The Observer

Suppression charged by Sixkiller

by Tim Treanor

About a hundred braved the frigid South Bend weather to hear American United (AIU) Executive Director Jess Sixkiller warn that the American Indian "must get out of the eighteenth century prison you have kept us in," promise that "Notre Dame can become a vital building block" in Indian education and charge the Federal Government with applying "subtle political pressures" to suppress the distribution of the Edger-Kahn edited book, "Our Brother's Keeper." Sixkiller was part of a panel discussion on the "Solutions to the Problems of the American Indian." Also on the panel were former American Indian Center director Gene Crawford, Dr. Shirley Hill Witt, Rough Rock demonstration school instructor Simon Ortiz, and Indian Econimic Cooperative leader Stanley "Shay" Bird. The discussions were chaired by Julian Samora. All panel members, with the exception of Samora, were Indians.

Chairman Samora opened the discussion by charging that "Reibes, reservations and Indian societies exist without laws; at the mercy of any anarchy that arises. Civil rights are ignored. Education is very often devoted to denying the value of being Indian, the value of Indian culture...leading to suicide and drunkenness in fourteen, thirteen - even eleven year olds," due to the laxity of the Federal Government, and asserting that the Indian "wants to maintain his cultural identity" and "wants to have Indian agency...of Indian agency." Ortiz spoke next, and he described the Rough Rock demonstration school at which he teaches as an effort to "recreate the Indian culture..." According to Ortiz, an earlier, similar attempt failed because of too much bureaucracy. The Rough Rock school is taught by primarily white faculty and the school board is composed of seven Navajo Indians, only two of which are Indians.

Staughton Lynd attacks corporations and Fifteen Minute Rule

by Dave Lammers

Staughton Lynd, radical historian and presently a leader of the resistance movement in Chicago, spoke in the engineering auditorium last night about "The Fifteen Minute Rule and Other Contemporary Evils." Lynd said that the use of the fifteen minute rule last November 18 was a "haphazard quasi-judicial process" that was picked out randomly.

" goodies makers" and "deliberately disciplined those known by the administrators not to be involved as a deterrent.

Lynd said that this fifteen minute rule is "a lens that relative weight of attention paid by the student body to the absolute ten students..." What do the administrators fear?" Lynd asked. He contended that their "liberal rhetoric" conceals their real concern: "property: The university is a corporation within a corporation." Lynd said.

The historian quoted Tim MacCarry's Observer column which said that if Gandhi were at Notre Dame he would be tried.

Weather

HELL FROZE OVER

HELL, Norway (UPI) — The water froze in Hell yesterday when the temperature dropped to a degrees below zero.

AND AT NOTRE DAME...

(UPI) — Thursday and Thursday night partly cloudy, chance of snow flurries and continued very cold. Friday will have slight moderation in temperatures. Thursday's high zero to 12 above.

Preliminary plans look excellent for SFLI

Preliminary plans for next spring's Sophomore Literary Festival have already been organized by the Festival committee headed by co-chairman Bob Hall and Rick Fitzgerald. Many of the authors to be included in the Festival's events have been asked to remain on campus for the full week of activities and the committee is now beginning the process of scheduling the order of speakers.

The Festival's keynote will be Theodore Solotaroff, editor of the highly regarded New American Review. Solotaroff is considered an authority on contemporary writers and it is expected that he will address himself to the question of the modern author in the modern world.

Among the poets listed to appear are Gary Snyder, one of the most widely read contemporary poets and author of Myths and Test and Amelia Hobbs, a well-known English poet who is now teaching in the creative writing department of Iowa University and author of two books and poems, Faces and The Coherence. Nathaniel Turn, a poet-social anthropologist and founder of the poetical-ly based Cape Golliard Press is also on the sober. Tore formerly taught at Buffalo University and will teach at Princeton in the spring. He has written Beautiful Contradictions and Where Babylion Ends.

