SLC to recommend parietal change

by Bill Carter

The Student Life Council unanimously passed all three resolutions proposed in the report of the Committee on Campus Security at last night's meeting. The Council also agreed to assign to the Hall Life Board the task of drawing up preliminary recommendations for changes in the present parietal system.

The meeting opened with a challenge by Rev. James Kieble, Dean of Students, against the seating of student representatives. Ed Roickle on the grounds that Roickle had been suspended in connection with the Dow-CIA protest and thus forfeited his position on the Council. Student Body President Phil McKenna immediately moved that Roickle be allowed to remain at the meeting as a speaking member, though the Council regulations demanded that he surrender his voting rights. The motion passed overwhelmingly.

The first order of business concerned the upcoming recommendations to be made by the SLC to the Board of Trustees on the future of the parietal system.

GSU Pres. urges yes vote
by Bro. Patrick Carney

"I cannot stress enough the importance of graduate students voting yes on the coming referendum," explained GSU President James King, as he discussed the current activities.

The point in question is a referendum ballot which will be sent to each graduate student registra­tion of one dollar per semester in order to secure funds for the Graduate Student Union activities.

Previously it had been proposed that this funding be gained as a fee to be paid at registration. This would enable those students who have grants covering tuition and fees to have the funding organization.

However, in order for the university to do this, the GSU must have the motion approved by referendum by at least 75% of the graduate students of the university.

In order to assure that everyone's vote would be counted, the representatives voted on Friday to word the ballot so that if it is not returned, it will count as a yes vote.

In the debate on the point, it was felt that those who opposed the move would take the time to fill it out and return it to their representative. The general opinion of the representatives seemed to be that the majority of their constituents would favor the action.

Other actions which came out of Friday's meeting included the committee's recommendation to last night's meeting of the Student Life Committee of the Faculty Senate.

The GSU also voted to petition the Board of Trustees for full representation on the Student Life Council.

In a related matter, the committee which traveled to Chicago to meet with some of the Trustees, gave a favorable report on their meeting. The members explained that they felt that the Trustees were very interested in the problems of the graduate students but that up until this time, a communication problem had blocked the exchange of information. King came away from the meeting feeling that the graduate students will receive a higher priority in the future.

Since the Rev. John Walsh, Vice-President for Academic Affairs, has been out of town, the president has been unable to find out how much money would be involved in the raise previously reported in the Observer. It is hoped that a definite announcement on this matter will be made at Friday's meeting.

Also on the agenda for that meeting will be a discussion of the food and prices in the cafe.

The University had been working on this idea for some time but as yet had found only six students to sign up for the job.

The committee's resolution recommended that the University take immediate steps toward solution of the vandalism problem. Fr. Whelan said the reprisals had to be on protecting the property of the students.

The third resolution, calling for a hired investigator to follow up cases of crimes reported to the security office, was supported by the committee's rationale that the work load was heavy.

SAF outlines plans

by Dan O'Donnell

Rob Bartolletti, chairman of the Student Arts Festival, last night outlined plans for securing talent and money to ensure the success of the program, set for the first week of March.

At the meeting committee members were named and ideas sought out as to the best way to channel student talents into the proper areas. Bartolletti emphasized the fact that the Festival is an experiment in creativity and not a showcase for professional artists.

"We need people who are willing to put themselves into the project, to bring whatever creative skills they may have and utilize them. We need artists, poets and people interested in drama, but we also need anyone who is interested in reshaping the arts here at Notre Dame and St. Mary's, and is willing to lend a helping hand," said Bartolletti.

Bartolletti pointed out that many students were staying here over spring break and that this was the ideal time to put in motion. Bartolletti said, "This break is the perfect time to begin to experience the University Arts Council. Everyone has plenty of time and practically no work."

The rejuvenation of the field house is scheduled to begin over the break along with further preparations for the Festival.

Chairmen named at last night's meeting included:

Musics - Philippe Menard, Reggie Cheong-Leen, Der Bacon

Drama - Steve Reitz

Art - Kevin Booker

Poetry - Phil Perry

Dance - Judy deVlieger

Cinema - Len Swayer

Audio - Joe Peter

Visual - Bob Mosely

Persons interested in any one of these areas should contact either the chairman of that committee or Rob Bartolletti before February 10th. This does not mean that the individual paint­ings, poems, etc. will be completed by that time; only that the committee be made aware of the student's interest. Bartolletti explained.

