Meeting discusses Nov. Moratorium

by Brother Patrick Canney

Well over one hundred students gathered in Newland Hall last night to organize a special Notre Dame contingent to participate in the November moratorium proceedings in Washington.

Beginning on November 13, the group plans to join with similar organizations from around the country in providing participants in a March Against Death. Each member will carry a sign with the name of one of the war dead on it. He will be given a pledge card with the name of the Arlington National Cemetery to the White House where he will present it.

From there, the marchers will move to the steps of the White House, and the plazas will be placed in a coffin. Plans are to return the filled coffin to President Nixon. By the following day, the coffin will originally included a march from the Capitol to theEllipse behind the White House. This would result in almost surrounding the White House, the Secret Service, and permit a change of plans.

Several plans for Saturday’s activities were announced as beginning with a procession filtering up three separate streets to the Monument and around the reflecting pool. There five to ten speeches will be given, a collection to support the day’s endeavors will be taken up and a Jazz concert will finish off the day’s activities.

When this announcement was greeted by bursting on the part of a large number of those in attendance, Karen Weller briefed those who preferred to use civil disobedience tactics. She offered a few words on the idea of all equal treatment before human rights and suggested activities similar to the destruction of draft cards which took place here in October.

Her other ideas included the possibility of a man at the Pentagon and the gathering of draft records from various parts of the country to be destroyed in Washington. Washington that would definitely be a violation of the law, the idea of mass has been treated in recent court cases and decisions have been favorably inclined.

Potential marchers were advised of their legal rights and the Washington police force, as well as medical aid stations scattered throughout the route. Sherry Smith, hereafter a veteran of many previous marches, gave instructions regarding appropriate attire for the trip. She pointed out that accommodation could be readily known, he said, as many incidents of bad feeling.

To critics of the space program, Parker said, stopping research now would reduce the lunar landing to a $24 billion stunt.

By advancing technology in general, and particularly in this area of earth resources, the space effort can improve all mankind.

To pull back now after we have shown how space could be useful would be analogous to stopping research on a vaccine after experiments had shown its positive potential.

Parker said that the surveying capability could also be used to increase food production for the world’s increasing populations.

With respect to his new office, he plans “continuation of the job that Robert Pohl set up.”

While sympathizing with Pohl’s resignation and admitting the position required a great deal of stress, Monnich said he did not foresee any reasonably possible circumstances for his resignation. Tito Trevino took up Pohl’s job temporarily, but admitted that the work of the problem would be too much for him to handle alone, together with his role as Student Senate’s Associate Director. He said this increased flexibility would allow the Student Senate to continue its programs.

Monnich commented on the budget allotted to the Student Senate. He said that the overall cuts made in the budget would not hamper the organization’s proposed programs.

Specifically praised the Student Senate of saving the Student Senate its funds as a whole, instead of the previous policy of dividing them up to other commissions of the Student Senate.

He said this increased flexibility would allow the Student Senate to continue its programs as they need develop and would result in significant saving and greater quality of services. He said this added flexibility would improve the chances of certain services actually making money.
Hall Life Board issues warning; seven halls cited for violations

by Don Ruane

An investigation and interviews by the Hall Life Board along with several complaints at the last few weeks, has led to a warning for seven halls in regard to their parietal procedure.

Ron Mastriani, executive co-ordinator of the Hall Presidents Council, said the HLB has received complaints from several hall directors and resident assistants concerning the conduct of other halls. The board began an investigation of the parietal procedures of each hall on campus and found seven halls violating the sign-in and/or the twenty-four hour violation limit.

On Monday, the board sent a letter to each hall instructing them to correct the situation by November 10 or face a suspension of parietals. The letter also reminded each hall of the rules it set for itself in the hall constitution it submitted to the HLB last spring, according to Mastriani.

Mastriani stressed that another investigation would be conducted after the tenth to be sure that all the halls are following the established parietal rules.

"The purpose of the Hall Life Board is to help the halls along and to make sure that everything is working as it should," emphasized Mastriani.

