notre Dame Invitational Friday, capturing both individual titles and the team title, and placing third in the men’s team competition.

"I think it shows we can compete with some of the best teams in the country," said women’s head coach Tim Connelly. "Going in, we thought we were a pretty good team. We just wanted to find out how good we were.

The Notre Dame women’s squad scored 57 points en route to winning the championship. The Irish were well ahead of second-place Missouri, which tallied 73, and third-place Oregon, which had 115 points.

"That’s what we wanted to do," said freshman Jennifer Handley. "We knew there was major competition there. It was really exciting for us to win.

Runner for runner, each of the Notre Dame’s top five was ahead of Missouri’s top five finishers. The top five for the Irish finished first, third, sixth, 17th and 30th, while the Tigers’ top five were second, fifth, seventh, 24th and 35th. Going into the meet, Notre Dame was ranked 14th in the nation, while Missouri was 13th.

Senior all-American JoAnna Deeter brought home her third title in the Notre Dame Invitational of her four-year career. She completed the 5K race in 16 minutes, 52 seconds.

"JoAnna’s one of the best runners in the country and she keeps going out and proving that," said Connelly. "Hopefully, she’ll get some good competition in the next couple weeks and we can see just how good she is.

Missouri’s Anna Giles-Rood took second behind Deeter. Notre Dame senior Alison Klemmer was third overall in 17:21, and Handley finished the course in 17:26 to place sixth.

Seniors Erin Luby and Patty Rice, in her first meet after returning from a spring back injury, rounded out the top five for the Irish.

The team will take a week off from competition before traveling to the pre-national meet in Bloomington, Ind., on October 16. That meet will give a better indication of where the Irish can expect to finish in the NCAA Invitational in November.

Notre Dame hopes to finish in the top 10.

“That’s the goal for the year,” said Connelly. “A whole lot of good things have to happen between now and the national meet. We need to keep everybody healthy, close up the gap between our fourth and fifth runners, and move up our sixth and seventh runners. I think it’s a realistic goal.

The men’s team were not far off first place, scoring 66.
