Students slam Kickoff 2000 as confusing, time consuming

This year’s football ticket distribution procedure proved complicated and cumbersome, students said Tuesday after senior class ticket sales.

The system featured a student picnic at Stepan Center Monday where University ushers handed out lottery stickers on students’ ticket applications. At the conclusion of the picnic, a number was drawn to determine which student would be able to buy the first ticket. Sales proceeded numerically from the chosen number, with numbers from one to that number lining up after the higher numbers. Students without stickers will be last in line.

“I really disliked it,” said senior Zack Bray. “There’s got to be a way they can do it without making you show up at three different places at three different times. They should make it clear exactly what you have to do.”

Senior John Osborn expressed confusion about the reasoning behind the lottery tickets or even seat assignments.

“All they should do is designate one section of the stadium for each class," he said. “You can sit with your friends and get good seats if you get there early.”

Freshmen in particular found the system confusing.

“I thought it could have been more organized,” said first-year student Brita Hellige. “We had to be there for a long time.”

Katie Twitwell agreed.

“The info sheet was helpful, but not helpful enough,” she said.

Christina Maher, also a first-year student, explained that many of the freshmen did not understand the procedure until they arrived at the picnic.

Several students attended the picnic just to receive their stickers and did not stay for the events planned by the Office of Student Activities and student government.

“I stood in line, got my sticker and left,” said sophomore Kris Forerier. “By the time we got through the line, we were ready to go because it was such a long wait.”

Despite the short stay of some students, student body president Brian O’Donoghue was pleased with the turnout.

“I think the student body showed up in masse and I have nothing but the utmost respect for the Notre Dame student body and the spirit they have shown,” he said. O’Donoghue did note the length of the lines, as well as the absence of a convenient system for off-campus students to get their applications, as among the

Growing up

Lack was on my side in the middle of May. After spending five months searching and applying for internships in Washington, D.C., I finally got a job as a lifeguard. While I didn’t sound exciting or noble it was a foot in the door.

I had decided over winter break that I wanted to spend this summer in D.C., and when I got to school I furiously chose a search for an internship. I was limited to paid internships since I was being paid for my summer on my own. This made the search more difficult and the application process was incredibly competitive. After five months of being accepted by organizations that were unwilling to pay me, I began searching for a job.

A week later I was scheduled to leave for D.C. I was called about a lifeguarding job. Housing was my next concern. I had been looking for an apartment and finally found a furnished apartment for an incredibly reasonable amount of money. However, I could not get a picture of the building or an accurate description of how safe the area was (police reports were vague and hard to read). The student I would be subletting from assured me that the area was safe, and she would be there with me, a good friend. I had never met, enough to leave all of her things in the building. I set out for Washington D.C. thinking everything was rosy. I had the opportunity to earn some money and its dreams were able to do it at a reasonable cost. An hour later I had pink eye. The trip was only beginning. Thirteen hours later I arrived at the apartment building in Maryland and couldn’t get out of the door. It looked like the building was being flooding from had exaggerated the safety of the area. It was a poor and dilapidated area that was featured on the news that evening for a shower that occurred down the street. After two hard experiences I decided that my luck couldn’t get worse. I was wrong.

Since then I have been working in days I thought I should check out the place. I was working. I knew it was a housing complex. The building, it looked respectable, but it wasn’t a country club. I went inside and asked to see the pool. After looking at the pool on the roof I saw that I would be incredibly alone. I knew I was scheduled to work until 10 p.m. so safety was a big concern. It didn’t seem like a well-supervised and protected area, so I decided to leave.

My first day in D.C. had gone well. Most of the students were very friendly. I was stubborn. I stayed in a hotel for a week and looked for and eventually found an apartment. The next week I looked for a job. I became a waitress and then called the company I didn’t get to work two weeks a day. So two weeks later I was settled and had turned a bad situation into a good one.

The moral is that persistence was able to have a great time. Moreover, in addition to what I learned as an intern, I also learned a lot about independence.

NEWS DEPARTMENT

The Observer is a daily, student-run newspaper serving both Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s. The Observer news department uses the following guidelines in its news gathering process:

- The Observer news department strives to report on all campus and local events that affect either or both campuses and the surrounding areas.
- In addition to the local news, the Observer uses Associated Press stories and graphics to keep readers informed about national and world events.

An editorial policy states, "The Observer news sources are reported as accurately and objectively as possible." An important source of story ideas is the members of the NSDMC community who call, write, or e-mail The Observer staff regarding upcoming events. We encourage groups to contact us at least one week in advance with details regarding their activities.

The group may also take out an advertisement in the paper at our special campus rate. As a rule, we do not run previous lectures that we are planning to cover. We simply do not have the staff or space to run previous views of every campus lecture. Exceptions to this rule may be made if the lecture is to be given by a speaker of national or international prominence. We understand that there are times when preview article is more appropriate than an article reporting the event. This type of decision is made by the news editor. However, we are always willing to discuss news department coverage of an event, provided a group representative contacts the news editor one week prior to the event.

Book names LUSU nation’s No. 1. party school

BATON ROUGE, La. Chancelor Mark Emmert and other Louisiana State University administrators expressed concern Monday night about the Princeton Review named LUSU as the No. 1 party school in the nation.

"I am disappointed that this was reported," said Emmert. "I know that it’s not the truth," said Nancy Matthews, associate director of the Student Health Center.

Emmert said he received "informal information" Wednesday of LUSU’s placement on the list from the Associated Press and early information from the Princeton Review.

"LUSU is no more of a party school than any other American university," Emmert said.

Strike leaves students without phones

In addition to buying books and straightening out schedules, many Pennsylvania State University students living off-campus have found themselves with one more expense and hassle — purchasing cellular phone plans and being without telephone service. Because of a two-week strike by Verizon Communications employees, many off-campus students have not been able to use phone service in their apartments and houses. Samantha Branchie, a student at Verizon told her and her roommates they could be without phone service until December, she said the company will make those requests for new service as quickly as possible once the strike is resolved, but a waiting period of months or more is expected, said Harry Michel, a spokesman for Verizon.

Verizon, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the Communications Workers of America in New York and New York reached a tentative agreement to enter new contracts late Sunday.

OSU professor discovers dead

As an Oklahoma State University geology professor was found dead early on the morning of August 15 in a drainage culvert at the northwest corner of campus.

The body of Arthur Cleaves, 55, was found at about 7:15 a.m. by a morning jogger, said Capt. Ernest Tyre of OSU Police. Cleaves’ body was lying in a drainage culvert. The hole is 4 feet in diameter and 10 feet deep. Cleaves’ body was located 10 feet below the surface level and is not visible to passing traffic. Tye said the death is considered accidental. He said that the OSU Police are still investigating the possibility of foul play. Police said that Cleaves may have been jogging and fell into the hole. Cleaves had been west of the hole, but there is no indication of foul play.

Tye added that the OSU Police said that no foul play had been ruled out. As of Sunday, no further statement had been given as confirmation of that Cleaves’ death. Officials had not been asked to discuss the findings of the autopsy report and whether or not foul play had been officially ruled out.

BEAUCHAMP OUT, SCULLY IN FOR EXECUTIVE VP POST

By ERIN PIROUTEK
Assistant News Editor
and MIKE CONNOLLY

For 13 years, Father William Beauchamp guided Notre Dame through a period of unprecedented financial growth and great athletic success as executive vice president.

But in May the Board of Trustees voted to replace him with former associate provost Father Timothy Scully.

The move did not come as a surprise to Beauchamp.

"We had had discussions about it," Beauchamp said in May. "This wasn’t something completely out of the blue."

The last year has been a mix of scandals and successes for Beauchamp’s office. While the Generations campaign has raised $944 million, far surpassing the goal of $767 million, the athletic department fell under attack from the NCAA.

Beauchamp’s tenure also saw the athletic department receive its first major penalty and sanctions. Because of improper gifts to football players from booster Kim Dunbar, the NCAA struck the University of two scholarships and placed the team on probation for two years.

In response to the sanctions, athletic director Michael Wadsworth resigned and direct oversight of the athletic department was transferred from the office of the executive vice president to University President Father Edward Malloy in February.

The new structure of the athletic department more closely resembles that of most universities and had been planned for some time, according to Beauchamp. He also does not believe that the scan had anything to do with his departure.

"That wasn’t the message I was given by the trustees or by the president," he said. "It wasn’t important that we leave."

While the probation is a source of embarrassment for the University, Beauchamp asserts that there was never a loss of institutional control over the athletic department.

