Students protest Taco Bell

By ERIN LaRUFFA
News Writer

With banners, flyers and even a bagpiper, about 30 students from the Notre Dame Student Farmworker Alliance protested Sunday afternoon at the Taco Bell on SR 23, across from University Park Mall.

The students protested the chain restaurant because it employs young workers, most of them migrants from Mexico.

"We think that Taco Bell should pay a penny more for a pound of tomatoes so the workers can get higher wages," said protester Jane Bleog.

"I'm really excited about the turn out. I'm glad this many people turned out to support us," said sophomore Chris Bupar.

Not everyone supported the protest, however. Taco Bell's manager called the South Bend Police Department, which responded with six police officers. See PROTEST / page 4

Government, public honor National Champs

Associated Press

The community hailed the champion Notre Dame women's basketball team Sunday at a public pep rally at the University's Joyce Center.

The ceremony included remarks by athletic officials, Notre Dame administrators and senior members of the team. The presentation of the Sears Cup and video tributes featuring season highlights were also part of the event.

Several local politicians were also on hand to recognize the team's victory over Purdue April 1 in the NCAA tournament.

"My first act as honorary mayor is to cut all the prices at the mall by 50 percent," Muffet McGraw joked.

The Sunday event followed word Friday that the team had been honored by the U.S. Senate.

U.S. Sens. Evan Bayh and Richard Lugar on Friday introduced a bipartisan resolution in the Senate to honor the team's championship.

"This remarkable group of young women have taken their place in Notre Dame's long and storied tradition of academic and athletic excellence," Bayh said.

"The determination and commitment of both the Fighting Irish and the Boilermakers exemplify our Hoosier values and serves as a tremendous source of pride for the state of Indiana."

"The women's basketball players of Notre Dame offer an example of dedication, skill and sportsmanship as they bring Notre Dame its first national basketball title," Lugar said.

U.S. Rep. Tim Roemer (D-South Bend), has sent a letter to President Bush requesting a special White House ceremony to honor the Notre Dame team. Noah Amstadter contributed to this report.

Mosier leads Right to Life Conference discussion

By ERIN LaRUFFA
News Writer

Addressing a crowd of students from Notre Dame, Saint Mary's and other universities around the Midwest, Population Research Institute president Steve Mosier used his experience in China as the backdrop for his Right to Life address at the Right to Life Conference on Saturday.

The Chinese government, Mosier explained, limits the number of children a couple can have in order to control population growth in the country.

"This is an extraordinary thing for a government to do," Mosier explained. "It limits the number of children a couple can have in order to control population growth in the country."

While many women simply complied, 18 women in the village Mosier was in were arrested. Some of them were just days from delivery.

Some women were arrested, and if they delivered while in prison, their babies were killed, Mosier said.

Mosier explained that he eventually came to see what he described as the "barbarity" of forced abortions and other Chinese population-control policies.

"I wasn't a believer when I went to China. I thought China was overpopulated. I was wrong," he said.

See MOSIER / page 4

Workshops focus on club involvement

By ANDREW THAGARD
News Writer

As part of this year's more interactive pro-life conference, Notre Dame and Saint Mary's Right to Life groups hosted six small-group workshop sessions. "Our Duty to Serve, Our Call to Lead" featured sessions dealing with issues in club operations, law and general pro-life education run by members of the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's clubs, as well as prominent members of the pro-life community.

Abortion and breast cancer

Mishawaka attorney John Kindley led the workshop "Abortionists' failure to disclose the increased risk of breast can-

see WORKSHOP / page 6
Following in her footsteps

When I was little, I used to play dress-up. It was nothing out of the ordinary. Like most little girls, I'd sneak into my mother's dressing room, slip into her high heels and do a rather inadequately job of mimicking red lipstick all over my face. Thinking I'd done the job right, and that lipstick was a warranted accessory for a young girl of six to wear to school. N'V would bounce down the stairs, clad in my school uniform and a few "choice" accessories, thinking I'd slide past my mother and onto Bus 8 without notice. I must have been crazy. "Think again, young lady," my mother would yell at me, and I knew that was my cue to march right back up the stairs and put on something, well, more appropriate.

For years I'd watch my mother get ready for work or a formal dinner, eloquently painting her face with the glosses and powders I longed to try for my own. I watched her rise gently by wearing the high heels of my own, I imagined. It's in the way we dress up for an evening out-and the way ever imagined. It's in the way we tell stories, the way we enter a room, the way we laugh at jokes. It's in the way we dress up for an evening out-and the way ever imagined. It's in the way we tell stories, the way we enter a room, the way we laugh at jokes.

When I'd get to be older, I'd bounce onto bus No. 8 without notice. When I'd get to be smarter and when I'd get to a time in the future when I'd get to be older, I'd get to be older than my mother's shoes would transport me. Immovably stubborn and fiercely independent, I was. My mother's shoes would transport me to a time in the future when I'd get to be older, when I'd get to be smarter and when I'd get to be pretty. When I'd get to be like her. This past weekend, my mother traveled from Saint Louis, Conn., taking a much-deserved day off from work to spend the weekend with me on campus. Visiting with several hundred other mothers for Saint Mary's Junior Mom's Weekend, each pair of women walked through the doors in each event, it was not difficult to figure out the pairs. In each of the daughters there was a part of the mother, whether it was a smile, whether it was the way they walked, whether it was the way they talked to me.

For me, admitting that I'm a lot like my mother has never been something easy. Immovably stubborn and fiercely independent, ever since those days I marched down the stairs in high heels, determined to go to school in shoes 10 sizes too big, I have always been determined to be myself. But as I sat at dinner Saturday and looked down at my feet, now clad in properly-fitting high heels of my own, I realized that I was more like my mother than I'd ever imagined. It's in the way we tell stories, it's in the way we laugh at jokes. It's in the way we dress up for an evening out — and the way we enter a room. And I guess that's not so bad, following in her footsteps.

On the way back from work or a formal dinner, eloquently painting her face with the glosses and powders I longed to try for my own. I watched her rise gently by wearing the high heels of my own, I imagined. It's in the way we dress up for an evening out-and the way ever imagined. It's in the way we dress up for an evening out-and the way ever imagined. It's in the way we tell stories, the way we enter a room, the way we laugh at jokes. It's in the way we dress up for an evening out-and the way ever imagined. It's in the way we tell stories, the way we enter a room, the way we laugh at jokes.

The views expressed in the Inside Column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.
Students pitch in to clean up river

By JARED JODREY
New Yorker

More than 40 Notre Dame students, primarily from the Students for Environmental Action (SEA) and Women's Rowing Team, worked among more than 100 local volunteers in cleaning up the banks of the St. Joseph River, Saturday.

"Basically, this was a huge success," said Monica Burnthistle of SEA. "And we are very happy about it. We got a good turnout for so early in the morning, and the spirits stayed high throughout the day — it was pretty sweet."

Working for most of the day between Logan Street Bridge and Ironwood, the clean-up project was, for many, an enjoyable and eye-opening experience. Sponsored by the Friends of the St. Joe River Association, the clean-up has become an annual event for Notre Dame students and one which participants are confident will continue in years to come.

In past years, volunteers have encountered numerous surprises during the clean up, including discovering recliners, bedsprings, an air-conditioner, baby car seat, TV sets and a kitchen sink. This year, Notre Dame students encountered, among the overflow of general litter, a pipe, a carpet and a leather jacket. In all, roughly two entire dumpsters of trash were recovered from the banks.

The event served as one of the SEA's primary focuses, in addition to the upcoming Earth Day celebration, as the school year comes to a close. A similar clean-up expedition is in the works for the students' arrival in the fall.

Mom's turn to relax

Friday, it was Mom's turn to sit down and relax at the Junior Mom's Weekend wine and cheese party at Stapleton Lounge in Lefler Hall. Mothers of the College's junior women spent the weekend at parties, dinners and attended classes with their daughters.

Last-minute changes don't tarnish conference's response

By ANDREW THAGARD
New Yorker

Although two of the three keynote speakers cancelled and attendance was lower than expected, attendees of the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's Flight to Life clubs second annual pro-life conference expressed overall satisfaction.

Twenty minutes into the start of the conference Maria Suarez, co-president of ND Right to Life, announced that Cathy Cleaver's lecture on "How to Communicate the Pro-life Message" would not take place. He reported that Cleaver's flight from Detroit to South Bend had been cancelled earlier that afternoon. Alan Keys, another of the conference's keynote speakers, cancelled his appearance last Friday due to a schedule conflict.

Suarez and Kaitlyn Dudley, co-president and conference coordinator were quick to recover however.

"This conference is basically on your shoulders," Suarez told the crowd. "If it's good it's your fault; if it's bad it's not our fault."

