Senior Class Selects Sen. McCarthy

Chuck Sheedy, Chairman of the Senior Class Fellow Committee, announced yesterday that Senator Eugene J. McCarthy (D., Minnesota) has been selected as the 1969 Senior Class Fellow. Sheedy said that McCarthy has accepted the Committee's invitation to spend two days on campus lecturing, teaching courses and meeting informally with students.

In a telegram received yesterday, McCarthy said: "I am pleased to accept your invitation for the Senior Class Fellow award at Notre Dame on March 5 and 6." He outlined the proposed agenda of the Senator's visit saying: "During one full day of his stay we would hope the Senator lead two informal morning discussions of approximately fifty minutes each in a government or political science class. Then, after having lunch with a group of seniors, he would speak one afternoon in connection with a Theology of Marriage class and one auditorium lecture to approximately 250 seniors. The opportunity to meet informally with seniors and to savor the real atmosphere of University and the Senior Class is looking for gifts to endow the project on a permanent basis.

A leading critic of the Vietnam war, McCarthy took the issue to the nation's voters in the 1968 primaries but failed to get the party's nomination for President. He has said he will not "run as a Democrat" when his term expires in 1970, but has not entirely excluded the possibility of seeking re-election. Sen. McCarthy's most recent actions have brought some criticism from his followers. He voted against Edward M. Kennedy's successful bid for the post of Senate "whip" and surprised his constituents by announcing he will run in the election next year as an independent candidate for Senate. McCarthy has, however, decided to crack the books. We will cease publication until Wed. Feb. 5. Happy finals.

ATTENTION SOPHS-

If you will complete your first two years of college this spring and have not had ROTC training, you now have a special opportunity to earn an Army officer’s commission in the next two years. You may qualify to fulfill your military obligation as an officer while you study for a college degree in the field of your choice.

You will receive an allowance of $50 each month during your junior and senior years. If you desire, you may request postponement of your military service while you complete your studies for a graduate degree.

Graduate students with two years of academic work remaining, may also apply for a commission under the two year program.

Four Seek SUP

Applications have been re­ceived from four juniors for the 1969-70 Student Union Pres­idency. They are Jim Brogan, who recently resigned from the Student Union and now heads various committees; Dennis Clark, Student Government Public Relations Director; Leo Klemm, Junior Class President; and Dave Stum, Business Manager of the Observer.

Criteria for selection will be factual information, experience, and ideas—drawn from the application; and an interview, to be held Tuesday evening before the Student Union Board, made up of SBP Richard Rossie, SBP Chuck Nar, Student Body Treasurer Dick Roderick, Union President Rich Rembush, HPC Chairman Phil McKenna, Pro­fessor John Hoak, and VP for Student Affairs Father McCarragher.

However, if the Hunter-Davey Bill passes in the Student Senate on Monday, there will be no need for the applications, as the bill provides for an appointing of the Student Union President by the in-coming Student Body President. If the bill fails, the Board will announce the new Union President shortly after semester break. The new Union head will take office April 1.

Student Power in Ads

D.P. Brother and Co., which handles the Oldsmobile account, was one of four firms to reply. Kaufman and the firm made their deal in Detroit last July and eight ads produced by the students will run in 140 college newspapers. They will deal with three Oldsmobile lines aimed at youth, and two ads have moved already.

Kaufman uses words in the ads like “student power,” and is trying to sell Oldsmobiles to his fellow students with words like the most powerful “radical engine,” “liberal engine,” the “moderate engine,” and of course the “conservative engine.”

Libowitz, who works for WND and is currently organizing the Free Univer­sity, would not admit that he’s aiming for the top spot either. “I’m thinking about running but I’m up to my ears in getting the Free U. underway. I won’t make a decision until that is finished.”

Although Moor said that his decision has not been made for certain, Junior Class President Leo Klemm has admitted that, “I am his campaign manager.”

Narucki said.

With six or seven candidates there’s liable to be many a smoke-filled backroom in the next few weeks and come election week only two or three candidates.

Marketing at IBM

"You help company presidents solve their information handling problems."

"It's a lot of responsibility. And if you need help, you always get it," says Earl Andrews. "Because your success is the company's success."

Earl earned his B.A. in Political Science in 1967. Today, he's a Marketing Representative with IBM, involved in the planning, selling and installation of data processing systems.

Earl joined IBM because he felt the career paths were very clearly marked. "You don't have to be a technical genius to fit the job. You get the training. Then on-the-job experience. Before you know it, you're out on your own."

