The Last Give First—Burtchaell

Yesterday evening, in Sacred Heart Church, at the fourth commemoration Mass in the "Year of Faith," Rev. James Burtchaell spoke on the topic of "Faith and Works." He began by suggesting that all the feeding and clothing works which the gospel specifies are essentially
"the signs that any good man will be known by. All the signs of the sacred," he said, "are productive." The difference between philanthropy simply conceived and the giving of Christians must be that the latter "conveys the affection not just of ourselves, but of a much greater love than our own."

From this point, he went on to discuss a topic he felt was sorely in need of review, that of the allocation of the fiscal resources of the Church. First Citing Biblical references, he pointed out the fact that neither Paul nor any of the other writers of the New Testament "felt it necessary to expend upon non­ Christians." But this, he said, is certainly no longer the case. "If we want to show the bounds of His affection to all races, we will have to be equally lavish and equally indiscriminate."

Father Burtchaell then proceded to quote from a recent study of Church giving and expending, primarily indicating that poorer families gave significantly greater percentage of their income to the Church than the relatively or very rich. The study also demonstrated that after the school expenses, clerical salaries and building maintenance were taken out, less than 10% reained "to wash the feet of the world."

Turning then to the question of Church buildings, Burtchaell suggested that the construction of beautiful monuments which was once the accepted role of the Church, should now be left to governments and corporations.
The euphemisms about God's House should be changed to the sounder realization that the Church is, in fact, man's house.
"It is we who enjoy the marble,
the gold, the silk and the comfort." These are, said Burtchaell, merely gestures, but their discinctness and their sensitivity to the
misery of the world make them
highly significant gestures, and strong marks of Christianity.

dissent seems at this point to be the early favorite of the majority of student government insiders. As Farley Hall senator last year, Rossie revised the Student Government constitution and also served on the Student Commitee. He has perhaps been cloer to the higher echelons of student government in the last two years than has Dowd. As a delegate to the National Student Association last summer, Rossie was elected Vice-Chairman of the Ill.-Ohio region.

Pat Dowd, who is from Cold Springs Harbor, New York, is a junior majoring in government and economics. He has served in the Student Senate for three years. Along with Mike Manton, Dowd was instrumental in the lobbying which led to car permissions for second semester senators. Last week, he helped draft what he calls a "strong proposal" which calls for hall autonomy in determining parietal hours. This resolution will be a mong those presented to the Students this Wednesday and Thursday.

Rossie is considered the more liberal candidate, but the difference of views is not as stark as those presented to the Students. Rossie feels that the ND does not have to be equally lavish in its university support, whereas Dowd feels that the college's support deserves public recognition.

Concerning academic policy,
Rossie says, "I don't see the ND doing its share in experimenting in education or in evoluting its present condition, at least on the undergraduate level." Dowd, comparing the university with those that he visited over the summer, agrees, "Notre Dame still has a long way to go." Dowd calls for changes in the teaching atmosphere.

In looking forward to the election, both favor the favorate's role to Rossie who states that
"we have the majority of the Senate, of the hall presidents, and of the class presidents on our side.
"Dowd also contends that he has a good group of campaigners committed to him. He feels that his greatest strength will be with the freshmen and sophomores,
while the junior and senior class­ ses will be "a real battleground." Rossie is optimistic about his own chances for election but ad­ sends to some fear that the shortness of the campaign may work
to the advantage of his opponent.

Concerning the A.S.P.'s nomination, Rossie says: "I have only minor differences of policy with the A.S.P. I will ask for their endorsement. But I have never been a member of any student party, nor will I become one now."

Dowd admits that his atti­

cinctness and their sensitivity to the
misery of the world make them

Up With The Outs

As I look around these days, I see every bulletin board festooned with advertisements for the General Assembly of Students. A fine show it shall be, with Christopher J. Murphy III putting in a rare campus appearance and Tom Brokaw playing demagogue to perfection. If this is not enough, there is Sargeant Shriver as speaker for the first night.

However, as all this student government hoopla reaches its zenith, we must remember a recent triumph of student rights, a triumph which represents the most solid concrete accomplishment of the year so far. This is Senior cars.

