Panel considers next step after attacks

By JUSTIN KRIVICKAS
News Writer

Five speakers gathered in a DeBartolo lecture hall Thursday to help shed light on the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

The lecture, entitled "After September 11: Law, Rights and Remedies," was the third in a series of discussion seminars on recent events and was sponsored by the Kroc and Kellogg Institutes for International Peace Studies, the Kellogg Institute for International Studies and the Center for Civil and Human Rights.

Robert Johanson, professor of government and international studies and senior fellow in the Kroc and Kellogg Institutes began the discussion by claiming the attacks should be labeled as criminal acts and not acts of war and the U.S. should act accordingly.

"We are more likely to produce justices without instruments of war," he said. "It would not be surprising if these terrorists expected U.S. military action when they planned their attack."

He speculated bin Laden and those responsible anticipated the U.S. attack Afghanistan and inadvertently instigate a holy war against Islam, thus igniting further hatred against the U.S. in the Middle East.

"We must clarify our conduct from that of the terrorist," said Johanson, referring to how to prevent the situation from escalating further.

According to Johanson, ethical means must be employed in order to seek justice. The U.S. and its coalition must be careful not to resort to the terrorists' only weapon: striking fear into the hearts of civilians.

Johanson said the U.N. should be mobilized to go after the terrorists — the U.S. needs the cooperation of the international community to prove to these terrorists that crimes against humanity will not be tolerated.

See Also

"Group weighs role in fresh orientation"
"Words speak to audience"

State of the Student Union Address

Norton urges unity, respect

By ERIN LaRUFFA
Associate News Editor

Drawing on examples of "solidarity and benevolence" at Notre Dame following Sept. 11, student body president Brooke Norton challenged students to strengthen themselves for the future and to increase unity on campus.

"Perhaps now more than ever, the state of our student union is of utmost importance," said Norton. "I say this because our generation has been given a new challenge — because it is the college students of today that will be the leaders of tomorrow."

Norton presented this challenge in her state of the student union address before the Student Senate Wednesday. She particularly emphasized the importance of students educating themselves on global issues.

"The talk of 'The Notre Dame Bubble' ended on September 11, and it is my hope that the 'bubble' has disappeared for good," said Norton, calling on students to "embody the same values we hope can and will exist in our nation and our world."

Inclusiveness and compassion are two of those important values, according to Norton.

"Now more than ever before, we as a community are called to be inclusive, to respect one another, to be compassionate. No matter what our gender, race, sexual orientation, religion, ethnicity or nationality, we all have one thing in common and that is this University," Norton said. She added that it is important for the student body to act as an accepting family.

Norton pointed to several examples of why she believes Notre Dame already is an accepting place.

"There are signs of this family everywhere," she said.
INSIDE COLUMN

Mike Connolly

Editor-in-Chief

More NCAA nonsense

In the eyes of the NCAA, college athletes may do the following things:
1) Rob department stores
2) Beat up women
3) Violate liquor laws
4) Flunk every class
5)_assault police officers
6) Basically break any law, disregard any university rule or act like a complete jerk, and you can still play.

But there is one thing the NCAA will never tolerate: playing basketball too far from your house.

Somehow this organization manages to make college athletics even more complicated and corrupt than they already are. Rather than addressing the real problems in college athletics — foibles on the football field, rapists on the basketball courts and guys who can't even pass basic arithmetic playing baseball — the NCAA instead focuses on its attention on what Ryan Humphrey played summer basketball.

Does it really matter if his league was more than 100 miles from his home when most of Cincinnati's basketball players probably can't even spell Cincinnati?

Instead of dealing with the over-commercialization of college athletics and the win at any cost mentality of many coaches, the NCAA is instead nit-picking about the location of summer league games. If this is the priority of the NCAA, it would involve a complete overhaul of college athletics as we know it. Finding out where basketball players are playing in the summer time is much easier.

Did Humphrey violate a rule? Yes. Does a violation of that rule deserve a punishment? Yes. But it is still a stupid rule.

Instead of laying out some sort of universal code of conduct for universities in regards to basic conduct of athletes, the NCAA instead whips out a measuring tape to see where summer league games are being played.

They leave the real discipline problems up to the individual schools. Considering what huge money-makers athletics can be for universities, why should the NCAA trust schools to patrol their own backyards?

Florida State coach Bobby Bowden is not going to lack for players if he has his way and his team is in the run for a national title. So a player who was accused of robbing a department store is allowed to play for the team. The NCAA didn't care.

But Humphrey played basketball too far from his house so he has to be suspended.

And Humphrey had no intention of graduating from Ohio State but the NCAA had no problem with him belonging on the court.

But Humphrey played basketball too far from his house so he has to be suspended.

Not exactly a deterrent for Tyrone Murphy one game for violating Indiana state liquor laws and the NCAA didn't say a thing.

But Humphrey played basketball too far from his house so he has to be suspended for two games.

In hindsight, Humphrey never should have played basketball this summer. Why should he even try to play the game he loves? There are too many NCAA rules about when, where and why you can play basketball.

He would have been better off robbing an apartment, shooting a police officer, beating up his girlfriend and flunking all his classes. But he didn't do any of those things. * His career is far worse.

He played a game.

Contact Mike Connolly at Connolly.29@nd.edu.

The Corrections/Clarifications column is written by the Observer's staff and is intended to address any errors or omissions made in the previous edition. The corrections are published to ensure that the report is accurate and complete.

The Corrections/Clarifications column is written by the Observer's staff and is intended to address any errors or omissions made in the previous edition. The corrections are published to ensure that the report is accurate and complete.

This Week at Notre Dame/Saint Mary's

Thursday

Dinner: Founders Day
Dinner, 4:30-7 p.m., Noble Hall
Family Dining Hall

Drive-In Movie: "Save the Last Dance," 7 p.m.
Saint Mary's Library

Friday

Booksigning: "Keeping the Faith, Making a Difference," Bill Miscamble, C.S.C., 3-5 p.m., Hammes Bookstore.

Reception: Exhibition opening, 5 p.m., Moreau Center for the Arts, SMC.

Beyond Campus

Two Southern Illinois University students now face murder charges for their alleged role in the Sept. 1 shooting death of a North Carolina man, Jackson County Sheriff William J. Kilquist said Tuesday.

Taffia Cunningham, 24, and Jahneria Singletary, 25, are both being held accountable for the death of Tyree Cunningham. Kilquist said both students have been charged with murder because they were committing a crime when Tyree was killed.

Kilquist said police have arrested Donald Druid, 31, and Karen Smith, who were previously wanted on $100,000 warrants. Kilquist said police are still searching for two men who had knowledge of the homicide, but didn't inform police about it.

"What he should've done is call 911 and say 'I have a guy lying on my living room floor.'" William Kilquist

Jackson County Sheriff

The Observer

supported by the University of Notre Dame

University of Michigan

Bollinger accepts Columbia post

University of Michigan President Lee Bollinger has accepted an offer to take over the top post at Columbia University. Columbia's presidential search committee on Monday recommended Bollinger to succeed the university's 18th president, George Rupp, who is stepping down next summer. University of Michigan Regent Andrea Newman (R­Ann Arbor), who was previously wanted on $100,000 warrants. Kilquist said police are still searching for two men who had knowledge of the homicide, but didn't inform police about it.

The four defendants have already been charged with home invasion and armed robbery for allegedly attempting to rob Murphysboro resident Prentice Washington at a shotgun at his home. During the robbery, Washington shot and killed Tyree.

Taffia Cunningham, Tyree's older sister, allegedly dumped her brother's body in the woods near Crab Orchard Lake with Singletary's assistance.

Kilquist said police have located Washington, who was missing for some time after the homicide, and took his statement which was made in the presence of his lawyer. Kilquist said Washington has been charged for his alleged involvement Tyree's death, but he is unsure of what the charges are.

"What he should've done is call 911 and say 'I have a guy lying on my living room floor,'" Kilquist said.

As a student in sociology, and Singletary, a graduate student in the School of Music, both appeared Tuesday for their preliminary hearing in Jackson County court.

New York University

Attacks put student aid over budget

New York University has offered myriad services to University members who have been affected by the World Trade Center disaster, resulting in huge expenses for the University. Lynne Brown, vice president of Student Affairs, said the costs to NYU ran into millions of dollars, although final figures have not been tallied. Students who were forced to evacuate their dorms on Sept. 11 received a stipend of $200 to cover clothes and other expenses. NYU also bought a set of textbooks so students wouldn't fall behind in their classes; they also were given a free 10-meal plan while they were removed from their kitchens. Free phone cards worth $10 also were distributed to displaced students, and phone banks were established in the Violet Cafe and Robert Library. Staples provided free notebooks, pens and calculators to students. Also, Information Technology Services (ITS) has created a "Loaner" program, negotiating with computer companies to loan computers to students until Jan. 21.

Local Weather

5 Day South Bend Forecast

The AcuWeather® forecast for Saturday, Oct. 4.

The AcuWeather® forecast for today, Oct. 3.

National Weather

The AcuWeather® forecast for Monday, Oct. 5.

Atlanta 81 59 Las Vegas 95 60 Portland 79 44
Baltimore 79 55 Memphis 81 65 Sacramento 89 52
Baton Rouge 71 65 Minneapolis 81 44 St. Louis 76 60
Chicago 84 64 New York 77 50 Tampa 89 68
Houston 83 60 Philadelphia 78 58 Washington DC 82 50

The Observer is a member of the Associated Press. All reproduction rights are reserved.
A TOAST TO NOTRE DAME FOOD SERVICES

At their weekly meeting Wednesday, members of Toastmasters, a campus debate club, argue the merits of the dining hall food versus Grab 'n Go. The group meets at 7:30 p.m. in LaFortune.

Former CEO speaks about service career

By NADIA STEFKO
News Writer

When John McDonough, former CEO of the Newell Rubbermaid Corporation was diagnosed with Type I diabetes at age six, his parents were told he would be lucky to see the age of 20. Now, 29 years later, he has committed his life and fortune to finding a cure to the disease, which plagues 16 million Americans, including his oldest daughter Alison.

And while McDonough had undeniably risen to the top of the corporate ladder, that commitment was what drove him to resign from the head post of the multi-billion dollar corporation in favor of chairing the not-for-profit Juvenile Diabetes Foundation.

McDonough spoke about his decision Wednesday at a lecture as part of the Careers for Government Majors Series.

"Success is making enough to meet your obligations to yourself, your family and society," McDonough said.

John McDonough
chairman,
Juvenile Diabetes Foundation

When John McDonough, former CEO of the Newell Rubbermaid Corporation was diagnosed with Type I diabetes at age six, his parents were told he would be lucky to see the age of 20. Now, 29 years later, he has committed his life and fortune to finding a cure to the disease, which plagues 16 million Americans, including his oldest daughter Alison.

And while McDonough had undeniably risen to the top of the corporate ladder, that commitment was what drove him to resign from the head post of the multi-billion dollar corporation in favor of chairing the not-for-profit Juvenile Diabetes Foundation.

McDonough spoke about his decision Wednesday at a lecture as part of the Careers for Government Majors Series.

"Success is making enough to meet your obligations to yourself, your family and society," McDonough said.