"We would have loved to have [Cathy Cleaver] come but I think it worked out much better than we thought," Dudley said after the conference. "It's not like there's only one best way to do things. We found out there's a different — but also good way — of doing things."

This year's conference was designed to be more "hands on" than the first one. The seven scheduled keynote speakers featured last year were replaced with three along with interactive workshops, moderated discussions, and feedback sessions.

"I expected more sentiments of disappointment from people about the two [cancelled] keynote speakers but it really hasn't happened," Dudley said. "People wanted to come and meet people and it didn't matter who was speaking. They've said that keynote workshops were really good."

"Our group at St. Bonaventure is very small so I wanted to learn how to make more people more involved," said Julia Smuda. "We went to the Sean Regan workshop and he talked about how to keep people motivated in your group by setting short term goals and giving them different things to do. It was very educational."

"I thought that the speakers were very good. They were informative," echoed Nicole Muller, a freshman at St. Bonaventure University. Other students who were not active in pro-life clubs at their schools attended the conference looking for motivation.

"My family's always been pro-life but I haven't been involved in the movement since I was 6," Theresa Wallman of Goshen College said. "This was an opportunity to find out more information on exactly what it was about."

Wallman left the conference interested in starting a pro-life organization on her campus but she also expressed a desire to discuss the possibility of a local penalty, an issue not covered in this year's conference.

Students showed enthusiasm at the opportunities to network with other pro-life clubs that the conference offered.

"It's very easy to get discouraged in the pro-life movement," said Radu Mattei from Villanova University with American Collegians for Life. "That's one of the reasons why pro-lifers suffer such a high burn-out rate. It seems like you're the only one who cares."

"I wanted to be able to discuss with other students from other schools what the culture of life is and the dynamics of getting that message out," said Michael Kleissler of Franciscan University of Steubenville, Ohio. "Even if you don't feel that you've learned a lot you create an important sense of solidarity.

ND and SMC Flight to Life Chairs intend to start planning for next year's conference earlier. They anticipate keeping this year's interactive format in place but focusing their resources on only one keynote speaker for next year. They are looking to recruit Mel Gibson or Ben Stein.

"Next year will be the third annual conference," Suarez said. "We've learned a lot in figuring out what the need for this conference is and next year we'll have a much better idea on how to do that."

Help keep the Earth clean.

Recycle this newspaper.
Protest continued from page 1

crusaders.

"They were trying to tell me we couldn't be here because we're too noisy," said senior Julie Hodek. "It's pretty clear with the trucks passing by near the light.

They're with the local business." After speaking to Hodek, the police allowed the protest to continue and left the location. Despite the complaints of Taco Bell management and local authorities, Hodek felt the public's overall reception to the protest was "positive."

In addition to protesting, Bleeg, Rupar and Hodek were three of 16 Notre Dame students and professors who spent spring break on the Center for Social Concerns' (CSC's) Migrant Experiences Seminar.

Seminar participants spent a week in Immokalee, Fla., examining the conditions endured by migrant farm workers. They lived with migrant families and spent some time picking oranges along with the laborers who do so for a living.

Participating in the seminar taught students about the hardships endured by these workers, most of whom are living undocumented in America. The U.S. Department of Labor reports indicate that the median annual income of these workers is $7,500, with no health care or other benefits, no overtime pay and no right to hours. "We bargained with their employers.

Taco Bell's enormous global revenues are based on cheap ingredients for the food they sell, including cheap tomatoes picked by farm workers in Florida who are paid sub-poverty wages, according to Joanna Garcia, a junior who also participated in the seminar and protest. So the Notre Dame students decided to join protests of Taco Bell.

Students gathered on the sidewalk in front of the restaurant, holding signs and sympathizing with the workers. "The whole purpose behind this is to educate. We think it's a basic enough issue that if you're aware of it, you'll support us," Rupar said.

"We're protesting to help people realize there's a connection between the food they eat and the companies they buy it from and their workers," said senior Brian Wolford, who participated in the Migrant Experiences Seminar when he was a sophomore. "Because of that experience, as well as his work in a Texas shelter for undocumented workers, Wolford decided to join the protest against Taco Bell.

Many students who have traveled together participated in a Migrant Experiences Seminar also joined Sunday's protest. One such student was junior Krista Schoening, who joined the protest because she sympathizes with the farm workers' cause.

"Basically, I'm here because people are being exploited," she said. "There's a very unusual situation in the United States today that we have a lot of prejudice against people who are immigrants from Mexico.

She pointed out the fact that many Americans want INS to tighten up against the food they buy from Mexico, while at the same time Americans benefit from the Mexican workers. "We make it into the U.S."

"We exploit these migrants. We pay these people almost nothing, and we get much more for the 1, 2 or 9 or 10 lbs that we get," Schoening said.

However, according to Mosier, China's economy is not expanding because of communism, not because of too many people.

"What held China back was [labor] government," he said. "It was the Communist Party and not the Chinese people that held people back.

Over the last 20 years, according to Mosier, there has been "remarkable economic growth" in China, while the population growth there has "stagnated" at 1 percent.

"What difference does it make if the population is growing at 2 percent or 1 percent... if the economy is growing at 9 percent?" Mosier asked.

The policy not only has no real benefit, Mosier said, it also devalues human life in the minds of some Chinese.

"If you can kill them when they're a e.g., r e being born, what's so bad about killing them when they're 1 or 2 or 9 or 10 lbs?" he asked.

Mosier also said he disagrees with predictions that humans will face running out of food and other problems if Earth's population grows too large.

"It's demographic nonsense," he said. "Humanity is better off today at 6 billion people than at anytime in human history... As our numbers have grown, so has our wealth.

Based on current world food production, it is possible to feed 12 million people, Mosier said. Admitting that there are "local food shortages" in the world today, he claimed that those "artificial famines" are the result of political and other conflicts.

As a father of nine children, Mosier also criticized programs promoting birth control, even those who support methods other than abortion and infanticide, as being hypocritical in regards to what populations they want to control.

"It's not their own reproduction they're concerned with. It's the reproduction of others that don't look or think like them," he said.

According to Mosier, many sterilization plans around the world are directed against the poor or a certain minority group.

"Human rights abuses abound with these programs," Mosier said.

In addition, Mosier said that population control efforts take doctors and other scarce resources away from primary health care. He pointed to the African AIDS epidemic as an illustration of this point.

"Beyond this we have a present who is pro-life," Mosier said. "We're hopeful that this year we can take money out of programs that are a failure.

Mosier's anti-population control beliefs are rooted in his Christian faith.

"The Christian view has always been that babies are blessings, not burdens," Mosier said. "I've seen children as the instruments God uses to teach us the virtues.

Mosier continued from page 1

Witnessing abortions firsthand was a major part of his conversion.

"You can't witness an abortion without becoming pro-life. You can't see the broken body of the baby and the wounded body of the mother without realizing life is sacred," Mosier said. "I was convinced that human life should be protected from conception through death.

Upon returning to the U.S., Mosier began writing books about Chinese practices. The Chinese government in Beijing declared him an international spy.

"I'm still on the blacklist today," he said.

While Mosier is a harsh critic of the communist Chinese government, he also said that the concept population control is not a Chinese one.

"China didn't invent the idea of population control. That idea was invented in the West," Mosier said.

Teams of researchers from the U.S. government, the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank went to China years ago, he explained, and gave the idea to the Chinese government.

"They told them... you have to control your population growth," so that the country's population did not eat up any economic gains China made.

However, according to Mosier, China's economy was never participated in a Migrant Experiences Seminar and the World Bank went to China years ago, he explained, and gave the idea to the Chinese government.

"They told them... you have to control your population growth," so that the country's population did not eat up any economic gains China made, Mosier said. He added that he warned the Chinese that pressures would be placed on them to limit their population growth.

"When they decided to do it for you..." Mosier said. He added that he warned the Chinese that pressures would be placed on them to limit their population growth.

"Right now we have a present who is pro-life," Mosier said. "We're hopeful that this year we can take money out of programs that are a failure.

Mosier's anti-population control beliefs are rooted in his Christian faith.

"The Christian view has always been that babies are blessings, not burdens," Mosier said. "I've seen children as the instruments God uses to teach us the virtues.

Not the result of political and other conflicts.

"As a father of nine children, Mosier also criticized programs promoting birth control, even those who support methods other than abortion and infanticide, as being hypocritical in regards to what populations they want to control.

"It's not their own reproduction they're concerned with. It's the reproduction of others that don't look or think like them," he said.

According to Mosier, many sterilization plans around the world are directed against the poor or a certain minority group.

"Human rights abuses abound with these programs," Mosier said.