Senior Class President Mike Minton is no favorite of the powers that be. Rare is a Student Union meeting where his demise is not discussed. His Patriot policies have been revisited in the Observer.

In mid-December, "Mayor Mike" presented Fr. Hesburgh with a rationale in support of Senior cars. The rationale was detailed, presenting arguments and anticipating replies. It outlined the career and social obligations of the Senior, making an eloquent plea as to the responsibilities of a Senior preparing for the future. With the rationale came a willingness to negotiate, an open mind of Minton in contrast to the open mouth of student government. Sweetness and light was accompanied by a wee bit of pressure as well. After all, the Administration of du Lac had hitherto been unwilling to let students use a gas station, let alone possess a car. Minton therefore entered into cooperation with Walsh Senator and SBP hopeful Pat Dowd, another person on the outs with the in-crowd.

Dowd went before the Senate with a specific resolution, not one of those broad rights declarations which invites oratory and passed by consent. Senate support of the Mayor's efforts. The Dowd resolution presenting additional reasoning for Senior cars. It called for the firming-up of the car deal is permanent. Without making a Dreyfus case out of it or appealing to raw passion, Minton, therefore entered into cooperation with Walsh Senator and SBP hopeful Pat Dowd, another person on the outs with the in-crowd.

I raise the cars question because I feel Minton has probably managed to do about as much as the Assembly can hope to do. The General Assembly is a marvelous idea, especially if it forges a meaningful unity among the students. With luck, it should prove to be, with Christopher J. Murphy III putting in a rare celebration.

Above all, there must be honest and sincere effort, not attempts to pander with advertisements for the General Assembly of Students. A fine show it shall be, with Christopher J. Murphy III putting in a rare campus appearance and Tom Brokaw playing demagogue to perfection. If this is not enough, there is Sargeant Shriver as speaker for the first night.

If you don't agree that business destroys individuality, maybe it's because you're an individual.

There's certain campus talk that claims individuality is dead in the business world. That big business is a big brother destroying initiative. But freedom of thought and action, when backed with reason and conviction's courage, will keep and nurture individuality whatever the scene: in the arts, the sciences, and in business. Scoffers to the contrary, the red corpuscles of individuality pay off. No mistake. Encouraging individuality rather than suppressing it is policy in a business like Western Electric—where we make and produce things Bell telephone companies need. Because communications are changing fast, these needs are great and diverse. Being involved with a system that helps keep people in touch, lets doctors send cardiograms across country for quick analysis, helps transmit news instantly, is demanding. Demanding of individuals.

If your ambition is strong and your abilities commensurate, you'll never be truly happy with the status quo. You'll seek ways to change it and—wonderful feeling!—some of them will work. Could be at Western Electric.

No Bargain

The University has been recently confronted with the truth of the old adage that contaminated chickens (or cattle as you would have it) always come home to roost. On January 19th, large numbers of frequenters of the North Dining Hall expressed their displeasure with the side effects of the Thursday evening meat.

The only real consolation was that University businessmen had not foreseen the full potentials of the situation by installing pay toilets in the campus men's clubs. But official apologies are little consolation for pain, poorly-done final exams, and the frustrating realization that if in the future the food would not be literally sickening, everything else would remain the same.

The various problems with the University's Dining Hall system have been pointed out for years by numerous student committees. It will not be well-armed guards that will prevent riots in the future, but the rational solution of the underlying problems. There have been numerous smaller riots in the last four years for the same basic reasons, and given the continuation of the present system, it is unlikely to expect less in the future.

On Thursday evening, the General Assembly will consider legislation concerning the dining halls. We recommend that the students consider the merits of the coupon principle advocated by Senator Stor-atz's subcommittee. We also urge that the Assembly demand that the University engage a legitimate catering service to run the dining halls.

Unfortunately, the University's initial response to the riot situation has been anything but encouraging. The first concern seems not to be the conditions of either the students or the food, but levying the punishments necessary to discourage student demonstrations. In any case, one must certainly condemn the arbitrary selection of six students to be symbolically cursed for their fellow.

But now the Student Body is being insulted with overtures of a threatening deal. Six of our fellows are to be ransomed from the enemy through an arbitrary monetary assessment of all students using the North Dining Hall in order to pay for the eighty dollars damage. This mentality stifles the potential cooperation of students, faculty, and administration in building a better Notre Dame.

