Ball State shooting spree kills one, injures four

By PAUL ALLOR
Ball State Daily News

A former Ball State student was killed Sunday morning and four others were injured at a house party at 1017 West Bethel Ave. Shots were fired into the house, killing Julian Brown, 28, of Gary, who was in the kitchen.

Four other guests were injured and admitted to Ball Memorial Hospital. Two have been treated and released, and two are listed in fair condition, said a hospital spokesman. A fifth person was injured but not admitted to the hospital.

The Muncie Police Department arrived at the crime scene around 4 a.m. Sunday, and said as many as 40 rounds were fired by at least two people. The residence is occupied by a member of Kappa Alpha Psi, a social fraternity, which is affiliated with the National Panhellenic Council.

According to the Associated Press, the shooters may have been "a group of men who were turned away from the party." Kappa Alpha Psi’s adviser, David Keels, told the AP that the party was a private gathering, not a sponsored event. The fraternity hosted a party earlier that evening at the YMCA, 310 E. Charles St., and some partygoers went from that party to the Bethel Avenue party. Keels could not be reached by the Daily News for further comment.

Muncie Police Chief Joe Winkle added that authorities have no reason to suspect the party was sponsored by the fraternity.

A man who attended the event said a car pulled into an alley behind the house and began firing into the home, the AP reported. "I heard gunshots, but I thought it was firecrackers,” said Ball State junior Namely Wenterfold, who lives next to the house.

The bullets sounded out in rapid fire, with no space in between, said junior Andrew White, Westerfield’s roommate. Winkle said the number of shots fired indicated that more than one weapon was used. Shell casings trailed out from the house into the alley. Muncie police have not released any suspects’ names but said they have interviewed 60 to 80 people.

"We have no idea how many people were at the party, but that’s how many

Incense sparks Le Mans blaze

By NORENE GILLESPIE

A closet fire in Le Mans Hall forced the evacuation of the dormitory on Saturday afternoon.

The fire was isolated to room 416, where incense burning near the closet ignited a piece of clothing and the closet, residents reported. The room suffered structural damage, according to Saint Mary’s Security. Notre Dame Fire Department, South Bend Fire Department, and the South Bend ambulances responded to the call at 2:50 p.m. Saturday. No severe injuries were reported, but one resident was treated for smoke inhalation and transported to a medical facility. She was released later that day.

Adjacent rooms are experiencing electrical difficulty following the fire, according to residents. Three electrical jacks are non-functional in one room, and the smoke lighting was damaged in another, said one Le Mans resident.

The room was shut down following the fire, and the resident was transferred to another dorm. The fire is still under investigation, said Saint Mary’s Security.

Lutherans, Catholics sign joint statement

By ERIN PIROUTEK

On Oct. 31, 1517, Martin Luther initiated the Reformation by nailing his 95 points of contention against the Vatican to the door of Wittenberg Church. On Oct. 31, 1999, for the first time in 487 years, the Catholic and Lutheran churches signed a joint doctrinal statement, the "Joint Declaration on the Doctrine of Justification."

The signing took place in Augsburg, Germany. In 1530, the Augsburg Confession — the founding document of the Lutheran Church — was drafted. The document was signed by delegations from the Vatican and the Lutheran World Federation (LWF), a global communion of Lutheran churches, including the evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

"I really do think it’s a great breakthrough, and I’m excited about it," said Professor John Cavadini, chairman of the Department of Theology.

"This document... acknowledges that there is now a broad agreement on this theological issue of how God justifies or saves people," said associate theology professor Maxwell Johnson.

Johnson, an ordained Lutheran minister, explained that Luther but the opinion that justification by faith through grace was not being adequately taught by the Catholic Church. Luther called for a reform of the Church, but the call for reform was not well received, resulting in his subsequent excommunication.

"The intent was never to establish a different church, or to merely reform the one Church," said Johnson.

The Joint Declaration defines justification as "the forgiveness of sins, liberation from the dominating power of sin and death from the curse of the law. It is acceptance into communion with God already now, but then fully in God’s coming kingdom."

The key difference is that Catholics have emphasized good works as contributing to salvation, whereas Lutherans have emphasized salvation as a result of faith.

However, Vatican II paved the way for the decades of ecumenical dialogue that resulted in a common understanding.

"Together (human Catholics and Lutherans) can confess: By grace alone, in faith in Christ’s saving work and not because of any merit on our part, we are accepted by God and received the Holy Spirit, who renew our hearts while equipping and calling us to good works," states the Joint Declaration.

"The disagreements are a matter of emphasis rather than substance," said Cavadini, noting that this document allows areas of disagreement between the two churches, but within the context of a broad area of agreement.

"The proposal of ecumenism is not that all Lutherans are now going to become Catholic or all Catholics are going to become Lutherans...but how can distinct traditions live together in full union," said Johnson.

Cavadini agrees that the Joint Declaration is a positive illustration of these ecumenical goals.

"It shows a way to have a dialogue in which the strengths of one tradition are not simply homogenized into the other tradition, but instead the strengths of each tradition are preserved," said Cavadini.

"This is something that should neither be overestimated or underestimated," cautioned Johnson, explaining that the Birthday for a prince

There are enough reasons to celebrate today—something that one might easily forget that it’s Monday. For example, we celebrate the beginning of Drug Free Babies Week, World Communication Week, and even National Osteopathic Medicine Week, and even the 10th anniversary of the fall of the Berlin Wall. Today is National Authors Day, National Family Literacy Day and the 9th anniversary of the McDonald’s decision to stop using styrofoam containers. More significantly it is the Feast of All Saints or El Dia de los Muertos. But one reason of celebration is even a little more noteworthy because of its timeliness. The Nigerian Catholic Church is privileged to have visiting us these next few days a Priest of the Catholic Church, a member of the Sacred Congregation of Cardinals. Granted, around here, one begins to think that prelates grow on trees, but this is something different. Our guest is Francis Cardinal Arinze, originally of Ezioelle, Nigeria. And today is his birthday.

Having had one of the most interesting and stellar ministerial careers in the modern history of the Church, His Eminence is rumored to be one of the strongest “papabile” (possible papal candidates), and it is not hard to see why.

Ordained a priest when he was 26, he served as a priest for six years before he was ordained a bishop. Most bishops spent 20 to 30 years before they received the ecclesiastical ordination. At the amazingly young age of 31 then-bishop Arinze was able to participate in the final session of Vatican II as a church father. This is all the more impressive considering he was a brand new priest when he took the exam at Hickman Hall on the Douglass campus received the bad news that their tests were lost, said a student who took the exam and wished to remain anonymous.

Now the students must take a different test over, creating a plethora of problems, the student said. Spokesperson from the Law School Admission Council — the group that administers the test — did not return phone calls made by The Daily Targum. But in an interview with The Bergen Record, Ed Haggyer, a spokesperson for the LSAC, said the test administrator brought the answer sheets to a post office, but the U.S. Postal Service never delivered them.

“We sincerely regret the inconvenience and concern this problem has caused,” the LSAC wrote in a letter to the students whose exams were lost. That inconvenience is a huge one, said Douglass College student Nicole Conley, president of the Rutgers University Pre-Law Society.

“It would be the single most horrid experience of my life because I felt like no matter how much I prepared, it wasn’t enough,” she said.

Having lost a little room for eight hours straight (again), “I just don’t want to be there,” she said.

The LSAC is a half-day standardized test that measures thinking skills deemed necessary in order to attain success in law school.

Rutgers students must retake lost LSATs

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. — After spending months hunched over textbooks and practice exams and doling out hundreds of dollars to participate in preparatory courses you have finally taken the LSAT — the test that will determine your law school experience. There’s just one problem: your exam, along with hundreds of others, were lost and your only option is to take the seven-hour-long test again. The exams of about 200 aspiring law students — university students who took the LSAT on Oct. 2 — were lost while being delivered to a grading facility in Pennsylvania. There were four test sites at Rutgers and those students who took the exam at Harkman Hall on the Douglass campus received the bad news that their tests were lost, said a student who took the exam and wished to remain anonymous.

Wash. U. gay student harrassed

ST. LOUIS, Mo.

During the recent Gay and Lesbian Awareness Week, two incidences occurred on the Washington University campus which may have been motivated by hate. Some time between Oct. 1 and 11, during the weekend preceding Awareness Week, the banner for Spectrum, Alliance’s student group for issues of sexual orientation, was stolen from the Oak Walk. Its disappearance was reported to the Washington University Police Department, which filed the incident as a theft of property valued at $300. The following Tuesday, Vice President of Student Life Verna Malone Rebecca Bishop reported being verbally assaulted by two males in a passing car while she was walking through the newly parked garage by Greg Housh. Despite Bishop could not identify the males, she said their statements concerned her sexuality. According to Bishop, she was “Brother” initiation ceremony at the now-suspended Delta Sigma Theta and wished to remain anonymous.

