Manhunt Continues In South Korea

A North Vietnamese spokesman said the U.S. delegation to the talks here had informed Hanoi diplomats Tuesday that today's scheduled high-level meeting would have to be postponed because of South Vietnam's boycott of the sessions.

"Thus the U.S. side did not implement its agreements and pledges with the representatives of the Democratic Republic of North Vietnam," the spokesman told newsmen.

In Saigon, the semi-official Vietnam press agency said President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam was preparing a "new peace proposal" to remove an impasse between Hanoi and Washington as a road to full-scale negotiations. The agency said the plan would be made public shortly.

Nguyen Thanh Le, North Vietnamese delegation spokesman, charged that since the U.S. bombing halt last week the United States had continued to "violate the sovereignty and threaten the security" of South Vietnam.

Church, Communist Defate Tone Grows

ROME (UPI) - Polish Cardinal Stefan Wyszyński arrived in Rome yesterday for a visit that may indicate a thaw in relations between the Catholic Church and East European Communists.

Wyszyński was allowed to travel to the Vatican after a three year ban imposed by Poland's regime, allegedly because the pontiff wrote a letter saying the Nazis of Hitler's Germany should be forgiven.

The Polish primiate joined leading Catholics from Czechoslovakia and Hungary in Rome in what Vatican observers said was more than coincidence.

Relations between the Church and the Communists warmed somewhat during the papacy of John XXIII after a long period of bitterness.

Pope Paul VI, who unlike his predecessor is a conservative in most church matters, has attempted to maintain the developing detente.

Agreements recently were reached between the Vatican and the Yugoslav and Hungarian leaderships.

Manhunt Continues in South Korea

SEOUl, South Korea (UPI) - South Korean troops yesterday killed three more members of a 30 man North Korean commando team that landed on the eastern coast Saturday, military authorities reported.

This brought to six the number of commandos killed in the five day manhunt. Authorities said the three killed Wednesday were part of a group of seven sighted at an undisclosed location the other four escaped.

A midnight to 4 a.m. curfew in two coastal provinces was extended three hours Wednesday to aid in the manhunt.

Fighting Increases in South Vietnam

SAIGON (UPI) - American Marines and Vietnamese Rangers supported by tanks, artillery and air strikes battled a strong Communist force near South Vietnam's northern coast early Thursday, U.S. spokesmen said.

The new battle contributed to an accelerated tempo in the war that included heavy Communist assaults near Saigon and the loss of four American helicopters in the capital war zone. In its southern bastion of the war, the battle for New South Vietnam pounded targets 100 miles east of Saigon. The north coast fighting raged 20 miles southwest of the northern city of DaNang. It started early Wednesday when Marines of the 7th Regiment ran into a fortified red unit which reacted with mortars, rocket grenade and automatic weapons fire.

American and Vietnamese rangers joined the battle, which continued into the pre-dawn hours Thursday. The allied soldiers tried to throw a cordon around the Communists, who were blasted by air strikes and artillery throughout the night.

The U.S. military command said allied casualties were light while Communist losses were unknown.

About 60 miles south of the battlefield, a U.S. Navy boat was hit by a Communist 75mm recoilless rifle round as it patrolled in the South China Sea just off the coast. The crew suffered light casualties and the craft received moderate damage, Navy spokesmen said.

A Communist rocket round into Nhu Be, a small town six miles southeast of Saigon, spokesmen said, killing one pregnant woman and wounding six Vietnamese civilians, including three children.

Nixon Elated by Win: HHh: 'Be of Good Cheer'

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) - President Johnson yesterday wired President elect Richard M. Nixon his congratulations on winning the election and promised to do everything in his power to make his burden lighter when he takes over the White House.

The President also sent a telegram to Vice President Hubert Humphrey praising him for his battle "fought well and hard" to win the Presidency and told him that he was proud of "the brave, enlightened, and vigorous campaign you have waged."

In his wire to Nixon, sent Wednesday morning immediately Humphrey had conceded the election, Johnson said: "As you well know, the responsibilities of leadership today are probably heavier than they have ever been before. They are certainly too heavy to be encumbered by narrow partisanship."

"I hope our people will now turn from the divisive contentions of the political campaign to a united search for peace and justice."

