Murphy leaves Notre Dame to chase NBA dream

By KATHLEEN O'BRIEN
Senior Staff Writer

Junior All-American Troy Murphy is making his dream of playing in the NBA a reality. Murphy, a 6-foot-11 power forward, announced Friday that he would forgo his senior season at Notre Dame in order to enter the NBA Draft.

"I've had a great time here at Notre Dame," Murphy said. "And I am going to chase a dream that I've had for my entire life, and I'm going to put myself in the NBA Draft.

Murphy's dream of playing in the NBA began innocently, a third-grade kid shooting baskets on a miniature hoop in his basement. But unlike most kids, Murphy's pro dream didn't die. Instead, it flourished as he put Notre Dame basketball back in the top 25 and became a first-team All-American.

Murphy considered entering the Draft after his sophomore season, but chose to stay at Notre Dame. At the time, he thought it would be an easy decision to jump to the NBA after one more year of college. When it came to decision time, however, Murphy wasn't so sure what to do.

"When it came down to me to make the decision," Murphy said, "it was tough for me to make the decision because of the relationship that I have with Coach [Mike] Brey. ... It was a hard decision, but a decision that I'm happy with.

He tentatively put his name in the draft April 10, but didn't hire an agent, leaving open the option of staying at Notre Dame.

'I came extremely close to staying,' Murphy said.

Ten days later, Murphy knew it was time to leave.

'Ten days later, Murphy knew it was time to leave. This is not an initiative of ours,' Moore said. 'This is part of a major transition for Logan as we move our services and vision in a new direction.'

Dan Harshman
Logan CEO

University buys Logan Center property for $2.6 million

By JASON McFARLEY
News Editor

In a move that officials from Notre Dame, Logan Community Resources, Inc., say will strengthen the organizations' partnership, the University has agreed to the $2.6-million purchase of the Logan Center property.

Logan, a company with a 50-year history in Michiana, is best known for the services it provides intellectually and physically challenged children and adults. The center has been housed in its current site at 1235 N. Edye St., just south of campus, since 1965.

"This is part of a major transition for Logan as we move our services and vision in a new direction," Logan CEO Dan Harshman said.

Funds from the agreement will be used to strengthen the company financially and support future resources and opportunities for the disabled, according to Harshman.

As part of the arrangement, Notre Dame will buy the 52,000-square-foot facility and lease it back to Logan for $1 annually for three years.

University officials are unsure how the property will be used after that period. Plans for a new hotel and a larger law school on campus are in the works, but officials say it's too early to link the building initiatives with the Logan purchase.

"There's no word yet on how the University is planning to use the facility or of what kind of timeframe we're looking at," said Dennis Moore, Notre Dame director of public relations and information.

'This is not an initiative of ours,' Moore said. "This is part of a major transition for Logan as we move our services and vision in a new direction.'

Dan Harshman
Logan CEO
“It's ... the lake effect”

As a newcomer to this part of the country, I can't help but notice Midwesterners' tendency to excel at blaming their bad weather on two words. In Florida, we like to use some variety in our use of this phrase. As students we need to be taking full advantage of this excuse. The Daily Herald in response to its decision to publish David Horowitz's controversial advertisement about slave reparations.

Tensions surrounding the advertisement, entitled “Ten Reasons Why Slave Reparations for Slavery is a Bad Idea — and Racist Too,” heightened today as footage from videos spread that racially offensive graffiti had appeared on campus. The advertisement has spurred controversies at other college student newspapers that chose to publish it. At Brown University, a student coalition sued almost 4,000 copies of The Inside Herald in response to its decision to publish the advertisement. Other papers, such as The Duke Chronicle and the University of Wisconsin Rag Page, were also protested after they printed the advertisement.

Vicki Triponey, vice chancellor of student affairs, served as a mediator for the protest and told students that because the graffiti appeared on Tuesday it was not prompted by advertisement, which was printed two days later.

One woman in the crowd disagreed that the incidents were unrelated, stating, “I found out on Tuesday that this ad would probably be printed on Thursday.” Her comment was met by yells of shock from the protestors.

The UConn police said that the graffiti was found in a men's bathroom of the Gant building on Tuesday.

“The threatening graffiti was racist and anti-Semitic in nature,” a crime alert produced by the police department said. “Specifically, there was a threat of violence to be carried out on April 20.”

The number of police patrols on campus has been increased in response to the threat.

Penn State University

Police charge 15 more in riots

The State College Police Department charged an additional 15 men in connection with the March 24 riot in "Lake Country." Out of the 15 people arrested, 13 of them are Pennsylvania State University students. Most of the men arrested are charged with failure to disperse or disorderly conduct, which contrasts the first 20 arrests made by police. These charges ranged from aggravated assault to harassment. Many of those charged were identified through the still shot photos posted on the borough Web site (www.gov.state.college.pa.us) and through video footage taken by the public and police during the disturbance. Sgt. Dana Leonard says the police made the additional arrests because the public has been submitting more footage of higher quality than they had after the previous two riots. Leonard also said the State College Police Department and CrimeStopper's have been receiving phone calls from people who have identified men and women on the Web site.

Columbia University

Negotiations begin on TA unions

Hearings began Thursday between Columbia University and United Auto Workers (UAW) Local 2110, which is affiliated with Graduate Student Employees United (GSEU) at Columbia. The hearings will ultimately determine if there will be a union election at Columbia, a vote that could certify a union of teaching and research assistants. Columbia is represented by lawyers from Proskauer Rose LLP, which has an anti-union reputation and represented New York University (NYU) throughout its 43 days of hearings. The UAW is represented by the lawyers from Levy, Ratner and Behrouz, P.C., which represented UAW in the NYU case as well. The UAW is planning to argue that undergraduate teaching and research assistants should be included in the union at Columbia. Yesterday's proceedings demonstrated that the precedent set by the case at NYU, which recently became the first private university to recognize graduate student unions, will heavily influence both counsels' legal arguments.
Students run in memory of Notre Dame students Brionne Clary, Conor Murphy and Miranda Thomas who died after battles with leukemia. More than 350 people supported "In Tribute of Their Race" by completing a five kilometer run or a two mile walk. The event raised more than $3,000 for Clary and Murphy’s scholarship funds and the Leukemia Society.

Student to raise funds by biking across nation

By JASON McFARLEY
News Editor

"I've always wanted to see the whole country," said Ferry, a native of Tamaqua, Pa. "I thought that going on a bike would be the coolest way of doing it."

Ferry will participate with 25 other U.S. riders and two international riders. The bike tour goes through about a dozen states and includes routes through Salt Lake City, Boulder, Colo., Kansas City, Mo., St. Louis and the Blue Ridge Mountains. Stops in Indiana are planned in Bloomington and Terre Haute.

Ferry said she learned about Bike-Aid through an Observer story about Cotnoir, a former Notre Dame student and hockey player who participated in the program last summer.

"I thought about what I wanted to do this summer, so I got in touch with him [Cotnoir]. He told me that it had been a wonderful experience, and I knew I wanted to be a part of it, too," she said.

Ferry, a self-described "fitness freak," said the program was a natural fit with her exercise routine and ideas about social justice.

She grew up mountain biking in Pennsylvania’s Appalachian Mountains. Last spring she competed in her first marathon.

She currently runs five or six days a week, and this week she’ll run in the Nashville Marathon.

Ferry began training for the Bike-Aid trip in early-February, riding 20 miles on a stationary bicycle twice a week. She’ll soon begin biking outdoors for two hours once a week in preparation for the ride.

Of course, Ferry anticipates that the program will call not just on her physical capabilities.

"Community service and learning about how to make communities stronger is a big part of the experience," Ferry said, noting that bikers will ride six days per week and meet with community leaders and grassroots organizations on the seventh day.

When the trip wraps up in Washington in August, riders will meet with government officials to talk about what they’ve learned through the program.

In the meantime, Ferry is busy raising support — and funds — for the cause.

She has already collected about $2,000 through letters to family and friends as well as promoting the program on campus. She said businesses such as a local Papa John’s franchise have also donated.

By May 1, Ferry must raise a total of $2,400. By May 31, she must have raised the full $3,600.

"I’ve been really surprised how supportive everyone has been," Ferry said. "I’ve met so many people by doing this, and they’re all excited to be helping me."

Ferry said anyone interested in making contributions to her can mail donations or e-mail pledges to her. Sponsors may also donate in Ferry’s name at the Bike-Aid Web site, www.bikeaid.org.
Murphy

continued from page 1

was time to go.

"It's a feeling I have, kind of like the feeling when I came here," Murphy said. "It's something that I am ready to do."

The time had come for Murphy to take on a new challenge. He'd already met virtually every challenge put to him in his three years with the Irish.

For three seasons, Murphy dominated the Big East. He won rookie of the year honors as a freshman and became one of just four players to repeat as player of the year by capturing that award in both his sophomore and junior years.

By his sophomore season, Murphy also contributed to the team's success. He averaged 22.7 points and 10.3 rebounds as a sophomore, followed up by 21.8 points and 9.2 boards per game in his junior year. Both years, he was named a first-team All-American by the Associated Press.

Murphy, who leaves Notre Dame as the fifth all-time leading scorer in school history, also led the Irish from a 14-16 year when he was a freshman to a 22-15 season and NIT runner-up bid in 1999-2000. This year, he drew the Irish all the way to a 20-10 season, a Big East West Division championship, their first NCAA Tournament bid in 11 years and their first NCAA Tournament victory since 1989.

"This is a guy who played three years of college basketball and dominated in a major conference," Brey said. "He is very ready for this challenge."

In the weeks leading up to the June 27 NBA Draft, Murphy will work out individually for several NBA teams. He is in the process of selecting an agent, someone who will help him sift through the list of teams he should play for.

"I really believe his stock will go through the roof on the work-out," Brey said. "You bring him in for a workout, and in the work-out, they put him through a lot of skill stuff. First of all, shadowing the basketball drill, I mean, he is going to light up any kind of shooting drill. ... He is the kind of guy that is going to be extremely impressive in the work-out."

In the remaining weeks of the semester, Murphy will finish his courses through correspondence. He has worked with academic advisor Pat Holmes to devise a plan through which he will graduate with the Class of 2003.

Now that Murphy's made the decision on his future, he can relax, knowing he will no longer have to answer questions about his future every day. In the NBA, he will no longer be the subject of double-teams on defense, as he was every game of his college career. He'll be able to focus on just playing basketball, without the added demand of taking a full class schedule.

Despite the demands, Murphy enjoyed Notre Dame, which made it hard to leave the school and his teammates behind.

"College, it's a great place," Murphy said. "You know, it's a country club, it really is."

While he may have been unsure what he would do, his teammates expected Murphy's decision to lead him to the pros.

"I would have been more surprised if he would have come back," said Carroll.

Junior power forward Ryan Humphrey added, "You kind of knew because it was just hard on him throughout the season, the things he went through, the ups and downs. He'd score 18 points and have 10 rebounds, and people would say he had a bad game."

Without Murphy, Brey's job will be a little tougher next season. But the Irish expect their core of Humphrey, Carroll, David Graves and Harold Swannagan, coupled with the addition of high school All-American point guard Chris Thomas, to be up to the challenge.

"We're going to win a lot of games next year, and we're going to be chasing that back-to-back Big East Championship," Brey said.

While Murphy will no longer be in South Bend, he'll be close to the program. Brey plans to point him as the recruiting poster boy.

Murphy plans to stay in close touch with his friends on the team. And they'll be watching him.

"Anytime he's around, Chicago, Indianapolis, I'll go down and see him," Graves said. "Troy is a great guy. No matter if he has a couple more million dollars in his pocket, he's not going to change very much."
Suicide bomber strikes in Israel: A Palestinian suicide bomber blew himself up at a crowded suburban bus stop Sunday, killing an Israeli doctor and wounding 50 people a day after Israelis and Palestinians met in a bid to prevent such acts of violence.