Chairman of the University Arts Council, Tom Krook, nted a good deal of "busy work." Last would be needed in the field­house, hopefully before second semester, and along with Bartolletti urged students to stay on campus over the break to in­crease the possibility of helping out.

Due to exams, the next formal meeting of the IAC will not be held until Feb. 5, at 8 p.m., in the Boxing Room of the Old Fieldhouse.
Military collapse causes end of Biafran war

By Uniied Press International
Biafra, cut off from the rest of the world by federal Nigerian troops, surrendered yesterday to end the Civil War which has cost about 2 million lives. Federal Nigerian leader Yakubu Gowon proclaimed a truce and offered amnesty to all rebel forces.

"The turning point moment - the moment of victory," Gen. Gowon said in a midnight broadcast. "...We have been offered amnesty to all rebel forces."

Gowon said Biafran troops should obey the call of Maj. Gen. Philip Effiong, who capitulated Monday afternoon on behalf of Biafra, to surrender to federal forces all along the fronts. Gowon said federal troops would not shoot unless they encountered resistance.

The Lagos radio announcement confirmed from the viewpoint of the various federal commanders that they had already been conceded by Biafran leaders that the Nigerian Military was near the end of its battlefield phase.

An internationally financed campaign against the starvation that plagued millions of Biafrans was ended by Monday night, however, when a greased pig chase and the giving of food and medical supplies sent to Biafra, following telephone consultations with British Prime Minister Harold Wilson. Naton had promised additional food and medical supplies sent to Biafra, following telephone consultations with British Prime Minister Harold Wilson.

Crime takes downward tilt

It seems that the recent streak of unpleasant weather has dampened the spirit of campus workers. Director of Security, Arthur Pear reveals that there were only a few incidents during the last weekend. Among the few disturbances that did occur, there were two false fire alarms. There was a real fire alarm turned in Monday evening, however, when a steam pipe burst in the Main Administration Building.

An incident revealed by Pear was the theft of two fire extinguishers from the Health Center. The extinguishers were recently found near the Chemistry building.

Girls like co-exchange want it expanded

The results of the questionnaire--distributed to SMC students last week--have revealed that approximately three-fourths of those responding would favor complete merger with Notre Dame, reestablishing the identity of the college.

The questionnaire was compiled by a group of SMC students in conjunction with the Co-Education Committee of Notre Dame's Research and Development Committee as an attempt to ascertain student sentiment on the subject.

In the final item on the agenda, Louis Thornton in an attempt to ascertain student sentiment on the subject.

The hearing is the first such hearing of the topic by a federal agency in the United States and Britain joined the United States and Britain joined the United States and Britain.

The commission will use the hearing to help to expand an exchange program, which has supplied much of the aid for Biafra During the civil war and has agreed to provide support for the Caritas International Catholic Charity Organization to help to establish a government in exile.

SUAC offers speaker choice

Stressing the Student Union Academic Commission's policy of bringing programs which will interest the majority of students, the University of Washington has expressed a desire for all students to show their support for the programs possibilities for the second semester.

The University of Washington's Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas and noted anti-war speaker Dr. Benjamin Spock are guests.

Large extent have no difficulty in moving to the suburbs, but for Blacks and many poor Whites, the inner city has become a trap.

The hearing will attempt to find out if and where Blacks are being moved out of the economic growth of suburbia, as well as to provide the information to make suggestions for new law or administrative action.

The uncertain status of this year's Mardi Gras has not been clarified by any substantial degree over the weekend, according to the chairman of the event, Dewan Dewan.

At the situation grows more uncertain, Dewan issued another plea to the student body to begin selling chance books. He reported that there had been an exceptionally closed response over the weekend, but that prospects for reaching the anticipated goal of $30,000 are still dim.

The fate of the event will be decided shortly after final exams. At that time Dewan believes a final goal of $10,000 would be realistic. He hopes to keep Mardi Gras going this year, although it would seriously impair prospects for next year.