You can be certain that I shall do everything in my power to make your burdens lighter on the day when you assume the responsibilities of the President."

The Rev. James Riehle, Dean of Students, is expected to come out with a directive today, regarding cars on campus.

Also in the Nixon party was David Eisenhower, grandson of the general and fiancee of Julie. Nixon, in his first speech since winning Tuesday's election, told about 500 supporters and newswomen in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York that his administration would be an open one.

"Open to new ideas, open to men and women of both parties, open to the critics as well as those who support us," the 55 year old president elect said.

"We want to bridge the generation gap. We want to bridge the gap between races."

"We want to bring America together and I am confident that this task is one that we can undertake and one in which we will be successful," Nixon said.

Later, Nixon flew to Washington with his family to visit former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, at Walter Reed Army Medical Center.

A crowd of about 300 persons waited more than 90 minutes to greet Nixon as he arrived at the hospital with his wife, Pat, and their two daughters, Tricia and Julie.

From Minneapolis he telephoned his congratulations to Nixon in New York and promised the Republican his total support.

"I have done my best," Humphrey told his supporters. The Vice President made the statement in the "Hall of States" in the Leamington Hotel in downtown Minneapolis, where not many hours before he had still expressed optimism that he could defeat Nixon and become the 31st President of the United States.

Despite his obviously great disappointment betrayed by his choked up voice, Humphrey asked the many campaign workers who had gathered there with him for the election results, "to be of good cheer." Humphrey, his voice wavering but a smile on his lips, told a few hundred of his staff workers that he did not want anybody to feel sorry for him. "I'd like to have you feel a little happy," he said. Humphrey said he started behind but "never had any doubt it would be a close fight."

"I've done my best," he said. "Now let's get on with the urgent task of unifying our country."

Hesburgh Hints at Coed Notre Dame Soon

Last night the Faculty Senate met and was addressed by university president Father Hesburgh, before they began discussion on various proposals. In his address, Hesburgh pointed out that there was a possibility of having women here on the Notre Dame campus very soon. Because of the complications Barat College is having in selling its Lake Forest property, Hesburgh said that he had discussed with the Mother Superior of Barat the idea of having an experimental women's college on the periphery of the Notre Dame campus very soon. This college would be under the control of the Madamies of the Sacred Heart and would house the girls in some outer dorms, such as Carroll of Holy Cross Halls (which could be made available because of the new high-rise dorms), with the girls attending the normal N.D. classes.

Dear Mr. Doan:

Business has cast itself in the role of the resting parent, scratching its corporate head and asking: Where have I gone wrong? We on the other side of the apolitely named generation gap can readily answer your question. The question we can’t answer—and the one you must answer—is more difficult: What does, and what will, business do right?

The image that the corporate world has creating in the academic world is a highly negative one. Business, which has sold us everything from living space to living bras, has been unable to sell itself. Hopefully, our dialogue will help dispel the “business myth” although all myths are based on varying degrees of truth.

And what exactly is this image? It’s the one that can be created by social power which is exceeded only by its inadequate social commitment. This is not to deny that many major corporations are involved in health research, agricultural improvement, etc. But what we question is whether business is really carrying plans to carry—its share of the social burden.

A psychologist’s association test, for instance, would yield such verbal gems as “business” and “air pollution,” “business” and “war profiteering,” “business” and “planned obsolescence.” You yourself know only too well the two-syllable associative response generated by “Dow Chemical.” It is hard for us to applaud a new measles vaccine juxtaposed with such immorality.

Thus, many of the qualities we associate with business are contrary to our will and way of life. We have awakened from the more than questionable war in a more than questionable war, business apparently closes its eyes and fills its wallets. This is what troubles us. As corny as it sounds, we do hope to change the world. Business, meanwhile, is trying to change its image. But in so doing, it is merely creating a battle of antithetical stereotypes.

Thus unless it decides to give itself—and not merely its image—a major overhaul, business can continue to write off a growing segment of college youth. Perhaps our dialogue will help give the corporate world the rest kick it so desperately needs.