"Nobody at the University was pleased that there was a major violation," he said. "I think that it was important that the NCAA made it very clear that they still considered Notre Dame to have a model program. ... so I am disappointed and I would not even begin to suggest that this would never happen again in the future."

The Generations campaign started five years ago, has been a source of pride for the University. The fundraising campaign has paid for such construction projects as the renovation of the Main Building, the construction of the new bookstore, the new campus ministry building and the golf quad dorms.

"We had had discussions about it. This wasn’t something completely out of the blue."

Father William Beauchamp
former executive vice president

Although Generations is still a few months away from completion, Beauchamp is not concerned with the future of the project.

"Anytime you leave, there would always be something that I would be in the middle of," he said. "I am not mentally stepping away from the University. I am going to continue to be very involved in the Generations campaign and a number of other responsibilities at the University."

Beauchamp will retain his seat as both a Trustee and a Fellow of the University, and will continue to work with Malloy to plan Notre Dame’s future.

Scully, 46, moves from the academic side of the administration into the financial side.

"I’m happy to be in this new position and grateful for the trust of the University trustees ... and also humbled at the same time," he said.

In his new job, Scully will oversee operations of the University ranging from construction of new buildings to overseeing the endowment. Under Beauchamp the endowment grew from $260,000 to $3.3 billion.

While Scully’s primary expertise lies in politics and academic research, Malloy feels that he will do well as the executive vice president.

"(Scully) is a very bright and energetic and creative person," Malloy said. "He will bring his own set of gifts to the job and I look forward to working with him."

Malloy was not concerned about Scully’s more academic background in what has traditionally been a financial job.

"He doesn’t have to be a master of investment strategy in order to ask good questions and implement plans for investments and finances and the physical part of campus and all the other things that are part of the job."

Scully noted that he’s still new to the office and is familiarizing himself with his role.

"I’ve been spending the summer visiting all of the major facilities and getting to know the folks who are involved in running them," Scully said.

He also praised the progress of campus construction projects, most notably the Campus Ministry building and the new theology philosophy building.

They said that they are working diligently toward the performing arts center and groundbreaking as well as planning a top-notch science teaching facility.

Scully’s appointment was made with an eye to the future, as well. Both he and Father Mark Poorman, vice president of Student Affairs have been mentioned as successors to Malloy, and their promotions increase the number of young Holy Cross priests with administrative experience at Notre Dame.

"Father Beauchamp and I have talked numerous times throughout the years about how to give the next generation of Holy Cross leadership the chance to have experience and display their own gifts and talents," Malloy said. "With the right time comes for my successor and for other individuals in major jobs, there will be a pool of experienced people to draw from."

JENKINS MOVES UP IN SHIFT

Special to The Observer

The Board of Trustees elected Father John Jenkins as vice president and associate provost of the University.

He will fill the vacancy created when Father Tim Scully was named executive vice president.

Jenkins is an associate professor of philosophy and also serves as religious superior of the Holy Cross priests and brothers at Notre Dame. As religious superior, he was a Fellow and Trustee of the University, but he will relinquish those posts when he steps down as superior to assume his duties in the provost’s office.

He has been a member of the faculty since 1991-1992 and teaches ancient and medieval philosophy and the philosophy of religion. Jenkins was ordained a priest in 1983.

126 DeBartolo with Professor Alain Tounayan, Advisor
Hesburgh continued from page 1 accomplishments for which he had been honored.

"He is a parish priest for a world congregation," said Blumenauer, a graduate of the University.

Blumenauer also focused on Hesburgh's work for civil rights in the 1960s. He said Hesburgh has worked diligently to implement the promise found in the Declaration of Independence that all men are created equal.

"Father Hesburgh has worked all his life to implement these words," he said.

Indiana Senator Evan Bayh noted Hesburgh's humility, comparing the former Notre Dame president to Sir Thomas More and drawing a parallel between the two and their love and commitment to justice and the Church.

He too focused on Hesburgh's ongoing commitment to service as the reason for bestowing the award.

"Part of the Notre Dame fight song implores the Notre Dame faithful to roll down the oaks, and so today we do. We call down the oaks from a lifetime of service," Bayh said. "We will remember Theodore M. Hesburgh, because his contributions to a greater America have been truly overwhelming."

Hesburgh has received 144 honorary degrees from colleges and universities, a world record, and now he has become one of just 250 recipients of the Congressional Gold Medal. Other recipients include George Washington, Winston Churchill, Mother Teresa and Rosa Parks. Indiana's senior senator, Richard Lugar, used his time at the podium to review Hesburgh's many works of public service. Hesburgh served as a charter member of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights and its chairmanship from 1969-72 and worked as a national leader on education and an education committee chairman from 1963-1970. Lugar said. He has also served four papers on the Atomic Energy Commission and worked against famine in Ethiopia in 1979 and 1980 with his fundraising efforts. He was awarded the Medal of Freedom in 1964 by President Lyndon Johnson and is now a best selling author, as well as founder of Notre Dame's Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies.

"He is the epitome of a compassionate man [with] remarkable self-discipline," Lugar said.

Speaker of the House Dennis Hastert reviewed Hesburgh's early life. Notre Dame's most famous president was just 17 when he arrived at the University, and has spent 57 years in the priesthood, 35 of them as the University's president.

"His voice has been a constant in the social issues of our time," Hastert said, noting that Hesburgh continues to work for peace between the Israelis and Palestinians.

President Clinton expressed his personal admiration for Hesburgh at the ceremony.

"I have heard many speeches today about a man I admire very much, a servant and a child of God, a genuine patriot and a citizen of the world," Clinton said.

"The most important thing about Father Hesburgh and the greatest thing [he] will ever wear in the collar [he] has worn around [his] neck for 57 years." Clinton specifically praised Hesburgh's focus on religion, despite all the priest's other responsibilities.

"Even as the president of Notre Dame, he never stopped being a priest," Clinton said.

"The greatness [is] rooted in [his] understanding of our common humanity and our common faith as children of God."

University president Father Edward Malloy was also on hand for the ceremony and cited Hesburgh's open mind as among the recipients best qualities.

"He has a visionary attitude toward everything and is always seeing God at the center of everything," he said. Malloy noted that Hesburgh wanted to be the first priest to say Mass in space.

When given the opportunity to respond to all of the comments made by his admirers, Hesburgh claimed that he did not consider himself to be as great as the descriptions given by all the speakers before him.

"I tend to think I'm a bit overrated," he said. Instead, Hesburgh expressed his humility and said that the priesthood has been the greatest source of joy in his life.

"I have a lot to be humble about," he said. "The happiest day of my life was when I was ordained a Catholic priest. I was filled with the Holy Spirit, who fortunately has stayed with me these 57 years."

The priest admitted that all of the praise was overwhelming, but said that it was important not to become too self-importanter. "It's okay to hear yourself praised as long as you don't inhale it, and, my dear friends, I'll try not to inhale," he said.

Hesburgh credited Congress with great leadership but issued a challenge for all Americans to unite for justice and peace.

"What have you done for peace lately, and what have you done for justice lately?" Hesburgh asked. "Because without justice there will be no peace, and there shouldn't be."

In his closing comments, Hesburgh said that he will continue to work for justice in the world for as long as he is able to do so.

"I'm not about to leave the ball game," he said. "And I'll do as much as I can, as well as I can, for as long as I can."

Russia says goodbye to sailors

MOSCOW - President Vladimir Putin flew to an Arctic naval base Tuesday to console the families of 118 sailors killed in a submarine accident, but the gesture barely alleviated the nation's crushing grief and anger at the bungled rescue effort.

Debby skirts Puerto Rican coastline

Associated Press

SAN JUAN - Compact, quick-moving Debby became the first hurricane to make landfall this season, hitting several small Caribbean islands on a northwesterly route that menaced Puerto Rico and the Bahamas archipelago.

Forecasters said it was too early to gauge the threat to the U.S. mainland.

With winds up to 75 mph, Debby was a Category 1 hurricane, apparently causing little damage on Antigua, Anguilla and other small islands Tuesday morning. It then made a slight— but crucial— turn to the north that meant populous Puerto Rico and the vulnerable Dominican Republic could be spared the worst.

"We've faced well. I'm looking outside at my garden, which was devastated by Hurricane Lenny last year, and it still has flowers," said Glen Holm, director of the tourism bureau on the Dutch Island of Saba.

On nearby St. Maarten, battered by hurricanes in recent years, a curfew was lifted and meteorologist Ashford James celebrated the passage of "Little Debby."

Still, the threat was sufficient to disrupt life throughout the northern Caribbean as residents, tourists, businesses and authorities sprang into the routine — terrifying to some, exhilarating to others — of bracing for a storm.