Hopefully, on Wednesday night, the University administration is going to realize that the students are a real force to be dealt with - representative of the central focus of Notre Dame. And more specifically, perhaps the Dean of Students will realize that this student body will not make a humiliating trade. The attempt to impose such will only hurt everyone in the long run.

The End Of The Game

The Patriot Game has played itself out once again with a characteristic last-minute shuffle of invitations. This year's winner, George F. Kennan, affirms someone's tongue-in-cheek hunch, "A patriot is one who can come."

Last year's Observer called the Patriot of the Year Award an exercise in black humor. But old jokes become stale and, unfortunately, this joke is on Notre Dame. Before a new and rosy-cheeked junior becomes president of the Senior Class on the basis of rhetoric and a handshake, the Award should receive a meaning or else pass into the files of trivia.

The Award is a plastic one which each recipient has been able to mold to his own best advantage, since "patriotism" is given no tight definition. George F. Kennan and Paul Harvey disagree; but who can say that Kennan's pulse is the faster during the raising of the flag? The Senior Class has made that distinction year after year with no apparent criterion of selection.

Those damn fens and bogs of the Midwest always seem to bring out the best kind of student, the sort of person who distinguishes himself by being a paying member of that elite group I too am inflected with the weather of South Bend and all its recurrent symptoms. Trials of A Social Director

By JOHN ALZAMORA

Now that time of year has bounced around when one and all are faced with the question of what courses to stick with and what choice classes to bolt out of like sailors on a sinking ship. The profs, those rascals, sensing the "inhuman, lean, of faith!" crisis in the bosom of the man of way-ey students before them, and sensing their own dislike of large, troublesome numbers of undergrads cluttering their lives with tests, papers, and reports to correct will and help the momentous decision along. In other words they'll try and get you out of their course as quickly as your little hands can snap up a drop-slip.

By the way, the naive, trusting student does have a defense. Into the ever open palm of innovations in order to liven up the environment. It is his responsibility to try and guess the social problem that is peculiar to Notre Dame. Presently, Nelson facts his biggest challenge — The Spring Semester Wanstand.

"students think there is too much..."

in a 10-to-20 manner while the Tops were hailed with wild enthusiasm. The same characteristics affect the trip and party productions. The ND student must first be convinced. Then he will respond.

For this semester Nelson is trying a couple of innovations in order to liven up the gradual march to spring. There will be socials and new "small affairs." These will be activities with a large number of people, emphasizing an informal atmosphere. Nelson wants to get away from the forced parties where dates play their "next little game." He hopes to give mixed groups an opportunity to meet more casually.

"If you're teaching a seminar, make it a point to give mixed groups an opportunity to meet more casually."

By BILL SISKA

Two of the movies currently being shown downtown are a blow to the auteur theory. This theory holds that the man with the ideas should be the man who makes the film, and that the director who exercises control over both the method and content of his films is as valid an artist as a poet or painter. The last word on Fellini are auteurs, while most Hollywood directors are not.

The first film of John Huston, the au­ tore in point, was the Maltese Falcon, still regarded as perhaps the greatest of detective films. He followed this with a number of excellent works including The Treasure of Sierra Madre, The African Queen, and Freud. Now, after more than twenty-five years of film-making, he comes up with Casion Royale, The Bible, and Reflections in a Golden Eye. The feasibility of creative freedom and experiment in the big-money commercial film circuit is still to be seen.

It seems that either the director is frustr­ ated in his artistic endeavors (Orson Welles, the classic case), or that the re­ servo­ ite of talent dies up rather than matures (Huston, maybe!), or, finally, that he has accepted the comfort of wealth and actually enjoys turning out mediocre work (this, Huston?).

The more interesting of the movies at the Avon is the co-feature. It is only because of the past work of its director, Serge Bourguignon.

Bourguignon's first film, Sundays and Cybele, was an immediate hit and is still a favorite of film societies and revival houses. The story is too complex for him to trip to Hollywood where he made The Reward, a dismal failure. Two Weeks in September leaves him still a one-film director.

As for The Penhouse, if it had hap­ pened to you, you wouldn't want to talk about it either.