In addition, Mosier said that population control efforts take doctors and other scarce resources away from primary health care. He pointed to the African AIDS epidemic as an illustration of this point.

"Beyond this we have a present who is pro-life," Mosier said. "We're hopeful that this year we can take money out of programs that are a failure.

Mosier's anti-population control beliefs are rooted in his Christian faith.

"The Christian view has always been that babies are blessings, not burdens," Mosier said. "I've seen children as the instruments God uses to teach us the virtues.
Vatican celebrates Palm Sunday: Pope John Paul II celebrated Palm Sunday Mass in St. Peter's Square before tens of thousands of faithful, urging young people to renew their commitment to Christ. Many waved palm fronds, olive branches and pussy willows as John Paul was driven to the canopied altar atop the steps of St. Peter's Basilica. The Mass, attended by a crowd that swelled to at least 50,000 people, marked the start of a week of commemorations leading up to Easter, when Christians celebrate the resurrection of Christ.

Helicopter crashes in Vietnam: Rescuers on Sunday recovered the bodies of nine Vietnamese and seven Americans who died in a helicopter crash while searching for the remains of U.S. soldiers missing in action from the Vietnam War.

Former congressman dies: Former Illinois Congressman Frank Annunzio, who represented Chicago in Washington for 28 years, died Sunday. He was 86. Annunzio, 35, who is expecting twins in June, will take over Tuesday after Gov. Paul Cellucci resigns to become U.S. ambassador to Canada. Cellucci, then a lieutenant governor himself, took charge in 1997 when Gov. William Weld resigned to pursue an unsuccessful nomination as ambassador to Mexico.

Massachusetts governor to resign: John Cellucci, a Boston area businessman and former governor, has announced he will resign over Tuesday after Gov. William Weld resigned to pursue an unsuccessful nomination as ambassador to Mexico.

A Palestinian examines the rubble left from an Israeli army missile attack. Four people were injured in the strike, including a 10 year old boy. The strike occurred in retaliation to a Palestinian attack on Nahal Oz.

Israelis retaliate, injuring four

Associated Press

BEIT LAHIYA

The Israeli army bombarded Palestinian targets in the northern Gaza Strip on Sunday night, plunging a town into darkness and injuring four people including a 10-year-old boy. The four victims suffered moderate shrapnel wounds, a Palestinian hospital official said.

The Israeli police said the Israelis fired three surface-to-surface rockets at the town of Beit-Lahiya, north of Gaza City. The Israelis have not used rockets of this kind before in the past sixth months of conflict with the Palestinians. The Israeli army spokesman declined to say what weapons were used. However, an Israeli official confirmed that the attack was not carried out by helicopters armed with wire-guided antitank missiles, like other recent attacks in the Gaza Strip. In Sunday's attack the projectiles hit an abandoned police station, a headquarters of Yasser Arafat's Fatah group and a civilian home. Beit-Lahiya was plunged into darkness as the power supply was knocked out.

The ceiling of the house collapsed, injuring a 60-year-old woman and a 10-year-old boy. The boy's father, Hamis Abu-Sultan, 42, showed reporters a bloodstained child's blanket. "What has this child done to the Israelis?" he said.

The army spokesman said the attack was in response to the firing of mortar bombs by the Palestinians at Nahal Oz, an Israeli communal settlement outside the Gaza Strip. The fighting in the Gaza Strip has been intensified with almost nightly exchanges of and rocket and mortor fire.

Earlier on Sunday, Palestinian gunmen killed a suspected collaborator with Israeli in the West Bank. The alleged informer, Mamoun Frej, 37, was sitting in his shop in the West Bank town of Tulkarem when three masked men entered, witnesses said. Frej was hit by 14 bullets, doctors at Tulkarem hospital said.

Asfah 77, a group believed to have ties to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's Fatah movement, claimed responsibility. "The killing of this spy is a message to all the spies that we will punish them," the group said in a leaflet.

INDIANA NEWS BRIEFS

ISU prepares for execution: The hundreds of reporters and broadcasters expected to cover Timothy McVeigh's execution have booked up most local hotels, prompting Indiana State University to open its dorms to journalists from Monday April 9 to cover Timothy McVeigh's execution have booked up most local hotels, prompting Indiana State University to open its dorms to journalists from the media. Journalists from hundreds of reporters and broadcasters expected to cover Timothy McVeigh's execution have booked up most local hotels, prompting Indiana State University to open its dorms to journalists from the media. Journalists from...

Top 5 Volume Leaders

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Company</th>
<th>Ticker</th>
<th>Volume</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Micron</td>
<td>MRK</td>
<td>1,251,197</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Intel</td>
<td>INTC</td>
<td>1,126,433</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Motorola</td>
<td>MOT</td>
<td>231,083</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Qualcomm</td>
<td>QCOM</td>
<td>231,083</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Oracle</td>
<td>ORCL</td>
<td>231,083</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Spiderwire for sale: A crippled American spy plane that landed at one of their airfields was a gift from the sky for China's generals. It isn't clear how much information they've extracted from the U.S. Navy EF-111. But the crisis over its presence, the loss of life and the potential for another spy flight has given them a new way to press Washington for an end to spying flights and to pry more money out of their own civilian leaders.

"This is a God-given chance for the Chinese military to claim greater relevance in Chinese politics," said Yu Maochun, a China expert at the U.S. Naval Academy. "It's like a crouching tiger.

The intense secrecy surrounding Chinese politics has made it hard to know precisely what's going on during the crisis. But analysts suggest that the already influential People's Liberation Army, or PLA, may be partly responsible for the continued confinement of the U.S. crew.

The 21 men and three women began their second week in captivity Sunday, with no indication when they might be released.

The crew is being held on Hainan island in the South China Sea, where they made an emergency landing after the collision April 1. U.S. officials say the crew managed to destroy at least some of the plane's supersensitive equipment, although it isn't clear how much.

"The principal organization in charge of this whole affair has been the PLA, at least in the early stages," said Bates Gill, director of the Center for Northeast Asian Policy Studies at the Brookings Institution in Washington.
Members of the pro-choice movement actively withheld from this needs to be shouted from the or death information that is being for those younger than 18 or older that induced abortion increases percent and that risk is doubled 1994 study published by the conducted suggest a relationship cancer and induced abortion. A described about the biology of between increased risk to breast cancer and induced abortion. A between increased risk to breast cancer and induced abortion. A 1994 study published by the National Cancer Institute found that induced abortion increases the risk of breast cancer by 50 percent and that risk is doubled for those younger than 18 or older than. "There is no possibility that these results are due to chance," Kindley said. "There's a real need that the college community be informed. This needs to be shouted from the rooftops," he continued. "This is life or death information that is being actively withheld from people." The attorney maintained that members of the pro-choice movement dismisses these results on the "recall bias hypothesis." This hypothesis claims that women who have breast cancer are likely to be more honest about abortion than healthy women who have had abortions," Kindley said. "For this hypothesis to work, they would have to lie in significantly greater numbers. There is really no credible evidence of this whatsoever." Kindley and other pro-life attorneys have filed lawsuits against abortion clinics which display false literature, but he is also concerned about facts presented by government organizations like the National Cancer Institute: "Sadly, the government agency responsible for educating the public has been misleading them about the issue and it provides a cover for the abortion industry," Kindley said. "The NCI is a government agency whose head is appointed by the president and these agencies are amenable to political bias." The attorney encouraged conference attendees to communicate their opinions with politicians and to focus on the women who face the risk of breast cancer. "I think the pro-life movement might be better served if we focus on the women. It doesn't contradict the movement. [This issue] is, in many ways, separate from the pro-life debate," Kindley said. "I want to see justice done."

Activists' Rights

Michael Kenney, dean of the Ave Maria School of Law, ran the workshop "First Amendment rights, legislative and legal process." The attorney discussed the evolution of free speech rights, provide legal techniques and Roe v. Wade, the controversial Supreme Court case that effectively legalized abortion. According to Kenney, broad free speech rights for activists evolved on college and university campuses. "The first amendment and freedom of expression on campus grows out of 1960's protests," he said. Kenney challenged those present to use their free speech rights to share the pro-life message with others and dispel society's acceptance of abortion. "You are a generation born into the construct that it's a woman's right to abort a child," he said. "I was a freshman in high school when the decision came around. As a parent ... it is incredibly shocking and tragic."

According to Kenney, the legal basis of the pro-life movement has been to establish the unborn fetus as a person with rights. "From a legal standpoint the answer is to take a look at how the unborn can be drafted as a person's rights to women's liberty. It's really gone down a grue-some path," he said. "I think the pro-life movement and those who are in favor of abortion are victims as well. Kenney challenged the fight African Americans faced with obtaining citizenship rights after the Civil War to the conflict before those in the pro-life movement today." "Something similar need to happen to ensure that [the unborn] obtain 'personhood' status," he said.