Sincerely,

Stan Chess

Journalism, Cornell

Dear Mr. Chess:

I agree with you that business has done a wretched job of selling itself. We tend to feel that our role in developing the highest living standards in the world is self-explanatory, and doesn’t need much selling; and we are so busy, and engrossed, in what we’re doing that we don’t really have time to “sell” what we do.

Simple explanations of why a company is producing a product in the national interest don’t provide the answer to “selling” business, as we at Dow are all too well aware. The fact that in the judgment of our military leaders the tactical use of napalm is effectively saving lives of our troops, and serves an indispensible need in accelerating the end of a dirty and unpopular war, is not the simple truth to reports of massive casualties among Vietnamese women and children resulting from napalm — the fact that hundreds of American doctors who have volunteered their services in Vietnamese hospitals report not having a single civilian napalm burn case, all are documented facts blandly ignored by those not responsive to reason. But I have yet to hear discussion of napalm from any returning combat veteran.

Doesn’t this really mean that judgments should be made on the basis of objective inquiry and not unfounded opinion? Honest differences will always arise. But a better understanding of viewpoints and motives will follow from objective discussions. Business must sell itself, not an image of itself.

It is from this perspective that I think we should examine your central question of “whether business is really carrying plans to carry—its share of the social burden.”

You are of course aware of the business’ direct involvement in contemporary community affairs through social programs as those dealing with hard-core unemployment, blight-area housing, civil rights, traffic congestion, and pollution problems. To me these programs are evidence that business today is assuming a much more active social role. But this does not answer two questions fundamental to your inquiry: to what extent should business—an economic vehicle whose primary commitment to the community lies in its economic functions—assume social burdens; and how can these social responsibilities be discharged most effectively?

Obviously all of society’s institutions must assume some share of the burden; there can be no sole responsibility. Can you visualize a solution in which a single segment of society provides equal opportunity for Negroes?

I believe maximum long-term profit growth is consistent with, and in fact cannot be achieved without, maximum service to society. Maximum service to society can be achieved only through maximum development of, and release of, the ability of individuals. And maximum release of individual abilities brings about maximum profit-growth.

Further, in my view, service cannot be delivered best by deliberately trying to be of service. Service can more often be achieved by indirectness than by any direct attempt to be of service.

Business does so many things right that I don’t really see this as an issue. We have developed a system that the rest of the world is frantically trying to copy. It is the worst system going except for all the other systems. Business can’t do everything for everyone, of course: it wasn’t designed for that. Like all of us, it should be doing what it does best. As an economic instrument, it can best fulfill its social commitment by excelling in that respect.

Our nation is going through a period of transition to new policies and new philosophies. Your generation on the campus is doing us a real service by questioning our assumptions, and by making us aware of hypocrisies and outmoded parts of our systems and institutions. You want to do away with outmoded ideologies, and so do I. As new values are accepted which emphasize the role of the individual in society today, new relationships develop between the public and private sector of society, then more realistic answers will be found as to how business, in harness with government and education, can share the social burden by providing real—rather than illusory—service.

Cordially,

H. D. Doan, President,
The Dow Chemical Company

IS ANYBODY LISTENING TO CAMPUS VIEWS?

BUSINESSMEN ARE.

Three chief executive officers—The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company’s Chairman, Russell DeYoung, The Dow Chemical Company’s President H. D. Doan and Motorola’s Chairman, Robert W. Galvin—are responding to serious questions and viewpoints posed by students about business and its role in our changing society. And from their perspective as heads of major corporations are exchanging views through means of a campus (corporate) dialogue program on specific issues raised by leading student spokesmen.

Here, Stan Chess, a Journalism senior at Cornell, is exploring issues with Mr. Doan.

In the course of the entire Dialogue Program, David M. Butler, in Electrical Engineering Program at Michigan State, also will exchange viewpoints with Mr. Doan, as will Mark Beekman, a chemistry major at Ohio State, and David G. Clark, Political Science MA candidate at Stanford, with Mr. DeYoung; and similarly for Mr. Galvin, for Mr. Kliebenst, for Liberal Arts at Yale, and Arnold Shelby, Latin American Studies at Tulane, with Mr. Galvin.

