‘Notre Dame 10’ to return to campus to honor 40th anniversary of Dow-CIA demonstration

By MADELINE BUCKLEY
News Editor

Editor’s note: This is the first of a four-part series commemorating the 40th anniversary of the Notre Dame 10 and exploring the history of student activism on campus.

The number 10 had a special ring to it in November of 1969. On Nov. 18, 1969, 10 students were suspended for a protest related to the Vietnam War, and the group was quickly dubbed the “Notre Dame 10” as they fought their suspension—an issue that generated national media attention at the time.

For Mark Mahoney, one of the suspended students, that number 10 has influenced him for a lifetime.

On the 40th anniversary of the protest and suspension, Mahoney, class of 1971, is returning to Notre Dame Wednesday with other members of the Notre Dame 10 to explore campus activism now and then with a panel discussion, a dinner and a Mass presided by University President Emeritus Fr. Theodore Hesburgh and Fr. Emmanuel Charles McCarthy.

“We are not returning to campus because of nostalgia. There’s nothing to be nostalgic about during this period,” he said. “There were horrific things being done and we were anguishing over that.”

About 1 p.m. on that Tuesday afternoon, Mahoney said about 100 students gathered in the Main Building to protest on-campus recruitment efforts by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and The Dow Chemical Co. The students involved in the demonstration, known as the Dow-CIA protest, objected to Dow’s production of napalm, a chemical used by the military in the Vietnam War, often on civilians.

Students stage a sit-in in the Main Building on Nov. 18, 1969 to protest on-campus recruitment by the Dow Chemical Co. and the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA).

see PROTEST/page 4

‘Mayor of Hell’ works to improve Braddock

By MEGAN HEMLER
News Writer

A Rolling Stone profile calls him the “Mayor of Hell,” and Braddock, Pa. “maybe the worst town in America,” but that doesn’t seem to have diminished Mayor John Fetterman’s energy or dedication to the historic steel town.

“Our challenge in the town ... is abandonment.”

Mayor John Fetterman talks about his dedication to Braddock, Pa. Rolling Stone calls him the ‘Mayor of Hell.’

By SUZANNA PRATT/The Observer

The number 10 had a special ring to it in November of 1969. On Nov. 18, 1969, 10 students were suspended for a protest related to the Vietnam War, and the group was quickly dubbed the “Notre Dame 10” as they fought their suspension—an issue that generated national media attention at the time.

For Mark Mahoney, one of the suspended students, that number 10 has influenced him for a lifetime.

On the 40th anniversary of the protest and suspension, Mahoney, class of 1971, is returning to Notre Dame Wednesday with other members of the Notre Dame 10 to explore campus activism now and then with a panel discussion, a dinner and a Mass presided by University President Emeritus Fr. Theodore Hesburgh and Fr. Emmanuel Charles McCarthy.

“We are not returning to campus because of nostalgia. There’s nothing to be nostalgic about during this period,” he said. “There were horrific things being done and we were anguishing over that.”

About 1 p.m. on that Tuesday afternoon, Mahoney said about 100 students gathered in the Main Building to protest on-campus recruitment efforts by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and The Dow Chemical Co. The students involved in the demonstration, known as the Dow-CIA protest, objected to Dow’s production of napalm, a chemical used by the military in the Vietnam War, often on civilians.

Students stage a sit-in in the Main Building on Nov. 18, 1969 to protest on-campus recruitment by the Dow Chemical Co. and the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA).

see PROTEST/page 4

‘Mayor of Hell’ works to improve Braddock

By MEGAN HEMLER
News Writer

A Rolling Stone profile calls him the “Mayor of Hell,” and Braddock, Pa. “maybe the worst town in America,” but that doesn’t seem to have diminished Mayor John Fetterman’s energy or dedication to the historic steel town.

“Our challenge in the town ... is abandonment.”

Mayor John Fetterman talks about his dedication to Braddock, Pa. Rolling Stone calls him the ‘Mayor of Hell.’

By SUZANNA PRATT/The Observer

The number 10 had a special ring to it in November of 1969. On Nov. 18, 1969, 10 students were suspended for a protest related to the Vietnam War, and the group was quickly dubbed the “Notre Dame 10” as they fought their suspension—an issue that generated national media attention at the time.

For Mark Mahoney, one of the suspended students, that number 10 has influenced him for a lifetime.

On the 40th anniversary of the protest and suspension, Mahoney, class of 1971, is returning to Notre Dame Wednesday with other members of the Notre Dame 10 to explore campus activism now and then with a panel discussion, a dinner and a Mass presided by University President Emeritus Fr. Theodore Hesburgh and Fr. Emmanuel Charles McCarthy.

“We are not returning to campus because of nostalgia. There’s nothing to be nostalgic about during this period,” he said. “There were horrific things being done and we were anguishing over that.”

About 1 p.m. on that Tuesday afternoon, Mahoney said about 100 students gathered in the Main Building to protest on-campus recruitment efforts by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and The Dow Chemical Co. The students involved in the demonstration, known as the Dow-CIA protest, objected to Dow’s production of napalm, a chemical used by the military in the Vietnam War, often on civilians.

Students stage a sit-in in the Main Building on Nov. 18, 1969 to protest on-campus recruitment by the Dow Chemical Co. and the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA).

see PROTEST/page 4

‘Mayor of Hell’ works to improve Braddock

By MEGAN HEMLER
News Writer

A Rolling Stone profile calls him the “Mayor of Hell,” and Braddock, Pa. “maybe the worst town in America,” but that doesn’t seem to have diminished Mayor John Fetterman’s energy or dedication to the historic steel town.

“Our challenge in the town ... is abandonment.”

Mayor John Fetterman talks about his dedication to Braddock, Pa. Rolling Stone calls him the ‘Mayor of Hell.’

By SUZANNA PRATT/The Observer

The number 10 had a special ring to it in November of 1969. On Nov. 18, 1969, 10 students were suspended for a protest related to the Vietnam War, and the group was quickly dubbed the “Notre Dame 10” as they fought their suspension—an issue that generated national media attention at the time.

For Mark Mahoney, one of the suspended students, that number 10 has influenced him for a lifetime.

On the 40th anniversary of the protest and suspension, Mahoney, class of 1971, is returning to Notre Dame Wednesday with other members of the Notre Dame 10 to explore campus activism now and then with a panel discussion, a dinner and a Mass presided by University President Emeritus Fr. Theodore Hesburgh and Fr. Emmanuel Charles McCarthy.

“We are not returning to campus because of nostalgia. There’s nothing to be nostalgic about during this period,” he said. “There were horrific things being done and we were anguishing over that.”

About 1 p.m. on that Tuesday afternoon, Mahoney said about 100 students gathered in the Main Building to protest on-campus recruitment efforts by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and The Dow Chemical Co. The students involved in the demonstration, known as the Dow-CIA protest, objected to Dow’s production of napalm, a chemical used by the military in the Vietnam War, often on civilians.

Students stage a sit-in in the Main Building on Nov. 18, 1969 to protest on-campus recruitment by the Dow Chemical Co. and the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA).

see PROTEST/page 4

‘Mayor of Hell’ works to improve Braddock

By MEGAN HEMLER
News Writer

A Rolling Stone profile calls him the “Mayor of Hell,” and Braddock, Pa. “maybe the worst town in America,” but that doesn’t seem to have diminished Mayor John Fetterman’s energy or dedication to the historic steel town.

“Our challenge in the town ... is abandonment.”

Mayor John Fetterman talks about his dedication to Braddock, Pa. Rolling Stone calls him the ‘Mayor of Hell.’

By SUZANNA PRATT/The Observer

The number 10 had a special ring to it in November of 1969. On Nov. 18, 1969, 10 students were suspended for a protest related to the Vietnam War, and the group was quickly dubbed the “Notre Dame 10” as they fought their suspension—an issue that generated national media attention at the time.

For Mark Mahoney, one of the suspended students, that number 10 has influenced him for a lifetime.

On the 40th anniversary of the protest and suspension, Mahoney, class of 1971, is returning to Notre Dame Wednesday with other members of the Notre Dame 10 to explore campus activism now and then with a panel discussion, a dinner and a Mass presided by University President Emeritus Fr. Theodore Hesburgh and Fr. Emmanuel Charles McCarthy.

“We are not returning to campus because of nostalgia. There’s nothing to be nostalgic about during this period,” he said. “There were horrific things being done and we were anguishing over that.”

About 1 p.m. on that Tuesday afternoon, Mahoney said about 100 students gathered in the Main Building to protest on-campus recruitment efforts by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and The Dow Chemical Co. The students involved in the demonstration, known as the Dow-CIA protest, objected to Dow’s production of napalm, a chemical used by the military in the Vietnam War, often on civilians.

Students stage a sit-in in the Main Building on Nov. 18, 1969 to protest on-campus recruitment by the Dow Chemical Co. and the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA).

see PROTEST/page 4

‘Mayor of Hell’ works to improve Braddock

By MEGAN HEMLER
News Writer

A Rolling Stone profile calls him the “Mayor of Hell,” and Braddock, Pa. “maybe the worst town in America,” but that doesn’t seem to have diminished Mayor John Fetterman’s energy or dedication to the historic steel town.

“Our challenge in the town ... is abandonment.”

Mayor John Fetterman talks about his dedication to Braddock, Pa. Rolling Stone calls him the ‘Mayor of Hell.’

By SUZANNA PRATT/The Observer

The number 10 had a special ring to it in November of 1969. On Nov. 18, 1969, 10 students were suspended for a protest related to the Vietnam War, and the group was quickly dubbed the “Notre Dame 10” as they fought their suspension—an issue that generated national media attention at the time.

For Mark Mahoney, one of the suspended students, that number 10 has influenced him for a lifetime.

On the 40th anniversary of the protest and suspension, Mahoney, class of 1971, is returning to Notre Dame Wednesday with other members of the Notre Dame 10 to explore campus activism now and then with a panel discussion, a dinner and a Mass presided by University President Emeritus Fr. Theodore Hesburgh and Fr. Emmanuel Charles McCarthy.

“We are not returning to campus because of nostalgia. There’s nothing to be nostalgic about during this period,” he said. “There were horrific things being done and we were anguishing over that.”

About 1 p.m. on that Tuesday afternoon, Mahoney said about 100 students gathered in the Main Building to protest on-campus recruitment efforts by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and The Dow Chemical Co. The students involved in the demonstration, known as the Dow-CIA protest, objected to Dow’s production of napalm, a chemical used by the military in the Vietnam War, often on civilians.

Students stage a sit-in in the Main Building on Nov. 18, 1969 to protest on-campus recruitment by the Dow Chemical Co. and the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA).

see PROTEST/page 4
I am just as excited for the new "Twilight" movie as the next 21-year-old female. "New Moon" actually looks pretty damn entertaining. Everyone's hair looks better and the action sequences feature Dakota Fanning and the guy who plays Colossus in the X-Men movies. If the clips in the TV spots are any indication, this thing might be a legitimately "good" movie, as far as an adaptation of a cliched and derivative publishing phenomenon can be.

In fact, it looks so good that I am totally going to see it this Thursday at midnight. My friends and I got these tickets a month ago.

Despite this seeming devotion, I was on the edge of really hating the whole enterprise a year ago. See, I read the first three books and loved them despite their grammatical mistakes and portrayals of emotionally abusive relationships. Then I read the fourth installment, "Breaking Dawn," when it came out in summer 2008. This is when I had the first inklings that author Stephenie Meyer was really stupid.

Spoiler: Bella’s one-time werewolf crush Jacob falls in love with Bella’s demon baby and then there’s all this build-up for an epic battle with the crenkty, ancient Italian vampire police and nothing. They talk it out, it’s okay that there’s a demon baby, Bella’s okay that her one-time crush will marry her demon-baby, and even everyone lives happily ever after, because they are all vampires and werewolves and they can’t die. The end. Fade to black. I paid $24.99, pre-ordered from Amazon, for this?

Thank heavens the movies didn’t disappoint. "Twilight" was seriously the best comedy of 2008. My friends and I had no idea it would be so "LOC." worth a peek. We ventured out in a blizzard for the midnight Mishakauka premieres — we were expecting a dutifully angst-ridden paranormal teenage romance. Nothing outrageous about that hope, right?

Instead, we spent half the movie with our scarves shoved in our mouths to keep from giggling at inappropriate moments. Kristen Stewart’s Bella just wouldn’t stop blushing. Robert Pattinson’s Edward scars off drunk-en frat boys by galumphing in with a Volvo and then growling. It is a baseball game choreographed to Muse! Oh, and don’t even try to tell me he didn’t cry out of mirth when Edward reveals his sparkly six-pack with the explanation of “This is the skin of killer, Bella.”

But, really, I liked "Twilight." Don’t doubt my commitment to the series. I appreciate what things "Twilight" does well: Angst and more angst. Awkward human-vampire interactions. Premature trees. So, naturally, I am excited for "New Moon." Now there is awkward human-vampire-werewolf interaction. Taylor Lautner’s Jacob, the shiftless werewolf wonder, joins Bella’s collection of emotionally abusive and codependent relationships. And, there is more of those sparkly six-pack abs, only this time they’re revealed in bulk.

But I can’t back out now. I am committed — I’ve got the pre-sale receipt from my pre-order tucked up on my loft. I’ll just have to make sure I bring a scarf to muffle my giggles this time, too.

The views expressed in the Inside Column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer. Contact Jordan Gamble at jgamble@nd.edu

Correction

The Observer regrets indulging a professional publication and serious for the highest standards of journalism at all times. We do, however, recognize that we will make mistakes. If we have made a mistake, please contact us at 631-4541 so we can correct our error.

