WASHINGTON

The U.S.-led bombing campaign in Afghanistan, scaled back on Monday in a second round of air- and sea-launched attacks, has been at least modestly successful against its first set of targets, senior Pentagon officials said Monday.

Five long-range bombers — a pair of B-2 stealth bombers flying from Whiteman Air Force Base, Mo., and three B-1B's from the Indian Ocean Island of Diego Garce — joined 10 strike planes launched from aircraft carriers in the Arabian Sea in sending bombs and missiles at air defense and other military targets across Afghanistan.

The Pentagon initially said 10 bombers were involved but it later corrected the number to four.

Two U.S. Navy ships, the destroyers USS John Paul Jones and USS McFaul, and one submarine launched a total of 15 Tomahawk cruise missiles.

In Sunday's opening assault, 15 bombers and 25 carrier-based strike aircraft participated in five successful, although it was less 10 Tomahawks from the Indian Ocean system transparent. A British submarine was among the vessels that fired 50 cruise missiles in Sunday's attacks but none were involved Monday, U.S. officials said.

Five early indications were that strikes against air defense sites and airfields were at least partially successful, although it was less clear in the case of "leadership targets" — leaders of both the al-Qaida terrorist network and the Taliban militia that harbors the terrorists. security on Campus says allowing Rego to return will undermine University judicial system

By MYRA McGRIFF
Saint Mary's Editor

The watch dog organization Security on Campus responded to the University's indecision in upholding former Notre Dame tailback Cooper Rego's alleged campus ban in a letter addressed to University President Father Edward Malloy on Monday. The organization's campus security spokesperson S. Daniel Carter called for Notre Dame to uphold Rego's alleged expulsion.

Rego was a member of the Irish football team in 1997 before being dismissed for sexual assault and banned from campus in 1998, according to sexual victim and 2001 Notre Dame graduate Kori Feinivoi. The ban was confirmed in an e-mail from a senior Residence Life official obtained by The Observer. Rego is scheduled to return to campus Saturday as a member of the West Virginia football team. Carter's concern with their own two levels. One concern is that the disciplinary decision to ban was made by Notre Dame. If the University does not enforce its own decision, then what faith will other sexual victims have in the future. The credibility of Notre Dame's judicial process is in question by the delay in response as well as if Notre Dame does not uphold its own decision. "Our main concern is that a student should be able to rely on the schools assurance that the accused has been banned. The victim should be able to rely on what they are told," Carter said.

Carter's other concern and heart of Monday's letter rest in Notre Dame's ability to stay in compliance with the Jean Clery Act's "Campus sexual Assault Victims' Bill of Rights." The act outlines that schools must inform, "the accuser and the accused must be informed of the outcome of any institutional disciplinary proceeding in which a student is alleged a sex offense...with respect to the alleged sex offense and any sanction that is imposed against the accused."

Since the parties have been notified, it is now up Notre Dame to recognize that sanction, according to Carter.
Bush earns respect

It's always hard to put things in perspective, but after the events of Sept. 11, at least now we know how.

Just think where we stood as a nation just 10 short months ago. We, as a nation, stood divided as to who we wanted to run our country.

Bickering and partisan complaining became commonplace as it took over a month to official­ly declare George W. Bush as the 43rd President of the United States.

Every day, we would hear on the news about some effort to get bal­lots recounted or to prevent them from getting recount­ed.

Doesn't it all seem so petty now?

I firmly believe that where we stand as a nation today, Oct. 9, 2000, is significantly above and beyond where we stood just a month ago.

Of course, it helps to add a little perspective.

As I was writing this column, I turned on the radio and listened to remarks made by Michael Bloomberg, the mayor of New York City.

Bloomberg was speaking about the power of the American people and the importance of the vote.

He said, "While we may not have won this election, we have won a powerful force, whether we know it or not. We (and) our children will feel the power and strength of the American people."
Freshmen focus on fundraising

By MEGHANNE DOWNES

The Freshman Class Council is focusing its time on creating a class T-shirt and sponsoring a concession stand to raise money for future activities for the class of 2005. The 27 representatives are hoping the theme of the T-shirt will promote class unity and are looking to freshman class members for design ideas. The deadline for design submissions to hall representatives will be Oct. 29.

At the Navy football game, the council will be selling refreshments in front of Alumni circle. The council will be selling fundraiser, concession at concession apparel items until shirts are sold. Remaining proceeds to hall representatives will be donated.

"It is unfortunate that we cannot sell our own T-shirts at our concession stand until the remaining 25,000 "The Shirt" T-shirts are sold," Walsh Hall representative Andrea Brault said. "Our current option is to sell shirts through the hall representatives."

The council intends to use its combined creativity to "push the envelope," according to Aberger. Several representatives emphasized that the council needs to stay true to its idea of service and still promote its cause. The council is also sponsoring a dance for underclassmen at Dame midterms. It's guaranteed to be better than the Senior-Alumni Bar and is looking to freshman for future activities for the class of 2005.

Andrew Hoyt said. "We want to take advantage of every opportunity here in order to get into the spirit of Notre Dame and we do not want to waste any time that could be used to bring people together and to the m impersonal," Lyons Hall representative Rozann Carter said.

"We have some incredibly passionate people who are on the council this year," Abramson said. "I am excited to see us work together to bring our ideas to the forefront and to give them the opportunity to be a productive year," Zahm Hall representative Andrew Hoyt said.

Belles take on a marathon

By ALLISON ROCHE

Saint Mary's student Alissa Blair started running only a year ago. Just 18 weeks ago she began marathon training with fellow Saint Mary's student Jennifer Wagner. And on Sunday, Blair and Wagner completed the 26.2 miles of the Chicago Marathon with respective times of 3:38:05 and 3:31:05. Blair finished comfortably within her goal time of three and a half to four hours. Wagner is qualifying for April's Boston Marathon. Though excited by the results of her first marathon, Blair is not sure if she is ready to start thinking about a second.

"I think I might just do it, but we'll see," Blair said. Wagner could not be reached for comment after the marathon, but beforehand she was optimistically looking forward to running another marathon in the future, regardless of difficulties she experienced while training for Chicago.

"Originally I had a goal time of four hours, 15 minutes. Because of the injuries in the final few weeks of training, I will be happy with finishing. I've worked 20 weeks to see that finish line. It is disappointing to have such a big setback, but next time I'll reach my goal time," Wagner said Thursday.

Blair found the energy of more than 37,000 runners and near 1 million spectators be an empowering experience that kept her motivated throughout the grueling miles of the event.

"It was awesome. There were 65,000 feet hitting the pavement at the same time. It was a very positive experience," she said.

The weekly training schedule Wagner introduced to Blair consisted of four days running with one long run, one medium run and two shorter runs, then one day of cross-training and two days of rest. Their longest run was 20 miles, which pair completes two-thirds of the way through training. Their workouts slowly tapered from that peak to Sunday's race. In the last few days of training they ran just a few miles, rested and loaded up on carbohydrates and water.

Blair attributed her easy progression as a runner to the gradual build in distance during training. She encouraged other beginning runners to start with just a few miles and then build their physical and mental stamina as their mileage increases.

Unlike newer runner Blair, it has been Wagner's goal to run a marathon since her senior year of high school. Despite tendinitis, shin splints and harsh weather while training, Wagner did not waver in pursuit of her goal.

"All I have to do is think about crossing the finish line and I run faster," she said.

BOG debates leadership center

By SHANNON NELLIGAN

Mona Derakhshani, interim director of the Center for Women’s Intercultural Leadership, presented the purpose of the organization and asked the Board of Governance for suggestions on how to promote CWIL to Saint Mary’s at Monday’s BOG meeting.

CWIL, sponsored by the Lilly Endowment, plans to place an emphasis on diversity in the classroom, conduct seminars and encourage students to study cultures on-site or during a summer seminar.

“This program (CWIL) is designed for student involvement at every level,” Derakhshani said.

Hopefully, as soon as next year, students at Saint Mary’s will have the opportunity to live in an intercultural residence with students from various ethnic, cultural and racial backgrounds Derakhshani said. These students will choose to live together and participate in programs that examine intercultural living.

“This would help create a focus on innovative thought and provide a wider range of experiences to Saint Mary’s students in order to prepare them better for the world,” Derakhshani said.

The Board also discussed ideas regarding how to promote and encourage student involvement in CWIL. The ideas included promotion in the dining hall and increased advertisement of events sponsored by CWIL.

BOG also emphasized the importance of appointing faculty with a diverse background to bring new ideas to campus.

Kristen Matha, vice-president, suggested that faculty incorporate and promote CWIL’s events into their classroom to promote a form of cross-endorship.

This would help create a focus on innovative thought and provide a wider range of experiences to Saint Mary’s students in order to prepare them better for the world.

Students issued discount cards

By JASON MCFARLEY
News Editor

In a joint venture between Notre Dame and South Bend merchants, student government officials expected today to issue about 8,000 cards good for discounts at local businesses.

