Candidates launch SBP campaigns

Halls to be emphasized by Krashna and Winings

Candidates who see growing account of growing up in Harlem as one of most widely acclaimed books of last decade, and Tom Wolfe, who gave "poptualitarian" to the literary world, are the headline for the 1970 Sophomore Literary Festival April 12-16 on the Notre Dame campus.

The annual festival, organized by the student Senate and directed by chairman Bob Hall, will be keynoted by Theodore Schmitz, assistant professor of English at Sacramento State College.

"He who reads only one poet lives on the account of the poet, who reads on the account of his own poetry reading," Dennis Schmitz, assistant professor of English at Sacramento State College, is reading from his own poetry at Saint Mary's College, Notre Dame, Indiana, on Wednesday, March 4, 1970, at 8:00 p.m. at the Auditorium, Monroe Hall's Carroll Hall. It is open to the Madeleva Memorial Building March 4, 1970, at 8:00 p.m. in Carroll Hall. It is open to the public.

"The importance of the halls can't be underestimated in this campaign," Pohl said. "We don't want to point up any big organization; it's a matter of to the people elected. There is no political machine here. David has said the big organization surrounding Student Government elections in the past has failed to keep the government for answers to problems that should have come from the people. In the halls, the students have failed.

"David believes the students can analyze situations for themselves. He feels that if they act upon them, then the student government to get things done. Why it is the halls are so much part of his emphasis. He is supporting things like giving a large part of the active fee to the halls, and having some of those big-name speakers come to the halls, and having some of those big-name speakers come into the halls and dining halls for contact with all the students not only to itself," and of attaching excessive emphasis to greater issues, Murray called for the students to support the in-group during the campaign, and to ignore students general after the election.

"The people in the halls are going to be a great prom," remarked Pat Haffey, "why bother" attitude toward Student Government, but felt that President in the halls has a chance to do something, and the present Student Government of evolving into "an academic reform"

"Working for us and they are all willing to do the work because they believe in what Dave and Mark are trying to do for the students in this university," he said.

Pohl said the organization included Dave Schmidt as captain for the south quad, Steve Flann as captain for the north quad and Hall Presidents Chairman Tom Suddee as captain for Holy Cross and Carroll halls.

They will supervise the activities of the individual halls which are made up of a number of other students or hall leaders. Jerry O'Connor will be off-campus captain. Pohl said the captains would be in daily contact with Krashna and Winings over the phone from them of the members of the hall staff.

Reform demands student faculty, trustee drive

By way of summary and review, this final segment of the Chancellor-President position papers intends to reiterate those points which had led us to advocate a restructuring of Notre Dame's administration by the appointment of Father Theodore Hesburgh as Chancellor and Willis Nutting as President.

Our first consideration was the question of education. What is education? We have suggested that one's actual education at Notre Dame is very far from the ideal higher education. It is not simply student dissatisfaction over lack of good teachers that is at fault. Samueluel Eliot Morison's recent book, Let your schooling interfere with his education, is an intellectual nature of the problem. Today, course education (as Dr. Nutting contends in his Free City) has become (fragmented, "scholastic"), and needlessly painful for those who most want to learn.

We have suggested Dr. Nutting's plan for the Free City (Templegate, 1967, published by Notre Dame bookstores), which emphasizes a "formal dialogue" and an integration of all academic fields, is the far Notre Dame is from the ideal educational community.

The first issue, then, is how do we best educate the man himself? Our answer is that teachers must be students-learners living in a free city of the mind.

What is a University?

We have attempted to answer this question by comparing the ideal university and the real university. We suggested that "the curriculum of the university ought to be interesting, as judged by the students who are com­elled to follow it, and second, the government of the university ought to be fair, as judged by the faculty and students who are ruled by it. Notre Dame, as most universities, is not a community, but a corporation. It is on this issue that we find the need for a radical university restructuring.

As Dr. Nutting says, "the educational process is thoroughly and intrinsically wrong."

Administrative Schizophrenia?

Could Notre Dame have a better administrative structure? Few people close to the situation disagree that the answer to this question is "yes". The issue is over what the new structure will be.

Because "universities are split between their external functions and their internal necessities," we have found that Father Hesburgh has been burdened with too much responsibility for any one man.

The administrative schizophrenia, which tears our President away for one half of the school year to serve on nearly 30 boards and commissions, must be confronted as the Chancellor-President structure.

Chancellor-President structure?