When questioned about the future of Mardi Gras, Dewan reiterated that the Student Union Board of Directors, composed of representatives of the academic administration, and of Student Government would make the final decision. "We're advised to curtail this year's Mardi Gras, but we fought against it," Dewan reflected. \(2000\) reports were put on a trial basis to be re-evaluated upon the success of the November elections.

Concerning the apathy threatened by the mardi gras, Dewan did say, "We can only point to the apparent lack of student interest.

In an attempt to stimulate interest, Dewan met with his hall representatives on Sunday night to let them know the seriousness of the problem, and to discuss new publicity angles. "We're trying to relax the necessary foraction to the students through their representatives," Dewan said.

Dewan had also distributed a large brochure on the Mardi Gras, discussing both the event and the raffle, is being readied for circulation.

"As far as I know that several athletic and geographical clubs are going throughout South America to drum up interest. Commissions for their sales will be awarded to the various club treasurers. Dewan stressed that if a substantial portion of the goal has not been reached by the first week of December, then prospects would look very bleak. "It is possible that we may have to cancel the event completely. Although, this is the last thing we want to do.

Noting the negligible amount of social activity in the winter, Dewan has stressed that Mardi Gras provides a welcome escape from classroom monotony. "If people still feel enthusiasm for Mardi Gras, then we will be able to point out that smaller events sponsored by the Student Union would fare just as poorly," he concluded.

Humphrey thinks troops will be out

St. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) - Hubert Humphrey believes most of all American combat troops can be brought home from South Vietnam by the end of the year and he is convinced President Nixon plans to do just that - probably in time for the November elections.

The former vice president also expects President Nixon to announce the withdrawal of 50,000 to 85,000 U.S. troops, most of them non-combat, by the end of March.

Humphrey, the Democratic presidential candidate in 1968, made the prediction in a wide-ranging interview with the Vietnam at MacAlister College. Humphrey, now a part-time political science professor at MacAlister and still titular head of the presidential campaign, "As I see it now, I would think most of our combat troops would be out there in 1970 and maybe before the end of 1970. I would predict that a substantial number of logistic forces would be out of Vietnam by May.

"I don't want to say it meets with the election but it may very well eventually do and this will have some political effects.

Humphrey said he was warned both Democratic and Republican representatives of an impending withdrawal by the U.S. military. They would be putting themselves out on a political limb that may be off sooner or later.

"I've been very frank with my aides on this matter. To put it bluntly, I think those that have been chewing at the hollowest and the most right now are going to look kind of funny. That's my view.

Setting in a long-ended, thick leather chair, Humphrey looked stock with political science ex­aminers and just graduated, Humphrey pondered another question. How do you think historians will view America's decision to become involved in Vietnam? "I don't know," he said. "Maybe history will say we were wrong, that we never should have been there.

"But it is my view that we made the only decision that we could have made at the time, that it was a responsible decision in light of the evidence.

"The one thing that hardly anybody writes about or talks about these days is what the situation in Southeast Asia was in 1961 or 1962. "And," he said, "that was the view of President Kennedy, President Johnson and all their advisers.

African has different notion of freedom

His concept contains factors

by Mike Pavlin

Last night at 8:00 PM in St. Mary's Carroll Hall, Professor Terrance Ranger spoke on "Freedom and Authority in East Africa." Professor Ranger, who took his Ph.D. at Oxford in History, taught for seven years in Rhodesia, and later continued educational projects in Tanzania.

Professor Ranger, who was deposed from Rhodesia because of his active support of African nationalism, outlined concepts of freedom prevalent during several different periods of East African history.

In 19th century, pre-colonial Tanzania, there existed three distinct notions of freedom. Ranger emphasized that these were not the same as the concepts intro-

The SLC security resolutions

The Student Life Council adopted three resolutions yesterday dealing with the security situation on campus. If the university acts on them they should help improve the security department on campus.

The first proposal asks for a complete investigation of the security department by an outside firm. The SLC hopes that the firm will be able to suggest areas in which improvements are needed, and, more importantly, ways in which the improvements could yet be made. The Vice-President’s Council has already asked a New England based consulting firm to do a preliminary study of the situation. The second SLC resolution asks that immediate steps be taken to improve the patrolling of the parking lots. Of course the consulting firm will probably come up with a detailed plan on how the parking lot situation should be handled. In the meantime, though, the SLC is looking for stop-gap measures including increased patrolling. We understand that Mr. Pears and the Security Department have already increased the patrols in the lots. We feel that this shows a sincere interest in the Security Department’s part in tackling the growing problem and to protect student interests. We feel that Mr. Pears and the Department should be commended on that aspect. However, we do not feel that the process should stop there. No doubt greater efforts could yet be made.