John McDonough
chairman,
Juvenile Diabetes Foundation

The Warren Golf Course at Notre Dame

Huge Fall Sale

Up to 50% Off Selected Items

Women's Apparel, Men's Apparel, Children's Apparel, Clubs

Limited Supply of Game Day Hats Available

Look For Us at Our Satellite Shop at the Joyce Center on Football Fridays and Game Days

The Warren Golf Course is Located on the Northeast Side of Campus on Douglas Road
(219) 631-4653

Bring this ad to the Warren Golf Course Pro Shop or our Satellite Shop at the Joyce Center for an extra 10% off your purchase.
Address
continued from page 1

Norton said, and these signs extend beyond efforts to aid the victims of the World Trade Center attack. As an example, Norton described the work of the diversity division within the office of the student body president. In addition to organizing diversity workshops, the division is also planning a multicultural fair; an event Norton said will "bring together all of the cultural organizations on campus."

In addition, Norton also praised a recent Executive Cabinet discussion, which focused on "the need for our student body to show support for the gay, lesbian and bisexual community." Further, Norton stressed the importance of Notre Dame students "constantly reaching out to those less fortunate and to each other" through the Center for Social Concerns and Campus Ministry.

At the same time, however, Norton said that the Notre Dame community could be even more inclusive. She asked senators to make a special effort to be inclusive, including through improving communication between student government and the rest of the student body.

Contact Erin LaRuffa at elaruffa@nd.edu

---

STUDENT SENATE
Group weighs role in frosh orientation

By ERIN LaRUFFA
Assistant News Editor

The Student Senate needs to consider its role on the freshmen orientation committee it helped create, according to Pangborn senator Mary Mullen at the Senate's meeting Wednesday.

Mullen said that on Tuesday, she attended a meeting of the committee, which consists of half-freshman orientation commissioners, campus-wide orientation commissioners and representatives from the student senate.

The senate created the committee through a resolution it passed last year. "We really need to define what role we want to play in it," Mullen told her fellow senators. She added she envisioned the senate playing a role in addressing gender-related problems associated with freshman orientation.

"There are still a lot of gender relations issues and a lot of people feeling uncomfortable," said Mullen. "We don't want freshman coming and feeling uncomfortable the first weekend."

More specifically, Mullen said that the senate could work with the committee to find a replacement for the Graffiti Dance, which previously held on the Saturday night of orientation. Several other members of the senate agreed.

"There were people who felt the dance was too much of meat market, and that's not the image of Notre Dame we want to portray to our freshmen," said Adam Russ, the Hall President's liaison to the senate.

The senate also discussed dining hall forums, which senators will begin holding on Oct. 8. Several senators will sit together in each dining hall during dinner so students will have an opportunity to share their opinions, according to Carroll senator Jesse Flores. He said he hopes to reach as many students as possible by being available at the time and place most of them go to eat dinner anyway.

"Instead of always asking students to come to us...why don't we go to them?" Flores asked. The purpose of talking to students in person is to get their feedback on important issues the senate is discussing. Each forum will focus on a different topic.

In other Senate news:
• Stanford senator Aldo Tesi said that his meeting last week with dining hall managers went well. Tesi said that the manager of North Dining Hall has already met with staff members to discuss what improvements can be dealt with immediately.
• During his U2 concert next Wednesday, the senate will move its meeting to Thursday, Oct. 11 at 5:30 p.m.

Contact Erin LaRuffa at elaruffa@nd.edu

Bruno’s Pizza
All-you-can-eat Buffet

*Pizza
*Pasta $6.50
*Salad
*Other Italian Dishes
Every Thursday at 5
2610 Prairie Avenue
288-3320

amoires

ND cinema
THURSDAY, OCT 4
HESBURGH LIBRARY AUDITORIUM
7:00 PM
FREE ADMISSION
Presented by The Department of Film, Television and Theatre at the University of Notre Dame

THE MUSIC OF THE FIFTH ELEMENT

The first opportunity for U.S. audiences to see the film created by Luc Besson and Jean-Claude Mézières, whose original creation for Les Amours de l'Air was first published in France in 1984.
World News Briefs

Macedonia plans to retake Albanian region: Macedonia's government said Wednesday that a major operation to retake control of ethnic Albanian strongholds, ignoring Western warnings that the move could derail the peace process. Interior minister, Ljubce Boskonski, said police units would enter parts of the volatile, primarily Albanian region in the northwest of the country on Thursday "to restore law and order" after months of ethnic conflict.

Castro backs anti-terror measures: President Fidel Castro pledged Wednesday that Cuba would not pull out of its peacekeeping mission in the region in the northwest of the country in response to the violence. "Cuba will stay," he said.

National News Briefs

Bush creates education panel: President Bush on Wednesday announced the creation of a Cabinet-level commission to study special education issues. Lawmakers this month are considering whether to adopt a measure, proposed last spring by Senate Democrats and backed by several Republicans, that would mandate $8.8 billion next year for special education. The House-approved budget includes about $7.3 billion, about $1 billion more than in 2001.

Reno can be sued over Elian raid: Former Attorney General Janet Reno can be sued by protesters and bystanders injured during the raid to seize Elian Gonzalez from his Miami relatives' home, a federal judge ruled Tuesday that Reno's position as attorney general did not give her immunity from being sued for the raid, which she ordered.

Indiana News Briefs

Marijuana found in chicken farm: Officers acting on a tip seized 361 marijuana plants and nearly $20,000 worth of processed marijuana; possession of marijuana; and possession of marijuana in more than 10 pounds of marijuana; possession of marijuana; and dealing in marijuana; possession of marijuana; and dealing in marijuana.

Humbert, 47, arrested on preliminary charges of dealing in marijuana; possession of marijuana; and dealing in marijuana.

Reno can be sued over Elian raid: Former Attorney General Janet Reno can be sued by protesters and bystanders injured during the raid to seize Elian Gonzalez from his Miami relatives' home, a federal judge ruled Tuesday that Reno's position as attorney general did not give her immunity from being sued for the raid, which she ordered.

World News Briefs

Macedonia plans to retake Albanian region: Macedonia's government said Wednesday that a major operation to retake control of ethnic Albanian strongholds, ignoring Western warnings that the move could derail the peace process. Interior minister, Ljubce Boskonski, said police units would enter parts of the volatile, primarily Albanian region in the northwest of the country on Thursday "to restore law and order" after months of ethnic conflict.

Castro backs anti-terror measures: President Fidel Castro pledged Wednesday that Cuba would not pull out of its peacekeeping mission in the region in the northwest of the country in response to the violence. "Cuba will stay," he said.

National News Briefs

Bush creates education panel: President Bush on Wednesday announced the creation of a Cabinet-level commission to study special education issues. Lawmakers this month are considering whether to adopt a measure, proposed last spring by Senate Democrats and backed by several Republicans, that would mandate $8.8 billion next year for special education. The House-approved budget includes about $7.3 billion, about $1 billion more than in 2001.

Reno can be sued over Elian raid: Former Attorney General Janet Reno can be sued by protesters and bystanders injured during the raid to seize Elian Gonzalez from his Miami relatives' home, a federal judge ruled Tuesday that Reno's position as attorney general did not give her immunity from being sued for the raid, which she ordered.

Indiana News Briefs

Marijuana found in chicken farm: Officers acting on a tip seized 361 marijuana plants and nearly $20,000 worth of processed marijuana; possession of marijuana; and dealing in marijuana; possession of marijuana; and dealing in marijuana.

Humbert, 47, arrested on preliminary charges of dealing in marijuana; possession of marijuana; and dealing in marijuana.

Reno can be sued over Elian raid: Former Attorney General Janet Reno can be sued by protesters and bystanders injured during the raid to seize Elian Gonzalez from his Miami relatives' home, a federal judge ruled Tuesday that Reno's position as attorney general did not give her immunity from being sued for the raid, which she ordered.

World News Briefs

Macedonia plans to retake Albanian region: Macedonia's government said Wednesday that a major operation to retake control of ethnic Albanian strongholds, ignoring Western warnings that the move could derail the peace process. Interior minister, Ljubce Boskonski, said police units would enter parts of the volatile, primarily Albanian region in the northwest of the country on Thursday "to restore law and order" after months of ethnic conflict.

Castro backs anti-terror measures: President Fidel Castro pledged Wednesday that Cuba would not pull out of its peacekeeping mission in the region in the northwest of the country in response to the violence. "Cuba will stay," he said.

National News Briefs

Bush creates education panel: President Bush on Wednesday announced the creation of a Cabinet-level commission to study special education issues. Lawmakers this month are considering whether to adopt a measure, proposed last spring by Senate Democrats and backed by several Republicans, that would mandate $8.8 billion next year for special education. The House-approved budget includes about $7.3 billion, about $1 billion more than in 2001.

Reno can be sued over Elian raid: Former Attorney General Janet Reno can be sued by protesters and bystanders injured during the raid to seize Elian Gonzalez from his Miami relatives' home, a federal judge ruled Tuesday that Reno's position as attorney general did not give her immunity from being sued for the raid, which she ordered.

Indiana News Briefs

Marijuana found in chicken farm: Officers acting on a tip seized 361 marijuana plants and nearly $20,000 worth of processed marijuana; possession of marijuana; and dealing in marijuana; possession of marijuana; and dealing in marijuana.

Humbert, 47, arrested on preliminary charges of dealing in marijuana; possession of marijuana; and dealing in marijuana.

Reno can be sued over Elian raid: Former Attorney General Janet Reno can be sued by protesters and bystanders injured during the raid to seize Elian Gonzalez from his Miami relatives' home, a federal judge ruled Tuesday that Reno's position as attorney general did not give her immunity from being sued for the raid, which she ordered.
Keating to receive Rosenthal Award today

Special to The Observer

Terrence Keating, a 1960 University graduate, will receive the 2001 Richard A. Rosenthal Award from the Notre Dame Alumni Association at a luncheon reception on campus today.

Established in 1995, the Rosenthal Award is presented annually to a former alumni board member for distinguished service to the Alumni Association.

Keating, who served on the board from 1982 to 1984, was elected president of the Alumni Association in 1985. He also served as a member of the admissions board from 1975 to 1982 and was influential in increasing minority enrollment and participation in the Alumni Association.

He served as president of the Notre Dame Club of Detroit in 1972, and is currently a member of its board of directors. An attorney with the Detroit firm of Berry Moorman P.C., Keating practices in the areas of estate planning, trusts and nonprofit law. He serves as a consultant on planned giving for the University of Detroit Jesuit High School Academy and is a member of the board of directors for several organizations, including Oakland County Catholic Charities and Casa Maria Settlement House. A resident Bloomfield Hills, Mich., Keating earned his law legal and moral implications pertaining to military force.

Attacks

continued from page 1

"Terror can't ever be justified," said Mendez in his opening remarks.

He added that he U.S. must single out the guilty parties and, if necessary, take military action against the aggressors. Yet, the U.S. must respect international law and prevent revenge coupled with hatred from overtaking its ability to make ethical decisions.

"War crimes committed by one side does not justify war crimes from the opposing force. The U.S. must remain a country that promotes democracy and human rights." Juan Mendez

CCHR director

"War crimes committed by one side does not justify war crimes from the opposing force," Mendez said. "The U.S. must remain a country that promotes democracy and human rights."

CCHR associate director Garth Meintjes spoke on the importance of an international tribunal to bring the terrorists responsible to justice. According to Meintjes, a tribunal will show unity among nations against the threat of terrorism and display to the world crimes of terror will not be tolerated.

Panelist Dinah Shelton, professor of law, focused her lecture on reparations for those who lost loved ones from the Sept. 11 attacks.

"The U.S. cannot deny a remedy for the right to know the truth, justice, and compensation," she said.

