Clinton honors Hesburgh with Congressional Gold Medal

By LAURA SELLINGER

President Clinton signed legislation on Dec. 9, 1999 to award University president emeritus Father Theodore Hesburgh the nation’s highest honor bestowed upon civilians, the Congressional Gold Medal.

Now Public Law 106-153, the Father Theodore Hesburgh Congressional Gold Medal Act authorizes the President to give the medal to Hesburgh in recognition of his many outstanding contributions to civil rights, higher education, the Catholic Church and the nation.

Congressman Tim Roemer introduced legislation in the House of Representatives last May and sought the support of his 292 colleagues to cosponsor the legislation.

“The Congressional Gold Medal honors Americans accomplished in one area — but Father Hesburgh has three fields of integrity and honor. He has made outstanding contributions in the fields of religion, higher education and civil rights — that is what caused me to push this award,” Roemer said.

“I believe that this is the most appropriate time for Congress and the entire nation to join me in recognizing this remarkable man and living legend of freedom in America,” Roemer said.

Roemer said that he considers Hesburgh’s public service career to be as distinguished as his many contributions to education. Hesburgh served as Notre Dame’s president from 1952-1987. Holding 15 presidential appointments, Hesburgh’s involvement ranged far and wide.

He was a charter member of the United States Commission on Civil Rights from its establishment in 1957 and chaired the commission from 1969 to 1972. He was also awarded the Medal of Freedom by Lyndon Johnson in 1964, another one of the nation’s highest civilian honors.

During the 1980s, Hesburgh was also actively involved in a private initiative to unite international scientists and religious leaders in condemning nuclear weapons. Hesburgh also helped organize a meeting of 58 world-class scientists in Vatican City in 1982.

Clinton honored Hesburgh with the Medal of Freedom in 1999. He was also awarded the Congressional Gold Medal.

The Snite displays colorful Cuban art exhibition

By ERIN L’RUFFA

The sound of Cuban music may come as a surprise to someone entering the normally quiet Snite Museum.

“However, the upbeat music provides an appropriate accompaniment to the vibrant colors of many of the paintings within the gallery,” said Gina Costa, public relations and marketing specialist at the Snite.

“The Snite’s collection is huge, especially Cuban art. We have a lot of paintings, sculptures, photography, video and installations by Cuban artists,” said Costa.

According to Costa, the collection contains paintings by many of the artists left Cuba.

“Some of the artists left Cuba as children, while others fled as adults. Most of the 25 artists featured are now living in Europe and the U.S., including many in southern Florida,” said Costa.

“The Snite is its opening and draws on the wall in one of the galleries,” said Costa.

Works such as Tony Mendoza’s "Untitled" can be viewed at The Snite Museum’s special exhibition of Cuban art titled “Breaking Barriers: Selections from the Museum of Art Fort Lauderdale Contemporary Cuban Collection.”

As its title suggests, the exhibit is intended to break barriers by not limiting the artists who are included. Two artists in the exhibit, Serrano and Coco Fusco, are second-generation Cubans not born on the island. Two photographers featured, Juan Carlos Alom and Carlos Alom, are both Cuban-born.

The Snite is located at 1400 North Main Street and is open Tuesday through Sunday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Admission is free and the museum is accessible to people of all ages and abilities.

The Snite Museum is now home to a collection of colorful Cuban art that reflects the nation’s rich history and culture.

“However, the upbeat music provides an appropriate accompaniment to the vibrant colors of many of the paintings within the gallery,” said Gina Costa, public relations and marketing specialist at the Snite.

“The images are all very large, lots of bright colors,” said Costa.

Ode to Moog

I guess toughness comes with the job when you are the younger sister of two sports-crazed brothers. My sister Meghan learned pretty quickly to shake off bumps and bruises. After playing sports in the yard with my brother and me, Moog, as my brother and I call her, had probably gone to more sports injuries before she turned 1 last time. She still plays field hockey and has even become a point guard for her basketball team without missing a beat.

But there was one area in which Moog was not quite so tough. She started getting really tired. She would come home from school and field hockey practice completely exhausted and complaining of being cold. At first we thought nothing of it. It was her first year in high school and she probably just wasn't used to the tougher practices. But Moog didn’t get better. She was still cold and tired no matter how much rest she got.

So my mother took her to the doctor. The diagnosis wasn’t good. My sister had an immune system that was simply unable to fight off illness. The diagnosis was lupus. Her body was attacking itself. Unable to distinguish between the threatening particles and her own cells, her immune system was destroying her blood cells and causing her anemia.

The doctors were amazed that she was able to even play field hockey, let alone practice and then come home and sleep for hours. One minute she would be handing her cleats for a pair of sneakers and become the point guard for her basketball team without missing a beat.

Every week Moog went to school and practice and then come home and slept for hours. One minute she would be handing her cleats for a pair of sneakers and become the point guard for her basketball team without missing a beat. Week after week she went to doctor after doctor, seeing specialists after specialists who all seemed to say different things.

But Moog never complained. She never questioned why the disease chose her. Without a complaint, she took her pills and submitted to numerous tests and blood draws by intern nurses, some who couldn’t even find a pulse.

I’d like to say she got her toughness from my brother and I, but I know she really got it from my mom. Throughout this whole ordeal, my mom has fought to make sure my sister gets the best treatment possible.

Every week New York traffic to get my sis­ ter to specialists in the city to argue with schools to get her accommodations who also refuses to resched­ ule tests so my sister can go to the doctor, this disease has been just as tough on my mother as it is on me.

But the light at the end of the tunnel may be in sight. The right mixtures of drugs may have finally been found and the worst could be over.

Some people say professional athletes are tough, but I know they have nothing on my mom or my sister.

State Rep challenges cap on Bonfire lawsuits

COLLEGE STATION, Texas
State Representative Ron Wilson D-Houston, who says Texas A&M University is responsible for the 1999 Aggie Bonfire collapse, is challenging the current limitation on possible lawsuits against the University.

"I thought about the families of the students who were killed or injured, and I think the state should provide some economic compensation for the tragedy that occurred," Wilson said.

"Current law places a cap of $250,000 on suits that take place on the campus of a state university or government, like the university, can be sued to pay if they found guilty of negligence in a lawsuit.

"Five hundred thousand dollars is pitifully small compared to the lives that were lost and the cost of the medical care," Wilson said.

He added that since the cap is "per occurrence," any award would have to be split among all the plaintiffs in any Bonfire-related lawsuits.

Wilson said he plans to introduce a bill, or a constitutional amendment if needed, to increase the liability cap in the 2001 session of the Texas Legislature.

Wilson dismisses the idea of "sover­ eignty immunity," the legal doctrine that protects state governments from "civil lawsuits."

"A state shouldn’t be immune from lawsuits even if it’s legally at fault. Sovereignty immunity is an idea whose time has come and gone, and the uni­ versity shouldn’t hide behind it." Wilson said.

Though Wilson has not yet deter­ mined an appropriate figure for the liability cap to include in his legisla­ tion, he said it will be substantially higher than $250,000.

Wilson also said the university is responsible for the Bonfire accident whether or not the investigation finds instances of negligence.

"It was a University sponsored event, and that’s enough for me," Wilson said.

Elyn Perrone, vice president for Governmental Affairs at A&M, declined to comment on Wilson’s pro­ posal.

Protests result in three arrests

EVANSTON, Ill.

Three people — none of them students — were detained for frightening Sheridan Road outside the Technological Institute as protests against white supremacist Matt Hare turned violent Friday, said Al Cabbage, vice president for university relations. Police escorted Hare from Tech "for his own safety" at 2:20 p.m. after the leader of the World Church of the Creator announced he would travel to Evanston.

About 200 students, faculty and community members rallied at Tech to voice their opposition to Hare’s racist message. Cabbage also said there is no proof that Hare has a student ID at NU. Hare told The Daily on Wednesday a male Northwestern student may publicly announce himself as Hare’s host sometime before his visit. Hare received a bloody lip in the scuffle and was escorted to an unmarked police car after appearing for about 20 minutes. The leader of the racist organization did not set foot on campus, but stood on the rooftop of a grass between Sheridan Road and the sidewalk in front of Tech.

Bill could ban opposite sex visitors

TUCSON, Ariz.