Works with top management

Earl works mainly with small companies—distribution houses, manufacturers, printers, warehouses, electrical supply houses and similar organizations. "I deal with top management," he says. "It gives me a lot of satisfaction to realize that I'm trained to know what this president or that vice-president is trying to learn. I help him solve his information handling problems."

Earl's experience isn't unusual at IBM. There are many marketing and sales representatives who could tell you similar experiences. And they have many kinds of academic backgrounds: business, engineering, liberal arts, science.

They not only market data processing equipment as Earl does, but also IBM office products and information records systems. Many of the more technically inclined are data processing Systems Engineers.

An Equal Opportunity Employer
Judicial Injustice

Even a brief, preliminary investigation would have revealed that Hynes was not present during the time of the lie-in and never blocked the doorway at any time. Neither did Michelson block any doorways. In fact, the previous evening he argued against such a move. Several eyewitnesses will attest to the fact that he was not present either during the period Narucki spoke of.

The point is, there is no provision for an investigation and indictment procedure in the Judicial Code. The only investigation in a trial occurs when the prosecution, a Board member, prepares his own case. The results of such a procedure, or lack of it, are that the Board is embarrassed and the accused is unjustly malignayed by students and by teachers in Michelson's case.

Perhaps some of the blame should be laid on Dave Ryan, Chairman of the Judicial Board, who knows the charges against Hynes and Michelson are false. Apparently he does not see what is lacking in the Board's procedure or chooses to ignore it. In either case the credibility and prestige of the Board will be seriously undermined.

As for Narucki, why did he not prosecute all of the more than 20 people who staged the lie-in, why only those five and, more importantly, why were two falsely accused. Narucki may consider himself fortunate if he is not sued for defamation of character in a civil court.

It behooves the Campus Judicial Board to correct its oversight immediately, and it behoves Ryan, by the same sense of justice under which the Board was supposedly formed, to discourage those who are about to bring charges he knows to be false until such a correction can be effected.

"My Kind Of Town"

The difference in time it takes to get to twenty blocks uptown in New York on a bus or walking is negligible, but it was a cold day and a snowy one for me. Two middle-aged school maams and their group of children were in front of me, and one was asking the bus driver if this vehicle went as far up town as Addison street and the driver said yes. Before he answered, though, the lady had turned to her friend to talk and she missed his reply. Then she turned and again asked on the destination of the bus, and this time the childen distracted her while the bus driver bellowed yes and another woman on the bus discreetly queried her on why she had neglected to read the sign stupid. After several more seconds on this routine the teacher gave up and left.

The path being cleared, I climbed on board and asked the bus driver if the bus went up as far as eighty-second. With a kind smile he replied that he would take me anywhere that I wanted to go. I asked him what the fare was and discovered that he liked my looks, so for me only twenty cents. The driver had his lines, he had to keep his sandy driving a bus on Madison Avenue. All New Yorkers have got their lines. The city is enormous, and if you don't at least have a speaking part in the play you might be swallowed up, so no one misses a cue.

I found a seat next to the typical old lady wearing the quart of My Sin. There are so many people in New York that most people begin seeming stereotyped. If you're a sensitive young artist you find yourself saying over and over I wish I had my camera, never realizing that if I saw some kid taking pictures in the midst of this crowd I'd be begging for the camera.

Out of the noise and variety of the script I began to discern one continuous monologue. The remarks were caustic, and they were coming from an old lady across the aisle, but when I watched her I saw that she wasn't really talking to the people pecified with the arms of a sweater, a coarse overcoat was wrapped around her, and another sweater served as a scarf on her head.

A boy got on the bus with two hockey sticks and a suitcase. Struggling under the load the old lady greeted him by asking him why he hadn't decided on a cab being at least eleven and old enough to work you bumm. In the same breath she began her personal guide to shopping on that block of Madison Avenue, commenting on the quality of goods sold and the amount of money thieved for them. She talked about anything and everything that she saw, but they were all objects in her world and it seemed that she was and had been for a long while, her only audience. The city could have been ignoring her but the old lady wasn't about to let that happen. She was ignoring the old, and was having her say at the same time.

Several other old women, more conservatively dressed and made up, were looking through their noses at this feisty character. One of them suddenly got up to leave remarking that she had missed her stop. This opening was too good for the old commentator, and she suggested that if the woman wasn't so defensive in thinking ability she would know where the hell she was going, and in her first really outward act the old lady tripped the step. The old lady had made a move in their world though, and she seemed to be caught out of bounds.

The opposition turned their collective evil eyes on her and I was hoping for another charm her, but the old lady had left her security, and frightened she turned to look out the window. Looking into the crowd of people crossing the street she called off to one of them, Mark, how have you been, I haven't seen you in such a long while. She was smiling, and still talking to her friend Mark in the crowd that I joined, as I got off the bus.