He also said that the Hall Presidents Council is presently taking action to revise the parietal system.

The halls cited by the HLB and in danger of having their parietals suspended are: Holy Cross, Dillon, Walsh, Alumni, Flanner, Carroll, and Moorway.

S M C curfew changes possible

At Tuesday night's meeting of the Student Senate a preliminary motion to change curfew policy for second semester freshmen was unanimously passed. The proposed change would mean no hours for second semester freshmen with parental approval.

The motion was to be sent to the Administrative Committee for further action. The proposal will go to the Student Affairs Committee for further action.

Father Sheedy moved by Goerner’s criticisms

by Paul Gallagher

Father Charles Sheedy, Chairman of the Experimental College Subcommittee of the Curriculum Revision Committee (CRC) was contacted by The OBSERVER yesterday for reaction to a seven page letter sent to him by Professor Edward Goerner.

In the letter sent to Sheedy on October 22, but made public only recently, the popular political theorist indicated that he had given up hopes for his St. Thomas Moore proposal and that the government to be contacted was Professor Peter Smith at St. Mary's College. Smith agreed during the telephone conversation to talk with FBI officials and received the two FBI agents into his home early Monday morning. However, between the time the agents talked to Smith on Monday night and the Tuesday morning meeting, the bearded professor talked to his lawyer and other members of the draft resistance group and decided not to go through with the interview.

Professor Douglas was the second member of the resistance group to be contacted by the FBI, he described the attempt of the official to obtain a personal interview and a statement, but attempted to explain why such statements were necessary in view of the fact that killing.

"Earlier in the day the FBI office was reported to have said that they would not attend the meeting. The agent who had been in contact with the group - Mr. King - was not present at the meeting last night. The calls from the FBI agent began Monday evening. The first to be contacted was Professor Peter Smith at St. Mary's College. Smith agreed during the telephone conversation to talk with FBI officials and received the two FBI agents into his home early Monday morning. However, between the time the agents talked to Smith on Monday night and the Tuesday morning meeting, the bearded professor talked to his lawyer and other members of the draft resistance group and decided not to go through with the interview."

FBI investigating draft protest

Professor James Douglas, Chairman of the Notre Dame Institute for the Study and Practice of Non-Violence, issued a second public statement of purpose in behalf of the seven members of the Notre Dame Resistance Group who tore up draft cards on October 15th's Moratorium Day Mass.

The statement, read at last night's CPA meeting, came as a result of the efforts by the South Bend office of the FBI to obtain personal interviews with individual members of the group in hopes of inducing them to waive their constitutional rights and sign statements.

The draft card tearers refused to cooperate with the agent, the statement pointed out, "because we believe that secret investigative processes are themselves a means of fear and intimidation, existing within the same system of coercion as the Selective Service System does. Such processes are, the resisters maintain, "an illegal and undemocratic and open society."

Instead, the resisters invited the FBI agent to attend tonight's public meeting where the group would make a statement. In this way, said the draft card tearers, they would be consistent with the view that "the way of non-violence is the way of open and public encountered."

Further in the statement, the group confirmed the fact that they did indeed tear up their draft cards, and that "in witness of non-violent resistance to the continuing slaughter in Vietnam."

"We demand once again", the statement continued, "that the US Government either recognize the truth in Vietnam and cease its killing or that it inflict suffering on us for openly breaking the law which enforces"
Voting age

The rejection of voters of New Jersey and Ohio of referendums to lower the voting age to 18 and 19 respectively is regrettable to say the least.

In New Jersey, figures show the proposal was losing by over 300,000 votes with 1,500,000 votes counted. The Ohio proposal was fairing a little better vote wise.

The New Jersey referendum was supported enthusiastically by both candidates for governor. Most local and state officials campaigning for or against it suffered their support. Prominent educational and civic groups also supported the proposal. Student groups throughout the state were out in full force campaigning for the proposal.