Kenney challenged pro-life clubs to fight for life but also to focus on using the proper legal outlets. "Protect yourself with reason and compassion toward all those involved," he said.
College opens new peace center

By AMY GREENE
New Writer

The Peace and Action Resource Center opens today in Haggar College Center at Saint Mary's. The office is opening to commemorate the anniversary of Saint Mary's joining the Workers' Rights Consortium.

Members of the WRC Anti-Sweatshop Task Force and Peacemakers opened the office to help educate the public about sweatshop issues, according to senior Peacemaker, Maureen Capillo. "The office will be used primarily as a resource center for faculty and students. There will be videos, syllabi, files, and websites that professors could use for things directly related to labor issues," said Capillo.

Capillo and other members of the WRC Anti-Sweatshop Task Force and Peacemakers serve as an ambassador committee to President Eldred, making sure she is aware of where and under what conditions their workers are put to work.

The Task Force is excited that the office is finally up and running. "This is a big milestone we are finally getting a space. We're excited there is a specific resource center that will address and focus on labor issues," Capillo said.

The new office is located in 303 Haggar and is open to all those interested in becoming educated about anti-sweatshop and labor issues.

Peru

Toledo wins seat in Peru presidency

Associated Press

LIMA

Alejandro Toledo, a U.S.-trained economist with Indian roots, finished first in Peru's presidential election Sunday but fell short of a majority and will face a runoff, according to preliminary results. He will likely face former President Alan Garcia, a left-leaning populist, in a second round in late May or early June, the preliminary results showed. Eight candidates were vying to become the successor to disgraced former President Alberto Fujimori.

Toledo, 55, finished second to Fujimori in elections last year but ended up boycotting a fraudulent runoff against the autocratic leader, who fled Peru in November amid mounting corruption scandals.

Early official returns representing 11.73 percent of districts gave Toledo 36.38 percent Sunday, compared to 25.7 percent for Garcia and 24.01 percent for Flores, said Fernando Tuesta, who is in charge of overseeing the vote.

Transparencia, a widely respected upscale hotel. "They have won in votes and in democracy, even if we did not achieve the 51 percent," Toledo, 51, a tall, silver-tongued populist, led Peru's government from 1985 to 1990. His administration left the country mired in hyperinflation and surging guerrilla violence.

Forced into exile two years after Fujimori was elected in 1990, Garcia returned in January when corruption charges against him expired. His phoenix-like resurrection is a tribute to his oratorical skills and, according to his foes, to the amazing short memories of his countrymen.

"I don't say I haven't made mistakes. Certainly I have, but I accept them and have corrected them," Garcia said after the exit polls were released, explaining why Peruvians should not fear his return to power.

Painting himself as an elder statesman who has matured and put behind his youthful leftist ideas, Garcia said earlier that regardless of who wins the runoff he was "convinced that things are going to improve because we are leaving behind a dictator- ship."

Flores, 41, is a member of Lima's white elite with a reputation for honesty. She had been in second place in opinion polls going into Sunday's election, but her campaign had begun to fade in recent days after her father made a racial slur against Toledo.

Flores questioned Garcia's predicted second-place finish, saying absentee ballots from abroad could swing the vote in her favor.

The election was Peru's first since the ouster of Fujimori. Peru's iron-fisted ruler for more than a decade.

A year ago, Fujimori trampled constitutional restrictions and won a third straight five-year term in elections marred by fraud and dirty tricks. But he fled in November amid corruption scandals involving Vladimir Montana, his intelligence chief, and he now lives in self-imposed exile in Japan, his ancestral homeland.

In a televised speech to the nation Saturday night, interim President Valentin Paniagua assured Peruvians that this year's special elections would be clean and fair.

Toledo, who has a doctorate from Stanford University and has been a visiting scholar at Harvard, is a "cholo," the Peruvian term for a person of mixed Indian and white blood. He has capitalized on his rise from shoeshine boy to an economist with the World Bank and on the resentment toward the European-descended elite that has long dominated politics in Peru.

Indians make up 45 percent of Peru's 26 million inhabitants and 37 percent are of mixed Indian and white blood. No Indian or mestizo has been freely elected president in Peru's history although several have come to power through military coups.

"My candidate is Toledo because he is a cholo like me," said Juan Hurtado Rivera, 59, who lost a high-paying job in a state petroleum company when it was privatized under Fujimori's free-market economic program.

"He did a lot to force out Fujimori, who did so much damage to the country," said Rivera, who now works as a tailor out of his small home. "He deserves to be rewarded with the presidency. He is offering more work and we have to support him."
If you don’t got it, don’t flaunt it

Saturday night, after most of the revelers had left College Park, a group of mildly inebriated gentlemen stripped down to boxer shorts, spread into the parking lot and chanted unintelligible syllables to the sound of clinking liquor bottles. They did it fairly well for their inebriated state.

Two of them, however, decided that they weren’t having enough fun, so they peeled off their underwear and jogged a lap around one of the townhouse com­plexes in the nude.

The day before, the men of Alumni Hall opted for a slightly more formal look, adding neckties to their unmen­tionables as they traversed campus in preparation for the annual Wake, spreading love, joy and carnations all over Our Lady’s University. The more dignified Dawgs smoked large aro­matic cigars; the wilder ones painted their faces green and wrote slogans on their bodies like “I’m fat” and “He hates me” and bellyflopped into mud puddles.

All told, it looked almost as if they were acting out a low-budget rendi­tion of the Mel Gibson epic “Braveheart.” “They may give us your target, uncover your weapon and drop a bomb on you with an intelligent comeback, drop a bomb on you. You aren’t for pesky issues like hygiene, those parts of nude. They were it a point to look. If I dropped my pants in the middle of South Quad at just the right time of the day, I could blind pilots trying to guide a plane to the South Bend airport. (“Coming in for final approach, tower... Jesus Christ Almighty, what is the hell is that?” “It looks like a great big —”

Now I’m not going to stand on a soapbox and claim myself the paragon of modesty because I can be tempted to strip publicly. However, it will take a lot more than the $20 someone (ironically from Alumni Hall) bet me to show up in a female’s dorm room wearing nothing but a smile.

If a million dollars were at stake I wouldn’t mind emulating Richard Hatch and parading around an island in the buff for a few weeks. But with the economy in “Survivor” I could potentially look at least a little better naked when I’m finished. I might even get some sun.

But it would definitely be a budget-buster because in addition to buying me off one would need to pay for the pain, suffering, lawsuits and possibly laser eye surgery for those unfortu­nate people who witness my buck­naked ramp. And I’d need a lot of alcohol and a getaway car. But you’d get to watch a plane fall out of the sky for free.

After all, every streaker does. Not every streaker really lives.

Mike Marchand is an off-campus senior English major who, despite what Gabriela from Alumni Hall might think, cannot dance. He would like to thank Natalie and Megan for finding him interesting enough that he didn’t feel the need to shed his threads. His cause, ironically enough, is a male exotic dancer. The views expressed in this column are those of the author and not neces­sarily those of The Observer.
The Notre Dame Law School
Natural Law Institute presents

The Olin Distinguished Lecture Series

"Legal Sources and Moral Merits"

Upcoming Lectures

John Gardner
Professor of Jurisprudence
Oxford University

Tuesday, April 10, 2001
4 p.m.

Notre Dame Law School Courtroom
Watson continued from page 20

man Julius Jones competed for the starting job. And like Denman, Watson has had some difficulty trying to learn a new position. In his first two seasons, Denman recorded only 34 total tackles and played behind Kory Minor. After seeing no action as a freshman running back, Watson had 11 tackles in 2000.

"You're not just moving to defense, you're moving to five yards off the ball," Watson said. "You're right across guys that are 300 pounds. Playing close to the ball, reactions are so much faster.

Finishing, Denman was among those who helped the then 205-pound Watson adjust in January 2000, when Watson switched positions.

"I learned a great deal from him," Watson said. "I was just sitting there, absorbing it all, just like a sponge. Everything he had to say, I listened." Besides receiving advice from his fellow linebackers, the 6-foot-1 Watson also worked on his frame. He played last season at 220 pounds and is up to 300 pounds this spring. He joined returning starters Tyreo Irons, who won No. 1 singles, and Nina Prasad (who dropped No. 5 singles)

"We had such a good time our jocks is that we will we could play singles together," Knish said. "I feel I am a much stronger doubles player.

"We were sitting there, absorbing it all, just going to find somebody to replace him."

