Countdown to Ex Corde Ecclesiae enters final week

A decade of debate culminates with vote on Catholic education

By TIM LOGAN

A landmark moment in the future of Notre Dame, Saint Mary’s and the rest of American Catholic higher education is one week away.

Next Wednesday, the National Conference of Catholic Bishops will likely vote on the implementation of Ex Corde Ecclesiae, Pope John Paul II’s apostolic constitution on the role of Catholic universities in the Church. This vote will be the culmination of a decade-long debate over a proposal which many educators fear will inhibit academic freedom and institutional autonomy at the 235 Catholic colleges and universities in the United States.

The proposal, Much of Ex Corde Ecclesiae, Latin for “From the Heart of the Church,” deals with campus ministry programs and the role of universities in Catholicism. Debate, however, has raged over more controversial elements of the document that would give local bishops more direct control over schools in their dioceses.

The most contentious element involves approval of Catholic theologians by their local bishops. The proposal would require that “Catholics who teach the theological disciplines in a Catholic university are required to have a mandate granted by a competent ecclesiastical authority.” That authority, for Notre Dame, Saint Mary’s and the other three Catholic colleges in the Fort Wayne-South Bend diocese, would be Bishop John D’Arcy.

It is the jurisdictional, legalistic tone of this proposal and the implication that academics would be subject to approval by outside influence of the bishop that worries educators.

“The mandate is an instrument, however ineffective, to control what is taught and written,” wrote University president Father Edward Malloy and Father Donald Monan, chancellor of Boston College, in The Jan. 30 issue of “America,” a Jesuit journal of opinion. “The authority competent to give, deny or remove the mandate is legally and organizationally external to the university and its governance.”

Others, however, claim the mandate is necessary to correct a shift away from official Catholic teachings in some theology classrooms and, furthermore, would aid in the education of faith on Catholic campuses.

“No school can be more Catholic than its faculty,” Notre Dame law professor Gerard Bradley told the Knights of Columbus in March. “I think that this would foster an opportunity for students to look to...”

Malloy addresses University relationship with Observer

By JOSHUA BOURGEOIS

University president Father Edward Malloy spoke Tuesday to the Faculty Senate regarding The Observer’s advertising policy, publishing Board of Trustees and Fellows minutes, hiring more faculty and the Generations campaign.

In his annual address and question/answer session with the senate, Malloy responded to questions about a policy set forth by the University, banning The Observer from running advertisements from the Gay and Lesbian Alumni of Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s (GALA-NMSC).

“The Observer is an official University organization, and the University is its publisher,” Malloy responded to a prepared question. “As its publisher, we will not allow GALA ads to be accepted or printed.”

Malloy explained that the University is The Observer’s publisher because of its relationship as a collector of student fees and owner of its leased office space.

Malloy described the actions that the University takes in resolving problems with The Observer, mentioning that “informal communication is important.”

He suggested that The Observer’s editorial board and members of the office of the president should meet and discuss policies for the paper.

However, Malloy did not want a formal policy to be derived.

“I believe it would be a mistake to have a formal written ad policy because it would not be able to cover everything,” Malloy said.

Malloy said that “as long as the student editors and writers see their work professionally, they will have full academic freedom in editorial content.” He drew a distinction, however, between advertisements and copy, stating that he does not believe advertisements qualify as editorial content.

In other Senate news:

Malloy addressed the request that the minutes from the Board of Trustees and Fellows meetings be published. Malloy disagreed, saying he thought that all information is released when necessary.

Spread the word

This is the most loathed space in the entire paper.

For those of us who put out this fine, independent publication every day, one of the most feared words is "Will you write tomorrow's Inside Column?"

Why do people hate to write? Are we afraid to tell people what we're thinking, even if it goes against the "safe" route?

Does no one have anything to say anymore? Have we lost our love of the written word, of the dedication of the readers who come back, that comes with speaking one's mind? Do we no longer feel the need for immediate response? Don't let us become reduced to a "whenever" society: a community of readers whose only response is the one-sentence cop-out. But I mean, who puts bans on freedom of speech? We all know that sort of thing.

Is there something there; one-word cop-out.

Once we say that there's a topic too insignificant to share one's thoughts, we put limits on cant to share one's thoughts, we put limits on our freedom of speech? Write about it. There's something there; something we've come across.

The written word, of the community of readers whose only response is the "whatever" society: a community of readers whose only response is the one-sentence cop-out.

As I said, we all know that sort of thing.

Lincoln, Neb. University of Nebraska police arrested a ticket taker during Saturday's home game against Texas A&M University after an officer saw a man pay him to let about 15 people in without tickets. University Police Sgt. Myl Bushing said.

Roger Baskerville was arrested for theft of services and released on a bond of 10 percent of $500, or $50.

Bushing said University police received a tip Nov. 2 that Baskerville was allowing fans into the stadium in return for cash. During Saturday's game, a UNI police officer saw a man shake hands with Baskerville, apparently making some kind of exchange and enter Memorial Stadium, Bushing said.

The man was stopped by police just after entering. Bushing said. He told them he paid Baskerville $100 to let him and 15 friends into the game.

He also told police one of Baskerville's friends told him he could pay his way into the stadium and that Baskerville had been making money to let fans into football home games for about 10 years, Bushing said.

When arrested, Baskerville told police he started taking cash from fans about three years ago, Bushing said.

Tickets cost $40 for Saturday's game against Texas A&M. Students pay half of regular ticket cost.

Athletic Ticket Office Manager John Anderson said he had heard of ticket takers at other universities accepting cash to let fans into sporting events but none at UNI. "That's just totally wrong," Anderson said. "It's one of the things of hiring people. You just have to trust them to do their job."

Anderson said Baskerville did not work for his office and that he did not know about the situation before Monday.

Butch Hug, director of events for the Athletic Department and Baskerville's boss, was out of town Monday and could not be reached for comment.

Officers watched Baskerville during the home football game against the University of Kansas on Nov. 2 just after receiving the tip but did not see any wrongdoing, Bushing said.

Wisconsin gets diversity grant

MADISON, Wis. Ameritech has given the University of Wisconsin System a $1.5 million grant to support efforts to diversify the school's student body and faculty, university officials announced Friday. "I think this news is very exciting," said Senior Vice President for Administration David Ollin. "This is one of the largest grants we have ever received." This grant is the second UW has received from Ameritech; the first amounted to $500,000 and was allocated to build the student information Web page. Ollin said the UW System submitted Plan 2008 — a strategy to increase the number of minority students, faculty and staff at the university — to the consortium grant money. "Ameritech was very interested in helping to create a diverse learning atmosphere and accepted our proposal," he said. Plan 2008 was adopted by the Board of Regents this year. According to Lyall's report, the goal of the plan is to see significant changes in the state by expanding educational opportunities. The UW System's Multicultural Information Center, housed at UW-Milwaukee, will receive $300,000 to increase diversity on all 26 Wisconsin state campuses.

The First Lady pointed to women as being key in legislation enacted during the Clinton Administration which impacted women and families. "Because women spoke out, five million needy children have health insurance who were previously uninsured," she said. "Because women spoke out, the Family and Medical Leave Act was passed and extended to 20 million Americans."

Critics have said that women's increased involvement in politics has resulted in the " feminization of politics," Fishman said. The First Lady said this description is inaccurate. Women speaking out on issues "dear to our hearts" has resulted in what she called "an important change in the political landscape of America."

"I think a more accurate description is that we are working for the humanization of politics," said Clinton. The need for women's voices to be heard in political issues, she said, will draw greater attention to needs of America in future. "In an America that truly valued families, we would have an expanded Family Leave Law," she said. "No American father or mother should have to choose between a job and leaving the child they love."

Clinton cited increased funding for education initiatives as an issue affecting Americans. "In an America that truly valued families, we would ensure that every child get a world-class education by reducing class sizes and increasing accountability," she said, adding that the Republicans are currently reengaging on their promise to vote to fund classroom initiatives to reduce class sizes and put qualified teachers in classrooms. The First Lady signaled out the need for increased gun control laws as a way for America to show it values families. "We need to keep guns out of the hands of criminals and pass sensible gun laws," she said. "The gun lobby is calling the shots in Congress. It's time to say enough is enough, let's pass the legislation that the President is sending to Congress."

more of the faculty as role models.
The mandate comes out of the 1983 Code of Canon Law, a document which acts as the foundation for several debated clauses in the proposed, Canon 812 prescribes the mandate. Thus, it is not new, it simply represents the enforcement of Canon laws already in existence.

The proposal makes other stipulations about the makeup of Catholic universities. It requires the majority of a school’s board of trustees to be Catholic and that “to the extent possible, those committed to the witness of the faith will constitute a majority of the faculty.” The document also requires that the presidents of Catholic colleges and universities be Catholic themselves.

At the same time, the implementation document repeats Ex Corde Ecclesiae’s stated respect for free intellectual inquiry.

“This fundamental purpose and institutional autonomy must be respected and promoted by all, so that the university may effectively carry out its mission of freely searching for the truth,” the draft reads.

History of Ex Corde Ecclesiae

Balancing institutional autonomy, academic freedom and fidelity to Church teachings has caused this draft document to be a long time in the making.

The debate about the role of universities in the Church can be traced back to 1967, when a group of Catholic university presidents and administrators, led by University president emeritus Father Theodore Hesburgh, drafted the “Land O’Lakes” statement. This document established the more independent spirit of Catholic colleges and universities that has guided many of them ever since.

“The Catholic university must have a true autonomy and academic freedom in the face of authority of whatever kind, lay or clerical, external to the academic community itself,” it read.

As the years went by, some church leaders felt the universities were drifting too far from the fold of the Church, and from its teachings.

Pope John Paul II told an assembly of Catholic educators in 1979 that they should adhere to the magisterium, or teaching, of the Church at their universities and truly manifest the Catholic nature of their institutions, for this is their lasting identity.

“The term ‘Catholic’ will never be a mere label, either added or dropped according to the pressures of various forces,” he said.

Over the next decade, Vatican officials laid the groundwork for Ex Corde Ecclesiae, producing the revised Code of Canon Law, drafting the “Proposed Schema for a Pontifical Document on Catholic Universities,” and meeting with university presidents, including Malloy, on the apostolic constitution itself.