No doubt a large part of the overt support for the referendum by politicians was due to their respect for the student movement and their fear of the future political repercussions of not supporting today what would someday be a viable voting segment of society.

The fear of students, however, was mirrored in the vote against the proposal but in a different way. The results of the referendum in both states showed the tragic impact of the publicity that has surrounded the student movement in America.

One impression that sticks in the minds of the students of the population which now has franchise is the violence which has surrounded so many student protests. Many adults look upon it as irresponsibility — and irresponsibility that they fear may be mirrored at the polls should students be allowed to vote.

While it is senseless to justify the violence that has taken place at many times during protest it is a shame that voters were not able to look past it to the deeper reasons for demonstrations in the first place.

There are many things wrong with American society — evils not only acknowledged by students, but by many adults as well. Students are concerned about changing things. They are prohibited from participating in the national channels of government and so in many instances have had to march the streets to manifest not only their concern for change, but their alienation from the structure itself.

It would have been wise to begin now to break down the barriers to student participation in the American system. Students have a legitimate right to franchise. Perhaps if the violent confrontations that have characterized student manifestations of concern did not occur students could get closer to the goal that they sought. We regret that the older generation has failed to look deep enough into the whole problem — but the whole situation is a two-way street.

Comment on yesterday

The Senate move last night increasing the appropriations of a number of campus organizations is a wise one. We realize that a large number of students deplore the fiscal policies of past Senates and had hoped that the entire debt would be paid off this year.

The effects of such a move though, as we pointed out Tuesday, would have been disastrous. Several organizations would have been severely crippled, perhaps beyond repair.

The current deficit can be paid off in full next year. What is needed though is sound fiscal management by Student Government, and a careful watchdog policy on the part of the Student Senate. Student Union, and Student Government must impose upon themselves a strict self-discipline, so as to avoid the disasters of the two previous years. We have little doubt that this will be done. We need only repeat Senator Ed Davey’s words to express how we feel about the spirit of fiscal responsibility that is pervading the Union:

“I’ve looked over the Union’s controls, and I can honestly say that they’re the best the Union’s ever seen.”

The Senate though, must not allow itself to slip into a quagmire of procrastination. It must demand from the Student Government Treasurer a monthly report on the financial status of Student Government, with a detailed breakdown of expenditures during the period. The Senate must not hesitate to suspend the funds of any branch of the government, if it feels that those funds are being wasted, or misused, and immediately conduct a full investigation into the situation.

Integrity phases out

Tim MacCarr’s column two weeks ago about saints and saint days was a great door-opener for my talking of another church issue, the patrocinium of the future political repercussions of not supporting today what would someday be a viable voting segment of society.

In reading through the play A Man for All Seasons this week with October 15’s Moratorium Man experience still in mind, it occurred to me to wonder whether Margaret Moore was as famous as she should have been, not just as patroness of the university in place of Notre Dame du Lac these days. And this on the grounds that she would be better suited philosophically to be a protector and haven of refuge for degree seekers today than the traditional virgin.

She is, remember, the Moore who suggested that her father forget his moral scruple and take the Oath of Allegiance to the Church of England with his fingers crossed.

“God more regards the thoughts of men than the works of his mouth,” she prompted. “Then say the words of the oath and in your heart think otherwise.”

She would be a special patroness and protector of the pragmatic way of life — a way of life in which the results of a man’s actions, e.g. getting was stopped, ensuring that the poor are fed, that the oppressed are freed, etc., are respected more than the personal integrity of a man maintains in acting.

She would be a patroness to those who say, “I know I’m striving for a position in, and paying lip service to, a thoroughly corrupted system but wait until I have one and then I can change things.” Likewise she would protect those who say, “What a waste of time for a man like Sir Thomas Moore to rot in prison. Think of all that he could have done for the church if he would have just taken the oath and forgotten about it.”

Sir Thomas Moore was strong with his daughter. He said, “When a man takes an oath, he’s holding his own self in his hands like water and if he opens his fingers then — he needn’t hope to find himself again.” But we at the university seem in large part to be much more sympathetic with Margaret.

