Good Bet For Secretary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — William P. Rogers, attorney general during the Eisenhower administration, is a "good bet" to become President elect Richard M. Nixon's secretary of state, a source close to Nixon said Tuesday.

Although the source for the Rogers' report declined to be identified, Rep. Ross Adair of Indiana, ranking Republican on the House foreign affairs committee, said he had heard Rogers name mentioned as a possible secretary of state. But he said he could not confirm this.

Another Republican congressman, who asked not to be quoted, said he had learned Gov. Walker Hunt of Texas would be named secretary of interior in the Nixon administration.

Rogers, 56, served as attorney general in President Dwight D. Eisenhower's administration.

SAFAGN (UPI) - The FBI Tuesday joined the hunt for Panther Cleaver, 33, is believed to have earned substantial sums of money from sale of his book, "Soul on Ice," which recounted his life in the Black Panthers.

Cleaver, who has crossed state or national borders, made a federal case by the filing of a complaint charging the Negro with unlawful flight to escape prosecution.

U.S. army, pojo, also a Negro, said new evidence developed indicating that Cleaver, the Peace and Freedom Party's 1968 presidential candidate, had crossed state or national borders.

The FBI presented an affidavit saying Cleaver's wife, Kathleen, and Robert Cann, Dave Krashna, and Martin Evans, white students on the university's campus, were "a practical problem in落实ing to implement the report emphasizes that a quota system is not asked, but only "a conscious approach to the problems which they are charged consistent, interested, and competitive of the Senate."

"We believe that it is the easy way out to criticize. Constructive suggestions are not frequently given in lists of student gripes, but we feel that the real 'heart' of our report is the list of recommendations for improvement," the student newspaper said.

The third point asks for immediate appointment of a competent, interested, and trained full-time adviser for international students.

The report goes on to ask for an investigation into the programs of housing for international graduate students.

In an appendix, the report notes that a representative of the admissions process of the university should cut spending on sub-standard housing, poorly located and badly furnished.

"We expect to see such action in the very near future," the newspaper said.

"We believe that it is the easy way out to criticize. Constructive suggestions are not frequently given in lists of student gripes, but we feel that the real 'heart' of our report is the list of recommendations for improvement."
Cuban Revolution Discussed

In a talk "Revolution in Cuba—Ten Years After," Dr. Samuel Shapiro informed a small audience in the library auditorium last night of the present social and political situation of that nation.

Initially, he gave general results of the revolution of 1959, noting that a new generation has developed completely under Castro influence; that Cuba has become a totally socialist state, and most importantly, that there is a need in Cuba for Russian assistance.

"Without Soviet backing, Cuba would not last two weeks.... It costs Russia one hundred million dollars a day to keep the revolution going," he added, "The Russians are spending a lot of money and not getting a lot in return."

The body of his address included a discussion of the successes and failures of the revolution. He said, "I think perhaps the most striking of failures is the number of people fleeing the country. I don't think I have ever seen as many refugees as a result of a revolution. There are 500,000 Cubans that have left the island since 1959.... The only thing I can say in defense of Castro is that he has let these people out." Shapiro had more to say of the successes of the Castro regime. "In 1958, prior to the revolution, you had a great deal of inequality in the Cuban society. People at the bottom of the social scale profited from the revolution. There has been a great increase in the standard of living for hundreds of thousands of people."

A bomb threat call to the Notre Dame Security Office triggered a search of the Administration Building yesterday morning.

The caller, who refused to identify himself, said that a bomb had been placed in the building, and then hung up, according to Richard Conklin of the Public Information Office. Security Director Arthur Pear and several officers made a tour of the building, asking department heads and professors to make a thorough search of their offices and rooms.

Conklin said that no strange objects were found. It is assumed, he added, that "this was just some kooky calling."

One Day

...twenty-four hour cease fire on Christmas Day. Arbitrary peace on earth. One day when a mother and child are safe almost anywhere. A bombing halt.

Peace all over the world. Peace at home. My mother isn't calling me a radical or a communist. She doesn't warn me about damaging the family name. I don't feel guilty or angry about being a dependent. Being at home isn't so bad.

Seniors don't worry about graduating on time or flunking a course. Semester exams don't exist and papers aren't due after Christmas. Seniors don't think about where they are going or what they'll be doing after June. Nobody tells them they can't do anything.