Anti-Israeli groups meet in Iran: Angered by what they call aggression against Palestinians, some of Iran's most radical foes began gathering in Tehran on Sunday for a conference of resistance groups organized by Iran. Iranian state-run television and radio heralded the Tuesday-Wednesday meeting by broadcasti ng patriotic Palestinian songs and footage of clashes between Palestinians and Israeli troops.

Midwest flooding continues: More rain fell along the swollen Mississippi River on Sunday as residents piled their sandbags higher against advancing water. Even more rain was expected overnight into Monday, but it was not expected to fall heavily across a wide area and some rain already was factored into flood crest predictions, said Rick Kinney, a National Weather Service meteorologist based in the Quad Cities.

Western Hemisphere leaders to sign trade pact: Western Hemisphere leaders on Sunday signed an agreement to open their markets by December 2005, and said only countries with democratic governments can be a part of the world's most ambitious free-trade zone. In their final statement after a three-day summit, President Bush and 33 other leaders from North and South America and the Caribbean pledged to finish negotiations on the free-trade zone by January 2005, with the pact to take effect by the end of that year. They insisted that democracy was "fundamental to the advancement of all our objectives," adding that any "unconstitutional alteration or interruption of the democratic order ... constitutes an insurmountable obstacle" to participation in further hemispheric trade talks.

Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chrétien, the summit host, watched over their shoulders like a proud parent. The leaders said they would "conduct consultations" if any member state had a disruption of its democratic system, but the wording stopped short of establishing specific penalties or automatic expulsion from the talks on the Free Trade Area of the Americas. The treaty would create a barrier-free trade zone from the Arctic to Argentina, linking markets of 800 million people and economies ranging from the world's largest — the United States — to some of its tiniest.

Barrier-free trade on horizon

---

INDIANA News Briefs

Heavy winds affect 51st Little 500: The main adversary for the teams in this year's Little 500 wasn't the rider on the bicycle shadowing their rear tire; it was the wind. "You're going to see a lot of crashes out there today," coach Tim McNelis of Indianapolis Delta Theta, which hung on to win the 51st running of the race. It was the fraternity's third win. The team from Phi Delta Theta is trying hard to do just that. The survivor turned out to be team Phi Delta Theta, which hung on to win the 51st running of the 50-mile race. It was the fraternity's third win. The team from the Teter dorm finished second.

Evidence builds against Real IRA

In a pub considered the unofficial headquarters of an outlawed group responsible for the deadliest bomb attack in Northern Ireland's history, the patrons talk quietly among themselves — until the jukebox plays a song that seems to strike a chord.

Several of the men put down their pints and halt conversations in mid-sentence to join in a raucous sing-along to the Traveling Wilburys' old hit "Handle Me With Care."

When it comes to the breakaway group known as the Real IRA, authorities in Britain and Ireland are trying hard to do just that. More than 20 suspected members have been jailed, including Michael "Mickey" McKevitt, the group's alleged commander, who was arrested in Ireland on March 29 and is being held without bail on terrorism charges.

In recent weeks, news reports — confirmed by law enforcement officials in Britain and Ireland — have said an American informant working for the FBI and the British domestic intelligence service MI5 succeeded in infiltrating the Real IRA and is expected to provide detailed testimony against its ring-leaders later this year.

But the nagging question is whether the campaign against the Real IRA has dealt the shadowy group a decisive blow, or will instead galvanize it to launch fresh attacks.

The Real IRA surfaced in the wake of the Irish Republican Army's 1997 cease-fire that paved the way for a power-sharing government in Northern Ireland.
Award-winning actor presents tribute to Shakespeare

The University of Notre Dame will celebrate William Shakespeare’s 437th birthday with a performance by Tony Award-winning actor Brian Bedford.

Bedford will present his one-man tribute to Shakespeare, "The Lunatic, the Lover and the Poet," at 7:30 p.m. April 23 in Jordan Auditorium of the Mendoza College of Business. The performance dramatizes Shakespeare’s life using the playwright’s words.

Bedford has performed in the United States and Canada.

Bedford studied at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art. He performed which led to highly successful performances in London's West End and at Stratford upon Avon's more public roles at the Stratford Festival of Canada.

Commended one of North America’s leading classical actors, Bedford was inducted into the American Theatre Hall of Fame in 1997. Among roles performed off stage, he provided the voice of the title character in Walt Disney’s "Robin Hood.

Bedford’s performance is presented by SummerShakespeare at Notre Dame, which is planning its second annual summer performance, "Much Ado About Nothing." July 25-29. Presentations of last summer’s inaugural event, "The Taming of the Shrews," were sellouts.

Tickets for Bedford’s performance are $10. For ticket and parking information call the La Fortune Student Center, 219 631-8128.

Entrepeneurs sell McVeigh T-shirts

Associated Press

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. With thousands expected to travel to the site of Timothy McVeigh’s execution, entrepreneurs are hoping to cash in with commemorative T-shirts.

Among the four T-shirts already available in the Terre Haute area is one bearing the words "Hoosier Hospitality/McVeigh/Terre Haute." The shirt, which was released by Planet City federal building, which killed 168 people.

They haven’t really been flying," said Terre Haute resident Jim Handlin, who designed that shirt. "I look to have more sales as time gets closer and there’s more publicity on national TV.

I’m not really in the T-shirt business. I just bought a machine, a heat press here a month ago or so," added Handlin, 65. "The idea just popped in my mind that these would sell pretty good."

Bob Henry, president of the Greater Terre Haute Chamber of Commerce, said city officials are hoping to cash in on the business with residents profiting from McVeigh’s death. "We just kind of hope that we can escape that kind of vendor activity," he said.

Tony Lewis, 31, of Terre Haute is selling two pro-death penalty T-shirts and one anti-death penalty shirt. His "Stop the Killing, Let McVeigh Live" T-shirt features a man strapped to a gurney. Another shirt, says, "Terre Haute Extra Hangin’ Times, Die, Die, Die!" and displays a newspaper front with McVeigh’s likeness. His third shirt also uses the "Hangin’ Times" theme but is profanity laden.

Lewis, who said he has sold about 100 shirts so far, is also selling buttons.

"I’m doing it just to make a little money," he said.

COLOMBIA

Troops catch Brazilian drug lord

Associated Press

MARANDUA It took fighter planes, thousands of troops, and a month-long manhunt in the jungle. Finally, Colombia’s military seized the outlaw, a top Brazilian drug fugitive believed to have been swapping guns and cash with guerrillas for cocaine.

Colombian officials say Saturday’s arrest of Brazil’s most notorious cocaine lord, Luiz Fernando Da Costa, who was arrested with two countrymen, Sunday faced reporters flown to a military base outside Marandua, about 35 miles from where he was captured.

"I don’t have ties to the FARC and they have not given me protection," said the Brazilian, who took a bullet in the right arm from soldiers and whose arm and hand were heavily bandaged.

"I have been living as a farmer in these areas," Da Costa said.

But speaking to reporters here, Defense Minister Luis Ramirez called the arrest "a stiff blow to the finances of the FARC." Officials said Da Costa was paying the rebels $500 a kilogram for cocaine.

Brazilian Justice Minister Jose Gregori said Sunday his government would seek extradition. Since fleeing jail in 1996 where he was serving a 20-year sentence, Da Costa has accumulated new drug and homicide charges in Brazil, Gregori said.

Saturday’s arrest in Morichal, a small settlement in sweltering jungles near the Brazilian border, capped a manhunt of a size not seen since the days of Medellin drug lord Pablo Escobar.

Thousands of elite counter-guerrilla troops were dropped into one of Colombia’s most remote areas in February in search if Da Costa and a FARC commander believed to be in business with him.

They found rebel camps, uncharted coca fields, secret cocaine-processing laboratories, and documents the army says will prove FARC dealings with Da Costa. But they couldn’t catch up to the Brazilian until Thursday, when authorities intercepted radio communications and detected a small plane taking off for Brazil.

Air force fighters forced the plane down and, according to initial accounts, five men ran away. The army said Da Costa and several FARC members were on the run without food or water.
INS to charge foreign students

Universities' opposition may stop fee collection

By ADAM COOPER
Tufts Daily

International students studying at Tufts and other American schools could be hit with a $95 government fee as early as next year if new immigration regulations are published before next semester.

The government's Immigration and Naturalization Service department (INS) anticipates to finalize the regulations this summer and will begin to collect the fee 30 days later.

But colleges have expressed outrage at the proposal because they say the timing will not allow them to inform students of the change.

"It could cause havoc if implemented this summer," said Jane Etitch-Andrews, director of Tufts' International Center, which handles immigration affairs for the 800 foreign students on the Medford/Somerville Campus. "We send out information to incoming international students at the end of May and we would like to give them as much advance notice as possible. Knowing the way the government works, we won't see this moving too fast."

The director said she was not certain if the fee would apply to students already in the U.S. and she was anxious to let current students know if they would be affected by the regulations. She also added that Canadian students would have to pay the fee, even though they do not require a visa to study in the U.S.

Students will be able to pay the one-time fee using a credit card over the Internet or with a money order drawn on a U.S. bank.

If implemented, the fee will be paid by more than 100,000 students and visiting scholars annually, in addition to visa fees of at least $45. According to the Chronicle of Higher Education, the proceeds will be used to fund a tracking system containing the addresses and academic status of all foreign students in the United States.

Plans for the fee were discussed last year when the government institutions to collect the fee for the first time, but, according to Etitch-Andrews, nothing emerged after colleges and universities refused to act as INS fiscal agents.

With all the possible administrative headaches the fee may cause, several universities have written to the INS denouncing the changes, and educators are optimistic that the fee will not be implemented in the immediate future in the U.S.

"It probably won't happen in the summer, but the fee may still go into effect later," said Etitch-Andrews.

But many are still against the fee in principle. Sean McDermott, president of Tufts international club, says his opposition against the fee because he found the idea of tracking students unethical.

"It could cause havoc if implemented this summer." — Jane Etitch-Andrews

Tufts International Center

Congress set to tackle education, tax cuts

WASHINGTON

A well-visited Congress returns to work on school accountability and tax cuts, issues at heart of the Bush administration's agenda. By mid-week, the Senate is to take up a major education bill in line with the president's plan to improve the performance of both the nation's students and the public schools they attend.

House and Senate negotiators also sit down this week to grapple with differences in their approach to the budget for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

The House voted for a budget that endorsed Bush's 10-year, $1.6 trillion tax cut. The Senate, in its final act before the two-week Easter break, approved a package that included more spending than the president wanted and a $1.2 trillion tax break.

A vote on a compromise could come by the end of the week.

In what is expected to be a busy few weeks before Memorial Day, Republican leaders hope to push a school and tax cut package to the president and come up with a long-term energy plan.

The Senate is likely to vote on legislation to raise the minimum wage while giving small businesses some tax relief. Democrats also are pressing on such issues as campaign finance legislation, prescription drug benefits for seniors and patient rights for those in managed care programs.

These activities follow the fairly cautious approach taken so far by Republican leaders who finally have a soul mate in the White House but must deal with a Democratic force of near equal strength.

Congress this year has passed two major bills. One it extended unemployment, bankruptcy, the other overturned Clinton administration ergonomic rules aimed at reducing workplace injuries.

The House has taken the main parts of the Bush tax package to the president by majority vote for President John McCain, R-Ariz., approved limits on campaign contributions. But Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, said Congress in the first 180 days of the Bush administration has "not been national" but more productive than the Clinton administration in its opening days.

Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas, head of the House Democratic Caucus, said Republicans were "determined in an unrealistic approach," charging ahead with tax cuts before they know how much they plan to spend in future priorities, and before dealing with urgent matters such as prescription drug benefits.

After weeks of negotiations and conciliatory approaches, some Republicans hope to pass an education bill that will largely reflect Bush's goal of improving schools more accountable, requiring annual testing to measure student performance and providing other options to students attending failing schools.

A tentative compromise was reached before the recess on the contentious issue of vouchers, under which students at substandard schools could get funds for after-school tutoring or to transfer to another public school but would not, as proposed by Bush, allow public funds to be used for private school tuition.