Under a bill proposed this week by Rep. Jean McGrath, R-Glendale, students living in University of Arizona residence halls would not be allowed to have guests of the opposite sex in their rooms, except for immediate family. She said when she was a student at Arizona State University in the late 1950s, students had "lots of places to meet" outside of their dorm rooms, which she described as "bedrooms." She also said dorm rooms underwent a "white glove" inspection each week, now, no one cares how students main­ tain the state’s property. This is the fourth bill McGrath has submitted for this term of the Arizona State Legislature to regulate universities. The other propos­ als would require Arizona universities to install or sub­ scribe to Internet filters on all campus computers, allow students to use campus Internet connections only for a “specific educational purpose,” and require "accurate and complete" course descriptions in univer­ sity syllabi and catalogs. McGrath said the bill regard­ ing course descriptions is going to be replaced with a bill by another representative.

ND Law prof publishes book on Supreme Court

On Friday the newly renovated Moreau Galleries, which include the Hammes Gallery, the Little Theater Gallery and the Sister Marie Ronan East Extension, were officially recognized. The opening featured Cecilia Ann Kelly's "Works on Paper," as well as exhibits done by Saint Mary's art department faculty.

"It's beautiful," said Johnson Bowles, director of Moreau Galleries. "It makes showing and exhibiting much easier."

I think the renovations came out terrific. It is an example of how this college spends its funds. They spend it wisely," said Saint Marys College president Marilou Eldred. The Hammes relationship with the College is unique because no members of the Hammes family attended the College.

"Without the Hammes support we never could have done this," Eldred said.

The opening focused on "Saint Mary's faculty and on the Hammes family long standing and significance with Saint Mary's College," said Eldred.

Art professors Douglas Tyler, Billy Ray Sandusky, Sajit Sethi, Johnson Bowles, and Susan Clements exhibited their works. Each professor used different techniques and styles in the pieces.

"Weaving a Woman's Life," is an autobiographical, mixed media series investigating the rituals and roles associated with being a middle class female in the United States during the latter half of the 20th century. Bowles wrote in her artist's statement. Sethi's large wheel of blue shoes and clay handprints attracted much curiosity.

"Recently, I have been coming to terms with a sense of cultural memory and I find this strongly reflecting in my work," he wrote in his statement.

Sister Cecilia Kelly showed 20 "Works on Paper." Kelly is a 1951 graduate of Saint Marys's College and professor of art emerita. She worked on her pieces for more than two years.

"For the past several years, the attributes of paper have been for me the inspiration and sustained interest for creative expression," she said in her artist's statement. "Oriental papers, in particular because of their beauty, variety and quality captivated my imagination and challenged me in pursuit of new forms of using paper, primarily Thai and Papier, as a dominant graphic medium."

The exhibitions will be shown on campus through Feb. 18.

At the same time, Hesburgh is recognized as a national and international leader in higher education. He received his 140th and 141st honorary degrees this year, the most ever bestowed upon one person, according to the Guinness Book of World Records. Since 1967, Hesburgh has served as president emeritus and his office is currently located on the 13th floor of the library.

"Notre Dame has been my whole life, since I arrived in 1934. The students are wonderful and they are the reason why ND exists. I love spending time with them — no student comes to my door without getting in," said Hesburgh.

Hesburgh stepped down as head of Notre Dame in 1987, completing the longest tenure among active presidents of American universities.

"Despite his retirement, Hesburgh continues much as he did as the nation's senior university chief executive officer — as a leading educator and humanitarian inspiring generations of students and citizens, and generously sharing his wisdom in the struggle for the rights of man," said Roemer.

Hesburgh has been a member of the United States Institute of Peace Board, which is attempting to solve problems in Eastern Europe and the Middle East. Hesburgh considers his involvement in the Catholic Church to be the most important aspect of his life. "I am very happy and honored to receive this award, but it is not something you live for or work for. The most important thing is trying to be good at everything you do — for me, being a priest is the most important thing in my life," said Hesburgh.

Hesburgh served the Catholic Church from 1965 to 1970 as a member of the Holy See's delegation to the United Nations and as the permanent Vatican representative to the Atomic Energy Agency on behalf of Congress.

Hesburgh's medal ceremony will most likely take place in spring or early summer in Washington, D.C. Specifically designed for Hesburgh, the medal will include two important parts of his life — the seal of the Congregation of the Holy Cross and the seal of Notre Dame.

Created in 1776, the medal has been awarded to over 250 people. Recent recipients include the rev. Billy Graham Nelson Mandela, Rosa Parks and Colin Powell.

and Marta Maria Bravo, still live in Cuba.

A large number of Notre Dame students have already gone to see the exhibition, which opened on Jan. 16 and runs through Mar. 12.

"Students" seem to be really excited about the show, really intrigued and interested," said Costa. "It gives a different feel." Costa added that any student who can find the work that contains a scene of the Notre Dame campus should call her office to enter a drawing for a prize.

The Snite has already planned festivities for the weekend of the exhibition's closing. Activities include a Cuban band, a series of lectures and artist demonstrations.

The Museum of Art, Fort Lauderdale, began the collection in 1994 based on the merit of the artwork, not on politics. The current exhibit at the Snite features a selection of that collection.

The E.L. Cord Foundation provided funding to make this exhibit possible.
U.S. pushes for peace in Congo

UNITED NATIONS

The United States has invited a half-dozen African presidents to the United Nations to recommit themselves to ending the war in Congo, warning that the rival sides want peace despite continued fighting. The meeting Monday of the African leaders with the Security Council marks the culmination of a month-long effort by the United States to focus on problems facing Africa and how the world can help. The talks also come at a time when the 15-member council is weighing whether to send a peacekeeping force into Congo, a move that many say is being blocked by Washington. Congo's war was launched in August 1996 by rebels in the eastern part of the vast central African country who were seeking to meet Congolese President Laurent Kabila. The rebels were backed by Rwanda and Uganda, while Kabila received broad support of Zimbabwe, Zambia and Angola.

Oil spill threatens Brazil beaches

BRAZIL, JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) - Petrobras, the government-owned oil company, will lay down additional floating barriers to prevent the massive oil spill polluting Rio's Guanabara Bay from spreading to world-famous beaches like Copacabana and Ipanema, its president said Monday. Petrobras President Henrique Phillipe Reichest said workers on Monday will begin installing an additional 66,000 feet of barriers to be formed by buoys. Barriers totaling 10,000 feet already are in place, and they didn't believe the oil will leave the bay, Reichest told Globo TV network. "But for the population's peace of mind, we decided to build additional barriers." On Tuesday, a pipeline at the Rio de Janeiro refinery leaked and spewed 38,000 gallons of crude oil into the bay.

Activists question goat tossing

MADAGASCAR

Activists are questioning the practice of tossing live goats off cliffs in Madagascar as a form of entertainment. It has also led to the death of a 60-year-old man who stepped in front of a herd of goats last week at a traditional wedding. The goat-tossing practice is common in Madagascar, where it is believed to bring good luck to the newlyweds. The man, who was a guest at the wedding, was killed when a goat landed on his head.

VP becomes president after coup

QUITO

Ecuador's new president, Gustavo Noboa, comes into office with almost no experience in government except for 17 months as vice president. That's plus for most Ecuadorians.

It means that Noboa, an academic and former university rector, has not been contaminated by the corruption that has stained most public officials since democracy was restored to this small Andean nation two decades ago.

Well aware of public outrage over corrupt government officials, Noboa stressed in his first remarks as president that his priority would be to bring dishonest officials to justice. He said he is prepared to fight to extradite them from abroad, where many have fled after losing the public coffers.

"We won't tolerate corruption. That is something that characterizes him. He has never acquired wealth," said Walter Spurrer, a distinguished economist who has known Noboa for years.

Noboa took office Sunday after the military forced President Jamil Mahuad from power. The military said it was taking the step to avoid "a social explosion" after hundreds of Indians and young military officers stormed the Congress building and announced the formation of a new government to fight corruption and work on behalf of the poor.

In his only previous public statement announcing the presidency, Noboa sought to bring a message of hope to Ecuadorians, who have grown increasingly distrustful of promises by political leaders.

"My profound conviction as a Christian permits me to hope that with God's help Ecuadorians today can begin the march toward better days," the 62-year-old president said.

Noboa, a political independent for 10 years as the rector of the University of Guayaquil on Ecuador's Pacific coast. He also has served as dean of the university's law school and he taught for more than two decades at Catholic high schools.

In his only previous experience in public office prior to being elected vice president, Noboa served briefly in 1983 as the appointed governor of Guayas province. He also has experience in business as the former manager of a sugar refinery.

Friends and colleagues describe him as a gifted negotiator, a demanding teacher who counseling.