"This is something suggested numerous times in the past by students," Brooke Norton, student body president, said of the effort that began last year with the Student Services division of her office. "We decided to keep going on the process and make sure that students’ wants were being met."

"We just wanted to have students feel like they got something in the South Bend community," said Danielle Ledesma, Student Services division head.

Every Notre Dame undergraduate is eligible to receive one credit card-sized discount card. Ledesma said the cards are available today in North Dining Hall from 5 to 7 p.m., in South Dining Hall from 5 to 8 p.m. and in the new Student Services Center on the first floor of LaFortune Student Center from 7 to 9 p.m.

Students can use the cards at 12 participating businesses:

- Dairy Queen, 2015 South Bend Ave., for 50 cents off chicken strip baskets and double cheeseburgers
- Emerald Cut Salon & Day Spa, 6311 University Ave., for 10 percent off any purchase
- Fun Tan, 1258 South Bend Ave., for 20 percent off any regular-priced tanning package
- Jersey Mike’s Giant Subs, all locations, for 15 percent off any purchase
- K’s Grill & Pub, 1733 South Bend Ave., for 10 percent off any purchase and 51 bottoms and drinks daily from 5 p.m. to close
- Keister’s Kreamer, 54570 Ironwood Rd., for 10 percent off any food purchase and free 16-ounce drinks with any purchase Monday through Wednesday
- Michael & Co. Salon, 236 W. Edison Rd., for 10 percent off any services
- Molly McGuire’s Coffee House, 1025 South Bend Ave., for 15 percent off any purchase
- Papa John’s Pizza, 1827 South Bend Ave., for 20 percent off any purchase
- Scoop’s Ice Cream and Frozen Custard, all locations, for 15 percent off any purchase
- Shear Phazes, 1811 South Bend Ave., for $2 off a haircut
- St. Joseph’s, 1801 South Bend Ave., for 10 percent off any purchase

Discounts may be used more than once at each location.

Discounts at other businesses will become available throughout the year, according to Ledesma.

Students who don’t receive a discount card today can obtain one through the Student Services Center or the student government office on the second floor of LaFortune.

The cards expire in June.

Watts lost temper at airport

Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY An aide to Rep. J.C. Watts said Monday that the congressman lost his temper when he stuffed a parking ticket for violating airport security rules under an officer’s hedge.

Watts, the fourth-ranking House GOP leader, was cited Sept. 28 after he left his car unattended in a loading zone at Will Rogers World Airport, a violation of security measures that police have enforced especially aggressively since the Sept. 11 attacks.

After arguing with police Sgt. Edward Stupka, Watts shoved the $15 ticket under his badge and told him to "take care of it," said Pam Pryor, Watts’ chief of staff. The officer tossed it into the congressman’s car, and Watts’ wife later paid the ticket.

"J.C. makes no excuses, whatsoever," Pryor said. "He does recognize that he got angry and he shouldn’t have."

Pryor said Watts called Stupka over the weekend and apologized.

Police spokeswoman Capt. Jessica Cummins said the police department considers airport terminal parking an important security issue.

"Signs have been added in loading and non-loading zones not to leave your vehicle unattended," she said. "Our position is it doesn’t matter who an individual is, we’re going to enforce any security-related issues that occur at Will Rogers World Airport."

Anti-United States resentment increases as protestors in favor of Osama Bin Laden demonstrate in Pakistan against the bombing attacks on Afghanistan by the United States and Great Britain.

WASHINGTON

The Bush administration is struggling to maintain the backing of Arab and other Muslim states even as it warns that it may take its war against terrorism beyond Afghanistan.

In alerting the world the attack had begun, President Bush said Sunday, "The United States of America is a friend to the Afghan people, and we are the friends of almost a billion worldwide who practice the Islamic faith."

The warning the fight may go beyond Afghanistan was contained in a letter to the United Nations.

"We may find that our self-defense requires further actions with respect to other organizations and other states," John Negroponte, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations said Monday. It was only the latest such warning.

"The letter states what the president has been saying all along, that the United States reserves the right to defend itself wherever it is necessary," White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said.

By all accounts, the al-Qaeda network headed by Osama bin Laden has cells in several nations, most of them predominantly Muslim. Bush has told these governments they must choose between supporting the fight against terrorism and U.S. hostility.

In Pakistan, which borders Afghanistan and is vital to the U.S. military operation, protesters have clashed against the United States and the cooperation of their government, headed by President Pervez Musharraf.

Other Muslim nations, including Uzbekistan and Saudi Arabia, also have leading roles.

To help Musharraf, the administration and Congress have worked together to lift almost all sanctions against Pakistan. A move to end the remaining ones is near completion on Capitol Hill.

President Bush has approved $320 million in humanitarian aid to the Afghans. A senior U.S. official said Monday that Pakistan could expect additional support as it copes with a flood of refugees.

Despite the concerted U.S. effort, Shibley Telhami, a University of Maryland professor, said, "There are people in the Arab and Muslim world who simply will not be satisfied by what the United States will do. There is a lot of sentiment built up over the years. Clearly, the United States is not trusted."

But there are people throughout the region, including governments, who are so frightened by the prospect of having groups linked to bin Laden dominate the Middle East that they are looking for an opportunity and a reason to stand up to their extremists, Telhami said.

Air Force fighter planes were sent to escort an American Airlines jetliner Monday after a passenger tried to enter the cockpit of the plane, federal officials said.

Preliminary reports indicated there was no attempt to hijack the plane, said Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman Marcia Adams. No one was injured, and the plane was escorted safely to Chicago's O'Hare International Airport.

The passenger, described later by his father as having a history of mental illness, was subdued aboard Flight 1238 from Los Angeles to Chicago after trying to get into the cockpit, said FBI spokesman Rose Rice.

"The male individual was physically restrained by other passengers," American Airline spokesman Al Becker said. "This appears to be an isolated incident."

The captain of the Boeing 767, which was carrying a crew of nine and 153 passengers, declared an emergency. The F-16s were then dispatched to Chicago.

The passenger was taken into custody but was not immediately charged with a crime.

SMC Web site gets a facelift

By JENNIE BUEHLER
News Writer

After a month of preparation and redesign, Saint Mary’s Web page posted an updated look during the weekend. A subdued blue background, quick access bars, scrolling links and loading images are all part of recent updates to the Saint Mary’s Web page.

“The Web site has been undergoing a change since the last version was developed. The last company working on it didn’t finish it, and we had always planned to complete it later,” said Nick Farmer, marketing and content organizer.

Efforts to improve the Web site began last March with the help of Saint Mary’s vice president and dean of faculty Karen Hilstau. She signed off for the project and oversaw the progress. A team of four including a Saint Mary’s alumnus coordinated and designed the Web page with the help of a Web company

The team’s goal was “to provide a much more high impact site organized with the user in mind,” said Dan Mendell, a member of the design team.

More interactive and user friendly, the Web page caters in including a Saint Mary’s alumnae can also appreciate flexibility and easier access to links within the site.

These upgrades are just a start to the construction being done, as more upgrades are being planned for the future to “achieve consistency and inte­grate the new look to other areas within the Web site,” said Mendell.

For instance, departmental pages were unaffected by the changes along with other organizations within the Web site this time around, however, plans to estab­lish the new look in these areas is scheduled in the future.

“We wanted to go in without necessarily changing everything” said Mendell. “It gives the departments flexibility.”

The response from the Saint Mary’s community has been accepting to the changes. “We’ve had a positive response from the community. They like the availability and the dynamic new look,” said Farmer.

Food drops are successful

Associated Press

RAMSTEIN AIR BASE Crew members of two American C-17 cargo planes hugged and exchanged high­fives Monday on returning safely to their base after dropping 35,000 food packets over Afghanistan.

The overnight operation was meant to underscore that the U.S.-led military attacks carried out simultaneously were not aimed at civilians.

The cargo planes were airborne for 24 hours, dropping the packets from high altitudes onto areas in southern and eastern Afghanistan where the civilian need was deemed greatest.

“That’s the way you want it to be over the drop zone, boring. And it was,” the commander said. “There was a haze on the ground and a couple of lights but we couldn’t see anything else.”

The packets were dropped from the back of cargo planes. To do that, the cabin and cockpit were depressurized, requir­ing crew to put on oxygen masks and endure near-freez­ing temperatures. Medical crew were on board both planes to make sure the flight crews didn’t experience altitude sickness, he said.

“It was an outstanding success. It’s a testament to the pro­fessionalism and the dedication of the crews and people sup­porting them,” the commander said. “An unprecedented mis­sion. A difficult one.”

The packets contained a day’s ration of red beans, rice, fruit bars, peanut butter and straw­berry jam, providing at least 2,200 calories. The food does not contain any animal products so as not to violate any religious or cultural practices. Muslims, for example, do not eat pork.