But the opening debate on the bill was put off until at least Wednesday because of remaining differences over funds. Democrats say the Bush budget proposal, while increasing education spending, does not go far enough to meet the costs of hiring more teachers and building or repairing schools.

The House this week takes up two bills that are favorites among social and fiscal conservatives but have had little success in past congresses. A measure that seeks to prevent a woman from harming a fetus during a violent act against a pregnant woman passed the House but would not be considered in the Senate due to the abortion issue.

Associated Press

NATIONAL NEWS page 7

OPENS THIS WEEK!

Don't miss this funny yet touching Broadway musical!

Thursday

April 26th at 8 p.m.

Friday

April 27th at 8 p.m.

Saturday

April 28th at 8 p.m.

Sunday

April 29th at 2:30 p.m.

Saint Mary's College O'Laughlin Auditorium

Showbiz and A Dream...

For ticket information contact the Saint Mary's Box Office at 284-4626

The perfect home: That's been your dream.

Now, with annual percentage rates as low as they are, you can live your dream. Notre Dame Federal Credit Union can help. We'll design a fixed or adjustable-rate mortgage around your specific needs. Plus, you can finance up to 100% of your home. And, we'll do it for you quickly, with no hassles. We even offer first mortgages nationwide! Still dreaming of your perfect home? Notre Dame Federal Credit Union will help make it a reality.

The perfect home: That's been your dream.
San Francisco pushes for sex-change benefits

Associated Press

San Francisco is long overdue in ending a city committee and will go out in 1998. sneakers earned approval last week from a city's Human Rights Commission.

"The city is recognizing this is a medical condition and there are medical procedures that can correct it," Theresa Sparks, a transgender member of the city's Human Rights Commission. Sparks underwent surgery to become a woman last year in Thailand because she couldn't afford the surgery in the United States. She's paid about $30,000 since she began making her transition in 1997, but will still be able to enjoy the city's benefits if she chooses to have the surgery in the future.

Sparks said she hopes San Francisco's adoption of transgender benefits sends a message to other municipalities that the city's employees will be treated equally. She also hopes insurance companies will begin extending similar benefits to private employers.

"It's a symbolic benefit. The city is recognizing this is a medical condition and there are medical procedures that can correct it," Sparks said.

Astronauts install robot arm

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. - Two walking astronauts successfully installed a massive billion-dollar robot arm on the international space station on Sunday and used the two-handed limb to make history by becoming the first to make spacewalks.

"Look at the size of this thing," space shuttle Endeavour commander Chris Hadfield marveled as he tugged open the 58-foot, 3,600-pound arm. The arm remained bent at the elbow and was to be extended Monday by the space station crew working inside.

It was Canada's biggest day ever in space: the first Canadian spacewalker hooking up Endeavour's Canadian-built robot arm on station Alpha.

At the conclusion of the seven-hour spacewalk, Mission Control congratulated Hadfield and his U.S. spacewalking partner, Scott Parazynski, in English and French and played a recording of "Oh Canada," the country's anthem. The recording was made at a Montreal hockey rink.

"We're real proud of your work up there getting Canadarm2 operational," said Steven Maclean, a Canadian astronaut working in Mission Control. "And if you turn around and look down, I believe you're right over Newfoundland."

The new arm will serve as a high-tech construction crane throughout the lifetime of the space station. With a hand on both ends and seven joints along its length, the arm is designed to move across the space station like an inchworm, grabbing tools and moving where needed.

Hadfield's performance was especially impressive: He had to fight burning eyes as he worked 240 miles up. His eyes began filling with tears midway through the spacewalk, and he had to shut them down after several minutes, his left eye improved.

"My right eye is kind of half-closed all the time, but I think it's going to clear," Hadfield assured his crewmates inside Endeavour. "I tell you, it's weird spacewalking and floating through space with your eyes closed."

NASA officials suspect helium-antiproton gas sweated out of his eyes.

Pilot Jeffrey Ashby began the day's events, using Endeavour's 59-foot robot arm like a crane to lift the new station arm from the shuttle payload bay. The new arm had to be double-folded to fit in the payload bay and was still in its launch container when a double bond attached to the space station.

An hour later, Hadfield and Parazynski ventured outside and quickly connected power, data and video cables to the new arm, bringing it to life. Then they removed eight 4-ton bolts that secured the arm to its launch cradle. "Unlock the arm," Parazynski said eagerly.

Parazynski positioned himself beneath the arm like a weightlifter to raise it 35 degrees. "Getting ready for the Olympics clean-and-jerk," he announced. He hoisted it, then called out to Hadfield: "Unfold away."

Perched on the end of the shuttle crane for traction, Hadfield unfolded the new station arm while being lifted by crane operator Ashby. Once the arm was open, the spacewalkers drilled expandable fasteners into hinges to permanently bolt the pieces together. They had trouble tightening the fasteners and had to apply extra force.

The arm will be cranked up by the space station crew on Monday and continue to step off to another location on the laboratory, where it will remain anchored for the next year.

On Tuesday, Hadfield and Parazynski will go back outside to wire up the arm in its new location. Throughout the rest of the week, the space station crew will practice using the arm, handing its still attached launch cradle to Endeavour's robot arm and mimicking what it will do during the next shuttle visit in June. The station arm will be fully extended then to hook up a new arm for the 2003 shuttle mission.

The Canadians will send up a rail car for the arm next year, expanded its reach even more. Fingers will be launched in 2003 and make what it will do during the next shuttle visit in June. The station arm will be fully extended then to hook up a new arm for the 2003 shuttle mission.

They took time to savor the sights, including the Southern Lights, and to peek at the three space stations residents through the laboratory window and pose for pictures.

Dear Lisa Lecture

Speaker Tom Santoro tells the story of his daughter Lisa, whom he lost to dating violence. "Educate Yourself About Dating Violence."

Speaking at St. Mary's College in Stapleton Lounge at 7:30 on Monday, April 23rd.

Sponsored by Campus Alliance for Rape Education

NEW DONORS
EARN $20 TODAY
MENTION THIS AD
FOR A $5.00 BONUS

Up to $145.00 a month in 2-4 hours a week

SERACARE PLASMA

NEED CASH?
Military shoots down plane carrying American missionaries

Officials believed plane was carrying drug traffickers

A plane carrying American missionaries that apparently was mistaken for a drug flight and shot down over the Amazon had its child’s skull as she sat on her mother’s lap, apparently by a single bullet that passed through the woman’s body and entered the child’s skull, after it had flown by first, without a flight plan in airspace frequented by drug runners. Peruvians rescued the pilot, 42-year-old Gordon Donaldson, who was picked up by the gunfire, and the husband and son of the woman killed in the shooting.

The busband, Jim Bowers, 37, was decried by Peruvian authorities before returning home in North Carolina Sunday with the couple’s 6-year-old son, Cory. Donaldson was reportedly decided to a Philadelphia hospital for surgery.

U.S. officials announced late Saturday that the missionaries’ plane was operating without a flight plan and that the attack had been mistaken for a drug flight. Peruvian fighters must first try to make radio contact and visually signal a suspect aircraft to land for inspection before opening fire. If the pilot balks, warning shots must be fired.

"None of that was done," said Jim Bowers’ older brother, Phil, a trained pilot who sat in on his brother’s debriefing by Peruvian authorities.

The Peruvian air force, which has expressed regret for the incident, said in a statement Saturday that the missionary plane entered Peruvian air space unannounced from Brazilian territory and was fired upon after Donaldson failed to respond to "international procedures of identification and interception." Phil Bowers disputed that version.

"There was no communication. It happened very fast. The planes flew by first, did some swooping, and then came in from behind and started shooting," he told The Associated Press.

Donaldson will be admitted to Reading General Hospital, 625 miles northeast of Lima, one plane, said he kept firing as the survivors clung to the wreckage in the water. "We’ve got hundreds of witnesses from the shore, Peruvians who were watching from the village of Huanta," he said. The Peruvian surveillance plane also witnessed the air attack, he added.

"Why didn’t they call and check the registration?" he said. "Sounds like a bunch of vigilante, hot shot pilots. Either that or someone higher up ordered the pilots to shoot." Mario Justo, chief of Iquitos’ airport, told The Associated Press on Saturday that the plane had a flight plan and that its pilot was in radio contact with Iquitos’ airport control tower.

Survivors return to families in U.S.

Donaldson was admitted to Reading General Hospital, 625 miles northeast of Lima, one plane, said he kept firing as the survivors clung to the wreckage in the water. "We’ve got hundreds of witnesses from the shore, Peruvians who were watching from the village of Huanta," he said. The Peruvian surveillance plane also witnessed the air attack, he added.

"Why didn’t they call and check the registration?" he said. "Sounds like a bunch of vigilante, hot shot pilots. Either that or someone higher up ordered the pilots to shoot." Mario Justo, chief of Iquitos’ airport, told The Associated Press on Saturday that the plane had a flight plan and that its pilot was in radio contact with Iquitos’ airport control tower.

LIMA, Peru

Missionary Veronica Cory, 35, and her infant daughter, were both killed by the Peruvian gunfire Friday, apparently by a single bullet that passed through the woman’s body and entered the child’s skull as she sat on her mother’s lap, apparently by a single bullet that passed through the woman’s body and entered the child’s skull, after it had flown by first, without a flight plan in airspace frequented by drug runners. Peruvians rescued the pilot, 42-year-old Gordon Donaldson, who was picked up by the gunfire, and the husband and son of the woman killed in the shooting.

The busband, Jim Bowers, 37, was decried by Peruvian authorities before returning home in North Carolina Sunday with the couple’s 6-year-old son, Cory. Donaldson was reportedly decided to a Philadelphia hospital for surgery.

U.S. officials announced late Saturday that the missionaries’ plane was operating without a flight plan and that the attack had been mistaken for a drug flight. Peruvian fighters must first try to make radio contact and visually signal a suspect aircraft to land for inspection before opening fire. If the pilot balks, warning shots must be fired.

"None of that was done," said Jim Bowers’ older brother, Phil, a trained pilot who sat in on his brother’s debriefing by Peruvian authorities.

The Peruvian air force, which has expressed regret for the incident, said in a statement Saturday that the missionary plane entered Peruvian air space unannounced from Brazilian territory and was fired upon after Donaldson failed to respond to "international procedures of identification and interception." Phil Bowers disputed that version.

"There was no communication. It happened very fast. The planes flew by first, did some swooping, and then came in from behind and started shooting," he told The Associated Press.

Donaldson was admitted to Reading General Hospital, 625 miles northeast of Lima, one plane, said he kept firing as the survivors clung to the wreckage in the water. "We’ve got hundreds of witnesses from the shore, Peruvians who were watching from the village of Huanta," he said. The Peruvian surveillance plane also witnessed the air attack, he added.

"Why didn’t they call and check the registration?" he said. "Sounds like a bunch of vigilante, hot shot pilots. Either that or someone higher up ordered the pilots to shoot." Mario Justo, chief of Iquitos’ airport, told The Associated Press on Saturday that the plane had a flight plan and that its pilot was in radio contact with Iquitos’ airport control tower.

STUDENT ORGANIZED LECTURE

Professor Michael Sherry, distinguished historian from Northwestern University, will speak on the topic --

"DON’T ASK, DON’T TELL": The Great Debate on Gays-in-the-Military 1993-4

All are invited. Q & A to follow

Monday, April 30
7:00 pm
Lafortune Ballroom

Sponsored by the History Department, Knott Hall, the Student Union, the University Standing Committee for Gay and Lesbian Needs, College Democrats and College Republicans
Neoliberalism 101

This past weekend leaders from the Americas came to Quebec City to figure out how to create a vast free trade zone called the Free Trade Area of the Americas (FTAA). There were also at least 30 thousand protesters on the streets, and in one of many solidarity actions another five thousand people rallied and shut down the Washington-British Columbia border. The FTAA is part of a neoliberal economic agenda that wants to take back the gains won by past movements like the labor and environmental movements. Nonviolent direct action has allowed Americans to win a degree of rights, democracy, prosperity and environmental protection. However, corporations and the rich are not happy about having to pay for the costs of a social welfare state and environmental regulation.