These Dialogues will appear in this publication, and other campus newspapers across the country, throughout this academic year. On campus comments are invited, and you are invited to forward them to Mr. DeYoung, Goodyear, Akron, Ohio, Mr. Doan, Dow Chemical, Midland, Mich., Mr. Galvin, Motorola, Franklin Park, Ill., as appropriate.
Aftermath

And so Election '68 is over. It died reluctantly sometime in the small hours of yesterday morning after one of the longest and most frustrating nights in American political history. Richard Nixon won by a popular vote margin of less than 400,000. But he won. And barring another assassin's bullet, we can hope that Spiro Agnew will remain a heartbeat away from the Presidency for the next four years.

If ever the need was felt for initiative and decisiveness in our nation it is now. We are a divided people, and there are many among us who are alienated by the very governmental processes of this country. Millions of Americans are denied basic human rights and live in a state of deprivation, seeing little hope for relief of their plight. Not since 1912 have we had a President with a lower percentage of the vote. Rarely have we had a mandate so tenuous as that of Mr. Nixon. In addition to this, both Houses of Congress remain overwhelmingly Democratic, and can be expected to stand often in opposition to the programs of the new President.

Indeed, Nixon's tasks are formidable. We are not at all that sure the new President can unite and lead us. His bland statements and refusal to take stands make us apprehensive that Nixon can inspire the needed sense of purpose. Nixon's obvious appeal to the middle class and his appeasement of the South through the selection of Agnew as running mate are certainly not indicative of a desire to relieve the plight of the ghetto dweller or make government responsive to the problems and needs of our minorities.

Clearly a change in direction from the campaign is a must if Nixon is to govern effectively and squarely face the challenge of leadership. Richard Nixon is no longer going to be forging an electoral majority. He is President of all the people. We would hope that the man's experience and judgement will dictate a responsiveness to those who are alienated or deprived of the blessings which supposedly flow from the Great Society. Richard Nixon's vital task then is to appeal to those who have thus far rejected him.

Too Close

Even as we are somewhat apprehensive towards Nixon, we cannot forget another source of concern which manifested itself early yesterday morning. For a few hours it appeared that the Electoral College system might not produce a majority, thus leaving the Presidential election deadlocked. In such a circumstance, the next President of the United States could have been chosen by the man holding the balance of power in the Electoral College, George C. Wallace. By a deal with one of the two leading contenders, Wallace could have had a considerable influence on how this nation would be ruled. We find even the thought of such circumstances terrifying. We are repelled by the idea of the Presidency of our country being thrown into those "smoke filled back rooms."

Even if there has been no deal and hence no majority in electoral votes the Presidential selection would have been made in a manner which is plainly absurd. The House of Representatives would have voted by delegations on the Presidency, with each state being allotted one vote. This system equates New York and California, each with a population of more than fifteen million, with sparsely populated states such as Wyoming and Nevada. A coalition of small states with less than 25% of America's population could with this system elect the President. In another twist, it is fully possible for a man carrying a minority of the popular and even electoral vote could well be chosen if his party controls the majority of state delegations. Clearly, then, as with the Electoral College, selection by the House of Representatives is a dangerous business which nearly manifested itself in this tight election.

In Monday's Observer we called for reform of political parties and candidate selection procedures in this nation. We pointed to the unrepresentative party conventions of Miami and Chicago to support our positions. Now, with selection of the President of the United States having been nearly placed under the control of George Wallace or J. William Fulbright, we see the need for reform in the whole national electoral system. We must truly let the people decide, and thus the President of the United States should be elected by direct popular vote.

Polli Bowl

Election day proceedings are curiously reminiscent of the familiar old Saturday afternoon football scoreboard show. In fact the whole campaign is like a football season.

Even more ironic is the reporting of the elections and their returns. Let's listen in as one network reports the results.

"This is Chet Huntley with my sidekick David Brinkley bringing you the 45th renewal of the national championship wherein the best politician in the country is selected. A record number of people are here at the polls today, casting their votes for their favorite politicians, with millions more glued to their TV sets around the nation.

Of course despite the outcome of today, election the real president will be decided until the final poll, the electoral college poll, comes out this Tuesday. So no matter what the candidates do on the field, the real champion will be decided by the experts."