Florida frat brother: no contest

GAINESVILLE, Fla.

Although one Delta Chi member joined four of his brothers by pleading no contest to a misdemeanor charge stemming from a fraternity party almost eight months ago, a similar incident involving a different fraternity fraternity began in November. Nineteen-year-old Joshua Ruthbord of Tampa is the only one of six fraternity members who has not pled to charges that were filed after a night of drinking and simulated sex with stripper in February. Georgia resident Anthony Marzullo, 22, pleaded no contest Wednesday to remaining in a structure for the purpose of prostitution, lewdness or assignation. Marzullo and Ruthbord are two of six Delta Chi members and pledges who were charged in mid-May with three misdemeanors including soliciting and engaging in prostitution, lewdness or assignation. The charges stem from a Feb. 26 “Big Brother/Little Brother” initiation ceremony at the now-suspended chapter’s house on campus. During the party, two strippers performed lap dances and had simulated sex with several Delta Chi members, which was caught on videotape.

Driver falls asleep, collides with pole

Observer Staff Report

A driver slammed into a roadside pole on US 31/33 next to the Notre Dame Golf Course Sunday afternoon. He reportedly told police he fell asleep at the wheel.

The St. Joseph County Sheriff's Department is investigating the case and is expected to release details today. Officers would release the driver's name or any information about the pending investigation Sunday night.

Officers at the scene said that rescuers had to use the jaws of life to extricate the driver from his car. He was conscious and talking to police officers, however, and was taken to Memorial Hospital.

The vehicle was damaged beyond repair.

The accident happened at approximately 2:30 p.m. when the car, a Mercury Grand Marquis, collided into a pole that holds up directional signs near the driveway leading to D6. It was traveling northward at the time.

Traffic on the US 31/33 was slowed by the accident. Rescuers closed down the northbound side of the four-lane road for approximately 90 minutes to clean up the scene.

Awakening Retreats offer rest, reflection

By NELLIE WILLIAMS

This Friday, as many as 14 young women will be traveling to Still Waters, a small, cozy farmhouse retreat in a rural part of Michigan, as part of the annual Saint Mary's Awakening Retreats. The theme for this retreat is "Women in Community: Tapestry of Lives."

These retreats give students time to think about their lives, relax and form new and stronger friendships.

The retreat is filled with stress-free activities. There is walking in the woods and through games and crafts. There is also prayer and reflection time.

Students experience community building through games and crafts. There is also prayer and reflection time. Students can participate in small group discussions about their faith.

Students' watches are taken away so they do not worry about time and are not anxious about what they will be doing next. Instead, they appreciate the moment.

"We have free time for them to walk in the woods and reflect," said Carr.

Still Waters is a very beautiful place," said Lindsey Cotter, a junior who went on the retreat last year.

"It is a relaxing house. People come in to relax and unwind," Cotter added.

The little farmhouse is very simple but homey, according to those who have been on the retreat before. There are quilts on the beds, a wood stove and a prayer room.

Another student, Erica Devoir, enjoyed the simplicity of the retreat.

"There was no radio, no television. We focused on ourselves and the others around us," Devoir said. "I got to know the girls a lot better. We had a lot of time for sharing."

Students who attended the retreat last year described the weekend as positive and life-giving.

"Time spent away from my busy and hectic life at school. Especially that I had no watch to remind me of the minutes ticking by. That removed so much of my stress because it really didn't matter what time it was while I was here," one student wrote.

Another student really enjoyed "getting to know other special and wonderful girls on such an intimate basis and learning about their gifts as well as mine to offer."

Saint Mary's students interested in the retreat can contact Margaret Carr at Campus Ministry.

Another retreat will be held January 21-23rd at Mary Solitude on Saint Mary's campus.

Joint Declaration doesn't automatically resolve all issues that divide the Lutheran and Catholic churches, but it does raise their common relationship to a new level.
The most vivid and concrete impact will be getting Lutherans and Catholics to think about this issue as well as others," said associate theology professor Randall Zachman.
"There's still no complete agreement on ordination, ministry, the role of the papacy, and issues related to Church structure," said Johnson while expressing optimism for future ecumenical dialogues.
"Contemporary Roman Catholic doctrine like the 1993 directory on Eumenism and Pope John Paul II's recent encyclical "Ut Unum Sint (That All May Be One)" shows a strong commitment to ecumenical dialogue in the Catholic Church today," said Johnson.
Randall Zachman noted that both Churches would need to emphasize the new doctrine "I think that it will by and large be received, but it would have to be taught," said Zachman.

Business department introduces MIS major
By KAREN FINK
News Writer
The Saint Mary's business department is offering students a new major, Management Information Systems (MIS).
The business department and the mathematics department started combining efforts to create the major two years ago.
"MIS is an area of study that is in demand and the time seemed right. Introduction of the MIS major is an important step because it will make students increasingly marketable in this age of heightened technology," said business department chair Jill Vihulic.
Currently, Saint Mary's has four students — one senior and three juniors — with MIS as their declared major. The degree benefits anyone interested in a business career, and it requires 58 credit hours: 33 in business core requirements, 19 in computer science courses and six in math courses.
This spring, Saint Mary's will award its first MIS degree to senior Katie Cousino. She became interested in the major after doing some research her sophomore year for Susan Vance, Professor of Business Administration and Economics.
"It's exciting to say I'm the first to graduate with the degree, but it's just great to be able to graduate with the degree. It's a powerful major and helps you move into the door of business, especially for a woman with the degree," said Cousino.
Following graduation, Cousino hopes to work as a project leader, a position dealing with consulting and helping business people communicate with the needs and requirements of computers.
Junior Kara Bergeman chose MIS as a major because of its need in the business world.
"The program is very structured right now because it is new. It's an up and rising field. Most industries are looking for graduates with this type of degree," she said.
Associate Professor of Mathematics Mary Connolly is one of the many individuals who played a role in organizing the major.
"The MIS major is perfect for a student who has a strong interest in business and information technology," said Connolly. "It is an exciting time at Saint Mary's for students and faculty working in computer science and only we have a new major, but also the campus is bursting with new technology. It is a try to teach up-to-date courses in new technology classrooms."

Mandela lobbies for Mideast peace

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa

Former President Nelson Mandela is traveling and speaking out for the Middle East peace solution that he proposed earlier this month, apparently ignoring his pledge to step back from the world stage. In an interview in the Sunday Independent of Johannesburg, Mandela said he would travel again next month to the United States to lobby for the plan. The hero of South Africa's fight against apartheid retired from the presidency in June, pledging to spend more time with his family and less time dealing with political issues. But the Mideast peace process involving Israelis and Arabs has drawn him back.

Gore targets young voters, especially women

WASHINGTON

Vice President Al Gore said Sunday he has hired feminist author Naomi Wolf to help attract younger voters, especially women. Wolf's book suggests some controversial views. In her latest, "Promiscuities," she argued among other things that schools should teach such things as masturbation because it is more realistic than abstinence and can reduce sexual intercourse. Gore was asked on ABC's "This Week" about a Time magazine report that Wolf is deeply involved in his campaign, including advice on how to convince voters that Gore is not a permanent No.2 but is an "alpha male" who should be in charge. "She's a valued adviser, and she'll remain one," Gore said. "She's one of several campaign advisers." He added that Wolf works primarily with his daughter, Karinna Gore Schiff, on an Internet outreach effort to "attract young women and young men to participate more in this campaign."

Georgians vote for new parliament

TBILISI, Georgia

Edgur Shevardnadze predicted victory Sunday for his party in Georgian parliamentary elections that could signal whether he will be re-elected president of the former Soviet republic next year. "I think that the elections will show the significant success of the Union of Citizens," Shevardnadze said as he cast his ballot shortly after the polling began Sunday morning. Shevardnadze's Union of Citizens of Georgia party was favored to come out ahead of its closest rival, the Georgian Renaissance Union, which is headed by popular regional leader Aslan Abashidze. Sunday's parliamentary election, the third since Georgia's independence, was seen as a test run for Shevardnadze and Abashidze.

U.N. prepares for winter in Kosovo

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia

With concerns rising over the lack of adequate shelter, the U.N. refugee agency flew tons of warm clothing into Kosovo on Sunday to help hundreds of thousands of people cope with the coming Balkan winter.

Elsewhere, Yugoslavia's independent Beta news agency reported two weekend grenade attacks on Kosovo's dwindling Serb community. An Antonescu 124, the world's largest transport plane, landed at Pristina's airport with 60 tons of clothing for women and children, according to Peter Kaneri, spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees. The clothing includes winter underwear for children and women, children coats, and 65,000 pairs of children's boots.