Georgia storm cuts power to thousands

Associated Press

ATLANTA

Rain and freezing temperatures spread a coat of ice across parts of Georgia Sunday, knocking out electrical service to more than a half-million customers.

Many of those households and businesses could be without power until at least Tuesday as crews struggle over slippery roads to reach downed lines and ice-coated tree limbs continue to snap, pulling down more.

"This is the worst storm since Hurricane Opal came through in 1996, and it took six days to get power fully restored for that one," said Georgia Power spokesman, Becky Blaylock. "If it keeps raining and it freezes again we could be looking at more people without power. We're in for a long haul."

Georgia Gov. Roy Barnes declared a state of emergency Sunday for six northern counties, and the Red Cross opened eight shelters around the state for people who had no heat.

Snow and freezing rain also fell in other parts of the southern Appalachians, and locally heavy rain fell across coastal areas of Georgia and the Carolinas as the storm pushed eastward and out to sea. Up to three inches of snow fell in some areas of North Carolina.

The rain had been forecast to end late Saturday in Georgia, but it was still falling Sunday afternoon. Temperatures in the Atlanta area didn't warm above freezing until the middle of the day.

Ice accumulated a half-inch thick on trees in parts of northern Georgia, and the weight of the ice on power lines pulled down utility poles.

More than 340,000 homes and business customers of Georgia Power lost service statewide. 290,000 of them in the metropolitan Atlanta area, Blaylock said. At least 175,000 customers of electric membership corporations also were blacked out.

Hundreds of utility repair crews were put to work in Georgia.

"It's just the sheer volume and massive nature of the problem that makes us go from one spot to the next to the next. We fix one, and another tree breaks, and causes another outage," said Pat Kerley of the Jackson Electric Membership Corp.

Klima may make deal with far-right groups

Associated Press

VIENNA

Chancellor Viktor Klima suggested for the first time Sunday that his Socialists could form a new government coalition with Joerg Haider's far-right party — a group he had previously rejected as antidemocratic.

In an interview with the Austrian newsmagazine Format, Klima tempered his changed stance with a call for Haider's Freedom Party to support his proposed minority government of Socialists and independent experts.

"I believe the present situation is a chance for the Freedom Party to prove that they can take on responsibility for the state." Viktor Klima

Austrian Chancellor

The comments come as Chancellor Viktor Klima's Socialists finished last in a Sunday election, when Klima's Social Democrats finished first — which worked to end four months of political deadlock on forming a government.

"The results are a wake-up call..." Klima said in an interview that he believed the most likely scenario was a round of new elections. "That would provide more options," he told the daily Kurier in a story to be published Monday.

After a new election, Haider told the newspaper that the strongest party should fill the position of chancellor and the second strongest party "when it is at all possible" should become the coalition partner.

Polls have suggested his party could emerge strongest in any new election because of general dissatisfaction with the other two main parties and their lack of success in creating a new government.

Haider gained international notoriety a decade ago by praising Hitler's employment policies, and later for lauding veterans of the Waffen SS as "men of honor." Those comments have dogged him ever since, though he has apologized, and his party's strong anti-foreigner stance further besmirched its reputation aboard — Israel has threatened to break diplomatic relations with Austria if the Freedom Party ever becomes part of the parliament.

"It is a question of credibility," Klima said in the Format interview. "I believe the present situation is a chance for the Freedom Party to prove that they can take on responsibility for the state."

While Haider's Freedom Party finished second, Klima had firmly rejected any possibility of forming a coalition as long as Haider remains its leader, who has 98, and he also is the subject of a criminal investigation.

Kohl stepped down as honorary chairman of the Christian Democratic Party last week under pressure from party leaders who demanded he identify the donors. Some party officials have even hinted of possible legal action against Kohl to compel him to reveal the donors.

Angela Merkel, party secretary general, was meeting with senior party leaders Sunday evening to review an audit of the party's finances. She told reporters that accountant's were unable to clarify where $5.7 million in party money had come from, though $1 million was believed to be from Kohl's anonymous donors.

The audit was to be made public Monday, but Merkel said it revealed nothing new about the part of the scandal disclosed over the weekend involving Mitterrand, who died in 1996, and the French oil company Elf-Aquitaine.

ARD television reported Saturday that Mitterrand arranged payment of $15.7 million to the Christian Democrats and that the money was transferred as part of alleged bribes totaling $44 million paid by Elf-Aquitaine for its 1992 purchase of the former East German Leuna refinery.

The alleged bribes have long been the subject of investigation by Swiss and French prosecutors.

Officials in the German chancellor's office, who have been searching for missing government files on the privatization deals bought by parliament as part of its inquiry into the scandal, this week, the government said it would appoint a special investigator to track down what happened to the files.

ARD said there was no evidence Kohl was aware of the $15.7 million transfer, and Michael Kohl, voick's spokesman, called the allegation a character assassination of the former chancellor.

In a joint report with French Television 2, ARD cited sources close to Mitterrand as saying the money was not bribes but was intended to serve "state interests, much later." The report said the French and German secret services met regularly with middlemen in a Geneva hotel to make the payments.

Meanwhile Sunday, the leader of Germany's Jewish community said he had received an apology from Christian Democrat leaders for a false comment by Prince Casimir Wittgenstein, a former state party treasurer in Hesse, that some of the money in the scandal came from Jewish estates.

"It came late, but too late," Paul Spiegel, president of the Central Council of Jews in Germany.

WASHINGTON College freshmen say they often were bored as high school seniors, coming late to school, often were bored as high school seniors, research by the University of California, Los Angeles' Higher Education Research Institute, primarily during summer orientation or in the first few weeks of college.

More than 10 percent of the students said they were "frequently bored" in high school classes, compared with the one-quarter who answered yes when the questions first was asked in 1983. More students also reported they were late to classes or skipped them.

College and universities "need to make sure if the students are already feeling disengaged in high school that they are going to get the support, mentoring, tutoring and other services they need to make it through college," said Jennifer Lin of the United States Student Association, a Washington-based group serving 3.5 million students.

Linda Sax, a researcher who directed the survey, said the rapid advances in today's high-tech world may make it harder to hold student attention.

This is a reflection of an increasingly fast-paced society, made more so by computers and other media," Sax said. "Students tell us anecdotally that they love it when teachers use more interactive tools. But not all teachers do it."

Also, 30 percent of respondents said they often felt "overwhelmed by all I have to do" - the highest percentage since the question was first asked in 1983, when 16 percent felt that way.

Students increasingly are worried about the cost of higher education. A recent 25 percent of students said there was "some" or a "very good" chance they would work full time while in college. Just 16 percent answered that way in 1982, the first year that question appeared.

More college-bound students rate themselves as average or better academically, 59 percent, compared with their own age, and 34 percent reporting an A average, more than in previous years. About half expect to earn at least a B average in college.

Elian's grandmothers pray in NYC

Associated Press

NEW YORK The boy's maternal grandmother, Elian Gonzalez, 78, a homemaker in Miami, told the Associated Press on Monday morning that she will appeal to the court to have her grandchild returned to Cuba. Mrs. Gonzalez said that her son, who disappeared, is in the custody of his father, whom she does not know.

She also said that she had left Cuba in 1961, when she was 17, and was married twice in the United States before returning to Cuba. She said she had been in Miami since 1980 and had been a U.S. citizen since 1984.

The boy's American grandparents, Mario and Marita Gonzalez, have also announced plans to appeal to the court in Cuba. They have been critical of the Cuban government and have argued that the boy's Cuban father is unfit to care for him.

The American Grandmothers' Group, which includes members of Congress and other prominent Americans, has also announced plans to appeal to the court in Cuba. The group has been active in the Elian Gonzalez case and has been critical of the Cuban government's handling of the case.

Many children with disabilities are getting substandard schooling because states are not complying with federal rules on special education, an independent agency reports.

U.S. officials are not enforcing compliance, and as a result, parents often must sue to enforce the law, according to a review of more than two decades of enforcement of the federal special education law.

In too many cases, children with disabilities are taught in separate classrooms and schools are not following rules on schooling in independent agency reports.

Some states are not where we want them to be and are not implementing the laws as they need to," Heumann said. "We've been spending significant time increasing our monitoring, technical assistance and enforcement.

Nearly six million American children receive special education instruction and services at a cost of almost $40 billion, about $5.7 billion of which is federal money.

The special education law was meant to end discrimination against children with disabilities. Many of these children had been excluded from public schools, institutionalized or placed in programs that provided little or no learning. The law was strengthened in 1997.