"Right you are Chet, and now we'll try to give the fans a look at what kind of campaign the candidates ran this fall. Nixon, as always, kept his defense under wraps and relied mainly on his ground game building up an early lead. Humphrey, seeing that he trailed, opened up with a spectacular aerial attack while tightening his defense and throwing Nixon's quarterback, Agnew, for several big losses. And now here is Sander Vanocur with some scores across the country."

Vanocur, outly-headed child of sweetness and light, reviewed most of the eastern returns and gave at least first half results on most of the midwestern contests. None of the west coast scores has yet appeared on the board.

"This is Chet Huntley back in the booth again, marvelling at the spectacular comeback staged by Humphrey, who was a three touchdown underdog a week ago. The odds were a little closer yesterday, but now I see that John Chancellor has Spiro Agnew ready for an interview down on the field."

"Well, Spiro, your number one running back is coming under some unexpected fire today. Humphrey wasn't supposed to show much offense. What happened?"

"As John, as often happens on any election day, all the records go out the window, and no one is able to predict winners in such a fierce rivalry as this."

"We didn't take Humphrey lightly, he always puts up a strong fight and we didn't expect an easy win. We've still got a slight lead, and you must remember, John, that we're a fourth quarter team and that the issue won't be decided until the final vote is counted, er, uh, announced. After all, we're really out for this one."

"And now back up to the booth and Chet Huntley."

"Remember fans, no matter how late this election goes tonight or tomorrow morning, we'll stay right here and bring you the final scoring."

"That's right David, and now we'll take a time out and go to the scoreboard for more scores around the country with Sander Vanocur."

"Sander Vanocur here, and we have some big scores from the west coast. Nixon has an early first quarter lead in California and also leads in the second half in Oregon and Washington. We have no score as yet from Hawaii but the scoreboard has projected a Humphrey victory in that island state. We hope to have an early score a little later in the evening in that contest.

"Later in the morning, as the contest dragged on, with Nixon beginning to halt the Humphrey offensive with his traditional last minute scoring."

"This is David Brinkley here again folks, and it looks as if Nixon has the victory in his column now. With just a few votes still out, it looks as if Nixon has the game in the bag. For you betting people Nixon paid 26 cents to win, Humphrey paid 25 to show and Wallace 1 to show."

Reflections Of A Security Officer

By Tom Ehrbar

"Officer Ponty Rade, for your 31 years of dedicated service to the SMC security force (or force), we hereby extend to you, as a token of our appreciation, this silver bullet. (You always were a bone range on the squad.)"

This scene occurred in Louie's notorious basement, kicking off a retirement ceremony for one of the most distinguished guards, and probably St. Mary's finest, Officer Rade. The whole affair was about retirement. The basement group sang tunes such as "That Old Chain Gang of Mine," and chuckled over the past days and the present day the demonstrators at the Democratic Convention in Chicago.

Officer Rade, with tears glinting in his eyes, and beer dripping down his chin, recounted some of the more memorable moments of his career. He stood as strong and as straight as the SMC water tower; his courage was as deep as the steam tunnels (and as full of hot air) - this was truly the Man of Louie's. And, in fact, his whole life's existential meaning, as well as its aim, of protecting the women of St. Mary's had proven "the impossible dream." He had pursued his idealistic crusade, figuratively waving a Holy Cross. In a fit of pride, Rade ventured into the past.

"There was the great 'read scare' of '57" he said "when a rumor leaked out that literacy tests would be required for all security personnel. This would have strongly cramped our style. Then there was 1958, when we were presented with our first guns - and later, when we got our own fleet of bullet vehicles.

A large paper banner, appropriate to the occasion, was draped across the room rading "Old security guards never die, they just shoot away." The conversation quickly moved to politics as Spring Agnew, a patron saint of the boys, and also US Vice-President, was vigorously quoted "If you've seen one, you've seen them all." Another voice offered in rebuttal Hubert Humphrey's (who was US Vice-President) comment "If you've seen one St. Mary's girl, then you've seen one too many." After a few drinks, however, the quality of the conversation deteriorated.