Dining Hall Board

On Monday the Student Life Council will consider a proposed board to govern the Notre Dame dining halls. The board would be unique in that it would be the first governing committee at Notre Dame ever to have a student majority.

We strongly favor the proposed board. With five out of eight members students, students would be able to enact and supervise substantial change.

The board would deal with a controversial subject. Dining Halls Director Mr. Bernard Mehall has of late cooperated in hiring a new chef for the food poison-plagued North Dining Hall, actively seeking a qualified sanitarian, and attempting to bring better quality and greater diversity to dining hall meals. There may be a choice of three salads now, but the question of bringing a qualified food service to the Notre Dame campus has not been considered.

We urge the Student Life Council to approve and recommend the Board as it has been proposed by the SLC dining halls subcommittee. Our hope is that once created the board will move at once not falsely accused. Narucki may consider himself fortunate if he is not sued for defamation of character in a civil court.

The proposed Student Union would separate the "service commissioners" such as Academic, Social, NSA and Student Development from the legislators proper. Academics and Student Development are the areas which will decide the future of St. Mary's. By casting them aside Student Government will reduce itself to a sounding board for the trivial.

A Student Union at a University the size of Notre Dame is necessary. A Student Union at St. Mary's College is pretentious. It is another unnecessary and dangerous diversion of labor in Student Government's attempt to make itself meaningful. THE OBSERVER suggests that before Student government restructures itself in order to bring relevant issues before the legislature, it first decide what these issues are.
Even With McQueen Bullitt Misses the Mark

By MICHAEL PATRICK O'CONNOR

San Francisco, like any city, is a dirty city, full of crime and violence. No matter how manly-pamby and New Lefty you want to be about it, you need cops to run a dirty city, full of crime and violence. And Dragnet '68 is pretty much a washout. That is why Bullitt was made.

The film is not a justification for police, although that may be what they had in mind. Police need good PR. Bullitt fills that bill nicely, being an efficiently made film that tells what needs telling (cops are people) in a dull padding manner. Like the Italian poster says, kiss-kiss-bang-bang is what films are all about and evidently so are cops. But Bullitt is a bore.

Steve McQueen, well-beloved and of recent memory in motorcycle films, has the lead and does as competent a job as could be done. The very badness of Bullitt makes one realize again how good he was in The Thomas Crown Affair by showing the diversity of his acting ability.

The director, Peter Yates, is at fault. He plays around with good photographers and editors so that the hackneyed story about cops and gangsters and politicians (O mysterious men!) comes out even worse. He has made an honest job of pretty disgusting enterprise in indulgence; he has tried to make a good picture about nothing.

"The Impossible Dream"

It should throw a few scares into those Collegiate Seminar people. If only they knew the who I story. The story of one polite and munificent student, who, tucked away in the dim shadows of his room, intently pooring through Don Quixote for the upcoming exam, was whisked back into the world of chivalry and knighthood.

The student imagined himself a perfect knight, a doer of great deeds, destined to right the unrightable wrongs, to reach the unreachable star, to dream the impossible dream. As for the bit about "loving pure and chaste from afar" the student had other intentions.

As the rosy fingered dawn awoke in the East,...

The young chivalrous lad Donned the East's valient attire, including an off-campus football helmet and ventured out from his off-campus apartment. He quickly unplugged his neat little golf cart and attacked. Since the driver wasn't other intentions.

With a gleam in his eye and a lump on his head, the knight wandered eastward, stumbling upon La Fortune Center where a student senate meeting was presently in progress. There his imagination ran wild as he conjured up incredible illusions of what was actually taking place. He romantically pictured two powerful enemies posed against each other in conflict. One was substantially larger than the other, and sat alone at the round table grating at his gib and well-dressed opponent. (There was not a Union between the two.) The antagonism had been apparently touched off by the refusal of one party to routinely stamp the royal seal of approval for a brief crusade.

Here, dear reader, I must break off this incident. The folly of such a vicious quarrel over such a slight matter is beyond the intelligence, yet alone the imagination, of all.

As he turned to leave, Don's mood switched to a romantic one. He p r o f o u n d l y d w e l t u p o n  his ladies-in-waiting up at Barat, who in their splendid fur wraps their rivals at St. Mary's. SMC maidens are fair, but only fair. Don returned home... as the rosy fingered dusk settled down in the West.