Shelton said bin Laden's frozen assets would be best put to the use of compensation. Victims of the terrorist attacks deserve to be helped in their time of turmoil.

Assistant professor of law Patricia Bellia, rounded out the evening of speakers and concentrated on Constitutional Rights. She pointed out that many proposals are currently circulating on Capitol Hill dealing with new safety measures that should help avert other terrorist attacks.

In light of the recent attacks, "We should be weighing tradeoffs between freedom and security," Bellia said.

Contact Justin Kriwickas at kriwickas.3@nd.edu

Tired of going to the same old place? On a tight Budget for Entertainment? Want to really have some Fun? Why not try the NEW place?

Wednesday: $1.00 Well Drinks
Thursday: $1.00 Beer Night
7 Imports & 12 Domestic
Karaoke 10PM-2AM
Friday & Saturday:
Beer: All you can Drink $5.00

We Support Responsible Drinking-Soft Drinks are FREE to Designated Drivers
Must be 21 to Enter with proper I.D.

CLUB 1 2 3
123 North Michigan Street
TWO BLOCKS NORTH OF THE STATE...DOWNTOWN SOUTH BEND
HOURS: Wednesday - Saturday 7 P.M. - 3 A.M.

Beer Night Thursday, November 1, 2001

Want to really have some Fun? Why not try the NEW place?

We Support Responsible Drinking-Soft Drinks are FREE to Designated Drivers
Must be 21 to Enter with proper I.D.

Thursday, November 1, 2001

Beer Night Thursday, November 1, 2001

Want to really have some Fun? Why not try the NEW place?

We Support Responsible Drinking-Soft Drinks are FREE to Designated Drivers
Must be 21 to Enter with proper I.D.

Want to really have some Fun? Why not try the NEW place?

We Support Responsible Drinking-Soft Drinks are FREE to Designated Drivers
Must be 21 to Enter with proper I.D.

Want to really have some Fun? Why not try the NEW place?

We Support Responsible Drinking-Soft Drinks are FREE to Designated Drivers
Must be 21 to Enter with proper I.D.
STAPLES TO EAT DISORDERS POST

By NATASHA GRANT
News Writer

Notre Dame officials have announced the hiring of Valerie Staples as an eating disorder specialist in the University Counseling Center.

She was hired as an assessment counselor in August. Staples, who was trained as a clinical social worker, directed the eating disorders program at South Bend's Memorial Hospital for 12 years.

Staples said having an eating disorder as a real problem once people have reached college age, but she didn't "see it as any greater of a problem here than on any other college campus."

"There is a lot about a college environment that invites eating disorders," she said. "Being away from home for the first time and learning to adjust to a different ways of living could be a factor."

These problems are more easily prevented at a young age, according to the counselor.

"I think it's difficult to prevent eating disorders when students get here. They need to work seriously at preventing that problem very early on, around childhood."

Once students arrive on campus, it is most likely too late to prevent them from developing eating disorders, but there are ways to educate them so that they can develop healthier habits, Staples said.

And that's where Staples comes in.

She plans to implement outreach programs as well as training in residence halls, beginning with rectors and resident assistants before moving on to students.

"If you label them 'eating disorders,' no one will come," she said of the programs that she plans to host. "Labeling them 'body image' might yield better results."

She intends to educate students not only about eating disorders but also about healthy eating and exercising. She said that with the help and support of other counselors, the University can make a big difference in people's lives.

"Even though I am identified as that specialist because of the experience that I have, the other counselors are trained to handle it as well."

Contact Natasha Grant at grant.20@nd.edu

TASTE OF INDIA

We have lunch buffet seven days a week:
$5 for students

10% discount for all students and staff.

We are at the corner of Grape Road & McKinley at K-Mart Plaza.

Phone: 254-9070

Lunch Buffet
Student $5
In a past discussion in my property class, the topic had turned towards the negative effects of suburban sprawl. "Sprawl" consists of the appropriation of acres of wide-open green space for the erection of "McMansions," strip malls and oversized parking lots.

These areas leapfrog from city centers and arrange themselves arbitrarily among cornfields, farmland and otherwise untouched greenspace. Some students discussed the flight of the wealthy from city to suburb and the injury caused to the remaining poor unable to afford lives surrounded by vast lawns and ungody amounts of concrete.

One student let's call him Constantius cautioned that we should be careful about describing the poor as a class locked into a certain station quo. Opportunities abound, he said, for the poor, with clear goals and hard work, to escape their situation and pursue their dream — even if it is a home in the burbs.

Another student (let's call him Diocletian) shot his hand up in reply. He lectured on the lack of opportunities available to the poor, how certain intangibles such as lack of education, prejudices and antagonistic system keep them locked into a vicious cycle of poverty and oppression.

No doubt Diocletian means well. But there is nothing more frustrating than being lectured to on the lack of opportunities for the poor by one born and raised in the upper-middle class.

I found doubly ironic was that Constantius, the one whose views I thought may have been "correcting," was born to an uneducated mother in the inner city.

Working his way from the bottom up, Constantius turned down an offer from Harvard to pursue a law degree at Notre Dame. No small feat.

My own parents left Vietnam after the war, arriving in America with three young children, some bags of clothes and awful English skills.

Our lives began in the slums. My father had to leave a lucrative civil engineering practice to start over, in his mid-forties, in a foreign place, while my mother attended community college to earn a nursing degree.

Two decades later, they live in a "McMansion" in south Florida, their son is a physician, their younger daughter is happily slaving away at a certain legal institution in northern Indiana.

The point? Constantius is absolutely correct. My parents never felt entitled to any government help, never felt "the system" owed them something. What they had, rather, was a strong work ethic, common sense notions of responsibility and a bit of faith. Not bad traits to have, especially when you're down and out.

As ironic as Diocletian's comments were, such perorations abound among the academic elite. Many champion the cause of the poor (perhaps due to a mixture of genuine compassion and upper-middle class guilt) in the same way — by preaching a message of, essentially, despair.

With so many smart, good-looking, nice-smelling folks telling the unfortunates they are stuck and have nowhere to go, it is a wonder any muscle up the hill. I wonder why we've got a race to run, let me be next to the one running to win no matter the odds and not beside the sullen horse in back gloomily plodding along.

The elite's message of compassion turns out, ironically, to be more patronizing than anything else.

With their desire to help, they push farther down those already at bottom by declaring them helpless victims of a cruel, uncaring system.

Granted, "the system" (no one has yet told me exactly what that is) can use some revising — no news here. But show me a perfect system, and I will show you a man without sin.

All I suggest is that the well-intentioned moneyed who are angst-ridden at the world's injustices take care they do not unwittingly add to it.

Christine Niles is a student at the Notre Dame Law School. Her column appears every other Thursday. The views expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.
When confidentiality competes with friendship

A doctor's highest duty is probably their duty to protect his or her patient's confidentiality. Without this level of trust a patient might be unwilling to fully disclose information that the doctor needs to know. The patient's level of confidentiality can be so great it may be opposed if the doctor does not have all the necessary information.

To protect this confidentiality the law has taken the necessary step of creating a doctor-patient privilege which is being used in extremely rare circumstances. Sounds simple, right? Just keep things to yourself and everyone is fine. What I have learned is that it confidentiality can be so hard to follow that it sometimes creates very real personal struggles.

I was working at my local Emergency Room one day as the ER tech. Two people asked what I do, and I told them I am basically a nurse's aide. If something needs to get done, I do it. This involves restocking supplies, performing about as much of 12 lead EKGs as possible, entering the patient's vitals into the computer, and assisting the ER nurses in all that they do, however tiny.

I started running laps around the parking lot, I was so angry. I was upset and full of murderous rage towards the guy that did this to her that I could have probably run a marathon. I imagined doing horrible things to that guy for doing that to her. It felt really good to get some of that energy out but now I was just upset. So what now? I want my friend's blood results back. I am there for her but how? I call her up on the blue shift. I know about what happened but I have never actually met the patient.

I must admit that there were many times it was simply too painful to even look. The reason I am writing this letter, though, is to encourage everyone to place their confidentiality is especially at risk for these reasons.

Stephen Carroll
A Medical Perspective

I have watched with disappointment the past few weeks of Irish football, just as most students and fans have. I must admit that there were many times it was simply too painful to even look. The reason I am writing this letter, though, is to encourage everyone to place their confidentiality is especially at risk for these reasons.

As a Doctor [NAME] I suffer with the ND family through a tough football season. Like any family it's okay (and even healthy) to constructively criticize our shortcomings. But like any family, let's keep that in-house. To the outside world, we truly are "ND.

When our boys step onto the field, we are united in our purpose and united in our support for them. They are our agents. We are the ones that adversity, we are united in our purpose and likely snickers as we are tempted to snipe at our own. Let's teach our throats and in that adversity, we are united in our purpose and likely snickers as we are tempted to snipe at our own. Let's teach

The world smiles when ND fails sometimes, life puts its foot across our throat and in that adversity, we must find the lessons God places there. It's easy to cheer a winner. It's much harder to support a loser.

The future smiles when ND fails and likely starvers as we are tempted to snipe at our own. Let's teach our throats and in that adversity, we are united in our purpose and likely snickers as we are tempted to snipe at our own. Let's teach

Jocelyn Brueening
junior, BS-PhD, 2001

It's been more than a year since this happened and, unfortunately, I haven't spoken to her. I could lose my job for breaking confidentiality on this but its not about losing my job; I would give up my job in a second to help a friend. It's about keeping certain things to yourself, even if you don't want to. I can't even begin to imagine all the pain she went through and I can only wonder if I could have helped but the situation left me totally powerless.

Keeping confidentiality with your patients may not seem like a big deal but it can easily turn into one. Your duty to confidentiality is especially at risk for these reasons.

Stephen Carroll is a sophomore biology major. He is certified as an Emergency Medical Technician and a fire-fighter in Pennsylvania. He might also end up providing care for someone you know, which has also happened to me. These are very real problems that doctors and nurses face every day.

Hopefully those of you looking into the medical profession realize the importance of knowing when you have to keep certain things to yourself even if it causes you problems.

Stephen Carroll is a sophomore biology major. He is certified as an Emergency Medical Technician and a fire-fighter in Pennsylvania. He might also end up providing care for someone you know, which has also happened to me. These are very real problems that doctors and nurses face every day.

The views expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Give team and coaches complete support

It's about time the students of this University and the fans of the football team rally around our football players and coaches. Are we 0-3? Unfortunately, yes. Are our offensive statistics pathetic? Considering they rank almost dead last in almost every category, yes. But these are facts. We know them, the football players know these facts and as fans and supporters of our football team rally around our football players and coaches.

Bill LaFleur
sophomore
D'Nell Hall
Oct. 3, 2001

Jocelyn Brueening
junior, BS-PhD
Oct. 3, 2001

As a Doctor [NAME] I suffer with the ND family through a tough football season. Like any family it's okay (and even healthy) to constructively criticize our shortcomings. But like any family, let's keep that in-house. To the outside world, we truly are "ND.

When our boys step onto the field, we are united in our purpose and united in our support for them. They are our agents. We are the ones that adversity, we are united in our purpose and likely snickers as we are tempted to snipe at our own. Let's teach

The world smiles when ND fails sometimes, life puts its foot across our throat and in that adversity, we must find the lessons God places there. It's easy to cheer a winner. It's much harder to support a loser.