In Brief

"The Rise of Ethnic Politics in Latin America" will be held at 12:30 p.m. today. The lecture will be held in C-103 in the Hesburgh Center.

Mike Huckabee will be signing "A Simple Christmas: Twelve Stories That Celebrate the True Holiday Spirit" at 2 p.m. today. The book signing will be held in th Hamme Cafe in the Hamme Notre Dame Bookstore.

A seminar titled “The Role of Catalysis and Reaction Engineering in the Energy Arena” will be held in 129 DeBartolo Hall today. The seminar will begin at 3:30 p.m.

"Fall Harvest: 10 New Plays" will be presented in the Phyllis Studio Theatre in DeBartolo Performing Arts Center at 7:30 p.m. today. The event is free, but tickets are needed to enter. To order tickets, call 574-631-2800 or visit performingarts.nd.edu.

The International Week Recital will be held at 7:30 p.m. in Haggar Parlor at Saint Mary’s College today.

A fictionalized dialogue will be held at 8 p.m. in 100, 102, and 105 in Jordan Hall of Science. The dialogue is titled "Darwin and Owen at Notre Dame: A conversation after 150 years."

To submit information to be included in this section of The Observer, e-mail detailed information about an event to observer.questions@gmail.com

Have a question for the Day? E-mail observer.questions@gmail.com

JORDAN GAMBLE
Associate Scene Editor
Project presents on sex ed

By SAM STRYKER
News Writer

Americans live in a media world that believes sex is without consequences, Vicki Thorn, founder of Project Rachel, said at a seminar.

Thorn visited campus to lecture on topics in sex education that aren’t taught in the average American classroom.

Thorn spoke first about the common bond shared by all those attending her speech.

“Everyone in this room only has the mitochondria of their mothers,” she said.

Thorn stated that research has proven that these mitochondria have been traced back to seven distinct lines of women, leading to the scientific possibility of an Eve figure in human evolution.

“In a society where we are taught to be individuals, in reality there is this interconnectedness,” Thorn said.

Thorn shifted from the subject of interconnectedness to the problem of selective abortion. Thorn spoke of how in some Asian nations — particularly India and North Korea — selective abortions have led to more males being born in the population.

This has led warfare, based on the rise of testosterone and search for female pheromones, leading to the scientific possibility of an Eve figure in human evolution.

“In a society where we are taught to be individuals, in reality there is this interconnectedness,” Thorn said.

Thorn also focused on the difference between male and female brains, showing a display of a female brain much like a circle and the male brain like a series of boxes.

She said males think linearly while women think in a multi-tasking manner. According to Thorn, these shapes are important to the way human society works.

“It’s this innate difference between being male and female,” she said.

Thorn said the importance of pheromones in communication between males and females.

Thorn said pheromones can be perceived in 80 percent of humans, and women with this ability are able to detect potential mates.

“Women have the ability to meet a male and using pheromones determine whether he is a strong possibility for fertility,” she said.

Thorn said men perceive pheromones in a different way by detecting whether a woman is fertile, infertile or pregnant. She said when women ovulate, they send out stronger signals to males and trigger a response in the male.

“This is how women get date raped and then pregnant,” Thorn said. “This is a time when we’re conditionally and sexually aware.”

Thorn said the introduction of birth control has some complications in society in regards to male and female relations.

“We know that male fertility has dropped 50 percent since the advent of the pill,” she said.

Thorn also said the chemicals in birth control pills have become a waste management issue as they have begun to collect in the world’s water.

She described the scent of infertile women as possibly causing problems in society such as pornography and violent rape.

Thorn said pheromones do have important positive purposes as well.

“Men can perceive when their partner is pregnant and are changed forever,” she said.

Thorn also highlighted the importance of this chemistry between men and women is lifelong. She brought up the topic of addictive substances. She said amphetamines in our brain dominate the period in which we are infatuated with someone, lasting eight months to four years.

Longer lasting love, another type of addiction — which is more stable than infatuation — is linked to oxytocin, an opiate.

We need to recognize that we’re changed by every act of intercourse,” Thorn said.

Thorne closed her lecture with an important word of caution for audience members.

“Our society has made love cheap without really speaking about changes that occur,” she said.

Contact Sam Stryker at streyk1@nd.edu

THE NOTRE DAME 10

November 18, 1969 – November 18, 2009

“Being a Christian in a Catholic University in Times of War: Has 40 Years Changed the Conversation?”

Tomorrow is the anniversary of a student demonstration in the Main Building to protest Notre Dame’s involvement with the CIA and Dow Chemical, makers of Napalm used in the Vietnam War. As a result (and for the first time) students were suspended for a moral protest. The case was historic and raises questions still present today. Some of the 10 are returning to talk...

Tomorrow, 7:30 pm in the Geddes Hall (Center for Social Concerns) Coffee House. All are invited

“...in the way of peace and justice. What the Administration wants to do is call us to order, to ask us to change our tactics, but not to engage in a battle to change the system.”

— Defense Brief of The Notre Dame 10”

The Observer ◆ CAMPUS NEWS
The students rallied under the Dome, blocking Dow and CIA recruiters from entering or leaving the building.

“We were staging a sit in, and at the time, that form of protest well known in the anti-war movement and the Civil Rights movement,” Mahoney said.

But months earlier, Hesburgh, then-University president, had enacted the 15-minute rule to address the rising number of campus protests. The rule stated that demonstrators were allowed 15 minutes to protest. If they did not stop in that period, the students would face consequences.

“We were staging a sit in, and at the time, that form of protest well known in the anti-war movement and the Civil Rights movement.”

Mark Mahoney
student protester

As an alum, I want to know what the issues of concern are for students. I want to see what is the same and what has changed from 40 years ago.”

John Eckenrode
student protester

"As an alum, I want to know what the issues of concern are for students, I want to see what is the same and what has changed from 40 years ago."

John Eckenrode, dean of students at the time, took the identification cards of 10 students after the 15 minutes had passed.

Mahoney said the students banded together that night and eventually appealed their suspensions. Originally, five students were expelled and five were suspended.

Riehle downgraded the expulsion of the five students to a suspension, but did not remove the suspension of the 10 students, Mahoney said.

"The proceedings were very court-like and the procedures and rules of evidence and thing were quite technical," Mahoney said. “But the technicality of that wasn’t our concern. It was that the issues we were raising were moral issues, not legal issues.”

John Eckenrode was one of the 10 suspended that day along with Mahoney, and he graduated a semester late because of the suspension. But he said he does not regret his involvement in the demonstration.

“I was aware that the 15 minute rule could be evoked. I made a decision that it was a time to take a stand on this issue aware there might be some consequences involved.”

Eckenrode said.

Eckenrode will return to campus Wednesday for the 40th anniversary of the protest, along with Mahoney.

"I think it’s important for us as a university to commemorate what has really been a long and interesting history of social activism at Notre Dame,” Eckenrode said. "For me, this is keeping alive a part of Notre Dame history."

Mahoney said it is important for him to keep the dialogue alive.

"So many students at Notre Dame are socially conscious and concerned with issues of morality, institutions and life and death issues," he said. “We need to continually question what the role is of a Catholic university in times of war.”

Eckenrode said he hopes to learn about activism on campus now.

“As an alum, I want to know what the issues of concern are for students,” he said. “I want to see what is the same and what has changed from 40 years ago.”

The second installment of this series will look back on the events of 40 years ago and examine possibilities for the future of student activism. It will run in Wednesday’s edition.

Contact Madeline Buckley at mbuckley@nd.edu
INTERNATIONAL NEWS

Mussolini’s mistress’ diary published

HOME — Benito Mussolini was a fierce anti- Semite, who proudly said that his hatred for Jews preceded Adolf Hitler’s and vowed to “destroy them all,” according to previously unpublished diaries by the Fascist dictator’s longtime mistress.

According to the diaries, Mussolini also talked about his sexual relationships received from Hitler at the 1938 Munich conference — he called the German leader a “silly” — and attacked Pope Pius XI for his criticism of Nazism and Fascism.

On a more intimate note, Mussolini was explicit about his sexual appetites for his mistress and said he entertained having affairs with several other women.

The diaries kept by Cleotara Potaci, Mussolini’s mistress, between 1932 and 1938 are the subject of a book coming out this week entitled “Secret Mussolini.”

Australia apologizes to Brit kids

CANN  — When John Hennessey was 10 years old, he was sent from a war-wary Britain to an orphanage in Australia, where he was told food was plentiful and children rode kangaroos to school.

Instead, he was beaten and sexually abused, leaving him emotionally scarred and with a stutter.

“There’s no other country in the world that has deported their children to the other side of the world and then abandoned them,” the 72-year-old said before an emotional ceremony Monday in Australia, where Prime Minister Kevin Rudd apologized for his country’s role in a shameful episode in British colonial history.

NATIONAL NEWS

Woman to plead guilty in Smart case

ATHENS (AP) — The wrenching saga of Elizabeth Smart’s abduction and improbable recovery is showing the first signs of resolution seven years after it began.

On Tuesday, Waide Eileen Barzee — one of two women who helped bring Elizabeth Smart home from her attacker — will plead guilty to charges of kidnapping and unlawful transportation of a minor in U.S. District Court in Salt Lake City, attorney Scott Williams told The Associated Press.

Barzee’s alleged role in the abduction has garnered more attention than that of her estranged husband, Brian David Mitchell, but her attorneys have said how much charges marks a major step forward in the separate cases that stalled when both defendants were ruled incompetent to stand trial.

Smart’s abduction at knife point from the bedroom of her Salt Lake City home in 2002 riveted the nation as hundreds of people helped search for the blonde-haired, blue-eyed girl who loved to play the harp.

Ohio police chief’s trial begins

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, Ohio — A police chief on trial in Ohio acknowledges that he joked with paparazzi about working with them to snoop on Sarah Jessica Parker and Matthew Broderick.

The lawyer representing suspended Chief Barry Carpenter said during opening arguments he helped search for the blonde-haired, blue-eyed woman to plead guilty to the federal charges marks an important step in the case, according to previously unpublished diaries by the Fascist dictator’s longtime mistress.

Obama meets with China’s president

While Obama says the world is watching, Chinese censors block his message

BEIJING — President Barack Obama declared Monday the world is urgently watching for a “meeting of the minds” between the U.S. and China as he meets with Chinese President Hu Jintao on the globe’s biggest issues — climate change, economic recession, nuclear proliferation and more.

Obama also praised China about Internet controls and free speech, but his message was not widely heard in the country because his words were drastically limited online and shown on just one regional television channel.

In his first visit here, Obama is strongly suggesting that China, now a giant in economic impact as well as territory, must take a bigger role on the world stage — part of the “burden of leadership” he shares with the United States.

“I will tell you, other countries around the world will be waiting for us,” Obama said in a news conference that was the first American-style town hall discussion with Chinese university students in Shanghai, where he spent a day before flying to Beijing for a capital for a state visit with President Hu.

The town hall meeting showed how difficult it is for the governments to work together. The U.S. initially requested a larger venue and a live broadcast of the event on the fringes of the city. Only local Shanghai TV carried it live, though it was streamed on two popular Internet portals and on the White House’s Web site, which is not censored.

Eager to achieve a successful summit, the two leaders were likely to avoid public spats on economic issues. With America’s budget deficit soaring to a yearly record of $1.42 trillion, China is the No. 1 lender to Washington and has expressed concern that the falling price of the dollar threatens the value of its holdings.

In the U.S., American manufacturers blame China’s own low currency value for contributing to the loss of 5.6 million manufacturing jobs over the past decade. During that time, America’s trade gap with China has soared.

Obama said at Beijing’s airport by Vice President Xi Jinping, red carpet lined by soldiers in dress uniforms and a dusting of snow on the grass.

He had brief talks with the private dinner with Hu on the smooth grass of the Diaoyutai State Guesthouse.

In brief remarks before the initial talks, Hu noted Obama’s Shanghai meeting with students, calling the session “quite lively.”

Obama smiled broadly throughout the welcoming remarks, then told Hu that “the world recognizes the importance of the U.S.-Chinese relationship” in tackling global problems.

The two were meeting again more formally on Tuesday, complete with the military pomp of a welcome ceremony at the Great Hall of the People and a joint appearance before reporters. With sightseeing in Beijing’s Forbidden City sandwiched in between, the two leaders’ day was to end at a lavish state dinner in Obama’s honor. Obama was spending Wednesday in Beijing as well before completing his weeklong Asia travels in South Korea.

As is now becoming familiar, Obama was full of compliments for China during the town hall, lauding its scientific achievements, rich history and astounding economic rise.

As is also familiar, the president balanced the warm words with polite nudges in more sensitive territory, for instance on the need for Beijing to move toward a more consumer-driven economy and to improve human rights and freedoms for its people.

CHINA

Obama meets with China’s president

While Obama says the world is watching, Chinese censors block his message

BEIJING — President Barack Obama declared Monday the world is urgently watching for a “meeting of the minds” between the U.S. and China as he meets with Chinese President Hu Jintao on the globe’s biggest issues — climate change, economic recession, nuclear proliferation and more.

Obama also praised China about Internet controls and free speech, but his message was not widely heard in the country because his words were drastically limited online and shown on just one regional television channel.

In his first visit here, Obama is strongly suggesting that China, now a giant in economic impact as well as territory, must take a bigger role on the world stage — part of the “burden of leadership” he shares with the United States.