A 78-year-old San Juan man died Tuesday, Puerto Rican police reported, when he fell off a roof as he tried to dismantle a television antenna.

In the U.S. Virgin Islands, the storm caused a few power outages but little damage.

First Master Plan construction projects near completion

Regina Hall is making a new name for itself this year.

After a summer of major interior renovation and exterior updating, the hall is open and filled nearly to capacity for the first time in more than a decade.

"Regina used to be a place where they had spare singles for people who had roommate problems," said Carly Guerra, Regina's new hall director. "That's not going to happen any more."

The residence hall is pretty much filled up.

Regina, known for its small single rooms and unmoving furniture, now sports three room doubles and massive quads as well.

"In my opinion I think that these are the best rooms on campus, and I've only been here three weeks," Guerra said. "The new quads are huge and the doubles are really nice."

The carpet in Regina was replaced and the woodwork was restored. The ceiling and lights are new. Each Regina resident assistant now has two rooms, and there are triples with five rooms.

"Just from past experience, now that the residence hall is filled, I know there will be an increase in the sense of community and Regina pride this year," Guerra said.

Workers constructed a computer lab on each floor, and the laundry rooms on each floor were turned into lounges. A new laundry room is located in the basement and has new machines. Alarm systems were upgraded and new windows were installed.

"It's wonderful," Dennis said. "It's the best project we've ever done. It came out better than we expected, on time, and on budget."

Networking the dorm was the last item to be completed in the Regina dorm rooms before the freshmen moved in on August 17. At approximately 9:30 a.m., Freshman Orientation Coordinator Christine Maurhoff was able to sign on to the network in each room of Regina, she had nothing but good things to say of her dorm.

"I think that it's a great improvement," Maurhoff said. "They've done a nice job renovating and it's nice to be able to move your furniture around. Regina is nice because you can have your own room and also have a common space in between the rooms to share with your roommate."

There is something new about Saint Mary's campus. The Welcome Center and new Dalloway's coffeehouse, both poised at the entrance of the campus, are near completion.

"We're pritty much done," Dennis said. "We've pretty much filled out."

Other less obvious but no less important changes have been made to make the campus more up-to-date, accessible and more navigable.

Dennis said, "We're progressing very quickly on Dalloway." The Welcome Center should be done in about two weeks, with the addition of a parking lot, according to Dennis. The basement was recently put in at Dalloway's, and construction should be complete in mid-September.

"It's been a very busy summer but it's been fun," Dennis said.

The Facilities Department received new equipment. Office space was reconfigured in Angola Athletic Facility.

But it is the large blue signs with white writing located around Saint Mary's that are the most visible change, making it easier for visitors to find buildings.

Other, more obvious changes include the recent addition of a parking lot, according to Dennis. The basement was recently put in at Dalloway's, and construction should be complete in mid-September.

"It's been a very busy summer but it's been fun," Dennis said.

The Facilities Department received new equipment. Office space was reconfigured in Angola Athletic Facility.

But it is the large blue signs with white writing located around Saint Mary's that are the most visible change, making it easier for visitors to find buildings.

"The signs turned out to be a very good project," Dennis said.

About 2,300 first-year students and residence hall volunteers crowded into Stepan Center on Saturday night for the newly created Domer Fest, the event replacing the Graffiti Dance on the freshman orientation schedule.

Student Activities created the new activity with the help of commissioners from each residence hall. The change was a response to numerous complaints about the Graffiti Dance. Students also noted that they felt they were on display, and some believed that having other people sign their shirts was a form of sexual harassment.

"The main thing was we wanted to do non-discriminatory," said sophomore Morgan Russell, Panhellenic's commissioner.

"I don't think the women felt as much pressure to talk to the guys than at the Graffiti Dance," Hnatusko said. "There was a lot of talking ... Many students used the booklets to meet people that they knew.

For a first-time inaugural event, (Domer Fest) went fine," said Peggy Hnatusko, Student Activities assistant director for programs.

"It was good in the aspect that we met people. It sucked in the aspect that it felt like I was in grade school and I Keough resident John McCarthy said. "Overall, it was cool."

"I thought the lottery system was a complete waste of time," he said. "The people that showed up at seven o'clock got the best tickets, regardless of the lottery. We had numbers, but you might as well have camped out." O'Donoghue said he could not speculate about additional changes next year, but he did say that the Student Union will play a smaller role in planning the procedure.

Instead, future planning will be conducted jointly by Campus Security, the athletic department, the ticket office and Student Activities.

"We're a model of involvement in public issues," said Arnold. "He becomes a kind of icon for them and a hero."

Students of the Hesburgh Program who interned in the Washington, D.C. area were invited to attend the ceremony.

"I felt proud that Father Hesburgh worked so hard for Notre Dame," said Hesburgh Program member Melissa Jackson.

On a campus where a "Hesburgh Mass" can fill every pew, the 83-year-old saint continues to conduct Masses almost daily.

Hesburgh also is the honorary chairman of the United Nations High Commission for Refugees. While he has been visited by ten countries, including Kosovo, for the Commission.

The beauty of retirement is you don't have a given job and you can do any job. Hesburgh said.

Event planners may relocate the event next year, either to an outdoor venue or to a larger arena such as the Joyce Center, according to Hnatusko.

The Graffiti Dance was held on the basketball courts near Stepan, but the lights there were too bright for the video screen used for the dance. For safety reasons, the lights would have to be on during a nighttime event. Therefore, Domer Fest took place inside Stepan.

Both Russell and Hnatusko said that details of next year's Domer Fest may be different. It is possible that something more closely resembling the Graffiti Dance may be added, according to Russell.

Despite the heat, there was more dancing at Domer Fest. Hnatusko, who estimated that 1,400 people were on the dance floor at any given time.

problems he believed needed to be corrected.

One other difficulty with the system was a flaw in the lottery drawing that left some law and graduate students frustrated. Because there were fewer of them than undergraduates, there were not enough stickers issued to reach the "magic" number of 1998. Instead of conducting a second drawing to determine the starting number for those students, organizers began law and grad ticket sales with number one.

"It meant that it wasn't a lottery and standing in line was futile," said biology graduate student Brandi Hackett, who is collecting signatures to request an apology from the administration. "That is not random and that's how we [undergraduates] would do a randomization.

Hackett has contacted a number of university officials to determine if anything can be done, though officials have told her that there will be no change for this season.

"We absolutely do not lack trying to do anything about it for this year," she said.

Hackett noted that a number of people have suggested that this system is just as random if the number drawn had been one, but she disagreed.

"If they pick number 88 and I have number 87 and I'm last in line, that's the luck of the draw, but this isn't at all that case," she said.

Ultimately, few seniors were present at 7 a.m. when ticket sales began, so all lot­tery numbers received their tickets and then tickets were sold to students in the order they arrived, said senior Mark Donahue.

"I thought the lottery system was a complete waste of time," he said. "The people that showed up at seven o'clock got the best tickets, regardless of the lottery. Bush must explain tax plan

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS

George W. Bush said Tuesday he must do a better job of explaining to voters how he can cut taxes by $1.3 trillion and still leave enough money to rescue Social Security.

Bush called the tax relief plan "too complex for comfort." He admitted the tax plan is "helping mainly the wealthy and endangering the economic gains of recent years."

"We must do a better job of explaining this proposal," he said.

But, Bush said the plan is "clear" if his word is taken into account and $2.3 trillion is added to the $1.3 trillion over the same period, closely targeting its reductions for specific areas.

Bush's plan would cut $1.3 trillion over 10 years, slashing taxes from the wealthiest to the poorest taxpayers. By contrast, Gore has proposed cutting $500 billion over the same period, closely targeting his reductions for specific areas.

Bush visited elementary schools in Peoria and in the St. Louis suburb of Chesterfield, Mo., to promote reading and school initiatives.

Later, he was attending three GOP fundraisers in St. Louis.

Bush aides spent much of the day defending his tax plan — and his defense of it.

Karen Hughes, communications director for the Bush campaign, denied that his promise to do more explaining was a reaction to the post-convention criticism of his tax plan.

It's "nice to have a vote of confidence from the trustees," Malloy said. "I said thank you very much and now I will just get back to doing what I was doing."

Before the vote, the Board conducted an evaluation of Malloy's 13 years as president. An important factor considered by the Board in evaluation of Malloy was his expansion of the international program at Notre Dame.

In the past few years, the University has opened new facilities in Dublin and London. The London program will also expand to include a summer program in 2001.

The face of campus has changed greatly because of the construction of new dorms, a new bookstore and the Campus Ministry building.