The future smiles when ND fails and likely starvers as we are tempted to snipe at our own. Let's teach

Jocelyn Brueening
junior, BS-PhD, 2001

It's been more than a year since this happened and, unfortunately, I haven't spoken to her. I could lose my job for breaking confidentiality on this but its not about losing my job; I would give up my job in a second to help a friend. It's about keeping certain things to yourself, even if you don't want to. I can't even begin to imagine all the pain she went through and I can only wonder if I could have helped but the situation left me totally powerless.

Keeping confidentiality with your patients may not seem like a big deal but it can easily turn into one. Your duty to confidentiality is especially at risk for these reasons.

Stephen Carroll is a sophomore biology major. He is certified as an Emergency Medical Technician and a fire-fighter in Pennsylvania. He might also end up providing care for someone you know, which has also happened to me. These are very real problems that doctors and nurses face every day.

Hopefully those of you looking into the medical profession realize the importance of knowing when you have to keep certain things to yourself even if it causes you problems.

Stephen Carroll is a sophomore biology major. He is certified as an Emergency Medical Technician and a fire-fighter in Pennsylvania. He might also end up providing care for someone you know, which has also happened to me. These are very real problems that doctors and nurses face every day.

The views expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Give team and coaches complete support

It's about time the students of this University and the fans of the football team rally around our football players and coaches. Are we 0-3? Unfortunately, yes. Are our offensive statistics pathetic? Considering they rank almost dead last in almost every category, yes. But these are facts. We know them, the football players know these facts and as fans and supporters of our football team rally around our football players and coaches.

Bill LaFleur
sophomore
D'Nell Hall
Oct. 3, 2001

Jocelyn Brueening
junior, BS-PhD
Oct. 3, 2001

As a Doctor [NAME] I suffer with the ND family through a tough football season. Like any family it's okay (and even healthy) to constructively criticize our shortcomings. But like any family, let's keep that in-house. To the outside world, we truly are "ND.

When our boys step onto the field, we are united in our purpose and united in our support for them. They are our agents. We are the ones that adversity, we are united in our purpose and likely snickers as we are tempted to snipe at our own. Let's teach

The world smiles when ND fails sometimes, life puts its foot across our throat and in that adversity, we must find the lessons God places there. It's easy to cheer a winner. It's much harder to support a loser.

The future smiles when ND fails and likely starvers as we are tempted to snipe at our own. Let's teach

Jocelyn Brueening
junior, BS-PhD, 2001

It's been more than a year since this happened and, unfortunately, I haven't spoken to her. I could lose my job for breaking confidentiality on this but its not about losing my job; I would give up my job in a second to help a friend. It's about keeping certain things to yourself, even if you don't want to. I can't even begin to imagine all the pain she went through and I can only wonder if I could have helped but the situation left me totally powerless.

Keeping confidentiality with your patients may not seem like a big deal but it can easily turn into one. Your duty to confidentiality is especially at risk for these reasons.

Stephen Carroll is a sophomore biology major. He is certified as an Emergency Medical Technician and a fire-fighter in Pennsylvania. He might also end up providing care for someone you know, which has also happened to me. These are very real problems that doctors and nurses face every day.

Hopefully those of you looking into the medical profession realize the importance of knowing when you have to keep certain things to yourself even if it causes you problems.

Stephen Carroll is a sophomore biology major. He is certified as an Emergency Medical Technician and a fire-fighter in Pennsylvania. He might also end up providing care for someone you know, which has also happened to me. These are very real problems that doctors and nurses face every day.

The views expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.
MOVIE REVIEW

"Word" says more than your average

By JUDE SEYMOUR
Scene Movie Critic

Movies within the kidnapping genre often try to play up tension while their plots meander in predictability and their endings gleam with happiness. The genre is limited by two of Hollywood's oldest conventions: The kidnappers must be brought to justice and there needs to be a resolution.

"Don't Say a Word," the new Michael Douglas thriller, recycles the plot of Mel Gibson's 1996 film "Ransom," a movie for which it was easy to blame the constraints of the genre. However, "Word" will impress many audience members as it reinvigorates the tired random plot, adding multiple sub-plots and creative situations to, of course, bring the kidnappers to justice.

Douglas plays Dr. Nathan Conrad, a psychiatrist who must pry a specific location from the memory of a catatonic patient in his old ward. Dr. Conrad aims to exchange that information for his young daughter, Brittany Murph, who has been kidnapped by a group of criminal masterminds led by Patrick Koster (Sean Bean), "Patriot Games" star of the year. The patient, Elisabeth (Brittany Murphy, "Clueless") is coping with trauma from her experience in a terrorism cell, blocking Dr. Conrad's attempts to elicit the information from her memory. To make a difficult situation almost impossible, Conrad has eight hours to retrieve the number before the kidnappers kill his daughter.

In "Word," Douglas seems to have combined two of his more recent roles into one performance. His tough-edged, sometimes maniacal attitude from "Traffic" is blended with the softer sensibilities of his character from "Wonder Boys." This is seen especially in his playful interaction with his 8-year old daughter, Jessie (Skye McCole Bartusiak). Douglas' performance is convincing even in these tiny moments — if only every child could experience the loving parental nature of Nathan Conrad.

Indeed, Douglas' performance as the catalyst for "Don't Say a Word," which plays much like a detective story. Conrad has been thrust unwillingly into the role of an investigator. He may have the academic intelligence of a Sherlock Holmes, but his deductions about the clues are coming far too slow for his 5 p.m. deadline.

This is the film's first twist from the "Ransom" backdropped kidnapping plot. While "Ransom" tried to focus on the psychological strategies of the Gibson character, "Don't Say a Word" pits Douglas as a willing participant in the kidnappers' game. But tension exists because Dr. Conrad is just no good at playing it.

For two hours, "Word"'s detective story grips the audience, creating nervous anticipatory moments and suspenseful chase sequences. However, director Gary Felder is apparently unsatisfied, adding two additional subplots to his sleek visual style.

These subplots involve Conrad's impaired wife (Famke Janssen, "X-Men"), who broke her leg in a skiing accident, and a bright New York City police detective (Jennifer Esposito, "Sond of Sam"), whose excessive search for clues in her own case leads her unknowingly into the kidnappers' scheme.

But the main plot and these two subplots are fortunately well written. The audience never has the chance to drop out of the action, keeping the pacing of the movie very fluid.

"Don't Say a Word," like most movies in the kidnapping genre, requires a fair amount of suspension of disbelief. The movie ignores practicality, instead focusing on producing greater tension.

If audiences can accept the parameters of the "rules" established by the film, then they will easily find them.

MOVIE REVIEW

Stiller struts his comedic stuff in "Zoolander"

By MARIO BIRD
Scene Movie Critic

Ben Stiller has carved out a niche in Hollywood with incredibility. In prior films, audiences watched in disbelief as Stiller's everyman character met with not just hardship, but incredible hardship. A sort of incredibility-meter rises as Stiller's scenarios transform from mildly abnoraml to gravely disturbing to straight-jacket lunacy.

"Zoolander," which features Stiller as both director and star, paints this nonsense large upon the male modeling industry and the idiosyncrasies therein.

The plot, much like the intellectual capacities of the male model character, can be summed up briefly. Derek Zoolander (Stiller), three-time Male Model of the Year, is dethroned by the free spirited, gold-locked Hansel (Owen Wilson).

Sprung upon the suddenly vulnerable Zoolander, renowned fashion designer Mugatu (Will Ferrell) brainwashes the model under the pretense of a stilled theft. The plot thickens as Mugatu attempts to kill the president of Malaysia, who has freed hundreds of Mugatu sweaty shop workers. A thrown into the mix are the beautiful-yet-unapproachable reporter Matilda (Christine Taylor), Zoolander's real-life wife and Zoolander's crusty mentor, Maury Baulstein (Ben's father, Jerry Stiller).

The rub, of course, is the race to save both Zoolander and the Malaysian president from the nefarious clutches of the man-eating Mugatu. Their real-life nemesis.

After establishing his comedic chops as a memorable turn in "There's Something About Mary" and "Meet the Parents," and as a one-dimensional doppelganger in "Happy Gilmore," and "Heavyweights," Stiller provides a new twist in the self-centered knucklehead Zoolander. Though dumber seems a bit over done at times, Stiller still delivers, making up for his character's apparent idiocy.

Wilson, however, steals the show as Hansel. After providing a hilarious contrast to Stiller's Greg Focker in "Meet the Parents," Wilson is back as Stiller's yo-yo-wielding, scooter-riding hippie nemesis. His overly bland delivery provides some of the film's drollest moments.

Will Ferrell, unfortunately, comes off as a square peg in the role of Mugatu. Relegated to a largely ceremonial role and the scene-stealing "Zoolander" equivalent of "Nerdy," the movie's favorite "SnL" pitches sketch testifies. The rest of the cast is satisfactory in their typecast roles, but there are plenty of cameos and Hollywood references, including the funniest 2001: A Space Odyssey parody of all time. Obviously, "Zoolander" is not attempting to preach a profound message about the beauty within or the lasting values of the modeling industry. Neither does it push the envelope with revoltingly riveting sight gags, the sort that made Stiller famous in "Nepia.

Instead, the humor content resides almost solely in the realm of cultural depreciation, mocking American society and the absurdities, human or otherwise, it has produced.

Whether the joke is Zoolander's insistence that his commercial character was not a mermaid but a "merman," or the ludicrous shrinking pattern cell phones have taken, the one-liners and sight-gags are clever on a
MORE REVIEW

"Amores Perros," a Mexican film released in theaters earlier this year, documents three interrelated stories set in the best and worst parts of a cosmopolitan city.

By MATT NANIA
Scene Movie Editor

When "Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon" won the Oscar for Best Foreign Language Film last year, it beat, among other contenders, the Mexican film "Amores Perros." But this astounding directorial debut by Alejandro Inarritu hasn't gone uncélébré. It's carried off a bunch of prizes at film festivals around the world including Cannes, Chicago and Tokyo, as well as topping the Mexican box office last year. And thanks to the efforts of Notre Dame's Film, Television and Theatre Department, "Amores Perros" will be screened tonight at 7 p.m. in the Hesburgh Library Auditorium as part of NDeema's Thursday night film series (admission is free).

"Amores Perros" (meaning "Love's a Bitch" in Spanish) doesn't so much weave its way through its three interconnected stories as search through the projector, burning an indelible mark onto the retina of anyone who sees it. Morality play, indictment of the suffering of the poverty stricken, or just riveting cinema, this is a raw, nerve jangling ride.

The three stories, which cut across the socioeconomic spectrum of Mexico City's indigenous population, are linked by one single incident - a car crash — that is repeated from different viewpoints throughout the film.

In the first story, an aimless loser (Gael Garcia Bernal) enters the violent world of dog fighting in hopes that the money he wins will be enough to run away with his brother's wife (Vanessa Bauche).

In the second story, a model (Goya Toledo) recovers from the crash in an apartment bought for her by her lover (Alvaro Guerrero), unaware of the dangers that can arise in the confines of one's own home.

The final story tells of a former political terrorist (Emilio Echevarria, in this film's most intense and sympathetic performance) who witnesses the car crash as he lives the life of a street urchin, collecting stray dogs and regretting the life he left behind many years before. The omnipresence of dogs (and — as a metaphor for the devaluation of human life — dead and bloody fighting dogs) is another element that ties these three episodes together.

Structurally, "Amores Perros" bears comparison to "Pulp Fiction." But that's where the similarity ends. Tarantino's first features, impressive as they are, relied heavily on their smart dialogue, clever plotting and impressive ensemble performances.