In 1990, Pope John Paul II issued Ex Corde Ecclesiae, and national bishops conferences established systems to implement it. The U.S. implementation subcommittee, chaired by Bishop John Leibrecht of Springfield-Cape Girardeau, Mo., debated and met with educators until 1996, when they brought a proposal to the General Assembly for a vote.

The 1996 proposal, which enjoyed strong support among educators, did not include Canon 812.

Nor did it mandate that a majority of faculty be “faithful Catholics.”

The NCB voted 224-6 in favor of the draft, but it was modified by Cardinal Pio Laghi, head of the Vatican Congregation for Catholic Education, who asked that more juridical elements, including the mandate for theologians, be included.

The NCB subcommittee returned to the drawing board, this time with a group of bishops who specialized in Canon law consulting.

The draft they issued for consideration in 1998 contained many of the juridical elements requested by Laghi, but drew fire from educators, including Malloy and Monan.

“NCB approval of this draft document would be profoundly detrimental to Catholic higher education,” wrote the two, arguing that its legalistic tone would destroy the healthy dialogue that exists between bishops and university presidents.

Concern focused on the mandate for theologians and on requirements that Catholic presidents take an oath of fidelity to the Church and that the presidents and a majority of the trustees and faculty should be “faithful Catholics.”

After further discussion, the Leibrecht’s implementation committee produced a revised document, issued in September. This new document toned down some of the most juridical language, but still contains the requirement for a majority of the trustees and faculty to be “faithful Catholics.”

Whether that criticism is shared by the bishops will be discovered Wednesday.

Affirmative action to end in Florida universities, contracts

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. Gov. Jeb Bush signed an executive order Tuesday wiping out race and ethnicity as factors in Florida university admissions, banning racial quotas and sanctions in state contracting decisions. The Republican governor said his program "transcends" affirmative action and would unite Floridians. Bush's plan guarantees university admission to the top 20 percent of the state's high school seniors, adds $20 million to the state's financial aid budget and makes Florida campuses open for recruiting minority businesses to be certified to work across the state. Some of the proposals must be approved by the Legislature. "We can increase opportunity and diversity in the state's universities and in state contracting without using policies that discriminate or that pit one racial group against another," Bush said at a news conference.

France grants unmarried couples new rights

PARIS France's Constitutional Council on Tuesday approved a law granting extensive legal rights to unmarried couples, including gay. After a year of huddled debate, the National Assembly approved the law in October by a vote of 315-249. Conservative lawmakers had asked the nine-member constitutional watchdog to decide whether the law violated the constitution, in which case it would have died. The law will take effect in the coming months after President Jacques Chirac signs it as a symbolic gesture. The law would affect the 4.4 million heterosexual couples who live together but are not married. The number of gay couples is unknown.

U.S. government officials carry a case containing the flight data recorder from EgyptAir flight 990. The recorder was discovered early Tuesday morning by the U.S.S. Grapple. It is shown above at Andrews Air Force base where it was flown in for inspection by U.S. government officials.

Black box found in wreckage

NEWPORT, R.I. Nine days after EgyptAir Flight 990 went down, the banged-up flight data recorder — minus its "pinge" — was raised from the ocean floor by a robot Tuesday and rushed to Rhode Island for analysis. The National Transportation Safety Board said it was extracting data from the recorder Tuesday evening. A statement from the board had no comment on the quality of the data recovered as of Tuesday evening.

The minivan-size robot Deep Drone stumbled across the denuded box amid wreckage 250 feet below the surface. It was missing its pinger, the transmitter that emits a signal to help investigators find the recorder after an accident. The tape could provide the best evidence of what caused the Boeing 767 to plunge into the sea Oct. 31 off the Massachusetts island of Nantucket, killing 217 people aboard. "It will paint a picture of the crash moments before the accident," NTSB Chairman James Hall said. "In any aviation accident investigation, the most important information comes from the recorders."

The flight recorder captures information from 65 systems on the jet, telling investigators such things as the plane's altitude, speed, spin, roll, when electrical power was cut off and how the autopilot functioned. The NTSB said it can record more than 150 individual data items. Deep Drone continued to search for the other "black box," the cockpit voice recorder, which contains tape of conversations between crew members as well as discussions with air traffic controllers and any other sounds in the cockpit.

As the search continued, a Coast Guard helicopter flew over the crash site and dropped flowers that had been left at a memorial service Sunday by grieving family members. Flight 990 took off from New York's Kennedy Airport for Cairo and fell 33,000 feet into the Atlantic about 60 miles south of Nantucket.

No distress call went out from the crew.

Ehud, Barak disagree on resolutions

PARIS Israeli Prime Minister Yasser Arafat and Ehud Barak entered a Paris conference hall Tuesday shaking hands vigorously, but their cordiality quickly dissolved into a dispute over language in U.N. resolutions on territory claimed by both sides. Palestinian leader Arafat gave the more strongly worded speech, telling socialist delegates he expects Israel to live up to past commitments, and to respect international law. "Our Palestinian Arab people are still knocking on the door of international legality," he said. "International legality is pivotal in the search for a just and comprehensive peace."

It was a clear reference to Barak's contention, repeated several times over the past two days, that U.N. resolutions calling for Israel to return captured lands "have a different context" when referring to the Palestinians than when referring to Arab nations with recognized borders. Barak has been insisting that Israel's security concerns must be taken into account when determining how much land should be given back to the Palestinians. The Palestinians, for their part, interpret U.N. Resolutions 242 and 338 as calling for Israel to return all occupied lands.

It wasn't clear whether Barak and Arafat discussed the issue during a 20-minute private meeting Tuesday on the sidelines of the Socialist gathering.

Jordan weighed in Tuesday, with its ambassador to Israel, Omar a-Nabei, rejecting Barak's comments on the resolutions. He said they apply to all the territories Israel captured in 1967. A-Nabei told Israel radio that "242 and 338 includes all land occupied in 1967. International law."

Barak did not refer to the issue in his speech to the 21st Socialist International Congress in Paris, but gave an emotional explanation at a news conference later. "The Middle East is still a rough neighborhood," he said. "We can't act as if we were basking over Western Europe."

He again enumerated the threats he sees Israel facing: a wave of Islamic fundamentalism.
Hesburgh up for Congressional Gold Medal

By LAURA SELLINGER
Now Writer

Congressman Tim Roemer introduced legislation in the U.S. House of Representatives last May to award a Congressional Gold Medal to Father Theodore Hesburgh. Hesburgh, who served as president of Notre Dame from 1952 to 1972, received the honor in recognition of his outstanding contributions to American society in civil rights, higher education and the Catholic church.

"Awarded once a year, the medal is one of the highest honors the federal government can bestow upon a civilian, and it is by no means routine," said Dennis Brown, associate director of public relations. Only about 250 Congressional Gold Medals have been awarded since the accolade was first presented to George Washington in 1776.

The bill, S-1332, was voted and unanimously approved by the House of Representatives on Oct. 12 and is currently awaiting passage in the Senate. It has 14 cosponsors and requires a total of 67 for passage. As a result, other senators are being asked to cosponsor the legislation to award Hesburgh the medal.

"The gold medal is a fitting tribute to Father Hesburgh. His leadership has inspired generations of Americans: as a leader for civil rights, an educator and as a humanist," said Roemer. "He has had several outstanding careers, both in public service and as an educator. Despite his retirement, Father Hesburgh continues to make valuable contributions to the United States and the global world."

Having held 15 presidential appointments, Hesburgh's involvement in national and global affairs ranges far and wide. Hesburgh was a charter member of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights from its creation in 1957 and served as the commission's chairperson from 1964 to 1966. He was present at the long-awaited passage of the Omnibus Bill of Civil Rights in 1964, which is one of his greatest missions in life.

"It is always nice to be recognized for awards, but the real distinction is trying to be good at what you do," he said. "For me, what is really important is to be a good priest and help others — that is the real test."

Hesburgh served the Catholic church from 1965 to 1970 as the permanent Vatican representative to the Atomic energy Agency in Vienna and as a member of the Holy See's delegation to the United Nations. For these services and others, the president is authorized to present a gold medal to Hesburgh on behalf of Congress. Specifically designed for Hesburgh by the Secretary of the Treasury, the gold medal will feature emblems and inscriptions symbolizing his outstanding contributions.

"I believe all the major items that are pondered are brought forward at the appropriate time. The lack of publishing allows discussion to occur better," Malloy said.

Malloy added that the lack of requiring the publishing of the minutes at a private institution is an advantage over public institutions.

"There has been a lot of progress in hiring more faculty," said Malloy in response to a question about increasing faculty by 150.

According to Malloy, the increase in the endowment has allowed for more endowed professorships, more professors in new areas of study and the building of more office space and labs.

Malloy said he hopes that new faculty can be hired, but he thinks that there are other resources needed for hiring faculty.

"All we need is to raise more money," he said. "I want us to have the faculty size that is appropriate for the school." When I think of more faculty, I think of more building space and more money for labs and research."

Sweatshop worker shares experiences

By NORIEE GILLESPIE

When a recruiting company came to Chie Abad's hometown in the Philippines, she thought that employment in East Saipan would grant her the opportunity to exercise her rights as a human being. Gathering the customary $2,000 dollars necessary to buy a one-year work permit in the U.S., Commonwealth, Abad boarded the plane to what she thought was a new beginning.

But after arriving and boarding the plane, Abad found she was flying straight out of a nightmare. For the women of the factory in the living quarters, the situation was no better.

"In the barracks, we lived inside barbed wire and armed guards," Chie Abad said. "I knew I had taped it," she said. "I did not admit it right away." She remained silent until Jan. 13, when Abad was fired.

Global Exchange announced a $3 billion class action lawsuit against 21 major retailers. Nordstrom, J. Crew, Gymboree, Polo Ralph Lauren, Donna Karan, Van Heusen and Dress Barn, Inc. were named in the suit for violating the Fair Labor Standards Act in East Saipan.