The more a man reflects on his life in American society, the more he is aware of the meaning of original sin, that is, the more he realizes that astry as he may, he cannot not involved in committing evil in the world. To be alive is to be implicated.

The State can no longer offer man the alternative of taking his own chance of living, to be born, to live, to die. He has to be born, to live, to die in the knowledge that evil is perpetuated. The State can no longer offer a man the alternative of taking his own chance of living.

To be pure he must not only not war or refuse to pay taxes that contribute to war, he must also pay not real to a man who pays taxes, or buy bread from him, or he employed by him.

He can not only not live in a white ghetto, he can not judge with white legal systems, work in white corporations, or talk in white categories... To be pure, in fact, he must take stands to the death, lost his children charge — as do children of Nazi German parentage — “You are alive, you couldn’t have done enough.”

But we at the university seek the intercession and protection of Saint Margaret Moore. “It’s not our fault that the state is bad,” we say to him. “And so if you elect to suffer for it, you elect yourself a hero.” Or more poignantly we say, “Let us prepare to be effective later, let’s forget for now what our silence says.” And so we proceed to speak a lie with our lives in hopes that some good will come of it some day.

We pejuriously ourselves with Sir Rich, but for noble cause. It is a new morality, one which the university in large part is making for us. For good or for bad we should be conscious of what is he doing. Saint Margaret Moore — pray for us.
This is the SMC campus, Rome, which will house 70 girls next year. The students will receive a full year of academic study and credit in the field of humanities. Panty raids should take on an exotic lure.

Alarms and diversions

Hooman hysteria

PENDLETON, Ind. (UPI) At least 24 inmates at the Indiana Reformatory went on a rampage Wednesday afternoon, tearing up bedding, toilets and plumbing. There was no report of any injuries.

Rags to Richmond

WASHINGTON (UPI) The Department of Housing and Urban Development Wednesday approved recertification for a workable program for Richmond, Ind.

Cash and carry

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) A lone bandit escaped Wednesday with $2,812 from a southside branch of the Union Federal Savings and Loan Association. Police said the bandit approached the teller and told her he wanted to transfer some funds. As she turned to go inside, he pulled a gun, police said.

The gunman stuffed cash from two teller cages into a briefcase, then forced three tellers and manager Mrs. Elsie Merrick into a back room where he bound them to chairs with heavy coat hangers.

"Do not move for twelve minutes or I will shoot you," the women told the gunman as telling them. He then fled, apparently on foot.

The holdup occurred shortly after noon at the branch office, 2554 South College Ave.

17-15-20!

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) Phil Miller, 16, Galveston, won the 1969 4-H Tomato Club contest. The youth, a sophomore at Lewis Cass High School, produced a prize winning crop of 33.45 tons per acre of 17,140 plants per acre in 40-inch rows. He plowed down 316 pounds of 17-15-20 fertilizer plus 25 pounds per acre of starter solution. The field was sprayed 11 times.

Four sectional winners also were announced—Steve Plank, Galveston; Donald Hadiaway, Bunker Hill; Steve Van Vactor, Plymouth, and Yvonne Moyer, Plymouth.

Hoo's here working?

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) Unemployment claims in Indiana last week were up slightly from the preceding week, director John F. Coppes of the Indiana Employment Security Division said Wednesday. Although about 200 fewer persons filed initial claims, the total increased from 13,525 to 13,705 because of a 3 per cent increase in claims from people out of work a week or longer, Coppes said.

Coppes said reasons for the small increase included seasonal slowdowns, reductions of force, and lack of orders. He also said there were several construction projects completed and weather has caused a slowdown in quarries. About 80 workers were without jobs because the plywood plant in Southern Indiana closed. The claims were still about 11 per cent under the Southern Indiana average.

"Do not move for twelve minutes or I will shoot you," the women told the gunman as telling them. He then fled, apparently on foot.

The holdup occurred shortly after noon at the branch office, 2554 South Madison Ave.