Neoliberalism is the reenchantment of capitalism. One of its goals is to reduce the level of state involvement in the economy to maximize the area for profit-seeking corporations. Neoliberalism seeks to end state involvement in national healthcare, in supporting agriculture, or ownership of any part of the economy. If not resisted, this logic could even end public funded education.

The way neoliberalism justifies its attack on public programs is by public funding a "barrier to free trade." An example of how this plays out happened several years ago. A social-democratic Ontario provincial government wanted to create a public auto-insurance program to save motorists money, but it had to back away from this effort since under NAFTA it could be sued by American corporations for the loss of a market.

Neoliberalism’s other main goal is to extend the unrestricted market economy to every country in the world because the more markets there are, the more money corporations can make. This requires putting pressure on countries that would prefer a mixed social-democratic form of economic development.

Countries are told to reduce their social programs and make it easy for foreign investors to exploit their cheap labor and natural resources. This pressure is achieved by cutting off foreign investment, economic aid and if necessary, using military force like NATO’s intervention in Yugoslavia which forced the Socialist party out of power.

Free trade has little to do with freedom and everything to do with giving power to corporations. Another frightening development is global enforcement of "intellectual property rights." This allows corporations, concentrated in the rich states that can afford to do expensive research, to monopolize patents on life-saving medicine. If a poor state wants to produce generic drugs to save lives of its citizens, under World Trade Organization (WTO) rules corporations can sue it and stand to win millions. Does anyone else think something is wrong when state leaders are able to discuss how important democracy is to make it a requirement for being in the FTAA, only while they are guarded by a two mile fence to keep out the rabble?

What if during their discussions those soldiers of police arrest activists. It is true that the police arrested five hundred people to close off the street, but it is also true that the police arrested five hundred people to block everyone off the streets. The police decided to gas anyone who got near it. The police also closed down the protest by spraying spray and no rubber bullets. During the primary days of action, I did not see any tear gas or pepper spray, or any rubber bullets. During the primary days of action, I did not see any police arrest activists. It is true that the police arrested five hundred people but we have shut down the protest headquarters, but at least on the primary day of action things were relatively peaceful.

We need to be back on our streets for democratic dissent and stop this police violence. We also need to replace corporate power worship with the global justice that invests in people. What if during this "free-trade" agreements with global justice that invests in people. What if during this "free-trade" agreements with global justice that invests in people.
Letters to the Editor

Answering false impressions of ROTC

I am writing this article in response to The Observer’s article on April 12 regarding Pax Christi’s protest of the ROTC Pass in Review. First of all, I would like to applaud Pax Christi for staging a protest in order to let their views be known, and for the manner in which they carried out their protest. I am a member of Pax Christi with whom I spoke in that same impression. This protest is correct. The purpose of the annual Pass in Review ceremony is for the University President and the troops who then honor him as the representative of the University as a whole. This is an important distinction. The cadets do not fulfill the ROTC units to salute Father Malloy and in so doing honor the University and thank the President. Pax Christi, in my opinion, is three of the most arguable parts of the University. They are also three of the most arguable arguments you could put forward. Pax Christi did not point out that the tradition has no biblical basis. These are three of the most common arguments by students on the subject. They also pointed out that the most same arguments you could put together but Pax Christi put together one really bad argument. The pass hall is part of a Catholic university, and therefore it is a Catholic dining hall. Just as a Catholic mother would not serve her children meat on Good Friday, neither should the dining hall. Swiker says that God gives us food and we are not only, I would like to add. Pax Christi tried to give the option of eating meat. However, we also ask God to give us this on its own daily bread and feed us not into temptation. If you want more temptation, then there are plenty of other schools you could attend. Pax Christi doesn’t seem to acknowledge that it is the government that orders bombings and deployment of forces. Pax Christi believes the military is being used unjustly, then perhaps they should write their senators, organize marches or protests against government decision-makers or assist in the electoral campaign of more “just” candidates for congress or even the presidency. Pax Christi doesn’t seem to focus any lobbying on government majors. I would like to supplement my point about ethical education at Notre Dame. I have met ROTC cadets from all over the country (have you, Pax Christi?) and I can say without a shadow of a doubt that the education we get at Notre Dame, centered in Christian ethics, makes a huge difference in the caliber of officers we graduate. Our students in general are able to make sound moral decisions and recognize moral dilemmas better than students at other schools. I say this from experience. We take our courses here with the added recognition of the awesome responsibility that is being presented to us as officers in the military.

My response to Pax Christi in general is this: Focusing specifically on ROTC at Notre Dame is a select group of people who see the military as an advantageous force. The military has the added recognition of the awesome responsibility that is being presented to us as officers in the military. It isn’t a bad idea to attend our courses here with the added recognition of the awesome responsibility that is being presented to us as officers in the military.
Two days before boarding my plane from Chicago to Madrid last summer, I received an e-mail from a friend who was already in Europe and had begun her back-packing odyssey across the Continent. "They're all really thin, and they smoke constantly," she wrote of the Europeans. A broad generalization, surely, but it was one I found to be near to the truth. In the weeks to come, as I too became a foreigner amongst swarms of Europeans, I couldn't help but notice how different their society seemed.

Compared to America's constantly growing waistlines, the slim and trim silhouettes of Europeans were but a shadow of our own. I couldn't figure out how they did it, considering hard-growing waistlines, the slim and trim packing odyssey across the Continent. It didn't take long to realize that the extremely unfavorable acceptance of cigarettes and prevailing anti-exercise sentiment. As my stay lengthened, however, I began to notice a more positive stance toward eating and food in general that I rarely observe in America.

Outside of my grandmother's kitchen, where I am openly encouraged to stuff myself with home-cooked food, the preoccupations and inconsistencies of American views remain. Eating a steak and chocolate cake to impress your man on a date, but be careful - one steak too many and you're on the way to Jenny Craig. I was proud about whatever size you are — just don't open any fashion or beauty magazine to realize American media only accepts a size zero. There doesn't seem to be a middle ground.

In America I'm grateful to breathe cleaner air in restaurants and to hunt down low-calorie choices when I want them. But I'm convinced we can learn something from Spaniards. We need to enjoy more and obsess less. All the time we spend rushing to the gym and downing low-fat potato chips and brownies doesn't seem to get us anywhere but to a larger dress-size. Maybe the truth lies between those clouds of smoke- that no one nation is better than the other. We are all really different, and we are all the same.

To them, America was a nation of hypocrites — we whine about our weight and fork over millions to gyms and diet industries, only to infiltrate the world with fast food restaurants and to hunt down low-calorie choices when we eat. We ate at 9 or even 10 p.m., going directly against the guidelines of American healthy eating. Guided by doctors, pacts with friends and "SELF" magazine, I had trained myself to never even snack after a six o'clock dinner.

Worst of all, my friend's comment about the ubiquitous presence of cigarettes proved to be true. Within 30 seconds of disembarking in Madrid's Barajas Airport, I found myself choking in a cloud of smoke as clusters of people lit up all over the building. We weren't free from the smoky haze anywhere — not in restaurants, hotels, theaters or even airplanes. It didn't take long to realize that my raised eyebrows and subtly directed coughs wouldn't make the air any cleaner.

Surrounded by smoke and fatty foods, I wasted no time in settling out for a run ... only to be greeted at the front door of my new home by the blank-faced stares of my Spanish family. They couldn't understand the importance of a workout schedule, something I had taken for granted at home. I tried to explain my reasons: it released stress, made me feel better and offered a break from a busy day. But they remained convinced it was about something else — my weight.

To them, America was a nation of hypocrites — we whine about our weight and fork over millions to gyms and diet industries, only to infiltrate the world with McDonald's, Burger King and Wendy's. Our nation's almost paradoxical fixation with food and exercise had released stress, made me feel better and offered a break from a busy day. But they remained convinced it was about something else — my weight.

Spanish eating, American ideals

Jackie Ostrowski

Scene Writer

European dining is done in a more casual atmosphere than in the United States. Europe has a lower rate of obesity and heart disease. One reason may be the less stressful environment in which they dine.

The opinions expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

The story of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde came alive this past weekend on the local stage when the Broadway Theatre League presented the musical "Jekyll & Hyde" at the Morris Performing Arts Center.

Scene reviews the hit musical that celebrates its 100th anniversary this year.

The story is derived from the familiar novella "The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" by Robert Louis Stevenson. The basic outline of the story is now a well-known tradition in modern culture. Set in 1880s London, it is the tale of Dr. Henry Jekyll (played by Stephen J. Rubenstein), a scientist who is convinced he can separate the good from the bad and create a formula that will allow him to control good and evil.

Afraid he is attempting to play God, the local board of governors rejects Dr. Jekyll's experiment on innocents. The formula works, however, and Jekyll's shadow grows larger and darker.

Scene By MATT KILEN

Spanish eating, American ideals

Two days before boarding my plane from Chicago to Madrid last summer, I received an e-mail from a friend who was already in Europe and had begun her back-packing odyssey across the Continent. "They're all really thin, and they smoke constantly," she wrote of the Europeans. A broad generalization, surely, but it was one I found to be near to the truth. In the weeks to come, as I too became a foreigner amongst swarms of Europeans, I couldn't help but notice how different their society seemed.

Compared to America's constantly growing waistlines, the slim and trim silhouettes of Europeans were but a shadow of our own. I couldn't figure out how they did it, considering hard-growing waistlines, the slim and trim packing odyssey across the Continent. It didn't take long to realize that the extremely unfavorable acceptance of cigarettes and prevailing anti-exercise sentiment. As my stay lengthened, however, I began to notice a more positive stance toward eating and food in general that I rarely observe in America.

Outside of my grandmother's kitchen, where I am openly encouraged to stuff myself with home-cooked food, the preoccupations and inconsistencies of American views remain. Eating a steak and chocolate cake to impress your man on a date, but be careful - one steak too many and you're on the way to Jenny Craig. I was proud about whatever size you are — just don't open any fashion or beauty magazine to realize American media only accepts a size zero. There doesn't seem to be a middle ground.

In America I'm grateful to breathe cleaner air in restaurants and to hunt down low-calorie choices when I want them. But I'm convinced we can learn something from Spaniards. We need to enjoy more and obsess less. All the time we spend rushing to the gym and downing low-fat potato chips and brownies doesn't seem to get us anywhere but to a larger dress-size. Maybe the truth lies between those clouds of smoke- that no one nation is better than the other. We are all really different, and we are all the same.

To them, America was a nation of hypocrites — we whine about our weight and fork over millions to gyms and diet industries, only to infiltrate the world with fast food restaurants and to hunt down low-calorie choices when we eat. We ate at 9 or even 10 p.m., going directly against the guidelines of American healthy eating. Guided by doctors, pacts with friends and "SELF" magazine, I had trained myself to never even snack after a six o'clock dinner.

Worst of all, my friend's comment about the ubiquitous presence of cigarettes proved to be true. Within 30 seconds of disembarking in Madrid's Barajas Airport, I found myself choking in a cloud of smoke as clusters of people lit up all over the building. We weren't free from the smoky haze anywhere — not in restaurants, hotels, theaters or even airplanes. It didn't take long to realize that my raised eyebrows and subtly directed coughs wouldn't make the air any cleaner.

Surrounded by smoke and fatty foods, I wasted no time in settling out for a run ... only to be greeted at the front door of my new home by the blank-faced stares of my Spanish family. They couldn't understand the importance of a workout schedule, something I had taken for granted at home. I tried to explain my reasons: it released stress, made me feel better and offered a break from a busy day. But they remained convinced it was about something else — my weight.

To them, America was a nation of hypocrites — we whine about our weight and fork over millions to gyms and diet industries, only to infiltrate the world with McDonald's, Burger King and Wendy's. Our nation's almost paradoxical fixation with food and exercise had released stress, made me feel better and offered a break from a busy day. But they remained convinced it was about something else — my weight.