NOTES:
- The Irish held their first scrimmage of the spring on Saturday. It consisted of 40 plays and Matt LaVecchio, Carlyle Holiday and Jared Clark received almost an equal number of snaps. But due to the gusting winds and muddy field, the emphasis was placed more on the running game.

"From an individual evaluation, there's nothing to be evaluated right now as to who did good, who did poorly," Davis said. "We got out of it without anybody getting hurt, which you knock on wood every time you come off the field after doing that."

Prior to the scrimmage, the Irish worked on special teams. Nick Setta kicked a field goal while Joey Hildbold was the punter. Setta and David Miller competed for kickoff duties, a position held last year by graduating senior Matt McNew.

"I'm really concerned about our kickoff guy," Davis said. "That's probably the biggest concern of mine in special teams. Based on today, I don't know if we have one."

- Last year, Davis waited until July to announce the captains. This year, that may change.

There's a good chance we'll do it the last week of spring, maybe the day before the spring game or maybe announce it at the spring game," Davis said. "But I'm not 100 percent sure."

Speaking of captains, Grant Irons may be named one for the second straight year. Irons, who suffered a season-ending shoulder injury during last season's Nebraska game, has been held back this spring. He did not participate on Saturday.

"He started some sled work on Saturday," Davis said. "Grant's going to be OK."

Tennis continued from page 20

appetite with an 8-2 victory over the Maroons’ team of Jon Lee (who won No. 1 singles) and Nina Prasad (who dropped No. 5 singles).

Davie said. "We had such a good time our jocks is that we will we could play singles together," Knish said. "I feel I am a much stronger doubles player.

"We were sitting there, absorbing it all, just going to find somebody to replace him."

NOTES:
- The Irish held their first scrimmage of the spring on Saturday. It consisted of 40 plays and Matt LaVecchio, Carlyle Holiday and Jared Clark received almost an equal number of snaps. But due to the gusting winds and muddy field, the emphasis was placed more on the running game.

"From an individual evaluation, there's nothing to be evaluated right now as to who did good, who did poorly," Davis said. "We got out of it without anybody getting hurt, which you knock on wood every time you come off the field after doing that."

Prior to the scrimmage, the Irish worked on special teams. Nick Setta kicked a field goal while Joey Hildbold was the punter. Setta and David Miller competed for kickoff duties, a position held last year by graduating senior Matt McNew.

"I'm really concerned about our kickoff guy," Davis said. "That's probably the biggest concern of mine in special teams. Based on today, I don't know if we have one."

- Last year, Davis waited until July to announce the captains. This year, that may change.

There's a good chance we'll do it the last week of spring, maybe the day before the spring game or maybe announce it at the spring game," Davis said. "But I'm not 100 percent sure."

Speaking of captains, Grant Irons may be named one for the second straight year. Irons, who suffered a season-ending shoulder injury during last season's Nebraska game, has been held back this spring. He did not participate on Saturday.

"He started some sled work on Saturday," Davis said. "Grant's going to be OK."

The Belles claimed five singles matches and two doubles matches to smoke out the MIAA victory. Cook claimed the No. 2 singles victory 2-1 (6-4, 6-2, 6-4), joined by Jeannie Knish (6-1, 6-0), Cutler (6-2, 6-0), Spriggle (6-4, 6-4) and Ryan (4-6, 6-3).

In the doubles front, the team of Annie Knish and Cook claimed a close 7-5, 6-3 victory at No. 1 doubles, joined by Jeannie Knish and Cutler who took an easy 6-0, 6-3 win.

The young Saint Mary's team appeared to be stronger than Hope.

"I believe they're a very young team as well," Knish said. "They lost a couple of key players but it was definitely a strong win. Our line-up and our team were much stronger."

On Sunday, head coach Dee Stevenson gave his starting players a rest and played a different line-up in a non-conference loss to Tri-State. The B-squad recorded the first loss for Saint Mary's on the season.

"It was a little upset because we were undefeated," Knish said. "God love him [Stevenson], he had good intentions but he cut the match a little too close. It wasn't a conference match and the B-Team got an opportunity to play."

Saint Mary's will face off against Calvin College on Tuesday at home at 3 p.m.
+++VIEWPOINT+++

Monday, April 9, 2001

Gun control a wasted argument

Anna Barbour
Get a Life

In his Wednesday column, Professor Rice cited the Pontifical Council statement that marriage is a natural institution prior to the state, and thus it must be favored by the law. Furthermore, for a government to adopt a position banishing marriage to any one group’s opinion would violate a separation of church and state. There are other religions that allow homosexual marriages. Why don’t heterosexuals be superseded by the Catholic church’s in the eyes of the government? The Pontifical Council’s opinion holds weight in Church doctrine, but not in United States law. Furthermore, if we examine what is actually done by marriage within the context of modern society (a partnership of property and protection and certain legal rights), we see that neither of these deals explicitly with any religious context.

Next there is the issue of promotion of heterosexual marriage. Let me add an analogy: suppose that our “Cultural Indicators” showed that heterosexual people are still getting married by the church-laid but less and less couples are having children. If this were the case, would it then be the government’s responsibility (may, duty) to take away legal rights and privileges from those married couples who had no children in order to promote the continuation of society? Would it be appropriate to take away their rights merely because they made a choice counter to what some religious institution deemed appropriate? Not this. While the “continuation of society” may seem to be a noble endeavor, it is foolishly, perhaps, far too narrow.

Furthermore, the idea that the acknowledgment of marriage rights of homosexuals will put us on a “dead-end road to extinction” is at best a slip-up, slope fallacy and at worst a red herring. Let’s be realistic: are there people out there who say, “Well, I’m just not going to be married” or “Better to remain single” or “It’s just not in my life.” If a child is not brought into the world due to a heterosexual love interest, but shoot, I might not get equal tax protection so I might as well go find me a beterosexual and have some babies. Of course not. This fallaciously constructed “harm” has no bearing.

Finally, I find it interesting that the Pontifical Council alludes to some sort of Aristotelian justice (equal, unequal, unequal equal). How does one decide what makes people “equal”? If one person in a heterosexual marriage is biologically unable to have children, does that make them unequal, thus undervalue of marriage? Why shouldn’t this “equality of equals” be based on love, commitment and respect, and instead of these ideals. I’m sure the Church agrees are imperative in a successful marriage? With such a vague notion of justice presented, I find it hard to use that as a philosophical butt­ton for the exclusion of a segment of our commu­nity (yes, it is our community as Americans) from rights and privileges that we all might want at some point.

Mark Sycynuskie
Sears College
April 5, 2001

+++LETTERS TO THE EDITOR+++

Destroyer of Zahm cowardly

I love living in Zahm. Despite the campus’ negative opinion towards Zahm, I proudly state that I am a Zahmie. Being a part of the Zahm community opened many opportunities to share in a strong broth­erhood. The Brotherhood, which often appears extreme, is very similar to the brotherhood and sisterhood that we have in the Notre Dame family. Every dorm has its own brotherhood or sisterhood but we all share the common bond of being part of the Notre Dame family. But what happens when people forget the latter part, that we are all Notre Dame family and vandalsized numerous parts of our campus. The Zahm Hall entrance was covered in vulgar degenerate racist pictures. The Zahm Hall sign was ruined by black spray paint. The cowards that performed these offensive acts even took their hatred for Zahm out on St. Edward’s by spray painting Zahm on the wall.

Obviously the individuals involved in this incident have no respect for Zahm or Notre Dame. It sickens me that somebody could ruin such a beautiful campus. It also sickens me that some­body could make me feel the image I have of the Notre Dame family. But I guess there are always a few bad apples in a family. I hope this was an isolated inci­dent and this type of destruction does not happen again. We will not tolerate acts of disrespect and destruction of our campus. We are not cowards. We are the men of Zahm Hall.

Sean P. Coary
junior
Zahm Hall
April 8, 2001

Happily she would not have had to shoot the evildoer, but her right to bear arms is nothing to make light of now is it?

In addition, when my children go to high school, not only will they confront hor­r­on­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­­…
Bringing art home

Dolphin and senior art majors put a little bit of themselves onto canvas — and video.

By NICOLE HADDAD  Scene Writer

For Colleen Dolphin, a future in art was not even a consideration before she came to college. With only a few art classes under her belt in high school, she never dreamed that she would earn her Bachelor of Fine Arts degree. Initially, Dolphin planned to pursue a career in studio art with a concentration in photography; however, four years later, art has become a compelling passion for her.

"I wanted to do contemporary art and something you hadn't had much experience with," Dolphin said in an interview. "Because of that, my work has been quite abstract and different from what I've seen before.