Last week, European Union officials said about 300,000 of the province's 1.4 million people lack adequate shelter because so many homes were destroyed during the 18-month Yugoslav crackdown on ethnic Albanians, which triggered the 78-day NATO bombing. NATO-led peacekeepers entered the province June 12 after the Yugoslavs withdrew. But delays in committing funds and other bureaucratic hurdles have prevented a major reconstruction effort. Nighttime temperatures in mountainous parts of Kosovo are already approaching freezing.

Another UNHCR official, Lars Sommerlund, told The Associated Press his agency has prepared a distribution plan for winter supplies and will start deliveries this week. UNHCR trucks were standing by at Pristina airport when the plane arrived Sunday. The advent of winter adds a new dimension to a NATO and U.N. mission that has spent months struggling to restore order and curb revenge attacks by ethnic Albanians angry over the brutality of the Serb-led Yugoslav crack-down.

Plane crashes off Massachusetts coast

BOSTON

An EgyptAir jetliner with 217 people on board, including dozens of American tourists, plunged mysteriously into the ocean off Nantucket Island early Sunday, 33 minutes after leaving New York for Cairo. By nightfall, searchers had retrieved debris and one body, but held out little hope of finding survivors in the chilly Atlantic waters.

Authorities said there was no distress call from the plane before the Boeing 767 plummeted to the sea in two minutes from its cruising altitude of 33,000 feet. Though the FBI and other intelligence agencies began checking on the possibility of sabotage, President Clinton and other officials said there was no immediate indication of foul play.

Searchers found two partially inflated life rafts, life jackets, seat cushions and other small debris, none with any burn marks, said Coast Guard Rear Adm. Richard M. Larrabee. A finding of such marks on debris could suggest the possibility of a fire or explosion aboard the plane.

The air search was suspended after dark, but ships continued scouring the area. The Coast Guard said chances of anyone surviving more than 12 hours in the 58-degree water were slim. A Navy salvage ship, the USS Grapple, and Navy divers were leaving Norfolk, Va., on Sunday night and were expected to join the search by late Monday, with orders to take debris and remains to a Navy base in Rhode Island.

U.S. officials indicated a majority of the 199 passengers on Flight 990 were Americans, including a group of 54 people bound for a 14-day trip to Egypt and the Nile. Alan Lewis, chief executive of the Boston-based travel agency Grand Circle Corp., said most of the group members were from Colorado, Arizona and the Pacific Northwest.

The plane started its flight in Los Angeles and stopped at New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport. It took off again at 1:19 a.m. EST and went down at 1:52 a.m., roughly 60 miles south of Nantucket. The Coast Guard deployed ships, reconnaissance planes and helicopters to search an area of about 36 square miles, in waters about 270 feet deep.

Shepard defense tests ‘diminished capacity’

Associated Press

LARAMIE, Wyo. — The theory that Aaron McKinney gummed-up Matthew Shepard because he made a sexual advance goes on trial this week as lawyers try to prove McKinney suffered from a diminished capacity at the time of the beating.

McKinney is on trial for robbery, kidnapping and murder in the death of the gay college student. His lawyers are seeking conviction on a lesser offense like manslaughter to avoid a possible death sentence.

They have two approaches, both of which are aimed at proving that McKinney suffered from a mental disease or defect that prevented him from knowingly or purposely committing murder — the "diminished capacity" defense.

When McKinney’s defense gets into full swing Monday, the lawyers plan to offer testimony that his mental capacity was diminished by drugs and alcohol, an approach that is allowed under Wyoming law.

But they have combined that approach with the theory that a person with latent homosexual tendencies will have an uncontrollable, violent reaction when propositioned by a homosexual. Some call this the "gay panic" defense.

McKinney’s lawyers have contended he lost control during a drunken, drug-induced rage because of a gay panic. McKinney triggered memories of a childhood homosexual assault.

"It’s the ‘erucent defense,’ and it has never been allowed under Wyoming law," said Carbon County Attorney Tom Campbell, who is not involved in the prosecution of the case.

No state legislature has reognized the gay panic defense because there is no scientific evidence to support it, he said.

Judge Brian Voigt is expected to rule Monday on whether McKinney’s lawyers will be allowed to present evidence supporting the theory.

McKinney and Russell Henderson, both 22-year-old roamers, are accused of torturing Shepard out of a Laramie bar and taking him to a remote area near town, where they robbed him of $20, lashed him to a wooden fence and pistol-whipped him into a coma.

Shepard, 21, died five days later. Henderson is serving two life sentences after pleading guilty to murder and kidnapping.

During testimony last week, prosecutors offered jurors a timelike of the events the night Shepard was beaten, ending with McKinney’s jailhouse confession.

McKinney’s then-girlfriend, Kristen Price, testified that he went on drug-and-alcohol binges that sometimes lasted days. But she said she did not see McKinney use drugs or drink the day of Shepard’s beating.

In his taped confession, McKinney said Shepard reached down and grabbed his leg while he was driving. He said he became angry and struck Shepard with his hands and a gun.

McKinney’s lawyers have taken unusual forms, none more notorious than the "Twinkie" defense used to help defend the man who avoided a murder conviction for shooting San Francisco Supervisor Harvey Milk in 1978.

Regarding this case, "He said he became angry and struck Shepard with his hands and a gun."

Diminished capacity defenses have taken unusual forms, none more notorious than the "Twinkie" defense used to help defend the man who avoided a murder conviction for shooting San Francisco Supervisor Harvey Milk in 1978.

New York City prepares for Y2K

NEW YORK — Forget the bottled water. Dump the cases of canned soup. Save the year's supply of batteries for Junior's Gymnastics. When it comes to the Y2K computer glitch, New York's techno-types say the big Apple bit first.

The city has been working since 1995 to replace microchips, hardware and software, and rewrite computer coding that otherwise would have thrown New York into chaos when the clock struck a second past midnight Dec. 31, 1999.

Programmers reviewed 65 million lines of computer code written in 65 different programming languages. The city replaced more than 10,000 computers and bought 50,000 new ones.

For starters, there were 677 "high-priority" systems to evaluate. Those were the ones left after Deputy Mayor Joseph Lhota deleted pseudoimported items some agency heads had listed as critical, like their scheduling software. (Get a calendar, Lhota told them.)

Despite a troublesome comptroller’s audit which showed a number of city agencies behind schedule, those working on the bug say they’ve beat it.

"We are the best city in the country actually I figure in the world, in terms of dealing with any sort of crisis," said Brian Cohen, executive direc-or of the city’s $315 million Y2K project.

"If having an extra $50 over the weekend makes you feel more comfortable, then you should do that," he said of New Year’s Eve, 1999. "But your money is safer in the bank."

The city itself is printing an extra batch of paychecks.

China's own accounting rules make for a case of Wuhan. But in the years following, it was revealed that the entrepreneur's struggle with grand corruption charges was due to a scheme involving the illegal export of goods to Siberia. The risks are minimal. Reforming Pat Buchanan won't work

Mike Marchand

Last week, perennial presidential candidate Pat Buchanan, disgruntled with the two major political parties, decided to blanche his own trail by announcing that he will carry the Reform Party banner in the 2000 presidential election.

Buchanan has recently disillusioned with the Republican Party, believing that it's too liberal, while Republicans and many other voters have become even more disillusioned with Buchanan following portions of his book, "A Nation, Not An Empire," where he claims that the United States should not have come to the aid of Poland and France in the Second World War. So Buchanan turned to the Reform Party, the one party where political ideologies don't matter, the party with infallibly eloquent speakers like Jesse "The Body" Ventura, who "I'm the Brady," who is the Reform ticket led by Buchanan, however, and his e-mail address is Marchand.3@nd.edu.

Everyday heroes are all around us

As last week’s World Series has shown, baseball is the type of sport that produces the most unlikely heroes. Every player has the opportunity to contribute to the team’s victory. Yet it is not always the team’s closest cir­cumstance, but in the game that is played on the field. Gary J. Caruso

Dame professors are heroes of mine. Frank O’Malley, “Mr. Howe” to his friends, first made the life of the cross through a “perfectly dry martini” yet taught me how to utilize life through literature. He is the first layman to be buried on campus in the community event.

Leonard Sumner, “you can call me Lenny,” taught speech, theater, forensics and debate at Notre Dame. At 87 years of age, he lives only near campus with his 40-inch television. During his tenure at Notre Dame, he won seven national championships. His students are some of the best lawyers, businessmen and politicians in the country.

Heroes can be benefactors like Notre Dame’s Ray Siegfried, who turned his deceased son’s passion for baseball into a new community. As a practicing Catholic, he impressed the Young Men’s Ministry at the local parish. He had celebrated Eucharist there on several occasions — the music was uplifting, the homilies were always good, etc. Some parishioners learned this young man was gay and spoke to the priest. The priest, in turn, met with the young man about the dilemma. The priest said the man was welcome to join, but he didn’t know that the young man would have on the other parishioners. So the priest and the young man agreed they would discuss the issue and make a decision on their own. They did this with more thought and consideration.