A day’s food

Each yellow plastic container of “humanitarian daily rations” is about the size of a hardcover book. The pouches, airdropped by the U.S. military to assist Afghan civilians, contains a day’s worth of food for one person. The rations are vegetarian and conform to Muslim dietary laws. A typical 2,200-calorie package may contain the following items:

• Bean salad
• Rice with beans
• Crackers
• Peanut butter
• Rice milk
• Flat bread
• Strawberry jam
• Apple fruit bar
• Utenstyle package

bombers, C-17 cargo planes air dropped about 37,000 packages of food rations for displaced civilians in Afghanistan, Rumsfeld said. A similar mission was carried out
Sunday, and officials said they expected to continue the humanitarian air drops for at least several more days.
In revealing more details about the first salvoes of missiles and bombs, Air Force
Gen. Richard Myers, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, cautioned that the number of munitions fired and the number of targets hit are not the best measure of success for President Bush’s campaign against terrorism.
"In this kind of warfare, against this kind of enemy, the true measure of effectiveness, in my opinion, will not necessarily be in numerical terms," Myers said at a joint news conference with Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld. Success depends on weakening the groups, feeding displaced Afghans and demonstrating what they can do is to continue the humanitarian effort, and those that are supporting al-Qaida, "he said.
Rumsfeld made a similar point.
"There is no silver bullet," he said. "The cruise missiles and bombers are not going to solve this problem. We know that.
What they can do is to contribute by adding pressure, making life more difficult, raising the cost for the terrorists and a few points of suspending the terrorists, draining their finances and creating an envi-noment that is inhospitable to the people that are threatening the world.
Even though the Taliban have only a rudimentary military, the U.S.-led bombing is not aimed mainly at those forces.
"It’s unlikely that those aircraft, and the Taliban back on their heels," Rumsfeld said. "They have very few targets that are of high value that are manageable from the air." Rumsfeld declined to discuss the possibility of sending U.S. ground forces into Afghanistan.
Like any air campaign, early strikes have targeted air defenses that jeopardize allied pilots. And some strikes have been aimed at military command and control facilities, airfields and the small number of Taliban aircraft on them, as well as the training camps of the al-Qaeda network, Myers said.
But more broadly, the military campaign is meant to partalyze al-Qaeda’s operations inside Afghanistan and set the stage for opposition groups like the northern alliance to put pressure on the Taliban and eventually topple the religious milita.
"We are working with the elements on the ground that are interested in overthrowing and expelling that group of people," Rumsfeld said.
In a related development, another 1,071 members of the Army Reserve and Army National Guard were called to active duty as part of a mobiization authorized by Bush shortly after the Sept. 11 attacks. Among those called up are personnel who specialize in criminal investigation, infantry or special operations.
In all, 27,025 reservists from 44 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico have been called up.

WASHINGTON
In a windowless space 10 pages from the Oval Office, Tom Ridge reported for duty Monday at the new Office of Homeland Security. His assignment: figure out where America is vulnerable to terrorist attack and try to ensure it isn’t vulnerable again.

The task before us is difficult, but not impossible," said Ridge, who resided as Pennsylvania governor just three years earlier to accept the daunting challenge laid out by President Bush.

In an executive order, the president instructed Ridge to bring all federal, state and local agencies together in drawing up a plan "to detect, prepare for, prevent, protect against, respond to and recover from terrorism attacks within the United States."

It was a mouthful that Ridge stumbled over as he restated his mission to an audience of family members and government VIPs in the East Room. He also said his job will be to find the "Ridge effect," the law enforcement and intelligence operations that are usually invisible.

His portfolio bulged with weighty mandates:
- Set priorities for spying overseas and make sure intelligence agencies have the money and technology they need.
- Develop a system for detecting any release of biological and chemical agents, and for containing and spreading them.
- Review hospital capacity and supplies of vaccines and pharmaceuticals.
- Fortify security for power plants, phone systems, rail and airline passengers, delivery people and food and water supplies.

Ridge will be working with bureaucracies that have a tradition of turf battles over money and jurisdiction, a potential obstacle that he acknowledged with a plea for cooperation.

"The only turf we should be working on is the terrorism turf we stand on," he said.

Sen. Richard Shelby of Alabama, senior Republican on the Senate Intelligence Committee, said Ridge will need new legislation to carry out his job successfully. Congress wants to "give him the tools," Shelby said on CNN's "Larry King Live."

The six-year governor and former six-term congressman began work on the second day of U.S. military strikes in Afghanistan. That operation will likely spark terrorist reprisals, according to intelligence community warnings.

As if to underscore that point, Ridge's first call Friday morning was to Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld to administer Ridge's oath.

Ridge, 56, a bulky Army vet who resigned as Pennsylvania governor just three years earlier to accept the daunting challenge laid out by President Bush, will be working with a fierce-looking American flag and a bright yellow tie.

No, the president didn't stop at the newsroom of a supermarket tabloid when he announced Ridge's appointment. Nor did the spores suggest they were biologically manipulated.

"It looks like garden-variety anthrax," said Bruce Cutler, an associate professor at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. "We should know much in a few days." The CDC has identified two antibiotics - Cipro and dexamethasone - to treat anthrax.

Health experts said it was "a prudent" move to treat workers in the Sun tabloid, as well as any agents, messengers, delivery people and service workers who went there in the past two months. Family and friends who were not physically there would not need treatment because anthrax cannot pass person to person.

"You want to treat people because they show symptoms," Clements said.

Anthrax cases not terrorist acts

Health experts say the Florida anthrax cases traced to the newsroom of a supermarket tabloid do not fit the classic bioterrorism scenario and the public should especially fear for its safety while the FBI continues its investigation.

Among the major questions to be answered: Where did it come from? How was it spread? And, why has only one person died?

"There are things about this case that I find rather strange," said Donald Henderson, a biodefense expert at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. "If you put them all together, they don't add up."

Anthrax is one of a handful of microbes turned into biological weapons designed to infect and kill large populations. A treaty signed by 143 nations bans their use. But U.S. officials have long feared that extremists might grow a large batch and release anthrax spores on unsuspecting, innocent people, "fears that have since become acute since the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks."

In Florida, Bob Stevens, 63, died Friday of inhalational anthrax. It was the first confirmed case in the nation's new government since Sept. 11.

The bacterium also has been found in the nasal passages of one of Stevens' co-workers at The Sun newspaper. That man is being treated at an undisclosed Miami-area hospital.

However, experts said the bacterium's presence in the man's nose does not necessarily mean he is suffering from the inhaled form of the disease. Nasal spores, which the spores typically cannot flourish deep in lung tissue. Anthrax spores also were discovered on the computer keyboard, a state health official said. The FBI has seized the off the office building and is expected to begin tracking its "paths for clues."

National health experts said the FBI investigation was "appropriate," but doesn't necessarily mean it was the work of terrorists.

"If you had a large release (of anthrax spores), you wouldn't see just one case," said Bruce Clements, associate professor at St. Louis University's Center for the Study of Terrorism and Emerging Infectious. "We would see quite a few cases."

"Anthrax is so persistent," he said. "If somebody let anthrax loose in air system of that building, it will still be there."

At least 200 employees who work in the building housing the Sun tabloid were asked to come to a clinic so they could be tested. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention officials said nasal swabs would be taken, and antibodies provided to combat the disease in its early stages.

Anthrax symptoms - which initially resemble the flu - usually take up to a week to appear, but may not develop for 60 days.

Inhaled anthrax, the body quickly produces toxins as a result of infection that antibiotics typically cannot overcome.

Health officials said they have not heard anything yet to suggest the second newsroom worker has been infected. Nor do the spores suggest they were biologically manipulated.

Are we safe at Notre Dame?

I’ve never really asked myself this question in the past. I’ve always felt safe walking around the lake, even when my door was unlocked and I even feel safe walking around the campus at night. Maybe it is just because I am a male (in a sexist rape rape rape here), or maybe it is because no matter where I go I get the feeling that the administration is watching me. If I had asked myself this question a week ago my answer would have been unequivocally, “yes, I am safe on this campus.”

Someday, when I see my whole idea of safety has been turned upside down on the surface, yes, Notre Dame is in trouble. But below this image there is a dark monster lurking. No one wants to talk about it, understand it, but there’s it, I am referring to date and acquaintance rape. I used to imagine Notre Dame as one of the most rape-proof campuses in the country. I have since changed my mind. Rather, Notre Dame has an abundance of rape; it’s just that no one reports it because women are made to believe it is their fault. You see, there is some sort of attitude that if someone is drunk, they don’t deserve respect and common human dignity. This appalls me.

A lot of times when the phrase “taking advantage of” replaces the correct term “raping” when referring to these incidents, I don’t lock my door most of the time and I even feel safe walking around the campus at night. I have nothing to be ashamed of; it’s just that no one reports it because women are made to believe it is their fault. You see, there is some sort of attitude that if someone is drunk, they don’t deserve respect and common human dignity. This appalls me.

The whole thing makes me physically ill and has kept me up nights over the past week. Our campus needs desperately to address this issue but not through the abysmal methods of the past. No yellow journalism, tabloid style news coverage and not a 20 minute meeting at the beginning of freshmen year.

There is immediate need for updated and relevant information on this campus.