"In Moirea, I'm showing a series of photographs that I've taken throughout the year. These are images that I've been working on for the past few months and they will be exhibited in a solo show at the Snite Museum of Art from April 13 to April 20. My work is a reflection of my experience studying abroad in Ireland, where I was able to explore the culture and art of the country. Through my work, I wanted to convey a sense of identity and belonging and to highlight the importance of cultural exchange."

Dolphin's senior comprehensive is comprised of a series of photographs, each one depicting a moment in her life. These images are accompanied by a short video that she created using a Canon EOS 5D Mark III camera. The video features interviews with her friends and family members, who share their thoughts on her work.

"I'm excited to share my Senior Art Comprehension with the public, as it has been a long time in the making," Dolphin said. "I hope that people will enjoy the visual and auditory elements of my work and gain a new perspective on the world around us."
Scene

Monday, April 9, 2001

page 11

The good, the fad and the cute

features 18 student MFA and BFA exhibitions this week

Clement's attempt to explore how the media sets "ideals of beauty, glamour, power, sexuality and excitement," presents the viewer with easily recognizable and identifiable American icons, yet arranges them in such a way that provokes a feeling of distress, inconsistency and nearly ironic apprehension.

A number of other theses display addresses somewhat more positive subjects. For example, Jo Mikals-Adachi's collection of small painted portraits tackles the problem of representing a person's entirety in art. On thirty different canvases, Mikals-Adachi depicts a variety of female subjects in a myriad of shoulder poses, some candid, some posed, but all revealing some truth about their subject.

Neil Fitzpatrick's industrial design thesis, "Evolve," presents extensive sketches and a 3D model of what he calls "a three-wheeled utility run-about" which combines elements from vehicles such as the side car motorcycle and the BMW Isetta.

Of course, the artists discussed here are only a few of the 18 whose work is currently on display through May 20. The projects which now populate the Snite are not to be missed - they offer any interested viewer a perspective of the world through the talent of Notre Dame's finest artists. Visit the show and experience their work for yourself. Visit it to bask in the glow of someone's culminating creative impulses. Visit it to lose yourself, if only for an hour, in a world of shapes and images that you won't find anywhere else.

Things to do this week

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Monday</th>
<th>Tuesday</th>
<th>Wednesday</th>
<th>Thursday</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>- 7 p.m. Cinema@theSnite Movie &quot;Trust.&quot; Admission is FREE!</td>
<td>- 7 &amp; 9 p.m. ISSA International Film Festival presents &quot;Cosi&quot; in Montgomery Theater, LaFortune Student Center.</td>
<td>- 7 p.m. &quot;NAACP Black Images&quot; lecture in LaFortune Ballroom.</td>
<td>- 9 a.m. Morning Prayer in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>- 3 p.m. Passion in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart.</td>
<td>- 5 p.m. Mass of the Lord's Supper in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>- 7:15 p.m. Stations of the Cross in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart.</td>
<td>- 11 p.m. Tenebrae in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Friday</td>
<td>Saturday</td>
<td>Sunday</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- 9 a.m. Morning Prayer in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart.</td>
<td>- 9 a.m. Morning Prayer in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart.</td>
<td>- 8 a.m. Solemn Mass in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>- 3 p.m. Passion in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart.</td>
<td>- 9:30 a.m. Organ Prelude in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart.</td>
<td>- 11:45 a.m. Sunday Mass in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>- 7:15 p.m. Stations of the Cross in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart.</td>
<td>- 7:15 p.m. Vespers in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart.</td>
<td>- 6:45 p.m. Grotto-Rosary at the Grotto.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
April 2001

Bookstore Basketball Results, April 6-8

Carolyn takes a drink of water.

April 6, 2001

April 7, 2001

April 8, 2000

The Observer accredits classifieds every business day from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the North Davis office, 604 South Davis Ave. Deadline for one-day classifieds is 5 p.m. All classifieds must be prepaid. The charge is 3 cents per character per day, including all spaces. The Observer reserves the right to edit all classifieds for content without issuing refunds.

WANTED

Returning to ND after college for graduate or law school? We are looking for another roommate to share furnished house near campus. Call 286-5651.

Roommate(s) to fit house off campus.

Call Michael @ 288-3429.

NOW Hiring servers and host staffing at Downer’s! Offers 6-8 hours/week. B.J. and Larry and Cathy toll-free 1-800-583-4000.

TENTS, 21-4

ND Today’s going all the way. B.J. and all the awesome bidders and Rolf’s secret weapon call.

Way to go, Flagplugs! Our opponent has no chance.

Father’s Son’s... and Four Other Storied Guides is still going today.

Hey Anne, here’s your classified.

Goodnight.

Time to go.
Sports reporters have the life

Do you like to watch sports reports on TV? Any type of sports report, I mean. They can be local TV news, ESPN Sportscenter or whatever else. If you do, it’s all about the highlights, the clever lights, the music. They can be local TV news, they can be about the world’s biggest events, like NASCAR while we sit at home watching. It would be worth it.

Sometimes I start to wonder if the cost-benefit analysis I asked myself in college basketball and then switch to football, young gymnasts, major golf tournaments, we’re still pushing those athletes he now covers.

The competition. "I want to go one-on-one with you, and if you win, great, but you know what? Bring something with you, because I’m not going to go down easy. You take that competitive edge with you into this business. And you know when you win. And there’s no better feeling than knowing when you break the story that nobody has... that’s what it’s all about. That’s what journalism is supposed to be." I laughed when he told me: "That’s the real thrill, is getting the stories out and beating the dog out of the competition.”

So basically, you get to do all these sporting events, watch your blood pressure climb a few points right before each time you go on the air, devise new ways to spice up a home run call and talk smack through your microphone in Sportscenter speak, that’s cooler than the other side of the pillow.

The views expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those The Observer.

WOMEN’S TRACK AND FIELD

Irish run away with victory at home meet

By NOAH AMSTADTER
Sports Editor

With a small squad, the Irish women’s track and field team was anything but undermanned this weekend.

With many athletes competing in multiple events, the Irish placed first in the home spring opener, finishing with 170.5 points to second Miami (Ohio) 129.2 and Western Michigan’s 90.5. Placing in three events for the Irish was Jaime Volkmer, who won the pole vault while taking second in the long jump and triple jump.

Volkmer, who rarely competes in the hurdles, has a lead of 18 feet, 1 1/2 inches. "She’s doing well," Irish jump coach Scott Winsor said. "She actually asked me after the meet if she could long jump more often. I said ‘By all means.’"

In the pole vault, Volkmer cleared 11 feet, the same height as last year. "I’m jealous," Winsor said. "I’ve been to six man football games, Masters golf tournament twice. I guess the only thing that Volkmer has over me is the Masters golf tournament twice."

"And when you talk to this guy," Winsor said, "he really is getting the stories out and beating the dog out of the competition." Winsor said: "She lets her head take over a little bit too much," Winsor said. "She just needs to let her talent take over. Honestly I thought she’s been vampire much higher by now."

In the triple jump, Volkmer leaped 34-1/2, an impressive leap considering that she concentrate on the pole vault in practice. "I think she’s capable of jumping further than that," Winsor said. "Whether or not I can expect that out of her, that’s a good question."

Volkmer wasn’t the only Irish jumper who had a extended a leg. Classmate Tameisha King took first in both the long jump and the 100-meter hurdles.

King cleared 20 feet on her fourth attempt, her last jump due to coaches limiting her attempts on the afternoon. "She quite often jumps her best jumps four, five and six," Winsor said. "I don’t think two more jumps may have cost her." In the hurdles, King’s time of 14.31 seconds was her second half a second behind second place Erin Connolly of Miami. Junior Dore Deardorff, who missed the indoor season due to injury, had a busy afternoon, collecting two first-place finishes to go along with two second-place marks.

DeBartolo won the hammer throw with a throw of 182 feet, just missing the NCAA provisional qualifying mark. She also won the shot put with a distance of 46 feet, 4 inches while taking second in the javelin and discus, an event she usually excels.

"Technically she’s got a lot of things to iron out in the disc," Winsor said. "She’s just got to learn how to do that. In the hammer she’s doing really well, she just keeps improving."

In the sprint, the 4x100 relay team of Liz Grow, Aysha Boyd, Kristen Dodd and Kynta Love took third in the NCAA Championships with a first-place time of 44.74 seconds, more than four seconds ahead of second-place Western Michigan. Sprinter coach John Millar thinks that time puts his team right at the top of the Big East.

"I’d like to say that that time probably could win it," Millar said. "Last year we were third and we ran high 45’s. I think Miami is probably the only team that run’s that run faster than that.”