The show Yates puts on is, primarily, simply too serious. The caricature of the gangster, wearing a thin white tie and a dark shirt and suit, is taken seriously, but Heaven only knows even Eliot Ness had trouble with that one. The caricature of the politician on the make, ruthless and undercutting and sly, also wearing thin ties, is taken seriously. Robert Vaughn plays that role and his bad acting reassures one about the fundamental sameness of cosmic processes; he simply hasn't changed since UNCLE.

In fact both McQueen and Vaughn seem to have trouble adjusting to this business of a film about reality, pity it all as that is. The fantasy backdrops of Thomas Crown and UNCLE are gone, but the stars remain the same.

What is sad about seeing a bad film is that so often it isn't bad enough to even laugh at. Bullitt, with deadly seriousness that keeps even the faintest wig of humor out, is like that. For example, Robert Vaughn is so bad at bribery that he couldn't give away a pettula on a bet, but he is so serious about it that he is more pitied than censured.

What does make the film worth while is the technical competence with which it was made. The interiors fit well with the exteriors and the documentary scenes of San Francisco (sorry, no hippies this year) blend in the stagey inside scenes successfully. The whole thing was filmed in San Francisco and the beautiful city of the West Coast doesn't hold up, probably justifiably, under the scrutiny of Yates' cameraman.

The most striking part of the film is a chase sequence that comes out of nowhere and ends with all but hero dead (too much violence on the screen these days, tsk, tsk). The sequence is spectacular but then so are San Francisco hills; it is fun to bump up and down hills with a camera and it is a relief that vaudeville chases are gone with all the other camp ephemeralities of the twenties. But with such a bad film, there has to be some relief.

Shuttle Service Cut

The shuttle bus didn't run last night, as quite a few students found out, and it won't run again tonight, as many more will discover (while snow falls and temperature dips).

Temporary discontinuance of service was announced by Student Union Services head Al Knappenberger as a result of increasing disturbances of the drivers and damages to the bus. The immediate cause of the action was a second window breaking incident which occurred Wednesday evening.

Knappenberger was informed that the bus would not be able to run by Brother Rogers of the maintenance department, who said that the evening driver refused to show up last night and tonight. The situation was then fully explained to Knappenberger, who "fully agreed" with the driver and Brother Rogers.

The reasons for discontinuance as listed by Knappenberger are: 1) jow noseballing (of bus and driver), 2) overcrowding, 3) unscheduled stops, 4) obscene language, and 5) broken windows.

According to Knappenberger, the bus will make its regular trips during class hours today, and will resume the evening runs as scheduled Saturday evening.

But it was also pointed out that if disturbances continue, the evening runs will be permanently halted. Knappenberger said, "This is a valuable service which should not be abused. When this is done it is the students who suffer. They not only lose the transportation, but also a service which they in part pay for."

Clark Releases Assassination Findings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The only outsiders to view top secret autopsy photographs have confirmed the Warren commission findings that President John F. Kennedy was killed by two bullets fired from above and behind him, the Justice Department disclosed yesterday.

Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark, with the approval of the Kennedy family, released the report of a four man panel of doctors he appointed to study the photographs. X-rays and clothing sealed in the U.S. archives in 1966. It contains the first full inventory and examination of the autopsy material from the body of the assassinated President.

Because of the path of the two bullets, the Warren Commission concluded in a much disputed decision that the President was killed by one man, Lee Harvey Oswald, Nov. 22, 1963 in Dallas.

"Examination of the clothing and of the photographs and X-rays taken at autopsy revealed that President Kennedy was struck by two bullets fired from above and behind him, one of which traversed the base of the neck on the right side without striking bone and the other of which entered the skull from behind and exploded its right side," the physicians said in their report.

Clark released the report to General Sessions Judge Charles Hallbeck in reply to the judge's order for the director of the National Archives to appear in his court Friday. Hallbeck ordered the director, Dr. James B. Rhoads, to explain why he should not cooperate with New Orleans Dist. Atty. James Garrison's investigation of an alleged conspiracy in the assassination of President Kennedy.

Garrison has contended that the autopsy material would prove President Kennedy was shot by more than one man and that the fatal head wounds resulted from shots fired from in front of the President.

The Justice Department asked the District of Columbia Court to refuse to compel Dr. Rhoads to attend the conspiracy trial of Clay Shaw, a New Orleans businessman Garrison has accused of masterminding an alleged assassination plot.

Racial Strife Rips Nation's Campuses

(UPI) — The president of Swarthmore College died of a heart attack in his office yesterday as Negro students held control of the college admissions office for the eighth day.

About 30 black students ended a sit in in the University of Pittsburgh's computer center after officials promised to speed action on their demands for two Negro holidays and an institute for black studies.

Fire destroyed the student union building at Wilberforce University, a predominantly Negro school, where a student boycott has protested disciplinary procedures.