Malloy lists the expansion of scholarship opportunities as his greatest accomplishment.

"I have committed my entire career to expanding the opportunities for the students," Malloy said.

Before the vote, the Board also considered the granting of a contract extension for the University's long-time tenured faculty member, Edward Malloy. The Trustees had previously given Malloy an eight-year extension in the summer of 1994.

Malloy, who has served on the board since 1989, is the managing partner of Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue, a large Ohio-based firm and is a University Fellow.

Malloy was the first to receive the University's Lecture medal at the 2000 Commencement Exercises. He was also the first to receive the University's most prestigious award, the University's Commencement Medal, 20 years after serving on the board for the last 20 years.

The Board under Malloy oversaw the opening of the new Enrollment Center building, rejected the amendment of the non-discrimination clause to protect their employees and turned down membership in the Big Ten Conference.
Letting power prevail in the U.N.

COLUMBUS, Ohio

He is known by many names. Some call him KDuns or "the presence." Officially he is Juelam Jamphel Ngawang Lobzang Yeshe Tenzin Gyatso, which means Holy Lord, Gentle Glory, Compassionate Defender of the Faith and Ocean of Wisdom. He calls himself a simple Buddhist monk. However, he was born Lhatso Dhondrub, and is known to most of the world as the 14th Dalai Lama.

The Dalai Lama is the Tibetan Buddhist leader. In 1989 he won the Nobel Peace Prize for his non-violent opposition to China's occupation of his country. Last Thursday, he was not even invited to the Millennium World Peace Summit at the United Nations, despite the fact that more than a thousand other religious leaders around the world were invited. The reason: Fear of offending Chinese leaders.

China began gaining control of Tibet in the 1950s. During the occupation more than 1.2 million Tibetans were killed, 120,000 were thrown into exile, many women were forcibly sterilized and 6,000 monasteries were destroyed.

Even today, the Chinese will not reveal the whereabouts of the Panchen Lama, Tibet's second most important figure. In 1959 the Dalai Lama sought asylum in India for more than 80,000 Tibetans.

The Dalai Lama is an extremely valuable figure in the effort toward world peace. He is the spiritual leader of millions of Buddhists in the world, including many in the United States. Because of his Nobel Peace Prize and his non-violent opposition to China, the Dalai Lama is a positive inspiration and symbol of hope for many suffering under the hand of oppressive governments in the world. He is very well educated, being aware of and influenced by other cultures and religions.

The philosophy of the Dalai Lama is the opposite of religious or political righteousness. He favors "secular ethics" for the world as a whole and stresses the responsibility of all people to take care of each other rather than only depending on institutions.

China, on the other hand, is a prime target for human rights activists. It leads the list in executions (don't worry Dubya, Texas is gaining fast). Many refugees fleeing the forced abortion and sterilization policies are seeking asylum in other countries, including the United States. Most recently China has been using the Internet to further control human rights, such as in the case of Huang Qi. Qi faces possible life imprisonment for electronically publishing information about the 1989 military crackdown at Tiananmen Square where thousands of civilians were shot.

It is understandable that the U.N. is trying to be careful. China is a powerful country and it will be necessary to sometimes compromise in order to achieve peace. However, people should be leery of what kind of message leaving the Dalai Lama out of the Summit will send to the rest of the world, as well as what message it sends to China. It could be taken as support of China's occupation of Tibet, or a sign of weakness on the part of United Nations leaders.

When the U.N. sacrifices some of its stated principles, even in efforts toward a higher good, all it really does is put itself at the mercy of bullies. The U.N. has already been harshly criticized by several world human rights organizations for failing to formally criticize China's human rights record. If the U.N. is truly destined to lead the world toward peace, it is going to have to be a stronger leader.

I want to thank you for an exciting year. I asked you to come out and support the team, and you did. We had a lot of fun together. I will miss you all a great deal! I wish you all the best of luck. I will follow the team closely. Notre Dame will always be a part of me. Thanks for everything.

Favor efficiency over tradition

There is an obsession at Notre Dame: tradition. Many would argue that, more than anything else, one must love tradition in order to love Notre Dame. Some might contend a stronger a position that Notre Dame and tradition are interchangeable nouns. However, I doubt that many would suggest that there be no limitations to our hallowed traditions. The recent football season ticket distribution provides a fresh example of where tradition ought to surrender to efficiency and common sense. Let's party less and get there earlier. It would provide a chance for the most die-hard fans to be up front where they belong.

Most importantly, it would eliminate the need to worry and waiting for tickets during the busy first week of classes and activities. Maybe I'm wrong, but maybe it's time that we abandon this tradition of student season football ticket distribution which has failed many attempts by falling short of so many expectations.

Surviving the real world of缎

Ratings have been soaring and networks have been jumping at the ne

By LAURA KELLY
Assistant News Editor

The biggest television experiment of the summer comes to an end as America finally finds out who the "Survivor" will be tonight on CBS. No matter who wins the million dollars — Rudy, Rich, Susan or Kelly — the rules for summer television — once considered to be the wasteland of sitcom reruns — were rewritten this year with the arrival of "reality-based TV."

Shows like "Survivor" and "Big Brother" play off the success of MTV's "The Real World" and "Road Rules" by filtering the real life adventures of ordinary Americans transplanted into extraordinary situations. Criticized by some as voyeuristic and invasive, reality-based TV has produced unprecedented ratings. CBS, once thought to be the least hip and youthful of the three networks, has benefited the most from the reality shows thanks to the success of "Survivor" and "Big Brother."

Although these reality-based shows are novelties for the networks, cable stations like MTV have been relying on their success for years. For nine seasons, "The Real World" has been revealing what happens when seven 20-something strangers are picked to share one house and "find out what happens when people stop being polite and start getting real," generating some of MTV's highest ratings. "The Real World" produced the spin-off "Road Rules" in which six similarly angst-filled college students travel the country in a Winnebago and complete adventurous missions for cash prizes.

The popularity of "The Real World" and "Road Rules" lies in their realistic portrayal of conflicts between strangers thrown together in a novel living situation. When the public grows tired with sitcoms and the soap operas of old, "reality TV blends the greed popularized by "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire?" with the fresh drama of "The Real World.""

"Survivor" has been the hit of the summer. CBS's top show this summer, shotting to No. 1 in the ratings, has brought in 25 million weekly viewers. Beginning in March 2000, 16 castaways — eight men and eight women — were marooned on Palau Tiga, a remote tropical island in the South China Sea. They were divided into two tribes, the Tagi and the Pagong, and forced to create their own society in order to survive without any modern conveniences. The survivors built shelter, gathered and caught food (rats being the most exotic fare) and took part in three daily missions for rewards like cold cash and a chance to vote a fellow contestant off that has brought the show a survival of the fittest.

MTV's "The Real World" and CBS's "Big Brother" both showcase minute video insight into the lives of several strangers forced to live together. The contestants for each show live in different settings (one furnished nicely, the other barren) and stay for different incentives (fun activities versus money). By far the most successful show in the new reality craze, "Survivor" is a Networks dream: major stars, millions of viewers.

Nielsen's Ratings

Both of CBS hit reality shows were in the top five for the past week.

By far the most successful show in the new reality craze, "Survivor" is a network's dream: major stars, millions of viewers.

With the weakest or least-popular members eliminated by tribal councils, Mark Burnett, executive producer of "Survivor," calls the show "two parts adventure contest, eight parts surviving the peer group." Plans for "Survivor II" are already in the works. Premiere in early 2001, it will be set in the Australian outback, and 50,000 hopefuls have already applied. The "discussion" has especially caught on with the group networks are constantly trying to attract: the 18 to 34 year-old demographic.

A "Survivor" spin-off that has brought CBS additional success is "Big Brother." The show that has been a huge hit in Germany and the Netherlands takes its name from George Orwell's novel "1984," stripping its contestants of all privacy and contact with the Outside world. Ten strangers live together for three months under close surveillance. The house and yard are wired with 28 cameras and 60 microphones, so that no action or conversation goes unnoticed. The house guests live in a sparse, utilitarian structure: two bedrooms, one bathroom, a kitchen, living room and small garden. The participants have to grow their own vegetables, bake their own bread, and tend a flock of chickens. They also complete weekly group projects in order to win rewards and allow the viewing audience to see them interact.

Public opinion of the house guests is a key part of the "Big Brother" concept. While the winner of both "Survivor" and "Big Brother" earns a huge cash prize ($500,000 in the case of "Big Brother"), the methods for selection are different. Unlike "Survivor," where the contestants vote each other off the island, "Big Brother" contestants nominate each other for "banishment" and then the television audience can call a 900-number to vote on who will be forced to leave. This interactive aspect gives the audience unprecedented control over the direction of the show.