The lawsuit was followed by action from the public. Employment Commissioner, who filed suit with the corporation for pregnancy discrimination and violation of the Civil Rights Act of 1961. Within a month, the corporation paid over $75,000 to 24 women who had been fired because they got pregnant on the job.

Abad said, "I helped these pregnant women. I was fired, but I am not defeated." Abad will speak today at 4:30 p.m. Hesburgh Center Auditorium.

JESUS’ GENDER

Troubled by decreasing credibility, a demand for high profits and the pressures of a 24-hour news cycle, the media must listen to their critics and their audience. Geneva Overholser said during a lecture Tuesday night.

Overholser, a syndicated columnist and former editor of The Des Moines Register, explained that newspapers and other news outlets are important to their communities. The media mustshed their arrogance and serve the people they work for, she said.

Giding several studies of citizen reaction to media, Overholser noted that 38 percent of Americans polled recently said media is hurting democracy.

Overholser explained that many sources of media criticism exist, including magazines and organizations that study journalistic behavior. She then cited four problems that keep criticism from being effective, including an uneven distribution of it. Of the 1,500 daily newspapers in the United States, only 40 have ombudsman positions.

Overholser said, “Each community needs a way to speak to the power that is held within (the media),” she said. “We are too kind about this. They know we’re powerful and influential.”

A good starting place, Overholser said, would be a national organization that makes recommendations on press accountability. She explained that the media need to be open to adoption of an industry-wide standard of behavior.

The second problem stems from the current economic situation of the media. As newsrooms become incorporated and businesses dominate top management of news organizations, the emphasis on journalistic strengths shifts to a hunger for profits, Overholser said. She said readers would happily ally with journalists in fighting these profit pressures if they understood the problem.

“We report on other business more avidly than we do on our own,” she said. “Readers are ignorant of our difficulties because we aren’t telling them.”

Overholser also criticized the lack of media criticism coming out of journalism schools. She pointed to the medical and legal professions, which have close ties with their academic community, as examples of how the two should work together.

“For some strange reason, journalism educators and journalists practice in communities are quite estranged from each other. Certainly we on the practitioner side need useful research in an accessible form,” she said. “We are too troubled to waste such a promising resource.”

Overholser, who served for three years as ombudsman at The Washington Post, also said that journalists aren’t listening to their audience.

“The fact is, there’s a great deal of unhappiness,” she said. “We need more thoughtful ways to let the citizen’s voice be heard.”

Overholser said journalists have relied too long on old tenets of their industry, including the notion that bad news sells.

“We overemphasize the negative so much,” she said. “Well, we have ridden that horse until it’s dead on the ground.”

Overholser added that listening to the readers should never turn into pandering.

“They want us to be the professionals. We can learn enormously from asking questions, but that’s not the same as holding a finger to the wind,” she said. “You can’t edit a newspaper the way you would design a product to please someone. You can’t edit a broadcast the way you would design a shoe to fit someone.”

Overholser also asked audience members to contact editors when they feel the media has done something wrong.

“Do not just grumble about it,” she said. “Really let your newspaper know about it. I think it’s really a part of citizens’ responsibility to make this a two-way discussion with newspapers.”

Overholser is the 1999 Journalist-in-Residence at Notre Dame. Her visits to campus are supported by the John S. and James L. Knight Foundation in conjunction with the University’s new John W. Galvagni Program in Journalism, Ethics and Democracy.

Supreme Court weighs use of mandatory student fees

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — If Tuesday's courtroom session was an indication, the Supreme Court is finding it hard to decide whether public universities and colleges across America can keep using money from mandatory student fees to finance controversial campus groups.

As the lively, hour-long argument careened from one constitutional consideration to another, Justice Antonin Scalia pondered aloud, "I just wonder if universities are going to crumble if they can't do this."

Perhaps not but the court's decision, expected by late June, could change the way public universities and colleges operate.

Susan Ullman, a Wisconsin assistant attorney general, urged changing a long tradition. Creating a forum where many voices can be heard is "a legitimate function for any university," she contended.

But Jordan Lorence, a lawyer representing University of Wisconsin students who challenged their school's fee system, said his clients were forced to support groups they found objectionable.

"Students have a First Amendment right not to support," he said. "The university has a constitutional duty to respect the right of conscience of the students."

If the objecting students win, state-run schools would either have to stop using the fees or create student groups or figure out some way to exempt some students.

The justices took turns peppering both lawyers with dozens of questions and offered little insight into how they might vote.

Justice David H. Souter at one point noted that most University of Wisconsin student groups finance themselves through dues and other kinds of fund-raising. He told Ullman that fact undercut "your argument ... you can't have this kind of speech in the university setting" without using student activity fees.

But Souter later appeared to defend a university's right to say "we think a babel of voices is a good thing."

Justice Anthony M. Kennedy seemed concerned about several aspects of the university's student fee system but also told Lorence the objecting students are "asking us to do something that is against the tradition ... of many centuries ... a tradition of diverse speech."

Three previous Supreme Court rulings are likely to play a role in the justices' deliberations.

In 1977, the court said public universities and colleges cannot create a "public forum" for student or faculty political advocacy through mandatory dues.

In 1995, the justices prohibited Karl Stouffer from using portions of objecting lawyers' mandatory dues for political lobbying.

Resolution of the Wisconsin dispute will not affect private schools because the Constitution's First Amendment, which guarantees freedom of speech, protects speech only against government actions.

Texan Baptists debate belief for wives to ‘submit graciously’

Associated Press

EL PASO, Texas — Texas' Southern Baptists on Tuesday repudiated the denomination's call for women to "submit graciously" to their husbands.

The Baptist General Convention of Texas is the largest state organization (2.7 million members) within the nation's 15.7 million-member Southern Baptist Convention and sends it millions of dollars each year. But the state organization is more moderate than the national one.

It is the first state affiliate of the Southern Baptist Convention to reject the "submit graciously" stance.

"The Bible doesn't teach that the husband is the general and the wife is a private, but yet that's how it gets interpreted," said the Rev. Charles Wade, the executive director of the Texas group.

All but a couple dozen among about 2,200 delegates to the Texas group's annual meeting voted in favor of affirming the Baptist Faith and Message Statement of 1963 — without an amendment added in 1998. The amendment marked the first change in the statement of beliefs by the Southern Baptists in 35 years. It defines marriage exclusively in heterosexual terms and says that husbands and wives, while equal before God, have different roles.

"A wife is to submit graciously to the servant leadership of her husband, even as the church willingly submits to the headship of Christ," it says.

During a brief debate on the proposal, only two representatives spoke in favor of following the national group's lead. Paul Taylor, representing a church in Mauriceville, said he believed the amendment "speaks to the family."

However, the Rev. Clyde Glazener, the newly elected president of the Texas organization, and Wade had urged Texans to ignore the amendment.

Sun storm forecasts potential danger for satellites, power

WASHINGTON

The sun will greet the new millennium by turning angry, erupting into the most active part of its 11-year cycle with outbursts of energy that can threaten satellites, electrical power grids and spacewalking astronauts. Officials at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said Tuesday the approaching solar storm could be more destructive than previous storms because the Earth has more powerful grids and satellites that might be affected.

"There are bigger power grids, drawing more power now so the power companies are more vulnerable," said D. James Baker, the NOAA administrator. There are also 600 satellites, more than ever in history, that also might be affected, said Baker.

This year, though, the power companies and satellite operators will be better prepared than ever, he said. These satellites, operated by NOAA, NASA and the Air Force, are positioned in orbit to warn about hazardous energy bursts coming from the sun.

One satellite, orbiting a million miles from Earth, will detect a rise in charged solar particles and give an hour's warning.

Baker said that will be enough time for power companies to protect their electrical grids. Satellite operators can protect orbiting equipment by turning off circuits to prevent shorts, by closing solar panels, or by turning away from the wave of energy.

He said operators are also prepared for "ghost signals," sporadic electronic surges that may prompt the satellite to take an unexpected action.

The hour's warning also would allow spacewalking astronauts to seek the safety of the shuttle or the space station. Baker said that NOAA also has created a new scale to precisely describe the intensity of solar storms. He said the new scales "are the Richter scales of space weather."

The scales will predict the intensity of three types of energy eruptions from the sun: geomagnetic, radiation and radio storms.

For geomagnetic storms, caused by ejections of charged masses from the corona of the sun, there is a scale of G1 to G5. The strongest, G5, warns of electromagnetic energy powerful enough to knock out power grids, disable satellites and cause auroras, the so-called northern lights, to be visible as far south as the equator.

For radiation storms, caused by bursts of protons and neutrons, the scale is from S1, the weakest, to S5. An S5 storm would be powerful enough to kill spacewalking astronauts, disrupt communications, cause memory losses in satellites and even disrupt navigation signals.

For radio storms, caused by bursts of radio frequency energy from the sun, the scale is from R3, the strongest, to R0. An R3 storm could cause a blackout of high frequency radio signals on the sunlit side of the Earth and disrupt low frequency navigation signals for hours.

The sun goes through an 11-year cycle, building up energy outbursts until it reaches what is called solar max. Baker said the solar activity is building now and should peak next year and then tail off.

During the last solar max, in 1989, a major geomagnetic storm sent a power surge through electrical lines, burning out switches and transformers and causing an extended black-out in Quebec. The same storm also knocked out some Defense Department satellites, said Baker.

A solar storm last year was blamed for the loss of a communications satellite that put 40 million pagers and phones out of business, Baker said.

He said the approaching solar max should be only "average," about like one in 1989. But this time, he said, most power companies and satellite operators are ready.

"They are better prepared now," said Baker. "If they get a warning, they are ready to act. An hour's warning is enough for the power guys."

The companies can reroute and reduce power, even go to a partial brown out to absorb any surge of energy from the sun, he said.

Amazon.com expands Web offerings

Associated Press

NEW YORK

Amazon.com, trying to build itself into an online superstore, is expanding into both software and hardware — real hardware, as in nails, sandpaper and power tools.

The offerings, which were announced Tuesday, will be available on the Web site starting Wednesday morning.

Selling only books ten months ago, Amazon has become an Internet shopping hub, offering music, video, auctions, toys, electronics and growing cards. At the end of September, Amazon was the most frequently visited shopping site on the Internet.