A Profitable Way to Drop Out

"Who's that little kid..."
conditions and overall student dissatisfaction with the food service.

A sub-committee composed of Prof. James J. Carberry, Father Shills and Gordon Hunt (president of Howard Hall) was formed. It will meet with Mr. Mehall to discuss food and services and possible solutions to the problem. Any questions, suggestions, or complaints concerning this investigation should be addressed to Gordon Hunt, 337 Howard Hall.

The committee recommended that the South Dining Hall be partitioned and remodeled in order to provide a better atmosphere. Screening off the employe- ers preparing the food and shortening of the tables was recommended. It was agreed that shutter tables might reduce the "mess hall" atmosphere.

Two other possibilities were suggested as proper subjects for the sub-committee's investigations. The possibility that a private caterer might be able to provide better meals at the same price will be investigated. Also the feasibility of allowing students to purchase meal cards at their own option will be studied. Richard Meenan, president of Breen-Phillips Hall, suggested that the sub-committee look into the situation of student help. He pointed out that the students are not satisfied with their present wages and that, consequently, they feel that they can "get by" with a sub-standard job performance.

SRP Chris Murphy informed the committee that Student Government also has a sixteen man sub-committee which is being formed to investigate dining hall problems. It was pointed out that this may result in some duplication of effort. Murphy stated that the Student Government Committee would have no investigatory powers but would merely try to make recommendations to the Administration concerning dining hall problems.

Father Riehle declined to answer Murphy's questions on what action would be taken against those students who had been apprehended by the Notre Dame security police during the disturbances of January 19. According to Father Riehle, no official statement will be made until the decision of the Disciplinary Board is made public.

During semester break, the Notre Dame spotlight was captured by the minor sports teams. Combining record-breaking individual performances with solid team play, they piled up a 12-1 vacation victory margin. A summary follows.

TRACK
Junior sprinter Bill Hurd was the big news on the indoor boards. He led Notre Dame to a pair of victories.

Hurd opened the 1968 indoor season by breaking one record and tying two more as the Irish slipped by Indiana 69-61, Jan. 27. In Bloomington, Notre Dame won only 6 of the 15 meet events, but used strong team depth and a sweep in the 800-yard dash to pull off with the win. Hurd tied both the I.U. Fieldhouse and Notre Dame school records with his .061 60-yard dash. He broke the I.U. Fieldhouse mark by stepping off the 300-yard dash in .309. Hurd was at it again Feb. 3 against Miami of Ohio. He won the 60-yard and 300-yard dashes in .061 and .308, setting two meet records. The .061 also tied the Notre Dame indoor and Fieldhouse marks. The Irish faltered in field events, but won 10 of 11 running events for a conclusive 87-44 win. Miami’s Ted Downing, the reigning NCAA indoor high jump champion, established meet and Fieldhouse records with a 6’10” leap.

SWIMMING
Freestyler John May led Coach Dennis Stark’s crew to a three game win streak while breaking a school record.

On Jan. 27, the Irish won 9 of 12 events to crush Western Ontario 73-30 in the latter’s pool.

Two days later, May won two freestyle events as Notre Dame whipped Wayne State 63-50. The Irish swimmers also broke the Wayne State pool and Notre Dame records in the 50-yard freestyle, while tying both marks in the 400-yard freestyle relay.

Paced by May’s record-setting performance in the 200-yard freestyle, Notre Dame swam to its fourth victory of the season, 71-42 over St. Bonaventure. May’s time of 1:52.1 broke his own mark set during the 1966 season.

Sports trivia has become such an established fact that today we take it upon ourselves to inaugurate the Observer's first annual Esoteric Sports Trivia Contest. The rules, premises of the subject matter, are simple. A prize will be offered to the reader who submits the most correct answers. Answers must be taken from memory, and sent to me c/o the Observer by no later than 6:00 P.M. Wednesday, February 7.

Before we begin, we might say a word about the nature of trivia. The practical value, for instance, of maintaining a vast store of relatively useless information might be called into question. But there can be, for the young savant attempting to go from rags to Brooks Brothers, a useful aspect to such an aggregation, if it is used correctly.

Now, it is a truth well known that to succeed in the real world the young executive must impress his elders. One must impress both on the job and the social circuit. It is in this latter milieu that a knowledge of trivia can aide one's advancement.