Inarritu's film is a little different. From the heart-stopping car chase in the opening sequence, through the final moments, the film's visual style is as arresting as its jigsaw narrative.

Shot in sharply colorful, gritty digital scene, through the final moments, the film's visual style is as arresting as its jigsaw narrative.

Shot in sharply colorful, gritty digital frame, and so nimblly edited that even when a character disappears for 30 minutes the audience never loses track of him, the film soaks up the various strata of Mexico's sprawling metropolis. Although some might compare the tarnished look of the film with recent Hollywood representations of Mexico ("Traffic" and "The Mexican"), Inarritu and writer Guillermo Arriaga have a different agenda.

The film never offers up a murky world of unanswerables, whose only function appears to be making the lives of the politicians and citizens hell.

The picture's look is linked more to the moral fabric of the universe the film creates. From the people who meek out an existence on the streets, to the media celebrities who fill the hours of vacuous television programming, the grainy images tar everyone with the same brush. No one is truly bad or virtuous. Instead, each character is seen to cause suffering for, as well as suffer in the hands of, those around them.

Engaging as the whole film is, the first and third segments remain the most impressive, although some may find the dog-fighting scenes in the first act too much to stomach. While no animals were harmed in the making of the film, the tension created in these sequences, through the editing, snap cuts and blurring of images, makes for a series of convincing and horrific specialties, leaving one questioning who the true animals really are.

For a long time now it's been reasonable to argue that films need not relate to the real world at all, even if they can (which some people dispute). Steven Spielberg and Quentin Tarantino are just two of the many successful filmmakers who appear to have grown up in a bubble with nothing but movies for company. But the pendulum is swinging. More filmmakers seem willing to get their hands dirty, to play in the dangerous sandpit of reality. Like Paul Thomas Anderson's "Magnolia" and even Soderbergh's "Traffic," Inarritu's film looks and feels like the beginning of something new. Riveting, raw and not for the squeamish, "Amores Perros" is essential cinema.

Contact Matt Nania at mnania@nd.edu.

---

 Movieland' **

variety of levels.

Although the laughs seem somewhat harmless, "Zoolander" treads the line a bit by staking some of the more wanton problems inherent in its subject matter. Models are readily prone to drugs, sex and bouts of debauchery. Stiller neither lauds nor condemns such behavior, instead mocking it in the same tone as the rest of the film. This is perhaps an even more subversive result, lumping together foppish farce, except for a split-second sequence that raises the incredibility level, where the similarity ends. Tarantino's first features, impressive as they are, relied heavily on their smart dialogue, clever plotting and impressive ensemble performances.

Structurally, "Amores Perros" bears comparison to "Pulp Fiction." But that's where the similarity ends. Tarantino's first features, impressive as they are, relied heavily on their smart dialogue, clever plotting and impressive ensemble performances.

Inarritu's film is a little different. From the heart-stopping car chase in the opening sequence, through the final moments, the film's visual style is as arresting as its jigsaw narrative.

In the first story, an aimless loser (Gael Garcia Bernal) enters the violent world of dog fighting in hopes that the money he wins will be enough to run away with his brother's wife (Vanessa Bauche).

In the second story, a model (Goya Toledo) recovers from the crash in an apartment bought for her by her lover (Alvaro Guerrero), unaware of the dangers that can arise in the confines of one's own home.

The final story tells of a former political terrorist (Emilio Echevarria, in this film's most intense and sympathetic performance) who witnesses the car crash as he lives the life of a street urchin, collecting stray dogs and regretting the life he left behind many years before. The omnipresence of dogs (and — as a metaphor for the devaluation of human life — dead and bloody fighting dogs) is another element that ties these three episodes together.

Structurally, "Amores Perros" bears comparison to "Pulp Fiction." But that's where the similarity ends. Tarantino's first features, impressive as they are, relied heavily on their smart dialogue, clever plotting and impressive ensemble performances.

Inarritu's film is a little different. From the heart-stopping car chase in the opening sequence, through the final moments, the film's visual style is as arresting as its jigsaw narrative.

Shot in sharply colorful, gritty digital frame, and so nimblly edited that even when a character disappears for 30 minutes the audience never loses track of him, the film soaks up the various strata of Mexico's sprawling metropolis. Although some might compare the tarnished look of the film with recent Hollywood representations of Mexico ("Traffic" and "The Mexican"), Inarritu and writer Guillermo Arriaga have a different agenda.

The film never offers up a murky world of unanswerables, whose only function appears to be making the lives of the politicians and citizens hell.

The picture's look is linked more to the moral fabric of the universe the film creates. From the people who meek out an existence on the streets, to the media celebrities who fill the hours of vacuous television programming, the grainy images tar everyone with the same brush. No one is truly bad or virtuous. Instead, each character is seen to cause suffering for, as well as suffer in the hands of, those around them.

Engaging as the whole film is, the first and third segments remain the most impressive, although some may find the dog-fighting scenes in the first act too much to stomach. While no animals were harmed in the making of the film, the tension created in these sequences, through the editing, snap cuts and blurring of images, makes for a series of convincing and horrific specialties, leaving one questioning who the true animals really are.

For a long time now it's been reasonable to argue that films need not relate to the real world at all, even if they can (which some people dispute). Steven Spielberg and Quentin Tarantino are just two of the many successful filmmakers who appear to have grown up in a bubble with nothing but movies for company. But the pendulum is swinging. More filmmakers seem willing to get their hands dirty, to play in the dangerous sandpit of reality. Like Paul Thomas Anderson's "Magnolia" and even Soderbergh's "Traffic," Inarritu's film looks and feels like the beginning of something new. Riveting, raw and not for the squeamish, "Amores Perros" is essential cinema.

Contact Matt Nania at mnania@nd.edu.

---
Super Bowl date moved

Terrorist attacks force game to Feb. 3

The Observer • SPORTS
Thursday, October 4, 2001

Associated Press

NEW YORK

The Super Bowl will be pushed back a week and played Feb. 3 in New Orleans, a move caused by the terrorist attacks.

The change will allow the National Football League to complete its season without altering its playoff format, but it puts the big game in the Big Easy during the crowded opening weekend of Mardi Gras.

The NFL switched its original date of Jan. 27 with the National Auto Dealers Association and paid the group $7.5 million to cover the costs of converting its convention.

The need to swap dates was caused when the NFL posted its second week of games after the Sept. 11 attacks.

The agreement means that the NFL’s regular season will end Jan. 5-6 with the games that should have been played in week two, Sept. 16-17.

The wild-card round will be played Jan. 12-13, the divisional playoff Jan. 20-21, and the conference championships Jan. 27-28.

After it put off the second week of the season, the NFL presented several scenarios for the playoffs.

One was to condense the field from 12 teams to eight and skip a week of playoff games. But the league had to force the NFL to replay the networks for the playoffs — and the networks wanted as much as $80 million.

Another was to condense the playoffs, with teams playing as many as three games in 10 days.

The third was to switch dates with the auto dealers, an agreement that the league took really seriously in two weeks of negotiations. The major problem was finding an especially switched hotel.

“We deeply appreciate the willingness of Phil Brady and to a great Super Bowl weekend in New Orleans. We trust that the NADA will enjoy a ‘super convention as well.’”

Tagliabue also praised Tom Benson, the New Orleans Saints owner, for his help.

Benson, a former auto dealer, said he talked to a lot of friends in the businesses in recent days and wasn’t sure a switch could be made.

“Even though he had to cooperate on this in all the little things that were involved,” he said. At first, everybody said it couldn’t be done.

Benson called it a good move for the city.

“There were a lot of problems with this thing going on,” Jauron said.

“And you can see it cost a little money, but it was worth it. It was worth it to the team and this community to get it done.”

In addition to the $7.5 million the NFL agreed to match NADA payments up to $500,000 for Sept. 11 relief efforts.

One problem yet to be determined is whether the NFL will be able to cope with the later date, which puts the game into the first weekend of Mardi Gras.

Sixteen parades are scheduled to roll down New Orleans streets on Saturday, Sunday and the two days before the game and the day of the contest.

Last year, when the game was in Tampa, city’s Gasparrilla snarled traffic Saturday afternoon and evening.

Parade organizers met with members of hotel industry, city leaders and police officials to discuss logistics problems the Super Bowl would create.

Along with the parades, they need to work out arrangements for the carnival balls that attract thousands of families and block large areas of town.

Police Commander Richard Pennington said his biggest concern would be two days before the game — New Orleans, and those that can be restricted. Arthur Hardy, publisher of an annual Mardi Gras guide and an authority on the celebration, said there is some discussion of pushing all the parades to the back end of the previous weekend.

BOOKER MAKING NAME FOR HIMSELF

Associated Press

Chicago Bears receiver Marty Booker sat down in the offseason and had a soul-searching conversation with a very important person.

Himself.

I don’t want to sound like I’m crazy, that I talk to myself. But we sit down and think out loud. I feel it. I say, ‘Hey, it’s time for me to try to start making a name for myself and not just be satisfied with being on the team.’ Booker said Wednesday.

So, start, although the Bears have played just two games in the first month, Booker is making himself known.

He’s caught nine passes in each of the first two games and has 17 catches for 252 yards and one touchdown on a screen pass against the Vikings.

He’s Matthews is sidelined with a muscle injury near his rib cage and is not expected to get back in time for the opener against the Falcons in Atlanta.

Orleans.

He said.

That’s not me. I knew I’d have to make sacrifices to help the team.

When the NFL season is over, the Bears will have a decision to make on Booker.

He’s Matthews is sidelined with a muscle injury near his rib cage and is not expected to get back in time for the opener against the Falcons in Atlanta.

Booker, who was bothered by a muscle injury near his rib cage and is not expected to get back in time for the opener against the Falcons in Atlanta.

He said.

‘That’s not me. I knew I’d have to make sacrifices to help the team.’

When the NFL season is over, the Bears will have a decision to make on Booker.

He’s Matthews is sidelined with a muscle injury near his rib cage and is not expected to get back in time for the opener against the Falcons in Atlanta.

Booker, who was bothered by a muscle injury near his rib cage and is not expected to get back in time for the opener against the Falcons in Atlanta.

He said.

‘That’s not me. I knew I’d have to make sacrifices to help the team.’
Ah, the beginning of another school year. No matter if this is your first semester here or your 20th, you’ve got to be excited about the start of a new year. It’s like a clean slate, an opportunity to leave behind past mistakes and press on with a renewed spirit. When I was in school I would always make little promises about studying more, actually reading the assignments, and never getting behind in my work. I usually failed at many of these, but I never failed to do it again the next year.

Whenever we start something new - a new month, season, job, or even day, we have it within us to believe that this time things will be different. That’s the great thing about beginnings: they can help us to get back on track.

At this new beginning, I invite you to make some resolutions of your own. What do you want to get out of this year academically, socially, spiritually? What can you do to realize these goals? How will this year be different from those in the past? Are you resolved to make some changes in your life in order to grow?

“I am resolved.” Five young men publicly stated these words a week and a half ago in the Basilica, just before they promised to God a life of poverty, celibacy, and obedience in the Congregation of Holy Cross. “I am resolved,” they said: to follow Christ wherever he leads me; to spread the Gospel to all nations; to fashion my life around prayer and devotion; to become more perfectly like Christ.

“I am resolved.” So said a man and a woman this weekend at their wedding before me and the church, promising to love and honor each other “until death do us part.”