The new offerings are part of a rapid expansion that is costing the money-losing Web site hundreds of millions of dollars, prompting some analysts to question how long Amazon can continue to spill red ink. In its four years in business, Amazon has yet to report a profit.

"At the current level, we find it impossible to justify... an adequate return on the stock over the next twelve to eighteen months," wrote Tom Courtney, analyst for Banc of America.

The expansion includes a home improvement store, where Amazon will offer every nail, sandpaper and screwdriver to chainsaw, 1,000-pound table saw and concrete mixers. More than 750 manufacturers will sell their products on this site, including most of the well-known brands such as Stanley and Black & Decker.

To build its home improvement store, Amazon recently bought the catalog, online and distribution operations of Tool City, which joins a $145 billion market that is already served by Home Depot, Lowes and Canadian Tire.

In addition, Amazon plans to open into both the U.S. and South Korean markets, announced Tom Courtney in a research note.

Korean vets want compensation

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Thousands of Korean veterans who fought alongside American soldiers in the Vietnam War are seeking compensation from the U.S. government for exposure to Agent Orange.

Claiming their plans have been ignored, millions of dollars, the veterans have filed a $1 billion lawsuit in Philadelphia federal court.

Payments to Australians, Canadians and New Zealanders, who served in far fewer numbers than Koreans, were included in an out-of-court settlement of a suit by U.S. veterans against Dow Chemical and six other Agent Orange manufacturers, but efforts to include Koreans were rejected by the court.

The pending suit against the U.S. government, which demands death and disability benefits for some 30,000 Korean veterans, also lists the South Korean government and its National Assembly as plaintiffs.

The government of President Kim Young Sam, in disagreement with National Assembly members on how to pursue the case, also is not an acknowledged party in the U.S. lawsuit.

Instead, the government is trying a diplomatic path of seeking discussions with the U.S. government over obligations to the 320,000 Koreans who fought the North Vietnamese, more than any other nationality except Americans and South Vietnamese.

So far, no negotiations have taken place.

The U.S. government has filed a motion to dismiss the Philadelphia suit, claiming it is a political matter and challenging the jurisdiction of the court.

Michael Choi, a Korean American attorney in Philadelphia representing the plaintiffs, said if the case fails, lawyers plan to take it to the International Court of Justice.

Some Korean Embassy officials said they were reluctant to comment on the lawsuit and had nothing to do with a press conference Tuesday by law and a number of South Korean National Assembly.

The assembly member, Rep. Se Jeik Park, said he will pursue the case on behalf of the National Assembly, which he said unanimously supports the legal action.

"Korean Vietnam War veterans suffered from illnesses related to exposure to Agent Orange used by U.S. forces," said Park, who is also a Vietnam veteran. He said Koreans consider America a great friend but feel they have been misunderstood by being excluded from discussions by the U.S. government.

Sensitivity of the issue to the South Korean government is increased by the U.S. and South Korean investigations into a recently reported mass killing by U.S. soldiers of civilians in the village of No Gun Ri in the early days of the Korean War.

Park said he also was in the United States to discuss eventual efforts to gain compensation for veterans in that case. The Associated Press in September reported that up to 400 civilians were killed by U.S. soldiers in the South Korean village. Some U.S. veterans acknowledged witnessing or participating in the killings.

More than 5,000 Koreans were killed and 150,000 injured in the war between 1964 and 1975. Lawyers said they are trying to document how much compensation was paid by the United States to Koreans.

Korean veterans also have filed a case in Philadelphia federal court, claiming millions of dollars in death and disability benefits.

"I think Koreans who fought the North Vietnamese should get the same support the Americans and South Vietnamese have been given," Park said. "We don't want them to be forgotten or not recognized for their sacrifice."
Making secure investments is important

Mereley a few years ago the Dow Jones Industrial Average (a measure of the New York stock market) broke its incredible record of 5,000. Champagne and ink were poured in gallons. Today it dances around 7,000.

Are stock prices for real? Are they just a bubble, inflated by optimism and/or greed? Are they fundamental prices, reflecting the real prospects of American firms?

Some people argue that the market is “efficient” by which they mean that prices capture so much information that they reflect reality. If people value oranges, apples or IBM at this price, that must be the fundamental price, determined by preferences and technology.

Then the price of a stock reflects its real value, the value of all the present and future profits of the firm put together. Those who believe this say that all the downsizing, reengineering, etc., of the last few years, people have been putting their money in the stock market. Demand has risen, and so have prices.

What explains the stock boom? Over the last few years, people have been putting their money in the stock market. Demand has risen, and so have prices.

So what is the stock market? It is supposed to be the place where companies transfer ownership of their assets.

I am writing in response to Ken Chardzio's letter to the editor on Tuesday, Nov. 9 about the quality of the fans at the University of Tennessee. I, along with nine of my friends, made the long trip to Knoxville this past weekend and our experiences can only be described as the polar opposite of Ken's. We were welcomed with open arms by every Tennessee fan we encountered. They were energetic, friendly, and overall great fans. I felt like I was at home the entire time and never received a harsh taunt or derogatory statement and in fact, this was the best experience I have ever had at an opponent's stadium. So please do not judge the Tennessee fans through what Ken experienced. As from our experience in Knoxville I could not even imagine this happening. When the legs of orange come rolling into South Bend on Nov. 5, 2003, get ready for proud, knowledgeable and friendly fans. Invite them over to have a drink and exchange a word on college football. In our road trip, we found them to be nothing less than great hosts.

Remember to honor the veterans you study in class

November traditionally marks the beginning of the holiday season. The day after Halloween, thoughts of Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year’s Eve begin, even subconsciously, to inundate our days. As holiday stress mounts, we tend to forget the true reasons for these holidays. The chance to reunite with family after being away for most of the year. The beauty of sharing special times with the ones we love. These times can be lost in a whirlwind of holiday stress.

This problem of miscalculated priorities during the holiday season has been documented many times. A friend of mine said her family declared they would never celebrate Christmas again after last year. It’s easy to forget the meaning of the holiday season, but sometimes it’s easier to forget some holidays exist at all. For example, Veterans Day is this Thursday. If it’s easy to forget the meaning of Christmas for a different religion’s comparative holiday, then it’s a breeze to forget holidays like Veterans Day.

This year’s Veterans Day will be indicative of every other holiday in the United States when we don’t get the true meaning of the day. Most of us won’t even notice.

Today’s Denver Post reported that, even in person, unreasonably warm weather, only a handful of people attended Saturday’s Veterans Day parade in Denver. The Veterans of Foreign Wars post in Fort Collins only knew of three events held to honor Fort Collins’ vets. All three were put together by the VFW. Fort Collins doesn’t even have a parade. Regional cities such as Colorado Springs and Pueblo do have parades, but they boast a larger population of war vets. Imagine being a vet and looking out on a parade that had even less vet crowd. It might sting a bit. Whenever the United States enters a foreign conflict, the U.S. military is sent in to implement the decisions of our government. These are real people sent to fight real wars. People die; they die on both sides of the battle. The Berlin Wall fell exactly 10 years ago today. As students today, we don’t remember the wall going up, or the war that was fought before. We don’t know the climate of a society that was sending its young men overseas to fight a war of epic proportions. As students now, we read about these events in textbooks and take notes about them in shifty letters. Try going out and asking that veteran about what they saw in war and what they felt. I bet their feelings won’t correspond with the empirical historical view we have been taught in our years of education.

This Thursday, even though school will still be in session, try and remember the hundreds of thousands whom have served in wars. If you’re sitting in a history class right now, would you be able to forget those wars instead of secretly learning about them.

Rogeau is wrong in Dubose shooting

This is in response to Vincent Rogeau’s letter stating that the killing of Demetrius Dubose was not justified. Rogeau states that the killing occurred at the law school, the lack of knowledge from which he argues his point is unapparent. I do not believe that when it became apparent that the officers could not easily subdue Dubose, the police would have "let him run away." For crying out loud, this guy is tough to fight off two police officers, high on multiple drugs, and is in a violent mood to boot! Any officer that is willing to just "let him run away" should be fired. If that was your neighborhood, with your family living there, would you want them to let him go with the idea that he eventually would have been caught?

Rogeau then states that they decided to use "deadly force," to subdue a man accused of a crime against property.

A crime against property was just where it began. When Dubose decided to resist arrest and assault the officers, it upped him to an official felon, with all the rewards that come with it. That is aside from his decision to use the illegal drug that got him into this situation to begin with. And just to clarify, when a police officer uses his gun, it is not for the purpose of threatening or subduing the target. The military uses ammunition that injures and doesn’t kill because it is in their benefit to wound enemy soldiers. Police officers use hollow point ammunition, not because it is cheap, but because when they use it, they want that person to go down. If it kills them, so be it. That is why it is the police officer’s last resort, because as soon as they have to use their firearm, that person is most likely going to die. Therefore, the fact that Dubose fired 12 times is inconsequential, because the decision has already been made. I also found Rogeau’s final comment regarding him chasing the killing of Dubose to the killing of a deer by a hunter offensive and impractical for his argument. He talks earlier in his letter about "living in a culture of death." In this not a perfect example, for who but a person culturally desensitized to death would compare the death of a human being with the hunting of an animal. In addition, it does not hold to his argument, for although most deer hunters are adept enough to kill a deer with less than 12 shots, they will fire as many times as necessary to make sure that they have successfully killed their target. They do not do this out of blood lust; they do it out of compassion for the animal that they have just killed. I am not implying that killing Dubose was the perfect solution. In a perfect world, things like this wouldn’t happen. I just wanted to say that in this case, it was the proper course of action for the officers. Dean Rogeau is simply living in a dream world with an argument like the one he presented, and the fallacies in his reasoning need to be pointed out.

‘Depressed New World’ comic is too depraved

I am writing in regard to the "Depressed New World" Cartoon for Nov. 2. I found it extremely distasteful. Payne Stewart died a week ago and already there is a cartoon in the fertilizer. He was an unbelievable golfer that did tragically die and it is completely unnecessary to remember him in such a way.

It could be like making a mockery of the recent Egyptian crash. There are many other topics and recent happenings that one could write about and I do not think someone's tragic death is one of them. Please use a little bit of taste and discretion next time.