Under the law, local education authorities that remain out of compliance with the federal Education Department. The department has 35 employees and a budget of about $2.7 million. In its report, the disabilities council said Education Secretary Richard Riley has been more aggressive in seeking to improve monitoring and enforcement than the combined efforts of all his predecessors. But the group said serious problems persist.

According to compliance reports covering 1994 through 1996, 36 states failed to ensure that children with disabilities are not segregated from regular classrooms.

"Some states are not where we want them to be and are not implementing the laws as they need to. We've been spending significant time increasing our monitoring, technical assistance and enforcement," Heumann said.

The Education Department can withhold money from states that do not follow the rules but has punished only one state, Virginia.

Federal courts reversed that decision.

Heumann said the Education Department has begun cracking down on states by requiring that shortcomings be corrected as a condition for continued federal payments. If they fail to fix a problem within a year, the department can refer the case to the Justice Department for enforcement.

"The problems that exist in these states concern us very dearly," said Heumann, who uses a wheelchair. "Many have been taking their responsibilities much more seriously.

The council made dozens of recommendations to strengthen federal enforcement. They include giving the Justice Department independent authority to investigate cases and take states to court; providing more money for enforcement and handling of complaints; and creating a process for handling complaints at the federal level.

The special education report is part of the council's multi-year study for the president and Congress on the implementation and enforcement of the Americans with Disabilities Act and other civil rights laws.

Only Arkansas, Hawaii, Nevada and Oklahoma were ensuring that local school authorities adhered to non-discrimination laws, compared to 45 who were not. No information for Mississippi was given in this category.

Alaska, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Hawaii, Maine, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota and Vermont were federal enforcement. They are not segregated from regular classrooms.

The rest of the states were not.

Georgia, Nebraska, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, South Carolina and Wyoming were only taking following rules requiring schools to help students find jobs or continue their educations.

Candidates converge in Iowa

Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa - On the eve of Iowa's caucuses - Monday's snow-covered state could see the first-ever snow-covered caucus - and Democratic presidential candidates canvassed churches and national talk shows Sunday, courting Iowa in the snow-covered state.

"This is the first step in several steps of the journey," Bill Bradley, the former New Jersey senator who trails Vice President Al Gore in national polls, said on CBS.

Entering the first election contest of Campaign 2000, Republican George W. Bush and Gore held wide leads in polls of voters who planned to visit schools, civic clubs, fire stations and other sites Monday to support one of eight major candidates.

The underlying candidates, all resigned to losing, wore shoes fitted for face-saving appearances and Iowa's true reward: Momentum for New Hampshire's Feb. 1 primary.

"This is a marathon, not a sprint," said豪门, the Republican National Committee. "It's the first test of the party's ability to converge in Iowa Sunday, even as they battle over the state's biggest and most important caucuses.

"This is the first test of the party's ability to converge in Iowa," McCain said.

The polls show that about one in 10 voters are undecided, giving the candidates incentive to campaign hard Monday.

"The only thing I know is to do is to encourage our folks to get out and vote. We need as big a vote as possible," Bush told reporters between campaign stops.

McCain said he had "pledged to the Supreme Court that I would finish the job," and reviewed a record of supporting a tax increase in Texas after making a no-tax pledge.

"The strategic advantage is that he had said he would not support a tax increase - a position Bush says he never supported," McCain said.

"I'm doing what I've always been doing: I've trained to do and taught to do," he said. "And if you know it's right, you stand up for it. And likewise, if you know it's wrong, you have to challenge it. No matter what the consequences are.

"You-signed-for-your-life for your country and you stand up for it. And likewise, if you know it's wrong, you have to challenge it. No matter what the consequences are.

"McCain said he would cut fewer taxes. The candidate who projected government surpluses to bolster Social Security and the national debt was doing it differently Sunday than he was a week ago.

"My father was the Republican presidential candidate in Iowa this year," McCain said.

"You can see what this has done to us, done to my family," he said. "This is a test of whether the Pentagon intends to make an example of him."

"I don't have any doubt that a career officer is going to argue the course against the charge. He doesn't expect to win, and he doesn't expect the Pentagon to make an example of him." McCain added.

"If you know it's right, you stand up for it. And likewise, if you know it's wrong, you have to challenge it and you have to be willing to pay what the consequences are.

"It's going to be a long race," he said.

"McCain has argued that Bush's claims are false. Uncontested campaign consultant Mike Murphy disputed that, saying "people saw it on Fox."

Turkish police find six more bodies in Tarsus

Associated Press

ANKARA

Police dug up six bodies near a militant Kurdish Islamic group's hide-out in southern Turkey on Sunday, raising to 31 the number of corpses uncovered recently of people believed killed by the militants.

The latest grisly discovery came in a field in the town of Tarsus, 310 miles south of the capital, Ankara. In previous days, police had found 25 bodies in a field in the town of Istanbul and another in a field inside sacks with the bodies of other militants, the official Anatolia news agency reported.

Police believe the victims were slain by the militants, who have been living in the mainly Kurdish southeast. Many of the victims had been tortured, and some had been buried alive, newspapers reported.

In Sunday's discovery, police found three naked bodies buried in a field inside sacks with the victims' hands and feet bound, the official Anatolia news agency reported. Three other bodies, also with their limbs tied, were recovered nearby. They had been buried 10 feet underground. Diggers also found two sacks containing clothing belonging to the victims.

The gruesome finds follow confessions from leading militants captured in a nationwide crackdown on Hezbollah, which means "Party of God" in Arabic. Police detained close to 150 suspected members after killing the leader of the group's most militant wing last week.

Ruling party starts campaign

Associated Press

MEXICO CITY

Ruling-party candidate Francisco Labastida began his campaign for the Mexican presidency Sunday, renewing a long-standing pledge to fight corruption and promising to redesign the government.

Labastida, the candidate of the Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, formally opened his campaign in the historic Theater of the Republic, a site in the central state of Queretaro where his grandfather helped draft the country's first post-revolutionary constitution in 1917.

Labastida promised to honor the document's commitment to a country of honesty and fairness, and he pledged to "redesign the government to give all of its programs and actions the quality, efficiency, and honor that the people deserve." Labastida, 57, a former interior secretary and Sinaloa state governor, was chosen as the party's nominee after the PRI's first open national primary on Nov. 7. The primary ended a tradition of having Mexico's outgoing president select the PRI's candidate. The PRI has governed the country without opposition for 71 years.

"Let's reconstruct in the country a culture of legality and respect for the laws." Francisco Labastida

The elections on July 2 will face Vicente Fox, a former Coca-Cola executive and former governor of Guanajuato state, and Cuauhtemoc Cardenas, the former Mexico City mayor who is a pillar of the Mexican left. Cardenas was defeated in two earlier runs for the presidency, in 1988 and 1994.

Labastida promised that the elections will be "the freest, fairest and most honest in the history of the country." His pledges to fight corruption have provoked disbelief and attacks from critics such as Fox, who claim that the PRI was responsible for promoting a culture of corruption during its seven-decade hold on power.

But Labastida has defended the platform vigorously, and on Sunday he told his supporters, "We are going to combat corruption. We are going to eliminate impunity."

Who draws the line in censorship?

TUCSON, Ariz. — Growing up, children are typically taught to paint and draw using watercolors, oils, markers, crayons and colored pencils. As a kid, Chris Ofili was apparently far from typical.

Last September, the Senate publicly condemned Ofili for his outslandish artwork and even stripped The Brooklyn Museum of Art of its funding for the exhibit. This is all very absurd, especially since Ofili was simply using his unique art as a vessel for self-expression.

One of the more talked-about pieces by Ofili, a picture of the Virgin Mary covered with fecal matter and cutouts of “bust shots” from porn magazines, was referred to as “sick” by New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani. Yet another, more local form of censorship involves vulgarity on the internet. Arizona State Representative Jean McGrath (R-Glendale) has posed two bills, which, if made law, would be censored, passed through a board of executives and given a rating. Logging onto a local Internet browser will soon seem like a weekend trip to the movies.

These are two fairly hefty instances of attempted censorship and infringement on free speech. Both deal with prohibition of freedom, but who is to say where the line can be drawn?

If the Senate feels the need to ban art that may offend certain people, then it is going to have to ban everything that offends people: clothing, books, music, language, maybe even food too. The line has to be drawn somewhere. Instead of worrying about what offends people, the American government needs to take a long hard look at where truly does not.

There is no right or wrong solution to censorship and questionably offensive forms of expression. What deeply disturbs one person might hit the funny bone of another. People all over the world have been arguing this fact for centuries. Politicians like Giuliani and McGrath have been poking around in other people’s business since the beginning of time.