The third proposal deals directly with the follow-up and apprehension of individuals who commit crimes. Presently the Security Department does not follow up many of the incidents that occur. According to the SLC investigation, Mr. Pears is the only member of the staff who has the qualifications to do such work. Mr. Pears’ work load at the time, though, does not allow him the opportunity to conduct such investigations.

As early as March of 1968, Pears had suggested that the university hire an investigator to follow up on crimes. The university did not heed his suggestion, apparently for lack of funds. The SLC recommendation suggests that the university hire an investigator for a year until the consulting firm provides some permanent opinion on the matter.

We agree on the need for such an individual and suggest that the university look for one immediately.

We feel that the SLC’S actions yesterday are vital first steps, and we emphasize first towards improving security on campus. We realize that the entire process is not a simple matter. We commend the Department of Security for its cooperation with groups that are trying to improve the situation and ask that the Council of Vice-Presidents make every effort to aid the Department by authorizing the funds needed to make necessary changes.
Ezra Pound meets Liza Minnelli in a wacky, Rabelaisian comp

by John Stupp

Well, not quite. But Ezra Pound did go to Hamilton College, and that's good enough for me. Besides Liza Minnelli did mention at one point during the film that she was indeed a literature nut . . . well, you can see all the obvious connections.

The Impotent Cuckoo. Director Pakula exercised far too much control of the film from the very beginning (which is a good place to start) - a fact which caused me to become violently dyspeptic before the entire mess. Our two young lovers were caught in every conceivable angle and from every possible viewpoint from one foot of cliché to another. Unreliable panning fixation. His self-conscious shot at the beginning remained unapologetic from a baffled to a befuddled mind - five different angles of the same basic scene - totally incoherent and redundant. If this wasn't enough to make you sick, the soundtrack was guaranteed to do the trick.

The re-creating of the work (let's call it so) sentimental slip kept cropping up and ruining scenes which could have withstood their own weight without music. Pakula seemed to be paying deference to Mike Nichols - though in Nichols's case, he had a song whose words were unimportant (Shorcarborough Faire), and 2) he had a movie which fit the song. Technically the film was total bone. Some of the scenes in the trees with the two lovers reaching to touch fingers reminded one of theistine Chapel. The Roman verum was filmed in the buff, however.

The cliché of college life was all too frightening since it bears such a remarkable resemblance to the sterility and incoherence of Notre Dame. I'm sure no one missed this connection. You've got to hand it to Pakula, once he found the cliché's he wouldn't let go. Instead, he was content to watch them grow and multiply like an aggravating colony of bark beetles. First a beach scene (He's been watching TV), then a roommate scene, enshrouded in a haze of symbols to signify any symbol hunter.

Liza Minnelli must have been created to portray roles of this type, is so God - please send her back. In Charlie Bubbles she was once again the student/secretary/beauty/bubbling young insecure hedonistic type - don't you all wish she was really that happy? Don't you wish you were a fag and could muscle in on Wendell Burton? Don't you wish I would end this review?

Solve problems...

abandon programs

WASHINGTON (UPI) - It has gradually become clear that many of the problems besetting this nation simply are not yielding to conventional measures of control or elimination. If alienation continues despite credit restrictions; neither military nor diplomatic pressure produces a Vietnam settlement; both control methods fail to halt the population explosion; etc. But don't get discouraged, I think I can now see the light at the end of the tunnel.

New approaches to these hard core problems are obviously required, and one has just turned up that looks extremely promising. It is also almost breathtakingly simple.

What we do is abandon the various national programs that had been created to handle the problems and deal with them through collective bargaining.

In other words, if other words are needed, we make the solutions to the problems a part of the fringe benefits in labor contracts.

Credit for the basic thinking in this field goes to Walter P. Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers, who has announced that he will make pollution an issue in contract negotiations this year.