In the relay, Miami’s 4x400 take the rest of the day off, setting the stage for a great day by Dodd, who won the 100-meters in a time of 12.72 seconds before taking first in the 200-meters, running 25.07. "I think she ran a terrific relay leg and a great leg, 100 out of nowhere there," Millar said. "She had a really good day, I was really excited for her.”

Sophomore Jennifer Handley had both the 1,500-meters and 3,000-meters.

Handley’s time of 4:42.92 was nearly three seconds ahead of Miami’s Kyley Studer in the 1,500. In the 3,000, sophomore’s mark of 10:15.75 put her more than six seconds ahead of teammate Krissy Kuenster. In the middle-distance races, Megan Johnson won the 800-meters in a time of 2.12.35 while Love won the 400, finishing in 55.25 seconds. Senior Cara Lenz won the 400-meter intermediate hurdles, going over her obstacles to take first in the 400.

In the field events freshman Jennifer Koeany leap 5 feet 7 to take first in the high jump, while Andre Duplichean won the javelin with a throw of 120- feet-10.}
The Masters

Woods makes history with win

Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — The vanquished usually make a mad dash to the parking lot on the final day of the Masters.

This time, it was different.

Some gathered in front of TVs in the parking lot of the National clubhouse. A few more actually wandered out to the 18th green to witness in person. Tiger Woods was making history, and even the guys he beats week in and week out wanted to see.

"It's a great time to be involved in the game, whether you're a player or a spectator," Steve Stricker said. "It's a great time to watch." The Irish return to action on Saturday, April 9.

Woods kept his rivals around until the end Sunday, even those who completed their 18 holes with no chance of denying his destiny. Call it a Grand Slam, call it a Tiger Slam, it really makes no difference. This was something special, a moment that transcended the game of golf to become one of those landmark moments in the American sports lexicon.

Woods' 515-yard drive at the 14th hole sparked the Irish. With the score at 6-1, Delano, senior Maura Doyle. With the score at 6-1, Delano, senior Maura Doyle scored, senior Maura Doyle scored, senior Maura Doyle scored, senior Maura Doyle scored, senior Maura Doyle scored, senior Maura Doyle scored. Their feeds were amazing as usual.

The Irish offense started things off as junior captain Alissa Moser scored an early goal. Penalties stifled the Irish momentum and Connecticut's Susan Payne tied the score at 1. That was all the Irish needed to boost their productivity.

Four seconds after a Connecticut defender drew a yellow card, sophomore Danielle Shearer scored her first goal of the game with an assist by senior captain Lael O'Shaughnessy. After the draw, Shearer got the ball from freshman Kassen White's saves set up scores by O'Shaughnessy.

The Irish offense started things off as junior captain Alissa Moser scored an early goal. Penalties stifled the Irish momentum and Connecticut's Susan Payne tied the score at 1. That was all the Irish needed to boost their productivity.

Four seconds after a Connecticut defender drew a yellow card, sophomore Danielle Shearer scored her first goal of the game with an assist by senior captain Lael O'Shaughnessy. After the draw, Shearer got the ball from freshman Kassen White's saves set up scores by O'Shaughnessy.

The Irish return to action on Saturday, April 9.
The Observer • SPORTS

MEN'S LACROSSE
Ulrich leads Notre Dame to 16-6 victory over Denver

By JOE LICANDRO
Sports Writer

With a balanced offensive attack led by senior Todd Ulrich's season-high four goals and strong team defense, the Notre Dame men's lacrosse team dominated its 16-6 win against the University of Denver from start to finish.

Ulrich immediately got the Irish off on the right track three minutes into the game by scooping up a loose ball and shooting it past his former high-school teammate goalie Brian Berger.

Less than a minute later, Ulrich would net his second goal of the game with a blazing shot from 15 yards out.

"I've been playing well the last couple of games but my shots just haven't been going in," said Ulrich who had only three goals this season before the Denver game. "Today, I'm glad I got off to a fast start. It was a little bittersweet, though, because Brian is one of my best friends."

The Irish led 6-0 at the end of the first quarter but Denver mounted a comeback at the beginning of the second quarter with two quick goals.

"I was a little upset because we lost our concentration and had a mental lapse out there," Corrigan said. "I expect Air Force to be a tough, hard-nosed team," he said. "They will come at us for 60 minutes."
SOFTBALL

Saint Mary's drops weekend doubleheader to Hope

By KATIE McVEOY
American Sports Editor

Saturday was a study in contrast for the Saint Mary's Belles and the Hope Flying Dutch in all aspects but one.

In a doubleheader at Hope, the Flying Dutch finished victorious twice. Hope (10-6, 4-0 MIAA) controlled the opener from the beginning, finishing the game with a 6-0 victory. Pitcher Kim Grotenshuis (5-3) dominated, shutting out Saint Mary's and giving up only two hits to Belles' hitters.

"She was pretty quick and we just couldn't hit her," senior pitcher Anne Senger said. Six hits were enough to bring six Hope players across home plate. Hope's Crafty Knecht hit back-to-back two run home runs, finishing the game 3-3, with four RBIs and nine total bases.

Belles' pitcher Kristin Martin took the loss while Grotenshuis picked up the win. While the first game may have played out in an inevitable ending, game two kept fans on the edge of their seats.

Although the Belles dropped the second game 8-7, they proved they were competitive. "The first game we weren't in it, but the second game was a really good game," Senger said. "We were down a couple of times and we came back and kept on hitting and if we hadn't of had so many errors we would have the game."

Hope pitching may have dominated in game one, filled in by good hitting, but game two proved to be more of a struggle for the Flying Dutch, as they scored several runs on Saint Mary's errors and served up several hommers.

Hope came out with an early 1-0 lead that didn't last long. In the third inning Libby Wilhelmy and Katrinna Tebbe smashed home runs putting the Belles on top. Tebbe's grand slam led to a 5-1 Saint Mary's lead.

"We hit really well," Senger said.

Staying competitive, the Belles responded with a three run home run off of Grotenshuis in the fifth inning bringing putting the Flying Dutch back on top, 6-5.

In the seventh, Hope scored twice more on a walk, a stolen base, a hit and two errors to claim the win.

The two losses leave the Belles with a 9-12 record (1-5 MIAA). They will next face off against Calvin at home Tuesday.

MEN'S TRACK AND FIELD

Shay paces Irish to second-place finish at home meet

By NOAH AMSTADTER
Sports Editor

Ryan Shay had one heck of a workout Saturday afternoon.

Competing in both the 1,500-meters and 3,000-meters at the Spring Opener, Shay won both events and placed third in the 3,000 to lead the Irish to a second-place overall finish.

Notre Dame ended the day with 174 points, behind Western Michigan's 202 and ahead of Miami (Ohio)'s 132 and Michigan's 119.

In his first race, Shay was the first Irish runner across the line in the 1,500.

His time of 3:38.27 was less than half a second behind winner Andy Lixey of Michigan State. Pat Conway, Notre Dame's second-place finisher during the indoor season, took 13th, finishing in 4:06.9. In his first meet since coming back from a knee injury, "I felt pretty good going into it," Shay paces Irish to second-place finish at home meet

I just wanted to get in and compete. I think the problems I've had in the past with the mile and the 1,500 are a lot more mental than anything else. I just told myself that that whole meet Saturday was going to serve as a workout for me."

In the 3,000 meters, Shay led the entire race. Running into a strong headwind nearly half the race, he finished in 14:43.51, two seconds ahead of Brian Godsey of Miami. "I really don't like to think of that guy as competition, but he stuck with me," Shay said. "I did all the work into the wind, it was very windy. He just drafted off of me."

Another athlete who excelled for the Irish on Saturday was sprinter Travis Davey. Davey took first in the 100 meters, while finishing second in the 200-meters and leading off Notre Dame's second-place 4x100 meter relay team.

His time of 11.07 seconds eclipsed second-place Josh Culver of Western Michigan by more than three tenths of a second.

"He was real solid," Irish sprint coach said of Davey, who finished 2nd behind Culver in the 200. "I think the 200, between the wind and probably being a little tired, he didn't look as strong. But I think he was smart in not pressing and taking any chances."

The relay team of Davey, William "Bed" Croker, Marton Gyulai and Godwin Mbagwu finished in 41.83 seconds, .02 seconds behind Western Michigan.

"I think that we had some good hand-offs and they held their own," Millar said. "It came down to a close finish."

The Irish received a strong performance in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles from freshman Napoleon Suarez, who took first in 53.75 seconds. "I was really pleased with Napoleon," Millar said. "He really seems to be coming along and getting comfortable with the 400 hurdles."

In the field events, the Irish excelled in the javelin, an area that had been a weakness until recently. Senior Matt O'Brien's throw of 190 feet, 10 inches toppled teammate Mike McMillan's second-place mark.