Several weeks later, the priest ran into the young man while shopping. The priest said, “I thought that you were going to be one.” The young man replied, “Well, the priest answered, “What do you mean?”. “Don’t hold, I’ve been trying to get into that church for years, and they still don’t even let me in!”

While it may be a harsh criticism to God, it seems like a welcoming of the both of your friends. After asking what God would do if he was at a University of Notre Dame, I do not think too many would disagree with the criticism that gays and lesbians often are felt to be unwelcome on campus. Therefore, I feel Campus Ministry should be the first to express gratitude to the efforts over the past few days for their work to support, welcome and stand in solidarity with the gay and lesbian community on campus. Even when the administration does not recognize OUT Troy as an official group, Campus Ministry is willing to recognize it and members of this campus celebrate and want to be included.

Father Tom Doyle should be especially recognized for his efforts to make all people feel welcomed on campus. His considerations and challenges in the Campus Ministry column on Oct. 28 are not only very poignant, but they are also words of great hope — of what this campus could be if his words are heeded — a fore­warning of the great day in heaven that will be one.

I am very lucky to be able to hand out Solidarity Sunday prayer cards and ribbons at the Basilica after the football games again. I say (despite the challenge to get past security to get into the Basilica so I actually could hand them out) how uplifting the prayers of the congregation thanked me for what I was doing, and how I thought the back, or asked for additional copies of the prayer cards and ribbons. How many others when — including a visiting priest who looked at the ground or straight ahead just to avoid eye contact with me.

But handing out prayer cards and ribbons is the easy beginning. The challenge, as Father Tom wrote, comes in every single day as we try to follow the pledge on the prayer cards — to stand with God and Christ, to stand with gay and lesbian spirituality, with all my brothers and sis­ters. And this means that each person on campus — one friend, one class­mate, or even a roommate, who wants to come out to you — but is scared to death. Often it is easier to live with the loneliness than the fear of rejection by friends. They may want to share with you a pain of a break-up, the hurt of a joke, the excitement of coming out or the happiness of a new relationship, but they just don’t know how they will react. You may have no intention of rejecting your gay and lesbian friends — but how do they know that? Please accept the challenge of Campus Ministry and OUTreachND to stand in solidarity with your gay and lesbian brothers and sisters. Don’t just throw those ribbons away — pin it to your bag, or hang it in your dorm, or somewhere your friends can see it. Why? Like the parable in the Bible, a young man and his God were on the side of the road. The Samaritan who came to his aid with a stranger and you welcomed me (Matt 25:31-35).

Could God get into ND?

Here’s a gay joke: I don’t mind hearing. It was told by the priest at my home parish before I came to Notre Dame this past fall: A young man, who had moved to a new community. As a practicing Catholic, he impressed the Young Men’s Ministry at the local parish. He had celebrated Eucharist there on several occasions — the music was uplifting, the homilies were always good, etc. Some parishioners learned this young man was gay and spoke to the priest. Let’s pray for Andy Donlan

Today I read the tragic story of Andy Donlan. After reading it, I had the urge to make a heartfelt prayer to all readers. Please pray and tell all of your own families and friends to pray for Andy Donlan and his family. When you have the urge to offer yourself in prayer, take a deep breath and start praying again.

Therefore, I was blessed with the opportunity to experience first hand the power of the will of God.

I want all of you to know that I have never met Andy Donlan and have no idea who he is. But, what you know? That doesn’t matter. I beg you to continue to pray for Andy and his family. With our help they can make the power of God in a glorious way. I would go on, but I have to cut this letter short. I’m heading out door on a trip to the Grotto.

Students stay wired for success with caffeine

By KATIE WILHELM
Scene Writer

For many Notre Dame students, the semester begins well, with intentions of reading a little every day, staying on top of the workload and ultimately facing finals after only a little brushing up. But on both ends of fall break, the heart of the midterm, these intentions change as quickly as the leaves turn color.

While teachers increase the workload and tests, Acoustic Cafe and Thursday night movies at Cushing become harder to resist. Serious studying is put off until the night before a test, and many Notre Dame students rely on a caffeine buzz to help them through the night.

The popularity of caffeine on the Notre Dame campus is reflective of a similar trend throughout the world. According to the Way Pages (www.plgrm.com/health/C/Caffeine.htm), annual world consumption of caffeine is about 120,000 tons, which is equivalent to 70 mg of the drug a day for each inhabitant. Fifty-four percent of this total consumption is in the form of coffee, while 43 percent is derived from tea. Americans consume about 210 mg of caffeine a day. About 60 percent of United States' consumption is in the form of coffee, with tea and soft drinks each accounting for 16 percent of the total.

Caffeine is the world's most popular drug. The white, bitter-tasting, crystalline substance was first discovered in coffee in 1820. Caffeine was then isolated from tea leaves in 1827 and named "thein" because it was believed to be a distinctly different compound from the caffeine in coffee. Coffee began to be popular in Europe in the 17th century. By the 18th century, plantations had been established in Indonesia and the West Indies.

Caffeine is a mild stimulant, and when consumed, makes one feel more awake and alert. A high dose, however, may prevent sleep and lead to jittery feelings. Tea, coffee and soft drinks are the three major sources of caffeine. Caffeine also occurs in cocoa pods and therefore can be found in cocoa and chocolate products. Each eight-ounce cup of coffee can provide approximately 65 mg to 115 mg of caffeine, but the exact amount varies widely according to cup size, method of preparation and amount of coffee used.

Generally, cups prepared from instant coffee contain less caffeine, and cups prepared by drip methods contain more caffeine. A cup of tea usually has about 60 mg of caffeine and a soft drink may contain between 30 mg and 60 mg of caffeine. A cup of hot chocolate contains about 4 mg caffeine, and a chocolate bar has between 5 and 60 mg; the amount of caffeine increasing with the quality of the chocolate. This stimulant is an ingredient of certain headache pills (30-65 mg); it is also the main ingredient of non-prescription "stay-awake" pills (100-200 mg).

On campus, caffeine is provided at virtually all food establishments on campus offers caffeine in some form, whether it be coffee, tea, soda or chocolate. Each eight-ounce cup of coffee may contain between 65 mg and 115 mg of caffeine, and cups prepared by drip methods contain more caffeine. A cup of tea usually has about 60 mg of caffeine and a soft drink may contain between 30 mg and 60 mg of caffeine.

The thrill of the box office topgross "The Blair Witch Project" was diminished by the media's disclosure of the truth regarding the film. The public was led to believe the film was a true documentary compiled from footage of three college students, Heather Donahue, Mike Williams, and Josh Leonard (shown above). The media was quick to label the film merely a "mockumentary."

Ignorance is bliss: The Blair Witch

With the recent release of "Blair Witch" on video, a Scene movie critic tells of his experience with the movie, before the media hype.

Author's note: If you have not yet seen this movie, do not read any further.

I had the luxury of viewing a pirated copy of "The Blair Witch Project" nearly two months before its nationwide theatre release. My brother Patrick downloaded it off the internet and then used a video card to project it onto the television in our basement. He told me that "three graduate film students went into the woods to make a documentary on the myth of the Blair Witch. They never came back; a year later their footage was found." He was going to show me the footage. I was intrigued. He started the film around midnight and went upstairs, leaving me alone in the basement.

I then experienced the scariest film of my life. It was terrifying. For the last 45 minutes, I kept looking away and telling myself that it wasn't real. I had terrible sleeping that night, so I slept on our couch and kept the lights and TV on. I was still scared when I woke.

At breakfast, Patrick told me that the movie was actually fictional and the only reason that he said it was a true story was "to enhance the illusion." It worked! I laughed because I couldn't believe that a film could frighten me that much. I proceeded to invite my best friend over, and then I created the

Notre Dame sinks Navy in final seconds

By TIM CASEY

As Jarious Jackson rolled to his left with 40 seconds left in Saturday's game against Navy, flashes of the Sept. 11 Purdue game arose in the minds of the Irish faithful.

But, on Saturday, instead of a false start that confused the defense and led to defeat, Jackson continued left, set his feet, read the defense and lofted a 10-yard completion to his third option, Jay Johnson. Johnson caught it on the left sideline, eluded Navy's Daneedo Alexander at the 1-yard line and dragged Ron Williams into the end zone for a 28-24 lead.

"He (Jackson) had it turned under his arm and looked like he was going to run the ball," offensive coordinator Kevin Rogers said of the clinching touchdown. "It seemed like it. The ball hung up there forever. But they broke their coverage and we made the play."

Besides Jackson and Johnson, the Irish can thank the officiating crew from the Atlantic Coast Conference for putting them in a position to win the game. On 3rd and 1 with 1:35 left in the game, instead of running between the tackles for a first down, the Irish coach called a pass play. But when Jackson rolled right, a swarm of defenders knocked him to the ground for a nine-yard loss.