Students aren't paranoid or alienated or even screwed up. The Administration isn't entirely stupid and teachers aren't necessarily sadistic. Young people can call each other straight or weird or sick. Journalists don't describe people under twenty-five as protesters or hippies or some kind of generation. Young people don't describe people over twenty-five as fascist pigs or bourgeois. There is no rationale for the existence of the "Up With People" movement.

The OBSERVER is actually glad that nothing is happening. The night editor isn't worried about copy. Bill Luking isn't worried at all.

Nobody is telling the columnists that they can't write or the editor that the news is slanted. People at Notre Dame who read my column aren't saying that I'm messed up, a hunch, meaningless, or that I can't write. The ruggers aren't calling me Sweaty Betty. It's not necessary to explain that I don't hate ruggers, the new left, the far right, freshmen, seniors, Saint Mary's girls, Notre Dame boys.

I don't have to worry about my friends in the army, our boys in Vietnam, our country. A twenty-four hour cease fire, Arbitrary, but nonetheless real. For one day anyway. Perhaps for five minutes. Maybe not at all. But the wish is there.

Merry Christmas to A Permanent MYTH

The problem of the black student on the Notre Dame campus seems, at long last, to be coming to the surface. It is unfortunate, however, that Chris Wolfe failed to realize the depth of this problem and dismissed the real issue at hand — i.e., Notre Dame is by no means attempting to solve the racist problem that exists both on this campus and in society as a whole. How does Notre Dame fail to solve this problem, and in fact, accelerate it? The real answer to this lies in this University’s insistence (conscious or unconscious) perpetuating the status quo of society (i.e., the white middle-class value system).

Mr. Wolfe seems to envision ND as the proverbial “great white father,” enrolling more Blacks as an act of charity. This has been the most basic fallacy in this University’s attitude toward Blacks. They are enrolled here (as an “act of charity”), given an education (i.e., indoctrination into the white middle-class value system), and pushed back into society to practice these values (even though it was, and is, this same value system that keeps Blacks in poverty). It is because of this attempt on the part of ND (again, whether conscious or unconscious) to completely assimilate the Black into the White value system that the Blacks at ND have wanted to fight.

The Blacks know that merely increasing the enrollment will not change the predominate attitude on this campus. The Blacks know they must change both the enrollment proportion and the atmosphere if ND is to shed its attitude. And the Blacks know that Mr. Wolfe appears to be too naive to realize, that pressure is the only way to bring about change at ND.

This university prides itself in producing “leaders,” but did we ever consider what kind of “leaders” we are producing? With few exceptions, these “leaders” are one-dimensional — they are the ones that are acquiescing to society’s demands, and perpetuating the status quo that not only permits, but indeed encourages, racism. There is a need for a diversity of leaders at ND.

Mr. Wolfe has expressed fear that more Blacks at ND might cause this to become “...a base for protest conditions throughout our society.” I’d like to reiterate that statement — only in terms of a hope and not a fear. If this is to be a university — center of Christ-like actions, then we damn well ought to protest the amazingly inequitable conditions and blatant racism of our society.

Two reasons for joining Du Pont, and three for quitting.

1. Du Pont offers open-end opportunity. You don’t go into a training program. You go to work — in a series of growth jobs that broaden your base for professional progress and help you find the specific field you want to grow in. We call it “planned mobility.”

2. Du Pont works at the outer limits. Sure, everybody claims they do the far-out research. But they need a world-class partnership with the money and the engineering capability to translate ideas into commercial products. If you have a profitable idea, they want to make it work, and we have a special bonus plan to reward you for it. So Du Pont people grow, personally and professionally. Even men who leave Du Pont think of it as because of the professional growth they experienced at Du Pont.

Ara in Washington? Never

I hadn't seen Ara Parseghian so irritated since Oct. 14, 1967. That's the day Southern Cal topped the Irish, though.

He demanded, "I came here in '64 on a five-year contract, and, in a Saturday Evening Post article about Sonny Jurgensen, it was said there were very strong rumors coming out of Washington.

I'm not too sure.

As Coach Johnny Dee has asserted that several Redskins were unhappy at paying off Graham's contract, and, in a Saturday Evening Post article about Sonny Jurgensen, it was said there were very strong rumors coming out of Washington.

Sure, Ara Be happy to.

The biggest adjustment for the players will be the absence of guards Ted Voigt, 6ft. 1in. sophomore, or Chuck Nagle, 6ft. Sin. senior, or the services of guards Ted Voigt, 6ft. 1in. sophomore, or Chuck Nagle, 6ft. Sin. senior.