Also included in the week's events will be a poetry workshop headed by John Fuglister. Montgomery, a British poet and professor, editor of Fulcrum Press. He will be accompanied by two poets, Tom Pickard and Lee Harwood.

University Forum to meet on February 6

Culminating eight months of planning and preliminary work, the University Forum will hold its opening meeting on February 6.

The Forum is the first promotion by Fr. Theodore Hesburgh, president of the University last May. It consists of representatives of each of five divisions of the University - students, administration, faculty, alumni and trustees.

Communication is listed as the prime reason for the Forum coming into existence. According to Student Body President Phil McKenna this is exactly the quality which has been lacking in the organizational stages of the body.

McKenna claims that he had not received any information more specific than the original letter to all students when Mr. Phillip Faccenda, Student Assistant to the President, called him in mid-summer to ask what his intentions were for the elections.

After receiving a positive report, the Senate adopted the proposal, rejected representatives, and notified Mr. Faccenda. After which the tentative opening date for the forum had been slated for December 8, lack of time to gather the various delegates forced postponement until after Christmas vacation and exams.

Factenda characterized this initial meeting as organizational but only "social and get together." When this outlook was presented to Joe Cotrell, one of the student representatives, he outlined precisely what something concrete. He suggested that the Forum the various divisions should be in immediate correspondence. Each should be told exactly what is to be done and when.

According to Ortiz, can read or write English.

The school features heavy emphasis on Indian history and bilingualism. The school has four classes for Spanish, French, and the first two phases are taught in the minority language. English is introduced in first grade to help children reach the age of eight.

According to Ortiz, the objective of this project is to make the student equally proficient in English and Navajo.

"Rough Rock Demonstration School, by the use of bilingualism and the recognition of cultural achievements, is one answer that could be posed to the problem of educating the Indian people," Ortiz said.

Ortiz was followed by Crawford, who vividly described an Indian boarding school and talked about a project that he had been engaged in while working in the Oglala (Neb.) school system.

"Where you're six years old, and an Indian," Crawford said, "around the end of August, a yellow schoolbus driven by an unskilled driver - always white - comes by to pick you up. You takes you out of your mother's arms and throws you on his bus. Then he drives all day across unfamiliar territory to a school five hundred miles away, never stopping for a year you'd run away.

(continued on page 2)

Joe Cotrell

Prepared a paper of memo to the others outlining some of the problems it considers possible for fruitful discussion.

He was optimistic on the issue of communication and representative representation. Not only are the outsiders extensively unaware of the situation, according to Cotrell, but so are the students. How many of us,
Sign-ups scheduled for April Model UN

The final delegate sign-ups for the Model United Nations will be held in the dining hall Monday and Tuesday. The delegate fee is $3.00, and the sign-ups for the various delegations are being held on a first come, first served basis.

Tim Walsh, delegate director, said that there were 170 spots open, "with several interesting countries unrepresented."

The delegate lists will be posted early next week and will be on the back wall of the Huddle. In addition, all delegates will be notified personally by mail.

Mike Kelly, Chairman of the Model UN, said that there were four apparent issues shaping up for the session. These are: the admission of Red China to the UN, the U.S. policy in Vietnam, the Arab-Israeli War, and the Rhodesian racial policy. In addition, the Secretary General will announce to the assembly a "manifesto" of what they will deal with.

There will be U.N. committe meetings set up for the session, the Trusteeship Committee, the Economic-Security Committee, and the Economic-Political Committee.

Wanted:
Student Union
Secretary

Positions for both morning & afternoon jobs open for second semester. Call 7757 or write to:
Student Union
Box 427
LaFortune Student Center
Deadline: Tuesday, Jan. 13

Tim Walsh said that there were 170 spots open, "with several interesting countries unrepresented."

The delegate lists will be posted early next week and will be on the back wall of the Huddle. In addition, all delegates will be notified personally by mail.