ACE: Alliance for Catholic Education

Information meeting
Thursday at 7 p.m. in LaFortune Ballroom.

ACE is the place for students looking for post-graduate service opportunities.

By MIKE VANEGAS

ACE: Alliance for Catholic Education

Robin Williams is perhaps the most memorable teacher in Hollywood. His "Dead Poet's Society" was the first in a long series of teacher movies that allowed Hollywood to reach out to America and advocate good teaching.

Then there was Michelle Pfeiffer, who taught inner-city kids the value of the English language in "Dangerous Minds." Richard Dreyfuss followed Pfeiffer with his music teacher Glenn Holland in "Mr. Holland's Opus."

And most recently, Meryl Streep has taken the role of great teacher in her film, "Music of the Heart." But what does this say about teachers?

Essentially, these films tell America that great, inspiring teachers are rare, and that only the most gifted actor can conjure the spirits that go into being this quality of a teacher. Wait, press pause. There is a teaching force out there that also reinforces Catholic social doctrine. And no, it is not Wb h e p = Goldberg in "Sister Act 2."

It is the Alliance for Catholic Education (ACE), the Notre Dame program that sends graduates to disadvantaged Catholic schools throughout the southern United States to teach for two years, and earn a Master's degree in education.

Of course, ACE is not a new program that Notre Dame has just pulled out of its pocket. The program was established in 1994 by Father Timothy Doherty, and has grown each year since.

Aside from its own physical growth, however, there has been a transformation. With its three goals of developing professional educators, building a strong community life and guiding spiritual development, ACE has become a Catholic version of American popular culture. Just look at the goal of community life. Basically, it's MTV's "The Real World" without the 24-7 camera work. But MTV only sends its kids to cool places like London, Seattle or Hawaii. Where else is someone going to experience Real World, Corpus Christi?

"It's a couple of years where you can be with people who are kind of doing the same thing for a while," said Al Stashish, associate director of ACE and former ACE teacher. "It's a lot of fun ... in a place you probably wouldn't go to otherwise."

Stashish spent his two years in Baton Rouge, La., while others teach in places such Pensacola, Fla., Atlanta, Birmingham, Ala. and Tulsa, Okla. But wherever an ACE teacher may find himself or herself, the community life is typically one of the important and helpful aspects of learning how to be a teacher - aside from the actual classroom experience.

Doherty, also an associate director and former teacher, noted the "little things that just make a big difference." He especially remembers how after a rough day in the classroom, any fellow community members (four to six members typically live together) would make her a cup of tea. This heightened level of community development allowed for a deep understanding of friendship, perhaps deeper than the understanding allowed in the undergraduate setting at Notre Dame. But like "The Real World," members do leave. According to John Staud, director of ACE, about 10 percent of the ACE recruits leave the program before their two years are finished. But Staud recognizes ACE as a discerning tool in the service community. He realizes teaching is not for everyone, and throughout the application process and first year of teaching, others realize the same thing.

But this does not stop Staud from encouraging students from at least finding out what ACE is and whether or not it might be a beneficial alternative for a student's post-graduate plan.

And for the 90 percent of ACE recruits who do make it through their two year commitment, a retention rate that ranks at the top of Americorps' programs, positively influencing the lives of disadvantaged children is the greatest benefit of ACE.

"As a teacher, I can share my creativity, my enthusiasm, my love of life and my faith with my students," said MJ Adams, associate director and former ACE teacher in Charleston, S.C., in ACE's 1998 annual report. "I do so with the intent of touching their lives, just as my mentors have touched my own."

With the success of such teachers as Adams, ACE has no intentions of falling from the map any time soon. In fact, teachers are only made better by those who preceded them in the program. Stashish noted his feelings of apprehension knowing that several very good ACE teachers had taught the kids he would be teaching during his first year in ACE.

But this only points to the fact that ACE is an extraordinary level of Catholic education that turns disadvantaged schools into advantaged schools.

How many "Real World" cast members can make that claim? Fuccck! Probably not Janette Temping ... but, no.

The ACE associate director recognizes the faith of Al, Emer and Mary Jo.

Janelle Dombrow felt awfully upset when she ruined her father's 40th birthday. Admittedly non-athletic, Dombrow entered a bike race. While speeding with all her might toward the finish line, a brake malfunction sent the 11-year-old soaring on to the asphalt, landing her in the emergency room.

"I didn't cry from the pain at all," said Dombrow, who suffered a broken wrist from the accident. "When I did start to cry — the only time I cried over the whole thing at all — was when I realized it was my dad's birthday, and instead of enjoying it, he was spending it in the emergency room.

Her dad, however, didn't seem to mind.

"He kept telling me it was OK," Dombrow said.

This weekend, Dombrow and 179 of her senior classmates will open their campus to their fathers, to remember the scraped knees, broken wrists, school performances, tears, smiles and other milestones that helped them build their relationships.

Among the weekend's events, including Friday night's Casino/Dance Night at Union Station, Saturday's Heartland Tailgate and Sunday's Mass at the Church of Loretto, many of the women look forward to the chance to spend time together with their fathers more than the events. For many of them, it will be one of the last times in their college careers that they have the opportunity to spend a weekend with their father.

"My dad doesn't get out here much," Dombrow said. "It's kind of sad — your dad the one who gives you away, who watches you grow up. We haven't spent a weekend together in forever. I'm excited about it.

For many Saint Mary's seniors, it is a chance that is much anticipated.

"Senior Dads Weekend is traditionally one of the most anticipated events of senior year," said senior class president Ann Pangilinan. "There's a given tie between a father and a daughter that this weekend celebrates.

The weekend's theme: "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" was chosen with the intent of celebrating that bond, said Senior Dads Weekend chairwoman Beth Mayer.

"When we talked about what the theme would be, a lot of us said that we had a t-shirt or a cap or something with that phrase on it when we were little," said Mayer. "We felt it was what we wanted the weekend to be about."

For Dombrow, being "daddy's little girl" often meant learning to stand on her own after following her father's advice.

"My dad has always been there for me, protecting me," she said. "When I was little, it was from the bullies — the big kids down the street."

But as she got older, she learned to turn to her dad for advice.

"I always call my dad when I'm stressed out," she said. "The best advice he ever gave me was to deal with things as they come, and to focus on the moment." Soon after that phone call, Dombrow received a letter with a picture of herself at a younger age in a ballerina costume.

"My dad told me to remember that moment, that he had always kept that picture with him," she said. "My dad does that. My dad can always focus on the moment."

It is advice that Dombrow will value long after she leaves Saint Mary's, she said.

The weekend gives the chance for the women to let their fathers know that regardless of how old they grow, their dads are still needed, said Mayer.

"I think a lot of the fathers think that now that we're graduating, we won't need them as much," said Mayer. "And for the women who aren't as close with their fathers, this is a chance for them to get to know each other better."

"I know that I'm still going to need him," Dombrow said, chocking back tears. "When I look at him on that day with tears in my eyes — I just know that I'm going to cry."

Scientists discuss trade rumors

NEW YORK

Bernie Williams still isn't sure if his finger will need surgery.

"It feels a little bit better with rest. Still has a little bit, though," the New York Yankees center fielder said Tuesday after winning his third consecutive American League Gold Glove. Williams hurt the shoulder making a diving catch against Florida in mid-June, and it bothered him for much of the second half of the season.

"I'll have to start over and go to Seattle and make the best of it," Williams said. "If I don't, I'll have to start over and go to Seattle and make the best of it." Williamson declined to comment on Williams.

There's one more uncertainty ahead for Williamson. The Red Sox aren't sure whether he'll use his option next season to make him a starter again next season.

"I don't think we've ever gotten to that point," manager Jack McKeon said. "We know he can go either way. It's a matter of when you get your stuff together so it can be used. We'd discuss it with him. Right now, who knows?"

"My home is in Cincinnati. I hope I don't get traded. If I do, I'll have to start over and go to Seattle and make the best of it," Williamson said.

"I'd like to start over and go to Seattle and maybe have a better year." Williamson reflected on season Williams discusses trade rumors.

Green: Moss will not return punts for Minnesota

Associated Press

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. Minnesota Vikings coach Dennis Green wants Randy Moss to get his hands on the ball more, but not necessarily as a punt returner.

Green is searching for other options to replace David Palmer, who tore a knee ligament Monday night and is out for the season.

Moss returned four punts for 58 yards in Minnesota's 27-17 victory over Dallas after Palmer got hurt blocking for Moe Williams on a kickoff runback.

Palmer, who tore his right anterior cruciate ligament, will have surgery in 2-3 weeks after the swelling goes down, team trainer Chuck Barta said. "It will be a tough loss for us," Green said.

Green indicated he's leaning toward Robert Tate or Chris Walsh to return punts. The Vikings also will try out several punt return specialists on Wednesday.

"We'll probably go with Tate, but we'll look at it and see as the week progresses," Green said.

"Could be we pick somebody up," Tate and Williams will handle kickoff returns in Palmer's absence.

The Vikings (4-4) insist Moss remains a possibility to return punts, too. But they are also mindful of exposing their star receiver to big hits, especially with starters Robert Smith (hamstring) and Jake Reed (groin) hurt.

Fresh in their minds is New York Giants cornerback Jason Sehorn, who tore up a knee returning a kickoff in the 1998 preseason and was lost for the season.

Plus, Moss hurt his hip when he made a leaping catch in the second half.

"I don't think it's a hip pointer, so I think it's probably OK. It's probably going to be painful, though," Green said.

Green said he went with Moss on punt returns Monday night because he needed a game-breaker. The Vikings had to battle back from a 17-0 hole.

"In a game like that when you can't plan for it, a tough injury to a very good player, you do what you've got to do to win the ballgame," Green said.

Moss, who caught two touchdown passes, nearly added a 71-yard score on one of his punt returns, but he tripped at the Dallas 46 with nobody near him after a nifty 25-yard return.

"When I'm in the game catching punts it's like everything's coming at me so fast, at such a fast pace, that I go with my first instinct," Moss said. "But sometimes I'm hesitant, because I'm not experienced back there."