The whole evening was fraught with emotion. In 1963 I finished second in the marksmanship ratings. A student at St. Mary's who didn't even own a gun, Miss Cindy Slithers, was the winner. She shot down far more ND students, not to mention a few of the guards themselves. She wasn't my type, though. "Finally, and I say this sadly, there was the crackdown of 1968, when the security of Notre Dame came peering across the road. There were some changes made, and a few of the boys went a little gun ho about the whole thing. There were ridiculous slogans like 'Stop or I'll shoot' or 'If we catch you over here again it curtains' or "Let's break it up there on the couch, huh?' or 'St. Mary's is a top Midwestern school for women."

At this point Master of Ceremonies Indiana State Trooper John Law interrupted the conversation with his dry but sparkling wit and reminded those present, "When driving around SMC make sure your tire is the only thing that's flat!" A huge roar of guffaws followed the joke, instead at their security chief who had just arrived.

Officer Rade then continued. "A few years back, we began experimenting with police dogs, and although they were rather adept at picking up leads, they usually ended by backing up the wrong tree." By this time, however, Rade could hardly stand-squat alone to speak. Everyone else was completely out of it and were on duty in a couple hours. When Louie questioned Rade on his procedures for the handling and interrogation of students caught within the tight SMC security web, the old cop dead-panned, "I don't really know. I was never around when anyone was caught."
Democrats Easily Control Senate And House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Democrats yesterday claimed comfortable control of the 91st Congress.

Voters who had some difficulty Tuesday in electing a president had no trouble at all in returning Democrats to management of the House and Senate.

Republicans had been firmly rebuffed in their bid to take over the House and the gains they rolled up in the Senate were considerably less than they had hoped for.

Indicated makeup of the House in the new Congress was 244 Democrats and 191 Republicans. With some seats swapping in both directions, the net gain for the GOP was an ineffective three seats.

In the Senate, with 34 of the 100 seats at stake, Republicans scored gains in Florida, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma, Maryland, Arizona and Ohio. These Republican winners included former Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, the 1964 GOP presidential candidate; GOP leader Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois; and Charles Mathias of Maryland, who leaves a seat in the House.

Democratic senatorial winners included Sens. J.W. Fulbright of Arkansas, the doyen chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee; Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut, who had harsh words for Chicago Mayor Richard Daley at the Democratic Convention; and Birch Bayh of Indiana.

The Democrats took over previously Republican Senate seats in California, where former state controller Max Reichert, and Iowa, where retiring Gov. Harold E. Hughes defeated state Sen. David M. Stanley.

The indicated makeup of the Senate thus was 58 Democrats to 42 Republicans, compared to 63 Democrats and 37 Republicans in the 90th Congress.

In an election billed in advance as geared to demands for a change, few incumbents lost their seats in either House or Senate.

Democratic Senators Joseph Clark of Pennsylvania, A.S. Mike Monroney of Oklahoma, and Daniel Brewster of Maryland lost to Republican challengers.

House losses, totaling only a handful, included both New Mexico members, Democrats Thomas G. Morris and E.S. Johnny Walker. The latter lost to Republican former Rep. Ed Foreman, who previously represented a Texas district.

Br. Darst Speaks Out On Civil Disobedience

Approximately 300 people listened to Brother David Darst last night explain the reasons behind the actions of the Catonsville Nine and exposed the theories of the civil disobedience. Brother Darst, a member of the Christian Brothers Community, along with the other eight members, will return to Baltimore Friday for sentencing.

He said that civil disobedience entailed one's punishment, and that the action of the Catonsville Nine was intended not as an act of revolution, but as a way of speaking out against unjust practices. Buring of the draft files was justified by Brother Darst's theory that civil disobedience could use the material goods of mankind as a form of protest, but that all protest should stop short of blood-letting.

During the question and answer period, a man identifying himself as being from Poland, asked Brother Darst why his group was aiding those (the communists) who persecuted the Church in western Europe as well as in Vietnam, and brought forward a clipping to substantiate his charge. Questioning was mostly in disagreement with some of the brother's tenets, but he received a standing ovation from a significant portion of the audience both prior to, and following, his lecture.