A tall order to be sure! These people knew full well that there have been - and will be - times of mistakes and failures. They knew that what they were professing would be very difficult to live over time. Yet they did it anyway. And in their resolution and vows they have glorified God and renewed the hope of each of us.

You might be saying, “Good for them, but I’m not all ready for that type of commitment.” That may be to, but all of us are called to faithfulness to God who is perfectly faithful to us.

Again and again, it is our duty (and privilege) to ask for forgiveness and renew our vows to the Lord. What will you do? How will you grow? Are you resolved?

What kind of resolutions can you make to God today? Do you hope to grow in your relationship with Christ this year? How will you accomplish that? Maybe you want to promise to be involved in service or at a different or who don’t think like you do.

Do you hope to grow as a person of prayer? How can you do this? How about making a daily visit to the Grotto or a chapel or to a favorite spot on campus where you can be alone with God?

And so the year continues. Is this the year you try to figure out your vocation? What will you do to help this come to fruition? To call us to be successful; only faithful.”

-Mother Teresa

“God doesn’t call us to be successful; only faithful.”

■ Presiders
Basilica of the Sacred Heart

Sat. October 6 Mass 30 minutes after game Rev. Thomas W. Smith, c.s.c.
45 minutes after game (Stepan Center) Rev. David E. Schauer, c.s.c.
Sun. October 7 Mass 8:00 a.m. Rev. David E. Schauer, c.s.c.
10:00 a.m. Rev. David E. Schauer, c.s.c.
11:45 a.m. Rev. Thomas W. Smith, c.s.c.

■ Sunday’s Scripture Readings
1st Reading Hb 1:2 - 3, 2: 2 - 4
2nd Reading 2 Tm 1:6 - 8, 13 - 14
Gospel Lk 17:5 - 10
Winless Walsh remains undefeated with tie

By JOE HETTLER, MATT MOONEY, BRIAN LONG
Sport Writers

For the first time in interhall football history, a team may go undefeated during the regular season and still fall short of the playoffs. After tying Cavanaugh 0-0 Thursday, Walsh, at 1-0-4, faces this scenario.

"We're worried about (not making the playoffs), but all we can do is focus on our last game," said defensive back Karina Mayorga. "We definitely want to go to the playoffs, but right now we just want to win that next game.

Under normal circumstances RecSports determines the playoff teams by looking at winning percentages. But there is a situation in which winning percentages cannot fairly determine the best team, and that's when two teams are tied.

"When we're working on standings and there's an inordinate number of ties we again have to look at the system," said Jeff Walker, assistant director of intramurals. "The system essentially awards two points for a win and one point for a tie." When the system is applied to this year's standings and Walsh ties its last game, the Wild Women could be eliminated with only seven points because Cavanaugh, McGlinn, Howard and Farley will each have more than seven points if they win one or two more games. The top four teams from each division move on to the postseason.

Because of this circumstance, Walsh gets a win next week to assure a playoff spot. According to Mayorga, "the women will improve their red zone offense if they hope to be victorious."

"When crunch time we need to get into the endzone," said Madya. "Our offensive line is down really far and we just don't convert." Walsh, at 2-1-1, also needs a win next week to keep their playoff aspirations alive when they face Howard. Co-captain Mandy Reimer hopes that the team will be ready to rebound after a tough night Tuesday.

"I don't think we could get a first down running all day," said Reimer. "They held us three straight times so we went to passing in the second half, but their pass defense proved to be just as good as their run defense." Walsh has been unable to score their conference opponents.

"The defense has just been doing the same thing all year. We may give up some short ones, but when it comes down to crunch time, these girls step up," said Dillenburger.

The only scoring opportunity for the Chaos offense came in the third quarter when Reimer connected on a 35-yard pass that would have put the ball at the 1-yard line. The play was overturned when Kabul's Dika, holding call near the line of scrimmage. Two plays later the Chaos were forced to punt.

Lewis 14, Howard 7

In a battle for conference supremacy, both the Howard Ducks and Lewis Chicks took to the air.

The two quarterbacks, Erin Nasrallah and Julie Veselik, combined to throw on 49 of 65 of the offensive plays. When the smoke and feathers cleared, Nasrallah and the Chicks (4-1) remain undefeated, winning 14-7 over Veselik's Ducks (2-2).

As expected, the game turned out to be a battle between the two quarterbacks as Nasrallah completed 13 of 20 passes for two touchdowns and also tallying six carries. Using a variety of two, three, and four wide receivers, Nasrallah had the ball around, completing passes to six different receivers. The safety position in the pocket made a big difference.

"I had great protection from the O-line and the receivers made the key catches. If we can continue to do that, we're going to be unstoppable," said Veselik's standard. Equally impressive. She connected on 16 of 29 passing attempts for one touchdown and also tallying six carries. However, Veselik's starting running back, Karina Mayorga, was unable to move the ball fairly easily. However, once inside Chick territory, the offense stalled. Howard turned the ball over four times in Lewis territory, twice on downs and twice on interceptions near the goal line.

"We marched down the field and just didn't finish," said Howard captain Katie Cawley. "We need to have the confidence that we can get the touchdown and finish off the play."

The Lewis defense plays a big part in forcing Howard's turnovers. The Chick defensive line consistently made its way to Veselik forcing her to either scramble out of the pocket and throw on the run or carry it herself.

"A rush gave her something to think about to know that she had to at least stand there and look at every option," said Lewis captain Caitlin Murray. "We did our job." While Veselik did find her elusiveness, defensive pressure often had her throwing into heavy coverage. But it finally caught up with her at a most inopportune time.

With time winding down and trailing 14-7, Howard was driving. Having started on its own 15, they moved the ball 55 yards. On first and goal, Veselik again scrambled out of the pocket looking for a receiver. Her pass was picked off by Karina Mayorga said that communication played a big part on defense.

"(Our) Inside linebacker Amber (Azevedo) was talking to me (during the play). That's the only reason I was where I was supposed to be." The Chicks were fortunate to have their defense bail them out.

After their first touchdown to cut the Howard lead to 7-6, Lewis opted to go for a two-point conversion instead of one. When the attempt failed, Lewis still trailed.

"I wanted to go for the jugular early. It was a big game for us," said Lewis head coach Blake Kirkman. "The way our offense has been playing all year long, I knew we'd figure out a way to get it into the end zone (again)."

McGlinn 28, Farley 7

The McGlinn Shamrocks are on a streak. And this time it's a winning streak. After pulling out their first victory in four long seasons last week, the Shamrocks won again Tuesday night, defeating Farley Hall 28-6 in front of a large group of fans.

Despite the lopsided score, Farley players were smiling after they scored their first points of the season.

"This loss definitely makes it tougher to get in the playoffs. We know we're going to have to work that much harder," said Katie Cawley.

Katie Cawley
Howard captain

Walker, assistant director of intramurals.

"If we want to go to the playoffs, but..."
MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL

Sosa slams another one

Associated Press

Sammy Sosa hit his 61st home run, and Jon Lieber became the Chicago Cubs' first 20-game winner in nine years as the Cubs beat the Cincinnati Reds 13-7 Wednesday.

Sosa's three-run shot off Chris Stults in the bottom of the seventh inning came less than 24 hours after he became the first player in major league history with three 60-homer seasons.

Sosa also drove in another run for the Cubs, who beat the Reds for the 12th time this season, to reach a league-high 154 RBI.

Corky Miller homered twice, and Ken Griffey Jr. and Adam Dunn had solo home runs for the Reds. Scott Macrae got his 61st home run.

But Lieber, a first-time All-Star this year, has developed into one of the NL's better pitchers. He won 19 games in 1998, saved 27 games.

The fans continued to yell and clap until Sosa popped his head out of the dugout for a curtain call. Sosa finished 2-0-for-4 with a walk.

It was a big day all around for the Cubs, as Lieber (20-6) got his 20th win on his first try. The Cubs have had only four 20-game winners since 1972, when Ferguson Jenkins finished his string of six. 20-win seasons.

And since Greg Maddux did it in 1992, the only other pitcher to come close was Kevin Tapani, who won 19 games in 1998.

But Lieber, a first-time All-Star this year, has developed into one of the NL's better pitchers. He has hit the Reds earlier this season, and lost back-to-back decisions only once.

He didn't have his best stuff against the Reds, allowing five runs and eight hits in six innings. But he was still sharp enough, striking out five and walking only one.

He got into some early trouble, thanks to some sloppy fielding. Dunn led off the second inning with a single down the first-base line that took Matt Stairs off the bag.

First base umpire Laz Diaz ruled the ball fair, and Stairs chased it down.

He threw to Lieber, who was covering first for what should have been the first out, but the pitcher didn't get to the bag in time.

Three batters later, Miller put Lieber's 1-0 pitch into the center-field basket for a three-run homer that gave Cincinnati a 3-0 lead.

Lieber retired the next eight batters. Cincinnati's next hit was in the fifth. Corey Patterson got his second home run, a solo shot that went over the left-field fence and bounced down Waveland Avenue. Griffey added an RBI double as the Reds took a 5-3 lead.

But the Cubs kept giving Lieber run support. They had a four-run inning in the fifth and added five more in the seventh.

In the fifth, Corey Patterson led off with a double that hit first base and popped up. Robin Jennings got the ball, but Patterson beat him to the bag for a single.

Acosta resigns under pressure

CHICAGO — Chicago Cubs pitching coach Oscar Acosta, who helped turn around one of the NL's worst pitching staffs, resigned under pressure Wednesday amid personality conflicts with manager Don Baylor.

Baylor had been expected to fire Acosta at the end of the season, but he resigned instead, effective immediately.

"It was a big day all around for the Cubs, as Lieber (20-6) got his 20th win on his first try. The Cubs have had only four 20-game winners since 1972, when Ferguson Jenkins finished his string of six, 20-win seasons.

And since Greg Maddux did it in 1992, the only other pitcher to come close was Kevin Tapani, who won 19 games in 1998.

But Lieber, a first-time All-Star this year, has developed into one of the NL's better pitchers. He won 19 games in 1998, saved 27 games.

The fans continued to yell and clap until Sosa popped his head out of the dugout for a curtain call. Sosa finished 2-0-for-4 with a walk.

It was a big day all around for the Cubs, as Lieber (20-6) got his 20th win on his first try. The Cubs have had only four 20-game winners since 1972, when Ferguson Jenkins finished his string of six, 20-win seasons.

And since Greg Maddux did it in 1992, the only other pitcher to come close was Kevin Tapani, who won 19 games in 1998.

But Lieber, a first-time All-Star this year, has developed into one of the NL's better pitchers. He won 19 games in 1998, saved 27 games.

The fans continued to yell and clap until Sosa popped his head out of the dugout for a curtain call. Sosa finished 2-0-for-4 with a walk.

It was a big day all around for the Cubs, as Lieber (20-6) got his 20th win on his first try. The Cubs have had only four 20-game winners since 1972, when Ferguson Jenkins finished his string of six, 20-win seasons.

And since Greg Maddux did it in 1992, the only other pitcher to come close was Kevin Tapani, who won 19 games in 1998.

But Lieber, a first-time All-Star this year, has developed into one of the NL's better pitchers. He won 19 games in 1998, saved 27 games.

The fans continued to yell and clap until Sosa popped his head out of the dugout for a curtain call. Sosa finished 2-0-for-4 with a walk.

It was a big day all around for the Cubs, as Lieber (20-6) got his 20th win on his first try. The Cubs have had only four 20-game winners since 1972, when Ferguson Jenkins finished his string of six, 20-win seasons.