Although Moss said he didn't want to replace Palmer full-time on punt returns, he is eager to get more involved in the passing game.

Delgado may be leaving Toronto

Associated Press

DANA POINT, Calif. Shawn Green is gone, and Carlos Delgado might be the next star to leave the Toronto Blue Jays.

The Blue Jays had hoped to sign both Green and Delgado, who made up one of baseball's best offensive combinations, before they became eligible for free agency in November 2000.

They had no luck in negotiations with Green, so they traded him to the Los Angeles Dodgers along with a minor league infielder Monday for Raul Mondesi and reliever Pedro Borbon. The Dodgers met Green's price of an $84 million, six-year contract.

Toronto general manager Gord Ash said Tuesday that Delgado's agent recently drew his proposal for an $82 million, six-year contract.

"Our priority always was to sign him. Now, we have to look at other alternatives." - Gord Ash

Palmeiro wins third straight Gold Glove

NEW YORK Rafael Palmeiro won his third straight American League Gold Glove at first base despite playing just 28 games at the position this year.

Palmeiro, who was a designated hitter for Texas in 128 games, joined Rangers catcher Ivan Rodriguez, who won his eighth straight Gold Glove, among the winners announced Tuesday by Rawlings.

Palmeiro, his time in the field limited by a pair of arthroscopic knee operations before the season, had one error in 273 chances at first base.

Kidd, Gugliotta lead Suns over winless Bulls in Chicago

Associated Press

CHICAGO - Jason Kidd and Tom Gugliotta helped Phoenix build a big lead and the Suns shot off a fourth-quarter rally by Chicago's bench to beat the winless Bulls 103-88 Tuesday night.

Kidd, Gugliotta and Cliff Robinson each scored 19 apiece for the Suns, who blocked 14 shots and built a 28-point lead in the third quarter.

Penn Hardaway, the Suns' major offseason acquisition, added 18 points. Phoenix center Shaquille O'Neal went scoreless in his return to Chicago, where he played on three championships teams.

Flash Button scored 11 points for the Bulls, who fell to 0-4. The Suns were ahead 87-65 entering the final quarter. When Chicago's reserves opened the fourth with 10 straight points to get within 12, the Suns reinserted Hardaway, Kidd and Gugliotta and reestablished control.

Kidd toyed with the Bulls in a 18-7 run closing the first half as Phoenix took a 64-47 lead. He grabbed an offensive rebound and made a beautiful no-look pass to Gugliotta for a basket, drove the length of the floor for a layup, converted a three-point play after taking a backdoor pass and then hit two free throws.

The Bulls couldn't contain Gugliotta, who scored 16 first-half points and consistently sailed down the baseline past Chicago's defenders. The Suns shot 61 percent and also blocked eight shots.

The lead expanded to 28 in the third quarter as rookie Shawn Marion scored nine points and had two emphatic dunks, one on a behind-the-back pass from Gugliotta. Gugliotta made 9 of 11 shots and had 12 rebounds.

Lakers 123, Mavericks 101

Shaquille O'Neal had 27 points and 10 rebounds as the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Dallas Mavericks for the 18th consecutive time.

O'Neal made only 3 of 14 free throws, but was 12-of-14 from the field.

Glen Rice added 23 points and Rick Fox had 18 off the bench for the Lakers, who haven't lost to the Mavericks since April 5, 1995.

The Lakers broke the game open with a 14-0 run midway through the third quarter to win for the fourth time in their five games.

Los Angeles was in front 28-34 when Derek Fisher triggered the decisive run with a three-point play.

O'Neal made a 3-pointer and later hit a jumper for the run, pushing the Los Angeles lead to 72-54 with 6:06 left in the third quarter.

O'Neal added two baskets during the third-quarter spurt, which gave the Lakers an 88-71 lead going into the fourth.

Michael Finley and Erick Strickland scored 19 points each, Cedric Ceballos added 18 and Steve Nash 17 for the Mavericks, who have lost three of their first five games.

The Lakers took a 54-49 half-time lead, but the Mavericks' strategy of fouling O'Neal whenever he touched the ball in the closing stages of the first half was successful.

O'Neal missed nine of his first-half free throws, including six straight over the final 1:35.

O'Neal made only 10 of 23 free throws in Sunday's 105-97 victory over the Mavericks at the Staples Center, with Dallas fouling him every time he touched the ball in the fourth quarter.

Jazz 92, Blazers 87

That's more like it, Karl.

In his first game against Portland since a horrible effort in a playoff loss that ended Utah's season last spring, Karl Malone scored 24 points and had eight rebounds as the Jazz beat the Trail Blazers.

Malone shot 6-of-11 from the field and made 12 of 14 free throws as Utah handed Portland its first loss in five games this season. Malone was 3-of-16 in the decisive sixth game of a sec-round-playoff loss to the Blazers last season.

Bryon Russell scored 19 points off the bench and helped the Jazz clamp down defensively in the fourth quarter after Portland's Damon Stoudamire had scored 13 of his 19 points in the first quarter. Malone was 3-of-16 from the field.

The lead expanded to 28 in the third quarter as rookie Shawn Marion scored nine points and had two emphatic dunks, one on a behind-the-back pass from Gugliotta. Gugliotta made 9 of 11 shots and had 12 rebounds.

Devils defeat Flyers on Arnott's game-winner

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. Jason Arnott scored the game-winner late in the second period and Martin Brodeur made 15 saves Tuesday to lead the New Jersey Devils to a 2-1 victory over the streaking Philadelphia Flyers.

The Devils broke a 1-1 tie with the Arnott's goal at 15:32. Shooting from the right circle, Arnott drilled the puck between John Vanbiesbrouck's pads for his first goal since Oct. 1.

Randy McKay also scored for the Devils, who extended their home unbeaten streak to seven games (6-0-1).

The loss was only the second in seven games this season with its worst start in franchise history at 0-5-1.

Vanbiesbrouck finished with 29 saves and fell to 7-6-2.

The Devils played outstanding defense in the third period, limiting the Flyers to only four shots.

Stars 5, Blues 2

Rookie Jon Sim scored his first two goals as the Dallas Stars chased the NHL's top goalie and ended the St. Louis Blues' five-game home winning streak.

Jamie McLennan, the backup to Roman Turek, entered the game 4-0 with a league-leading 1.58 goals-against average. McLennan gave up the game's first four goals on 12 shots and his goals-against had risen to 2.25 when Turek replaced him at 7:12 of the second period.

The Stars lost back-to-back games for the first time this season and tied the Blues for first place in the Central Division.

LeClair, McKay scored the only goal of the game, which occurred at 1:37 of the second period.

Dallas goalie Ed Belfour had 32 saves for the Stars, who improved to 7-0-0.

were in that locker room together and I remember thinking this is a big deal. This is a major deal. Here I am a graduate assistant, just graduated from Youngstown State, I am a GA at Pitt and we are playing Notre Dame.”

The Irish, en route to the national championship, cruised to a 19-9 opening season victory over the Panthers.

Now 22 years later, Davie returns as head coach at Notre Dame in the last game ever played at Pitt Stadium on Saturday.

“To go in there and now be the head coach here and go in there and play the last game in that stadium is significant to me,” Davie said. “There will be a lot of emotion in this football game.”

Established in 1925, Pitt Stadium is one of the oldest stadiums in college football. Next season, the Panthers will play their home games at Three Rivers Stadium before moving into a new stadium in downtown

One game in particular that Davie remembers from his day coaching Pitt at Pitt occurred in 1982 when a 4-1-1 Irish team upset undefeated and top­ ranked Pitt 31-16. Led by senior quarterback Dan Marino, the Panthers were 10-point favorites against a Notre Dame team that seven days earlier tied winless Oregon.

But freshman running back
Allen Pinkel’s 76-yard touchdown run highlighted one of the biggest upsets in the Gerry Faust era.

“I can remember that play
today,” Davie said of Pinkel’s run. “It looked like it was in slow motion. We must have missed eight tackles on that play. And he went in and scored and they beat us.”

“I think the whole time I was at Pitt we lost four games at home,” Davie continued. “But two of those games were to Notre Dame.

Resides football-related memories, Davie still remembers another tradition at Pitt Stadium.

“I ran a lot of laps around the top of that stadium,” Davie said.
“There you jogged in the stadium because you weren’t going to go out in Oakland (the area surrounding the stadium) and jog around that city. So we’d go around the top of that stadium.”

At halftime of Saturday’s game, Pittsburgh will honor more than 300 former football players, 150 cheerleaders and 275 band alumni. The show, entitled “A Tribute to Pitt Football,” will also comemo­ rate the individual decades of Pitt Stadium, from the 1920s to the present.

Among the former Pitt players that are expected to attend
Saturday’s game is 1976
Heisman trophy winner Tony Dorsett. One of the best running backs in NCAA history, Dorsett’s presence on the sidelines still scares Davie.

Fortunately, I am not aware of any NCAA regulation that allows them to play,” Davie said.

“But you’ve got to be nervous if Tony Dorsett lined up there at tailback. He probably has at least one good game left in him.”

Though Dorsett will not be lining up in the Pitt backfield, Davie still is concerned with the Panthers, particularly since the Irish haven’t won a game away from Notre Dame Stadium since 1982 when a 4-1-1 Irish team beat blanked Navy 30-0 at Jack Kent Cooke Stadium in Bal­

In fact, that game was at a neutral site, where most of the crowd was rooting for Notre Dame. So actually the last time Notre Dame team won when the crowd was not in their favor occurred a week earlier when they beat Boston College 31-26.

Throughout the 4-5 season,
there has been a sense of miscommunication on the Notre Dame team. From the infamously fake check against Purdue to last week’s miscommunication in the fourth quarter, the Irish have faced criticism for their failure to communicate.

With the crowd noise and environment of an away stadiuniverse Davie believes his team cannot afford to continue its ways
if they want to win on Saturday.

“When you play on the road you have to be smart about just how much you do at the line of scrimmage,” Davie said. “You’ve got to make sure the communication and the checks and things are as simple as you can make them.”

Though his top priority this week is a victory, Davie couldn’t help but reflect on how his career has come full circle.

“I think back in your life at all the different places you go down, all the things that could have happened,” Davie said. “To go from a GA at Pitt then to coach the last game at that stadium is something else.”