Professionalism at Grumman...is personal development programs

As a graduating engineer, how can you position yourself so that your career chances are constantly optimized? Answer—get with an aerospace company where the optimum conditions are... Grumman. Here we take a keen interest in seeing that our engineers and scientists develop personally. We are sincerely interested in their personal progress within the company...that they keep abreast of the sweeping advances in technology, not because they can contribute more (although this is true), but more because it makes for greater individual progress and well-being.

Job satisfaction, if you will. Let's look at these personal development programs.

Tuition Reimbursement Program

Directly applicable to their work, these programs offer engineers and scientists financial assistance for graduate studies at the many institutions in the Long Island-New York area.

In-Plant Courses

Economic courses, particularly those not available at neighboring institutions, to deepen technical knowledge to the specific needs of the engineering sections.

College-Industry Courses

Selective attendance for rapid technical updating on fundamental theoretical methods and design information. (One to two weeks' duration.)

Engineering Masters Fellowship Program

To enhance creative design capability, one-year fellowships, graduate school study with three days of in-plant engineering rates for the hours worked.

Senior Management Development Program

Lasting for 2 years, participants are given, in 4 six-months' periods, professional development, to meet the specific needs of the engineering sections.

Hart Hopes For High Panther Spirits

Pitt coach Dave Hart hopes the attitude of his Panthers won’t be as poor as their record when they invade Notre Dame Stadium for a 1:30 p.m. battle Saturday.

"I just hope our young men have enough pride to get themselves ready to play one of the best games of their lives," Hart commented earlier this week. "We’ve had an awful lot of adversity this season, but our boys haven’t quit, and I think they deserve a lot of credit for this."

Pitt freshman coach John Roseberg has been scouting the Irish. He gave this report to Hart:

"I suppose you could start out saying they’ll pose a few problems for us. The best way I can describe Notre Dame’s offense is to say it is simply awesome. Their offensive line has to be one of the best in the country. They move the ball at will.

"They subscribe to Woody Hayes’ four yards and a cloud of dust theory, but with them it’s eight yards and a cloud of dust. Terry Hanratty and Jim Seymour speak for themselves. George Kunz is the best offensive tackle in the country. They move the ball against Miami last week, he still ranks among the nation’s leading passers with 100 completions out of 199 attempts for 1,391 yards and six touchdowns. Haven’t’s receivers are more than adequate. Harry “Skip” Orzukal has hauled 31 aerials for 530 yards and four TDs. He needs only 15 more receptions to tie the school records of 46 set by Bob Longo in 1966. Orzukal, incidentally, was the star of a high school team which defeated Hanratty and his teammates for the schoolboy title in 1963.

"Other top pass catchers for the Panthers are wingback Joe McCain (20 grabs for 278 yards) and tight end George Medich (28 catches for 314 yards).

"Pitt’s physical shape is not the best. Hart’s charges lost their top defensive tackle, John Stevens, against Miami. He is definitely out, along with outstanding sophomore linebacker Lloyd Weston, defensive halfback Jeff Barr and defensive end Jack Wley. Starters Dave Dibbley, George Pribish and Bruce Harkiewicz are all doubtful.

"Pitt’s fears of the Irish are reflected in the latest NCAA football statistics. Quarterback Terry Hanratty is third in total offense and sixth in passing. The Gobbler has connected on 116 of 197 flings this season for .589. In 253 offensive plays, Terry has gained 1,466 yards and 281 yards rushing for a total of 1,745.

"Hanratty is easily the nation’s leader in yards gained per offensive play. He has netted slightly less than seven yards per attempt this season.

"Meanwhile, Notre Dame’s Jim Seymour is 10th in passing with 43 catches for 552 yards. Bob Gladeaux is 10th in scoring with 10 touchdowns for 60 markers."

It’s Fine with Motta

CHICAGO (UPI) – Rookie Coach Dick Motta has a $25 minimum understanding going with National Basketball Association officials, and he hopes the money he’s spending will help turn his Chicago Bulls into a winner.

Motta, who quit his college coaching job at Weber State in Utah to take over the Bulls, incurred seven technical fouls, at $25 each, in the first six games this season, and while he conceded “a couple” of them were deserved, the others stemmed from misunderstandings.

“I yell at my kids a lot,” Motta said, “and the officials mistake my yelling and think I’m giving them hell. Oh, sure, a couple of times I was, but most of the time I’m trying to encourage my players.”