If other unions now follow the UAW's lead, the major talking points in labor management relations will be wages, pensions, working conditions and breathing. But this, as I see it, is only the first step. The bargaining table would easily be expanded to include other social, economic and environmental hang-ups that have trusted traditional remedies.

The pluimers' union, for example, might demand a 15 per cent wage increase, a $1 additional contribution to the pension fund, a 25-hour work week and the withdrawal of 100,000 more troops from Vietnam.

The pluimers' union, in turn, might demand higher pay, a shorter work week, extra vacation time and a 27% reduction in the crime rate.

And then the Teamsters' Union could strike for more care for the environment.

As to whether American business and industry would be able to meet these demands remains to be seen. But it should make life a lot more interesting at the Federal Mediation Service.

Playing Standard American South opens One No Trump. North with 1 1

Three. On the opening lead of the Heart King, South can count 3 spades, one heart, one club, and at least four diamonds for 9 tricks.

One problem could materialize if West had more than four hearts and an entry. If so, he could enter his hand with either the King of clubs or the Queen of diamonds and score four heart tricks, the contract would be set one. If one avoids messing with the club suit, the diamonds can be played to insure that West does not obtain the lead.

First, South holds up on the Ace of hearts until the third round, thus eliminating hearts from the East hand. He now plays the Diamond Ace, followed by the Jack. When West shows out with the 9 of clubs, East is allowed to hold the trick. He can do no better than return a club in response to his partner's signal. Playing safe, South disdains the finesse, either the Club Ace and leads to the Diamond King. Having been squeezed out of his heart winners, on North's last diamond West must get down to two cards by pitching either the 8 of spades, or the King of clubs, thus enabling South to score an overtrick.

Little action on draft in '70

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Words upon words will be spoken in Congress about reforming the draft during 1970, but the odds strongly suggest that all the talk won't lead to action until 1971.

So much pressure built up in the past year that legislative efforts of the Selective Service System agreed to hold hearings this year even though the draft law doesn't expire until June 30, 1971.

While the congressmen are taking testimony from witnesses in and out of government there will be these other bills. Citizen groups are also compiling restrictions; neither military nor diplomatic pressure produces a Vietnam settlement; new birth control methods fail to halt the population explosion; etc.

As to whether American business and industry would be able to meet these demands remains to be seen. But it should make life a lot more interesting at the Federal Mediation Service.
College Democrats prepare to aid candidates

by Cliff Wintrobe

The Observer Associate Editor

This is the second in a series of articles on campus political organizations.

The turning point of 1968 was followed by the relatively quiet political atmosphere which was marked only by the emergence of the "silent majority" as a political force in America. The frenzied activity of the political clubs on campus also slowed down accordingly in 1969 after the fall campaign of 1968. However, the mid-term test of 1970 did not produce the expected result.

Many local primaries are now being held on campus and the College Democrats clubs at Notre Dame and St. Mary's are both preparing to enter the political arena once again.

Observer Insight

Junior Dennis Sujdak, chairman of the ND College Democrats and Regional Director of the Indiana Federation of College Democrats, said his club has already been in contact with Senator Vance Hartke's office. Hartke is the second in a series from Indiana this year and canvassing for him and any other democratic seeking election to the U.S. House of Representatives, Hartke's campaign will be provided this spring.

Carol Handley, a junior and chairman of the St. Mary's College Democrats, indicated that her organization will work through the offices of Senator Hartke and incumbent 3rd District Indiana Congresswoman John Brademas of South Bend. Brademas is up for re-election.

South will rise?

Editor: To Mr. Wall:

I was both amused and disturbed at your recent traumatic confrontation with a prominently displayed Confederate flag. I had no idea that some people were so fearful of another Southern insurgence that they should want a flag as a piece of harmless cloth. It may interest you to know that I proudly display a Southern flag on the wall of my room, and I would certainly deny being termed narrow-minded, repressive, or any other adjective of equal nonsense.

The Confederate flag no longer represents the advocacy of slavery, nor Southern resentment of a hostile North. What it does represent, and I hope I will continue to represent, is the constant unity of the South, and the pride in her ability to overcome the privations of the Civil War. Further, I see no reason why students of a northern university should be criticized for taking pride in their home states.