And since Greg Maddux did it in 1992, the only other pitcher to come close was Kevin Tapani, who won 19 games in 1998.

But Lieber, a first-time All-Star this year, has developed into one of the NL's better pitchers. He won 19 games in 1998, saved 27 games.
Babes looking to chase Phoxes into their hole

By KEN CHAMPA and PHIL KOESTERER

Tonight promises to be a battle between two teams that could use a win. The Pangborn Phoxes (0-3) and the Babes of Breen Phillips (1-1-1) will both be looking to better their records and come home victorious.

"We definitely are hoping to win every game left this season," said Pangborn captain Katrina Paulson.

"The Phoxes, who haven't had much success in their play this season, are counting on experience to lead them and underclassmen for talent."

"There's a lot of great upperclassmen on the team, they've made the season a great experience," said freshman quarterback Charlotte Troups.

Troups, along with sophomores Tia Vonti have been among the many contributing underclassmen for the Phoxes this season.

But the contributions of the younger Phox players wouldn't have been possible if it weren't for a great deal of leadership and guidance by Pangborn's senior captains Nicole Tutin and Paulson.

"The seniors are really great role models, the seniors have been really supportive all year," said Troups who has excelled this season thanks to the confidence she has gotten from the team leaders. The Phoxes are counting on her and on their offense. "Our passing can win our games for us," Paulson said.

Standing in their way is an aggressive Breen-Phillips defense that has allowed a mere six points in the last two games. "I would put our defense against anyone's," said senior quarterback and captain Katie McFarland.

"We definitely rely on our defense to win games, it's been great all year," said fellow captain Jenny Wahosky.

BP's offense has had to battle through the loss of standout sophomore Kelly Deckelman to injury, but this doesn't worry the Babes veteran quarterback. "We lost Deckelman who was a great weapon, but we have been diversifying a lot more," McFarland said.

BP will also look to solid senior leadership.

"We went through a tough week, but we are definitely ready to play," said a confident McFarland.

Pasquerilla East, Pasquerilla West

The Pyro of Pasquerilla East will battle the Purple Weasels of Pasquerilla West for bragging rights on the Mud Quad tonight at 8:00 p.m. on West Riehle Field.

"The team will vie for a trophy called the Apple Cup in a game collectively referred to as "The Civil War." Fierce competition is expected from both sides.

The Pyro will be seeking to make up for their past two losses this season, to Welsh and Lyons respectively.

"We know that Welsh Fam was a really good team, but losing to Lyons was a wake-up call," said PE team captain Lindsay Terifay.

"We've been working really hard in practice, because we know that we need to win to get in [the playoffs]."

PE's offensive attack will be hampered by the loss of standout freshman receiver Kristin Marcuccilli to a bruised rib in the loss to Lyons.

Terifay, who is also the team's quarterback, will be forced to look to Judy Moran and the rest of the receiving corps to put points on the board. PE defensive coach Jim Eckert will look to his team's defense to help jump-start the offense.

"We're a defensive-minded team," said Eckert. "We're going to keep them inside their own 20 yard line and make it a short field for the offense."

The PE defense will have to contend with a run-and-shoot style offensive assault from PW.

"We started the season slowly on offense," said PW coach Mike Canfield, "but because we are committed to a passing game much like that of the Houston Oilers teams of the early '90s, our offense is modeled after, we have been able to score points."

The Purple Weasels have honed their aggressive style.

"We're improving with every game and learning from our mistakes," said PW quarterback Leslie Schmidt.

"Not sure if we've really learned anything [against our defense]," said Canfield. "We have a lot of team speed."

Welsh, Badin

Defense will dominate tonight as the Welsh Family Whirlwinds will square off against the Badin Bullfrogs at 8 p.m. on West Riehle Field. Most teams have been intimidated about facing a Welsh defense that has allowed only one touchdown in four games.

Leading players Emily Dees and Katie "Worm" Sprinz. Welsh is 4-0, with two games remaining until the playoffs.

"Our defense is holding the team together, if other teams don't score, they can't win," said Welsh captain Vanessa Lichon.

"We like to keep things simple," said Welsh defensive coach Derek Horner. "Oftentimes teams run predictable offenses, so all the credit goes to the girls. The line is good at pressuring the quarterback and the secondary provides good coverage."

Challenging the Whirlwinds' formidable defense will be Bullfrogs quarterback Erin Zachary, described by her coach Anthony Picher as the most talented Badin passer in several years.

"In the first game, our offense was out of sync," said Picher. "But we did really well in the last two games. We need to take care of problems scoring in [the red zone]."

It will be up to Welsh's freshman quarterback Lauren Hocek to bring the offensive firepower she showed in her team's 18-0 defeat of Pasquerilla West last Sunday.

"We've been putting in new offensive plays, and working on the timing of the cuts," said Hocek. Badin is no slouch defensively, however.

The Bullfrogs have allowed only two touchdowns in three games, to reach a 3-1-1 record.

"Both of the touchdowns came on big plays where we made mistakes," said Picher. "No offense has moved the ball really well against us."

"That defensive strength is due in part to seniors Molly Norton, Beth Rimkus, and Beth Sheehan, all three-year starters."

"Add to that mix Katie Bears, a heads-up player who knows the defensive scheme inside and out, and the result is a defense that should prove a worthy opponent for the Whirlwinds."

"We're feeling pretty good," said Picher. "We're not terrified of them."

Contact Ken Champa at kchamp@nd.edu and Phil Koesterer at pokester@nd.edu

The Observer • SPORTS

Thursday, October 4, 2001
Belles continued from page 20

loss. Despite the uneven score, the Belles were not pleased with their play. "Overall this was not a very good game, but after they scored we picked it up a little bit," Muth said. "In the second half, we settled down and played our game."

The Belles' slow start may have been due, in part, to the fact that Wednesday's match was the first away game the team had played in over a month. "It took us awhile to get used to not playing on our field," said head coach Bobby Johnston.

In the next few weeks, however, the Belles will become accustomed to playing on the road. Five of their next seven games will be away from home. With their first away MIAA game under their belt, the Belles do not believe that playing away should cause any more problems for them and are looking forward to their next few away games.

"I think playing away made it a little bit harder but it was exciting to have a change of scenery," Taylor said.

The Belles next change of scenery will come this Saturday against Hope College at noon. "We need to work on our intensity and focus and get ready for Hope on Saturday," Taylor said. "That will be a really good game."

Contact Lindsay Mollan at moll1361@saintmarys.edu.

Irish continued from page 20

drive gets the more starting screwing up (missed assignment) worse."

When one guy misses an assignment, the whole line looks bad and the entire play breaks down. The line is only as strong as its weakest link. "We are just missing one guy," center Jeff Faine said. "If one line in the chain isn’t there, you don’t have a chain."

After the Nebraska game, Vollers moved from his natural tackle position to play guard. He played guard in place of Sean Milligan for two games while Brennan Curtin started at tackle. That experiment failed so Vollers is moving back to tackle this week.

"I think we made a decent tackle into a mediocre guard," Rogers said. "We’ve got him back where he is more comfortable and got Milligan back where he is more comfortable."

With everyone back at their natural positions, the line hopes to cut down on the missed assignments. Vollers insists that the players know the assignments on paper but aren’t executing them in games.

"It’s not like we don’t know the defenses," he said. "You could sit us down and quiz us on it and we’d all score 100 percent. But as soon as we get on the field, we aren’t performing."

Youth and inexperience are the biggest reasons for the offensive lines struggles, according to Rogers. Vollers is the only starting offensive lineman in his last year of eligibility. Three of the other players are either freshman or sophomore eligibility wise and Jordan Black is a red shirt junior.

Combine that ineffectiveness with the departure of fifth-year seniors Mike Gaardy and Jim Jones to the NFL this year and the Irish have an extremely green offensive line.

But Rogers said that is no excuse for their ineffectiveness. "Any of that is rationalization at this point in time," he said. "You can talk about the seniors we lost and the leadership we lost but that is all part of rationalization of why things aren’t going well."

Contact Mike Connolly atconnolly.28@nd.edu.

The University of St. Thomas School of Law is offering up to 40 full-tuition scholarships to students interested in a faith-based approach to personal and professional ethics, immersion in real world law practice through a unique, three-year mentor program, a rigorous academic challenge, and dedication to public service.

Phone: (800) 328-6819 (ext. 2-4895)
E-mail: lawschool@stthomas.edu
Web: www.stthomas.edu/lawschool

Brey said he expected him to sit out the first two games. The Irish didn’t have a choice as to which two games Humphrey was suspended, said Brey.

Brey made it clear that Humphrey would start against International Select and EA Sports All-Stars in Notre Dame’s two exhibition games and, after sitting out games against New Hampshire and Cornell, would be back in the starting lineup against Hawaii Pacific.

"I’m disappointed right now, but I’ll still be on the bench supporting my teammates," Humphrey said.

Contact Andrew Soukup at soukup@nd.edu.

The Belles next change of scenery will come this Saturday against Hope College at noon. "We need to work on our intensity and focus and get ready for Hope on Saturday," Taylor said. "That will be a really good game."

Broadway Theatre League Presents the New Musical...

Vero Italiano
Candlers' Taverns
Downtown South Bend
Phone: (800) 328-6819 (ext. 2-4895)
E-mail: lawschool@stthomas.edu
Web: www.stthomas.edu/lawschool

NCAA continued from page 20

on.

Brey said that in situations like Humphrey’s, the NCAA typically suspends the player one game for every summer league game played. Since Humphrey played two games, he typically suspends the player one game for every summer league game played.

Humphrey played two.

Brey made it clear that Humphrey would start against International Select and EA Sports All-Stars in Notre Dame’s two exhibition games and, after sitting out games against New Hampshire and Cornell, would be back in the starting lineup against Hawaii Pacific.

"I’m disappointed right now, but I’ll still be on the bench supporting my teammates," Humphrey said.

Contact Andrew Soukup at soukup@nd.edu.

The Belles next change of scenery will come this Saturday against Hope College at noon. "We need to work on our intensity and focus and get ready for Hope on Saturday," Taylor said. "That will be a really good game."

Contact Lindsay Mollan at moll1361@saintmarys.edu.

The Belles next change of scenery will come this Saturday against Hope College at noon. "We need to work on our intensity and focus and get ready for Hope on Saturday," Taylor said. "That will be a really good game."

Contact Lindsay Mollan at moll1361@saintmarys.edu.
SMC VOLLEYBALL

Shevik shines in Belles 3-0 loss to Britons

By KATIE MCVOY
Associate Sports Editor

Freshman Alison Shevik was the bright spot in a Saint Mary's league loss Wednesday night. As the Belles headed into the second half of their season, they are looking for a win, but couldn't quite make the connection.

The Britons of Albion (13-7, 4-4 MIAA) shut down the Belles (2-12, 1-7 MIAA) in three games, defeating them 30-25, 30-20, 30-22.

"There were bright spots," head coach Julie Schroeder-Biek said. "We just didn't pull together."

Shevik, however, did pull it together. Shevik totalled 21 digs on the evening. The seven dig per game average crushed her previous average of two digs per game.

"Alison Shevik did really well all around," Schroeder-Biek said. "She had wonderful defense ... averaging seven [digs] a game which is national caliber."

Shevik also added seven kills, leading the Belles offense. Junior Elizabeth Albert also had seven kills on the evening.