There are homeless and hungry people on the streets, yet the American government insists on exerting its energy for “tastling” on rare forms of art and preventing grown, voting adults from surfing certain parts of the Internet.

But hope cannot be lost. The people of America are the ones who elect these officials, placing them in attempted censorship positions. Instead of worrying about what offends people, the American government needs to take a long hard look at where truly does not.

What about sophomores?

Like the sophomores' interviews for the reaction to Friday's paper, I am also extremely disappointed in the cancellation of Sophomore Siblings Weekend. The Trest page article by Laura Ronpfe that explained the office of Student Activities' reasons for its cancellation frustrated me even more due to what I see as ridiculous reasons and justifications for their actions. Low attendance, Notre Dame's 'national nature' and the 'national trend in the decreasing size of families,' are laughable excuses for cancelling the weekend. I seem to recall a line that stretched out of South Dining Hall all the way across South Quad at last year's event with the number of people that were there to enjoy the event was overwhelming.

Secondly, just because Notre Dame students come from all 50 states and from many nations is not a reason for cancelling events. While it might be more difficult for siblings from further away to attend, shouldn't it be the family's decision to make whether to send a child, not the University? Just how I decide whether or not it's worth it to come all the way here from Honolulu, Hawaii, to attend Notre Dame is up to me. My family saw the importance of this event and was finding a way to send my younger brother here for the visit. The absurdity of the last reason in regards to decreasing family size does not even deserve to be acknowledged.

The bottom line is that the tradition of Notre Dame has always emphasized the importance of family. Freshmen get Orientation Weekend, juniors get Junior Parent Weekend and seniors get Graduation Weekend. What about the sophomores?

Abortion issue still vital: no matter what candidates say

I've been slacking on my newspaper reading. I'll still glance at the New York Times on the Web every day, but I've started skipping over articles about the Catholic boy controversy and the upcoming presidential primary elections. Perhaps I'm not giving them enough of a chance, but I want to follow a candidate who says something new and says it from the heart.

Just past the anniversary of Roe v. Wade and 27 years of legal abortion across the United States, I am still not hearing anything new on the abortion issue from the 2000 presidential candidates. I'll ignore the Democratic primary, as Vice President Al Gore and former Senator Bill Bradley both staunchly support abortion. The 11 candidates initially entered in the Republican race ranged the political spectrum on the topic.

Most claimed to be pro-life, but many wanted to downplay the issue. To some extent, this makes political sense. The abortion debate can at times get very shrill and just boil down to the many slogans we all know. A candidate needs to appease a wide variety of people in order to get the money and the votes needed to win a national election.

But some candidates have done something worse than ignoring the abortion issue. I will spare names as so not to appear to be endorsing a particular candidate at this point.

Some have said that the issue is no longer relevant, that the nation has already decided on legal abortion and so it is not something they are going to challenge. This is wrong. Anyone who thinks that abortion is no longer an important issue of our time, or who thinks that a legal decision makes killing right should talk to the more than 100,000 people who march for life in Washington D.C., every year. There will find people of all ages, of all backgrounds, from all over the country who feel a passion for the gift of life and feel called to speak for those who cannot.

At the same time, let's hear the politicians spread the new and refreshing message that many pro-life organizations, including our own here at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, are striving to advance. Let's respect life not just in our verbal opposition on abortion, but on other political issues and how we live. And let's start thinking about what we can do for those women who do give life to their babies. Adoption and parenting are not easy things to do, but they are honorable. It's up to us to take guts to run for president. It's going to take more to do the right thing. Think about it when you fill out your absentee ballots this spring.

LK, Jr. and his mission

Martin Luther King Day was celebrated last Monday by most of America, but this week, Notre Dame devotes an entire week to the celebration of the civil rights leader.

Knowing that somehow this situation can and will be changed.

From his youth onward, King showed the gifts of passion and discipline. In 1948, at the age of 19, King graduated from Morehouse College without ever having graduated from high school. Five years later, he married Coretta Scott in Marion, Ala. King went on to receive his Ph.D. from Boston University in 1955. During the same year, Rosa Parks was arrested because she refused to give up her seat on a bus to a white man.

Because King dared to think differently, because he devoted his life to his vision, he faced terrorisms. Bombs were thrown onto his porch. Shots were fired. Names were called. But King continued. In 1958, Harper and Row published King's book "Stride Toward Freedom: The Montgomery Story." Soon afterward, King was stabled in the chess during a book signing in Harlem. Still, he continued. The Freedom Riders rode and the marchers marched, the protesters protested and the police arrested.

In 1963, King wrote his famous "Letter from a Birmingham Jail" and the vision took hold. In the same year, the Supreme Court ruled Birmingham's segregation laws unconstitutional, and King delivered his "I have a dream" speech on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial. King went on to receive the Nobel Peace Prize in Oslo, Norway, the following year. King's speech touched millions throughout the nation.

"I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: "We hold these truths to be self-evident that all men are created equal.'"

"I have a dream, that one day on the red hills of Georgia the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners will be able to sit together at the table of brotherhood."

"I have a dream, that one day even the state of Mississippi, a state seething with the heat of injustice, sweltering with the heat of oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice."

"I have a dream, that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character."

"I have a dream today!"

This speech defined the moral basis that would serve as the foundation of the civil rights movement. Before his death, Kennedy had created the Civil Rights Bill. Finally, the Congress of Racial Equality of 1964 took seat of segregation and tossed it aside by prohibiting racial discrimination in public places, and by calling for equal opportunity in employment and education for African Americans.

In 1965, Congress passed another bill entitled the Voting Rights Act of 1965. This bill allowed African-Americans to vote in all public elections and came into action partly because of a protest in Selma, Ala., that King helped organize. The protest included a march from Selma to Montgomery, the state capital. It was interrupted with tear gas and police brutality, but the point came across loudly and clearly. They would fight for their rights using weapons of words and tactics of peace.

In 1968, the life of Martin Luther King Jr. came to an end when a sniper assassinated him at the Lorraine Motel in Memphis. He died moments later in St. Joseph's Hospital from the gunshot wound to the neck.

In 1942, Father Edward Sorin started this University. He, too, had a vision. A vision of young people learning to use the gifts of knowledge, wisdom, discipline and integrity in order to better this world. With the celebration of Martin Luther King Day, it is important for Notre Dame students, faculty and administration to think about the strong correlation between the visions of Sorin and King.

Both Sorin and King worked for a world in which people would rise above petty judgments and closed minds, a world in which people would learn together and work together for the good of one another. If King were to walk onto this campus, one hopes that he would be pleased. It is up to each individual to eradicate prejudices and to confront any fear of those who are different.

"And when this happens, when we allow freedom to ring, when we let it ring from every village and every hamlet, from every state and every city, we will be able to speed up that day when all of God's children, black men and white men, Jews and Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics, will be able to join hands and sing in the words of the old Negro spiritual, 'Free at last, free at last. Thank God Almighty, we are free at last.'"

"They made some real good shots," said Green. "We had some pretty nice looks too, but we just weren't able to make them. The credit goes to them. It's easy when you were down by a lot. We turned the ball over a lot — we need to learn to limit turnovers so we don't give other teams a chance to get back in the game.

The Irish settled down and repeatedly took the ball to the basket in the final minutes, outscoring the Hurricanes 20-3 to secure the win. Green led the charge as time wound down, scoring eight of her 22 points in the last 10 minutes.

Miami defense had trouble containing freshman Ruth Riley and forward Jali Henderson. Riley scored 15 points and added 13 as they led the Irish to an impressive 54 shot percentage. Henderson had the only double-double between the teams, with a game-high 13 rebounds.

Another Seminole arrested

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Sebastian Janikowski, Florida State's two-time All-American kicker, was arrested at a night club early Sunday and accused of attacking a police officer into releasing his roommate.

The arrest was yet another problem with the law for the championship Florida State team.

Brubry is a third-year receiver who was a starter last season. He line the second time police said he could be charged with greater or lesser offenses. Janikowski was released from Leon County jail at 7:42 a.m. on $1,000 bond. The arrest stems from a dispute at The Grove nightclub, where police said Chris Knight was working as an off-duty bouncer. The club told Knight that Janikowski was welcome, but his friends were not. police said Knight told Janikowski’s roommate, Aaron Silverman, to leave.

Silverman refused, and after several warnings was taken into custody, police said.

Janikowski approached Knight as he was doing paperwork in his patrol car and asked new questions. When Knight looked up again, Janikowski was asking him and counting out money, police said.