Eagles release DT Johnson

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA

The Philadelphia Eagles released starting defensive tackle Bill Johnson on Tuesday, denying it was because of an altercation with an assistant coach.

Johnson, in his second season with the Eagles and a favorite of former coach Ray Rhodes, was not at Veterans Stadium Tuesday night when Andy Reid announced his release. Reid declined to comment beyond a statement which thanked Johnson for his “time and effort.”

“I’m really not going to comment on it past the statement,” Reid said.

Two team sources, who spoke on the condition they not be identified, said radio reports that Johnson’s dismissal was linked to a disagreement with special teams coach John Harbaugh were false. The sources, who are close to Reid, said there was no altercation.

Facts and Figures on Poverty and America's Working Poor

In 1997, 13.3% of the U.S. population, or 35.6 million people, lived in poverty.

In the median state a minimum-wage worker would have to work 87 hours each week to afford a two-bedroom apartment at 30% of his or her income, which is the federal definition of affordable housing.

A 1998 study estimated that 46% of the jobs with the most growth between 1994 and 2005 pay less than $16,000 a year; these jobs will not lift families out of poverty. Moreover, 74% of these jobs pay below a livable wage ($32,185 for a family of four).

Steelers creep toward playoffs

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH

Don’t look now, AFC playoff contenders, but here come the Pittsburgh Steelers.

All but written off during a 2-3 start that followed last year’s 0-5 finish, the Steelers (5-3) are creeping into playoff contention with a three-game winning streak. Up next is one-time winner Cleveland on Sunday.

Here’s the oddity: They’re doing it despite not running the ball as well as most Steelers teams and passing it as poorly as any in recent memory, although quarterback Kordell Stewart played well during the stretch of eight losses in 10 games that began last season.

“I know people aren’t counting us in, and that’s cool,” Kirkland said. “We’ll just keep doing what we’re doing and working hard and, if we can do that, you never know what can happen.”

In any other season, a schedule that finds them at home for five of their final eight would be a big advantage. Only this season, the Steelers uncharacteristically are 1-2 at home and 4-1 on the road.

Asked if Sunday’s game is a worry because his players might take Cleveland too lightly after beating them 43-0 on opening night, Cowher said — pausing for effect after every word — “No, they won.”

Lewis: Scandal validates suspicion

LAS VEGAS

Lenny Lewis thinks the IBF rankings scandal shows he was right to be suspicious about his draw against Evander Holyfield.

To Holyfield, the scandal is said. “I’ve gotten it on good account that before the first Holyfield-Lewis fight, Bob Lee said he had Holyfield as his champion,” said WBC, champion Lewis, who has a rematch with Holyfield, the IBF-WBA champion, Saturday night.

“It’s the one who put Eugenia Williams into my fight. Now everything is coming out, and it just confirms to me our suspicions of skulduggery.”

Williams voted for Holyfield in the March 13 fight, which most observers thought Lewis clearly won.

Lee, the IBF president, and three other men were indicted by a federal grand jury last Thursday at Newark, N.J., on 32 counts of soliciting and accepting bribes to fix rankings.

Williams wasn’t indicted. No charges have come out of a Manhattan grand jury investigation into the controversial decision in the fight at Madison Square Garden.

“I’ll say,” Holyfield said Tuesday. “A lot of people didn’t get the proper opportunity to get their title chances.”

And the public in one way or another got robbed of seeing some good matches.

Williams, of Atlantic City, N.J., told the Newark grand jury that he attempted to sway her decision, her lawyer said.

Judge Stanley Christodoulou of South Africa favored Lewis 116-113, Williams favored Holyfield 115-113 and Larry O’Connell of Britain scored it 115-115, making it a majority decision.

Saturday night’s fight in the Thomas & Mack Center will be worked by referee Mitch Halpern and judges Chuck Giampa, Bill Graham and Jerry Iroh, all of Nevada.

“From the very beginning, we were going to have Nevada officials because of the controversy in the first fight,” said Marc Furter, executive director of the Nevada State Athletic Commission.

All three judges have judged IBF, WBA and WBC title fights.

Rutner said it isn’t unusual for Nevada officials to work outside Nevada and have scored more than 200 championship fights. Halpern has been the referee for more than 200 title fights.

Louisiana Tech, Tennessee to ‘tip off’ season Sunday

Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — In a rematch of the 1998 national championship game, Tennessee and Louisiana Tech open the women's basketball season Sunday in the Tip-Off Classic.

The early game in the doubleheader features No. 20 North Carolina State and Rutgers, ranked fourth on the heels of a final eight finish last season.

"I think it is an impressive group, I really do," Tennessee coach Pat Summitt said Tuesday. "You have four quality teams that are nationally ranked and respected and very competitive."

"I know it is early, but it should be two great games, and a lot of individual talent."

The second-ranked Lady Vols and No. 6 Lady Techsters have a long history. Louisiana Tech leads the series 16-15, but Tennessee has won the last 14 of 19 games, including a 93-75 victory in the 1998 NCAA title game.

"We are playing the greatest team in the world on their home court. They are women's basketball," Louisiana Tech coach Leon Barmore said of his team's Sunday opponent.

Summitt's team is coming off a 65-64 exhibition victory over the U.S. Women's National Team — a squad that beat both Stanford and UCLA by 50 points.

The Lady Vols return All-America selections Tamika Catchings and Seneeka Randall, 6-foot-5 sophomore center Michelle Snow and junior point guard Kristin "Ace" Clement.

They've also added some new talent. It was freshman Kara Lawson who scored the go-ahead jumper with 10 seconds left to give the Lady Vols the victory over the national team.

"She is a big play person," Summitt said.

Louisiana Tech brings a senior class of guards Tamicha Jackson, Betty Lennox and Christie Sides, and center Shaka Mosley. But Jackson is the only Lady Techster on the roster with more than one year's experience at Tech.

The Tip-off Classic, sponsored by State Farm, benefits the Women's Basketball Hall of Fame in Knoxville.

DETROIT—Detroit Red Wings captain Steve Yzerman and forward Martin Lapointe denied abusing a cameraman during a game in Tampa, Fla., on Tuesday and met with coaches.

Lapointe, who returned to the team's active roster, said: "The truth is I would never spit on somebody. I would punch him first," Lapointe said Tuesday. Yzerman said the incident has been blown out of proportion. "I touched his camera, I didn't push him at all. He basically just ignored us," Yzerman said. "We asked the guy to move. It happens pretty much every single game when he steps on the field, I don't know. But we play every cameraman just simply backs up a foot. He didn't want to do that." Yzerman denied that the cameraman had ever threatened him. "I backed off, Yzerman said. "And I l a p o n i e threat­­ended me at a cameraman during the game Sunday. "The truth is I would never spit on somebody. I would punch him first," Lapointe said.

Cowboys’ Lett returns to team
Associated Press

IVRNG, Texas

While the Dallas Cowboys are facing the absence of several top offensive players this week, the defense got some good news Tuesday with the return of lineman Leon Lett.

Lett, who tape­­aged with a sprained ankle during the third period as he pointed his camera at Yzerman and Lapointe sitting dejectedly on the bench. Yzerman "around things the guy who's trying to grab the lens," Petrotsky said. "When I backed up, Yzerman backed off and Lapointe started in on me.

He said Lapointe threatened to come after him, then started spitting at him over the glass. Red Wings forward Brendan Shanahan said he was near Lapointe, and that the forward didn't spit at the cameraman.

"The guy had a camera. I'm sure if it was a true he just not being said, it'd be watching it on TV," Shanahan said.

The Orlando-based Sunshine Network said Monday that it would not file a complaint with the league.

Another cameraman and a stage manager also complained about coach Scotty Bowman. They said that after the second period, Bowman left the bench, walked down the tunnel toward the locker room, and encountered a camera crew that was setting up to interview associate coach Dave Lewis.

Cameraman Richard Delaney said he was "hosted" and "bumped" by Bowman, but afterward backed off an earlier assertion that the coach shoved him. Asked whether he was in Bowman's path, Delaney said: "I could have been."

Bowman said the incident started because a cart was blocking the hallway to the team's locker room. "I wanted to get to the dressing room to watch the penalty again," the cameraman was blocking the way. I didn't punch him. I didn't push him to the left, enough to make my way to the coach's office," Bowman told Booth Newspapers.

as well as we're capable of playing. If we can do that, we can beat anyone. We have enough talent, but we have to play perfect," Dave said.

I can't help but feel a little vindicated, remembering argu­­ments I had with friends at the beginning of the year con­­cerning the talent level of this year's team as opposed to past years. When the Irish were 1-3, my peers cited last year's 9-3 record as evidence against my claim that this year's team is more talented than the previ­­ous edition.

"To win nine football games last year [was] probably a pretty big accomplishment," Dave said.

Even though I've disagreed with him on a lot of things this year, at least the coach and I agree on this one. When they play as well as they can, this team can line up against any­­one you can throw at them. "Sure, Fox," you're thinking. "That's like saying I would've scored a goal if the goalie hadn't been there."

It's one of the most famous hockey clichés, one that has become a rebuttal for everyone who likes to propose the "could've, would've, should've" arguments as to why he or she didn't win.

This isn't the case here. Some places don't have enough talent to win. In order to knock off a Tennessee or a Florida State, they have to play out of their minds and hope that half of the opposing team calls in sick before they even have a shot. Notre Dame can beat anyone just by going out there and playing its best, regardless of what the other team does.

Of course, we all — and first and foremost, every guy on the team — want the Irish to play at top-notch level of football each week. Why this level isn't always reached is because of youth or coaching or a combination of factors. I'll let you be the judge. It certainly isn't due to a lack of ability on the part of the guys wearing gold helmets. And nobody's satisfied with mediocrity, especially Dave. "5-4," he said of Notre Dame's record, "doesn't turn me on a whole lot."

We can all agree on that one.

who expects to replace Howard with Jones and Givens. "Also he was our safety on the punt team and he was on the kickoff coverage team. He is a player that has speed. And, boy, we just can't afford to take guys off the field that have that kind of speed. That hurts us."