From New England to California, campuses were troubled by demonstrations, most of them of a racial nature.

Dr. Courtney Smith, S2, Swartm ore president, succumbed shortly before he was to meet with a faculty committee which had been studying demands made by Negro demonstrators.

The Quaker affiliated school near Philadelphia was thrown into near shock by the death of Smith Colleagues said he had been under severe pressure before he was to meet with a faculty committee which had been studying demands made by Negro demonstrators.

Chancellor Wesley Posvar agreed that a director and assistant director for the proposed black studies institute would be appointed by June and provided with funds to carry on their work.

He also agreed to ask the university senate to establish Jan. 15, the anniversary of the death of Malcolm X.

The agreement also provided no punitive action would be taken against the students who occupied the computer room.

At Wilberforce University in Wilberforce, Ohio, President Dr. Rembrant Stokes said he did not believe there was a connection between the fire and dissertation on campus. But authorities were investigating.

The building was burned out and the fire loss was estimated at $90,000. The student boycott continued Thursday.
Senate Set for Action on Hunter-Davey Bill

The Student Senate will meet Monday night to take final action on the Controversial Hunter-Davey constitutional amendment bill. The Senate went through the first reading Tuesday, but action on the bill was delayed until Monday because there is a required five-day delay between first reading and debate on all constitutional amendments.

According to one of its proponents, Breast-Pillips Senator Richard Hunter, the bill provides for a two absolutely essential changes in the Constitution, dealing with the Student Union.

The first of these changes would allow the Student Body President, elected each spring, to name the Student Union Director. At present, the outgoing Student government appoints this officer. This practice was originated in order to take Student Union out of the political arena. But Hunter feels that it is vital that the SBP be able to choose the person that he can work with best. "The Student Union is a service organization and in order to serve well there must be maximum co-ordination between the Student Body President and the Student Union."

The second change would require that the Student Union President, as executor of Student Union policy determined by the Board of Directors, appear before the Senate every two weeks. The Board would also be required to meet every month. Student Union President Rick Rembusch commented, "I'm not 100% in favor of the bill, but I'm not completely against it. The idea of having the board meet every month is an excellent idea. The change of title from Student Union President to Director is not all that important. But I don't think the Student Body President should appoint the Student Union President. This puts the appointment too much into the realm of politics."

Despite the opposition of the Student Union, Hunter is confident that the motion will pass. Hunter stated, "I don't think that Richard Rosse is completely in favor of the bill, and I don’t think that Rick Rembusch is completely in favor of the bill. But I think it is the best possible bill and will best serve the students."

Six Advances Slated

One of Notre Dame's loosely organized "weekend" groups is finalizing plans for a series of six get-togethers. Calling the experience the "Advance," the groups move into the Old College building for three days for an assortment of discussions and whatever else seems appropriate.

These Advances will be similar to those that were held last year under the direction of Fr. Burchett. The idea is to get students from SMC and ND together informally, in an atmosphere more relaxed than conventional social gatherings. It gives them a chance to listen and talk to various faculty members, the likes of Fr. Dunne, Fr. Simons, Sr. Rita Mercille, Sr. Sue Kelly, and Dr. and Mrs. Costello, discussing almost anything. In the past, conversations have focused on interpretations of sin, or the Eucharist, or on marriage. Advances will be held on Jan. 31, Feb. 21, Mar. 7, Mar. 14, Apr. 18, and Apr. 25. If you are interested in being a part of one, please contact Mary Lee Carr, ext. 4675, or Patrick Hayes, ext. 1293.

Lying Down On The Job

Alas, "Moose" Krause's incredible basketball feat no longer is without peer. What incredible basketball feat? Ah, my dear friend, there is a game going on in South Bend, Indiana. It is a real big game and the foot has been in the air. With a few more seconds remaining, we were behind by two points and had the ball. The game was a big spark under our offensive basket and one of Butler's big guys knocked me down. Well, I was lying there, facing the hoop, with my head on the foul line and the ball just happened to come to me.

"I knew darn well the gun was going to go off again, so I turned it over while I was on the floor. There was a maze of arms in front of me. In fact, I don't know how the ball got through, but it did and it went in.

"Well, I went back to the bench and George Keogan was patting me on the back, saying, 'Way to shoot, Moose, way to go.' Then we went out and beat them in overtime (37-32 to be precise). It was a real big victory. They bought us an extra six-figure check. I was doing well. I was making a name in the world, the student body was very excited.

"The funny part about it is that next day everybody was on the floor, early before practice started. I was doing well. I was making a name in the world, the student body was very excited.