Janikowski stepped back to the car and asked ‘How much do you charge for pictures?’ police said.

Police said Janikowski offered $400 to snap pictures for his friend go.

Janikowski has kicked 50 field goals this past two seasons, and most of his kicks were beyond the end zone. He is the only current player on an recently selected college team in the nation.

Earlier this month, Janikowski said he would attend a school a year early to enter the NFL. He has said he wants to turn pro so his mother in Poland can join him in the United States.

Janikowski is known to frequent late-night spots around Tallahassee. While in New Orleans for the Sugar Bowl, he missed curfew.

"Our strategy is to get it under the basket — it is our big front and it worked well against Miami."

 Janikowski was an all-American star who was released by his team.

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Becky Cummings scored 18 points and Kristin Rasmussen had 17 as Michigan State defeated No. 4 Penn State 71-63 Sunday, snapping the Lady Lions' 12-game winning streak.

The victory marked only the second time Michigan State (14-4, 5-2 Big Ten) has beaten Penn State (16-3, 7-1).

Stifling a high-powered Penn State offense that has averaged nearly 80 points, the Spartans held Penn State to just 25 second-half points, holding Penn State scoreless for more than eight minutes. The Lady Lions shot 24.2 percent in the second half.

The Lady Lions relied on 12 first-half points from Andrea Garner to keep the victory in reach. Garner, who took sole possession of first place in the conference.

No. 2 Louisiana Tech 85, Western Kentucky 61

Louisiana Tech coach Leon Barmore knows that Betty Lennox can be deadly when she's patient.

Lennox had no trouble killing off any chances of her team being upset, matching a career-high with 31 points as the third-ranked Lady Techsters beat Western Kentucky.

Lennox made 13 of 23 shots, including 4 of 6-3-pointers; and added seven assists, six steals and five rebounds as Louisiana Tech (13-2, 4-0 Sun Belt Conference) won its third straight since a 90-63 loss at No. 1 Connecticut on Jan. 2.

No. 13 Illinois 82, Northwestern 65

Allison Curtin scored 20 points, helping No. 13 Illinois snap a three-game losing skid with a win over Northwestern.

Jataya Catchings added seven points and Shavonna Hunter scored 14 for the Illini (13-7, 5-3 Big Ten). Leslie Schrock scored 18 for the Wildcats (6-11, 3-4).

Catchings scored seven points in the first 12 minutes of the second half as Illinois maintained its eight-point halftime lead. Hunter sank two free throws with 8:39 left and Catchings hit a drive with 6:52 remaining, pushing the lead to 62-50.

No. 22 Mississippi State 85, Alabama 65

Jennifer Farrow scored 21 points and LaToya Thomas had 20 Sunday as No. 22 Mississippi State snapped a 26-game losing streak to Alabama with a 85-65 victory.

Late LeClair goal ties Penguins

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH (AP) — John LeClair scored with a minute left to send the Philadelphia Flyers tied the Pittsburgh Penguins 4-4 Sunday night despite squandering a third-period lead.

The Penguins took a 2-0 lead at 2:32 of the first as the Flyers' top-ranked power play scored twice, but then took back the lead at 4:32 on goals by Jiri Smejkal and Bobbie Brown 104 apart in the third period.

But with the Penguins trying to run out the clock and win for the second time in seven games, LeClair directed the puck past Tom Barsasso at 19:00 of the third — his 26th goal and 51st in his last 15 games against the Penguins.

The Penguins, playing their third consecutive game without the injured Jaromir Jagr (groin), remained winless in overtime — 0-5-4. The Flyers, also without their star as Eric Lindros sat out with a concussion, are 3-2-7 in overtime games.

The Flyers had been held to three goals while going 6-3-1 in their previous seven games.

Smejkal made it 3-2 at 6:06 of the third period when he shot off a left-wing trifle from just inside the top of the left circle that eluded rookie goalie Brian Boucher, who had allowed two goals in his previous two outings.

Smejkal, 16 years old, was so happy he finally scored that he took several strides on skates and banged his chest into the left glass along the left-wing boards.

The Penguins, outshot 33-16 in the time and 39-27 overall, retook the lead at 7:10 when Brown, stationed along the goal line, punched in the rebound of Jun Hrdina's shot for his sixth goal and second in as many nights.

He also scored in Pittsburgh's 4-2 loss at Montreal on Sunday.

General Manager John Ferguson, who planned to coach Herb Brooks last week in Finland to provide the team with a balanced attack, led by attendees and attenders.

The game started hours after Carolina traded Keith Primeau earlier in the day, and 56 minutes before Primeau made his debut for the Washington Capitals.

The Penguins, who had allowed two goals in his previous two games, remained winless in overtime — 0-5-4. The Flyers, also without their star as Eric Lindros sat out with a concussion, are 3-2-7 in overtime games.

Freshman Jere Macura drives in Notre Dame’s 81-66 win over Pittsburgh. Macura scored 12 points off the bench for the Irish.

the key. I've been hurting his confidence.

Whatever it was that was holding Notre Dame (12-7, 3-2) back, Macura and the Irish responded Saturday with a 81-66 victory over the Panthers (6-8, 0-5) in front of 10,030 fans at the Joyce Center.

"It's nice to win again against a team that I think is a very good basketball team," Doherty said. "I was very concerned. After two losses you want to come home and play well for yourselves, for your team and for the crowd." Macura came off the bench to hit four three-pointers and finished with 12 points, while Troy Murphy scored a game high 21 to lead the Irish.

"I felt very good off the bench and in warm-ups," Macura said. "I thought this was going to be my day."

"He's a great shooter. He hasn't played as well over the past few weeks," Doherty added. "So hopefully this will get him going and get his confidence back."

Playing at home certainly helped Notre Dame's confidence shooting the ball. The Irish shot 62 percent from the field and connected on a school record 14 three-pointers.

"Every team has been having a field day with us lately," Pitt forward Ricardo Greer said. "Today they were red hot and it killed us. We tried to go to the zone to prevent Troy Murphy from scoring. We knew Graves and Carroll could shoot but were more worried about Murphy. The others that shot well all year just shot well today too."

The Irish also got some extra help from their bench, which combined for 29 points and 12 rebounds.

"Some guys weren't as sharp as they've been so I thought it was important to get some guys in there," Doherty said. "Jere played very well in David Graves' absence and Mike Morsese gave me a comfort­able feeling while he was on the court."

Martin Ingelsby also had a strong showing with 11 points and five assists in 24 minutes. Notre Dame committed 22 turnovers and attempted 20 fewer shots, but out-rebounded Pittsburgh 32-24. However, shot just 42 percent from the field compared to Notre Dame's 65 percent.

Jarrett Lockhart and Greer each scored 20 points for the Panthers. Greer also had eight offensive rebounds and seven steals. Chris Seabrooks added 17 points in the losing effort.

The Irish return to action Tuesday when they host Miami.

Irish fans may know Matt Carroll ran knock down a three and that David Graves can get into a groove from behind the arc. But they never saw the Irish drain 14 three-pointers in a game like they did Saturday in an 81-66 win over the Pittsburgh Panthers.

Notre Dame scored more than half of its points from three-point land, breaking the previous school record of 13. The team shot an astounding 61 percent from long distance, tearing apart Pittsburgh's defense.

As Notre Dame won by the three. Pittsburgh lost by the three. Not only could the Panthers not prevent the red-hot shooting of the Irish, they only shot 23 percent on their 26 shots from behind the arc.

"I think that's 36 in three games," Pittsburgh coach Ben Howland of the number of three-point shots the Panthers have given up thus far. "With our lack of depth, it's hard for us to play much man-to-man. I think that they along with the other four teams we've played in the Big East [St. John's, Connecticut, Selon Hall and Syracuse], are all NCAA teams, and I would be surprised if that doesn't happen."

"Balance in the game was key for the Irish, as five players hit multiple threes in the Big East victory — Carroll, Graves, Troy Murphy, Martin Ingelsby and Jere Macura."

"At times you think that Troy's the only one that can score," Notre Dame head coach Matt Doherty said. "But we've got other guys that can knock the ball in the basket."

The Irish were hot from the beginning as Notre Dame was hitting six shots from the opening seconds, as Murphy and Carroll scored three-pointers on the first two possessions. Carroll and Ingelsby each dialed long distance three times, while Graves and Murphy were both two for four from three-point range.

"It doesn't matter who scores," Ingelsby, a senior point guard, said. "We've got some really good shooters. If we're hitting our shots, it's going to make Murphy more effective."