“I will tell you, other countries around the world will be waiting for us,” Obama said in a news conference that was the first American-style town hall discussion with Chinese university students in Shanghai, where he spent a day before flying to Beijing for a capital for a state visit with President Hu.

The town hall meeting showed how difficult it is for the governments to work together. The U.S. initially requested a larger venue and a live broadcast of the event on the fringes of the city. Only local Shanghai TV carried it live, though it was streamed on two popular Internet portals and on the White House’s Web site, which is not censored.

Eager to achieve a successful summit, the two leaders were likely to avoid public spats on economic issues. With America’s budget deficit soaring to a yearly record of $1.42 trillion, China is the No. 1 lender to Washington.

In brief remarks before the initial talks, Hu noted Obama’s Shanghai meeting with students, calling the session “quite lively.”

Obama smiled broadly throughout the welcoming remarks, then told Hu that “the world recognizes the importance of the U.S.-Chinese relationship” in tackling global problems.

The two were meeting again more formally on Tuesday, complete with the military pomp of a welcome ceremony at the Great Hall of the People and a joint appearance before reporters. With sightseeing in Beijing’s Forbidden City sandwiched in between, the two leaders’ day was to end at a lavish state dinner in Obama’s honor. Obama was spending Wednesday in Beijing as well before completing his weeklong Asia travels in South Korea.

As is now becoming familiar, Obama was full of compliments for China during the town hall, lauding its scientific achievements, rich history and astounding economic rise.

As is also familiar, the president balanced the warm words with polite nudges in more sensitive territory, for instance on the need for Beijing to move toward a more consumer-driven economy and to improve human rights and freedoms for its people.

KENYA

Kenya recruited to fight in Somalia

President Barack Obama greets audience members after he spoke and took questions at a town hall-style event with Chinese youth at a museum in Shanghai Monday.

Kenya recruited to fight in Somalia

A UN official says there have been rumors but no hard evidence of recruitment in refugee camps, which would violate the rights of the refugees.

Eight diplomats, citing internal reports and other sources, told The Associated Press that the recruits are being trained for a planned offensive on behalf of Somalia’s weak, U.N.-backed government to wrest control of parts of southern Somalia from the insurgents. The diplomats spoke on condition of anonymity to prevent damaging relations with Kenya over the sensitive subject. Two of the diplomats said the offensive is planned for the end of Kenya’s rainy season around the end of the year.

Local News

Court weighs use of tests in sentencing

INDIANAPOLIS — A felon’s friends and family are backing him to be sentenced to six years out of a possible 7 years in prison.

A Tippecanoe County judge cited a type of psychological test commonly used by probation officers to assess whether an offender is likely to commit crimes and determine the level of supervision and type of treatment needed.

The Associated Press
Mayor

continued from page 1

Braddock's population has been on a downward slide for years. It's gone from over 20,000 residents to just 2,500 residents, according to the town's official Web site, www.15104.cc. The including home price is around $6,000. Fetterman himself has refurbished a warehouse that he bought for $2,000, according to a New York Times story published in January.

He ran for mayor in 2005 and won the primary by a single vote. Since then, he has supported a number of initiatives aimed at bringing new residents to Braddock, while also creating new community spaces for current Braddock residents. "The area's only art gallery was an abandoned middle school. The greenest building is the one that's already there. Green initiatives and green jobs are a pragmatic solution for Braddock, using our assets that we already have and creating something that makes sense," Joly said.

One of the first buildings Fetterman refurbished himself was an abandoned church, which he lives in with no heat or electricity for eight months. The church now functions as a community center.

"The greenest building is the one that's already there. Green initiatives and green jobs are a pragmatic solution for Braddock, using our assets that we already have and creating something that makes sense," Fetterman said. Braddock, Pa.

"Our hospital has been providing care for the long thing you're in until you're out. The one thing you're in for the long thing we're in. It's a new challenge," Fetterman said.

"We need to send this to our friends in New York," Joly said. "[It was] the experience of my life." Other students talked about the cultural differences of countries compared to America. Others shared their hopes and desires for their host countries regarding health care, education, housing and other issues.

In addition, the night was a time to honor the study abroad video, photo and essay contest winners. Junior Chelsea Crone won the video contest. In the host country category of the photo contest, first place went to Allison Russell, a senior, second to Anne Maguire, a junior, and third to junior Caitlin Gorman. In the reflections of Saint Mary's experience photo category, Russell won first place while Megan McGlorey, a senior, won second and third place.

In the interactions with people in the host country category, junior Christina Grasso took first, while senior place and Jones took third. Megan McDermott, a junior, and junior Caroline Arness won first and second prize respectively in the essay contest. The event also helped educate future study abroad applicants about the various grants available to students that can aid in covering study abroad costs.

Yang said there are three possible grants for which students may apply. Two grants are funded by the Center for Women's Intercultural Leadership (CWL) and the Department of Humanistic Studies offers the third.

The CWL grants break down into one grant specifically for the Saint Mary's study abroad programs. However, this grant only applies to summer programs or the Rome program. The other grant is for independent study, and not affiliated with any study abroad program.

The deadline for this year's grant application is Feb. 1. Yang said students should visit the CWL Web site for additional information.

Contact Caitlin Housley at chous01@saintmarys.edu

---

Showcase

continued from page 1

"opportunity to share their experiences. "We send our students to other countries and now [they] have brought back the world to us. That is very exciting," Dr. Alice Yang, the director of global education at Saint Mary's, said.

Students study all around the world, including the countries of Rome, China, India, Ireland, Austria and many more.

Krista Jones, a Saint Mary's senior who studied in Uganda, said of her experience: "It was an experience unlike any I could imagine." In Uganda, children followed Jones wherever she went. "They had never seen a white person before," Jones said. "They just wanted to touch my skin." Mariam Masri, a Saint Mary's senior who traveled to Lebanon, said her time abroad allowed her to meet relatives. "It was time for me to meet my dad's side of the family," she said. Masri also said being half Lebanese is quite unusual in America, but it was not so in Lebanon. She met many other "halfies," she said. "There's somebody else like me," Masri said. "[It was] the experience of my life."

Other students talked about the cultural differences of countries compared to America. Others shared their hopes and desires for their host countries regarding health care, education, housing and other issues.

In addition, the night was a time to honor the study abroad video, photo and essay contest winners. Junior Chelsea Crone won the video contest. In the host country category of the photo contest, first place went to Allison Russell, a senior, second to Anne Maguire, a junior, and third to junior Caitlin Gorman. In the reflections of Saint Mary's experience photo category, Russell won first place while Megan McGlorey, a senior, won second and third place.

In the interactions with people in the host country category, junior Christina Grasso took first, while senior place and Jones took third. Megan McDermott, a junior, and junior Caroline Arness won first and second prize respectively in the essay contest. The event also helped educate future study abroad applicants about the various grants available to students that can aid in covering study abroad costs.

Yang said there are three possible grants for which students may apply. Two grants are funded by the Center for Women's Intercultural Leadership (CWL) and the Department of Humanistic Studies offers the third.

The CWL grants break down into one grant specifically for the Saint Mary's study abroad programs. However, this grant only applies to summer programs or the Rome program. The other grant is for independent study, and not affiliated with any study abroad program.

The deadline for this year's grant application is Feb. 1. Yang said students should visit the CWL Web site for additional information.

Contact Caitlin Housley at chous01@saintmarys.edu

---

Paper

continued from page 1

ACE program’s Magnificent schools, which has a large Spanish-speaking community.

Volunteering to help the students at St. Adalbert's produce their school newspaper includes the school once a week. The group of student volunteers usually consists of four students and varies depending on the number of degrees including in Public Policy from Harvard University. He first went to Braddock in July 2001 at the request of the county to lead a service program for several underfranchised youth.

Joly said the kids are “very excited about the school newspaper.” They have shown clear that after school time they are looking for something constructive to do because they are full of a lot of energy. It’s a good chance for them to do something constructive.

Further, the newspaper allows the students to express themselves in their own unique ways, Joly said.

“Kids have kids who like poetry, fiction, polis, sports — there are all sorts of ways for them to carry out the mission of the newspaper,” she said.

Working with the students from St. Adalbert’s is a learning experience as well as a source of humor, especially when the students are able to tap into their full creative potentials. Joly said, “One of our third graders, in response to the cold climate of South Bend last year, started a series of short stories about the adventures of ‘Scarfman.’ I’m not sure if Scarfman is meant to be a superhero or a little boy like himself, but either way Scarfman has some very exciting adventures.”

John Joly St. Adalbert’s senior, won both second and third place.

In the interactions with people in the host country category, junior Christina Grasso took first, while senior place and Jones took third. Megan McDermott, a junior, and junior Caroline Arness won first and second prize respectively in the essay contest. The event also helped educate future study abroad applicants about the various grants available to students that can aid in covering study abroad costs.

Yang said there are three possible grants for which students may apply. Two grants are funded by the Center for Women’s Intercultural Leadership (CWL) and the Department of Humanistic Studies offers the third.

The CWL grants break down into one grant specifically for the Saint Mary’s study abroad programs. However, this grant only applies to summer programs or the Rome program. The other grant is for independent study, and not affiliated with any study abroad program.

The deadline for this year's grant application is Feb. 1. Yang said students should visit the CWL Web site for additional information.

Contact Caitlin Housley at chous01@saintmarys.edu

---

The Observer • CAMPUS NEWS

Tuesday, November 17, 2009

The Center for Ethics and Religious Values in Business and The Institute for Ethical Business Worldwide

Proudly Present
Berges Lecture Series in Business Ethics (Sponsored by the John A. Bergs Foundation)

"The Key to Business Happiness: Aligning Personal and Professional Values?"

David Langstaff former CEO Veridian Corporation, current Chairman Wildheart Group

Tuesday, November 17, 2009 7:00 p.m. Jordan Auditorium Mendoza College of Business

Please recycle the observer.
Coca-Cola targets emerging markets

The world’s largest soft drink maker seeks to double business with new middle class

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Coca-Cola Co. seeks to double its business in the next decade by caters to the expected billion people worldwide who will join the middle class by 2020. The world’s largest soft drink maker told analysts and investors at a meeting Monday that its systemwide revenue will reach $200 billion by 2020. The company hopes to make more money off those sales as it sells more soft drinks in emerging markets and reduces costs.

CEO Muhtar Kent said that sales have doubled in the decade since 1997, and they’ll do so again because of growth in India, China and other countries. The company hopes global growth can make up for weak U.S. sales, which have been slipping as consumers limit their spending in the recession and switch to juices and tea.

Kent said the company must pay attention and react to changes in the world, which it didn’t do from 2000 to 2004. “We were too busy looking at the dashboard in front of us and not sufficiently paying attention to the world outside our windshield,” he said.

The company believes that the world will be a different place in the next decade, with more consumers in the middle class and more living in urban areas. Coke said people — many of them young consumers — the company will target — will also want their brands to show that they have values, such as being environmentally responsible, Kent said.

“Consumers want to know the value and are defining themselves more and more by their identity, their values and their beliefs and they are insisting that companies do the same,” said chief marketing and commercial officer Joe Tripodi.

For example, the company plans to highlight its environmental efforts, he said, such as the PlantBottle. Earlier Monday the company said it is using the new bottle, which is partially made out of plants, in some markets like Denmark and the western U.S. Coca-Cola plans to have 2 billion of the bottles in production by the end of next year.

Coca-Cola plans to focus on its namesake brand, which Kent calls the “oxygen” of the company. Key markets like China and Russia have low consumption rates, meaning there will be room for Coca-Cola to grow. But it also plans to have more big brands. It currently has about a dozen brands worth $1 billion each, such as Coke Zero and Fanta, and both grew to that size in the last decade. In the next decade, Coca-Cola expects to have 30 brands worth that much as it sells more of its brands to the rising middle class around the world.

The company said because it operates in more than 200 countries, it will be better able to grow in those new markets while still keeping its costs down. It eyes annual savings of $500 million from general and administrative costs by 2011. Coca-Cola’s comments come as the company faces a rapidly changing industry, as its main rival — PepsiCo Inc. — buys up its two largest bottlers.

PepsiCo announced the $7.8 billion deal to buy its bottlers over the summer, saying the move will allow it to react more quickly to changing consumer tastes by being faster to market with new products because it will control distribution. The move also means PepsiCo, based in Purchase, N.Y., can save on costs. But Kent said Coca-Cola remains committed to its franchise system, which sells concentrate to bottlers who make and distribute Coca-Cola products, rather than the company selling them itself. Kent said the system allows the company to focus on its brands while also giving it the benefits of scale. The company will be able to keep growing if the emerging markets it’s targeting do keep growing and people have more disposable income, said John Sicher, editor of trade publication Beverage Digest.

Administration seeks seatbelts in buses

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration Monday it will propose long-sought safety requirements for long-distance buses, including seatbelts and stronger roof standards. A motorcoach safety plan released by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration calls for developing performance requirements for bus roofs before the end of this year and issuing a rule early next year on installation of seatbelts.

Safety advocates have for years urged seatbelts and stronger roofs to prevent passengers from being ejected in rollovers. Motorcoaches are buses with elevated passenger decks over a baggage compartment. They are widely used for service between cities and by the tour industry.

Other elements of the plan include:

◆ Requiring devices that record when a bus is turned on or off, in an effort to prevent drivers from operating a bus longer than is allowed. Driver fatigue was cited as a factor in some fatal accidents.

◆ Prohibiting drivers from texting, and limiting their use of cell phones while behind the wheel. Federally-sponsored research found drivers were 23 times more likely to be involved in a crash if they were texting and nearly six times more likely if there were dialing a cellphone.