Motta’s enthusiasm stems partly from his effort of the Bulls. “Remember, these players lost 53 games last season,” he said, “and they were starting to doubt their own ability.

“I’m trying to get them to believe in themselves and when they get their confidence and spirit and belief in themselves, I won’t get as many technicals on me.” It’s too expensive, and I’ve got to find out if the owner will pay them.”

Motta began his campaign to instill spirit in the Bulls when training camp opened, when he installed a program of hard work and workouts for rookies and veterans alike. Some of the rookies simply walked out of camp.

“I expected it,” Motta said. “But I felt that nobody was going to win games from us because they were in better condition. I think in the early season, it’s helped us.”

“We’re still not as good as we’re going to be. I can see us improve with every game. We’re improving in execution of the offensive system I’ve installed, and we’re improving in the players’ reaction to me.”

Motta said he misses the college atmosphere, the students, the recruiting of players, and the empathy with his college team. But he said, “I enjoy the pro game so far.”

“It’s a challenge too,” he added. “In college success is determined by your recruiting, and in the pro’s the challenge is to work with what the management gives you.

A Guy Named Rod

They tell plenty of choice stories about Pitt football. Like in 1966. The Panthers held Notre Dame’s National Champions to a scoreless halftime deadlock on a snowy, November day in ND Stadium.

At this point, you would expect Pitt to be enthused about the prospect of scoring the season’s biggest upset. (ND was 7-0 entering that game, Pitt 1-4-1.) But just before they went back onto the field, one Panther said to another, “We’d better be careful now. We got ’em mad.”

Footnote: Nick Eddy picked the second half kickoff out of the snowflakes at his 15 yardline, broke one tackle at the 40 and continued down the sideline for an 85-yard romp. Notre Dame won 40-0.

This year, a fellow named Rod Fedorchak has come up with another of those rare moves which rank in the mythical Pitt Hall of Fame.

Fedorchak is 6-7, 238 pounds, biggest man on the squad. Second team right end. Caught six passes for 85 yards in 1967. Caught nothing this year. Lives in the Pittsburgh suburb of Moonongahela where his father is an Episcopal priest.

Rod Fedorchak

Last Thursday night, Rod Fedorchak was out late, real late. He had a few night spots in the Oakland section of Pittsburgh where the Pitt campus is located. Not really a bad idea Rod had. He was flying to Miami the next morning for a game with the Hurricanes. Pitt was sure to get waxed anyhow, so why no imbibe a little?

But, alas, Rod’s plan was disrupted. By coincidence, one of Pitt’s assistant coaches (probably Tom “Red” Garvey) was returning from Oakland, on his way home, when he was Rod. It is almost certain that Rod did not see him.

Everyone arrived happily in Miami and enjoyed a nice, sunny weekend. Pitt got bombed 48-0. No big thing.

But now Rod starts to use the old thinker. Why not turn yourself into a different Rod? He hit a few night spots in the Oakland section of Pittsburgh before a crowd of 400.

“Hey Dave. You’ll never guess what I saw last Thursday night.”

“Uh, Rod Fedorchak out past curfew on Fifth Avenue in Oakland?”

“Yeah. How’d ya guess?”

“Oh, I dunno. Just a hunch.”

Monday afternoon, Hart announced, “Rod Fedorchak broke curfew last Thursday night. We must maintain discipline on this team. Therefore, he is suspended from the squad indefinitely. He will be re-instated before the end of the season.”

The vital question is: Will Rod Fedorchak WANT to be re-instated before the end of the season?

Blues Win

The Blues (first team) whipped the Whites (second unit) 133-100 last night in Elston High Gym, Michigan City, before a crowd of 400.

High scorer for the victory was Austin Carr with 46 points. He canned 21 of 27 field goal attempts and added four free throws. Next in line was senior center Bob Whitemore with 34. Senior captain Bob Arzen followed with 14 markers.

The Whites jumped out to a 30 lead on Hinga’s tip in over Whitemore and a free throw by Meehan. Then Carr and company bolted to 19 straight points. The Whites reduced their deficit to 10 points five minutes before halftime.

But the Blue fast break took command again, making the count 60-41 at the half.