Mike Kelly, Chairman of the Model UN, said that there were four apparent issues shaping up for the session. These are: the admission of Red China to the UN, the U.S. policy in Vietnam, the Arab-Israeli War, and the Rhodesian racial policy. In addition, the Secretary General will announce to the assembly a "manifesto" of what they will deal with.

There will be U.N. committees set up for the session, the Trusteeship Committee, the Economic-Security Committee, and the Economic-Political Committee.

Thrills of the slopes attract many students

With the holiday season interrupting the routine of many midwestern communities, the ski enthusiasts inevitably find ways to relax and forget the drudgery of their daily lives. For many, this means nothing more than traveling north to wing the slopes, over covered peaks and let the wind do what it will. College students always go where the action is, and the fast growing sport of skiing fills the bill. Expert or beginner, the thrills of the slopes themselves and the quiet moments just relaxing around the fire provide the student with a ready excuse to forget about "real work."

The people are friendly, the atmosphere is warm, and the entertain-publicity about it. Students did the bulk of work for recruitment efforts. The admissions office seems to be trying to take over work that we have already done."

Krashna said that he and admissions director Dr. Peter Grandé had "different philosophies" when it came to black recruitment. "I don't think we differ over public relations pitch, but I think we approach the individual student differently." Krashna believed in telling the student the truth with both the good and bad points of Notre Dame.

Sixkiller charges government with suppression of his book

A series of arrests were made over the Christmas vacation by campus security director Arthur Pears, revealed last night. On December 24, two youths were apprehended near the Athletic and Convocation Center, while on December 25, another group was arrested at Alumni Hall. And when you get home in May, it's Thanksgiving and Christmas and Easter.

Dr. Witt also cited a need for "taxations and orthography," but warned that it is meaningless unless the Indian people themselves are consulted and allowed to participate.

Sterling Red Bird, in a short speech, said that he had been having problems with his Indian economic co-operative venture, but that he had "learned a lot" from his Notre Dame experience and thanked all concerned.

Pears reveals arrests

In separate incidents, teenagers were apprehended siphoning gasoline from cars in the university village. Campus security prevented six others from forcibly entering Carroll Alumni Hall over the Christmas vacation. The stolen goods, which included a stereo record player, were valued at $1300.

CIA to return, DOW date unset

Rev. Louis J. Thornton, Director of the Placement Bureau, refused to comment yesterday when asked if either the Dow Chemical Company or the Central Intelligence Agency had sent any statement to the University. "A demonstration directed toward them last November, Thornton did say, however, that since recruiting dates are set several months in advance, the Dow and the CIA will have recruiters visit the campus in the future. The Placement Bureau director said that Dow will have a representative on campus to interview students on February seventeenth and eighteenth. He did not give any date for the CTA representative's visit.

Thornton refused to comment because of the degree of controversy surrounding the recent trial of the Notre Dame Ten. He felt that by commenting, he would avoid the possibility of having his statement misunderstood and causing further irritation in the situation.
The FBI entered the case with plans to conduct its more intensive manhunt since the assassination of Martin Luther King. The FBI said it would interview thousands of persons, including UMW President W.A. "Tony" Boyle. Thousands of miners in the three state area continued their sympathy walkout.

Capt. Joseph C. Snyder of the Pennsylvania State Police said at least two weapons were used to kill Yablonski, 59, his wife, 57, and his daughter, Charlotte, 25, in their colonial style home near this community in the heart of the soft coal fields. Their bodies were found Monday.

"We have found two additional spent bullets," Snyder said. "One was on the floor in the master bedroom and the other inside the mattress in the same room, where the Yablonskis were sleeping." Snyder identified one of the spent bullets as a .38 caliber, the same as the nine other spent bullets found in the home previously. He said the other was believed to be a .30 caliber rifle bullet "but this is not conclusive."

Yablonski, who close friends and relatives said feared for his life, kept two guns in his bedroom. In addition to the shotgun, state police said an unloaded .22 caliber rifle was propped in the corner of the bedroom.

Ten thousand miners in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio remained idle Wednesday in sympathy with the Yablonski family.