◆ Cracking down on bus operators who try to evade safety rules, so-called chameleon carriers who shut down operations under one name and reopen under another.

“We are committed to making sure that bus drivers reach their destination safely,” Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood said in a statement. “These improvements will not only help reduce the number of motorcoach crashes, it will also help save lives and reduce injuries.”

Pete Pantuso, president and CEO of the American Bus Association, said bus operators welcome the plan as a “holistic approach” to safety, although he objected to some of its elements. He said that on board devices to monitor drivers’ hours are unnecessary because fatigue isn’t an issue in most accidents. He also said the government should issue all of its new requirements for bus design changes at once, rather than parcel them out over time.

In Brief

Vonage to settle 32-state investigation

NEW YORK — Internet phone service provider Vonage Holdings Corp. has agreed to pay $3 million to 32 states to settle an investigation into some of its business practices.

In a filing Monday with the Securities and Exchange Commission, the company said it also agreed to provide refunds to affected customers.

Idaho Attorney General Lawrence Wasden said his office received complaints from consumers who said they found it difficult to cancel their service with Vonage amid pressure from the company to keep their accounts.

The company will target — will also agreed to provide refunds to affected custers.

Maine’s attorney general, Janet Mills, said Vonage will revise what it discloses regarding offers “of free” services, money-back guarantees and trial periods.

Vonage said it was also failed to clearly tell potential customers that they needed to have high-speed Internet service to use Vonage, which offers cheaper calls by sending voice data over the Internet just like e-mail and Web pages. Officials said those unable to use the service had to pay cancellation and other fees.

Judge rejects global warming trial

SALT LAKE CITY — A federal judge said Monday that Vonage also failed to clearly tell potential customers that they needed to have high-speed Internet service to use Vonage, which offers cheaper calls by sending voice data over the Internet just like e-mail and Web pages. Officials said those unable to use the service had to pay cancellation and other fees.

In a filing Monday with the Securities and Exchange Commission, the company said it also agreed to provide refunds to affected customers.

Idaho Attorney General Lawrence Wasden said his office received complaints from consumers who said they found it difficult to cancel their service with Vonage amid pressure from the company to keep their accounts.

The company will target — will also agreed to provide refunds to affected cust-

ers.

Maine’s attorney general, Janet Mills, said Vonage will revise what it discloses regarding offers “of free” services, money-back guarantees and trial periods.

Vonage said it was also failed to clearly tell potential customers that they needed to have high-speed Internet service to use Vonage, which offers cheaper calls by sending voice data over the Internet just like e-mail and Web pages. Officials said those unable to use the service had to pay cancellation and other fees.

Judge rejects global warming trial

SALT LAKE CITY — A federal judge said Monday that Vonage also failed to clearly tell potential customers that they needed to have high-speed Internet service to use Vonage, which offers cheaper calls by sending voice data over the Internet just like e-mail and Web pages. Officials said those unable to use the service had to pay cancellation and other fees.

In a filing Monday with the Securities and Exchange Commission, the company said it also agreed to provide refunds to affected customers.
Taking terrorists at their word

In August of 1996, Osama bin Laden issued a fatwa to fellow Islamist supporters across the globe, declaring war against the United States. Five years later, Americans watched in horror as the Twin Towers erupted in flames before crumbling into a heap of iron and ashes, an explosion ripped a hole in the side of the Pentagon and a hijacked passenger plane headed toward Washington, D.C., crashed into a field in Pennsylvania.

It is now November of 2008, nine years since that tragic day in September when 2,976 innocent lives perished at the hands of nineteen Islamic fundamentalists bent upon carrying out bin Laden’s call for the indiscriminate slaughter of Americans everywhere. Little more than a week ago, an Islamic extremist opened fire at Fort Hood in Texas, killing thirteen and wounding over two dozen others. This occurred despite the fact that the killer, Major Nidal Malik Hasan, had spoken out against the wars being fought in Afghanistan and Iraq to his colleagues, expressed sympathy for suicide bombing, called for infidels to be beheaded and have “burning oil poured down their throats” during what was supposed to be a medical presentation, and had even attempted to contact al-Qaeda prior to committing mass murder.

Red flags, anyone? Hindsight may be 20/20, but in certain situations, foresight is far from legally blind.

Of course the immediate reaction by the media, along with some military officials, was not to forcefully condemn the attack, but to hastily explain that no connection had been established between Hasan’s actions and his Muslim faith, and that the incident was likely due to job-related “stress.” In this day and age, political correctness must always take precedence over concern for the dead and dying, and the perpetrator is the real victim of the situation. Only Senator Joe Lieberman had the guts to call a spade a spade, labeling Hasan a “self-radicalized, home-grown terrorist.”

Then last Friday, Attorney General Eric Holder announced that the administration has decided to hold soldiers accused of 9/11 mastermind Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, along with four of his fellow plotters, on trial in the United States, where they will be afforded the same constitutional rights as U.S. citizens. Yes, these terrorists will have the very same rights as citizens of a system they wish to destroy. Oh, but the trial will not be held in just any old courtroom. Mohammed and co’s trial will take place in New York’s southern district, just a half-mile away from Ground Zero.

“We’re going to go back into New York City, the scene of the tragedy on 9/11. We’re now going to rip that wound wide open,” said an exasperated Pete Hoekstra, ranking Republican on the House Armed Services Committee, on CBS News. “And it’s going to stay open for, what, two, three, four years as we go through the circus of a trial …”

Sen. Lieberman also criticized Holder’s announcement, citing the views of over 140 family members of 9/11 victims. “It is inconceivable that we would be treating these alleged terrorists bent upon carrying out bin Laden’s 1996 fatwa. Al-Qaeda may prove to be the masterminds of the attacks are not citizens of this country; therefore the trial cannot be held in their country. It is as if some in our country, including the president and attorney general, are experiencing a collective onset of amnesia. If there was one lesson to be learned from 9/11, it was that international terrorism cannot be fought as though it were a crime. Treating it as such facilitated the security failures that enabled the attacks to occur. And yet the Obama administration insists upon shielding home-grown terrorists because we fear accusations of racism and religious insensitivity more than the loss of innocent life, and we bring terrorist masterminds to the United States for trial in civilian court because we care more for the alleged rights of the terrorists than the rights of the people they have killed and plan to kill.

It is time we set our priorities straight and take the threat of terrorism seriously, if not for the honor of the victims, than for the lives of all future generations of Americans.

Christie Prasaventi is a senior who is majoring in political science and sociology. She can be reached at cprasaventi@nd.edu.

The views expressed in this column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.
Part 8 by Rosemary Kelly
Frederick gasped aloud and then stifled his reaction quickly. He could see the mountain clearly, but it was imperative this councilman remain unaware, that he did not discover his secret. For, Frederick had seen the Other World. He had spoken to an Undesirable, and was now convinced that his entire Mieux Training had been a ruse. He had hidden this from all of them, and it was still hiding things.

The man suddenly spoke. “Why don’t we stop for the night, lady? Right, then I’ll gather some kindle and you get the water.” He left the clearing quickly, his jacket flapping behind him.

After Frederick tore his gaze from the heavenly peak and wandered from the clearing, following the sounds of water nearby. A river suddenly opened from the clearing, following the sounds of the heavenly peak and wandered ping behind him.

He left the clearing quickly, his jacket flapping behind him. He didn’t notice anything strange until a small clattering sound drew his attention downward, and he saw the very stone that he had thrown moments before suddenly sitting again at his feet. Confused, he held it in his palm. It was indeed the same stone. Hurrying home, as just as a second stone was deposited gently near him. Another followed, then another. He looked out over the water and was shocked to see the stones he had tossed disappearing from the water and being borne back towards him. What was happening? The river looked normal; did he dare touch it? He kept forward, intrigued, fearlessly and met the water with the edge of his bare toe. Nothing, and yet... without warning he was totally consumed by a fierce joy, a raging passion for life. He deserved to plunge directly into the river, to express his retribution, to express himself completely without cause. Frederick raised his arms, poised to vault from the bank, but suddenly out of the brush behind burst the councilman with a contingent of soldiers. “Seize the boy!” the man yelled. “He has Disobeyed!” Frederick divined.

Part 9 by Douglas Schulda
Bewildered and exhausted, Frederick washed ashore. To his astonishment, he found himself at the feet of the Undesirable he had met so long ago, whose kind eyes now burned with fear. “Come, Frederick! We must go! We’re running out of time!” As he ran, Frederick soon found that the river had mysteriously been cut off. He had not noticed the river being bounded after the Undesirable, he learned that his déjà vu had not merely been fantasy.

The Undesirable proclaimed that Frederick was in the mystical region known as Imaginationland, and it was in grave peril! The walls he broke through must have been its sacred gate! Frederick learned of the Stone of Imagination, and how the councilman planned to use it to invade Notre Dame through the secret tunnels. Aragorn McCloud was not merely a dream: he was the only Creator to Enter Imaginationland before and this had been eliminated by the councilman.

They were soon at the base of the moun- tain, where Frederick knew he must gain possession of the Stone. Just before his climb, the Undesirable warned him of the great beast within. As he climbed, Frederick remembered everything. He knew what he had to do: he had to con- quer the great beast, MandelPic, and take the stone far away from the council- man. The survival of Imaginationland, Notre Dame, and Al Gore depended on it!

Want to write the next paragraph to the story? Submit your paragraph to NDLFishertextstory@gmail.com before 4 p.m. Limit of 200 words. Title it Part Eight. This story will continue until Nov. 16. If your paragraph is selected, it will be published in Viewpoint and you will get to read it at the NDLF panel discus- sion Nov. 19. The visiting authors will be published in Viewpoint and you will take the ending paragraphs. Take advantage of the opportunity to write a story alongside two New York Times bestselling authors!

Letters to the Editor
Long-term approach

Once again, talk in the ND community is replete with the question: “Do we fire Devine, Faust, Davie, Willingham or Weis?” What has often prevailed in the past is the short-term “Blame the coach and find the next Rockne” solution, often car- ried out in a way that carries the general public as a panic.

My standpoint is as an alum who has lived out East for 25 years, and who has known parents whose children were recruited by Notre Dame but chose to play at other colleges.

The high school seniors of today can’t remember the 1993 run for the title. Most important, football players want to play in a way they believe is the best in the country—in a way we do not Notre Dame students. The worst part is the Pitt insults were not even creative; their student section had only two chants. “Throughout the entire game — “Let’s go Pitt” and “inseparable Irish” or “Irish.”

Brian Reimer
alum 1982
Nov. 16

After Notre Dame’s recent losses to Navy and Pitt, I have done a lot of thinking. I then came to the realization that something is terribly wrong with the Irish football team. However, since everybody has his or her own opinion on what needs to be changed, I will be as vague since everybody has his or her own opinion on what needs to be changed, I will be as vague since everybody has his or her own opinion on what needs to be changed, I will be as vague since everybody has his or her own opinion on what needs to be changed, I will be as vague since everybody has his or her own opinion on what needs to be changed, I will be as vague.

I doubt that Notre Dame will improve in the long-term by firing Coach Weis. The University’s decision should not be “Weis or Coach X.” It should be “Big Ten” or “Big East.”

Reineri

Slumbering echoes

In response to Lizzie Laughman (“Be classy, respectful,” Nov. 14), I would like to ask my own request of all Notre Dame fans. I’ll start with the following disclaimer. In this letter, I am not discussing women’s issues to Jasper Howard, and I guarantee that the UConn players, should they even hear the chant, wouldn’t make that connection. Howard’s death was tragic, but considering the context of the chant, that we must as a society do something about.

More importantly, be loud

In response to Lizzie Laughman (“Be classy, respectful,” Nov. 14), I would like to ask my own request of all Notre Dame fans. I’ll start with the following disclaimer. In this letter, I am not discussing women’s issues to Jasper Howard, and I guarantee that the UConn players, should they even hear the chant, wouldn’t make that connection. Howard’s death was tragic, but considering the context of the chant, that we must as a society do something about.

The facts

You cannot be pro-life and pro-choice at the same time. I understand that abortion is a difficult issue, but you stand on one side of the fence or the other. While women do not take abortion lightly, easy access to abortion has caused the rate of repeat abortions to sky rocket.

According to the APS, 48 percent of women in 2000-2001 were obtaining repeat abortions, including 29 percent who were seeking their second abortion, 12 percent seeking their third abortion and 7 percent seeking their fourth or higher order abortion.

In addition, children are expensive, but abortions are as well. In 2001, the average charge for a surgical abortion at 10 weeks’ gestation was $468, but since most abortions in the United States are performed at low-cost clinics, women on aver- age paid $372 for the procedure.

“Some 74 percent of women pay for abortions with their own money. 13 percent of abortions are covered by Medicaid. And 13 percent are billed directly to private insurance. Some women who pay for the procedure themselves may receive insurance reimbursement later.”

All of these quotes are from the Guttmacher Institute, Planned Parenthood’s research group.

A woman who decides to keep her child has several resources available to her free. The Women’s Care Center in South Bend has several free services, as do many other groups around the nation. Care Net and Birthright are just two of many groups that offer free pregnancy tests, counseling and other services. The choice to adopt a healthy child can ex- pand the number of available infants. If a woman does not want to kill her child, she has options. There are free services to support her during pregnancy, and people desperate for children.

Unplanned pregnancy is difficult in every situation, however the life of the child is not the only way out if one is not financially stable.

Adoption is a beautiful option and free care for women during pregnancy is readily available.

Adoption is the best life option, the pro-choice is abortion. Once it’s a baby, there cannot be a choice.