Biodwyn Pig is quite mad

A & M Records' new British recording group Biodwyn Pig, who will soon be making their first U.S. tour, only made their English debut as a unit in February this year - but immediately made a massive impact as an original outfit of superb musicians who definitely had something to offer to the British music scene.

Of course, the four members were no newcomers to music, all had a firm grounding and had achieved acclaim in their own right with various groups. Leader Mick Abrahams, formerly guitarist with Jethro Tull, decided to form the group because he wanted to work in a particular direction with musicians who had the same musical ideas as himself. Mick had, in the past, played in groups with Andy Pyle and Jack Lancaster and during that time the three of them realized they were kindred spirits as far as music was concerned. They vowed they would eventually get together to form a group - and did, with the addition of Ron Berg on drums.

Jack Lancaster is a multi-instrumentalist - he plays tenor sax, sopranino sax, flute, electric violin and sometimes bass clarinet. Andy Pyle plays six-string bass and cello. The group's versatility and scope renders them unclassifiable. Mick comments: "People may say we are Blues based or have a psychedelic pig - and one can perhaps sense the humor of the group from this. Although they take their music seriously, they also inject a lightness and gaiety into it. When you hear them, you will probably enjoy some of the jokes Mick comes out with in between numbers. Biodwyn Pig is part of the new breed of British musicians who set trends which are felt in the international music world. They will be copied because they are original, but they will always remain readers, developing as they do continually."
Letters to the Editor

The following is a letter from the parents of Larry Dirnberger, one of the Notre Dame graduates who has been killed in Vietnam and whose cross was placed in front of the ROTC building during the Moratorium.

In Memorium

Editor:
A few days ago we were provided with a copy of your October 16th issue. We were sad and pleased with your tribute to our beloved son Lawrence A. Dirnberger. We want to express our appreciation to everyone concerned that took part in effecting this tribute in memory of Larry. The Moratorium as conducted at Notre Dame met with our approval and praise.

We were with Larry during his last few terribly painful days at the Clark Air Force Base Hospital in the Philippines. The wonderful "spirit of Notre Dame" was ever evident in Larry to his very end. His call for help during his four years at Notre Dame was the "memorare." "Dame" was ever evident in Larry for the Blessed Virgin Mary. It's oil free! Medicated. In shades oily skin don't mix, right? Dear John

Dear John:

It has never been my intention to cast aspersions upon the personal honor or integrity of any individual within Student Government, nor to single out a particular person for censure.

I feel myself to be unworthy, too busy, flunking out, drafted, sick to my stomach and I feel that the responsibilities are too great, little, ridiculous to be faced at this time.

Although I will not be officially involved with the name of present position), I will still strive to do all that I can to help in any way those (persons, boxes) who once (elected, appointed, gave) this position and who I now (leave behind, secretly hate, don't remember).

Yours in (regret, anguish, for Larry, Notre Dame), (name of resignee)

Up-tight top

To Whom It May Concern:

(To reply to the letter appearing in the Observer on October 31, 1969)

We now possess the Homecoming Queen for the Navy game weekend. We actually have no use for her—not because she's too bulky (she'd make a lovely paperweight), but because Pears doesn't dance, and Jim Kriehl and Fr. Mac wouldn't miss seeing Smokey Robinson together for anything...

I wish the above letter, or one analogous to it, could have been written by someone else but me, like a Notre Dame Vice President, for example, or the Director of Grace. I, unfortunately, am morally insensitive enough to think that the corner stone-napping was a real chuckle...and that a sense of humor at the Top could have elevated a situation described as stupid into an episode that would have sent every old Grad in the Grey (Girard) Havens of St. Petersburg chortling off to find his chuckle book.

But maybe to Up Top is to be Up Tight.

Pseudo-soul Brogan

Editor:

I'm sorry but I just can't take it anymore. Please, for our sake, get that idiot pseudo-soul brother Jim Brogan out of here. Send him to Lincoln High School, send him back home, just set him out of here. He not only writes with a 6-8 year old's mind, but is also lying to us.