"It was the same play I called against Michigan and it went for a touchdown," Rogers said. "I didn't get the defense I hoped I'd get. They played it with four defensive backs. We didn't have very good options. We had a run-through linebacker we didn't block."

Facing 4th and 10 with no timeouts remaining, the Irish were down to their final opportunity. Showing once again his knack for the dramatic, Jackson found Bobby Brown open for a 10-yard gain. After making the catch, Brown intuitively lumbered toward the first down marker.

With the 30,012 fans in a sold-out Notre Dame Stadium silenced, wondering if they were going to be denied again like against Michigan earlier in the season, the chains were brought out onto the field.

First down. Notre Dame. By a centimeter.

"I was right there and knew it was close," Navy safety Chris Lepore said, who had a game-high 16 tackles. "They got it by a centimeter. It was the closest measurement I've ever seen in my life."

"Call it the luck of the Irish," Lepore added. "It just makes it all the tougher to swallow."

In a day that saw them get flagged for 13 penalties, commit three turnovers (two interceptions and a fumble), and get a pair of kicks blocked, the Irish needed all the luck they could get.

Notre Dame built a 14-0 first half lead on a 31-yard touchdown pass from Jackson to Bobby Brown and 1-yard touchdown run by Terrance Howard midway through the second quarter.

Navy wasn't about to quit. Following the second Irish touchdown, Brian Madden, making his first start at quarterback, drove the Midshipmen down the field. Madden, who rushed for a game-high 138 yards, capped the 67-yard drive with an option keeper for an 11-yard touchdown.

Navy tied the score at 14 when Lepore blocked a punt attempt by Joey Hildbold. Chris Oliver recovered the ball in the end zone for the score.

"Deke Grooper is responsible for the second guy on the outside," Davie said regarding the punt block. "He said the third guy came over and really grabbed him and turned his shoulders. That kept him from blocking the second guy."

Alexander's 20-yard interception return for a touchdown with 5:01 left in the third gave the Midshipmen their first lead of the game. But on the very next possession, Jackson tossed the game.

Alexander ran an option left, kept the ball, cut back to the right and outran the Navy defense for a 57-yard touchdown, the longest run of his career.

Tim Shohred's 33-yard field goal gave the Midshipmen a 24-21 lead with six minutes remaining in the game.

But then the 31 connection gave the Irish their fourth-straight victory on the season, their 36th win in a row against the Midshipmen, an NCAA record.

Navy had one last chance at the end as Madden attempted a Hall Mary pass with seven seconds remaining. But the pass was broken up at the 18-yard line. The Irish escaped with a victory.

"I told our team before the game, at halftime and all week that we just had to find a way to beat Navy," Davie said. "I feel very fortunate to win. But you've got to give our kids credit."

Suddenly the days of false start checking, last minute losses, poor clock management and calling for the immediate resignation of Bob Davie seem far removed. A 4-6 October has put the Irish back into bowl considerations, possibly even the Jan. 1 Gator Bowl.

Before they can look ahead, the Irish must focus on next week and a date with defending national champion Tennessee in front of over 100,000 fans in Knoxville.

"When we were at 1-3 we said one thing," Davie said. "However we had to do it, let's try to get to 5-3 and let's go play a big-time football game down in Knoxville."

Offense plagued by penalties

Even though it was a day short of Halloween, Notre Dame football fans were surely spoiled by what they saw in Saturday's 28-24 win over Navy. As the Irish faithful left Notre Dame Stadium after watching quarterback Jarious Jackson engineer yet another last-minute comeback, fans must have considered the numerous factors that all but guaranteed a Notre Dame victory even before a second of football was played.

The Irish had last weekend off to prepare, while the Midshipmen blew a 23-point lead to the Akron Zips. In that game, Navy starting quarterback Brian Broadwater suffered a broken collarbone and was declared out indefinitely.

This left sophomore Brian Maddren to right the boat and guide the Midshipmen offense to his first career start — against an opponent who has won 35 straight games against him.

Even Navy head coach Charlie Weatherbie was not at full strength, missing practice early in the week because of an operation to remove a kidney stone.

So the question on most fans' minds after such a narrow victory is "How could the Midshipmen come so close with the odds so stacked against them?"

In order to answer that query, credit has to be given to both sides; to Navy for coming out as strong as they did and to Notre Dame for making so many self-inflicted mistakes.

Probably the greatest of those Irish miscues was the penalties — 11 for 130 yards — the most in more than two decades. There were three personal fouls called — in addition to warnings the officials gave early on in the game — and each had a profound effect on the drives undertaken.

Late in the second quarter, after a 25-yard pass by Madden to the Notre Dame 40, a personal foul moved the ball to the 25-yard line. Three plays later, the Midshipmen had their first touchdown of the game, instead of being outside of field-goal range.

Early in the third quarter, when Notre Dame was driving deep in Navy territory, one personal foul pushed the drive back to almost midfield, forcing Jackson to rely on deep passes.

"I don't think it was lack of discipline," offensive line coach Dave Borbely said. "I think the kids were a little frustrated. If the whistle blows, the whistle blows, and if you hit a guy after the whistle, it's obviously a penalty."

When one of those deep passes was picked off by the Midshipmen's Bas Williams and returned to their own 5-yard line, another personal foul on the Irish gave them some breathing room.

"The ball was still in play," head coach Bob Davey said. "But [Mike Gandy] was 40 yards away from it, and he unloaded on the kid. That's losing your composure and becoming frustrated.

Then there were the holding penalties, so numerous that some remarked that Navy defensive line- men were taking advantage of their speed and lack of size to make the holding more blatant than it actually was.

"They're active guys," Davey said, "but if it wasn't holding, they wouldn't have called it. They do a good job, though, moving the front around and standing." Even the players had a hard time seeing why they were at fault.

"It was very frustrating," Gandy said, "because we were doing the same things we were doing all week and all season, and now they are calling holding. There is nothing you can do during the game to adjust your technique, though.

There's a common word in all of these excerpts, from Dave to Borbely to Gandy: frustration. And in Saturday's game, that's something you never saw from the Midshipmen.

The Midshipmen didn't lose their composure when things didn't turn their way. They didn't force themselves into costly personal fouls when the Irish made great plays or their luck turned sour.

After sacking Jackson the play before to put the Irish in their toughest situation of the game, they didn't show their frustration on fourth down when Irish receiver Bobby Brown twisted forward to give the home team the one inch it needed for a first down.

They simply acknowledged a job well done by their opponent — not taking their irritation out on those on the other side of the ball — and went back to work.

"These guys will continue to fight back," Weatherbie said. "You're talking about the United States Naval Academy. They're fighting son-of- a- gun- traits."

And hopefully the Irish, from the coaching staff down on, learned something from this game. In order for a football team to take itself to the next level, self-inflicted mistakes such as those committed in Saturday's game must be avoided.

Hopefully, the Irish will take the Midshipmen's approach to composure to heart. A week from now, when they travel to Knoxville, their opponent will not be as forgiving, and frustration may again become a common emotion on the Irish sidelines.

Jones has career day in win over Navy

By BRIAN KESSLER

Following Notre Dame’s 28-24 victory over Navy, Julius Jones had no idea how many yards he just rushed for.

Reporters swarmed the freshman tailback as he emerged from the locker room and one of them clued Jones in that he picked up 146. Jones simply smiled and laughed.

“I don’t know what to say about that,” the modest Jones said. “I finally had a good game and showed everyone what I could do. I had a field day out there.”

Jones also probably wasn’t aware that he just recorded the most rushing yards by a freshman tailback since Jerome Heavens ran for 148 in 1975.

“We have having some trouble passing the ball, so we had to go back to the run,” Jones said. “I knew the job had to be done and I wanted to get in there and do it. The line blocked well. There were holes everywhere. All I had to do was pick one. I had a good game.”

Jones obviously knew that. He was the bright spot on a day in which the Irish desperately needed one to knock off the upset-minded Midshipmen.

“It’s exciting to watch,” Notre Dame running backs coach Desmond Robinson said. “It’s a good back and he made some plays for us today. I think he’s really maturing and showing he’s worthy of getting more plays.”

With his hands on the football, he’s a weapon,” head coach Bob Davie said.

After just one carry for a yard in the first quarter, Jones got his chance to shine in the second. On Notre Dame’s first drive of that quarter, Jones got five straight carries that took the Irish from their own 44-yard line down to the Navy 13. The highlight of the drive was Jones’ 28-yard run to which he started up the middle, before breaking through the outside for a big gain. Jones runs set up a touchdown play that put the Irish ahead 14-0 midway through the second.

“I felt very comfortable out there after five or six carries,” Jones said. “I like situations like that where I get the ball and can make a play.”

Navy stormed back with 21 unanswered points, but the Irish rallied on Jones and just like UPS, he delivered. With less than five minutes remaining in the third quarter, Jones had back-to-back 12-yard rushes to start the Irish drive that culminated with Jarius Jackson’s 57-yard touchdown run on the next play.