The opinions expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

The musical — like the book — explores, through physical representation the dual nature of man. Hyde is the evil portion of Jekyll's soul. His is an outward manifestation of Jekyll's most deepest and darkest thoughts. Moreover, he is a violent and dangerous source of evil that is an outward manifestation of Jekyll's soul.

The musical has fascinating visuals throughout. While the set pieces aren't too extravagant (aside from Jekyll's lab, which is revealed with impressive images), the production almost perfectly parallels the action of the first act, the production prefers using lighting to create some truly impressive images.

Some of the most striking of these images come during Jekyll's murder spree at the beginning of the second act. At one point, one of Hyde's targets is afraid for his life and is planning to leave town. While he explains this, Hyde's shadow grows larger and larger behind him until Hyde's shadow towers on the screen behind him. The use of shadows and darkness also helps to distinguish the different Jekyll, and Hyde scenes. Many of Jekyll's scenes are generally well-lit and clear with blues and whites engulfing the stage. Hyde's scenes, on the other hand, are darkly lit and cast large and brooding shadows. Jekyll's... or a Jekyll, but the rest would do better to Hyde

Broadway Theatre League’s production of the musical “Jekyll & Hyde” at the Morris Performing Arts Center

lab — being the source of this mess — is sort of a mixture of the two, combining the different effects to portray a melancholy feel.

The actors performed well, particularly Valahovic. Not surprisingly, he was the actor that was given the most to work with (playing both title roles). He accomplished the difficult task of playing two characters simultaneously with apparent ease and grace. He appeared confident and versatile in his roles.

Liz Powers offered an interesting performance as the prostitute, Lucy. Lucy meets Jekyll at his bachelor party, but it is Hyde who later comes to terrorize her. Powers played the role of a confusing, trapped woman with the right mix of desperation and determination.

The rest of the characters seemed to be in the show simply for Jekyll’s sake to show off his acting ability. Among the most notable are his fiancée Emaa Carew (played by Shani Lynn Nielsen), who becomes frightened and concerned over her husband’s sudden disappearances and his obsession with his work and John Utterson (played by David Grimes), Jekyll’s friend who also learns for the doctor’s sudden obsession.

Overall, this production didn’t live up to its expectations. It came across as disjointed and unfocused. Aside from a few memorable songs like, “Facade,” “Murder, Murder” and “This is the Moment,” most of the music was generic and unimpressive. Some of the more romantic songs were so unmemorable they began to jumble together after awhile.

The musical suffers from a lack of direction. It seems to build momentum in certain scenes, only to have it knocked down in the next. Some of the plot points come to seemingly arbitrary and ultimately pointless conclusions. Hyde’s obsession with Lucy builds itself up through the first act only to come to a seemingly pointless conclusion near the end of the second.

Worse, this musical lacks passion. There was nothing in it to capture the audience’s attention and carry it through the show. Nothing stands out in particular as being truly stimulating. Although this is a competent musical that is clearly performed and produced by professionals who have mastered their craft, the material with which they are working just isn’t new or interesting.

The show comes from material that offers a rich field of possible new interpretations that this musical doesn’t really explore. It doesn’t offer any new element to the classic story of Jekyll & Hyde — the musical seems irrelevant in this respect. It would seem that a tale like this would lend itself to some innovative interpretations for the stage. If it does, it certainly didn’t show up here.

In the end, it is this lack of innovation that is the major flaw in the show. Although this version of Jekyll & Hyde is done well, there’s nothing that makes this musical stand out. The music is fine — but not great. The story is fine, but there’s nothing fascinating or new about it. This production of Jekyll & Hyde isn’t great, it is merely adequate.

“The music is fine — but not great. The story is fine, but there’s nothing fascinating or new about it. This production of Jekyll & Hyde isn’t great, it is merely adequate.”

David Hasselhoff appears on stage dressed as Mr. Hyde from the Broadway production of “Jekyll & Hyde.” The musical is based on Robert Louis Stevenson’s novella.

---

Monday
- 7:30 p.m. “The Lunatic, the Lover and the Poet” Brian Bedford, Tony award-winning actor presents Shakespeare’s life in his own words. Presented in Jordan Auditorium. $10 admission.
- 7:30 p.m. FTT presents “Oedipus Rex” in Washington Hall. Tickets available at LaFortune Box Office.

Tuesday
- 7:30 p.m. SSA’s International Film Festival presents “The Grandfather” in Montgomery Theatre.
- 7:30 & 9:45 p.m. Cinema@theSuite Movie “A Summer’s Tale.” $2 Admission.

Wednesday
- 7:30 p.m. FTT presents “Oedipus Rex” in Washington Hall. Tickets available at LaFortune Box Office.
- 7:30 & 9:45 p.m. Cinema@theSuite Movie “A Summer’s Tale.” $2 Admission.

Thursday
- 7:30 p.m. The Notre Dame Humor Artists present “HA! Unplugged.” Skits, Improv and Mayhem in Hesburgh Library Auditorium. Admission is FREE!!!
- 7:30 p.m. FTT presents “Oedipus Rex” in Washington Hall. Tickets available at LaFortune Box Office.
- 10:30 p.m. S.U.B. Movie “Billy Elliot” in 155 DeBartolo. $2 Admission.
- 10:30 p.m. S.U.B. Movie “Proof of Life” in 101 DeBartolo. $2 Admission.

Friday
- 7:30 p.m. FTT presents “Oedipus Rex” in Washington Hall. Tickets available at LaFortune Box Office.
- 7:30 & 9:45 p.m. Cinema@theSuite Movie “A Summer’s Tale.” $2 Admission.

Saturday
- 7:30 p.m. FTT presents “Oedipus Rex” in Washington Hall. Tickets available at LaFortune Box Office.

Sunday
- 2:30 p.m. FTT presents “Oedipus Rex” in Washington Hall. Tickets available at LaFortune Box Office.
- 5:30 p.m. Play chess in North Dining Hall (Farley entrance).
Irish on verge of No. 1 ranking after sweeping 'Cats

BY COLIN BOYLAN
Sports Writer

Only weeks removed from an NCAA championship, Irish fans may soon have another No. 1 team to cheer for after the Notre Dame baseball team posted a five-game sweep of Villanova this weekend with dominating victories of 7-1, 15-2 and 8-3.

The wins improved the team's record to 36-5-1 and, coupled with two weekend losses to top-ranked Stanford, may boost the Irish from their current number two spot in the College Baseball Division I poll to the No. 1 ranking. As always, Notre Dame head coach Paul Mainieri was humble about the prospect of such an achievement.

"If (the top ranking) happens, it will definitely be a great accomplishment," Mainieri said. "But I don't place too much emphasis on mid-season polls. After their performance against the Wildcats, the Irish definitely appear to be worthy of such an honor. Their weekend series was characterized by dominant performances on the mound and big hitting at the plate.

Suffice Aaron Heilmann kicked off the offensive contest, facing off against Villanova's Tom Kandbianciewicz. The Irish got to Heilmann first, when second baseman Matt Longo knocked an inside fastball high into right field. The hit, which initially seemed like a routine fly ball, got caught up in a strong wind outgoing off the left field fence. It was only the 10th homerun Heilmann had allowed during his entire career and it gave Villanova a 1-0 third inning lead. However, Heilmann refused to blame the home run on the weather.

"Certainly the wind was blowing, but I just made a bad pitch," Heilmann said. Regardless, it was the only real scoring chance the Wildcats could get for the rest of the game. Once Heilmann retired the side, the Irish hitters took over. Steve Stanley opened up the second inning with a single. Heilman took second on a Wildcat error and knocked in Stanley with an RBI single. For his fourth homerun of the year.

Even pitch hitters Matt Strickroth and John Heintz made significant contributions -- slamming rare back-to-back triples to spark a four-run eighth inning and give the Irish an insurmountable 15-2 lead. Almost lost in all the offensive production was a masterful performance by starting pitcher Danny Tamayo. Tamayo's eight inning, two run outing was highlighted by the fact that he only gave up one hit, a homerun to Rob Gagne's performance.

"I have been tremendous for the Irish and, when an error by the second baseman Longo opened the door for four unearned runs. The rally was capped by a three run fourth inning.

After seven innings of gritty pitching, Gagne gave way to Matt Buchmeier and Matt Laird to close out the game and earn an 8-3 victory. The win improved his season record to 4-2. More importantly, it marked the 14th consecutive Irish victory, their longest winning streak in nearly eight years.

While Mainieri was pleased with the performance of his "ace" Heilmann and Tamayo, he was especially impressed by Gagne's performance. "J.P. Gagne pitches courageously every time he goes out there and he's so important to our success this year," said Mainieri.

Indeed, this weekend's series showcased the talents of several unsung heroes on the Irish squad. These include catcher O'Toole, who threw out all three Villanova runners who attempted a steal in the third game, and Stanley who ranked up six hits and scored eight runs in the series. "Steve Stanley has been tremendous for three years. There's no way we could even think about being No. 1 without him," said Mainieri.

Indeed, the only fact that could be attributed to the Irish clubhouse was the injury suffered by third baseman Andrew Bushey in the first game. Bushey injured his shoulder diving for a ground ball and did not return for the remainder of the series. His current status is day to day.

Meanwhile, as the Irish continue to climb to their best record ever, they will likely be anchored by what some call the best 1-2 pitching combination in college baseball in Heilmann and Tamayo.

When asked if he thought any tandem in the nation could compare, Heilmann responded, "I think you'd be hard pressed to find one, but we're very confident in our entire pitching staff and our team as a whole."
Congratulations

Join us in celebrating tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Basilica of the Sacred Heart as these 37 men and women receive the Sacrament of Confirmation.

The Candidates & their Sponsors

Sarah Christine Affleck-Graves
  Adam Urra

Leah Isabella Baxter
  Daniel Kinney

Annamarie Elizabeth Bindenagel
  Brian Cruz

Benjamin Broussard
  Jon Fean

Anne Gienian
  Matt Sumney

Christine Peregrine Closz
  Morgan Russell, Rachel Weiler, Kate Sudses

Lindsey-Michala Bridget Collins
  Sandy Long

Angela Marie DeBruno
  Jeff Busick

Susannah Teresa Doyle
  John McKerman

Dallas Hope Dyer
  Wyatt Maxwell

Christine Grace Efta
  Megan Sweeney, Marie Cable

Bridget Jane Elliott
  Andee Song

Nicholas Filippi
  Anna-Marie Filippi

Preston Goodyear
  Anne Hazlinger

Aubrey Thomas Aquinas Guezuraga
  Sallie Baumgartner, Patricia Schiro

Rebecca Habenicht
  Amy Seamon

Patricia Anne Hinojosa
  Daniella Zupan

Jeffrey Augustine Hurd
  Greg Haake

Jared Paul Jodrey
  Tony Carney

Daniel Arthur McCabe
  Matthew Brummer

Genevieve Camille McCann
  Maureen Bresnahan

Christopher Michael McGee
  Jodi Nally

Monica Teresa Mendoza
  Lane Rice

Jo Angelico Mikals-Adachi
  Cohn Nolan

Son Patrick Nguyen
  Katie Smith, Kari Kileen

Elizabeth Katherine Nolte
  Matt Feucht

Michael Francis Pedhirney
  Matthew Yung

Jennifer Margaret Prins
  Orlando Castillo

Laura Reardon
  Kristin Shaner

Melissa Anne Isabella Reilly
  Ann Weber

Stephen Alphonsus Robey
  Chuck Lamphier

Monica Theresa Smith
  Amy Seamon

Monica Theresa Stone
  Erin Hannon

Aaron Anthony Trulley
  Peggy Trulley Backe

Jennifer Francis Utz
  Cailn Mani

Mary Teresa Virnich
  Elizabeth Ayala

Philip Wittliff
  Kevin Haley
Center Riley chosen 5th overall in WNBA Draft

By TIM CASEY
Senior Staff Writer

Add another footnote to this campus’ strange sports year.

More Notre Dame players were selected in the first three rounds of the WNBA draft than the NFL draft.