Roving pickets closed several mines in northern West Virginia where leaders of UMW District 31 had vowed to shut down all of the nation's mines by noon yesterday unless the slayers were apprehended. However, the mine closings were confined to a three state area.

Funeral services for the three victims will be held Friday.

Grant awarded Pasto to study at Stanford

Dr. Daniel J. Pasto, professor of chemistry at the University of Notre Dame, has received a senior postdoctoral fellowship from the National Science Foundation to study at Stanford University in the coming academic year.

Under the terms of the fellowship, Pasto will spend the year surveying the field of organic chemistry and evaluating the curriculum and projects current at Notre Dame. Stanford has one of the top chemistry departments in the country, he explained, and is near several other major universities.

Pasto is particularly interested in researching the areas of biochemistry and organo-metallics, the study of organic molecules containing metal ions. His fellowship will coincide with a sabbatical leave from Notre Dame.
To engender respect

The ten students who blocked the door to the Dow Recruiter in November were suspended before Christmas vacation. Father Riehle's action to reduce the sentences all to the same level was wise in many respects.

The ten were disrupting the normal operations of the university and were not willing to move from the doorway of their own accord. When threatened with the possibility of suspension some still stayed on and would not even move when faced with the possibility of expulsion. Why? Possibly because they were willing to risk both for the sake of their beliefs. But in all likelihood, though this is pure conjecture, some were not willing to move because they did not really believe that the university was going to follow through on its policy and expel them. They had seen university regulations go unenforced for too long — as had many others.

When Harvard had a building taken over by protesting Blacks last month the protestors left after they were told that they would be expelled if they didn't. The same policy as Notre Dame, though probably not quite as publicized and not quite as far a bastion of liberalism. The students left the building of their own accord. Why, because they did not feel their cause to be just? Probably not — but because they had respect for the university they were dealing with and for Father's word of its spokesman. They knew that if Harvard threatened to expel them, it probably would.

Respect for an educational institution and for its policy is developed in a number of ways. The first is by being consistent. It can not state one thing publicly and do another privately. This has been one of Notre Dame's major shortcomings. A lot of times its policies have not even meant much to the men who had formulated them.

It is in this respect that Father Riehle's action was wise. If the university is to be believed, if its word is to be respected then it had to enforce its policy on demonstrations.

But having one's word respected and being respected as an institution are two quite different things. If a university is not responsive to the needs of the student, if it is not willing to talk with him, or waits until forced to do so, then the chances of it engendering the respect of all its students are very slim.

This is another of Notre Dame's failings. The question of university complicity was not talked about before the Dow protest in November. It has not been talked about seriously since then. The ten students presented a 14 page "defense" outlining their feelings on the issue. What administration had made a comment on it?

Serious talk about the issue of university complicity would probably do more to create an "atmosphere in which productive dialogue about the meaning of academic community and a "Christian community" can take place than did Father's act of clemency. It is time now for the university to make its first move toward creating a community here, if that is what it is to be called.

The University Forum, the "body representing every group that is a part of this place" should meet soon to discuss the issue of university complicity. It should meet before Dow and CIA come back to recruit this year. The university must act if the word "respect" is to mean anything more than the belief that the university will stick to its word and expel students who disrupt the "normal operations" of this place.
by Dave Lanumers

The community has been blessed with a new and unique publication, Ictus magazine. It is an effort that is sponsored by the Program for the Study and Practice of the Non-Violent Resistance Movement.

The magazine, 2000 free copies of which were distributed today, has an interesting history. Mario Corradi, presently studying non-violence at Yale, last spring taught a philosophy course here that included John O'Reilly, Denis Lundy, and Michael Forney. Instead of writing term papers, the three put together a makeshift magazine, which this fall has been expanded, refined, and most importantly, printed and distributed. It is a voice of the non-violence program, but not yet involved with those people, and not yet interested in the dirty words, pictures, or jokes, though it hopes to attract contributors, discussers, and mostly, I guess, readers.