Case in point, in a few weeks ago the issue of date rape drugs was brought up in The Observer. Who here knows anything about these drugs and their effects on victims? I don’t, and I don’t even know where to go to find out. Should not someone at this University direct some energy towards informing us? Instead of sweeping it under the carpet, a mature, informed discussion must ensue to help lessen the chance that this should ever happen again.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Acknowledging collective guilt

In his second inaugural address, the great Abraham Lincoln suggested that the devastation our nation suffered as a result of that war was punishment for our sins as a nation. Strangely, I don’t often hear people make any reading about the effect that this had no right to claim any knowledge of the will of God.

Yes, today, when a few outspoken preachers make an analogous statement about the recent tragedies in this country, they get lynched in the press (see the Monday column by Scott Flipse), and this even though our sins today are worse than they were 140 years ago. (Horrible as beating a man and making him pick cotton may be, it pales in comparison with pulling a baby half out the womb, piercing her skull, and sucking out the contents). And this disaster was not nearly as bad as the Civil War. So what is the big deal?

True, Falwell and Robertson do not have quite the stature that Lincoln had and continues to have. But that does not mean they cannot call a spade a spade. Flipse seems to think these guys claim to know the “secret will of God.” Well, that is not so secret. It is so secret that God does not want unborn babies slaughtered by the millions. It seems the only time that will is considered secret is when it does not correspond with what most people want it to be. If you proclaim that racism is wrong, and racists get what they deserve when bad things happen to them (true enough), nobody accuses you of knowing the “secret will of God.”

But if you were to say the same when a pornographer got hit by a brick from the sky, you would just be a bigot.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

"Death and sorrow will be the companions of our journey; hardship our garment; constancy and valor our only shield. We must be united, we must be undaunted, we must be inflexible."

Sir Winston Churchill

former British prime minister
Fear accompanies a new beginning

I am scared. In two days I leave Monument, the capital, to go to my village. I arrived three days ago and have been adjusting in all I possibly can, beaches and pools, ice cream, hamburgers and pizza, tank tops and bikinis. Currently I sit in an air-conditioned internet café which serves lattes.

After I type this out I return to the Peace Corps house with a party already in progress. There is a DJ with at least some American music, a bar, a karaoke machine and about 50 Americans. Tomorrow is another one of those days, which most likely means another day by the pool at the embassy. Right now I don’t see that much different than in the states.

The scary part is that this is all very temporary, and I keep asking myself, how is it that Mauritania is as different as my Nouskhosti experience as is possible. In two days my Peace Corps service commences. After 10 weeks in training I am more than ready to enter this next phase, but there is a part of me that is terrified.

Peace Corps has been a part of my life plan for at least the past two years and on some level a part of my identity. When people asked what I planned on doing post graduation I was always said Peace Corps, and during the year I took off between college and Peace Corps it was a major part of conversation. What would I do? Where would I go? Would I have water and electricity? These questions are answered. As of the sweat I woke up yesterday I am finally a Peace Corps volunteer. My dream is now reality. The movement between these two realms is hard. Training was difficult, but I also enjoyed it. It was a bubble. That environment became and still is very comfortable.

I don’t know what the next few weeks will bring. I know when I signed up for Peace Corps that a large part of the program was to live alone and in a fairly isolated village. This idea sounded absurd to me, but when I entered the recruiting office in a skyscraper in downtown Chicago. After describing my village and hearing current volunteer stories the excitement and dream still exist, but now it is compounded with knowledge of reality.

I try to imagine the first day. The Peace Corps car will drop me off with all my possessions. My possessions will most likely be more than most families could ever afford. After about 10 minutes of settling-in time I may meet and greet the notable members of the community. They will speak in a language I do not understand and eat food I cannot identify. I may smile and laugh a lot and pretend that I understand.

The kids will follow me. Everyone will ask if I am married and when I say “no” they will have many possible husbands lined up. Someone will get me water for me and carry my bags. I will be treated like a celebrity. After a few days this status will disappear. I will have to figure out how to use a well. I will have to learn enough Pular to communicate at least my basic needs and feelings. Eventually, hopefully not for a very long time, I will have to learn to take care of myself when I get sick. I will not speak any English. I will get lonely.

All of these are realities. They were not a part of my Peace Corps dream of the past two years. The Peace Corps pamphlets and website do not show this part of the experience. How many people went up for a program with a picture of a volunteer on the beach or a village crying in her hut? Or a volunteer who fails to learn the language so he does not read and write?

These next few months are looming over me and the reality of Peace weight down on me. Self-preservation overwhelms me. Do I simply stay in my own home and do the washing and cooking for the next two years more than like the reality of living without running water? Why am I here if I know I want to go to law school? I want to live in an environment that is so conservative that I cannot show my ankles and where female circumcision is common.

The answers will present themselves in the next few months. I am scared.

Maite Uranga graduated from Notre Dame in 2000 as an anthropology and government major. She is currently a Peace Corps volunteer in the Islamic Republic of Mauritania. Tailgate rules stifle football fun

Spoiling a tradition

Oups, I was tailgating again. I was shocked and appalled by members of the Notre Dame Security/Police force for their disruption of tailgating across the street in the soccer fields, better known as the "Radio Tower." I grew up in South Bend and have attended football games for as long as I can remember. I can never recall seeing any incidents like I witnessed Saturday, when NDSF impelled the impulse to disrupt football Saturday for a host of students.

First the facts of the case: I am 21 years of age, the legal drinking age in Indiana. My French parents decided they would like to throw a tailgate for their son and all his friends. We attended merrily with the intent to enjoy the day with family and friends before attending an Irish victory. Little did we know that our mere association with a tailgate is an offense deemed illegal by the word tailgating, regardless if we were in line with Indiana state law. Simply holding a hot dog was the only offense of a particular friend. No legal citations were handed out at the tailgate, but ResLife has its own interpretation of the law. Apparently we are not allowed to take any part in a parent-sponsored tailgate, unless we have the comfort of the Sorin and the presence of alumni and benefactors protecting us. I suppose it would look bad if NDSF were handing out citations so near to the stadium and disrupting the tailgating there. Only those houling across the street are in jeopardy of having their day ruined by yellow slip of paper with the crime of tailgating.

I have nothing against police presence on Saturdays because some people do get out of hand. But when the police use their power to deny students the right to enjoy these Saturdays by causing a major disturbance, we have problems. Not only were those few affected by the events, but also everyone that witnessed or heard about the police action, students and parents alike, were disappointed. It spoiled one of the six days that parents and students annually share to come together and take part in one of the cherished traditions of Notre Dame football. I speak on this matter because the University needs to address this disturbing change in the way football Saturdays have been enjoyed for years.

Citations are unnecessary

Continuing a tradition of bizarre and unnecessary rules, the administration has cracked down on tailgating. Tailgating, that wretched activity involving thousands of students, parents and (check-writing) alumni waking up to go out to have fun with their friends, meet each other’s parents and show unbelievable amounts of school spirit. The tailgate party is as big a part of Saturdays as the game itself, perhaps an even larger part given recent football struggles.

But tailgating involves drinking, so Notre Dame has decided that it has to be banned. On Saturday morning I saw NDSF officers roaming fields ticketing people. These were students who were minding their own business, not dancing on cars or crushing cans on their heads. I won’t bother railing against ticketing undergraduate students because it’s too easy for officials to hide behind the law of the land and the bottom line is that it’s impossible to argue against that. I’ll just say that it seems very unnecessary, especially considering how many of the latest students in a row are drinking come from their parents. I will note that undergraduate drinking at tailgates was ignored by real police for years until University officials asked for tougher enforcement.

I’m more troubled by ticketing students who are of legal drinking age simply for the offense of "tailgating" (that’s right, it was misspelled on a ticket I kept). The students are owed an explanation as to why 21-year-old students who have never been to a tailgate and are in violation of University rules just for being present at a perfectly legal gathering.

Rex Rakow tells us that 17 students have been treated for excessive drunkenness. Wow, 17 out of 160,000 fans at two games! Those are like Powerball odds. This is hardly an epidemic. It’s a great tradition and a great time that is being trampled on for no apparent reason.

Even more ridiculous is the ticketing of students for talking. While witnessing someone being ticketed, a Sorin resident turned to a friend and described Bill Kirk using an explicite. He turned around to see Mr. Kirk standing behind him and was promptly ticketed for "blasphemy disrespect for University policy.

What? Come on, what road are we heading down here?

Well, Mr. Kirk, I guess I also have blasphemy disrespect for this policy, so I guess I also deserve a ticket.

See you in the lots on Saturday.

Irish rock band to play Irish

Anticipation for U2's upcoming performance reaches a height as students prepare.

By SAM DERHEIMER
Assistant Scene Editor

U2 is coming to Notre Dame. Just in case you've been out of the country or you haven't come out of a Fitzpatrick computer lab in the last three weeks, here is again: U2 is coming to Notre Dame.

That's right, this Wednesday, one of the biggest rock bands in the world will play one of the smallest venues on their tour when U2 kick off the third leg of their North American tour here at Notre Dame.