What began as fun escapist summer programming has exploded into a cult-like phenomenon. MTV has aired shows such as "Road Rules," providing detailed insight into the most personal and private situations occurring between strangers in duress.

Entertainment Briefs

CBS' hit survivor has sparked record ratings, merchandise lines, calendars — even a CD. But will viewers stay tuned in if the winner is revealed early?

East Coast may spill who survives: After East Coast television viewers learn who the "Survivor" winner is Wednesday night, can the well-kept secret hold for a few hours more until the rest of the country tunes in? Not if some radio stations and Internet sites have their way. "We'd probably tell. That's what we do," said a mischievous Mark Thomas, assistant program director for Los Angeles station KFI.

But listeners will get fair warning if they want to avoid knowing who claims the show's $1 million prize before "Survivor" airs in time zones outside the East. The two-hour finale is set for 8-10 p.m. EST Wednesday on CBS.

At Denver station KOA, which is affiliated with CBS and ABC, a disclaimer will precede any announcement. "I think people react negatively to a party pooper," said Jerry Bell, KOA's news director. "If somebody's driving home we wouldn't want to blow it for him." Overeager fans can go directly to the Internet. As soon as news reports move with the winner's name, Yahoo! plans to post them. The Denver Post Web site, among others, said it will put the information up as soon as it's available.

But nobody is rushing to spill the beans. Los Angeles radio station KFWB plans restraint, said news director Crys (Jumby). "It's been ongoing for such a long time, I prefer not to spill it for anybody inadventurously," she said.

KNX, a CBS station that will broadcast the "Survivor" town hall meeting airing after the show, also plans to keep quiet. "It's like tearing out the last page of a book and reading it. You just don't do that," said KNX news director Robert Sims.

Non-CBS TV stations are unlikely to make a big deal about the show, which has been a summer hit for CBS. KNBC in Los Angeles said whether it airs the result at all will be up to the producer of its 11 p.m. newscast.

Big Brother contestant an outcast at home: Karen Fowler, who spent six weeks living in CBS's "Big Brother" house, plans to leave her own home.

She said that on-air discussions of her troubled marriage have made her an outcast in the community, and that she plans to move to California with one of her four daughters — and without her husband of 22 years, Tom.

"I'm sickened by the way people want to judge me so quickly and defend him," said Fowler, 43.

Viewers voted Fowler off the show last week, just as she had hoped. She told The Indianapolis Star she was on the verge of a nervous breakdown — ready to divorce her husband, worried about her children and constantly under stress from the cameras that watched her every move.

Contestants on the show compete to outlast each other in the house. The final one remaining after three months wins $1 million.

White had an inking Notre Dame might be in need of a new coach.
So on July 5, White began a pre-search mode, calling 40 to 50 D-1 coaches. He also reached out potential replacements. From there, he formed a list of 10 possible coaches. When Doherty resigned, White had already narrowed the list to three. He quickly zeroed in on Brey.
"I can't begin to tell you how excited I am about Coach Brey and his coaching staff," White said. "I think we've really helped ourselves."
Brey, who interviewed for the Irish head coaching position in 1999, brought a combination of experience, youth and stability to the table. Although just 41 years old, his coaching pedigree is impressive.
He began his coaching career as a high school basketball powerhouse DeMatha High School in Washington, D.C. That experience was a stepping stone to Morgan Wootten.
In the next five years, White moved on to be an assistant coach at Duke University under Mike Krzyzewski. During his eight seasons at Duke, White helped lead the Blue Devils to four Final Four appearances and two NCAA titles.
In 1986, Brey took over as head coach at Delaware, a member of the American East Conference. His last three years at Delaware formed the most successful stretch in Delaware basketball history. The Blue Hens won 20 or more games in each season, earning two bids in the NCAA Tournament and one in the NIT.
Brey hopes to lead Notre Dame to a similar type of success Duke has had, starting with his first NCAA Tournament bid in 11 years.
"The realistic thing for us to do, in about is being in the NCAA Tournament," Brey said.
Lefty led left some big shoes to fill, perhaps more for his replacement than with his work on the court.
The charismatic young coach brought Irish fans back to the Joyce Center in swarms. He sold Notre Dame on recruiting, luring Terrence Jones, Tom Timmermans and John McGraw for this season, and two top-100 recruits for the 2001-02 season in Chris Thomas and Jordan Corbett. He pulled in All-Big East player Ryan Humphrey as a transfer from Oklahoma.
And his close relationship with Murphy helped him power the forward to remain a member of the Fighting Irish.
Although Doherty formed deep ties at Notre Dame, the North Carolina assistant held special pull for him. His family's lives in North Carolina, and he himself played for the Tar Heels.
"I wouldn't have left Notre Dame but for one place, and that's the place I'm at now."
But leave he did, leaving Murphy and the Fighting Irish high and dry at a time when most college basketball changes were over.
Doherty leaving came as a shock to most of the Irish basketball squad.
"At first you expected him to be around when you heard he was leaving. It sunk in when you saw him at the Carolina press conference. With MacLeod, you heard the rumblings. He was more prepared for it to happen. There was going to be a day when I couldn't play for him. That day came sooner than I expected."
So when Brey climbed on board, he had several priorities, including ensuring the team that he would stick around.
"I'm hoping this is the last stop," Brey said.
"He isn't it's from their point of view, not mine. This is where you ride out your first priority after getting the job was the current team, Brey continued. "I think they've been really good considering for some of them it's the third coach in three years. And we have to earn their trust."
He managed to do so, keeping all current team members in the fold, and retaining the verbal commitments of Thomas and Corbett.
"I was kind of hurt at first," Humphrey said of his reaction to Doherty's resignation. "But now it's Coach Brey's team. I think he'll leave a stamp on Notre Dame where people forget about Coach Doherty. I think we have the right coach for the job."
Sophomore Matt Carroll agreed with Humphrey's assessment.
"I was pretty much just shocked," Carroll said. "That was the last thing I expected to happen when I came back for summer school. But I think it actually was made easier."
"Coach Doherty did a great job, but he came in on the up situation," junior David Graves said. "He had great players to build with, which is a credit to Coach MacLeod."
Besides getting to know Murphy, Brey had to hire his new coaching staff.
Kevin Kearney, Brey's top assistant at Delaware, followed Brey to Notre Dame, and will serve as associate coach.
The other two assistant coaches are Anthony Solomon and Lewis Preston. Solomon served as assistant and athletic director at Clemson the past two years. Preston hails from Coastal Carolina University, where he was an assistant coach. Bud Balinas will be the new director of basketball operations under Coach Brey from Notre Dame.

Men's Soccer

Best friends Tait and Straub share friendly competition

By NOAH AMSTADER
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's soccer team walked off the field for the first time this year in victorious fashion following a 1-0 victory over Loyola (Chicago) in Monday afternoon's exhibition game.

"I thought we played very well. We looked very good at times," said sophomore goalkeeper Cole Straub. "We have a young team coming up, and our freshmen helped out a lot."

The lone tally for the new head coach Chris Apple's team came on sophomore Justin Haircliffe's goal off a feed from freshman Justin Dettor 21 minutes, 23 seconds into the game.

"It was a great feeling scoring a goal, and it was good to get on the board early," said Haircliffe. "Last year we didn't score in our preseason game, so at least we got on the board and kept the shutout."

The Irish kept the game close behind a strong defense. Sophomore goalenders Greg Tait and Straub, competing for the starting position, each played a half. Tait started the game and made one save before being relieved by best friend Straub, who added three more.

"I thought I played well," said Straub. "I could have had a few better clearances but other than that I really thought the whole team played well."

The competition between the two men in goal is one of the interesting aspects of the team this preseason. Tait and Straub are roommates in Zahn Hall.

"I think it's a real healthy competition. Off the field we're best friends, on the field we want what's best for each other. Even in drills we're pushing each other to be the best that we can. We realize that whatever decision is made, it's the coach's decision and we're going to support who ever is on the field."

"We can push each other to heights on the field that we never really could get at if we weren't fighting for the spot with the same camaraderie and the same friendship that you can push each other with," added Straub.

The men's soccer team is preparing for its final preseason tune-up in Fort Wayne, Ind., this weekend at the IPIW Soccer Showcase. The team takes on South Carolina on Saturday before moving on to challenge either St. Louis or Akron on Sunday.

"We've been training really hard the last couple of weeks," said Haircliffe. "All the players are in top shape. We came into preseason in top shape so now we're just working on some team aspects."