Ictus is not Playboy. It is modest but provocative. It is not a book for those who are uncomfortable with dirty words, pictures, or jokes, though it has some fine pictures. The authors, like all those having teaching or research, reach across the pages and slap my face with their thoughts, their challenges, their indictments, their none-too-gentle remedies, their monotone with the monotone of violation that is choking our society.

For instance Denis Lundy is somehow speaking to me, to us, when he says, "I am conscious, but the weight of the globe is on my head and as of yet I have only run away." His article, "Money Talks, Nobody Walks" rambles a bit, but his Christianity, Kierkegaard, and the "power structure" into perspective.

Michael Forney, another student contribu-

Sain ts perform tonight

"The Company of Wayward Saints", the National Traveling Players of the Notre Dame Saint Marin Theatre, will perform this week at the South Bend Art Association. The company has toured throughout the eastern and mid-western United States, with most recent perfor-

Film today

"Interegnum," a filmstrip of satire drawings by George Cruz, will be shown today in the Art Gallery at 1:15 and 3 p.m. The showing is sponsored by the Art Gallery and the public is invited.

Four horsesmen? Hell, we got better's fifteen right here. Besides, none o' them carry the American flag, or even gets to wear a cowboy hat and a pointy star badge.
Desegregation runs into parental obstacles

JACKSON, Miss. (UP) - Angry white parents in the tiny town of Petal, Mississippi, defiantly refused yesterday to transfer their children to a Negro school in keeping with the U.S. Supreme Court's "desegregate now" mandate.

Resentment against the court's sweeping order for total and immediate desegregation of 30 of Mississippi's 148 school districts boiled into the open for the first time when the parents of 280 youngsters assigned to a black school shouted down the superintendent of the Forrest County school district and poured back into the children's old white classrooms.

Chanting "hell no, we won't go," they sent empty buses to the black school where 100 Negroes were left without white classmates.

Notre Dame named in top ten programs

The University of Notre Dame is among the nation's top ten universities in terms of commitments made to capital gifts programs, according to a report of the American Association of Fund-Raising Counsel, Inc.

The association surveyed 122 college and university capital gifts programs of $10 million and more, and Notre Dame was listed 10th with commitments of $46.4 million towards its $52 million "Summa" program goal. (The "Summa" campaign total has since grown a half-million dollars to $46.9 or 99.7 percent of the goal.)

Among other institutions in the "top ten" were the University of Chicago, which led all universities with $160.5 million reported at the time of the survey, and the University of Southern California. Columbia, University of Northwestern University, the University of Pennsylvania, Duke University, Washington University (St. Louis, Mo.), Syracuse University, Iowa and Western Reserve Medical Center.

The association reported that more than $4.53 billion is being sought in the 122 capital gifts campaigns and that commitments totaled $2.40 billion in November.

Notre Dame in Spring plans

The University of Notre Dame is among the nation's top universities in terms of commitments made to capital gifts programs, according to a report of the American Association of Fund-Raising Counsel, Inc.

The association surveyed 122 college and university capital gift programs of $10 million and more, and Notre Dame was listed 10th with commitments of $46.4 million towards its $52 million "Summa" program goal. (The "Summa" campaign total has since grown a half-million dollars to $46.9 or 99.7 percent of the goal.)

Among other institutions in the "top ten" were the University of Chicago, which led all universities with $160.5 million reported at the time of the survey, and the University of Southern California. Columbia, University of Northwestern University, the University of Pennsylvania, Duke University, Washington University (St. Louis, Mo.), Syracuse University, Iowa and Western Reserve Medical Center.

The association reported that more than $4.53 billion is being sought in the 122 capital gifts campaigns and that commitments totaled $2.40 billion in November.

Notre Dame in Spring plans

The University of Notre Dame is among the nation's top universities in terms of commitments made to capital gifts programs, according to a report of the American Association of Fund-Raising Counsel, Inc.