And as students hungrily overwhelm the University's bandwidth limit downloading Joshua Tree MP3s, it's hard not to get caught up in the sense of excitement growing around campus.

"I was really surprised they came," senior Stacie Green said. "I'm so excited, I think it will be amazing, because the place is so small. I saw them in D.C. and the place was huge, and it was actually great. So I'm sure the show here will be great as well.

Truth is, you'll be hand-pressed to find students who don't share Green's enthusiasm.

"People are really excited," senior Nick Wymbos, music director of the University's campus radio station, said. "There's a lot of buzz about this event, and people are really excited about it."

U2 is the biggest and most significant modern rock band of our generation. Previous acts [to come to campus]... don't even compare."

By JOHN HEIECK
Some Music Critic

During a time when hair bands shared the success and excess that typified the 1980s, the Irish rock band U2, with its honest, heart-on-the-sleeve mentality, became one of the biggest rock bands in the world with its 1987 release of The Joshua Tree.

During a time when Nirvana screamed with the Baby's got a new face that embodied that very excess, U2 responded with a sarcastic grin, reinventing itself with the 1987 release of the film Rattle and Hum. The Edge, lead guitar, backed up by Bono, lead vocals and guitar, and Adam Clayton, bass, developed the band's signature sound. The Edge and Bono collaborated on a number of hit songs, including "Jessica," "Hold Me, Thrill Me, Kiss Me, Kill Me," and "I Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For." Their music continued to evolve, with the band releasing more albums and tours throughout the 1990s and 2000s.

U2's music has been described as a perfect fusion of rock and dance, with a focus on social and political issues. The band is known for its powerful live performances and its use of innovative technology, such as the use of video projection and a massive LED screen.

The band's message of hope and unity has resonated with fans worldwide, and their impact on the music industry has been immeasurable. U2's legacy continues to grow, with the band's music still being played on radio stations and in stadiums around the world.

From their humble beginnings in Larry Mullin Jr.'s kitchen to a sold-out show at the largest indoor arena in the world, U2's journey has been one of perseverance and dedication to their craft. Despite facing challenges along the way, they have remained true to their vision and continue to inspire with their music. U2's story is one of hope, resilience, and the power of music to bring people together.
Bono: Notre Dame has soul

My name is Tim Collins and I'm writing to Notre Dame again because they heard the joy of the school's various activities, much like a concert for the a non-alcoholic U2 tour. They released an elaborate live speculum called “The Zoo TV Tour,” in which Bono pranced around an enormous stage backed by huge television screens and made prank phone calls to the White House. During the middle of Zoo TV, U2 returned to the studio in 1993 and recorded Zooropa.

In 1995, under the disguise of a different name, U2 released "The Joshua Tree," an album that sold over 10 million copies worldwide. However, the band had other ideas in mind. Pop, released in 1997, was even more technologically advanced than either Achtung Baby or Zooropa, and Pop Mart, the name of the tour, was even bigger and more visually stimulating than Zoo TV.

Unfortunately, the album and the tour met lukewarm sales and reviews, with critics saying it was overpriced and failed to live up to the hype. Yet, it was a critical success, earning a Grammy for Best Rock Album. The title track of the album, "Beautiful Day," became a huge hit, reaching number one in several countries.

After a string of hit singles and a live album, U2 returned to the studio to record their next album, Zooropa. The band released "All That You Can't Leave Behind" in 1997, which went on to sell over 20 million copies worldwide. The album included hits like "Beautiful Day," "F燎rada," and "Elevation," and was nominated for several Grammy Awards.

"When the Sun Comes Out," the album's first single, was released in 1997 and became a hit. The music video for the song featured Bono and the Edge performing on top of a massive billboard in New York City. The video was directed by Spike Jonze and won several awards, including a MTV Video Music Award for Best Rock Video.

"The Years Bono and the Edge began writing songs for the album "All That You Can't Leave Behind," they knew they wanted to create something special. They recorded the album at the legendary Abbey Road Studios in London, and the result was a critically acclaimed and commercially successful album.

During the final leg of the Zooropa tour, U2 performed in front of over 250,000 fans at Soldier Field in Chicago. The concert was a massive success, and the band continued to tour throughout the United States and Europe. The tour lasted for over a year and a half, and the band recorded a live album from their show in Berlin, "Zooropa Live at the O2 Arena," which was released in 2005.

In conclusion, "All That You Can't Leave Behind" was a monumental album for U2, marking a new direction for the band and paving the way for their future success. It is a testament to their musical talent and dedication to their craft, and it remains a favorite of fans around the world.
Shawn Doan scored a power-play goal 28 seconds into overtime as the Phoenix Coyotes beat the Calgary Flames 2-1 Monday night.

Doan deflected a slap shot by Theo Nugent from the blue line past Calgary goaltender Kiphan Pavelec.

Calgary's Rob Niedermayer had been called for tripping with 1:12 left in the third period.

Daniel Briere also scored for Phoenix (1-1-1-0), which finishes a season-opening four-game road trip in Chicago on Thursday.

Deuce McAmmond scored for Calgary (2-0-0-1), which was coming off a pair of shutout victories.

Phoenix goaltender Sean Burke finished with 26 saves and failed several times in the third period.

On one sequence, Burke made a pad save on a slap shot by Chris Clark, and made a glove save on a shot by Dave Lowry.

Later in the third, Burke stopped Scott Nichol on a breakaway.

Briere ended Turgeon's shutout streak of 135 minutes, 23 seconds at 13:23 of the second period. Turgeon's streak was the shortest in the history of the Calgary Flames.

With Phoenix on a power play, Briere circled out from behind the Flames' net and scored on a rebound.

Calgary opened the scoring 2:41 into the first period, capitalized on a two-man advantage. Toni Lydman and Nichol combined to set up McAmmond, who beat Burke with a shot from the low slot.

Calgary finished 1-0-1-1 on the power play. The Coyotes were 2-for-6.

Blue Jackets, Flyers 2

Jan Hlavac scored in the third period on a shot that flicked off the skates of two Columbus Flyers defenders as the Philadelphia Flyers rallied to tie the Blue Jackets 2-2 Monday night.

The Flyers trailed by two goals in the final period before tying the game. Philadelphia rallied from a two-goal deficit to salvage a 3-3 tie against Columbus on Saturday night.

Hlavacs unassisted goal with 6:47 left came on a shot that dodged off the skate of Columbus defenceman Drez Quill and then off the skate of Jakub Pushor.

Hlavacs goal came 50 seconds after Philadelphia's Simon Gagne accepted a pass from Mike Ricci and scored on a backhand past goalie Marc Denis, who finished with 30 saves.

Columbus had outplayed the Flyers for most of the first 50 minutes before the two quick goals.

The Blue Jackets had the first four shots of the over­time, but Philadelphia's scorer Brad Boyes stopped two shots by Geordie Szmat in the first 15 seconds of extra time and blocked Ray Whitney's wrist shot from close range.

Boucher finished with 28 saves, and Philadelphia had the power play for the first 12:45 of overtime after a holding call on Mattias Timander.Keith Primeau whiffed on a shot from the slot with 6 seconds remaining.

Columbus (3-0-3-0) has three points in its first three games — matching the Blue Jackets total through the first five games of their expansion season from a year ago. They also ran their unbeaten streak at Nationwide Arena to 4 games (0-0-3-0).

After capitalizing on both power-play chances in Philadelphia on Saturday night, the Blue Jackets failed to score on six man-advantage opportunities Monday. Columbus opened a 1-0 lead in the third period, the Blue Jackets stretched the lead off a nifty pass by veteran Denis.

After a takeaway near center ice, a slap shot by Columbus' Serge Aubin was high and wide off the back glass. The puck took a big bounce and ended up near the boards on the right side. Dineen dug it out, coated in the dust and put it on the road. Aubin whiffed on a shot from the slot.

The Jackets took a 2-0 lead 2:41 into the first period, Jan Hlavac scored in the first 15 seconds of extra time.

Maple Leafs, Mighty Ducks 2

Alexander Mogilny had two goals and an assist to lead the Toronto Maple Leafs to a 6-1 victory over the Anaheim Mighty Ducks on Monday night.

Mogilny, signed as a free agent in the offseason, gave Toronto a 4-0 lead after 42 seconds of the second period with his 400th career goal. The 32-year-old winger, who scored 43 goals for New Jersey last season, has four goals in three games.

St. Louis blows out Detroit 35-0

Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. - The St. Louis Rams thrive on the pass. The Detroit Lions die by it, which is one reason the Rams are unbeaten and the Lions are winless.

Kurt Warner threw three touchdown passes and Derek McDaniel returned an interception of Ty Detmer 99 yards for a score Monday night as the Rams remained the NFL's only unbeaten team with a 35-0 victory over the Lions.

It was hard to tell if the Rams (4-0) were good or the Lions (0-3) were bad in a game that was really never in doubt after Warner threw first-half touchdown passes of 15 yards to Ar-Zahir Hokom and 36 yards to Torry Holt. Those scores capped two drives in which Warner threw 16 straight times.