On Friday, Ruth Riley was selected fifth overall by the Miami Sol, while the Indiana Fever drafted fellow All-American Niele Ivey in the second round (19th overall).

Kelley Siemon, who was picked in the third round by the Los Angeles Sparks with the 48th overall selection, refused to discuss her basketball future on Sunday.

Meanwhile, her college teammates begin training camp for their professional squads in early May.

"Miami Heat head coach Pat Riley walked into the room the other day and said if I didn’t take Ruth Riley, I was done," Sol head coach/general manager Ron Rothstein joked during ESPN2’s live draft telecast. "I had to take her. It was as simple as that."

Lauren Jackson, a 6-foot-5 forward from Australia, was the first pick of the draft. Georgia’s point guard Kelly Miller, Tennessee forward Tamika Catchings and Southwest Missouri State guard Jackie Stiles were all selected before Riley.

"We had [Riley] rated a little bit higher (than fifth)," Rothstein said. "She’s proven that she can perform at a very, very high level under pressure."

Riley will compete with 30-year-old Marlies Askamp for playing time. Askamp, a 6-foot-5 center from Germany, averaged 7.8 points and 7.2 rebounds for the Sol in 2000.

In its inaugural season a year ago, Miami finished 13-19 and failed to qualify for the playoffs.

"I’m looking forward to whatever role they need me to play down there," Riley said. "I just want to contribute in any way that I can."

Ivey also enters a favorable situation. Her father’s brother coached so many professionals in Indianapolis and St. Louis, Ivey’s hometown, is less than five hours away.

And Rita Williams, the Fever’s starter last season, is the only established professional point guard on the roster.

"A lot of franchises have their set point guards," Ivey said. "I wanted to go to an environment where I can play and do some things. It worked out well."

Riley will be reunited in Indiana with former Irish teammate Katryna Gaither. Ivey and Gaither played three years under the watch of assistant coach Tom Schumacher. The trio of newcomers will be joined by a first-year head coach. Nell Fortner, who coached the United States women to an Olympic gold medal in September, takes over the duties.

Fortner served as an ESPN analyst during the Irish’s 2001 national championship run.

"She’s coached so many great players," Ivey said. "There’s a lot of benefits there."

For maybe the first time, Irish fans can be interested in the WNBA.

Riley and Ivey’s new teams meet on June 5 and August 10 in Miami, and July 28 in Indiana. Coquese Washington, an Irish assistant coach, is also a member of the defending WNBA champion Houston Comets.

Riley and Washington will compete against each other twice in the next month in exhibition games.

On May 12, the squads play in Houston then a week later in Miami. The lone regular season meeting will be on July 20 in Miami.

The Comets travel to Indiana on May 31 and host the Fever on July 6.

"Usually I’m asking her for help," Ivey said. "Now she can’t help me. She has the best scouting report on me."
MEN’S BASKETBALL

Maryland’s Miller expected to sign with Notre Dame

By KATHLEEN O’BRIEN Senior Staff Writer

Now that Troy Murphy’s gone, Irish men’s basketball coach Mike Brey is concentrating on rounding out the rest of his 2001-02 squad.

The Irish have three scholarships still available for next season, following Murphy’s departure.

Sophomore reserve Ivan Kartelo previously announced his plans to transfer and recruit Jereme Hendrix will not be attending Notre Dame due to academic reasons.

You think about the number of guys just on our roster now, there’s an opportunity to play,” Brey said. “They [the players] see more potential.

Now that Troy Murphy’s gone, Irish senior Staff Writer Miller, a 6-6 sophomore forward, played the role of the sixth man on this year’s Final Four Terrapins team.

According to ESPN.com, Notre Dame is Miller’s new destination. His brother Greg played for Brey at Delaware.

Miller, a junior who averaged 4.6 points and 2.6 rebounds this season, will have to sit out next year due to NCAA transfer regulations.

Brey can not comment on whether Miller will wind up at Notre Dame until Miller makes an announcement.

He is digging through the pool of potential transfers and high school seniors, however, since only 10 scholarship players are on the roster for next year.

“At one point, we were just diggin’ through the pool of players, and we don’t really have any scholarships available,” Brey said. “Right now we might fill them with prospects.”

Leaving the Irish is Kartelo, a 6-11 center from Croatia. Kartelo saw his minutes drop drastically after Brey replaced Matt Doherty as head coach this season.

After playing 13 minutes per game as a freshman, he played in just 16 games this year, averaging 5.6 minutes per game.

In recent weeks, Kartelo has visited both Purdue and Northwestern. Rumors that he might wind up playing for Doherty at North Carolina, however, are unfounded.

“I’m still thinking,” Kartelo said. “It’s between Northwestern and Purdue.”

Kartelo hopes to make his decision by the end of the semester, hoping to wind up with a team where he can play a major role.

“I’m kind of nervous because it’s about making a commitment,” Kartelo said. “I’m excited and nervous.

McGraw, a 6-8 sophomore forward who is from the same hometown as Kartelo, has also been rumored to be considering a transfer. McGraw hasn’t made up his mind, but sees Notre Dame in his future.

“I’m thinking about staying much longer,” McGraw said. “I like this place too much that I don’t want to be right here.

McGraw saw his minutes drop nearly in half last season due to troubles adjusting to the new style of play beneath Brey.

McGraw was not on campus last season, either, deciding to work out with the Irish, instead playing with the Croatian National Team.

“I had a tough season,” McGraw said. Yet he’d like to give it another shot here at Notre Dame, with a final decision likely to come in the next couple days.

“There is not any problem between me and Coach,” McGraw said. “I like him very much and respect him.

The Irish return seniors, however, since only 10 scholarship players are on the roster for next year.

With an argument with a nearby coach was livid, my coach was livid, my coach was livid,” Louderback said.

“We played alright, but we played really horrible,” Louderback said.

“They probably should’ve had the ball double-bounced, but returned the shot anyway. Bannencer appealed the decision, claiming Green distracted her, and

Rudy- Wishing you a happy birthday, and missing you TONS!

PLAYING AT WASHINGTON HALL
RESERVED SEATS $5; SENIOR CITIZENS $5; ALL STUDENTS $6
WEDNESDAY, APRIL 25 7:30 PM
THURSDAY, APRIL 26 7:30 PM
FRIDAY, APRIL 27 7:30 PM
SATURDAY, APRIL 28 7:30 PM
SUNDAY, APRIL 29 2:30 PM
TICKETS ARE AVAILABLE AT THE LAYCOURT STADIUM OFFICE, MASTERCARD AND VISA ORDERS CALL 631-8128

The RecSpys Are Coming!

OEDIPUS REX

by Sophocles

Directed by Thomas Flavin

Saturday, May 4

The Observer • SPORTS

page 17
ALUMNI AWARENESS WEEK IS HERE

The Notre Dame Alumni Association and the Student Alumni Relations Group will sponsor the following events:

» Alumni Association Open House
Tuesday, April 23 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Notre Dame Room of LaFortune Student Center. This event will be open to all students but is geared towards graduating students. Come and learn about the benefits of your free Alumni Association membership and involvement in your local alumni club. Door prizes include alumni apparel, alumni watch, and a pair of football tickets. Free t-shirts for the first 400 arrivals.

» Lunch with Alumni
Friday, April 26 from 11:45 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in South Dining Hall. Join over 200 alumni club leaders for lunch in South Dining Hall. You’ll find that they’re not just about plaid pants.

» Young Alumni Social
Friday, April 26 from 9:30 p.m. to 12:00 a.m. in Alumni-Senior Club. This event is open to all undergraduate and graduate students who are over 21. Hosted by young alumni, this social is a great opportunity to network with alumni of all ages from across the country. Free pizza will be provided.

» Student Alumni Picnic
Saturday, April 28 from 11:00 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in DeBartolo Quad. Join over two hundred and fifty alumni club representatives at an outdoor picnic prior to the Blue-Gold Game. Also, a flag football game will be played by former Notre Dame football players in Notre Dame Stadium prior to the Blue-Gold Game. The Picnic is free of charge for non-meal card holders. Just bring your student ID. In case of rain, lunch will be served in both dining halls. Sponsored by University Food Services and the Notre Dame Alumni Association.
There’s something about Murphy

Even at a smaller school like Notre Dame, you don’t usually get to know everyone that lives in your dorm. So it has been that the course of living in the same dorm as two-time All-American and now NBA draft prospect Troy Murphy for the two years, we’ve never said much more than a “What’s up?” to each other in passing. With one year of eligibility left, Murphy has decided to move on from the cubicule sized rooms of Notre Dame’s greatest stage.

Like every other Notre Dame kid, he faces the prospects of leaving the shadow of the Dome, just a year earlier than most.

John Outland, Angelo Bertelli and Harry Stuhldreher had left the shadow of the Dome, leaving the Dome as the nation’s top back in 1920. They were among the first Notre Dame players enshrined in the College Football Hall of Fame. Yeoman from Houston, Barry Switzer from Oklahoma, Keith Jackson, John Outland, Angelo Bertelli and Ralph Guglielmi were among the Notre Dame basketball Hall of Fame Class of 1954.

So, from all of us who lived in that same cramped dorm with you or shared that same third grade dream but still haven’t gotten very far past the Nerf ball.

Good luck next year, Murph.

The views expressed in this column are those of the author and are not necessarily those of The Observer.

Athlete of the Year

�

Irish QB Guglielmi named to Hall of Fame

Former University of Notre Dame All-America quarterback Ralph Guglielmi is one of 15 All-American college football greats and three former coaches named to the National Football Foundation’s College Football Hall of Fame.

The announcement was made in New York City by NFF Chairman Joe F. Hanson and Honors Court Chairman Gene Corrigan.

Guglielmi will be inducted in December at the Foundation’s 44th annual banquet at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York — and he’ll be enshrined in ceremonies in August 2002 in South Bend at the College Football Hall of Fame.

Selected in addition to Guglielmi were former Notre Dame football hall-of-famer Jon Arnett, Georgia placekicker Kevin Butler, Michigan receiver Anthony Carter, Navy end Dick Duden, Syracuse defensive tackle Tim Green, Ohio State tackle John Hicks, Oklahoma tight end Keith Jackson, Clemson defensive back Tom Kinard, Mississippi State linebacker D.L. Lewis, North Carolina running back Donald McCauley, Kansas and Pennsylvania tackle John Outland, Pennsylvania State line­man Glenn Ressler, Michigan State defensive back Brad Van Pelt and BYU quarterback Steve Young — along with coaches Barry Switzer from Oklahoma, Grani Toaff from McMurry, San Angelo State and Baylor and Bill Yeoman from Southern.

Guglielmi became the 39th former Notre Dame player to be selected for the Hall of Fame (there are also five former Notre Dame head coaches enshrined). He becomes the seventh former Irish to earn that honor — following Frank Carideo, Harry Stuhldreher, Heisman Trophy winners John Lujack, Angelo Bertelli and Paul Hornung and most recently Bob Williams in 1988.

As for Murphy, this next step has been a little more than a little. Talking about next year, he said: “I think it will be work. It will be a lot of work. I think I’m ready for that. I’m ready to do that kind of thing to play basketball. That’s all I could do. I like to play basketball a lot.”

Hopefully Murphy will translate into more success at the next level for every Notre Dame’s all-time best.

Earlier in the teleconference, Murphy expressed his desire in being in third grade and playing on a little hill in the east, and ever since then, I’ve always watched basketball and rooted for Notre Dame. It’s always been something that I wanted to be part of.

Irish QB and current Sophomore Quarterback, Murphy, was named US Press Wire Player of the Year in 2001. In his four years as a starter, the Irish finished 7-2-1 in ’52 (third in the final AP poll), 9-0-1 in ’53 (second) and 9-1 in ’54 (fourth).

He remains 10th on the Notre Dame career passing chart based on 209 career completions on 436 attempts (both Notre Dame records at the time) for 3,117 yards. Murphy completed 68 of 127 passes for 1,160 yards and six touchdowns — ranking fourth nationally in passing yards. He finished fourth in voting for the Heisman Trophy as a senior in ’54, his third season as a starter, the Irish finished 7-2-1 in ’52 (third in the final AP poll), 9-0-1 in ’53 (second) and 9-1 in ’54 (fourth).