I fear you are abnormally ignorant of the contemporary Southern mentality. We are not all racist-oriented and intellectually backward. Ironically, you speak of our narrowness in the same breath that you narrowly attempt to condemn our acts without knowing why we perform them. The South is not, nor ever was, a "society" with all the shadowy nuances of that term. Your prejudice is deplorable, and I trust it is not representative of the majority of Northerners.

Sincerely,

Stephen Hoffman

Krashna's dismissal

Editor: After reading about Dave Krashna’s dismissal from the Admissions Office’s team on minority recruitment I would like to comment. Last year I and Clifford Sims, a black junior, went to Dayton to recruit black students. Appointments were made with top ranking black juniors from the area high schools. Mr. John Goldrick of the Admissions Office did tell me that almost assuredly all of these top students would be admitted if they applied. He further told me that some type of financial aid would be given to any of the students who needed it. Through a member of the alumni club of Dayton this information reached the Dayton papers. The paper contained no false information but was hard to understand and accept by some hypocrites in Dayton and Notre Dame. There was fear of the Sims program and Notre Dame’s image suffering somewhat in Dayton because of the article and everyone got a tongue lashing from their superiors. As a result, someone, in a fit of anger which apparently hasn’t subsided, advised that particular alumnus that he wasn’t to have anything to do with any aspect of the Notre Dame “Organization.” It is this alumnus’ contact with Krashna that largely caused Dave’s dismissal. The whole thing did and does seem a childish personality conflict. Or else Notre Dame is only concerned with its public image and the money it draws. Either way, I’m sure that the black students here and those that might be here are not benefitting from this incident.

‘Ten’ and the draft

Editor: I just want to share with the rest of our little community the knowledge of the marvelous efficiency with which our administration operates. It is really a credit to their expediency procedures that they notified the respective draft boards of the ten suspended students within six days, particularly when one considers that they had thirty days in which to do so. I am sure that Fr. Roickle and the Office of Academic Affairs will be pleased to learn that their zeal for procedural quickness has not gone unnoticed by the various local boards involved. In fact, just today I received a lucky number ten and the draft. The whole thing did and was notified whether or not I was readmitted for next semester (Admissions says at least one more week), I received a bill for next semester’s tuition. Really, I must protest! We wouldn’t want it thought that the only thing which takes precedence over Notre Dame’s zeal for administrative efficiency is an inordinate desire for money.

Yours in Notre Dame,
Ed Roickle

When are they going to legalize pot?

A lot of people these days are going around saying it’s only a matter of months until Acapulco Gold is available over the counter in menthol and king-size lengths. Which is an indication of how little people know about marihuana. The real fact of the matter is that marihuana is a drug. Like all drugs, it affects the human body and the human brain. Like all drugs, it has side effects.

Today, research scientists are studying marihuana’s effects on the brain, the nervous system, on chromosomes, and on various organs of the body. They’re trying to find out what happens with long term use.

Maybe it will turn out that there’s no reason for it to be illegal. But nobody can be sure until all the facts are in. And until they all are, it’s a pretty bum risk.

Las Angeles (UPI) Billy Casper, perhaps a not so dramatic way to put it, but the $1,001,924.48 he won in the exclusive million dollar circle will be, in the ultra exclusive million dollar circle to be sure, is in the ultra exclusive million dollar circle today.

Casper is not given to excessive boasting, but the evidence is there that he has played golf when he was 4 years old.

He'd be 39 June 24 that made him eligible for the only major for which he qualified, the San Diego, Calif., product, Casper caddied in 1954 and won his first tournament, the Lubbock Open, in 1956. He won his fourth tournament in the Los Angeles Open and the $20,000 first prize paid him by the company of just one other pro—Arnold Palmer.

Wins Title Second Time

Casper, cool as could be in a red suit at the Rancho Park course, sank a birdie putt of about five feet on the first hole of a sudden death playoff for the 24 year old Hale Irwin to win his second L.A. Open title. His earnings now total $1,001,924.48. It was his third victory in a row for 40th place Sunday, winning $390 which upped his career earnings to $1,121,946.17.

Success soared in the final round with the help of the 26 year old Irwin, in his second year as a professional, who never even led a tournament before.

He and Casper started their final-hole playoff in the 150 hole tournament with a tie score of 72 for second place. Their total earnings last year were only $18,500. He never finished better than 10th before.