“It’s very special. I reminds me a lot of Autry Davis, center John Merandi said. “His ability to read holes is just unbelievable.”

With the score tied in the fourth quarter, the Irish went almost exclusively to Jones when it came time to handle. On their first drive of the quarter, Jones got four carries only to see it ended with a blocked field goal.

“I like situations like that where I get the ball and can make a play.”

Julius Jones
Irish tailback

Jones was just the type that is going to make you miss. He was real close to going the distance a couple of times. It was a good game for him holes is in, play under pressure, and get the job done.”

With the Irish trailing by three points and driving late in the game, the Irish was at tailback getting the carries. The Irish were forced to pass the ball with time running out, but Jones had already done his part.

“I played a whale of a game,” Navy head coach Charlie Weatherby said.

Freshman Julius Jones plows over Navy safety Chris Lepore in the Irish’s 28-24 victory over the Midshipmen Saturday. Jones rushed for 146 yards on 19 carries.

Midshipmen set adrift

Notre Dame narrowly averted a loss to upset-minded Navy and kept alive its 36-game winning streak over the Middies with some late-game heroics by Jarious Jackson and company. A perfect October improved the Irish's record to 5-3 and sets up a pivotal game with fourth-ranked Tennessee in Knoxville.
nishments. Starbucks can be found at Reckers, while campus-wide coffee offers can be found at O'Shaughnessy. At Greenfield's, located in the Hasbrouk Center for International Studies, freshly ground coffees, sandwiches, and espresso drinks are featured daily. Many students don't realize that caffeine is a stimulant, and dependence on it can develop as easily as it can with any other drug. Regular use of more than 350 mg of caffeine a day has been proven to cause physical dependence. Interruption of the regular use produces a characteristic withdrawal syndrome, the most noticeable feature of which is an often severe headache that can be relieved by taking caffeine.

Absence of caffeine, furthermore, makes regular users feel irritable and tired. Relief from these withdrawal effects is often given as a reason for continuing to consume caffeine. A person who stops his or her caffeine intake suddenly may experience irritability, headache, and lethargy. Therefore, even in those who ingest low or moderate amounts of caffeine should taper off their consumption over a period of time rather than abruptly stopping.

Caffeine is often, in beverage form, to reach all body tissues within five minutes. Peak blood levels are reached in about 30 minutes. Many Nutre Name students take advantage of caffeine's effects on sleep and brain activity. Consumption of the stimulant before bedtime delays sleep onset for sleeping students an opportunity to study.

But caffeine also shortens overall sleep time and reduces the depth of sleep. After using caffeine, sleepers are more easily aroused, move more during sleep, and report a reduction in the quality of sleep. Caffeine stimulates the brain and behavior. Use of 75 to 150 mg elevates neural activity in many parts of the brain, postpones fatigue, and enhances performance at simple intellectual tasks and at physical work of moderate intensity that involves endurance but not fine motor coordination.

Though the excessive doses of caffeine will lead to a huge crash, I stand by the belief that caffeine is a necessary part of college life. Whether it's a huge cup of coffee, a six-pack of Mountain Dew, or a few No-Doz, caffeine provides the perfect pick-me-up when faced with a paper deadline, a late night of studying or one of the more boring classes on campus," said Gray Manary, a sophomore and admitted caffeine-addict. "I don't deny that I have an addiction. Experiencing headaches, the shakes, and depression during a withdrawal isn't fun, but honestly. I need the caffeine and there aren't worse addiction, such as tobacco. For example, when professors stop assigning 40-page research papers to write, I'll switch to decaf. I promise."

Bichette moves to Reds in first season trade

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Dante Bichette gets to play closer to home. The Cincinnati Reds get someone to replace Greg Vaughn. The Colorado Rockies can head in a new direction.

The first major trade of the offseason appears to have made everyone happy.

Needing someone to bat cleanup behind Ñate McQuade, a free agent, the Reds obtained Bichette on Saturday for outfielder Jeffrey Hammonds and right-handed reliever Stan Bellina. Cincinnati also got $1.9 million to make up the salary difference.

"This was a very early deal in the offseason," Rockies general manager Dan O'Dowd said. "It's just that this turned out to be the best deal at this point in time for Dante and for the Rockies.

Bichette, who turns 36 on Nov. 18, was one of the original Rockies and a fan favorite in Colorado. As friends left the team in recent years and the Rockies lost games, Bichette found himself having less fun. He also found that he missed being with his wife and two children during spring training and the part of the season when his 7-year-old son was in school. The Bichettes live in Orlando, Fla.

Early in the season, Bichette told the Rockies that if another team came closer to home expression of interest, he'd be willing to approve a trade.

"I got the numbers," Bichette said. "I was hitting .259 the day my little boys and wife showed up during the season. When they left to go back home for school, I was hitting .304. I ended up hitting .288. "I read into these numbers that I'm not quite the player I am with my family a thousand miles away. It plays on me. It was probably the deciding factor."

Cincinnati is only a two-hour flight from Orlando and the Reds hold spring training in Sarasota, Fla. They also satisfied Bichette's desire to play on a winner — they had barely missed out on the playoffs last season.

Knowing they probably wouldn't be able to afford to keep Vaughn, the Reds began talking to the Rockies about Bichette during the season. Vaughn led the club with 45 home runs and 118 RBIs, but did fall for free agency last Thursday.

Bichette and his agent told the Reds they wanted at least a four-year deal for $10 million to $12 million a year, way out of Cincinnati's price range, general manager Jim Bowden said.

When the Rockies finally agreed to include $1.9 million in the trade to make up for the difference in the salaries that involved, the Reds figure they'd gotten someone who could replace Vaughn.

Bichette hit 34 homers and drove in 132 runs last season when he barely missed hitting .300 for the seventh consecutive year. He made $6.5 million each of the last two seasons.

"This guy's a hitting machine," Bowden said. "He's a very special man with the bat. Whether at Coors Field or away, this man can produce." Bichette is a career .345 hitter in Cincinnati with nine home runs and 32 RBIs. He'll get to find out just how much playing for Coors Field influenced his numbers, he said. "I'm not really a home run guy. Twenty-five to 30 is my kind of year. Run production is where I think I can really help the team."

In the past three months, the Rockies have had general manager Dan O'Dowd and manager Jim Leyland return to Colorado with promises that the second-worst in franchise history. The trade starts a remake of the team.

"Our vision for this team is a more athletic, more versatile group of contributors," O'Dowd said. "This is our first step in that direction. It also gives us improved depth in payroll."

Hammonds, 28, hit .277 with 17 homers and 41 RBIs in 123 games last season as a backup outfielder. He'll make $1.1 million next year, the last on his contract.

His best game came at Coors Field on May 19, when he hit three homers in the Reds' 24-9 rout of the Rockies.

"I'm looking at it as another change to help get a team looking," Hammonds said. "It's a chance to do may part to get this team jump-started again."

Belinda, 33, was a setup man in 200 before he was. He makes $6.5 million each of the next two seasons.

"This guy's a hitting machine," Bowden said. "He's a very special man with the bat. Whether at Coors Field or away, this man can produce."

Moore's death casts dark shadow over Marlboro 500

Associated Press

FONTANA, Calif. — A stirring race and fight for the CART championship were quickly forgotten amid tears Sunday when race winner Adrian Fernandez and new series champion Juan Montoya were told that fellow driver Greg Moore was dead.

Moore, a 24-year-old Canadian and one of the budding stars of the Champ Car series, died from massive head and internal injuries after his car went off the track at more than 250 mph and slammed into a concrete retaining wall.

The accident during the Marlboro 500 occurred during a restart on the 106th lap of the 250-lap event on the two-mile California Speedway oval.

Moore lost control of his car coming off turn two. It skidded onto the infield grass, crashed hard into a retaining wall and came to a halt.

The race continued as the Marlboro 500 occurred during a restart on the 106th lap of the 250-lap event on the two-mile California Speedway oval.

Moore, a five-time winner in CART, was removed from the remains of his Reynard-Mercedes and airlifted by helicopter to Loma Linda Medical Center.

Most of the drivers were not made aware of the death until after the race.

Andrew Craig, president and CEO of CART, said, "We thought the appropriate thing was to continue with the race but to cancel all the usual things that take place after the event."

When word of Moore's death was received at the track, CART chief steward Wally Dallenbach ordered the flags in front of the pit lane lowered to half staff and told the teams there would be no post-race celebration. Instead, a brief prayer service was held.

Fernandez, whose first of five CART victories came in July 1996 in Toronto in a race in which driver Jeff Krosnoff was killed, gambled on making it to the end on a waning fuel load and made it, beating runner-up Max Papis to the finish line by 7.634 seconds.

The Mexican driver pumped his fists as he circled the track slowly on his victory lap. But, after getting out of his Reynard-Ford and being told of Moore's death, Fernandez broke into tears.