Ewing trade appears unlikely

Associated Press

NEW YORK

Looks like Patrick Ewing is staying with the Knicks, at least for the time being.

The trade scenarios involving Ewing shrunk considerably Tuesday after the Detroit Pistons pulled out of a four-team deal that would have seen Ewing to Seattle.

Now, it's a question of whether the Knicks will find another way to divorce themselves of the franchise cornerstones for the past decade and a half.

There were reports that a backup Seattle-New York deal would be completed Tuesday, but as the day came and went, it became obvious the trade was simply dead.

Executives around the league said the Pistons had pulled out of the original four-team trade because they weren't benefiting to the same degree as the Knicks, Lakers and SuperSonics, or if they were even benefiting at all.

Seattle would have gotten Ewing -- while also completing a side deal for free-agent forward Maurice Taylor -- Los Angeles would have gotten Christian Laettner and Chris Dudley and the Knicks would have gotten a pair of former All-Stars and a backup center in Glen Rice, Vin Baker and Trutz Knigjt.

Detroit, though, would have walked away with seven marginal players -- at least two of whom still have two years left on their contracts and thus would hinder the Pistons on the free-agent market next summer by remaining on their salary cap.

It remains possible that the Lakers could end up with Laettner. The Dallas Mavericks have offered the Sonics a package that is believed to include Cedric Ceballos and $3 million, and they would be expected to immediately reshuffle Laettner to the Lakers for Ewing.

"We made Detroit an offer prior to this that we were surprised they walked away from," Maverick's owner Mark Cuban said. "Our offer is still on the table, but we haven't talked to them for several days."

The Pistons did manage to pull off a different deal Tuesday, sending guard Lindsay Hunter to Milwaukee for forward Billy Owens.

General manager Joe Dumars said the four-way trade with the Lakers, Knicks and Sonics was never as close to being completed as people thought.

"I hope that Ewing does stay, and that it's not going to be apparent like he should be, teammate Allan Houston said.

Appreciation, however, was a warm sentiment in some sectors of New York as word of the mammoth trade that fell apart dominated the sports talk scene.

Everyone seemed to have an opinion on the deal. Some felt it was positive that the Knicks were trying to move past the disappointment of the two years and rid themselves of a player whose unfulfilled promises to Ewing for a lucrative contract that has not been forthcoming.

If Taylor were to sign with Seattle for one year and $2.25 million, it would be expected that the Sonics would have a wink-wink deal to give Taylor a new, long-term contract after the upcoming season.

Seattle could have $17 million of salary cap space next summer. But if Taylor's contract took up the bulk of that money, there wouldn't be enough to give Ewing the type of lucrative extension he wants. A Sonics official stressed that the team had made no financial promises to Ewing. Falk did not return calls seeking comment.

No. 2 ranked team returns from summer trip to Brazil

By KEVIN BERCHOU
Sports Writer

After finishing a close second in the race for last year's national championship, the Notre Dame women's soccer team has a head start in this year's chase for the title.

Tapping advantage of an NCAA rule allowing teams to travel internationally during the summer once every four years, the Notre Dame women trekked south to Brazil for 10 days in August. The summer excursion, a first for the Irish program, provided valuable training time and leaves the Irish brimming with confidence as they prepare to rejoin the championship hunt.

After losing six seniors to graduation, head coach Randy Waldrum was anxious to see how his highly rated freshmen recruiting class would respond to the pressures of being asked to contribute on a regular basis. The trip to Brazil alleviated some of his fears.

"Going into the trip I felt like it was important to get the freshmen integrated into our program," Waldrum said. "I was pretty happy with the way most of them came in. The trip was beneficial in that sense."

While Waldrum stressed the importance of working the freshmen into the regular rotation, he was quick to add that the trip benefited returning players as well.

"We were able to get our feel for which returning reserves from last year would be able to contribute and fill the void left by graduation," he said. "Overall I'm pleased with our entire squad."

Senior captain Kerri Bukker believes the team can live up to the lofty standards set by past squads.

"You can't replace all of the talent we lost," Bukker said. "But you can replenish and I think we have a good freshmen class that can help us doing that. They have the speed and athleticism we need."

While in Brazil, Waldrum divided the squad into two teams, both of which competed against top Brazilian club teams consisting of players from the national team. The top-notch competition will help the Irish as they prep for league play.

"The competition was excellent," Waldrum noted. "Were it not for the trip, we would be playing our first game this weekend. Now we've got a lot more fine tuned and ready to play for real."

The team made sure to find a balance between practicing and having fun.

"It was a great experience," she said. "We begged Randy to take us somewhere out of the country, and Brazil was a great place to go because they just love soccer so much there."

Anne Makinen (No. 8) tries to keep the ball from a defender in a game during the 1999 season. Makinen is one of the key veterans on this year's Irish squad, which is ranked second in the nation behind North Carolina.

Senior pitcher Aaron Heilman will have one more year donning an Irish uniform after turning down a contract with the Minnesota Twins in favor of staying at Notre Dame.

The negotiations proved unsuccessful and after a last ditch effort to reach an agreement with the Twins Monday night, Heilman decided to remain at Notre Dame. "There were several issues at hand and we didn't quite see eye to eye," said Heilman. "It just got to the point where we agreed to disagree. One of the major factors was the signing bonus." Heilman's opportunity to join the Major League was not his first, nor if all goes well, will it be his last chance. "This was not a once in a lifetime opportunity for Aaron," said Mainieri. "He had the opportunity coming out of high school to be drafted by the New York Yankees and decided to sign then and we obviously assumed he'd be back in it next year." Heilman will use his final season at Notre Dame to brush up on his current repertoire of three pitches — the fast ball, slider and change-up, while possibly adding a fourth pitch to his arsenal.

So for now, the only business Heilman will be concentrating on will be in his MIS classes. "I never thought I'd be announcing to the world that I'm going to class," joked Heilman. But after a summer of deliberation, he knows that's just where he belongs.

the major factors in his decision was an approximately $500,000 discrepancy in Heilman's proposed signing bonus — the Twins were willing to pay near $900,000, but Heilman was holding out for about $1.4 million. "It was fairly significant," said Heilman of the signing bonus discrepancy. "It wasn't a few dollars and cents — it was a lot more than that.

Heilman was the Twins' second pick behind fellow right-handed slinger Adam Johnson, who was a first-round pick.

Minnesota drafted Heilman in the "sandwich" round, a round designed to compensate teams which have lost free agent to another team. In Minnesota's case, Heilman was to serve as compensation for the Twins' loss of free agent Mike Trombley. "This decision-making process for Aaron and his family has probably been one of the more difficult things they've had to go through — and this decision was made entirely by Aaron," said Mainieri. "He asked pitching coach Brian [O'Connor] and I for advice over the course of the summer.... but in no way did we try to influence him one way or the other. Now that he's back at school, obviously we're ecstatic and looking forward to what the 2001 season will bring. "I love this guy to death and really want what's best for him. If he had signed, I would have been the first guy in line to give him a hug and send him on his way." Paul Mainieri head baseball coach

Women's Basketball

Smith takes helm of Belles' basketball

By KATIE McVOY
Assistant Sports Editor

After four consecutive losing seasons and a 1999-2000 record of 4-22, the Saint Mary's basketball team is ready for the beginning of a new era. The beginning of that era is now with the recent arrival of head women's basketball coach and sports information director Suzanne Smith.

Smith, who was hired July 1, comes to Saint Mary's from DePaul University, where she was the graduate assistant coach for basketball and volleyball. While at DePaul, the basketball team had a two year record of 42-10, were back to back conference champions, and, in 1999, advanced to the Sweet Sixteen of the NCAA Tournament.

"Smith brings Division I experience to the table," athletic director Lynn Kachmarik said. "She brings a wealth of experience and knowledge to this program.

During the basketball program's history, Saint Mary's has never had a full time coach. Smith, who will be working full time, will be looked to as the beginning of change.

"There is a long history of where this program has come," Kachmarik said. "It's going to take some time to change that, but hiring a full time coach is the first step.

Smith knows that history and the steps the team will have to take to change the future.

"This year my main goal is to get confidence back and get the women having fun," she said.

Smith is looking forward to her first year with the Belles. After acting as director of basketball sports camp at the college this summer and working with several of the returning members of the basketball team, she has gotten a taste of what her job will be like.

"I love it," she said. "I really like the sense of community here. Everyone I have met has been wonderful.

In addition to choosing a roster, running practices, and recruiting for the Belles, Smith will be acting as sports information director for all Saint Mary's athletics. As such she will be the face of all publicity for Saint Mary's varsity teams.