The association surveyed 122 college and university capital gifts programs of $10 million and more, and Notre Dame was listed 10th with commitments of $46.4 million towards its $52 million "Summa" program goal. (The "Summa" campaign total has since grown a half-million dollars to $46.9 or 99.7 percent of the goal.)

Among other institutions in the "top ten" were the University of Chicago, which led all universities with $160.5 million reported at the time of the survey, and the University of Southern California. Columbia, University of Northwestern University, the University of Pennsylvania, Duke University, Washington University (St. Louis, Mo.), Syracuse University, Iowa and Western Reserve Medical Center.

The association reported that more than $4.53 billion is being sought in the 122 capital gifts campaigns and that commitments totaled $2.40 billion in November.

Notre Dame in Spring plans

The University of Notre Dame is among the nation's top universities in terms of commitments made to capital gifts programs, according to a report of the American Association of Fund-Raising Counsel, Inc.

The association surveyed 122 college and university capital gifts programs of $10 million and more, and Notre Dame was listed 10th with commitments of $46.4 million towards its $52 million "Summa" program goal. (The "Summa" campaign total has since grown a half-million dollars to $46.9 or 99.7 percent of the goal.)

Among other institutions in the "top ten" were the University of Chicago, which led all universities with $160.5 million reported at the time of the survey, and the University of Southern California. Columbia, University of Northwestern University, the University of Pennsylvania, Duke University, Washington University (St. Louis, Mo.), Syracuse University, Iowa and Western Reserve Medical Center.

The association reported that more than $4.53 billion is being sought in the 122 capital gifts campaigns and that commitments totaled $2.40 billion in November.
The ‘Why’ of the ‘Notre Dame Ten’

This is the first in a series of articles which will report parts of the story that the ‘Notre Dame Ten’ offered at their trial before Christmas. Although the trial is over, as is the present day, it is a number of points which they felt were overlooked by the press. We would appreciate hearing your reactions to them as we are sure the ten and the rest of the community would.

Our actions on November 18 were necessitated by the political position assumed and steadily maintained by the University of Notre Dame Administration. In the following we will try to discuss that position, the rules that define it, and its relation to the University as an academic community. It should become clear that the situation which we describe is untenable, generally applicable to the American University today and is not peculiar to the University of Notre Dame, although there are of course special circumstances in the position here.

The Political Stance of the University

1. It is important to realize that the origins of the current imbroglio lie in the long history of the University of Notre Dame. Now it is often argued that universities do not — and should not — take political positions; but that universities, as significant institutions in our society, cannot avoid having a political effect. In recognition of this fact, church groups and others in other institutions are engaged in morally acceptable activities, and should not — take political positions: that they are “neutral” on political questions. And the position assumed by the University Administration has been that the University — the stance we refer to — is the scholastic maxim — the mind and conscience of society, and both can only detract.

2. Now the point of these examples is to show that the University acts in a political fashion and manifests a coherent political position. And the position that the University Administration has chosen by its actions is to affirm the structures and assumptions — indeed, the very institutions (such as the Dow Chemical Company and the Central Intelligence Agency) which are responsible for torturous repression and had hung the flag represents the University to the vicious political ideology of which we are a part for the sake of good order in the community; but there is as surely a point where the institution is so corrupted, so turned evil, that even reconciliation, even a substitute for such order, is no longer possible. Political positions would, indeed, be symbolic of such states of affairs. We are all haunted by the spectre of the “good Germans.”

3. The placement interviews of Dow and the CIA are therefore merely symbols of this political stance of the University — the stance we refer to when we speak of “University complicity.” But these are indeed symbols “which communicate what they signify” — the subservience of the University to a vicious political and economic system. We therefore find them intolerable to the extent that we find that subservience intolerable.

4. Now it is surely incumbent on all of us to put up with evils in an institution of which we are a part for the sake of good order in the community. But there is as surely a point where the institution is so corrupted, so turned evil, that even reconciliation, even a substitute for such order, is no longer possible. Political positions would, indeed, be symbolic of such states of affairs. We are all haunted by the spectre of the “good Germans.”