Jonathan Jasinski
junior
Stanford
Nov. 16
Tuesday, November 17, 2009

By DECLAN SULLIVAN and MIKE BARTLETT

Scene Writers

Two weeks ago, a pair of Scene writers interviewed the music duo Shwayze in promotion of their new album “Let U Home”. The half of the interview involving producer Cisco Adler appeared last week. This is the continuing portion of an interview that transpired between Scene writers Mike Bartlett and Declan Sullivan and rapper Aaron Smith, a.k.a. Shwayze.

Mike Bartlett: So, do you have a favorite song to perform or a favorite place to perform at?
Shwayze: “Get U Home” is really fun now ‘cause it’s a crazy, upbeat track that gets everyone hyped up. You know, like a rock ‘n’ roll show where everyone is jumping up and down.
MB: Yeah, definitely. I’ve listened to the whole new album and I like it a lot. I like “Daze Like This” a lot. That’s a good song.
Shwayze: Yeah, man. We were just at home for two months, and we knocked [the album] out. But yeah, “Daze Like This” is dope.
MB: Yeah man, but living in Malibu — that’s the life.
Shwayze: Oh yeah, exactly. Have you guys ever been out to Malibu?
MB: Yeah, I went out and visited Pepperdine for a week. It’s heaven; it can’t get any better.
Shwayze: Yeah, it’s a good spot.
Declan Sullivan: Did you grow up in Malibu, or did you move there?
MB: I moved there when I was 5, so I basically grew up there. I was born in Santa Monica, and I lived in Florida for a year or two when I was a little baby.
Shwayze: Do you think growing up in Malibu has had a big effect on your music? Does it inspire you to write what you want to write?
MB: Yeah, of course — you’re a product of your environment. The first record really only showed one of our sides, but in this new record we really show all of our sides. It all kind of got thrown in the pot, you know what I mean?
MB: How was working with Snoop Dogg on “Livin’ It Up”? Was it insane?
Shwayze: Yeah, I mean, it was definitely a dream come true. I’ve always imagined working with Snoop, so the fact that we actually got to do it was dope. Unfortunately, the way we did it was that we sent him the track, and he sent it back, so we didn’t actually get to work with him in the studio. But he’s a homie, he loved being on the track, and he killed it. He took it to the next level.
MB: Yeah, definitely, that’s awesome. But I bet when you actually work with people in the studio, you get to build a lot off of them and learn new stuff.
Shwayze: Yeah. But that song was already done, and then we were like, “Dude, let’s get Snoop on this!” But yeah, we definitely have to work with him in the future.
MB: Is there anyone you really want to work with that you haven’t yet?
Shwayze: Definitely. There are a lot of people I’d like to work with.

By SZYMON RYZNER
Scene Writer

After selling more than four million copies of her first album “The Fame,” Lady Gaga will release an additional eight tracks on a re-release of the extremely successful album. The newly expanded album, entitled “The Fame Monster,” will be available tomorrow. Lady Gaga will release an additional copies of her first album “The Fame,” according to a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g Gaga has a m a z i n g l y c r a f t i n g into Lady Gaga’s career. Beyond her catchy music, she is a hermaphrodite abound, although her scantily clad outfits seem to prove otherwise. The singer actually takes her name from the song “Radio Ga Ga,” by another of her idols, Queen. Beyond her catchy dance music, Lady Gaga has an opportunity to become as big as some of her pop predecessors. In addition to putting on spectacular live performances, Lady Gaga has moved into crafting amazingly absurd and visually stunning music videos. Each of her videos seems to be deliberately more ridiculous and more impressive than the last. The most recent, “Bad Romance,” makes puns out of Hitchcock, sets a gold-chinned man on fire and, on occasion, makes Gaga look normal.

“The Fame Monster” will be an album about Gaga’s greatest fears and a depiction of fame from one who has experienced an extreme surge of it. Through all of the craziness, though, Lady Gaga claims that she never forgets her fans. The “Fame Monster” will be affordable, at least according to Gaga, and it should be considered a standalone album. Nevertheless, it will be sold together with the original “The Fame” in order to provide maximum access to Gaga. For those seeking an almost disturbing amount of interaction with the star, the deluxe version will apparently contain a lock of hair from one of her many wigs. Lady Gaga wrote “The Fame Monster” while watching fashion shows on mute, and she declared that it would be an ideal soundtrack for such events. This, in fact, is one of the greatest things about Gaga: despite all the madness surrounding her and her behavior, she writes her own music. By the age of four, she was playing the piano by ear, and her entire life to this point seems to have been influenced by and lived through music. Working in various hiphop shows after attending both a Catholic school and the High School of the Arts, she doggedly pursued a career in music. She ended up writing for many well-known artists, including Fergie, Britney Spears and Akon, who ultimately signed her.

For her entire life, Lady Gaga has pursued this musical career, and now that she has found success her voice will finally be heard. Let’s hope she has something worthwhile to say.

Contact Szymon Ryzner at ayrzner@nd.edu

DS: Well, if you could pick one person or group to collaborate with, who would it be?
MB: Living or dead?
DS: And MB: Living or dead.
DS: Well, I just saw “This Is It” this week, so I’d have to say Michael Jackson. I mean, he has all that great music, and he wrote all his own [music]. I’d love to work with him.
MB: Yeah, here’s your chance to be a movie critic: Is it worth going to see?
DS: I think so. If you love Michael Jackson, you’ll like the movie. It’s a go.
MB: You’re doing that Party Rock Tour right now; is that like being on stage with LMFAO?
DS: They’re dope. They’re our friends from way before. Sky Blu and I went to high school together. We used to rap together all the time, and then just five, six years fast forward and we’re both on tour together. It’s very surreal.
MB: When I’m hanging out with my friends sometimes we try to rap, all in good fun.
DS: It’s great when the way you look at things.
MB: Yeah. Actually, when we talked to Cisco, he told us to look up Chris Young the Rapper, whose freestyles are pretty ill. Is he fun to work with?
DS: Yeah — actually, just the other day, we were in the recording around, freestyling. I love that. He’s a genius freestyler. Download some of his stuff. He’s going to blow up.
MB: Anybody else who’s coming up?
DS: Beardo is coming up, everyone on Banana Beatz... LMFAO. This tour we’re about to do is going to be out of control. Are we coming to your city?
MB: No! We talked to Cisco about this. You’re going to Des Moines, Iowa, but not to South Bend.
DS: Yeah, talk about a slap in the face!
MB: From Malibu to ND?
DS: It might be a hit. (laughs.)
MB: No, from you guys to Des Moines. I think we’re going to Chicago, too.
DS: Oh, yeah. We’ll definitely try to get out there and see you. One last question before you go. Who is your favorite band or singer alive right now?
MB: Yeah, definitely that’s awesome. But I bet if we talked to Cisco about this. You’re going to be out of control. Are we coming to your city?
DS: Yeah. But that song was already done, and then we were like, “Dude, let’s get Snoop on this!” But yeah, we definitely have to work with him in the future.

Lady Gaga’s performance at the MTV Video Music Awards, some attention for her bloody performance, and her entire life to this point seems to have been influenced by and lived through music. Working in various hiphop shows after attending both a Catholic school and the High School of the Arts, she doggedly pursued a career in music. She ended up writing for many well-known artists, including Fergie, Britney Spears and Akon, who ultimately signed her.

For her entire life, Lady Gaga has pursued this musical career, and now that she has found success her voice will finally be heard. Let’s hope she has something worthwhile to say.

Contact Declan Sullivan at dsuliv9@nd.edu and Mike Bartlett at mbartle1@nd.edu

BLAIR CHEMELIN | Observer Graphic

THE OBSERVER
Mystery Abounds in the Prisoner Remake

By NICK ANDERSON
Scene Writer

In its original form, “The Prisoner” was one of the most ambitious, revolutionary and compelling series ever aired on television. It acquired a dedicated cult following, and its influence has trickled into “The Simpsons,” “The Truman Show” and even a few Slayer songs. The show was strange, beautiful, intriguing and brash.

AMC has proven itself a fertile network for brilliantly dark dramas, riding high on the critical success of “Breaking Bad” and “Mad Men” while proving there is a devoted niche audience for subtly weird and trippy shows. Its latest project is a remake of “The Prisoner” for modern audiences. The first episode premiered on Sunday.

The casting of Jim Caviezel as the iconic protagonist Number 6 and Sir Ian McKellen as Number 2 generated much-needed buzz for the project in its infancy. Weeks before the premiere, AMC promoted the show heavily while maintaining the air of mystery and confusion that was integral to the original.

AMC’s remake of “The Prisoner” attempts to reach many of the same places as the original, but it fallsers in its fervor to climb from the original. But it runs through the original was dropped somewhere in the past 40 years, only to be replaced by choppy, schizophrenic editing and vague symbolism.

Technically, the episodes have teemed an astonishing backdoor for the series. Stark landscapes contrast with the sleek, modern design of The Village, creating a wonderful sense of both bleakness and urbanity. Each scene is shot with careful consideration and a respectful attitude of homage to the original, artfully recreating several direct images.

Caviezel’s portrayal of Number 6 is frustrating at his best moments and dull at his worst. It is clear that he studied the source material, but compared to the original actor, Patrick McGoohan, Caviezel is unable to bring the same emotional weight to the simplistic character studies. McGoohan is dynamic, he yet to master a fourth facial expression to add to his résumé.

Caviezel additionally suffers from being paired with one of the elder statesmen of British acting, McKellen. A chance to play Number 2 would be a crowning achievement for most actors, but for McKellen, Number 2 merely joins Gandalf and Magneto as roles he plays as if he was born to do so. Chillingly self-assured, he maintains a stiff upper lip and a dry sense of humor unseen on this side of the pond. McKellen takes on another interesting character as no other actor could, with fascinating results.

Several striking symbols have been introduced into the show, none more notable than the clear allusion to the Twin Towers on the outskirts of the village. The intrigue and mystery of the show is heavy-handed and deliberate, with none of the campiness and humor of the original. What is missing is a clear plot. Why was Number 6 kidnapped? No one, including Number 2, seems to know the answer to this question. Without that, it’s hard even to tell whose side we’re on.

The art and excellence of “The Prisoner” is lost in a post-9/11 world. Questions of personal liberty and freedom have become muddled with paranoia about both the government and society at large. Instead of focusing on this conflict, “The Prisoner” has moved on to relationships and pseudo-meaningful statements. In a world already confused enough by “Lost,” “The Prisoner” will struggle to find an audience. It is too symbolic and confusing to be a straight drama, but it is not written well enough to stand as a mystery.

Contact Nick Anderson at nanders5@nd.edu

The Observer Graphic: BLAIR CHEMLIN

Tuesday, November 17, 2009

The Observer

Dining Hall Dish

By ELIZABETH CHATEN
Scene Writer

Welsh Family Hall recently opened a homemade baked goods store to rival the male dorm’s pizza shops. Although this innovative idea begins to tackle the problem of unappetizing dining hall desserts, I continued that with a little creativity, anyone can create saccharine sweets in our dining halls. This week’s dessert presents a few ideas for some decadent desserts. Channel your inner Paula Dean and start cooking!

Strawberry-Banana Crepe

Crepes were first created in Brittany, a region in the northwest of France. This dish attempts to recreate the elegance of this sophisticated dessert in our dining halls. It may seem like a lot of steps, but it’s entirely worth the effort. After tasting this one, I encourage you to try out different fillings, particularly the various fruits in the waffle section.

Start with a white or honey wheat wrap. Optional: brush honey butter all over the wrap, for added sweetness.

- Spread a bit of cream cheese, strawberry jam, and a light layer of pudding (chocolate or vanilla) on the wrap.
- Drizzle half of the wrap with strawberry sauce, located by the ice cream. Attempt to get as many chunks of strawberries as you can!
- Grab a banana and cut into slices. Place on the same half as the strawberry sauce.
- Fold crepe in half and grill lightly on the panini grill for about 10 seconds—just enough to warm it up a bit, but not so much that it’s charred.
- Top with a dusting of powdered sugar and a drizzle of chocolate sauce. Serve with whipped cream or ice cream, if desired.

Puppy Chow

This nostalgic sweet is surprisingly simple to make in the dining hall! Fun and whimsical, your friends will beg you to add it to your meal plan.

If in SDH, add about a tablespoon or so of melted butter into a bowl. If in NDH, melt some butter in the microwave. Add sliced bananas to the bowl. Stir.

If in NDH, add about a tablespoon of cocoa powder. In the microwave for about 20 to 30 seconds.

If in SDH, add about a tablespoon of cocoa powder. In the microwave for about 20 to 30 seconds.

Serve over a scoop of vanilla ice cream. Top with caramel or nuts, if desired.

Contact Elizabeth Chaten at echaten1@nd.edu

Starring: James Caviezel, Ian McKellen, Ruth Wilson, Lennie James and Jamie Campbell Bower

Show Time: Sunday, 8 p.m.
Coghlan, Bailey named Rookies of the Year

Marlins’ left fielder hit .321 and scored 84 times; Athletes’ closer named to All-Star team, with 26 saves

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Florida Marlins left fielder Chris Coghlan won the National League Rookie of the Year award in a close vote Monday, and Oakland Athletics closer Andrew Bailey took the AL honor.

Coghlan edged Philadelphia Phillies pitcher J.A. Happ, receiving 51 of 58 first-place votes compared to Happ’s 47. Happ had 105 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers’ Association of America. Happ, the only player picked on all 32 ballots, had 10 first-place votes and 105 points.

“He’s very exciting,” Coghlan said. “I couldn’t have written it better.”