"I'm really looking forward to more media coverage this year," Kachmarik said.

Smith received a Bachelor of Science degree in business at the University of Evansville, and recently completed her master's degree in Recreation and Sports Management at Indiana State University.

Smith will not be the only new face on the coaching staff this season.

Joining her is assistant coach Sherry Donnelly. Donnelly, who has spent the last two years volunteering as girls' basketball coach at Christ the King in South Bend, had success as a player herself. She recently returned to her residence in Mishawaka after participating in a WNBA tryout with the Orlando Miracle.

"She brings maturity, humor and expertise as a player and a coach," Kachmarik said.

Donnelly helped Smith this summer working at the basketball sports camp and also coached at a basketball camp at Bethel College. Donnelly, who is a part time coach, is beginning a career with the Orlando Miracle.

The Belles' basketball team will begin official practices on October 15 in preparation for its first game at Winless Homecoming. Smith is looking for the team of Smith and Donnelly to make a big difference this season.

"This year, the women on this team are going to get what they deserve," Kachmarik said.

Lone senior Paulen to replace 1999 tri-captains

By SARAH RYKOWSKI
Sports Writer

Saint Mary's soccer is in full swing now that everyone is on campus, ready to meet the goals set just a week ago when practice began.

"Division III soccer offers women an ideal environment to participate in highly competitive and fulfilling athletic and academic programs," Jason Milligan, second-year head coach for the Belles, said. "We are committed to the development of student athletes who accept nothing but the best and always strive for improvement.

The leadership of the team falls on senior Laura Paulen's shoulders. The lone senior, Paulen needs to fill the shoes of last season's senior tri-captains: leading scorer and Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association first-teamer Katy Barger, defensive leader Rachel Egger and Erin Magee.

Paulen will depend upon juniors Tia Kuphahn, Adrian Kirby, Jessica Klink, Jillian Kapphahn and Kristen Prigant to step up and lend their strong leadership skills to the team. Kuphahn, Kirby, Klink and Robinson were mainstays on the 1999 squad. Klink and Robinson were named Intercollegiate Athletic Association first-teamer in the NCAA 1999. Prigant returns to the team for 2000 after missing a season studying at home.

Sophomore Shawa Jiannoni, Heather Muth and Lynn Taylor also return, bringing a core of solid play to the team. Jiannoni was one of the third-best scorers for the Belles' 1999 squad, finishing with three goals and two assists in 13 games. Muth was named to the IRAA's Honorable Mention list for her freshman season with two goals and two assists.

"Heather Muth will be the next star at Saint Mary's College," Milligan said. "She has a wonderful attitude and will achieve a great deal while she is here.

But it is the freshman Milligan hopes will cement the team's base of skill and determination to build a powerhouse in the IRAA. The returning members of the team echo this philosophy.

"We're excited because we have freshman men coming in with good talent," Paulen said. "We're counting on them to step up and fill the spots we have. With the returning players and the freshmen coming in, we have a solid base to build from this year.

Muth said the freshmen already fit in on the team.

"They are fitting right into the team," Muth said. "They filled all the gaps that we have.

According to Taylor, it is not only the skill but also the individuality of each freshman that is important.

"They bring not only their skill but their personality to the team," Taylor said. "So while Barger, Egger, McCabe, and the rest of the team that did not return will be sorely missed, the remaining players and their new teammates are fully prepared to make the 2000 season successful.

"We're really excited about this year," Muth said.

Milligan's expanded efforts to recruit nationally has brought freshmen from Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Texas, New York, Michigan and Alabama.

Milligan hopes new player Alissa Brassueur, a South Bend resident, will contribute right away. Pressure also falls on Laura Metzger, from Benzie Point, N.Y. Metzger, also a freshman, must fill the goalkeeping vacancy left by last year's netminder, Brie Giersch.

"I'm confident in his team's ability to meet their goals for this season.

"The majority of our team played for Division I and Division II clubs from all over the U.S., and about half have experience at the intramural level of the Olympic Development Team," Milligan said. "Watch these women in action and you will understand that this is a dynamic group of women whose enthusiasm is unmatched.

On these women he hopes to build a team that will be even more successful than last year's 9-4-2 record and fifth place finish in the IRAA.

"A positive attitude, diligent work ethic and an unyielding desire to be successful are the cornerstones that will ensure a bright future for Saint Mary's College soccer," Milligan said.

his loyalt?

Some of the questioners were the same people who were close to having Doherty painted for leading their beloved Irish to upset victories over Ohio State, Connecticut and St. John's. For crying (or nearly crying) after every win and for playing in Bookstore Basketball. They wanted him painted for sitting in the student section at a football game and for calling the "waterboy" on the phone repeatedly after the infamous incident in the game against Syracuse.

And above all, for seeming to genuinely care about the fans.

Guess what? Doherty's not a saint. And he's not Benedict Arnold renarrated, either. He also didn't change as a person from July 18 to July 11.

The only thing that changed was our perception of him. Just like his predecessors, Doherty is a product of our fascination with labeling athletes and coaches as "good guys" or "bad guys" when, in reality, we never really know. Because people usually only reveal a part of their lives and because we tend to look at events or situations, rather than the whole person. It's nearly impossible to accurately portray anyone. Let alone a well-known public figure. Consider Phelps and Marle.

Almost as soon as the search for a new coach began, Phelps pleaded the University to hire within the Notre Dame "family." He even offered to lead the Irish, nine years after retiring as the win- ningest basketball coach in Notre Dame history.

This was the same Phelps who, on numerous occasions, referred to coaching as a grind and who seemed very content sitting in the ESPN studio and living a more normal lifestyle.

And whose wife, Teresa, wrote an autobiography, entitled "The Coach's Wife," detailing her husband's last few years here as anything but ideal. One passage quotes Notre Dame former athletic director Dick Rosenthal as saying he would "schedule Digger out of a job" with a 1990-1991 campaign featuring only 12 home games. At his farewell press conference, Phelps denied any dis- cord with Rosenthal. But in response to Digger's "resignation", Rosenthal penned a four-line statement. Four lines for a 20-year veteran coach, the most successful coach in Irish history.

MacLeod, the coach just prior to Doherty, suddenly received some coverage as well following Doherty's departure. On July 18, MacLeod's son, Matt, a former Notre Dame walk-on, wrote a letter to the South Bend Tribune.

"Please give credit where credit is due," wrote the younger MacLeod.

"John MacLeod was the individual who turned around the program. Ask any of his former players.

That testimonial was fol- lowed by another letter, pub- lished in the July 23 edition of The Chicago Tribune, written by former MacLeod assistant Parker Lake.

"John MacLeod is a stand- up, loyal guy," Lake wrote. "Notre Dame didn't know how good they had it." When MacLeod "resigned" last March? I don't recall many sad faces or public outcry when MacLeod left after an eight-year tenure marred in mediocrity.

Yet, MacLeod is cur- rently credited by many for recruiting all the core players for last year's 22-15 team, the same team who was ridiculed for having several players transfer in his eight years in South Bend.

Now, here comes Brey. I've read his biography on the Internet. He played for DeMatha High School, Northwestern Louisiana University and George Washington University. After graduating from GW in 1982, he was an assistant at high school basketball. Left DeMatha for five years before the next eight seasons at Duke as an assistant to Mike Krzyzewski. He led Delaware to two NCAA appearances and a 99-52 record in five years as head coach. According to the University of Notre Dame's sports information website, "He (Brey) also has been active in the Coaches vs. Cancer program, helping make Delaware one of the top fund-raising schools in the country through that program.

The 41-year old Brey and his wife, Tish, have two children, Kyle and Collie. What does all this mean?

We should know more in a few months. Or at least we can hope.
FOOTBALL

Irish look for new football heroes in freshmen athletes

By TIM CASEY
Associate Sports Editor

The 18 freshman football players arrived for their first practice on August 7, all with impressive resumes and high expectations.

Within a few days, they realized the difficult transition from high school to Notre Dame.

"That's natural," said coach Bob Davie of the freshmen, who are not allowed to speak with the media until after the Sept. 2 opening game against Texas AM. "We just tell them to take it one day at a time."

For Davie, in the fourth year of his highly-publicized (and critical) tenure, getting that crucial message across to the Class of 2004, may seem like the least of his worries. But he remains focused on maintaining the confidence of impressionable freshmen.

Included in the class are three quarterbacks — Carlyle Holiday, Matt LoVecchio and Jared Clark — who are competing with junior starter Arma Batiste and sophomore Gary Godsey for playing time.