"You know Kurt, he'll get you the ball. You just have to make sure you get in the right spot," Holt said.

Billy picked off an ill-passed pass by Detmer, who was intercepted seven times by Cleveland in the Lions' last game, and returned it for a TD to make it 21-0 at halftime.

On came Charlie Batch, whom Detmer had replaced after a 25-6 opening-week loss to St. Louis in Green Bay. Batch had no better luck — he completed his first two passes but his third was intercepted in the end zone by Dexter McCleon.

Third after driving the Lions 55 yards to the St. Louis 8, Batch was sacked by Leonard Little and fumbled. The ball was recovered by Grant Wistrom, who returned the ball for an apparent touchdown, but the Rams were penalized for running on the field after the recovery and the touchdown was nullified.

"It just felt good to get in," said Batch, who was 11-of-16 for 113 yards. "I'm just disappointed that we didn't score. It really didn't matter.

So easy was it for the Rams to pass on a Lions secondary minus Bryant Westbrook, recovering from a torn Achilles' tendon, that St. Louis ran the ball just three times in the first half while Warner went 16-of-21 for 197 yards, many of them underneath Detroit's deep zone. Warner finished 29-of-37 for 291 yards.

Detmer was 15-of-18 for 149 yards, a deceptive figure if there ever was one. The Rams scored twice in quick succession on Warner's pass to Hokim, who sidestepped Jimmy Wyrick and danced in.

It was like most of the drive — short hitches and outs underneath the Detroit defense.

The first time Warner went deep was on the next series, hitting Holt from 36 yards behind Ron Rice to make it 14-0 2:29 into the second quarter.

Even when the Detroit offense moved, it ultimately failed.

Late in the second quarter, it drove from its own 38 to the St. Louis 16. But Detmer threw off his back foot right to Bly, who took it 93 yards untouched to make it 21-0.

Weasel punter pins Pyros’ hopes

Not too often the hero of a game is punter. For Pasquerilla West its punter turned in the biggest play of the day. Late in the second half freshman punter Abby Nerlinger pinned Lyons inside their own 2-yard line.

On the next play, a low snap was dropped by Lyons quarterback Sara Jenkins in her own end zone. The result was a safety for the PW defense.

The safety was difference in the game as PW held on for the victory.

"Abby definitely gets the game ball," said Coach Mike Canfield. "She is the greatest coffin-corner kicker since RossINI."

"It the first time I have ever played flag football," Nerlinger said. "I used to play soccer, so I thought I would give it a try. This is actually the first game I have gotten my kicks down."

The PW defense came up big on fourth down, and the Lyons offense left the field from the 25-yard line. "This is a huge sign," said defensive end Gina Lopresto. "It was a huge one.

PW, on the ensuing drive, moved the ball to midfield with a 22-yard pass to Cortney and a hook and ladder play to set the ball up for Nerlinger’s perfect punt.

The safety by the PW defense overshadowed a great performance by the Lyons’ defense.

PW quarterback Leslie Schmit was 0-8, including one interception in the first half. The Weasels were also held to only 10 yards of total offense in the first half. "I am really proud of our defense," said middle linebacker Irene Oneyabako. "We played well. It was just a heart breaker all through out.

For PW, this game was a must-win.

Coming off a disappointing 6-0 loss to Pasquerilla East, it was win or go home for the Weasels.

PW 3-3 and has almost assured themselves a spot in the postseason.

The road to any team is to go to the Stadium," said PW defensive end Tim Haggerty. "It’s a new season. All we need is the offense to play a little better and we will have a great shot."

For Lyons, it has a one game lead against BP this Thursday. "We definitely need to win if we want to keep on playing," said Oneyabako.

Badin 21, Pangborn 0

The match up between the Bullfrogs of Badin and the Phoxtails of Pangborn had all the makings of a shootout and didn’t disappoint for intensity.

"When the dust had settled, Badin went home with a hard-fought victory," Badin captain Rita Ronsheim said. "We knew we couldn’t let our guard down. They have good receivers and can make plays."

The Badin offense didn’t fail to the occasion, with an 18-yard touchdown throw over the middle from sophomore quarterback Julie Kremer earlier, and the sure-handed Nicole Jelovic to put the Bullfrogs up lead, 7-0.

On Pangborn’s first possession, the offense mixed in a quarterback draw to unset the Badin pass rush. Badin’s Katie Bears was all over the field making key plays at linebacker. The drive stalled and the punt that followed, the Pangborn special teams came up big by downing the ball at Badin’s 3-yard line.

Badin mixed in a few options on their next drive, only to find themselves at a critical fourth-and-long after a pass interference call got them into Pangborn territory. Zachry hit Stephanie Hawth on a 17-yard strike to put them ahead 14-0.

"With the clock working against them, Pangborn offense caved into scoring territory," said Coach Dave Romeo. Pangborn quarterback Charlotte Troupes faced a heavy pass rush all day. Badin mixed a few stunts and twists to go with its linelbacker blitzes.

On Badin’s next possession, Zachry hit playmaker Amy Marshall for a 67-yard touch- down catch and run. Marshall put more points on than a LaFortune Ballroom DJ to get into the end zone to put Badin ahead, 21-0.

"The score remained tied at the first half, started with a bang for Walsh.

After holding the Crime offense and forcing another punt, the Wild Women mounted a four-play, 57-yard drive, culminating in an 18-yard touchdown pass to Jenn Lynch.

For the day, the Wild Women duo of Walsh and Campbell combined for four of nine passing while the Crime stacked more to the air completing 9-18 passes.

"This is nice to have a playoff spot secure," said Troy. "It’s a confidence booster. I think we can play with any team in the league."

McGlinn, Howard 0

Forget the past three years.

After three straight wins, the current McGlinn Shamrocks should no longer have to be associated with past. With a victory over Howard, they have bolstered their record to 3-1-1, and have put themselves in position to earn a playoff spot.

The game was a constant up and down field battle, with both teams being able to drive, but neither being able to put up any points.

"It took us awhile to get things going," said McGlinn defensive back Chrisa Gray. "But once we finally did, it really clicked."

The first half was pretty uneventful. Each team put up at least one drive of 10 plays or more, but none resulted in any points.

With the loss of the starting quarterback Jill Veselik, who was running the Chicago marathon, the Ducks looked to Meg Mackin to lead the offensive attack.

Mackin, 6-16 passing looked very poised in the pocket and seemed confident in her receiver’s capabilities to make plays as they drove down the field.

"We drove the ball the entire game," said Howard captain Katie Cauley. "Our offense did a really great job. We just couldn’t finish."

The score remained tied at zero as the first half ended.

It was not until halfway through the second that the second touchdown was finally scored.

McGlinn, starting from its own 30, moved the ball down field to the Howard 10 in eight plays.

Then, on fourth down, quarterback Julie Kremmer hooked up with wide receiver Sarah Vatterott for the touchdown.

The Ducks would get one more shot to win the game, but a third down interception by Gray in heavy traffic sealed the victory and dropped the Ducks to 2-3 for the season.

"I think this is getting our confidence high for the playoffs," said Gray. "We’re really happy with the outcome."