5. And is it so surprising that the perversion of the University to the service of these ends, etc.), as Gordon Zahn has pointed out. This war, as well as the other items mentioned above, is not an unhappy accident or a “terrible mistake”: it is a logical outgrowth of the political and economic system represented by Dow and CIA. And in stead of exercising a critical function over this system, this university chooses to cooperate with and even avidly seek favors from that system!

6. The placement interviews of Dow and the CIA are therefore merely symbols of this political stance of the University — the stance we refer to when we speak of “University complicity.” But these are indeed symbols “which communicate what they signify” — the subservience of the University to a vicious political and economic system. We therefore find them intolerable to the extent that we find that subservience intolerable.

7. Now the point of these examples is to show that the University acts in a political fashion and manifests a coherent political position. And the position that the University Administration has chosen by its actions is to affirm the structures and assumptions — indeed, the very institutions (such as the Dow Chemical Company and the Central Intelligence Agency) which are responsible for torturous repression and had hung the flag represents the University to the vicious political ideology of which we are a part for the sake of good order in the community; but there is as surely a point where the institution is so corrupted, so turned evil, that even reconciliation, even a substitute for such order, is no longer possible. Political positions would, indeed, be symbolic of such states of affairs. We are all haunted by the spectre of the “good Germans.”
to an amazing 59-point second half and a 91-76 win over Fordham last in the Conv. The vi­ ctry before 6,757 celebrating fans upped ND’s re­cord to

The game began in slow motion and never looked as threatening as the titular Irish shooting wore down Fordham’s low-paced at­ta­ck. A great play by Carr finally bumped the score to 89-67 at 11:42. Fordham suddenly went cold, shot and committed several turnovers. Sal Cartell and Charley Yelverton good on rebound shots
then Jones laid in a great
down from Tom Sinnott making it

The Play-of-the-Year in pro football was the work of the Dallas Rams. Their slow-paced attack with three fists and the Irish
8-4. The Rams’ slow­paced attack, under the guidance of ND’s first lead. Dis­ bolishing the 23-22
smaller Rams began to assert themselves as the "Irish" outscored them 26-22 in the first period points, but canned seven straight shots after intermission and finished with 29.

The ten-minute mark saw two new developments: Fordham center Muller bumped the Irish with three fists and the Irish
up with 13 counters.

The Rams’ slow-paced
attack with three fists and the Irish
up with 13 counters.

The nine-point lead now nine and 11 points respect­ively. Jones kept the Irish with 13 counters.

Jack Meehan and Hinga lay-ups at 4:07 for the maximum lead

The shooting mirrored the result, completely reversing the first half. The Rams’ smaller than Ford­ mom only 40-14 shots during the final period, finishing at 35.7%,

16.7% and 52.3% for the night.

A great play by Carr finally bumping the score to 89-67 at 11:42. Fordham suddenly went
cold, shot and committed several turnovers. Sal Cartell and Charley Yelverton good on rebound shots
then Jones laid in a great
down from Tom Sinnott making it right bouncer, show that nasty bunch, the 60’s the door. And officials, and those of the Los Angeles Times.

The Breakdown
The breakdown, with first
place finishers as:
1. E.C. Roosevelt (17)
2. Seymour (2)
169 votes.

The Breakdown
The breakdown, with first
place finishers as:
1. E.C. Roosevelt (17)
2. Seymour (2)
169 votes.

The Breakdown
The breakdown, with first
place finishers as:
1. E.C. Roosevelt (17)
2. Seymour (2)
169 votes.

The Breakdown
The breakdown, with first
place finishers as:
1. E.C. Roosevelt (17)
2. Seymour (2)
169 votes.

The Breakdown
The breakdown, with first
place finishers as:
1. E.C. Roosevelt (17)
2. Seymour (2)
169 votes.