Coghlan dogged out himself out of an early slump and had a superb second half. Emerging as key plug-offender for the Marlins in mid-August, Coghlan hit .321 with nine homers and 31 doubles in 128 games. He scored 84 runs and drove in 77. Called up from the minors in May, the 24-year-old Coghlan topped NL rookies in batting average, runs, hits (162), total bases (232) and on-base percentage (.390). He became the third Florida player to win the award, joining shortstop Hanley Ramirez (2006) and pitcher Dontrelle Willis (2002).

“At the end of the year I knew that I put myself in a good position to win,” Coghlan said.

A second baseman in the minor leagues, Coghlan was with Triple-A New Orleans this year when the Marlins told him they wanted to try him in the outfield.

He played one minor league game in left — without getting a fly ball — and then was brought up to the majors. He finished the season with a .272 average.

“A lot of people think I’m pretty bad out there. But I think it’s an area of improvement,” Coghlan said. “I have confidence playing the outfield. It was a situation I embraced to get me to the big leagues the quickest and help the team win games.”

Happ’s versatility was a huge plus for the Phillies, who won their second consecutive NL pennant before losing to the New York Yankees in the World Series.

The left-hander went 12-4 with a 2.93 ERA in 35 games, including 23 starts. He led NL rookies in innings (166), strikeouts (119) and complete games (three).

“Atlanta pitcher Tommy Hanson finished the season on a competitive field with two first-place votes and 37 points. Pittsburgh outfielder Andrew McCutchen, who came in fourth, also was chosen first on a pair of ballots by A’s reliever Casey McGehee received the other first-place vote.

“When you get up there’s so many different aspects to the game. . . . It takes a while to get comfortable in a routine,” Coghlan said. “In the second half, things turned around and it all ended well. In the beginning it wasn’t as easy as it was at the end of the year.”

Bailey went 6-3 and had 24 more saves than any other AL rookie. He also led the league’s rookie pitchers in ERA.

“I can’t feel disappointed,” Andrus said. “Andrew Bailey is a great player. He had a great season, too.”

Bailey was struggling as a starter in Double-A last year when the AA moved him to the bullpen. Turned out to be a terrific decision.

“In his first big league camp, Bailey made the Oakland roster and soon got an opportunity to close partly due to injuries. He took advantage of it. Leonard Browder, the only player picked on all 32 ballots, had 10 first-place votes and 287 points in nine games this season.

“(I couldn’t have written it better .)”

Coghlan said.

Casey McGehee received the other first-place vote.

No matter what Stephen might say to me when I take him out, I’ve heard it before.”

Brown said. “As long as they care and as long as they want to get better and are good teammates, I’m OK.”

With managing partner Michael Jordan signing off on the deal, Charlotte takes on Jackson’s contract, which has three years and $28 million left after this season. Golden State inherits Radmanovic’s deal, worth about $13.5 million over this season and next. Bell and Law are in the final year of their contracts.

Jackson was en route to Orlando on Monday, where the Bobcats were to play the Magic. The 6-foot-4 Jackson gives Charlotte, the NBA’s lowest-scoring team at 82.4 points a game, an immediate offensive boost. He’s averaging 16.6 points in nine games this season and has more saves than any other AL.

“He can create a shot for himself, including Allen Iverson, will get a crack at the talented and polarizing Jackson.

But the 31-year-old Jackson also brings plenty of baggage, including Allen Iverson, will get a crack at the talented and polarizing Jackson.

“Certainly the first credit goes to the Switch to the bullpen being a good change to the bullpen being a good

Jackson inherited Radmanovic’s deal, worth about $13.5 million over this season and next. Bell and Law are in the final year of their contracts.

Jackson was en route to Orlando on Monday, where the Bobcats were to play the Magic. The 6-foot-4 Jackson gives Charlotte, the NBA’s lowest-scoring team at 82.4 points a game, an immediate offensive boost. He’s averaging 16.6 points in nine games this season and has more saves than any other AL.

“He can create a shot for himself, including Allen Iverson, will get a crack at the talented and polarizing Jackson.

But the 31-year-old Jackson also brings plenty of baggage, including Allen Iverson, will get a crack at the talented and polarizing Jackson.

“Certainly the first credit goes to the Switch to the bullpen being a good change to the bullpen being a good

Jackson inherited Radmanovic’s deal, worth about $13.5 million over this season and next. Bell and Law are in the final year of their contracts.

Jackson was en route to Orlando on Monday, where the Bobcats were to play the Magic. The 6-foot-4 Jackson gives Charlotte, the NBA’s lowest-scoring team at 82.4 points a game, an immediate offensive boost. He’s averaging 16.6 points in nine games this season and has more saves than any other AL.

“He can create a shot for himself, including Allen Iverson, will get a crack at the talented and polarizing Jackson.

But the 31-year-old Jackson also brings plenty of baggage, including Allen Iverson, will get a crack at the talented and polarizing Jackson.

“Certainly the first credit goes to the Switch to the bullpen being a good change to the bullpen being a good

Jackson inherited Radmanovic’s deal, worth about $13.5 million over this season and next. Bell and Law are in the final year of their contracts.

Jackson was en route to Orlando on Monday, where the Bobcats were to play the Magic. The 6-foot-4 Jackson gives Charlotte, the NBA’s lowest-scoring team at 82.4 points a game, an immediate offensive boost. He’s averaging 16.6 points in nine games this season and has more saves than any other AL.

“He can create a shot for himself, including Allen Iverson, will get a crack at the talented and polarizing Jackson.

But the 31-year-old Jackson also brings plenty of baggage, including Allen Iverson, will get a crack at the talented and polarizing Jackson.

“Certainly the first credit goes to the Switch to the bullpen being a good change to the bullpen being a good

Jackson inherited Radmanovic’s deal, worth about $13.5 million over this season and next. Bell and Law are in the final year of their contracts.

Jackson was en route to Orlando on Monday, where the Bobcats were to play the Magic. The 6-foot-4 Jackson gives Charlotte, the NBA’s lowest-scoring team at 82.4 points a game, an immediate offensive boost. He’s averaging 16.6 points in nine games this season and has more saves than any other AL.

“He can create a shot for himself, including Allen Iverson, will get a crack at the talented and polarizing Jackson.

But the 31-year-old Jackson also brings plenty of baggage, including Allen Iverson, will get a crack at the talented and polarizing Jackson.

“Certainly the first credit goes to the Switch to the bullpen being a good change to the bullpen being a good

Jackson inherited Radmanovic’s deal, worth about $13.5 million over this season and next. Bell and Law are in the final year of their contracts.

Jackson was en route to Orlando on Monday, where the Bobcats were to play the Magic. The 6-foot-4 Jackson gives Charlotte, the NBA’s lowest-scoring team at 82.4 points a game, an immediate offensive boost. He’s averaging 16.6 points in nine games this season and has more saves than any other AL.

“He can create a shot for himself, including Allen Iverson, will get a crack at the talented and polarizing Jackson.

But the 31-year-old Jackson also brings plenty of baggage, including Allen Iverson, will get a crack at the talented and polarizing Jackson.

“Certainly the first credit goes to the Switch to the bullpen being a good change to the bullpen being a good

Jackson inherited Radmanovic’s deal, worth about $13.5 million over this season and next. Bell and Law are in the final year of their contracts.

Jackson was en route to Orlando on Monday, where the Bobcats were to play the Magic. The 6-foot-4 Jackson gives Charlotte, the NBA’s lowest-scoring team at 82.4 points a game, an immediate offensive boost. He’s averaging 16.6 points in nine games this season and has more saves than any other AL.

“He can create a shot for himself, including Allen Iverson, will get a crack at the talented and polarizing Jackson.

But the 31-year-old Jackson also brings plenty of baggage, including Allen Iverson, will get a crack at the talented and polarizing Jackson.
Bengals interested in Larry Johnson

CINCINNATI — Larry Johnson might get to revive his troubled career with a team known for giving second chances.

Bengals coach Marvin Lewis said on Monday that Johnson would be in Cincinnati to discuss a limited role — fourth-string running back, essentially an insurance policy in case Cedric Benson’s hip injury gets worse or another running back gets hurt.

“It’s a very low-profile role,” Lewis said. “That’s what his role would be, it would be as a fourth running back and an opportunity as a backup player on this football team doing all the things backup players do, and that’s work their tails off in the kicking game and showing looks (on the scout team) and so forth by that way,” Lewis said. “And then he would be an insurance policy if something would happen down the line to one of our guys where he’d have a chance to be active.”

“But I couldn’t foresee him being active when he was initially here, if this is what happens. And that’s what I’ve told him.”

Lewis said the interest in Johnson is unrelated to Benson’s injury. Benson, who is one of the NFLs top running backs, strained a hip muscle and couldn’t finish an 18-12 win in Pittsburgh on Sunday that left the Bengals (7-2) in control of the AFC North.

Benson is expected to practice on a limited basis this week. Benson has revitalized his career in Cincinnati and the receiver has stayed out of trouble since then. Henry is out for the rest of the season with a broken left arm.

Benson was signed last year after the Bears let him go because of his off-field problems. He had two alcohol-related arrests in Texas, but the cases were dropped when grand juries declined to indict. Benson has revitalized his career in Cincinnati — he ranks sixth in the league in rushing with 859 yards and leads the NFL with 205 carries.

Lewis assured Benson that the interest in Johnson would have no effect on his status as the primary runner. Lewis said he first spoke with Johnson by phone last Thursday, before Benson’s injury.

IN BRIEF

Gruden signs contract with ESPN

BRISTOL, Conn. — Jon Gruden has agreed to a multiyear contract to stay at ESPN, suggesting he won’t be returning to coaching anytime soon.

The Super Bowl-winning coach’s name was bound to come up about any job openings after this season. He was fired by the Buccaneers in January, then joined ESPN as a “Monday Night Football” analyst.

The network said Monday that Gruden has made a commitment to remain with ESPN. ”

Gruden led Tampa Bay to a Super Bowl title after the 2002 season.

Under the new deal, he will appear on ESPN’s NFL Draft and Super Bowl week coverage and will call the 2010 Pro Bowl. Gruden will serve as an analyst for ESPN Radio’s 2010 Rose Bowl and BCS title game broadcasts.
Westbrook running backs suffer injuries

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Brian Westbrook suffered a second concussion in three weeks in Philadelphia’s 31-23 loss at San Diego on Sunday.

Westbrook was playing his first game after sitting out two because of a concussion suffered Oct. 26. He was injured in the third quarter on a screen play in which he was caught between a block by Eagles receiver Jason Avant and a tackle by Bucs free safety E.J. Weddle.

Eagles coach Andy Reid said the team will take precautions with Westbrook and it’s too early to predict when Westbrook will return, if at all.

“Football right now for Brian Westbrook is not the important thing,” Reid said Monday. “Right now it’s health and we want to get him analyzed, tested and taken care of and then we’ll go from there. Not that we didn’t do that before. We took every precautionary measure that we could before and it happened again. Obviously we’re going to rack with experts and make sure that we listen to them like we did last time. The No. 1 thing is Brian’s health. You can put football aside and make sure that he’s taken care of here.

Westbrook wasn’t available to reporters on Monday. His agent, Todd France, didn’t immediately return a phone message.

The 30-year-old Westbrook sustained his first career concussion when he hit his head against the New York Giants on Nov. 1 and was cleared to play against Dallas last week, but was held out for precautionary reasons after experiencing headaches. Westbrook had no problems leading up to the game against the Chargers.

“We left it up to the doctors,” Reid said. “That’s a decision that we had to make to protect him. It’s just precaution.”

“I’ve heard a couple different things on that,” said Reid. “Obviously it’s not a good thing for a second one to happen. I don’t know the medical terms of what happened to them doctors, but mine it by if it was a mild hit as compared to a severe hit. It wasn’t a mild hit I would say.”

The eight-year veteran has been limited this season by ankle and knee injuries and the concoctions. Westbrook has carried the ball 47 times for 225 yards, an average of 4.8 yards per carry, and has caught 19 passes for 156 yards and a TD.

Westbrook has never played a full season, having missed 16 games for a variety of injuries to his knee, ankles, ribs and triceps.

Before the last season, Westbrook signed a three-year contract worth $21 million, including a guaranteed payment for the first two years.

The Eagles have the option of not adding his contract for 2010.

Seahawks’ Jones likely out

Seahawks running back Julius Jones is expected to miss at least Sunday’s game at Minnesota because of a bruised lung.

Coach Jim Mora said Monday that Jones is thought to be a cracked rib sustained in the first quarter for Seattle’s junior guard Liz Wade — the reigning MIAA Defensive Player of the Year — and possibly a cracked rib.

Doctors had Jones stay behind overnight in an Arizona hospital as a precaution.

“Football right now for Brian Westbrook is not the important thing,” Reid said Monday. “Right now it’s health and we want to get him analyzed, tested and taken care of and then we’ll go from there. Not that we didn’t do that before. We took every precautionary measure that we could before and it happened again. Obviously we’re going to rack with experts and make sure that we listen to them like we did last time. The No. 1 thing is Brian’s health. You can put football aside and make sure that he’s taken care of here.

Westbrook wasn’t available to reporters on Monday. His agent, Todd France, didn’t immediately return a phone message.

“Elsewhere, 30-year-old Westbrook sustained his first career concussion when he hit his head against the New York Giants on Nov. 1 and was cleared to play against Dallas last week, but was held out for precautionary reasons after experiencing headaches. Westbrook had no problems leading up to the game against the Chargers.

“We left it up to the doctors,” Reid said. “That’s a decision that we had to make to protect him. It’s just precaution.”