1.) Smokey Robinson did not prove himself to be one of America's great entertainers, but rather the distant relative of some cooing pigeon.
2.) He never, at any time, held toys, all in time.
3.) The performance of the Miracles was not flawless, and furthermore did not relate to any individual within Student Government, nor to single out a particular person for censure.

The concert, in fact, was ridiculous. I know of very few people who enjoyed it. Most people would have been elsewhere had it not been for their dear HTFs. Every song sounded the same and the floor movements of the Miracles reminded me of 3 wind-up toys, all in time.

Please let's cut out all the nonsense. If the concert is bad, let's say so. Let's knock off this sick sophistication and get back to entertaining groups (such as the Chambers brothers) who play for us and not for the money.

Before you think of this as a slam on black music, let me tell you how much I enjoyed Miss Yvonne Fair. She was very enjoyable and far away the best entertainer on the program. It's to bad she couldn't have been the main attraction, but then I don't suppose she can twist a tambourine through her legs and sing doo-oo-bee, doo-ooboe.

Jim Brogan, get real.

Dear John

It has never been my intention to cast aspersions upon the personal honor or integrity of any individual within Student Government, nor to single out a particular person for censure.

It is my hope that our exchange of letters has served to, for the benefit of the university community, the issues central to the problems of Student Government financing. Sincerely,

Nothing is too ridiculous for the Ombudsman

by Jim Graif

"Nothing is too ridiculous for us to handle," goes the saying around the Ombudsman office. This sort of sums up the feeling out that as mediator between the two main branches of the Student Government and the student body, the Ombudsman serves as the conscience of Student Government.

The Ombudsman listens to complaints which range from having trouble finding a daybed to the fact that the rats around the lake are interfering with a guy's love life.

"Our power lies in mediation," said Smith, while pointing out that as mediator between Student Government and the student body, the Ombudsman serves as the conscience of Student Government.

Smith pointed out that the commission has had a good relationship with maintenance and security, the two main sources of answers to student problems. In addition, the Ombudsman looks at the kind of problems being presented and tries to get to the source of the whole problem.

"As a university gets larger it becomes more depersonalized but with the Ombudsman there is at least one person the student can call to get something done," said Smith.

He felt that the Ombudsman could present their complaints directly to Mr. Pears. He also felt that the possibility of a co-op bookstore could be looked into.

Smith felt that the Ombudsman commissioner should be an elected office since the commissioner is a student representative and an election would be a more representative way of choosing a commissioner. Both Smith and McKenna urged students to take advantage of the service.

A fresh look at

The technology of moving things

That's right! Grumman's real business is the technology of moving things... men and machines in purposeful patterns within a great diversity of origins, destinations and tactical situations. Speed is often, but not always, the answer. Performance reliability—in spite of many interchanges—is the thing.

In close-in combat "dog fights"—an aircraft with speed, maneuverability and armaments... the F-14 Air Superiority Fighter.

In lunar exploration—The Lunar Module which successfully landed the astronauts on the moon.

In areas of enemy activity—an aircraft with track and search radar that can locate, identify and lock on to the target, even in zero visibility... the A-6 Intruder, and advanced versions.

In early warning emergencies—an aircraft that can extend the eyes and ears of a Navy task force at sea through radar and computers that alert interceptor aircraft to impending enemy attacks... the E-1A Hawkeye, and advanced versions.

Far above the earth, a satellite that can discover more about the evolution of the universe... the Orbiting Astronomical Observatory.

Add Deep Submersable, Hydrofoil seacraft, High-speed Ground Transportation systems, Corporate aircraft and Lunar Space vehicles, and you get some idea of how Grumman is extending the perimeters of the technology of moving things.

At Grumman the opportunity for moving is presented in abundance to Physics, Aero, Civil, Mechanical, Electrical, Electronic, Chemical, Industrial Engineering or Technology Majors interested to find the right vehicle for their careers.