He went into seclusion briefly and later, barely able to speak through tears, said haltingly, "It's so hard. Greg was such a good friend of ours. We've been so many good moments on and off the track."

"This is a tragedy for all of us. The win doesn't matter anything. My heart goes out to his family."

Montoya finished fourth and Dario Franchitti, who came into the season-ending race leading the championship battle by nine points, finished 10th after losing two laps because of a tire problem during a pit stop.

The two wound up tied at 212 points, giving Montoya the championship on the basis of most wins. The 24-year-old rookie won seven times, while Franchitti, 26, won three races. The previous closest championship was in 1985 when Al Unser beat his son, Al Unser Jr., by one point.

In the stands after the race, several hundred Colombians waved flags and celebrated the championship of their countryman, while the sensational rookie hugged team owner Chip Ganassi.

Committee reforms win over Kissinger

LAUSANNE, Switzerland

Henry Kissing er is convinced the International Olympic Committee is embracing reforms that should restore its reputation and silence critics in Washing­ton.

The former Secretary of State played a significant role in the final meeting of the IOC 2000 reform panel, which endorsed nearly 50 recom­mendations for reshaping the organization in the wake of the Olympic corruption scandals.

Among the key proposals adopted Saturday: eight­year terms of office and re­ election for IOC members, election of 15 athletes to the committee, new rules for financial disclosure and a possible ban on visits to bid cities.

The hard part will be getting the reforms passed by the full IOC general assem­bly and winning over skep­tics in Congress, Kissing er, one of 38 outside delegates on the 82-member reform panel, said the IOC ought to succeed.

"I think more has been achieved than many of those I consulted thought possi­ble," he said.

He said he will consult with former Sen. George Mitchell, Ken Duberstein and other members of the USOC-appointed panel that made recommendations at March for overhauling the IOC.

"If Duberstein and Mitchell and I support (the IOC reforms), which would cer­tainly be my inclination, I think the Congress will go along," Kissing er said.

The IOC has come under fire at three separate hear­ings in Congress this year.

Last month, IOC members expre­sseed skepticism about the reform efforts and threatened to impose sanc­tions if significant changes aren't adopted in December. IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch is to appear before a House panel on Dec. 15 to testify about the reforms.

U.S. Olympic Committee President Bill Bredin, who also served as an outside mem­ber of the IOC 2000 panel, said the reforms are signifi­cant and the IOC has gone further than expected.

The reforms will be put to an IOC vote in Lausanne on Dec. 11-12. Measures requiring change in the Olympic Charter will need a two-thirds majority of the 106-plus members for pas­sage; others will need a majority.

The meeting will come a year after the scandal broke over the gifts, cash and other inducements offered to IOC members during Salt Lake City's winning bid for the 2002 Winter Games.

Since then, the IOC has purged ten members impli­cated in the affair, set up an ethics commission, opened its sessions to the media, offered to be governed by an international anti-bribery treaty and drawn up a statute of limitations.

Under one recommenda­tion endorsed Saturday, prospective bid cities will be required to meet certain standards. Members would not be accepted as a candidate.

But the crucial question of whether IOC members will be allowed to visit bid cities remains unresolved. A pro­posal for a blanket ban on such visits failed in win­ning approval of the reform panel, which was split on the issue.

Kissing er offered a com­promise that would allow small visits. Members would be allowed to travel as a group for a speci­fied time at IOC expense.

The panel agreed to sub­mit two proposals to the IOC for consideration.

VIENNA - PRAGUE - SALZBURG - MUNICH - LUZERN - PARIS - LONDON -
The Cleveland Browns finally won and the St. Louis Rams finally lost.

The expansion Browns got their first win in spectacular fashion Sunday, beating the New Orleans Saints 21-16 on Tim Couch's desperation, 62-yard touchdown pass to Kevin Johnson on the final play in the Superdome.

"I couldn't have thrown another yard," Couch said. "I put everything I could into it and threw it as high as I could. It's a neat way to get your first one.'"

While the Browns became the last NFL team to get a win this season, the Rams became the last team to get a loss. At Nashville, Tenn., Steve McNair returned after a six-week absence following back surgery and led the Tennessee Titans over St. Louis, 24-21. The Titans (6-1) outscored the Rams (6-1-1) 21-0 in the first 14 minutes, more points than St. Louis had given up in any game this season.

"We wanted to see how they would react being down," Tennessee safety Blaine Spence said. "They hadn't been down all year. They were just going to try to keep things close."

St. Louis, the NFL's last unbeaten team, fell behind 21-0 before rallying against the Titans. Kurt Warner threw three TD passes in the first quarter to lead St. Louis on its first regular-season shutout loss since 1997.

The Browns got their first win for the first time this season. The Falcons (2-6) twice built 14-point leads before Carolina's Steve Beuerlein scored on a 1-yard sneak with 3:06 remaining. The Panthers (5-3) got the ball back at then with 15 seconds left, but Gerald McBurrows came up big on his team's third interception against Beuerlein to clinch the victory.

Bills 13, Ravens 10

At Baltimore, Doug Flutie threw a 3-yard TD pass to Jonathan Lichten with 1:35 left as Buffalo (5-3) rallied to hand the Ravens (2-5) their third straight loss.

Flutie threw three interceptions in the first three quarters to help Baltimore build a 10-3 lead. But Ravens quarterback Tony Banks committed two costly turnovers in the final 12 minutes, both of which led to field goals that enabled the Bills to snap a two-game skid.

Falcons 27, Panthers 20

On Sunday night, a pair of TD passes from anlaş built 14-point leads before Carolina's Steve Beuerlein scored on a 1-yard sneak with 3:06 remaining. The Panthers (5-3) got the ball back at then with 15 seconds left, but Gerald McBurrows came up big on his team's third interception against Beuerlein to clinch the victory.

Redskins 48, Bears 22

At Landover, Md., 213-pound linemen Dan Wilkinson scored on an 88-yard interception return, and Stephen Davis rushed for 143 yards and two scores as Washington (5-2) beat Chicago (3-3).

Brad Johnson threw two TD passes for the Redskins, who led 45-0 in the third quarter.

Jaguars 41, Bengals 10

Fred Taylor, returning after missing four weeks with a hamstring injury, rushed for 126 yards in the first half as Jacksonville (6-1) handed Cincinnati (1-7) one of its sole possessions of first place in the AFC West.

While the Browns became the last NFL team to get a win this season, the Rams became the last team to get a loss. At Nashville, Tenn., Steve McNair returned after a six-week absence following back surgery and led the Tennessee Titans over St. Louis, 24-21. The Titans (6-1) outscored the Rams (6-1-1) 21-0 in the first 14 minutes, more points than St. Louis had given up in any game this season.

"We wanted to see how they would react being down," Tennessee safety Blaine Spence said. "They hadn't been down all year. They were just going to try to keep things close."

St. Louis, the NFL's last unbeaten team, fell behind 21-0 before rallying against the Titans. Kurt Warner threw three TD passes in the first quarter to lead St. Louis on its first regular-season shutout loss since 1997.

The Browns got their first win for the first time this season. The Falcons (2-6) twice built 14-point leads before Carolina's Steve Beuerlein scored on a 1-yard sneak with 3:06 remaining. The Panthers (5-3) got the ball back at then with 15 seconds left, but Gerald McBurrows came up big on his team's third interception against Beuerlein to clinch the victory.

Chiefs 34, Chargers 0

At Kansas City, Reggie Tongue returned a fumble 7 yards for a touchdown as the Chiefs (5-2) handed San Diego (4-3) its first regular-season shutout loss since 1992.

The victory gave Kansas City sole possession of first place in the AFC West.

to fall back on the strength of their victory at the Big East Championships and sixth-place finish at the Pre-Nationals meet to secure an at-large bid.

Notre Dame's women's cross country team placed fifth of 13 teams in the conference, totaling 98 points. Ahead of the Irish were Georgetown, Providence, Villanova and Boston College, capturing first through fourth places, respectively.

"We actually had some pretty good performances," said women's head coach Tim Connelly. "We just didn't run hard enough to finish as well as we had hoped."

All four of the teams that beat the Irish ran particularly strong races, according to Connelly. Providence and Boston College ran better than they had all year.

"We told them before the race that we were going to have to take some chances," Connelly said.

Senior Allison Klemmer led the Irish in Friday's Big East meet. She ran a time of 17:39 in 12th-place finish.

Makinen saw her Irish record point was against Duke on November 2, 1999. The last time Makinen ran in the Big East Quarterfinals was a point for just the second time in her career and moved her into second place on the Irish all-time assist list - trailing only Holly Manthei's NCAA record 128 assists.

Senior John Dudley and the Irish cross-country squad finally defeated archival Georgetown in this weekend's tournament.