times and giving up seven sacks. "Our defense is better than what we showed today," said Zeller. "We just didn't execute like we have in practice. I think that this past week of practice we will be that much better." After starting the season 3-0, Fisher feels confident they can continue their solid play. "Everybody's really optimistic right now," said Gorman. "We think we have a pretty good shot at playing in the Stadium." Sorin 27, Knott 6 Last year, Knott's defense gave up only one touchdown all season. Against Sorin, it gave up four. Otter quarterback Greg Carney was 7-10, with two touchdowns passes to Tommy Doar, as Sorin picked up its first win of the season, against the Juggs. "If we keep playing like we did today, there aren't many defenses out there that can stop us," said Sorin's Luke Burke. "If the team shows up, instead of the one that showed up against Zahm, that offense is going to put points on the ball." Sorin mixed a strong passing game with an adequate running game and moved the ball all day. "If we play like we did today, we're just on all the time," said Burke. "If you give [Carney] four seconds to throw the ball, he's going to complete it at any time." Knott, on the other hand, was hampered by injuries and inexperienced players. We were missing a lot of guys on both offense and defense," said Knott center and defensive lineman Lou Perry. "We had guys going both ways, and a lot of new guys in there as well."
The scoring began when Carney connected on a 33-yard touchdown pass to Doar, despite double coverage. On its follow-up drive, Sorin faced a fourth and 17 near midfield. Rather than punt, the Juggs went for it and Carney hit Doar again for 45-yard completion to Knott's 2-yard line. On the next play Dave Fiorinti punched it in for the touchdown, making the score 7-0.
On Sorin's next drive, Carney completed three straight passes before running it in himself from eight-yards out to give Sorin a 21-0 lead.
Knott finally answered when quarterback Ben Gillilan completed a 15-yard touchdown pass to Brian Pawloski.
The scoring ended when Doar caught a 15-yard touchdown in the fourth quarter. "I think we're in a good position to make the playoffs," said Burke. "If we just show up and play our game, we should be fine to make the playoffs." Despite being winless, Knott is looking to end the season on a positive note. "We'll definitely be trying to play the role of spoiler next week against Zahm," said Perry.
Siegfried 13, O'Neill 0 The Siegfried-O'Neill trophy will stay in the Siegfried for at least another year, as the Ramblers beat the Angry Mob from O'Neill. "The trophy is pretty cool," said Siegfried senior captain Rob Plumby. "Mrs. Siegfried talked to us before the game and told us how much the trophy meant to her." The Rambler defense dominated the Angry Mob, yielding just three first downs.
Numerous big hits, constant pressure on O'Neill sophomore quarterback Troy Montgomery and the swarming Rambler tackling led to the Siegfried shutout. "It was an entire team effort," said Plumby. "Pete Aguiar's interception was big. The line stepped up as well." After a scoreless first quarter, Siegfried put together a seven-play drive in the final minute of the first half to take a 3-0 lead on Aguiar's 20-yard field goal. "That [field goal] swung momentum and showed we could drive down the field on O'Neill," said Plumby. Their opening drive in the second half saw the Ramblers use their first half momentum and drive down the field with a solid running game. The Angry Mob defense held its ground and limited the Rams to a 30-yard field goal meant to go through.
"They made some adjustments in the second half," said O'Neill sophomore captain John Enterline. "Momentum helped, but they brought out some new stuff." In the fourth quarter, Siegfried went 85 yards on a 10-play drive to score the game's only touchdown. Plumby's 25-yard touchdown pass to John Kup gave Siegfried their final score. "It feels excellent [to be 3-0]," said Plumby. "It is great feeling to have beaten who we have beaten." The final week of the interhall season has the Angry Mob (1-2) playing Sorin, while the Ramblers will play St. Edward's. Both teams have areas of concern to address. "I thought our defense made some big hits and god a couple of sacks early," said Enterline. "However, we've gone scoreless the past two weeks and need to mix things up on offense better. We have to play hard and get ourselves into the playoffs."
"You can never be too good at fundamentals," said Plumby. "We have to fix some small mistakes here and there before the playoffs."

Howard, Cavanaugh to face off after mix-up

By KEN CHAMPA and BRIAN LONG
Sports Writers

For the second time this week, Howard is preparing to play Cavanaugh, and this time the two teams will finally get a chance to play.

A scheduling mix-up last Sunday resulted in Howard playing against McGlinn, when they thought they were going to play Cavanaugh.

The Ducks lost to the McGlinn Shamrocks, dropping the Ducks to 2-2. However, Howard is motivated to make the best of the foul-up.

"We're mad about the schedule, but we feel like we are ready, and determined to play on Tuesday," said Ducks senior captain Katie Cawley.

This season has been full of close finishes and frustrating losses for Howard.

"It's been really frustrating, we know we're good, we just need to finish off our drives and score," said Cawley.

Howard will use the talented offensive trio of quarterback Jill Vetterott, receiver Elizabeth Klimek and running back On-Kay Helmig.

Although Howard's offense has been solid, it is its defense that will be needed to stop the high-flying attack of senior quarterback and captain Mandy Reimer and the Chaos of Cavanaugh (2-1-1).

This season, Howard's defense has benefitted from scouting done by its coaches Chris McBride and Paul Gazetta.

"The coaches have really helped us by scouting other teams for us, it helps a lot with what we should be doing on every play," said junior safety Kate Dinardo.

In Cavanaugh's offensive tailback Megan Land and Megan Myers, along with receiver Katie Burdick, compliment Reimer's game.

The Chaos is hoping to earn the win to secure a playoff spot.

"We're hoping to win and get a good spot in the playoffs," said Reimer. "The season has been a lot of fun, and we have a lot of competitors on the team who are hoping to do well."

The cold weather doesn't seem to be dampening the spirits of the Chaos as it goes into battle again.

"The weather has hurt our practices, but this season has been great, we are ready to go," said Reimer.

The two teams are set to square off this tonight at 9 p.m. at West Riehle Field.

McGlinn vs. Lewis

After four seasons of winless play, the McGlinn Shamrocks are suddenly playing mistake-free flag football and riding a three-game winning streak.

Heading into the regular season finale against league rival Lewis Hall, McGlinn looks ready to make its first trip to the postseason.

However, a victory will not come easy for the Shamrocks, as the Chicks of Lewis also know a little something about winning. Standing at 4-0-1, Lewis is still the Blue League going into the last week of division play.

With the playoffs in sight, the Chicks could be thinking Notre Dame Stadium already. However, during pregame interviews, Lewis players made it clear that they were not taking the McGlinn Shamrocks lightly.

"We are looking at this game as our first play-off game — we just want to play our game and finish up the regular season with a victory," said Kara Helimg.

The Chicks "play their game" with a stifling defense and an explosive offense.

Look for sophomore quarterback Erin Nasrallah to play a large part of the Chicks' success on the offensive side of the ball.

In their win over Off-Campus, Farley and Howard, the Shamrocks rolled with creative play-calling and beautiful execution on both sides of the ball.

While individuals such as Sarah Vatterott and On-Ray Wong have come up with big plays for McGlinn, the Shamrocks are looking for a total team effort in order to shut down Lewis.

"We've really stepped up in our last three games with a complete team effort," said Sarah Vatterott.

The Shamrocks will definitely need to be on the same page in order to pull out a victory over Lewis Hall, but if the last three games are any indication, McGlinn looks ready to roll over the Chicks and into the playoffs.

Belles hit the road again against Knights

By KATRINA KALASKY
Sports Writer

The Belles will hit the road again today, for the third away game in a row, against third-ranked Calvin College.

This game will be a challenge for the Belles. The Knights have the league’s two top scorers, junior Tricia Dyke and senior Larissa Onderlinde. Dyke and Onderlinde also lead the league for total points this past season and are number three and number four, respectively, for assists.

Calvin also defeated Saint Mary’s earlier this season, 3-1. Despite all this, the Belles feel ready for the game.

"In the beginning of the season, we were trying to find ourselves. The last couple of weeks we’ve come together as a team. We have five of its last six games, losing only to top-ranked Albion. Saint Mary’s started out with a record of 0-5. Since then, the Belles have undergone a sensational turn around, coming together as a team," said Belles head coach Bobby Johnston, of the transition from the beginning of the season.

The Knights were third over after the show to take a 2-1 win. However, he, too, was counting chads in the end of the game.

The game is at 4 p.m. at Calvin College.

1-3 looking pretty good

Interceptions. Not exactly Drew Brees quality, but it was enough to kick off the passing down and keep that clock rolling.

He ran for 19 carries for 122 yards and a touchdown, with that long 67-yard touchdown burst reminiscent of a run by brother No. 1, Jerrius Jackson, who was waiting to come into the game.

Threw in a workman-like performance from Julius Jones and some explosions from Tony Fisher, and the Irish were able to rack up 249 yards on the ground, almost three times their per-game average.

Not only did these passing and rushing numbers allow them to produce the "big plays" or the rumored to exist "long drive", they also let Notre Dame possess the ball for 70 plays and 37:23 of game time.

As any defensive coordinator will tell you, keeping a Panther wide receiver Antonio Bryant off the field is good. They don’t give you Biletnikoff Awards to run blocking well.

For their part, the defense stepped up even more than they have already (they’re giving up 249 yards per game) and found what they’ve been missing: turnovers, and lots of them.

Five, to be exact. The offense and the defense finally complemented and supported another with results on the field. That led to, as much as it pains me to say it, a very Husker-type win, minus about 100 yards of offense. Ten years ago, you would probably have called it a very Notre Dame-type win.

Control the ground, pass efficiently and control the clock.

Obviously, the Irish didn’t go out and roll for a high profile victory on Saturday. They beat Pittsburgh, now also a 1-3 team, with a loss to South Florida hanging around like an annoying little brother. They needed 300 yards of total offense for the second time this season and were waiting to see if they could hold on for the win.

Bob Dave had all the credit for the win to his team, and was happy just to see them excited around five in a Saturday afternoon.

But Bob Dave, he’s kept in perspective.

"I’m not going to get too dramatic about it. We’re a 1-3 football team. But it’s a heck of a lot better than being an 0-4 football team."

The record isn’t that much better, but the team’s mindset has to be. No longer is the endzone off limits like your dad’s power tools, or is 20 points something spoken of as what happened in "the good old days.

"It is a big win, not only for our football team, but for everyone," Holiday said. "It gives us a big boost and takes a lot off our shoulders. We needed this to keep us going — for some of these kids, it came didn’t want to get used to losing."

The Irish offense is still pretty predictable. In fact, they were on every first down against the Panthers. When it’s working the way it did against Pittsburgh, that’s easy to forget.

Most likely, though, the game plan will have to be more varied when Notre Dame faces Oxford Friday. I think the Irish are a heck of a lot better than we came didn’t want to get used to losing.