But it was the freshman reserve Macura who was the most surprising sharp shooter.

He hit four three-pointers in the first eight minutes.

"He's a great shooter," Doherty said. "Think back to the 15 points he had in the Indiana game. I want that back."

Macura, who averages only 4.3 points per game in his first season at Notre Dame, scored 12 points in 20 minutes.

"Macura impressed me," Howland said. "He has great form as a shooter. Ingelsby we knew was a great shooter. We were late getting to him (on his sharp shooting)." Every player who took a shot from behind the arc for the Irish nailed at least two. All five were 50 percent or better in the contest.

Doherty said the team's improved offensive execution was key to the hot shooting.

"We worked a lot since the Syracuse game on our zone offense," Doherty said. "Because against Syracuse, we didn't execute our offense very well. We were shooters. If they can get open, I feel confident they can get the shot."

Irish break records, finish second in season opener

By KATHLEEN O'BRIEN
Associated Press Editor

Freshman Jamie Volkmer and Tameisha King began their Notre Dame track careers in a big way, setting three school records between them in leading Notre Dame to a near-victory Friday.

"You've got to love it," head track and field coach Joe Plano said. "What a wonderful first meet for freshmen, and all of their performances can score at the Big East meet, which is ultimately the goal of the indoor season."

Notre Dame fell to Ball State 109 to 163, earning a second-place finish in the quadrangular meet.

Volkmer won the pole vault with a leap of 11-feet, breaking the old Notre Dame record of 10-6. She took third place in setting a new Irish standard in the triple jump with a mark of 39-3 1/2, smashing the old record of 36-9.

"I'm really excited about it," Volkmer said. "I was really nervous going into the first meet, so I'm just glad things went well."

King erased the old long jump record of 18-1 1/4 with her winning jump of 19-5. "It was my first jump, and my first jumps are never my best jumps," King said. "I was actually hopeful that I could jump 21 feet, but 19-5 is a good start."

In addition to the two record-breakers, senior high jumper Jen Engelhardt leap 5-10 to earn a provisional qualification for the NCAA Indoor Championships in March.

Besides the field event winners, the Irish captured four individual victories in the running events.

Sophomore sprinter Liz Grow had a double victory. Grow won the 60-meter dash by one-hundredth of a second over Dorothy Game of Western Michigan, and one-hundredth of a second over Ball State's Keisha Cowin. Grow crossed the finish line in 7.74 seconds.

Grow won the 200-meter dash, blowing the rest of the field away with her time of 24.74 seconds.

In the 600-meter run, it was yet another freshman beating out the competition.

Ana Morales, moving up from her usual sprinting events, took first place in 1 minute, 35.58 seconds.

Junior Leanne Brady had one of the best races of her career as she won the 800-meter run in 2 minutes, 16.96 seconds.

The long distance events of the mile and 3000-meter run were weaker areas for the Irish Friday.

With senior All-American Allison Klemmer sitting on the sidelines of the week, and several other distance runners competing in events they might not normally run, Notre Dame didn't get a runner to place above fifth.

"As a whole, I thought we had a lot of balance," Connelly said. "It was probably the most balanced team we've ever had."

"The addition of Tameisha King and Jamie Volkmer really helped us in events we weren't as strong in."

would prove costly. Reynart lost his goal stick and Bishai gave him his, but then picked up the goal stick to play the puck himself. The penalty for illegal stick would carry over into the overtime period.

In overtime, Carlson was the hero once again. His goal 52 seconds into overtime ignited a celebration by both the Irish player and Plano's game-winning and game-winning goals gave the Irish a trillion come-back victory highlighted by three goals in the final 1:18.

"Dan Carlson was the best player on the ice tonight," said Poulin. "There were a lot of good players but he was definitely the best."

The Irish had 21 shots on goal in the second period with no goals to show for it. They came back in the third and put 25 shots on goal. In addition to the impressive offensive showing the Irish defense took the Bronx's 2nd ranked powerplay out of the game - limiting them to few scoring chances.

"After the second period, I thought that we had played our best period of the year, until the third," Poulin said. "We were dominating and losing, but our attitude through the whole game was we are going to find a way to win. It was an enormous win for us."

Notre Dame carried the momentum over from the first game to take an early lead on Saturday night to pick up its second straight win with a 4-1 win. Dusbabek scored less than seven minutes into the game on a bare slap shot from the blue line. With the lead the Irish kept the pressure up, both on offense and defense, and never looked back.

Ryan Dolder added a power play goal with six seconds remaining in the opening period to stretch the lead to two. Carlson added a power play goal early in the second to give Notre Dame eight power play goals in its last 13 goals scored. The defense continued to keep Western Michigan off of their game, limiting the number of good scoring chances and effectively killing eight Notre Dame penalties.

Freshman Michael Chin scored the fourth Irish goal in the 15:51 mark of the second period - finally capitalizing after several good scoring chances earlier in the game. Zaworski's shootout bid ended when Western Michigan finally found the back of the net seven minutes into the third period.

"We were much better tonight [in the second game]," Poulin said. "We had a controlled effort from the start. We gave up a game to the guys that play very well and this time the puck went to the whole team."

Dusbabek finished the weekend with six points — one goal and two assists in each game — while Carlson added four points (2G-2A). All four Notre Dame lines contributed strong play to the offensive outburst in the series. The Irish scored seven goals overall in 1:40 minute span carrying over from the last five minutes on Friday and into Saturday's game.

Notre Dame has struggled in the second games of series, but the strong play this weekend finally broke that problem. The Irish are now 5-2-1 in the first games and 2-5-2 in the second.

"It was definitely a factor going into the game," said Poulin. "We knew that we had to put back-to-back games together."

The sweep pushed Notre Dame (10-13-5, 7-7-4 CCHA) into sole possession of fifth place in the CCHA. The Irish trail the fourth-place Lake Superior State Lakers by just three points.

TITANS

Associated Press

The Associated Press

Tuscaloosa, Ala. - The Associated Press

TENNESSEE Titans never felt so cozy on the road. And they're not done traveling yet.

Next stop: the Super Bowl in Atlanta against St. Louis.

America's wandering waiters, who have played in four stadiums in three cities in four twenty-four hours, upset the Jacksonville Jaguars 33-14 on Sunday behind the scrambling of Steve McNair and a defense that forced six turnovers.

The Jaguars trailed 14-10 in the half but scored 16 points in about 4 1/2 minutes in the third quarter to pull away.

It's the first Super Bowl trip ever for the franchise that began in the old AFL in 1960.

The Rams, who beat the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 11-6 for the NFC title, opened as 8-point favorites.

"It's about time," said Titans owner Bud Adams, who founded the franchise in Houston, then moved it after the 1999 season when he couldn't get money for a new stadium.

"I'm getting pretty old. I didn't want to go to the Super Bowl in a wheelchair," McNair almost had to use a wheelchair before the game.
He spent much of the week.

"At one point during the hour he couldn't even touch his toe without it killing him," tight end Frank Wycheck said.

"For him to go out and have the day he did is just unbelievable. He's a leader who leads by example and we follow him.

There was little pain in McNair's game plan against the Jaguars, who won 15 games this year and lost just three, all to the Titans.

McNair ran nine times for 91 yards, including a 14-yard scramble to set up one of his two 1-yard sneaks for touchdowns. He also had a 9-yard touchdown pass in the first to-quarter to Yancey Thigpen, who left in the second quarter with a broken toe. The Titans also lost safety Marcus Robertson with a broken ankle.

This was the third step in a long, strange trip to the Super Bowl for Tennessee.

The Titans won their first playoff game on the most improbable of plays — a lateral by Wycheck on a kickoff return that Kevin Dyson took 72 yards for the winning touchdown against Buffalo with three seconds left.

Last week, Tennessee shut down Peyton Manning and the high-powered Colts and won 19-16 in Indianapolis.

And this week they continued their mastery over the Jags, who had the NFL's best regular-season record at 14-2 and smashed Miami 62-7 in their first playoff game last weekend.

Tennessee won Sunday as it has all season: a little defense, a lot of defense, and a big contribution from special teams.

All of it turned during the 16-point sprint in 4 minutes, 28 seconds in the third quarter.

It began with a six-play, 76-yard drive that ended on the 9-yard pass to Eddie Dyson somehow ducked out of the ensuing tackle. Kevin Hardy, who caided one.

and the third and Vanderbilt

Adelphia Coliseum, they went 13-3 and qualified as a wild

Jaguars twice. It was

The Titans' success is especially remarkable considering that it wasn't that important, Matthews said.