Seniors Patty Rice and Erin Luby, junior Chrissy Koester, senior Valerie Siqueira and freshman Kari Eaton were the next five runners for Notre Dame. The Irish were without top runner JoAnna Deeter, who is a senior All-American. She has not run since spraining her ankle earlier this month.

"Placing fifth doesn't help us at all to get an at-large bid," said Klemmer. "But I think we're capable of getting second at districts."

Irish season hinges on one game after loss to Hoyas

It all comes down to one game.

For the men's soccer team, the future of its entire season hinges on Wednesday's game against Seton Hall.

It all comes down to one game. For the men's soccer team, the future of its entire season hinges on Wednesday's game against Seton Hall. The Irish had a chance to secure a spot in the postseason Big East tournament on Friday when they squared off against conference rival Georgetown, but the Hoyas were too tough and handed the Irish a 3-1 loss.

With only one game remaining on the regular season schedule, the Irish are now facing a do-or-die situation: if they beat Pirates, the season continues. If they lose, the season is over.

"We had a lot of chances to score, but we didn't finish any of them," said Gerick Short, Irish goalkeeper. "We were giving ourselves great opportunities to tie the game but we just couldn't score."

Defense is the main concern for the Irish as they head into the match with Seton Hall.

"We're working on our defense in practice," said Short. "We've given up a lot of goals in the past few games which isn't characteristic of our team. We have to get that back on track for our game against Seton Hall."

The Irish brought the score to within one when midfielder Connor LaHose blasted a shot from outside the box at the 78:20 mark. Midfielder Mert Incekarra then received the ball on the left side and booted in an easy shot on the open goal.

Irish goalkeeper The loss to Georgetown marks the fourth straight defeat suffered by the Irish squad. Georgetown stepped onto the field ready to play, putting the ball past Short and the Irish defense less than two minutes into the first half.

"The loss wasn't because of any one thing," said Short. "Connor LaHose finished a great play to score for us. But when you push so many players up front at the end to try to score and tie the game, you end up giving a little bit on defense."

Irish defender Jeff Boehling headed the ball into the net from five yards out, off a corner kick from midfielder Kevin Shaw at the 1 minute 45 second mark.

"Georgetown has a lot of really good athletes," said Short. "They were able to finish their chances and score against us. Our defense had a breakdown."

The score remained stuck at 1-0 until midway through the second half when the Hoyas took advantage of an empty net to increase their lead.

Midfielder Kenny Owens, the leading scorer for the Hoyas, put a shot on the right side of the goal, but it was deflected on a diving save from Short. Hoya midfielder Mert Incekarra then received the ball on the left side and booted in an easy shot on the open goal.

"We had chances to score but we didn't finish any of them," said Short. "We were giving ourselves great opportunities to tie the game but we just couldn't score."

The Hoyas put the game away with less than five minutes remaining when midfielder Truls Engerbretsen scored from nine yards out on a shot to the left corner of the net.

The Irish failed to tie the game, despite a handful of close shots.

"The playoffs really start for us on Wednesday," said Irish captain and goalkeeper Gerick Short. "We need to win to keep playing. We know what we have to do."

Dusbabek goal fails to prevent stalemate with Miami

By MATT OLIVA
Sports Writer

Two wins this weekend would have put the Irish back on track. After beginning the season with a 1-5 record, Notre Dame recorded its first CCHA win of the season with an impressive 5-2 victory over Miami on Thursday night. The Irish looked as if they would repeat their success against the Redhawks again on Friday night, taking a 2-1 lead in the third period while playing strong defensively.

Unfortunately for the Irish, Miami tied the game at two goals when a loose puck in front of the net slid under the glove of Irish goalie Tony Zasowski. Neither team was able to put the puck in the net in the five-minute overtime period and the game ended in a 2-2 tie. With the tie, the Irish record stays at 2-5-1 overall, and 1-4-1 in conference.

Miami got on the board first when freshman defenseman Matt Medvecz beat Zasowski from the top of the left circle. The goal came 11:34 into the first period goal all season, as Miami had a few more chances later in the period, including a short-handed 2-1 breakaway near the net.

The first period was disappointing once again for the Irish, as they few scoring opportunities. The Irish managed seven shots in the period, and still have scored only one first-period goal all season, against the Union Flying Dutchmen, while giving up their eighth to Redhawks.

In the second period Notre Dame came out and looked like a whole different team. Irish captain Ben Simon and center Ryan Dolder each had a good short-handed chance about 10 minutes into the period. The Irish went on a power play that was previously 0-for-4 on the game.

After a scramble in front of the net, the loose puck slid under Zasowski and Redhawk forward Mike Glumac was credited with the unassisted goal. The goal would not have even been ruled a shot if Zasowski had not stopped it. EUGENIA LAST

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1999

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: Marcia Wallace, Lyle Lovett, Fernando Valenzuela, Betsy Palmer, Barbara Bosson. Happy Birthday: Take a progressive position all that you do this year and you will be heard. Your mind is moving at a reason and you will not be able to get your plans for later use. If you take the time to get into some of the new people that crop into your life, you won't be left out. Your numbers: 7, 18, 24, 36.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You need to get serious about your financial situation. Discuss your career goals with superiors. If you don't get a favorable response, be prepared to move to an area that you feel is more suitable for your own business.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't question your lover's instincts and depend on outsiders. Creative pursuits will pay off. Working together will enhance your relations.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are strong-willed, powerful and always reaching for a goal. You're not on the same wavelength as your mate anymore. Give-and-take has to be your going rule. Do you want this union to last?

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Ask for help. Someone will surely believe in your ideas. Don't trust in your partner to understand your motivations. You will have to trust your instincts and depend on outsiders.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Expect to have problems with those you live with. It might be better to settle the situation. You'll have to be patient if you want things to be better.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You should be considering your options. You can pick up added skills. Travel should be a consideration, especially if it will help you promote the work you do. This is not the time to set back and work. DOG.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can make financial gains if you get involved in stocks but beware, as the stock market usually has a close correlation with other people's problems. Don't be surprised if some hold you back.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Partnerships will need nurturing. Be honest about your feelings. You're not on the same wavelengths as your mate anymore. Give-and-take has to be your going rule. Do you want this union to last?

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You can make money by handling finances. You are in a good position to make a safe investment. Your tendency to gamble may pose a problem if you are tempted by risky ventures.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You need to organize and get everyone working together to enhance your financial potential. You are in a perfect frame of mind to attract potential money.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You have a hard time getting those you low down in the country to think and help. Your ideas may be good, but taking others into helping you pay for the changes will be another story.

PIECES (Feb. 19-March 20): Involvement in cultural groups will enable you to meet others and you can apply or apply to projects in progress. Make sure you handle this bib or correspondence.

Irish men take first at Big East Championships

By KATHLEEN O'BRIEN
Associate Sports Editor

It took three tries, but the Irish men’s cross country team knocked off its conference archrival, the Georgetown Hoyas, to win its second Big East Championship in three seasons.

Junior Ryan Shay paced the Irish as he has all season, capturing the Big East individual title in an 8K time of 24 minutes 22 seconds. Shay aced out Providence’s Keith Kelly for the title, passing him in the final 800-1000 meters of the race. His time was the third-fastest in course history.

“Ryan ran very patiently and intelligently,” said head coach Joe Piane. “He waited until the last 800 to 1000 meters to pounce.”

Piane was named Big East Coach of the Year for his coaching this year’s Big East champs.

Piane is in his 25th year as head cross country and track coach of the Irish.

“The third time was a charm,” said Piane.

Tenth-ranked Notre Dame had lost to seventh-ranked Georgetown twice previously this season, but managed to out-run Georgetown Friday. The Irish scored 43 points in the meet, with Georgetown, Villanova and Providence fighting for the runner-up position. Georgetown wound up capturing second with 57 points, 448-ranked Villanova was third with 60 points, and defending champion Providence scored 61.

“It was just a matter of us believing in our ability,” Watson said. “We had some doubters, but we knew we could do it. It was a matter of execution.”

Watson placed third overall in the meet and second for the Irish.

“I was probably for me the most exciting athletic moment of my career,” Watson said. “That’s by far the biggest thing we’ve done since I’ve been here.”

The Irish depended on the solid performances of their third through seventh runners in capturing the title. They had six runners finish in the top 20, all six finishing within 1:15 of one another. Four Irish athletes garnered All-Big East honors — Shay, sophomore Luke Watson, senior Ryan Maxwell and sophomore Marc Szoskowi.

Seniors John Dudley, Sean McManus and Mike Grieske rounded out the scoring runners for the Irish.

Piane considered the race to be the team’s best performance yet this year.

“Absolutely, but I’m telling you this,” Piane said. “To a man, they can run better. I think we can run even better over 10,000-meters.”

The Irish will rest for two weeks before heading to the NCAA District IV championships in Terre Haute, Ind. If they place first or second, they will receive an automatic bid to the NCAA championships Nov. 22. Otherwise, they should be able to see IRISH/page 20