In preparation for the college game, Davie sent the new quarterbacks playbooks and videotapes during the summer. But, complying with NCAA rules, the coaches could not spend extensive time teaching them. When the trio came here, that all changed.

Batiste and Godsey have helped make the transition easier, counseling the freshmen on the physical and mental aspects of the position while the coaching staff can now work with them in person.

"There's a lot to learn — schemes, reading defenses and picking up blitzes," Godsey said. "It'll take time."

Less than two weeks into practice, the results are unclear. On Wednesday, Holiday, LoVecchio and Clark each took snaps for the first time against the defense. As of now, Davie said the freshmen are behind the upperclassmen on the depth chart. The three freshmen may even be grouped together for the season instead of naming a simple third quarterback.

"We want to be fair to them," Davie said. "We want to give them enough reps under pressure. There's no need to rush it."

Holiday, rated the 48th best high school player by the Chicago Sun-Times last season, is already popular among Irish fans. On Feb. 2, the first official signing day, Holiday rhaps Notre Dame over Nebraska, denying the Cornhuskers another top recruit and upgrading an already solid Irish quarterback class. As a senior at Roosevelt High School in San Antonio, Holiday completed 48 of 105 passes for 719 yards and rushed for 876 yards and 13 touchdowns on the ground.

LoVecchio verbally committed to the Irish after attending the summer football camp in 1999. Partly due to his early commitment, LoVecchio did not gain the attention from the recruiting analysts that Clark and Holiday received but still was named an honorable mention USA Today All-American. A four-year letter winner at Bergen Catholic in New Jersey, LoVecchio completed nearly 60% of his passes for 1503 yards as a senior.

Clark, a 6-foo-4 220-lb. freshman from Sarasota, Fla., also attended the 1999 summer camp. He started for Cardinal Mooney High School since the seventh game of his freshman season and was named first-team all-state last season. Clark finished his high school career accounting for over 5000 yards in total offense, including 2113 as a senior.

"I don't think I've seen a more talented group from top to bottom," Davie said. "We have it stocked for quite awhile."

Davie's enthusiasm is not limited to the quarterback trio. Other freshmen he mentioned on Wednesday as being "mature" were tight end Billy Palmer, defensive backs Vonzie Duff and Preston Jackson and drop linebacker Mike Gooby.

"He's a coach's dream," said Davie of Gooby. "Football is very important to him. He'll be playing in games this year."

And for all freshmen, whether or not they play this season, Davie has instituted a mentor program. Each freshman has a "Big Brother," an upperclassman who helps them adjust to college life, on and off the field.

"You really see the difference in speed and intensity [on high school to college]," Davie said.

Members of the 2000 Notre Dame football squad are stretching into shape for the season, which kicks off Sept. 2 against Texas A & M. This year's Fighting Irish team includes 18 freshmen, who are busy learning the plays and pressures of a Division I football school.

Horoscope

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1999

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY:
Keith Richards, Steven Spielberg, Rupert Clark, Roger Stiles, Karlheinz Sutherland

Happy Birthday, Brace yourself as you step into a fast-paced period that promises to bring you all the excitement and fun you can handle. You will know what you want and how to get it. Nothing will stand in your way as you set your sights on your yearly goal. You will show your true colors and forever get a favorable response from those you deal with. Your numbers: 3, 12, 31, 46, 52, 67, 73. ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your day will not go according to plan. Be prepared to make last-minute adjustments. Getting together with others will be entertaining. Travel should be on your mind if not on your agenda.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If you overextend during the last quarter of the year, you will be worrying instead of enjoying yourself. If possible, limit your expenses for the next two weeks. Get out you're too much today. GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Travel is apparent. Get involved in family activities, but don't forget to pay special attention to your lover. Your charm will attract a lot of attention.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't take on more than you can handle. Fatigue will set in and ruin your day. Ask for help if you need it. After all, you don't have to take care of everything and everyone. It's time you enjoyed yourself as well. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can stabilize your relationships if you treat your mate with special care. A trip would be a great way to reward yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your dreams and take care of the needs of others at the same time. Make this day special for the whole family.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't be discouraged if your name isn't in a great mood today. It is best to spend time enjoying relatives and children. You have a lot to offer, but you can't always be everything for everyone.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Frustration will result if you aren't prepared to let situations unfold at your own pace. You can count on an opposition from relatives who have never favored your actions. You need it. (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You should spend some time with children. Family members will be demanding and somewhat unreasonable. You will probably get caught in the middle of an argument if you aren't careful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will be a little overbearing. Don't give other people hold you back. It's time to enjoy the company of those you don't get to spend much time with. Put any problems you have on the back burner for the time being.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): This will not be the easiest day for you. Financial limitations will be upsetting. You will not put such an emphasis on, how much you spend and insist on how much you do for others.

Birthday Baby: You are sensitive, giving and totally into helping others. You must learn to protect yourself from those too willing to take advantage of your kindness and generosity. Once you learn to give wisely to others, you will find your own success.

Heilman turns down Twins for senior year with Irish

By KERRY SMITH
Sports Editor

With his decision to return to Notre Dame for his senior year instead of signing with the Minnesota Twins Tuesday, right-handed pitcher Aaron Heilman probably learned more about business than he did in his three years as a business major.

The senior Management Information Systems (MIS) and Philosophy major learned that the game he grew up playing as a child is a business just like any other profession. And it turned out to be a $500,000 lesson.

Heilman, the right-handed pitching ace from Logansport, Indiana, was the 31st player selected in the 2000 Major League Baseball First-Year Draft by the Minnesota Twins, but elecured to void the Twins’ rights to sign him by attending classes at Notre Dame Tuesday.

“It’s been a long summer,” said Heilman against the backdrop of Eck Stadium’s indoor practice facility. “I gave it a lot of thought and talked it over with my family and came to the decision that coming back to school was going to be the best decision for me. It was a very difficult decision to make but its great to be back on campus and I’m really looking forward to the 2001 season.”

In between classes Tuesday, Heilman announced his decision to return for his senior season with the Irish under head coach Paul Mainieri instead of signing with the Twins. He confirmed that one of

Doherty stuns Notre Dame with decision to leave

By KATHLEEN O’BRIEN
Alerts Sports Editor

This spring, the futures of several prominent figures in Notre Dame athletics were up in the air.

Irish fans hoped All-American basketball star Troy Murphy would hang around for his junior year rather than bolt for the NBA. They wondered if head football coach Bob Davie would have another year to prove he could lead Notre Dame to success. They questioned who would replace Michael Wadsworth as athletic director.

But no one doubted that first-year head basketball coach Matt Doherty would be around for the 2000-01 season. Big mistake.

Murphy’s still wearing blue and gold. Davie’s back as head football coach. And Kevin White took over as athletic director.

Doherty, however, stunned the Notre Dame community in July by leaving the Irish in the lurch after serving just one year of a five-year contract. After guiding Notre Dame to its best season in a decade, a 22-15 record and a runner-up spot in the National Invitation Tournament, Doherty left to accept the head coaching position at North Carolina, his alma mater.

“I never thought that this would come about so soon in my career,” Doherty said. “I was never set in my mind that I was going to leave. I was the most confused I’d ever been in my life because I didn’t know what I wanted to do. It was the hardest decision I’ve ever had to make.”

Because Doherty took off in the middle of the summer recruiting period, White faced pressure to hire a new head coach immediately.

“One, I felt our team was absolutely broken-spirited,” White said. “Two, there were pretty significant recruiting implications. Three, it was pretty significant in the middle of the recruiting period. White began the decision-making process with former North Carolina coach Larry Brown. "But it's a job I really wanted to do.”

Doherty neither saint nor traitor, just human

Funny how perceptions change.

When school ended in May, Matt Doherty was a Bomber dolly.

Digger Phelps was an accomplished analyst and John Mainieri was as forgotten as John Jordan.

Mike Brey?

Who was that? Three months later, Doherty is a Tar Heels traitor, Phelps is an eager ex-coach, Mainieri is the “real” architect of last year’s NIT runner-up team and Brey is in Doherty 2000 — young and aggressive with ACC connections.

This all began when Doherty accepted the North Carolina head coaching position on July 11, less than a week after Roy Williams decided to remain at Kansas. By signing his name on a piece of Tar Heels stationary, Doherty subsequently altered the public persona of these four coaches and ex-coaches.

Among the questions from Irish fans: How could Doherty leave just in the middle of July? Didn’t he promise that “This (Notre Dame is a job I can see myself at for the rest of my life)? How dare he ditch us on Troy Murphy after convincing the certain first-round draft pick to stay for his junior season? Didn’t he sign a multi-year contract? Where’s...