"Those guys threw exceptionally well. They finally broke out," said Irish field coach Scott Winner. "Matt had been struggling for a little while. What we did was we slowed down his approach. He was trying to use speed instead of his arm strength. Mike has been improving every week in practice."

Junior Quill Redwine, who underwent knee surgery less than two months ago, excelled in the high jump for the second week in a row, taking first with a leap of 6-10 3/4. Redwine nearly cleared the NCAA-qualifying mark of 7-1. "He had two decent attempts at 7-1," Winner said. "He's jumping really well right now."

The Irish also got a strong performance from junior Josh Beck in the pole vault, who took second overall, clearing a mark of 15-6 to finish ahead of Michigan State's Matt Deering, who cleared the same height but had more misses.

"Josh I thought competed extremely well," Winner said. "It was extremely windy. He beat out a very good Michigan State pole vaulter. I look to him to kind of be the leader in that event, to show by example. He did that."
ACROSS
1 Exchange
5 No longer waiting on the 11 Watch display, for
14 Fictional wizard
16 Cargo on the 17 Rarely
19 Scholar
20 According to the
22 Cushion
23 Miss Hawkins of
26 Talk a blue
27 Tree of life locale
28 Angry dog's
29 Nong
30 Bandleader
34 Hubub
37 Quartz after a desertion
39 1956 sci-fi
40 French
44 American
45 B.F. Flute
46 Break bread
47 Draft initial
48 Partner of Blues
49 Hey Kid
50 Baseball's
desertion
56 Felson's kure
59 Misdainst.
60 Air Traffic control device
63 U.S. soldiers
64 Schuss
65 Song from the Beales' "Abbay"
Road
66 A foot wide?

DOWN
1 "Olive"
2 Classified
3 Coin-op place
4 Grand
5 "S.A.T.'s"
6 "Gambling spot, in brief"
7 The "M" of NATO.
8 "Envy"
9 "Friend"
10 "Junior" problem
11 Male cher
12 Pound sounds
13 1200, on a monument
14 Has no
decimal point
15 Ment
16 "Love"
17 Ready to gambol
18 "Cappuccina"'s arrowgirl
19 Number on (Spotlight out)
20 P.U. cause
21 May be kept in a box in the basement
22 Like a computer icon
23 Interstate
24 Spotting point
25 Place for trash
26 Requestor
27 Loads
28 Sydney
29 Japanese
30 Gangster group
31 Fished with a net
32 "Billie" Joe

PUZZLE BY BRIAN TURRILL DUGGER

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

ACROSS
1 Chino
5 Ex-Sgt.
11 Hymn
14 "Harbor"
16 "Sink"
18 "Old"
21 "Hi"
24 "Buzz"
25 "Just"
27 "Pumpkin"
28 "Sandy"
30 "Tuba"
31 "Charlie"
32 "Do"
33 "Personal"
34 "Put"
35 "Roller"
37 "Dead"
38 "Ach"
40 "Fred"
41 "Katy"
42 "Deer"
43 "Head"
44 "Jack"
45 "Joe"
46 "Atlas"
47 "Oscar"
48 "Eugenia"
49 "Sally"
50 "Jay"

DOWN
1 "A" of the
2 "C" of the
3 "Z"
4 "A"
5 "B"
6 "D"
7 "E"
8 "F"
9 "G"
10 "H"
11 "I"
12 "J"
13 "K"
14 "L"
15 "M"
16 "N"
17 "O"
18 "P"
19 "Q"
20 "R"
21 "S"
22 "T"
23 "U"
24 "V"
25 "W"
26 "X"
27 "Y"
28 "Z"

Answers to any three clues in this puzzle are available by touch-tone phone:
1-900-420-5656 (55¢ per minute). Annual subscriptions are available for the best of Sunday crosswords from the last 50 years: 1-888-7-ACROSS.

Visit The Observer on the web at http://observer.nd.edu/
Dominating performance

The Notre Dame men's lacrosse team turned in a strong outing defeating Denver 16-6 at home Saturday.

page 17

SPORTS

Monday, April 9, 2001

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Saint Mary's remains undefeated in MIAA

By KATIE McVOY
Associate Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's tennis team seems to have acquired a taste for victory.

Two definitive wins on Thursday and Saturday have left the Belles undefeated and in first place in the MIAA.

Saint Mary's topped University of Chicago on Saturday 6-3 to up its record to a perfect 10-0, avenging a 5-4 loss to the Maroons last year.

Things got off to a rocky start at Saturday's match at Angela as four of the Belles six singles players dropped their first set to the Maroons of Chicago — Annie Knish at No. 1 singles, Natalie Cook at No. 2 singles, Jeannie Knish at No. 3 singles, and Elisa Ryan and No. 6 singles. But the Belles came back as Jeannie Knish and Ryan claimed the win over their opponents in successive matches.

"I think that we have a lot more depth this year and we're really strong in our singles positions and we're really strong in our doubles positions," team captain Annie Knish said. "I think that our singles positions are almost a guarantee and we really rely on those points."

Annie Knish, who dropped her first match 6-2, claimed solid victories over Chicago's Lisa Kahn 6-3, 6-3 in the next two sets to claim the point for Saint Mary's. Ryan also came out of her second and third sets with solid play, defeating Mary Tan 6-2, 6-2.

Freshmen Kaillit Cuyler and Kris Spriggle took their opponents without worrying the fans, claiming 2-0 victories over Chicago's Lisa Kahn 6-3, 6-3. But after dropping their singles matches, Annie Knish and Cook were hungry for a victory in doubles. They filled that

see TENNIS/page 14

FOOTBALL

Watson excels in Spring

By TIM CASEY
Senior Staff Writer

Ask Bob Davie about sophomore linebacker Courtney Watson and the Irish head coach offers two contrasting answers.

"He's like an Anthony Denman," Davie said after Saturday's practice. "You almost pattern him exactly like we did with Denman.

He's about on the same kind of course as Denman is on.

A few minutes later, Davie had another viewpoint on the Saratoga, Fla. resident.

"If you try to compare him with Anthony Denman right now, that's tough," Davie said. "He hasn't been in that situation as much as Anthony was in. It's a work in progress right now with him."

The lesson? It's still too early to judge a player that has logged less than 14 minutes in two seasons.

But the comparisons between Watson and Denman are intriguing. Before suffering a groin injury on Saturday, Watson had been working as the first team inside linebacker, a position Denman held for the past two seasons.

In 2000, Denman had a team high 84 tackles, recorded five sacks and was named a second-team Associated Press All-American. Like Denman, Watson was known more for his offensive production than defensive dominance in high school. During his senior year, Watson ran for 1,250 yards and 15 touchdowns while Denman gained 1,250 yards and rushed for 15 touchdowns in his final season at Rusk High School in Texas.

Like Denman, Watson knew the probability of being the main ball carrier in college was practically zero. Autry Denson, Notre Dame's all-time leading rusher, was here during Denman's freshman and sophomore seasons. When Watson enrolled in the fall of 1999, then-sophomore Tony Fisher and fellow freshman Rusk High Fla. resident.

"You almost pattern him exactly like we did with Denman."

"He's like an Anthony Denman."

But the comparisons between Watson and Denman are intriguing. Before suffering a groin injury on Saturday, Watson had been working as the first team inside linebacker, a position Denman held for the past two seasons. In 2000, Denman had a team high 84 tackles, recorded five sacks and was named a second-team Associated Press All-American. Like Denman, Watson was known more for his offensive production than defensive dominance in high school. During his senior year, Watson ran for 1,250 yards and 15 touchdowns while Denman gained 1,250 yards and rushed for 15 touchdowns in his final season at Rusk High School in Texas.

Like Denman, Watson knew the probability of being the main ball carrier in college was practically zero. Autry Denson, Notre Dame's all-time leading rusher, was here during Denman's freshman and sophomore seasons. When Watson enrolled in the fall of 1999, then-sophomore Tony Fisher and fellow freshman see WTOATN/page 14

In the opening rounds of Bookstore Basketball XXX, a member of No. 10 Diaper Dandles dunks in a win over Four Engineers and a Chem Major at Stepan Sunday. For complete Bookstore Basketball results see page 32.

SPORTS

AT A GLANCE

Men's Lacrosse
vs. Air Force
Today, 4 p.m.

Baseball
vs. Chicago State
Tuesday, 4:05 p.m.

Track and Field
at Missouri Meet
Friday, 9 a.m.

Tennis
vs. Calvin
Tuesday, 3 p.m.

Softball
vs. Bowling Green
Wednesday, 3:30 p.m.

Women's Lacrosse
vs. Duke (New Haven, Conn.)
Friday 4 p.m.