Sanson, rather than freshman Nick Setta, will assume the kicking duties with Miller out.

"I just don't think like right now with Nick Setta, it is not the right time to do that," Dave said.

"If David Miller can't go, which I don't think david will go, Jim Sanson will be the kicker. You got to be proud of Jim Sanson. He has done a good job on kickoff and he has hung in there and shown a lot of character."

The defense took its biggest hit in the sectodary. Junior safety Ron Israeld hand and freshman cornerback Albert Porable (knee) will both undergo surgery this week. Safety Justin Smith is also hanged up and won't play.

These injuries have more significance when the suspensions of Brock
Williams and Lee
Lubinski were factored in.

Defensive end Jason Chung is done for the season after undergoing arthroscopic knee surgery last week and defensive end Grant Irons is listed as questionable for Saturday's game.

"I would say [Grant] is 50-50; maybe less than 50-50," Dave said.

"I don't look just to see if he — right now he can't run. He was kicked in his ralf, in his shin, kind of an Achilles, you know, that whole area is inflamed right now."

Despite all the injuries, Dave is confident that he can run the table with the players he has left.

"The challenge, like always, is finding a way to win," Dave said. "Everybody has problems.
And I think the thing is we have enough talent to win. We have got enough talent to win these three games."

Big money yields playoff berths in 1999

Associated Press

NEW YORK

Baseball’s postseason was only for its high rollers.

The eight playoff teams all were among the 10 top spenders, according to figures distributed Tuesday to major league general managers meeting in Dana Point, Calif. The New York Yankees and Atlanta Braves each had the highest payrolls in their leagues.

The World Series champion Yankees had a record payroll of $745 million, more than $18 million more than the previous high, set by Baltimore the previous year. Among playoff teams, they were followed by Texas ($73.9 million), Cleveland ($73.5 million), Baltimore ($72.0 million), the New York Mets ($71.5 million), Chicago ($71 million) and Houston ($56.4 million).

Proving that money doesn’t guarantee success, the top five included baseball’s most notorious underachievers of 1999:

Texas (sixth), Arizona ($69 million), Cleveland (10th, $66 million), Miami ($64 million) and Houston.

“To think in the new year, we’ll make playoff commitments,” said Sandy Alderson, the executive vice president of baseball operations in the commissioner’s office. “The commissioner is committed to making some serious changes in baseball’s agenda. That’s the No. 1 item on his agenda.”

Since the end of the 1994-95 strike, just one team not among the top half by payroll has advanced to the playoffs: the 1997 Astros, who were 18th among 28 clubs.

Among playoff teams were among the top 12 in Texas, the top 14 in 1996 and the top 12 in 1995.

Since then, the 10 World Series teams still have been among the top 10 payroll, including six and among the top three and eight among the top five. The Yankees’ payroll was more than six times that of the lowest team: the Florida Marlins ($14 million).

“I don’t know where the story came from, it was in the St. Peters burg paper,” Rothschild said. “At this time, it’s too early to speculate.”

Boggs, a 41-year-old third baseman, is eligible for free agency and the St. Petersburg Times reported Tuesday that Boggs is likely to take an off-field position with the Devil Rays.

On Aug. 7, he became the first player to homer for hit No. 3,000, connect ing against the Cleveland Indians at Tropicana Field in St. Petersburg, Fla.

He had two hits, but after joyfully circling the bases, Boggs finished the season with 3,010 hits and a .329 career batting average.

Boggs was one of two players to reach the 3,000-hit milestone last season, joining Tony Gwynn of the San Diego Padres. Gwynn, who did not play this year, had 3,000 hits when he came to the majors.

Boggs, who had season ending knee surgery a month after getting his 3,000th hit, hit .301 in 90 games for the Tampa Bay Devil Rays last season.

Nomar Garciaparra’s Boston Red Sox advanced to the American League Championship Series thanks to good hitting, strong pitching and the pocketbooks to afford it.

“I’d prefer we were all operating on the same plane financially,” Dodgers general manager Kevin Maloney said. “I would like to see all 30 clubs on a level playing field. That would be good for the fans, it would create more competition. I think it would be great for baseball if there was a floor and a ceiling.”

Arizona, which won the NL West, had the most dramatic increase, going from 21st at $31.6 million to ninth.

San Diego, 10th at $33.1 million when it won the NL pennant in 1998, dropped to 15th at $45.8 million.

“Obviously it’s getting greater every year,” Padres manager Bruce Bochy said. “It’s more a case today where clubs know they don’t have a chance to compete. You’re going to have a team occasionally that can compete, can contend, like the Reds this year. Now it’s to the point where you only have a chance if you spend the money.”

Cincinnati, with a $38 million payroll that ranked 20th, was in contention until the final day of the regular season, losing a wild-card tiebreaker playoff to the Mets.

The average salary increased 15.2 percent, from $1,384,530 to $1,567,873. The median — the point where an equal number of players are above and below — jumped 13.6 percent, from $427,500 to $495,000.

After paying $1.46 billion to 920 players this year, teams already have guaranteed $1.57 billion to 285 next season — including $74.9 million by Atlanta and $74.0 million by Arizona — and $745 million to 131 in 2001.

In all, teams have made $2.596 billion in future commitments, and these figures were compiled before Green’s contract Monday.

Payrolls include salaries, performances and prorated shares of signing bonuses and other guaranteed income, but not award bonuses, which have not yet been tabulated.

Boggs set to retire

DANA POINT, Calif. Wade Boggs, who three months ago became the 23rd player in major league history to reach 3,000 hits, apparently is set to call it quits.

Boggs, a five-time All-Star, bagged another 20 hits for the Tampa Bay Devil Rays the past two years after 11 seasons with the Boston Red Sox and five with the New York Yankees.

Devil Rays manager Larry Rothschild, attending the baseball’s general managers meetings, said Tuesday a news confer ence to clarify that issue will be held Thursday in St. Petersburg.

Davie addresses road trip, injuries

By BRIAN KESSLER
Sports Writer

Notre Dame went to war with Tennessee in Knoxville last Saturday and it returned to South Bend with a lengthy list of wounded.

The offense was hit the hardest, losing two players for the remainder of the season. Offensive tackle Jordan Black tore his right ACL in the second half, while talkback Terrance Rankin suffered a hamstring injury.

With Black sidelined against Tennessee, offensive coordinator Kevin Rogers said the Irish were forced "to play left handed." Notre Dame now has less than a week to make adjustments on the line and get back to playing right-handed again. Junior Kurt Vollers is expected to make his first career start in Black's place.

"It's in a position where we are young," head coach Bob Davie said at Tuesday's press conference. "I mean, it is Kurt Vollers and Sean Mahan (who backup Black). Both those players I think have some potential. I am kind of anxious to watch them play. But Jordan Black, that hurts us losing him.

Howard's injury is the cause for concern at the tailback position. His injury along with the losses of Tony Driver (sus­ pended) and Darcey Levy (transferred) reduces Notre Dame's once large corps of tailbacks to just two -- Julius Jones and Tony Fisher.

"It's a lot of reps in prac­tice," said Jones, who has been wearing a knee brace in practice due to an injury suffered against the Volunteers.

"It's just basically me and Tony Fisher. We just have to hang in there."

David Givens will make the move from flanker to tailback to give the Irish more depth at that position.

"Surely much more, teaches the players," Jones said. "He goes in for two new situations, like goal line so he pretty much knows all the plays."

The deep teams units will also be shaken up with the losses of Howard and kicker David Miller, who suffered a hip flexor.

"You see, Davie, he has just kicked off returns," said Davie.

Irish do not lack talent

If you look hard enough, there is a cliché for just about everything in sports. Whether you want to be healthy, wealthy and wise or just eat a worm, chances are, there is some bit of "clever" advice that has been told to people in your position since time began, with each adviser acting like it was a great revelation.

"Sports are no exception -- in fact, they're probably the rulers of the cliché kingdom. You've heard them countless times before: "We played hard." "This is the biggest game of the season for us," or "Don't take anything away from what [insert opponent name here] did."

The funny thing is that -- at least in sports -- those cookie cutter comments are usually true.

Take, for instance, what would probably be the go-to guy in the football cliché lineup: "It's a game of inches."

Sure, it's nothing you haven't heard before but it does go a long way in describing the current position of the Notre Dame football team.

At his press conference on Tuesday, head coach Bob Davie addressed where the team stands right now, a position where wins and losses seem to be separated by the "inches" between having a ton of talent and completely using that talent.

"We have enough talent to win each and every week in my heart that we had enough talent to win that [Tennessee] game," Davie said.

However, Davie continued, "We're not talented enough to go out there and just play well and win.

A select group of teams, Davie noted, such as the Irish's oppo­ nent last Saturday, the Tennessee Volunteers, have enough talent to make up for some lackluster play and still come out on top.

At this point, this isn't the case for an Irish team that features many young players.

"It comes down to us playing..."

More than 20 years ago, in 1976, before most of the current Irish players were born, Bob Davie was just another college graduate looking for a job.

Despite graduating from Youngstown State with a degree in education, Davie knew he wanted to be a coach.

So the determined Davie went to Pittsburgh in search for a position as a graduate assistant coach. Eager to get into a winning program, the aggressive Davie was willing to do anything even work for free.

"I graduated in December and went there (Pittsburgh) in January," Davie recalled at Tuesday's press conference. "I said I wanted to be a graduate assistant (but was denied). So I came back again and said I am just going to volunteer my time.

"I started in January and I just volunteered my time," Davie said. "I went until about May and then finally he [head coach Jackie Sherrill] hired me as a graduate assistant in May. To get that graduate assistant job at Pitt coming out of Youngstown State was significant."

Thus began Davie's coaching career. A few months later Davie was helping prepare for the Panthers first opponent of the season. That team was Notre Dame.

Davie fondly remembers his first game as a coach.

"For some reason, I ended up in the locker room right before that game," Davie said. "It was Jackie Sherrill who was coaching his first game as head coach and myself. That was when Georgia's (graduate assistants) didn't even dress in the same locker room as the other coaches.

"But for some reason I probably was going to get him a Diet Coke or something; that is why I was probably in the season." Davie said. "He and I see Davie/page 24