Picture yourself at the vortex of the social situation, the cocktail party. First, it might be helpful to assume a position on or near the floor. This will hint at the 'youth preaching and teaching in the temple' image that you are trying to project. You must, of course, let the elders begin the conversation; but be constantly ready for your opening. As soon as your subject, sports, for example, is touched upon, spring into action.

It is quintessential that you grasp the initiative. You must keep asking, the questions, for, if you don't, someone is liable to stamp you, and there goes the old promotion. So keep the initiative and surrender it only when you must leave the room. It might be well to add that if tempus is fleeting and the subject still hasn't worked its way around to your forte, your optimum wager is to help it along.

For instance, if someone is discussing his greatest thrill in some profession, casually mention that you heard a good one recently — Joe Garagiola's greatest baseball thrill was 'a great catch.' He told that thrill was making it past the trade deadline so I could send my laundry out.'"

Who said Mike McCoy isn't quick?

"6-5, 270-pound sophomore, criticized early last football season for his lack of speed at defensive tackle, showed plenty of quickness, power and endurance Saturday as he led Notre Dame wrestlers to a 20-15 upset victory over John Carroll.

The Irish were just 1-1 entering the meet but got a big psychological lift from McCoy's debut as a college wrestler and 2,000 screaming Fieldhouse fans. Carroll unbeaten in dual competition the past two years, carried an 11-match win streak into battle.

The overall score was 15-15 as McCoy and 190-pound Dan Minnis took the mat in the day's final event. Minnis held a 3-1 edge in points in the second period, but was no match for McCoy in the last canto. Mike captured a 5-3 margin with two minutes to go, then pinned Minnis with a -45 remaining.

Keith Giron (153 pounds) and Bill Hashbrook (177) remained undefeated in dual meets. Giron pinned Don Korb at 7-35 while Hashbrook handed Mike Kelly his first whipping of the year, 12-3. Jim Hansen got the other Irish triumph in the 152 class. He edged previously unbeaten John Parsons 6-5.

Notre Dame grapplers Wabash College tomorrow at Crawfordsville, Ind.

"This team has won six in a row twice this year," he said. "So we get two straight and everybody wants to know what's wrong. Arnie and Whit just had bad nights at State. Certainly they're entitled to it; they've been carrying us all year. I still think this team can bounce back, win 17, 18, 19 games and get into the tournament. Playing one of the toughest schedules in the country, we're 1-3 after bowling to Detroit (82-79 Saturday)."

Who about Miller's story? Were the boys joking about their thrashing at State? "We were in the bus after the game when it happened," said Dee. "The boys were feeling bad about it and I said 'Forget about this one. We just got beat.' So then they loosened up and started laughing about it. There's absolutely no trouble with morale, though. This is the best team I've ever had from the standpoint of unsulfiness. They have spirit and harmony.

How about the Illinois game? "We didn't play that bad," he said. "They were just super. We were terrible at the free throw line and they shot 75 per cent." The Irish rallied from a 50-42 deficit and gained a 63-58 lead. But Illinois' Dave Scholz took command at that point, ramming in eight straight points to put Notre Dame behind again.

Against Detroit, it was more of the same. The Irish led the whole game and held a 72-68 command with five minutes to play. But in the next three minutes Notre Dame went scoreless, committing three errors and missing a shot as Detroit ran off eight straight points for a 76-72 cushion. In the remaining two minutes, the Irish never got closer than two points, finally losing 82-79.

Arnzen became the second player in ND history to reach the 1,000 point mark in his junior year. Bob's 23 markers Saturday gave him 1,006 and moved him into 12th place on the alltime scoring list. Tom Hawkins, the other man to pass 1,000 in his junior season, leads the point parade with 1,920 tallies.

Coach Johnny Dee was staring intently at his desk top Thursday afternoon as he entered his office in Breen-Phillips Hall. The overall score was 15-15 as McCoy and 190-pound Dan Minnis took the mat in the day's final event. Minnis held a 3-1 edge in points in the second period, but was no match for McCoy in the last canto. Mike captured a 5-3 margin with two minutes to go, then pinned Minnis with a -45 remaining.