Communication continued to be a problem for the Belles. After coming off of a win against Rochester on Saturday, Saint Mary's was hoping communication would improve. Several drills during practice were aimed at improving communication and although it improved, it just wasn't up to par.

"Communication wasn't that bad but it wasn't as good as it needed to be," Schroeder-Biek said. "We made a step up but we need to work harder on it."

Albion middle-hitter Michelle Hind caused Saint Mary's a lot of trouble. The senior racked up 14 kills and three block assists. Defensively the Belles just couldn't get past her.

"They had a real big middle blocker and [our] setters needed to make a couple of better choices on getting around her," Schroeder-Biek said.

The quick offense Saint Mary's has been working on perfecting tried to work its way to a lead, but the rallies didn't take the Belles quite far enough. In all three games, Saint Mary's had long scoring runs but fell short in the end.

"We had a couple of really good rallies where they sent us scrambling and we managed to pull things together," Schroeder-Biek said.

Following Wednesday's loss, the Belles will be looking to improve on their offense before they face off against Calvin at home on Friday.

"(The offense) worked at first," Schroeder-Biek said. "... We had a couple of times we struggled with passing. Whenever we get a good pass we ran a defense offense."

Contact Katie McVoy at mcvo5695@saintmarys.edu

ND AFTER FIVE

Thursday, Oct. 4

7:00 p.m. ND Cinema, Amores Perros. Hesburgh Library Auditorium*
7:30 p.m. Lecture, "Tocqueville on Aristocracy in America," by Ralph Lerner, DeBartolo 117
8:30 p.m. - 10:30 p.m. Drop In Lacrosse, Rolfs Sports Rec. Ctr.
8:30 p.m. - Midnight ND Express Pool Room open, free billiards, LaFortune Student Center
9:00 p.m. Acoustic Cafe, LaFortune Student Center Huddle
10:00 p.m. Movies: Shrek and Toy Story, DeBartolo 101 and 155*

Friday, Oct. 5

5:00 p.m. ND Men's Cross Country Invitational at ND Golf Course. Women's invitational at 4:15 p.m.
6:30 p.m. ND Men's and Women's Swimming Relays, Rolfs Aquatic Center
6:30 p.m. Football Pep Rally, Joyce Center Arena (doors at 5:30).

7:00 p.m. - 10:00 p.m. Drop In Badminton, Rolfs Sport Rec. Ctr.
7:00 p.m. Men's Hockey vs. Univ. of Tomato (Exhibition), Joyce Center Fieldhouse
7:30 p.m. Movies: Shrek and Toy Story, DeBartolo 101 and 155*
7:30 p.m. ND Men's Soccer vs. Georgetown, Alumni Field
8:00 p.m. 807 Radio Lounge, Coleman Morse Center
8:30 p.m. - Midnight ND Express Pool Room open, free billiards, LaFortune Student Center
9:00 p.m. Crafting Corner: Make your own Greeting Cards, Dooley Room, LaFortune Student Center
9:00 p.m. Hypnotist Tom DeLuca, Stepan Center*
9:00 p.m. - 1:00 a.m. Human Board Games (i.e., Twister) and regular board games, Fisher Hall

Friday, Oct. 5

10:00 p.m. Movies: Shrek and Toy Story, DeBartolo 101 and 155*
11:00 p.m. Tournament Fridays, Bingo, LaFortune Student Center Notre Dame Room

Saturday, Oct. 6

7:30 p.m. Movies: Shrek and Toy Story, DeBartolo 101 and 155*
10:00 p.m. - 1:00 a.m Open Karaoke in the Huddle, LaFortune Student Center
10:00 p.m. Movies: Shrek and Toy Story, DeBartolo 101 and 155*
10:00 p.m. - 1:30 a.m. 80's Dance, LaFortune Student Center Ballroom

This ad is published by the Student Activities Office. Programs subject to change without notice.
* All programs are free to ND students unless marked by an *.

FOR MORE INFORMATION, VISIT: www.nd.edu/~sao/
Men’s Basketball

NCAA suspends Humphrey

Forward will miss two games after violating summer league rules

By ANDREW SOUKUP

Notre Dame captain Ryan Humphrey was suspended for the first two regular season games after violating an NCAA rule prohibiting playing in summer games. Notre Dame basketball officials announced Wednesday.

Humphrey, who will miss the New Hampshire and Cornell games, received the suspension after Notre Dame reported that he competed in two summer games in a California league sanctioned by the NCAA. According to NCAA rules, a player may only compete in one summer league and that league must be within 100 miles of his house or school.

“Just really misinterpreted the summer league rules,” said Humphrey, who lives in Tulsa, Okla. “I was an honest mistake... but I forgot about the 100 mile radius rule.”

“I think he was looking for competition and he just really misinterpreted the summer league rule,” said Notre Dame men’s basketball coach Mike Brey.

Humphrey said he initially didn’t think he had made a mistake by playing in Los Angeles. But when he came back to campus, several of his teammates pointed out the rule.

“I came back this summer and I was talking to some of my teammates and they mentioned the 100 mile radius,” he said. “I checked with coach and checked with the NCAA and found out I made a mistake.”

Brey said the Irish reported the violation in August, but the NCAA’s decision was only announced Wednesday.

The summer leagues are a series of pickup games sanctioned by the NCAA, in order to compete in one, the athlete only needs to be a college player. No sign-up is necessary.

In Humphrey’s case, he was sitting in a gym watching one game when a couple of the players began goading him.

‘One guy said, ‘I bet you can’t check this guy’ and, you know my competitive fires start going, I said ‘I’ll show you I can check him,’ Humphrey said. ‘I made a mistake, and I want to move forward.’

See NCAA/page 17

Football

Offensive line doesn’t get job done

By MIKE CONNOLLY

Coaches can interchange quarterbacks, running backs and even receivers looking for some sort of spark, some sort of extra advantage. But on the offensive line, cohesion and experience are key, and the Irish are still searching for both this season.

“We aren’t getting the production we expect from anyone right now,” Irish offensive coordinator Kevin Rogers said. “There are certain guys on the line that are playing well but that is the one group where you cannot replace and individual. They have to be cohesive. They have to be in sync with everyone else.”

That lack of cohesion led to six sacks and just 70 net rushing yards Saturday against Akron. To put all the offense’s problems on the offensive line is unfair, according to offensive line coach Dave Borbely. But there have been numerous missed blocks in this early season.

“It’s not missed assignments as it’s been missed blocks and not executing a block,” Borbely said. “We’ve gotten hats on hats and hats on the right hats but we have to execute better.”

The execution gets worse as the drives get longer, according to senior Kurt Vobiers.

“We are getting tired during the game and not keeping our heads up and seeing the blitses,” Vobiers said. “We just have to get used to playing on the eighth or ninth play of the drive. It seems the later it is.”

See IRISH/page 17

Soccer

SMC Soccer

Belles get MIAA victory

By WRITER

Things just keep getting better for the Saint Mary’s soccer team.

Wednesday the Belles claimed a 4-1 victory over the Adrian Bulldogs marking the fourth win for the Belles in their last five games and their first conference win. Their overall record is 4-6.

Despite the three point margin of victory, the win did not come easily for Belles.

Once again the weather made its presence known to a team that has faced cold, wet conditions for a majority of their games.

In addition, Saint Mary’s had to come from behind.

The game began with an early goal from Adrian’s Beth Amman on an assist from Jenny Hornak. Amman was named offensive player of the week for the first week of the season. That goal, however, was the only one the Bulldogs would have for the duration of the game.

“We just made a mistake and they capitalized on it,” said junior Heather Muth, who scored the Belles first goal of the game at 17-59.

Muth’s goal, which was assisted by freshman Jennifer Concanon, was followed by a goal from freshman Molly McCavit, leaving the score at 2-1 at halftime.

The Belles dominated the second half, scoring two more goals. The third goal for the Belles came at 69:24, and was scored by Concanon, who was named MIAA offensive player of the week for the week ending this past Wednesday. Six minutes later, Belles junior Lynn Taylor scored her first goal of the season off of a corner kick and sealed the Bulldogs fate.

The dominant Saint Mary’s defense held Adrian to only thirty shots on goal, making things easy for freshman goalie Maureen MacDonald. Adrian goalie would have faced a total of 27 shots on goal during the week with this score.

The dominant Saint Mary’s defense helped Adrian too only thirty shots on goal, making things easy for freshman goalie Maureen MacDonald. Adrian goalie would have faced a total of 27 shots on goal during the week with this score.

See SMC Soccer, page 16

BYLINE TIDE

The Belles dominated the second half, scoring two more goals. The third goal for the Belles came at 69:24, and was scored by Concanon, who was named MIAA offensive player of the week for the week ending this past Wednesday. Six minutes later, Belles junior Lynn Taylor scored her first goal of the season off of a corner kick and sealed the Bulldogs fate.

The dominant Saint Mary’s defense held Adrian too only thirty shots on goal, making things easy for freshman goalie Maureen MacDonald. Adrian goalie would have faced a total of 27 shots on goal during the week with this score.

But on the offensive line, cohesion and experience are key, and the Irish are still searching for both this season.

“We aren’t getting the production we expect from anyone right now,” Irish offensive coordinator Kevin Rogers said. “There are certain guys on the line that are playing well but that is the one group where you cannot replace and individual. They have to be cohesive. They have to be in sync with everyone else.”

That lack of cohesion led to six sacks and just 70 net rushing yards Saturday against Akron. To put all the offense’s problems on the offensive line is unfair, according to offensive line coach Dave Borbely. But there have been numerous missed blocks in this early season.

“It’s not missed assignments as it’s been missed blocks and not executing a block,” Borbely said. “We’ve gotten hats on hats and hats on the right hats but we have to execute better.”

The execution gets worse as the drives get longer, according to senior Kurt Vobiers.

“We are getting tired during the game and not keeping our heads up and seeing the blitses,” Vobiers said. “We just have to get used to playing on the eighth or ninth play of the drive. It seems the later it is.”

See IRISH/page 17

Soccer

SMC Soccer

Belles get MIAA victory

By WRITER

Things just keep getting better for the Saint Mary’s soccer team.

Wednesday the Belles claimed a 4-1 victory over the Adrian Bulldogs marking the fourth win for the Belles in their last five games and their first conference win. Their overall record is 4-6.

Despite the three point margin of victory, the win did not come easily for Belles.

Once again the weather made its presence known to a team that has faced cold, wet conditions for a majority of their games.

In addition, Saint Mary’s had to come from behind.

The game began with an early goal from Adrian’s Beth Amman on an assist from Jenny Hornak. Amman was named offensive player of the week for the first week of the season. That goal, however, was the only one the Bulldogs would have for the duration of the game.

“We just made a mistake and they capitalized on it,” said junior Heather Muth, who scored the Belles first goal of the game at 17-59.

Muth’s goal, which was assisted by freshman Jennifer Concanon, was followed by a goal from freshman Molly McCavit, leaving the score at 2-1 at halftime.

The Belles dominated the second half, scoring two more goals. The third goal for the Belles came at 69:24, and was scored by Concanon, who was named MIAA offensive player of the week for the week ending this past Wednesday. Six minutes later, Belles junior Lynn Taylor scored her first goal of the season off of a corner kick and sealed the Bulldogs fate.

The dominant Saint Mary’s defense held Adrian too only thirty shots on goal, making things easy for freshman goalie Maureen MacDonald. Adrian goalie would have faced a total of 27 shots on goal during the week with this score.