“I’ve heard a couple different things on that,” said Reid. “Obviously it’s not a good thing for a second one to happen. I don’t know the medical terms of what happened to them doctors, but mine it by if it was a mild hit as compared to a severe hit. It wasn’t a mild hit I would say.”

The eight-year veteran has been limited this season by ankle and knee injuries and the concoctions. Westbrook has carried the ball 47 times for 225 yards, an average of 4.8 yards per carry, and has caught 19 passes for 156 yards and a TD.

Westbrook has never played a full season, having missed 16 games for a variety of injuries to his knee, ankles, ribs and triceps.

Before the last season, Westbrook signed a three-year contract worth $21 million, including a guaranteed payment for the first two years.

The Eagles have the option of not adding his contract for 2010.
Squash squad loses two

Irish sailing team finishes 12th; Rugby eliminated from regionals

Special to The Observer

Squash

A short-handed Irish squad dropped a pair of matches to Indiana, 9-0, and Northwestern, 8-1, over the weekend.

Missed its No. 1 and No. 3 players due to BOTC obligations, Notre Dame suffered several close losses in its first competition on regulation-sized courts. Notre Dame was also awarded a forfeit over Western Michigan, which was unable to field an entire lineup.

The different playing conditions proved detrimental to the Irish, particularly in making adjustments in shot selection and court coverage. Because national competition will be held on regulation courts, however, the Irish hope to make the experience one for positive learning.

Competing for the Irish, from No. 1 through 10, were freshmen Ryan Gisriel, Kevin Fromm, Kyle Grabowski and Kenny Hincapie and seniors Mark Maierhofer and Kristine So. Schlax posted Notre Dame's lone win of the weekend.

Sailing

Notre Dame placed 12th of 17 teams at Northwestern's Timme's Tune-up Regatta and gained experience, as several Irish competitors were making their collegiate debuts. The A boat finished sixth and the B boat finished 16th in their respective divisions.

Bowling

The men's squad traveled to Dayton, Ohio, for the Raider Classic, where the Irish started slow on Day 1 but rebounded for a top-25 finish on Day 2.

In the first day of competition, Notre Dame looked to build momentum but on three separate occasions was left with an unfortunate 7-10 split. The Irish claimed second-to-last place after Day 1.

The Irish rebounded on Sunday. Bowling with Saginaw, the No. 2 seed, the Irish looked like the favorite after bowling an impressive 826 four-game Baker series. This inspired the Irish to a great day with four more solid series, resulting in a top 25 finish. Seniors CJ Kaltenbach, Chris Kieser and James Breen, sophomores Brian Frisch and Richard Skelton and freshman Armani Sutton contributed strong performances on Sunday to lead the comeback.

The men's and women's squads will next compete at the Western Illinois Leatherneck Classic on Dec. 5-6.

Men's Rugby

The Irish concluded their first semester competition by dropping the semifinal of the Midwest Regionals to Indiana, 37-27. The Hoosiers advanced to the finals to take on Bowling Green, which beat Ohio State.

Men's Volleyball

Notre Dame opened its season on the road Saturday by winning three of four. The Irish took down Michigan, Michigan State and Cincinnati while falling to Northwestern Illinois. Notre Dame lost to Illinois Sunday to finish the tournament in ninth.

November 18, 7:00-8:30pm / McNell Room of LaFortune dormats and strupets, tools and sissies
the media and gender roles

ND Club Sports

NFL

Titans’ owner fined by league for lewd gesture

Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The NFL has fined Titans owner Bud Adams $250,000 for making an obscene gesture at Buffalo fans while celebrating Tennessee’s victory over the Bills.

Commissioner Roger Goodell notified Adams of the fine Monday, and league spokesman Greg Aiello said it is for conduct detrimental to the NFL. Adams was seen making the gesture while in his luxury suite and again on the field after Sunday’s 41-17 victory.

The 86-year-old Adams issued an apology a couple of hours later, saying he got caught up in the excitement of the moment.

Goodell was at the game, after having breakfast with Adams. The league said that Goodell left Adams’ suite at the moment.

The Bills staged the greatest comeback in NFL history on Jan. 3, 1993, against what was then the Houston Oilers in a 41-38 overtime victory, while the Titans pulled off the Music City Miracle in 2000, a game-winning kickoff return for a touchdown with 3 seconds remaining.

The Bills opened the season on the road Saturday by winning three of four. The Irish took down Michigan, Michigan State and Cincinnati while falling to Northwestern Illinois. Notre Dame lost to Illinois Sunday to finish the tournament in ninth.
Men’s
continued from page 20
the first half. Sophomore running back Houston Clarke ran into the end zone untouched on a 40-yard carry to the, the first score of the game was after sophomore Joey Riccioli.

We felt good. We moved the ball against No. 7 Pasquerilla and quarterback Aidan Fitzgerald said of the quick score. "We had momentum. We were optimistic."

Knott’s defense shut down the Siegfried offense the first several possessions and continued to move the ball. Driving late in the second quarter, Knott looked to score again and may run away with the game before Siegfried scored.

Michael Isaacs turned the tide with an interception. "Isaacs made a really amazing interception. The team really feed off of that."

Fitzgerald dropped back and looked to complete a 10-yard out pass. Isaacs jumped the route and made a spectacular diving interception, keeping Knott from adding to their lead just before the half. "I think we just became content with the game plan after the interception," Fitzgerald said. "We weren’t playing Knott football because we had been playing all year long."

St. Edward’s scored first in the second half looking like a new team. Led by freshmen David Whitmore and Matt Meinert and sophomores John Aversa and Will Geisicki, the Rams pulled off two impressive driving touchdown, taking the lead on a 46-yard run by quarterback Meinert.

I just think the team was not really stepped up to take a bigger ball for the year," Cure said. "We all came out and played as one unit, and it just happened to work out for us.

To Rams can still relish the win for now, but they know they have work to do if they wish to see their season just fine. It is going to be an incredible achievement.

St. Edward’s 14, Morrissey 0
No. 8 St. Edward’s upset another higher seeded team in Morrissey to advance to the championship game next weekend. The Gentlemen’s defensive presence and strong domination of this game into the final time that either team scored 7-7. Neither team could not convert the pass for an

It was kind of scary," Cure said. "At halftime, we had to regroup and refocus," Curely said.

Partially through the second half, Pasquerilla West faced a fourth-and-five, and Eigi evaded a ferocious Phox rush and completed a long pass to the Pangborn 3-yard line. She ran it in for a touchdown, tying the score 7-7. Neither team could score for the remainder of the game, sending the game to overtime, with the energy and tention palpable on both sidelines.

"It was kind of scary," Pangborn junior quarterback Gabby Tate admitted. "It’s all come down to these 10 yards."

Pangborn got the ball first in overtime and was able to score on a touchdown run by Tate but could not convert the extra point for an

During the first half, both teams were unable to score in an even defensive battle. Several chances for both teams were negated by penalties. With five starters missing, Walsh expected the early going to be rough, but the Wild Women came up with two big fourth down stops when Howard was in scoring position.

"The defense was doing very well, but our offense just couldn’t convert in the red zone," junior Mary Jenkins said. In the second half, however, both teams offense exploded into action. Howard got on the board first in a three-play drive, led by the legs and the arms of Bishop at quarterback.

Although they had not established much offense until this point, the Wild Women responded in convincing fashion, led by the legs and the arms of Tate in often this season."

the championship. Pasquerilla West now turns its focus to Howard next week in Pasquerilla. "That rattled us early," Curley said. "We’re really happy to be in the championship."

The Rams have returned to the fold after stepping up when injuries hit the Purple Weasels, as their defense started clicking. It was intense and exciting."

Walsh started to pick it up, and we responded," Jenkins said. "Our offense started clicking. It was intense and exciting."

Walsh’s change win evaporated with Bishop’s interception and the Rams were able to close out the game on a kneel.

"We came out and played hard those last two drives," Smith said. "Unfortunately, it didn’t work in our favor. Howard is a great team, and we wish them the best of luck in the Championship."

With the victory, Howard will take on Pasquerilla West in a clash of unbeatens for the cham-

"We are just happy and excitet to go to the stadium with both teams in both leagues facing each other," Jenkins said

Contact Allan Joseph at ajoeph28@nd.edu and Barrick Bollman at jbolman@nd.edu

THE OBSERVER – SPORTS
Tuesday, November 17, 2009

Men’s
continued from page 20

"Isaacs made a really amazing interception. The team really feed off of that."

Dex Cure
Siegfried senior captain

"Isaac's made a really amazing interception. The team really feed off of that."

The Observer – SPORTS
Tuesday, November 17, 2009

Men’s
continued from page 20

the first half. Sophomore running back Houston Clarke ran into the end zone untouched on a 40-yard carry to the, the first score of the game was after sophomore Joey Riccioli.

We felt good. We moved the ball against No. 7 Pasquerilla and quarterback Aidan Fitzgerald said of the quick score. "We had momentum. We were optimistic."

Knott’s defense shut down the Siegfried offense the first several possessions and continued to move the ball. Driving late in the second quarter, Knott looked to score again and may run away with the game before Siegfried scored.

Michael Isaacs turned the tide with an interception. "Isaacs made a really amazing interception. The team really feed off of that."

Fitzgerald dropped back and looked to complete a 10-yard out pass. Isaacs jumped the route and made a spectacular diving interception, keeping Knott from adding to their lead just before the half. "I think we just became content with the game plan after the interception," Fitzgerald said. "We weren’t playing Knott football because we had been playing all year long."

St. Edward’s scored first in the second half looking like a new team. Led by freshmen David Whitmore and Matt Meinert and sophomores John Aversa and Will Geisicki, the Rams pulled off two impressive driving touchdown, taking the lead on a 46-yard run by quarterback Meinert.

I just think the team was not really stepped up to take a bigger ball for the year," Cure said. "We all came out and played as one unit, and it just happened to work out for us.

To Rams can still relish the win for now, but they know they have work to do if they wish to see their season just fine. It is going to be an incredible achievement.

St. Edward’s 14, Morrissey 0
No. 8 St. Edward’s upset another higher seeded team in Morrissey to advance to the championship game next weekend. The Gentlemen’s defensive presence and strong domination of this game into the final time that either team scored 7-7. Neither team could not convert the pass for an

It was kind of scary," Cure said. "At halftime, we had to regroup and refocus," Curely said.

Partially through the second half, Pasquerilla West faced a fourth-and-five, and Eigi evaded a ferocious Phox rush and completed a long pass to the Pangborn 3-yard line. She ran it in for a touchdown, tying the score 7-7. Neither team could score for the remainder of the game, sending the game to overtime, with the energy and tention palpable on both sidelines.

"It was kind of scary," Pangborn junior quarterback Gabby Tate admitted. "It’s all come down to these 10 yards."

Pangborn got the ball first in overtime and was able to score on a touchdown run by Tate but could not convert the extra point for an

During the first half, both teams were unable to score in an even defensive battle. Several chances for both teams were negated by penalties. With five starters missing, Walsh expected the early going to be rough, but the Wild Women came up with two big fourth down stops when Howard was in scoring position.

"The defense was doing very well, but our offense just couldn’t convert in the red zone," junior Mary Jenkins said. In the second half, however, both teams offense exploded into action. Howard got on the board first in a three-play drive, led by the legs and the arms of Bishop at quarterback.

Although they had not established much offense until this point, the Wild Women responded in convincing fashion, led by the legs and the arms of Tate in often this season."

the championship. Pasquerilla West now turns its focus to Howard next week in Pasquerilla. "That rattled us early," Curley said. "We’re really happy to be in the championship."

The Rams have returned to the fold after stepping up when injuries hit the Purple Weasels, as their defense started clicking. It was intense and exciting."

Walsh started to pick it up, and we responded," Jenkins said. "Our offense started clicking. It was intense and exciting."

Walsh’s change win evaporated with Bishop’s interception and the Rams were able to close out the game on a kneel.

"We came out and played hard those last two drives," Smith said. "Unfortunately, it didn’t work in our favor. Howard is a great team, and we wish them the best of luck in the Championship."

With the victory, Howard will take on Pasquerilla West in a clash of unbeatens for the cham-

"We are just happy and excit-
et to go to the stadium with both teams in both leagues facing each other," Jenkins said

Contact Allan Joseph at ajoeph28@nd.edu and Barrick Bollman at jbolman@nd.edu

THE OBSERVER – SPORTS
Tuesday, November 17, 2009

Men’s
continued from page 20

the first half. Sophomore running back Houston Clarke ran into the end zone untouched on a 40-yard carry to the, the first score of the game was after sophomore Joey Riccioli.

We felt good. We moved the ball against No. 7 Pasquerilla and quarterback Aidan Fitzgerald said of the quick score. "We had momentum. We were optimistic."

Knott’s defense shut down the Siegfried offense the first several possessions and continued to move the ball. Driving late in the second quarter, Knott looked to score again and may run away with the game before Siegfried scored.

Michael Isaacs turned the tide with an interception. "Isaacs made a really amazing interception. The team really feed off of that."

Fitzgerald dropped back and looked to complete a 10-yard out pass. Isaacs jumped the route and made a spectacular diving interception, keeping Knott from adding to their lead just before the half. "I think we just became content with the game plan after the interception," Fitzgerald said. "We weren’t playing Knott football because we had been playing all year long."

St. Edward’s scored first in the second half looking like a new team. Led by freshmen David Whitmore and Matt Meinert and sophomores John Aversa and Will Geisicki, the Rams pulled off two impressive driving touchdown, taking the lead on a 46-yard run by quarterback Meinert.