The Chicago, Ill., product remains tied with Rick Mirer for the Notre Dame record for most consecutive games starting (34). He was awarded the Walter Camp National Player of the Year in 1995.

Guglielmi earned MVP honors in the 11th Annual All-Star Game and also played in the West-East Shrine Game.

The Associated Press

Irish QB Guglielmi named to Hall of Fame

The announcement was made in New York City by NFF Chairman Joe F. Hanson and Honors Court Chairman Gene Corrigan.

Guglielmi will be inducted in December at the Foundation’s 44th annual banquet at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York — and he’ll be enshrined in ceremonies in August 2002 in South Bend at the College Football Hall of Fame.

Selected in addition to Guglielmi were former Notre Dame football hall-of-famer Jon Arnett, Georgia placekicker Kevin Butler, Michigan receiver Anthony Carter, Navy end Dick Duden, Syracuse defensive tackle Tim Green, Ohio State tackle John Hicks, Oklahoma tight end Keith Jackson, Clemson defensive back Tom Kinard, Mississippi State linebacker D.L. Lewis, North Carolina running back Donald McCauley, Kansas and Pennsylvania tackle John Outland, Pennsylvania State line­man Glenn Ressler, Michigan State defensive back Brad Van Pelt and BYU quarterback Steve Young — along with coaches Barry Switzer from Oklahoma, Grani Toaff from McMurry, San Angelo State and Baylor and Bill Yeoman from Southern.

Guglielmi became the 39th former Notre Dame player to be selected for the Hall of Fame (there are also five former Notre Dame head coaches enshrined). He becomes the seventh former Irish to earn that honor — following Frank Carideo, Harry Stuhldreher, Heisman Trophy winners John Lujack, Angelo Bertelli and Paul Hornung and most recently Bob Williams in 1988.

As for Murphy, this next step has been a little more than a little. Talking about next year, he said: “I think it will be work. It will be a lot of work. I think I’m ready for that. I’m ready to do that kind of thing to play basketball. That’s all I could do. I like to play basketball a lot.”

Hopefully Murphy will translate into more success at the next level for every Notre Dame’s all-time best.

Earlier in the teleconference, Murphy expressed his desire in being in third grade and playing on a little hill in the east, and ever since then, I’ve always watched basketball and rooted for Notre Dame. It’s always been something that I wanted to be part of.

So, from all of us who lived in that same cramped dorm with you or shared that same third grade dream but still haven’t gotten very far past the Nerf ball.

Good luck next year, Murph.

The views expressed in this column are those of the author and are not necessarily those of The Observer.

Introduction to Business Ethics: BA 241

This five-week course is designed to give the student an introduction to the central questions and fundamental character of ethics and morality. It focuses on a discussion of ethical theories that can help guide the student's problem solving in business situations.

(01) MWF 10:40-11:30 (8797 through 9226) (K. Mack)
(02) TTH 2:00-3:15 (828 through 9225) (K. Mack)

Topics in Business Ethics: BA 341

In this five-week course, the student will use cases to analyze ethical problems in the business disciplines including accounting, management, marketing, finance, and MIS.

(01) MWF 10:40-11:30 (101 through 1125) (K. Mack)
(02) MWF 12:50-1:40 (101 through 1125) (K. Pasko)
BA 341M (01) TTH 2:00-3:15 (P. Murphy) MKAR majors only (927 through 1125)

Business Ethics Field Project: BA 441

This five-week course is designed to give the student practical experience in a social service setting. The course meets as a class four times with the majority of the students’ time spent in the volunteer setting. This exciting course is a great way to integrate community service into your academic curriculum.

(01) MW 10:40-11:30 (J. McMamus) (119 through 1210)
(02) MW 12:50-1:40 (J. McMamus) (119 through 1210)
(03) TTH 2:00-3:15 (J. McMamus) (116 through 1208)

Each one-hour credit course will meet twice a week for 75 minutes for 5 weeks.
Foreign tennis players find home at Notre Dame

By KATIE HUGHES
Sports Writer

On the way back to their hotel after a day of practice during the Big East tournament, Javier Taborga, Luis Haddock-Morales and men’s tennis head coach Bobby Bayliss argued over which radio station they should listen to.

“Come on, coach, you’ve gotta know this song,” Javier said as a pop station came on.

“You don’t know what good music is. This is good music,” laughed Bayliss as an oldies station started to play an 80s-looking song.

Bayliss and Taborga know each other pretty well. But they almost didn’t, because, as a rule, does not recruit internationally.

Taborga, a junior who is originally from La Paz, Bolivia, was the top-ranked player in Bolivia when he was 10,12,14, and 18. He first became interested in Notre Dame during his junior year of high school, by a family friend who was an undergraduate at the time and encouraged him to consider the school.

He wrote to Bayliss, asking if he would consider having him on the team. Bayliss sent him a polite “thanks for the interest, but no thanks” letter back. He wasn’t interested.

“When you look at the last 25 [ranked tennis programs], we are one of the few that does not recruit internationally,” said Bayliss. “A lot of schools have gone international to bolster the level of play. Nowadays at the expense of what’s best for the schools and the people they recruit.

Bayliss has maintained a policy of recruiting only players he can get to know, and that he knows will fit into the team.

“If I get to know someone that is for­ ight, I’ll make a recruiting trip because I won’t prejudge against them,” said Bayliss, “but I don’t have no way to go about knowing anything about them.”

Michigan State, Texas, Kentucky, Tulsa, Louisiana State and Lafayette were all interested in Taborga at the time, offering Taborga significant scholarships without even seen him play. While making official visits to Michigan State and Louisiana State, he and his parents came to Notre Dame unofficially.

“Going to Notre Quad in the summer, everything was green, and everything was welcoming. I felt, and my parents felt that the community would be nice.”

Javier Taborga
men’s tennis player

Bayliss of his abilities. After making another visit to the campus — officially this time — telling his parents that he didn’t want to go anywhere else, Taborga signed to play at Notre Dame on September 13 and the first day he was officially allowed to practice.

Haddock-Morales, a freshman from Caguas, Puerto Rico, was the top recruit for the Irish last year. He was ranked seventh among 15 and under boys in the USA 10K rankings and was well known to Bayliss because he had played in all of the Junior National Tournament in the United States.

Also wooed by Georgia, Alabama, and William and Mary, Haddock-Morales stayed in Knott Hall with Taborga — who, ironically, he had to lose in the Davis Cup the year before — during his official visit.

“Javier would win that award last year, given to the Notre Dame men’s tennis player with the best personality, gave Luis some advice during his visit.”

“Going to Notre Quad in the summer, everything was green, and everything was welcoming. I felt, and my parents felt that the community would be nice.”

Javier Taborga

Men

continued from page 24

Smid, 8-6. Miami’s Michael Lang and Jose Lieberman defeated doubles partners, defeating juniors James Malhame and JoseLieberman, 8-6.

“We played better doubles today than we did last time,” said head coach Bobby Bayliss. “But we still had the same breakdowns that have haunted us. We’re not holding our serve consistently in doubles, the particularly at No. 2 and 3, and that hurts us.”

Irish junior Javier Taborga drills a return in a singles match against Miami at this weekend’s Big East Championship.

Irish junior Javier Taborga drills a return in a singles match against Miami at this weekend’s Big East Championship.

Single came to a dramatic and disappointing conclusion, but began with a few doubles victories daily tied the match 1-1, defeating Georgia’s 6-1, 6-4 quickly at No. 6. Freshman Brian Farrell lost 3-6, 3-6 to Jose Smid. Taborga’s 6th-ranked Matt Scott lost 7-5, 6-0 at first singles in a match that had Lang diving into a corner and bounding his knees, and Smith erupting in bursts of rage.

Notre Dame took three sets to beat Miami’s Hoffman at No. 2. Single came to a dramatic and disappointing conclusion, but began with a few doubles victories daily tied the match 1-1, defeating Georgia’s 6-1, 6-4 quickly at No. 6. Freshman Brian Farrell lost 3-6, 3-6 to Jose Smid. Taborga’s 6th-ranked Matt Scott lost 7-5, 6-0 at first singles in a match that had Lang diving into a corner and bounding his knees, and Smith erupting in bursts of rage.

Notre Dame took three sets to beat Miami’s Hoffman at No. 2. Single came to a dramatic and disappointing conclusion, but began with a few doubles victories daily tied the match 1-1, defeating Georgia’s 6-1, 6-4 quickly at No. 6. Freshman Brian Farrell lost 3-6, 3-6 to Jose Smid. Taborga’s 6th-ranked Matt Scott lost 7-5, 6-0 at first singles in a match that had Lang diving into a corner and bounding his knees, and Smith erupting in bursts of rage.

Notre Dame took three sets to beat Miami’s Hoffman at No. 2. Single came to a dramatic and disappoint­ing conclusion, but began with a few doubles victories daily tied the match 1-1, defeating Georgia’s 6-1, 6-4 quickly at No. 6. Freshman Brian Farrell lost 3-6, 3-6 to Jose Smid. Taborga’s 6th-ranked Matt Scott lost 7-5, 6-0 at first singles in a match that had Lang diving into a corner and bounding his knees, and Smith erupting in bursts of rage.

"Javier did a good job of rallying today. In the third set, he normally will not get broken like he did. He fought awfully hard. Obviously, if Javier had won, we would have won the match," said Bayliss. "Lindqvist couldn’t have finished his match." Haddock-Morales’ match was abandoned, and the Irish went home with their fourth second place-to-Miami trophy in the last six years. Whether or not they will get to host an NCAA regional now depends on where they end up in the rankings.

"We’re just going to work hard for the next two weeks for the NCAA’s," said Talarico. "Obviously, ‘they’re at Notre Dame or somewhere else.”

“When something like this happens, you can either cry about it, quit or vow to be better next time,” said Bayliss. “And that’s what we’re going to do.”

Senior Dasso embraces team-player mentality

Earlier this season, senior Michelle Dasso knocked off the No. 2 singles player in the nation, and she wasn't exactly happy. Although Dasso had destroyed Duke's Ansley Carelli, the women's tennis team still lost to the Blue Devils 4-3.

"She was heartbroken, and she just beat the No. 2 kid in the country," said Irish head coach Jay Louderback. "That says a lot about her. She would give everything up to win a match."

That's the attitude of the No. 4 singles player in the nation ever since she came to Notre Dame. For Dasso, it's always the team before the individual.

"You can't really change that focus," she said. "The team is always No. 1 for me and it's always been that way."

Dasso talks about the team's chances in the NCAA tournament more than her own individual goals. She believes she has a better chance to win a national title with the team than she does on her own. And she barely mentions her own plans to begin competing professionally in July.

"Becky deserves it, we all deserve it," she emphatically said. Varnum begs to disagree. "She deserves it. I don't deserve it," she said. "She's obviously the player of the year. That's just Michelle's attitude. She never takes credit and she should, because she deserves it."

"The senior All-American just might be the most modest athlete on the Notre Dame campus. For example, she'll gladly speak about Notre Dame's No. 1 win over the No. 7 Pepperdine at the Team Indoor Championships. Only when she's prompted does she remember that she also set the school record for most career singles wins at that match as well. "I helped the team out," she said. "That's the most important thing."

In fact, Dasso didn't even realize she had that record until she read an article in The Observer the next day.

"I know I was really close," Dasso said. "But when you're out there, you just forget about all the wins and losses."

Dasso, who has won 83 percent of her matches since coming to Notre Dame, would much rather talk about the team's achievements than her own. She loves playing dual-match in part because the team is so involved.

"If I could play them all year, I would," she said. "That's the reason I love college tennis so much. Tennis is such an individual sport, but when you get in college, it makes it more like a team."

In fact, the reason Dasso ended up at Notre Dame was the strong team chemistry. As a high school senior, Dasso was considering attending Duke, William and Mary, and Vassar. Her father, who is a Notre Dame graduate, persuaded the Chicago native to take a recruiting trip to South Bend. It was love at first sight.