Faculty Opportunities

Faculty Needed! Through the Center for Social Concerns, Notre Dame students participate in service experiences so powerful that the lenses through which they’ve seen the world are permanently altered. Such experiences — providing health care to poor people in Ecuador, an intensive week in Appalachia — make our students want to know more. To deepen the learning these experiences inspire, we need faculty members to help them formulate questions for academic pursuit; professors who can provide bibliography, direct students to relevant courses, help them design research projects; teachers who will guide our students in thinking carefully about the issues. If you have interest in working with these students in these or other ways, please contact Mary Beckman at the CSC.

Dillon demolishes Stanford, clinches berth

Throughout the season, every team has poured weeks of preparation into their respective football teams. However, it took the Dillon Big Red (3-0) just slightly over an hour to clinch a spot in the playoffs.

Sunday afternoon, the Dillon running game pounded on the field with force and consistency and its defense stood solid in a 33-0 victory against Stanford (6-3).

"They are far and away the best team in the league," said Stanford caption Dave Dilworth. "You don't like to lose by that much, but they [Dillon] played real well."

Safety Adam Oyster and cornerback Kevin Barry kept the Dillon passing game slightly under control. However, the Griffins could not contain the rushing game.

Stanford's offense had troubles as well. "They shut us down on offense," said Dilworth. "We fumbled the ball a couple times and never really got anything going."

Despite the score, the Griffins were not lackadaisical. Missing several starting positions, Stanford played tough. Two players were sent to the infirmary, and Dilworth said they will be fine.

"We're going to work on passing a little more," said Dilworth.

If the Griffins win, there is an understatement. "The offense worked pretty well," said Odom. "The Griffins would say that is an understatement."

"I don't see who could beat them," said Dilworth, who plans to have his team ready to win next Sunday. "We are going to work on passing a little more." If the Griffins win, there is the possibility of earning a spot in the playoffs.

Dillon does not need to worry about that, but they will not prepare any less for this week's game. "We don't want to take anything lightly," said Odom. "We plan on being even better next week."

Keenan 13, Keough 7

"To go to his players' heads."

On the drive, Keenan ground down the Keough defense on a long drive and scored. The Knights then attempted a two-point conversion, but failed, leaving the Knights behind 7-6.

That drive was good for us because it was our first untainted drive all year," said Keenan caption Brent Morlok.

On the next drive, the Keough defense responded, preventing the 'Roos from getting a first down, and forcing Keough to give the ball back to the Griffins.

Once again, Keenan marched down the field, and withstood the opposition, and it was again Keenan's turn to shine. "I think we proved to ourselves that we can play with anyone."

The first half showcased the talented defenses of both Keough and Keenan, and the teams headed into halftime tied at 7-0. Keough broke the offensive struggle early in the first half, as Hess threw a long touchdown pass to receiver John Hess. The extra point put the 'Roos ahead 7-0. On the drive, Keenan ground down the Keough defense on a long drive and scored. The Knights then attempted a two-point conversion, but failed, leaving the Knights behind 7-6.

That drive was good for us because it was our first untainted drive all year," said Keenan caption Brent Morlok.

On the next drive, the Keough defense responded, preventing the 'Roos from getting a first down, and forcing Keough to give the ball back to the Griffins.

"Our defense as a whole was pretty good," said Baum. "But our offense couldn't do anything."

As a team, the Manorites looked lackadaisical. Their drives were uninspired, and they just could not convert key plays.

"There was no focus," said Baum. "We weren't fired up."

The Dawgs take credit for extinguishing this fire. "Alumni was able to score off broken coverage, and never looked back."

"We had a really strong attack in the middle of the field with our tight ends," said Alumni captain Nick Linstruth. "Tight ends Nick Alikoff and Drew DeWalt controlled the ball very well and were the primary part of the Alumni offense."

The Alumni defense was also on top of the ball. "Corey Harless pulled down two interceptions and freshman defensive end Higgins was part of several third down stops," said Linstruth.

"Morlok experience this first hand."

"Our offense couldn't do anything," said Baum. "We are definitely going to work on motivation and attitude."

"We have to win to get to the playoffs," said Baum. "The Manorites are going to have to pull off a big upset for this to happen. If it all comes down to what team shows up,"

"We want to be more organized and work on the bread and butter plays," said Linstruth. "This final week will be a good indication for everyone stands going into the playoffs."

ment since he took his first snap in Memorial Stadium in Lincoln, Neb. He doesn't try to make a big play happen every play. Instead, Holiday is much more patient and much more confident.

"I think I'm more mature now," he said. "I've worked hard to get to where my feet aren't wet anymore."

Holiday has showed how he's matured in the two games he has started. Against Texas A&M, Holiday spent most of the day scrambling around in the backfield, and was sacked three times. But against Pittsburgh he stayed in the pocket much more often, and when he did scramble, he threw the ball away.

"I looked at film and felt it was my obligation to not do those things," he said. "Those were real costly mistakes. I felt if I don't have that play, then get rid of the ball instead of losing yardage."

One of the reasons Holiday is starting at quarterback is because of his ability to create his own plays. Offensively, the Irish have made minor changes to allow Holiday to keep his hands on the ball more. But coaches are making sure he stays within the game plan and doesn't try to make too much.

"I don't want him to look like a chicken with his head cut off," Rogers said. "There's times where he gets back there and misses a read and runs all over the place. There's a difference between that and creativity."

Davie and Rogers are particularly excited about the opportunities Holiday allows the offense. He averages four yards a carry — and most of those carries come off the option, when Holiday sneaks inside the linebacker to pick up key yards. Rogers said that while he isn't too comfortable with Holiday's passing abilities — the sophomore is 22-for-35 with three interceptions — he was impressed with how Holiday threw the ball Saturday:

"He made some really really good throws under duress," Rogers said. "He was getting hit as soon as he threw it and threw it well and accurately."

But Davie, Rogers and Holiday are quick to say that the young quarterback still has a lot to learn. While it's still too early to learn how good Holiday can be, Davie said it's obvious that he provides the spark that the coaches feel the Irish offense needs. All he has to do is gain more experience.

"He's going to go through a lot of different phases," Davie said. "He's going to run the gamut before this year is over."

Notes:

- Head trainer Jim Russ talked briefly about various injuries sustained by Notre Dame players on Saturday.

Tony Fisher, who hurt his knee and his hamstring on the same play, was able to run at full speed, but coaches held him out of practice.

Jeff Faine is listed as probable for the West Virginia game after spraining his ankle Saturday afternoon. He played the entire game.

Russ also said that Grant Irons, who did not play Saturday, could have played as a backup. He practiced at full speed Monday.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY--John Lennon, Sean Lennon, Jackson Browne, Scott Baio, Robert Wald.

Happy Birthday! Focus on innovative projects that will prove your talent. Your ideas are innovative, but don't worry about timing. Be honest about what you really want and make the right decision. This could be a stabilizing year. Your numbers: 11, 22, 33, 34, 16.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You'll be unable to control your anger if you discuss emotional issues with family members. Downshift your energy into physical work rather than discord. Random moves will be favorable.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Make plans for settings with relatives and friends, which will provide stimulating conversation. Your knowledge and good sense will help relationships become stronger.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You're up to make a move or experience changes at home. Accept the inevitable. You can make money if you commit to a solid investment plan. Your hard work will pay off in advancement.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Start a new financial venture. You're feeling stressed out, cut your losses. Use what is available.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Start on all those endeavors you've been talking about for so long. Family members will be anxious if you make promises and don't follow through.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Travel for business or pleasure. Much can be arranged, if you point out your plans.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't bother starting a dispute with anyone today. It won't be worth the time or effort. Financial speculation with family members or close friends should be put on the back burner. A loss might lead to a family feud.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Pursue outdoor activities or physical pursuits. You're a natural athlete. Your energy and good sense will help relationships become stronger.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't put up with people who don't treat you right now.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you're feeling stressed out, cut your losses. Use what is available.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If you concentrate on your profession and not getting ahead financially, problems will smooth out. You need a change of scene. Don't change plans.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): You enjoy entertaining and can host many events if you wish. You will attract attention and new love interests.

The suspension was a result of an incident where "Gonzalez was in the wrong place at the wrong time. She was with a student who had drugs," said Rice. Rice said that Gonzalez was not in the room at the time the drugs were confiscated at the University of the Americas. He also said that originally, the individual who "had the drugs blamed it on her. The kid had been in trouble before." The other student, Gerardo Vallejo, eventually came forward and asserted the drugs belonged to him, and that he asked Gonzalez to lie about the ownership of the marijuana, according to Rice.

Gonzalez was never charged with any crime in Mexico involving marijuana, but was put on probation by the University of the Americas, according to Rice. Gonzalez finished her semester in Mexico with a 3.93 GPA.

In regard to the University's punishment, Rice said that it seemed "quite extreme." "The University's court pleading is clear. Gerardo paid for the drugs," said Rice.

Gonzalez is a member of the Mexican National soccer team, and a starting defender for Notre Dame. She had played in all nine of the Irish's games this year, scoring one goal and dishing out two assists, and is considered one of the top outside defenders in the country.