Sinks Putt For Birdie

Casper coolly sank his putt for the birdie that gave him the title. Irwin won $11,400 for second place. His total earnings last year were only $18,500. He never finished better than 10th before.

Both magazines said the NCAA's decision was motivated by the desire to keep the game honest and ethical and problems with pro football, basketball and baseball.

The NCAA governing council dealt Florida State an additional two years of probation for recruiting violations in addition to a one year punishing in 1969. When the Florida State report was completed by the school.

Dave Nelson, chairmain of the Professional Relations Committee reported that a special three man panel was formed to try to persuade the American Basketball Association against signing up college players, as Detroit University's Spencer Haywood was reported to have offered to cover, him, as it was reported.

Safeties (chorus): "Stop in front and interrupt!"

Coach (turning white): "No, no, no! Do you realize what 70 million Americans at home watching will do at this instant? They will turn to each other and say 'See?' And don't you believe the papers? Now, what do you do is, put the ball down if you can. If you can't, you can't!"

Safeties: "But coach, we'll lose a game!"

Coach (swervy): "Tell me. Let me ask you something. Has this game been good to you? Does your wife have a mink coat, a station wagon? Are your liquor bills all paid? Do you want to spend your last two years of college playing football?

Quarterbacks (in unison): "Complete the pass for a touchdown."

Coach (pressing his fingers to his eyes and groaning): "No, no, no! Do you think ANYBODY will think that guy fell down accidentally? No, what you do is, go back and help him up. Never mind the football. Now, then, it's first down and 10 to go on their 18-yard line. What do you do?"

Quarterbacks: "Try a post pattern for a touch!"

Coach (hopping): "Darn! You kick a field goal! Did you lose a field goal?"

Quarterbacks: "On first down!"

Coach: "Well, if you want to win, you can run a couple of quarterback sneaks. But for no more than a yard or two. We want a field goal if we understand!"

Quarterbacks: "But, coach, we ALWAYS get six in that situation!"

Audience (struggling to keep his patience): "Gentlemen, look! The point spread is 13. If we win by more than 13 points, will anybody in the country swallow that? Now, gentlemen, the integrity of a whole industry is at stake in this game. It's up to you to protect it."

Team: "Coach, you mean the integrity of football?"

Audience (also knowing his business): "Yes, that's the integrity of football, character in a stripe, suit, smoking a cigarette, standing in a corner of the locker room. "No, gentlemen, I mean the integrity of something as simple as a touchdown. We can't afford to lose it.""

He also disclosed that the NCAA has had little success in getting the 14 NFL football teams compulsorily compensating coaches and other sports staff personnel for providing scouting reports.

He also noted that the NCAA will watch carefully the outcome of Curt Flood's lawsuit challenging pro baseball's reserve clause.

Texas plans No. 1 fete

Austin, Tex. (UPI) One thing you can say about the Texas Longhorns players who will walk into the Austm Memorial Auditorium Monday night is that they will wear a highly polished symbol of their selection as UPI's No. 1 rated team—all are champions.

But one especially stands out. It would be easier for the world to turn into the affair, a Western motif with 5,000 persons expected.

Fed Stearnman

Day.

It will be a fitting triumph to a triumphant season Monday night if Stearnman walks on cutlches with his teammates to accept the 1,000 point award by UPI National Sports Editor John G. Griffin.

The Longhorns also will be inducting the Gaylord Glenn Award, voted by the Football Writers Association of America as the outstanding football player in the Southwest. The Waco, Tex., Tribune Herald and immediate past president of the NCAA, will make that presentation.

New ORleans. The fourth annual Super Bowl game began on the Louisiana Superdome with a record crowd in attendance. The visiting Green Bay Packers, with the owner of the Rice saying (not under oath) that he was reasonable certain they were not loaded.

Commissioner of all football has come to forward to protest, he's not running a crooked wheel, that the deck isn't marked, and that all horses in this race will be trying, the public may be pardoned for wondering whether the game will heads on both sides, whether the players ought to be suit up or undicted.

They've moved this game from Los Angeles to Miami for New Orleans but maybe they should kick off in Sing Sing. A U.S. attorney in Michigan has raised the doubt whether quarterbacks are playing games of Curt Flood's lawsuit challenging pro baseball's reserve clause.