"I could sense the team aspect, and that was one of the things that swayed me," she said. "They made me feel such a big part of the team and it wasn't just with me. It's with everyone."

But at first, Dasso was a little intimidated by the college competition.

"Honestly, I remember after the first week of practice, I called home, and I said, 'I love it, but everyone's so good. I don't know if I'm going to play this year.'"

Dasso claims she played "decent" her first year. That's an understatement.

She started the season playing No. 3 singles for the Irish, but quickly jumped up to No. 2 after winning her first ten matches. By April, the relatively unknown freshman had shot up the national rankings to become No. 16 in the nation. During a two-month stretch, she won 19 matches in a row.

By the time she finished adjusting to collegiate competition, she had 40 singles wins—a new Notre Dame single-season record.

"I didn't expect to do as well as I have," she said. Even Louderback was surprised.

"I thought she could be good, but I didn't think she'd be this good," he said.

What Dasso's apart is her fierce competitive nature.

"I watched her play a [national-class high school] match and she was behind 5-1 in the third set," he said. "She came back and won the match."

"I love competition. I love competing. I hate to lose," Dasso said.

"Some people think a lost match is the end of the world, but it really helps me the most. My teammates, they know when I'm playing my best, they can say I'm really into it.

Varnum, Dasso's doubles partner, agrees.

"I rely on her a lot in doubles."

But even when she does lose, her teammates are there to back her up.

"At times, (the pressure) has gotten in my way, and that's when my teammates come in and say, 'C'mon Michelle, you don't have to put it all on you,'" she said. "They've really been great for me this year."

Dasso's pretty good for the team, too. Just ask her coach.

"She's done so much more than we can ask," he said. "She's got a very good chance to do good after college. She's such a competitor and can do so well.

"She has every right to brag about herself," Varnum added.

And yet Dasso never does.

"I'm pretty much her back up," she said.

"She has the big shots, but she can make them all the time. That's what the top players can do."

"I just love getting into it and giving it all I have and that's all I can do," Dasso said.

"Who Dasso, who isn't exactly the strongest competitor on the court, definitely becomes a different person when she steps onto a tennis court. Gone is the quiet, modest and mature young woman. In comes a fired up, cocky athlete.

Between points, Dasso twirls her racket and stares across the net at her opponent.

"Every match she plays like it's Wimbledon out there," said senior Kimberly Gay.

She is a self-described scrappy athlete who has a 90 MPH server and solid court coverage. In fact, during one point against Virginia Tech's Kristen Stubbs, Dasso covered every corner of the court — net, baseline and sidelines — during an extended rally, while Stubbs remained in one spot.

Dasso won the point.

"I've always been little, so I've had to scrub my ways out of matches and hustle and fight hard to find a way to win," she said. "I'm scrappy. I'll try to run down everything. I'm not as big, but you got to find a way to win."

If anyone hates to lose, it has to be Dasso. For a player who is a strong advocate of the team-first policy, she puts an incredible amount of pressure on her shoulders.

"Sometimes that's bad," she acknowledges, "but I think that's a big reason why I've done as well as I have."

"She never, ever gives up — no matter what," Gay said.

But she knows she takes losses hard. And she admits it's even harder when she loses and the team loses. Against Tennessee's Alison Ojeda — a weekend Dasso said she'd as soon as forget probably because she just lost two matches in two days — Notre Dame's top player lost 6-1, 6-0. The team lost 4-1.

Dasso blamed herself.

"It's not so bad when I lose and the team wins, but it's a whole different thing when I lose and the team loses," she said.

But even when she does lose, her teammates are there to back her up.

"At times, (the pressure) has gotten in my way, and that's when my teammates come in and say, 'C'mon Michelle, you don't have to put it all on you,'" she said. "They've really been great for me this year."

Dasso's been pretty good for the team, too. Just ask her coach.

"She's done so much more than we can ask," he said. "She's got a very good chance to do good after college. She's such a competitor and can do so well.

"She has every right to brag about herself," Varnum added.

And yet Dasso never does.

The views expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.
Bookstore Basketball XXX

Ranked teams start to fall in Bookstore Round of 128

By KATHLEEN O'BRIEN
Senior Staff Writer

The ranked teams began to fall this weekend in Bookstore Basketball.

Seventh-seeded Mourning Wood lost to the Lazy Boys 21-13 and Killer Boots. Man knocked off No. 19 If We Win it at the buzzer, 21-15.

Mourning Wood lost without one of its top players, wide receiver Arnaz Battle. "He's a player," Panzer continued from page 24.

The round of 32 will be played this weekend at Steep Courts with games beginning at 7 p.m. The women's tournament action began this weekend as well, with preliminary rounds taking place over the weekend.

NFL continued from page 24

great sports town," he said. "I just feel really fortunate to have this opportunity."

The New England Patriots gave two Irish players an opportunity to prove themselves next year. The Patriots drafted cornerback Brock Williams in the third round and tight end Jarhari Holloway in the fourth round. Several other Irish players could still sign with NFL teams as undrafted free agents. Offensive guard Jim Jones, wide receiver Joey Cetherall and defensive lineman Lance Legere are the three seniors most likely to sign a contract and fight for a roster spot this summer.

NDToday.com's Rob Joyce dribbles up the court on a fast break. His team advanced to the Round of 64 with a 21-4 win.

By KATHLEEN O'BRIEN
Senior Staff Writer

The ranked teams began to fall this weekend in Bookstore Basketball.

Seventh-seeded Mourning Wood lost to the Lazy Boys 21-13 and Killer Boots. Man knocked off No. 19 If We Win it at the buzzer, 21-15.

Mourning Wood lost without one of its top players, wide receiver Arnaz Battle. "He's a player," Panzer continued from page 24.

The round of 32 will be played this weekend at Steep Courts with games beginning at 7 p.m. The women's tournament action began this weekend as well, with preliminary rounds taking place over the weekend.

NFL continued from page 24

great sports town," he said. "I just feel really fortunate to have this opportunity."

The New England Patriots gave two Irish players an opportunity to prove themselves next year. The Patriots drafted cornerback Brock Williams in the third round and tight end Jarhari Holloway in the fourth round. Several other Irish players could still sign with NFL teams as undrafted free agents. Offensive guard Jim Jones, wide receiver Joey Cetherall and defensive lineman Lance Legere are the three seniors most likely to sign a contract and fight for a roster spot this summer.

DOMUS PROPERTIES HAS A 10 BEDROOM HOUSE

CONTACT KRAMER
(219) 234-2572 VOICE MAIL
(219) 234-2572 OFFICE
(219) 234-2572 CELL PHONE

ALSO LEASING HOUSES FOR 2002-2003 SCHOOL YEAR

ATTENTION PLEASE!

TODAY IS MARY O'GREN'S 50TH BIRTHDAY...BE SURE TO CALL AND WISH HER A HAPPY ONE!
THE OBSERVER
Published Monday through Friday, The Observer is a vital source of information on people and events in the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's Community.

Join the more than 13,000 readers who have found The Observer an indispensible link to the two campuses. Please complete the accompanying form and mail it today to receive The Observer in your home.

Visit The Observer on the web at http://observer.nd.edu/

Make checks payable to: The Observer P.O. Box Q Notre Dame, IN 46556

[ ] Enclosed is $85 for one academic year
[ ] Enclosed is $45 for one semester

Name ____________________________
Address ____________________________
City ____________________ State ______ Zip __________

( ) Check enclosed
( ) Charge my__________________ Visa MasterCard

Telephone: ________________________________
Fax: ________________________________

See answer at the web site at abcnews.com/observerlast.com, estimate.com.)

Copyright 1999 Universal Press Syndicate.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

THE CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1. Prop in "Shepherd" (7)
2. High school dropout
3. From where some worship? (7)
4. Fish illegally
5. Execute perfectly
6. Badger
7. Beginning of a quip
8. Plane part
9. Crescent
10. Like the Observer is a vital source of information on people and events in the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's Community.

Join the more than 13,000 readers who have found The Observer an indispensible link to the two campuses. Please complete the accompanying form and mail it today to receive The Observer in your home.

Visit The Observer on the web at http://observer.nd.edu/

Make checks payable to: The Observer P.O. Box Q Notre Dame, IN 46556

[ ] Enclosed is $85 for one academic year
[ ] Enclosed is $45 for one semester

Name ____________________________
Address ____________________________
City ____________________ State ______ Zip __________

( ) Check enclosed
( ) Charge my__________________ Visa MasterCard

Telephone: ________________________________
Fax: ________________________________

See answer at the web site at abcnews.com/observerlast.com, estimate.com.)

Copyright 1999 Universal Press Syndicate.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

THE CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1. Prop in "Shepherd" (7)
2. High school dropout
3. From where some worship? (7)
4. Fish illegally
5. Execute perfectly
6. Badger
7. Beginning of a quip
8. Plane part
9. Crescent
10. Like the Observer is a vital source of information on people and events in the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's Community.

Join the more than 13,000 readers who have found The Observer an indispensible link to the two campuses. Please complete the accompanying form and mail it today to receive The Observer in your home.

Visit The Observer on the web at http://observer.nd.edu/

Make checks payable to: The Observer P.O. Box Q Notre Dame, IN 46556

[ ] Enclosed is $85 for one academic year
[ ] Enclosed is $45 for one semester

Name ____________________________
Address ____________________________
City ____________________ State ______ Zip __________

( ) Check enclosed
( ) Charge my__________________ Visa MasterCard

Telephone: ________________________________
Fax: ________________________________

See answer at the web site at abcnews.com/observerlast.com, estimate.com.)

Copyright 1999 Universal Press Syndicate.
NFL DRAFT

Six Notre Dame players selected in 2001 NFL Draft

By MIKE CONNOLLY
Sports Writer

Rebounding from a disappointing 2000 NFL draft when only once Irish player was drafted, six Notre Dame seniors were selected in this weekend’s NFL 2001 draft.

Mike Gandy, Brock Williams, Anthony Denman, Dan O’Leary, Tony Driver and Jari Holloway were selected in one of the seven rounds.

Notre Dame’s six draft picks gave them as many or more draft picks than any school except Miami. And they beat Miami.

Both Miami and Notre Dame announced what was left of their respective rosters immediately after the draft. The Irish 4-1 win over their arch-rival Hurricanes in the Big East final, the Irish 4-1 over Rutgers in the Big Ten final and the Irish 6-4 win over Stanford in the Big West final.

But it wasn’t easy.

The Irish started out down 4-0 in the first set to Miami’s Johan Morales lost to Miami’s Johan Morales, 9-7. The Irish came back to win the doubles point, 7-5, and then lost the third set, 7-5, to Miami’s Johan Morales.

“After losing the doubles point, we were pretty much on a losing streak,” said Dan O’Leary. “But when the phone call came saying the Bills were going to take me in the sixth round, I was absolutely so excited,” said Dan O’Leary who was chosen in the sixth round by the Buffalo Bills. “I got a call from the Steelers saying they were thinking about taking me in the next round and then all of a sudden the Bills click in and say they are really interested. I get off the phone with the Steelers who have a later pick and I stayed on the line with Buffalo who had two picks in a row. Then all of a sudden, there it is, my name comes across the screen."

The draft ended weeks of intense scrutiny of the players by NFL teams and hours of anxiety waiting for a call from a future employer. But when the phone call came and his name flashed across the screen, every player was excited.

“The fact that I could long snap helped a ton,” he said. "It gave me the opportunity to demonstrate two types of roles that I could play.”

Mike Gandy, a third round selection by the Chicago Bears, was the first Irish player chosen. Gandy was a bit surprised that the Bears chose him. He hadn’t worked out or spent too much time talking to Chicago in the weeks leading up to the draft.

Nevertheless, Gandy is excited to be playing in Chicago next year alongside former teammates Brad Williams and Jerry Wiencek.

“It’s good to go to a team with such great tradition like Chicago and such a"