I just think the team was not really stepped up to take a bigger ball for the year," Cure said. "We all came out and played as one unit, and it just happened to work out for us.

To Rams can still relish the win for now, but they know they have work to do if they wish to see their season just fine. It is going to be an incredible achievement.

St. Edward’s 14, Morrissey 0
No. 8 St. Edward’s upset another higher seeded team in Morrissey to advance to the championship game next weekend. The Gentlemen’s defensive presence and strong
Brown
continued from page 20

Brown is only the second team in conference history to finish the regular season undefeated since the league expanded the schedule from 12 to 14 games. Brown acknowledges that her players’ work ethic and determination have led to their success.

“The consistency that it takes to be able to do that throughout the season is pretty tremendous, so I’m just really proud of the team and the effort they put forth each time we took the court,” Brown said. “We really brought out the best in the other teams. They really get up to play us, and the composure we had at times and the way we followed through was really good to see.”

Heading into the season, many Irish fans expected the talented cast of seniors to pave the way toward a conference title. And while the senior class has led the squad through both performance and leadership, the exceptional play of the underclassmen has many fans turning their heads.

“We have good backups at each of the positions, so it’s been a total team effort.”

Debbie Brown

Irish coach

Brown said. “Certainly the younger players that have had pretty important roles have stepped up and done a great job. We have good backups at each of the positions, so it’s been a total team effort.”

Although the numbers point to the contrary, Brown is convinced her team needs to improve if the Irish hope to secure tournament titles.

“We do know that there are still areas that we can get better, and going into the Big East Championship, the one thing that works in our favor is that we’ve played each of these teams one time now,” Brown said. “We can go back and really study what we did last time, and make some adjustments. That part of it is really challenging and fun, and we’re looking forward to it.”

Contact Chris Masou at cmasou@nd.edu

Tourney
continued from page 20

NCAA tournament game should not temper the team’s momentum going into the tournament.

“I think with three ties in a row we’re looking forward to getting a straight win,” he said. “As they say, shootout wins or losses get pretty old pretty quickly.”

Notre Dame is one of five Big East teams to make the field of 48, with Connecticut, Louisville, South Florida and No. 13-seed St. John’s also making the cut.

The University of Akron scored the top seed in the tournament after a perfect 20-0-0 season. The Irish may face the Zips in the quarterfinals if both teams make it through the first three rounds. However, Clark said the team does not want to look past Green Bay.

“I’ve heard reports on Green Bay and they’re a very, very good team,” he said. “This will be a challenge. The first round is always very difficult.”

Contact Laura Myers at lmyers2@nd.edu

Brey
continued from page 20

drew 12 fouls in the first half, and went to the free throw line 13 times. Early in the second half, Notre Dame continued trying to pad its lead but the Red Flash responded to every Irish run. After another Harangody three made it 60-45, Saint Francis went on a small run of its own, using two shots from distance from guard Umar Shannon to pull within nine.

The see-saw game continued for the majority of the second half, with the Irish never establishing a lead greater than 15 points, but never allowing the Red Flash closer than five.

Junior forward Tyrone Nash was limited by foul trouble in the first half, but had a strong return, scoring nine points in the second period.

Notre Dame finally pulled away with less than five minutes to play, building a lead up to 20 points at 85-65 on three by Hansbrough and senior Tory Jackson and a layup by senior guard Jonathan Peoples.

Jackson finished with nine points, nine assists and seven rebounds, and junior Tim Abromaitis had another strong showing off the bench, scoring 17 points and gathering five rebounds.

“Tim Abromaitis gives us another big guy out there, and another guy that can make some shots, get after it offensively and get some big rebounds.”

Hansbrough said. “He’s really helped us out coming off the bench, he played unbelievable.”

Shannon led Saint Francis with 18 points on 7-of-11 shooting, and the Red Flash shot 68 percent from 3-point range to keep the Irish from pulling away.

The Irish will face their first real test of the year against Long Beach State at home on Thursday at 7:30 p.m. The 49ers went 15-15 last season but were picked in Irish first
"DON'T BE A BRITANDER"

Admitted us forces used napalm against Iraqis.

Colonel James Altus,

Palm, it has a big psychological effect.

It's no great way to die. The generals love napalm.

PHILIP JONES GRATYFIS

The anyway from phosphorus positions.

down to the bone so they

I'll keep on burning right just one drop is enough.

burn better. I'll even burn under water now. And

The (WP—white phosphorus) so's to make it

let it stoped burning, so they started adding WP-blanket. But then if the books jumped under wa-adding polystyrene—now it sticks like shit to a quick they could scrape it off. So the boys started original product wasn't so hot— if the books were are pleased with those backroom boys at Dow. The were explained to me by a pilot in 1966: "We sure not a weapon. Some of it inner selling points

NAPALM is the most effective "anti-personal-

Center for Social Concern, November 18, 7:30 P.M.

HAS 40 YEARS CHANGED THE CONVERSATION?

BEING A CHRISTIAN IN A CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY IN TIMES OF WAR:

November 18, 1969—November 18, 2009

DOW-CIA

THE NOTRE DAME 10:
The Observer apologizes for the absence of Schad & Freude. It will return tomorrow.

SCHAD & FREUDE

WILL GUAPPONE & BRI KRAFCIK

The Observer apologizes for the absence of Schad & Freude. It will return tomorrow.

T.I.N.D.

DAN POHLMAN

CROSSWORD

Across

1. Pig mus’s Cass Elliot and Michelle Phillips
2. Wander aimlessly (about) ___ America
3. Frigidaire competitor
4. Debuts on the N.Y.S.E.
5. Member of Court records
6. Frigidaire
7. Prefix with ware or content
8. Opposite of Cry
9. Prefix with ware or content
10. Summer refreshers
11. Hogan’s Heros’ setting
12. Brand used in N.Y.C.’s original subway line
13. Sherlock Holmes
14.也无法坐直
15. Show contempt
16. Sicilian
17. Prince Charles, existing
18. Writer ___
19. Take a shot
20. First pro team to turf
21. Calif. barrio area
22. Gallery event
24. Elisabeth of “Hamlet”
27. ___ Na Na
28. Opposite of Old console
29. Scrap for Spot
30. Turkish title
31. Antique shop item
32. “Judge Judy”
33. Humiliates
34. Go astray
35. “Leaving Las Vegas”
36. Place for a béret
37. Place for a béret
38. Auto dashboard indicator
39. Pinot ___
40. Skee-Ball site
41. Blackmailer’s evidence
42. Heavenly hunter
43. One signatory to Logan on-name
44. Dresden’s state
45. Skee-Ball site
46. Belmont Park action
47. Moon jumper of 1952
48. One who sings
49. Claiborne of Sacramento
50. Cramped spot
51. Pranks
52. More coquettish
53. Irene of a story
54. Fire up
55. Soil: Prefix
56. “In that case …”
57. Blacktop, e.g.
58. Wander
59. Head slap
60. ___ Paulo, Brazil
61. Four-baggers
62. ___, European languages

Down

1. Prefs with ware or content
2. Savages
3. “dumb as” e.g.
4. Unknown__ amounts
5. ___ Paulo, Brazil
6. “deaf as” or “dumb as”
7. ___ America
8. Cry accompanying a head slap
9. Cuba’s locale
10. Soliloquy starter
11. “dumb as”
12. Seducitive W.W. I
13. ___ Na Na
14. Debuts on the N.Y.S.E.
15. Show contempt
16. Court records
17. Member of Court records
18. Writer ___
19. Take a shot
20. First pro team to turf
21. Calif. barrio area
22. Gallery event
24. Elisabeth of “Hamlet”
27. ___ Na Na
28. Opposite of Old console
29. Scrap for Spot
30. Turkish title
31. Antique shop item
32. “Judge Judy”
33. Humiliates
34. Go astray
35. “Leaving Las Vegas”
36. Place for a béret
37. Place for a béret
38. Auto dashboard indicator
39. Pinot ___
40. Skee-Ball site
41. Blackmailer’s evidence
42. Heavenly hunter
43. One signatory to Logan on-name
44. Dresden’s state
45. Skee-Ball site
46. Belmont Park action
47. Moon jumper of 1952
48. One who sings
49. Claiborne of Sacramento
50. Cramped spot
51. Pranks
52. More coquettish
53. Irene of a story
54. Fire up
55. Soil: Prefix
56. “In that case …”
57. Blacktop, e.g.
58. Wander
59. Head slap
60. ___ Paulo, Brazil
61. Four-baggers
62. ___, European languages

JUMBLE

Jumble: Unscramble these four Jumbles, one at each square, to form four ordinary words.

Th Wedding day, he was — STONED AND STONED.

THE OBSERVER

Published Monday through Friday, The Observer is a vital source of information on people and events in the Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s Community.

Join the more than 13,000 readers who have found The Observer an indispensable link to the two campuses. Please complete the accompanying form and mail it today to receive The Observer in your home.

Make checks payable to:

The Observer
P.O. Box 779
Notre Dame, IN 46556

☑ Enclosed is $120 for one academic year

☑ Enclosed is $65 for one semester

Name
Address
City
State
Zip

Happy Birthday! You've just played with a puzzle -- or, you're about to. Congratulations! Please mail it today to receive The Observer in your home.

Don’t forget to mail it today! If you haven’t received The Observer in your home, please mail it today to receive the puzzle.

Don’t throw this puzzle away. It’s just the beginning of a new adventure. Please mail it today to receive the puzzle.

Don’t forget to mail it today! If you haven’t received The Observer in your home, please mail it today to receive the puzzle.

Don’t throw this puzzle away. It’s just the beginning of a new adventure. Please mail it today to receive the puzzle.
MEN’S BASKETBALL

Notre Dame finishes off overmatched Red Flash squad

By MICHAEL BRYAN
Associated Sports Editor

The Irish won their second game in less than 48 hours Tuesday, defeating Saint Francis 95-72 in a physical and hard-fought game by the Red Flash.

Saint Francis was called for 24 fouls and sent Notre Dame (2-0) to the free-throw line 22 times but played the Irish close most of the game. While the Red Flash never led past the opening minutes, they kept the home team from putting the game out of reach until the closing minutes of the second half. “You have to give them credit, they made some tough shots,” Irish senior forward Luke Harangody said. “They were good practice for a good Long Beach State team coming in here Thursday.”

Harangody led the team with 27 points and nine rebounds and showed off his shooting range with three 3-point buckets. Senior guard Ben Hansbrough knocked down four threes and was second on the Irish with 18 points.

After a back-and-forth opening five minutes, the Irish and Red Flash were knotched up at seven apiece. Notre Dame then went on a 12-0 run, fueled by two Harangody threes and one by Hansbrough.

Saint Francis showed some resiliency after the run, cutting the Irish lead down to five at 33-28. The Red Flash then got into foul trouble, with Harangody’s aggressiveness in the post paying off. The senior drew fouls on four straight Notre Dame possessions, and converted the penalties into six points at the free throw line.

Harangody said that in a game with so many whistles, he saw the opportunity to draw some fouls underneath. “Definitely when they were in the bonus in the first half, I started calling for it down low, he said. “I knew I could post up and get to the line.”

Red Flash guard Anthony Ervin made two 3-pointers to close out the first half and keep the Red Flash within seven points, trailing 45-38. The Irish

ND VOLLEYBALL

Much still ahead for Irish

By CHRIS MASOUD
Sports Writer

With wins over Georgetown and South Florida this weekend, the Irish accomplished two of their primary goals this season: an outright Big East regular-season title and an undefeated conference record.

But as Notre Dame heads into tournament play, its two biggest goals still loom ahead.

“Right now, Obviously we feel good about the things we’ve done, but we’re not even close to being finished,” Irish coach Debbie Brown said. “There’s an urgency to still accomplish a lot more this year. We’re looking forward to the

INTERHALL FOOTBALL

Stadium bound

Siegfried, St. Edward’s set for title showdown

By JOHN HELMS and KAITLYN MURPHY
Sports Writers

No. 7 Siegfried beat its rival, No. 3 Knott, 14-7 to keep its back-to-back title hopes alive. The victory Sunday gave the Ramsblers a chance to defend their 2008 title in the Stadium next weekend.

The two teams tied earlier in the season and were both considered title contenders throughout the year. The Mod Quad rivalry reached a new level with a Stadium berth on the line. “It means a lot to beat a team like Knott,” Siegfried senior captain Dex Cure said. “Knott is a great team, and we were happy to come away with a win. The fact that the win gets us into the Stadium means even more.”

Knott did not let Siegfried win the contest easily, putting points on the board early in

ND will host Green Bay to open NCAAs

By LAURA MYERS
Sports Writer

Notre Dame will host Green Bay Thursday in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

The teams and bracket were announced Monday, and the Irish received one of 27 at-large bids to the tournament. “We’re also very excited to be there,” Irish coach Bobby Clark said. “If you’d ask me two or three weeks ago we weren’t sure we’d make it. We put a very good run together. I think the team is hungry to do well.”

If the Irish (10-7-4) defeat Green Bay (14-2-3), they will move on to face No. 9 seed Northwestern in Evanston on Nov. 22. The Wildcats knocked Notre Dame out of the NCAA tournament in a first-round game in 2008 and defeated the Irish 1-0 in a preseason scrimmage on Aug. 24.

The Irish have been hot in the past two weeks, defeating then-No. 5 Connecticut 2-1 Nov. 13 in South Florida, No. 9 Louisville and No. 24 St. John’s in each round of the Big East tournament. Clark said a shootout

MEN’S SOCCER

see BROWN/page 17