"To watch other teams playing the campionships and going to the Super Bowl every year, you build up a barrier more than anything. But it's nice.

Rams hold on against Bucs, earn trip to Super Bowl

Associated Press

Their offense imploding, their cover blown, the St. Louis Rams looked ready to head home.

Then Kurt Warner played like an MVP, getting the Midwest Express attack the one touchdown it needed. The underhanded defense did the rest, and the Rams won the chance to play the Tennessee Titans in the Super Bowl.

Warner hit No. 4 wide receiver Ricky Proehl with a 30-yard touchdown pass with 4:44 remaining Sunday to lift St. Louis past the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 11-6 for the NFC championship.

"It didn't matter who did it," the quarterback said. "As long as he was wearing a Rams jersey, it didn't matter."

"But when it comes down to making a play, we've made plays all year long. Ricky came through today." Proehl's touchdown was his first of the season and he finished with six catches for 100 yards. None of those — or the 33 receptions he made this season, or the 467 of his entire 10-year career — meant anything close to his leaping grab over backup cornerback Bryan Kelly.

"I'm the guy they've always trying to get rid of," he said. "I'm the guy they are all trying to replace. You know, there's 189 Ricky Proehls out there. I beg to differ."

Tennessee, which won the NFC crown in Jacksonville 33-14, handed the Rams their first loss in their seventh game of the season, but opened as underdogs.

"We know we're in for just as tough a game against the Titans," said Warner, a former Arena League quarterback who got a chance to play this year only because starter Trent Green wrecked his knee in the preseason.

Tampa Bay's gallant defensive effort looked like it would be enough to steal the victory.

But quarterback Shaun King made several critical mistakes down the stretch, including an interception at midfield by fellow rookie Dre' Bly that set up the winning drive.

"We brought them into our zone, we brought them into our misery," said Warren Sapp, the Defensive Player of the Year, "and we had them down 6-2 and just kept battling ... and it came down to one play."

Tampa Bay coach Tony Dungy said: "It's a very tough feeling, difficult to be that close to a Super Bowl and not get it done."

The Bucs never have gotten it done. Nor have the Rams, whose only Super Bowl appearance came in the 1979 season, when they beat Tampa Bay 9-0 for the NFC championship.

Then they fell to the Steelers in the Super Bowl.

"They aren't likely to get it done if their offense can't get out of its own way, even if their defense plays "spectacularly," as coach Dick Vermeil described it.

"I think we showed people we could play every kind of game," said Marshall Faulk, the NFL Offensive Player of the Year who certainly didn't play his kind of game. "The record-setting running back was held to a total of 49 yards.

"They wanted to play ball control and take the deep ball away from us. We did the same to them and thought our offense could make more plays than them."

They made one more play, offsetting the defensive effort by the Bucs, who held St. Louis to 309 yards, 91 below its season average.

But the Rams had to survive a last-ditch march on which they got two of their five sacks on King, who still managed to lead the Bucs to the St. Louis 22.

"We made a couple of plays, but I took a couple of sacks, and that's a no-no at that time," said King, who finished 13-of-29 for 163 yards and two interceptions.

We would like to express our greatest appreciation to all of those who participated in Project Warmth this year!

We successfully collected approximately 1500 coats.

This would never have been made possible without the outstanding efforts of Notre Dame students, faculty, and staff.

We would also like to thank our sponsors for the 1999-00 Project Warmth.

Special thanks to: GEAR, St. Michael's Laundry, Warren Golf Course, the College of Business Administration, and Student Government.

Through all of the cooperative efforts, we were able to continue for a fourth successful year!
West, Mishka lead Irish to victory in first meet of year

• Three men post NCAA qualifying marks

Phil Mishka and Marshawn West put their senior leadership into play Friday, leading the Irish to victory with individual wins that met NCAA qualifying standards. West started off the season by beating Western Michigan. Ball State and Michigan State easily. Notre Dame finished 26 points ahead of Western Michigan, on the strength of seven event victories.

"The Big East is always the big focus for us," Mishka said. "I think we took a few giant steps towards winning that tonight, which would be really great for the seniors. We've never been able to bring that home.

Mishka won the 800-meter dash in 1 minute, 49.68 seconds, nearly two seconds ahead of his nearest competitor. That time was good enough to earn the senior a provisional qualification mark. The mark earned Mishka and Marshaun Piane a double-win in the sprints, winning both the 60-meter dash and the 200-meter dash.

Senior Chris Cochran scored a double-win in the sprints, winning both the 60-meter dash and the 400-meter relay. "On the men's side, we had a lot of personal bests," sprint coach John Millar said. "Chris Cochran ran his best times ever in the 60 and the 200, and just missed an NCAA qualifying time. Terry Wray ran the fastest 400 he's run since he's been here. Travis Davey has the fastest 200 and fastest 60 that he's ever run."

Wray finished third in the 400-meter dash, while Davey placed among the top six in both his events.

Senior Tim Kober ran the third-fastest time in Notre Dame history in the 400-meter run, winning the event in 4:19.84. He also anchored the 4 x 400-meter relay with a 48.2 leg.

"We did extremely well if you think it's the first meet of the season," Kober said.

Besides Cochran, Mishka and Kober, freshman Nick Setta was the fourth leg on the 4 x 400-meter relay team.

Junior Terry Wray races to his best time in the 400 since his Notre Dame career began.

Notre Dame sweeps into fifth place

Dusbabek, Carlson lead ND to wins over WMU

By MATT OLIVA
Sports Writer

Despite trailing 3-1 with less than four minutes remaining in the third period, the Irish hockey team did not panic and rallied for a 4-3 overtime victory over the Western Michigan Broncos.

TheIrish won the first game of the two-game series because a strong weekend would boost the Irish ahead of the Broncos and into fifth place in the CCHA. Losing would drop them further out of contention for a top seed in the playoffs.

In the last five minutes of the first game, the Irish would turn the game around. The only Irish goal had come in the first period on a fluke bounce off of Joe Dusbabek's leg. They had outplayed the Broncos throughout the entire game but had only a two-goal deficit to show for it.

The Irish held their opponent to only one shot on goal for the entire third period, and out-shot the Broncos by an amazing 44 shots in the game, 56-12.

With 3 minutes, 26 seconds left in the game, the breaks started to go Notre Dame's way. David Dannon scored off assists from Andy Jurkowski and Sean Souhrb to bring the game back within in one goal. Then, with about a minute and a half left in regulation, head coach Dave Poulin called a timeout todiscuss a play. After pulling goaltender Tony Zasowski to give the Irish an extra attacker, the Irish won the ensuing face off and created a fury of shots in front of Broncos goaltender Jeff Reysuit.

Dusbabek knocked a shot off of the post and the rebound came out to junior left wing Dan Carlson, who put the puck in the net to tie the game at three with 1:23 left.

"We were on the power play in their end and we have to win the game," Poulin said. "We had worked on a new facoff play with four or five options to score off of. We pulled the goalie early because in this situation we needed to win."

A major factor in the outcome of the game came with 28 seconds left as Western Michigan's Mike Bishai took a penalty that see HOCKEY/page 23

Irish regain confidence with win

By BRIAN KESSLER

After a two-game losing streak, it would be easy for the Notre Dame basketball team to question its confidence heading into Saturday's Big East showdown with Pittsburgh. The freshman Jere Mataraza, however, it may have been a harmless game of horse that was hurting his confidence.

"Joke with him because before the past few games I'd have a horse competition with him and I've been beating him," first-year head coach Matt Doherty said. "We didn't play (Friday), so maybe that's...

Green leads Irish over Hurricanes

By KERRY SMITH
Assistant Sports Editor

Danielle Green left the Hurricanes seeing red as she led the Irish to a 76-54 win in Miami on Saturday.

Stepping up for the Irish offense, Green stole the limelight as she tallied a game and season-high 22 points and made six assists on the afternoon.

Green showed the Hurricanes that she meant business from the opening play. With a quick steal and layup to begin the first half, she led the Irish on a 12-0 run that put the squad on top from the outset. Miami came close at times, but was unable to capture the lead as Notre Dame led for the entire game.

With the win, the No. 5 Irish move to 15-2 on the season and remain one of three teams to beat in the Big East with a 6-0 conference record. Connecticut and Boston College share undefeated conference records with Notre Dame.

The Irish came out strong, relying on their strength in the paint to propel them to a 47-33 halftime lead.

The Hurricanes weathered the storm of the Irish offense well and were kept at bay.