The problem is not that Father Hesburgh has outlived his usefulness, but that his responsibilities, as he sees them, no longer correspond to the job of university President, namely: supervision and progress of the internal affairs of the campus itself.

Within this faculty structure, too, many demands on the person of the President make it impossible for him to fulfill that function.

Thus, we envision the establishment of a Chancellor-President system, splitting the present authority of the one President into two offices according to the already-existing split between the external and internal functions of the university.

Hesburgh-Nutting?

Assuming that we can make the necessary revisions in the by-laws of the university to allow for this structural change, why appoint Dr. Nutting President and Father Hesburgh Chancellor? Our reply is twofold.

First, the two men have shown outstanding ability to deal with the responsibilities the offices would entail. "Chancellor" Hesburgh possesses "a familiarity with both national and international commissions," he also posses "an intense rapport with the alumni.

In these areas Father Hesburgh has displayed both "skill and zeal." "President" Willis Nutting, on the other hand, has lived all of his life as an educator. That he is a teacher of discretion is an undeniable fact. (ask anyone who knows him). His capacity for communication and understanding may be without parallel in the University. And this ability, so much needed in the Presidency, would greatly benefit Notre Dame. Second, the two men, through their mutual dedication to the University of Notre Dame would be able to work in a way that would most benefit the University. The compatibility of these two is obvious after examining their lives.

What Do You Think?

It has been our hope that three position papers would serve as a catalyst to discussion, criticism, and action in regard to Notre Dame's administrative structure.

We are skeptical of the saying "the pen is mightier than the sword." It often takes an urgent and dramatic event to shake an educational institution into self-criticism.

That Notre Dame is a good place to be is borne witness to by each of us every day that we spend here: that Notre Dame can become a real community remains to be seen.

By remaining here at Notre Dame, each of us bears witness to the fact that Notre Dame is a good place to be. Yet, there are few among us who maintain that this same Notre Dame is a community. The urgency of the pen may not be clear, but the events of the future will probably continue to prove, (as those of the past few years) that Notre Dame is moving away from community.

Father Hesburgh and Dr. Nutting both champion the cause of community and dialogue. To keep this stand firm, we hope that each of us will ask that the Board of Trustees and the Notre Dame student body hold us to move in this direction. Reform is absolutely essential, now.

If you have any comments or if these position papers have inclined you to join us in your desire further clarification, please write to: Dr. Willis D. Nutting For President Headquarters, Box 813-SM, Notre Dame, Ind. 46556. Second class postage paid: Notre Dame, Ind., 46556.

Students plan 'Shamrocks for Dystrophy Day'

Notre Dame and St. Mary's students are preparing for an attack next week on muscular dystrophy, one of America's most dreaded and disabling diseases.

In response to a request by Tom Farrell, district representative of the muscular dystrophy association of America, the Notre Dame Student Council agreed two weeks ago to sponsor the fund drive, slated for Saturday, March 14.

Tony Scalore, Alumni Hall President, and sophomore Richard J. Wall, agreed to serve as co-chairman for the effort.

SPIND MADE ART CURATOR

Stephen Spino, a New York artist who has studied prints and drawings of the 19th century, has joined the Notre Dame staff as curator of the Art Gallery.

Spino holds a master's degree from Adelphi University, Garden City, N.Y., and has previously been associated with a New York art gallery.

"Above and bey ond the raising of funds, it is imperative that we offer as many students as possible a chance for involve­ment in a cause that is worthwhile and meaningful," Scalore promised. It is also important to move with the times and to meet the challenges of each era.

A Paulist is also the mediator of his age; he tries to bring together the extremes in today's world and the Church, the liberal and the moderate, the eternal and the temporal.

Next, he is very much an educator: he tries to bring to the minds of young students the message of St. Patrick's Day.

Tentative plans call for half captains to collect funds within the residence halls on Saturday, March 14. Other students will be assigned that day to canvas the downtown and other shopping districts of South Bend between the hours of 9 and 5.

Workers will be asked to labor for two shifts. Trans­portation will be provided.

A meeting of half captains and all other students, particularly those not notified by the half captains, is scheduled for 7 o'clock p.m., Sunday, in the first floor lobby of La Fortune Student Center.

Organizers of the fund drive cited two goals for the campaign, according to the first national cam­paign entitled "Shamrocks for Dystrophy Day." The fund­raising endeavor will concentrate on students from Notre Dame and St. Mary's to collect funds within the halls on both campuses as well as in the South Bend community.

Shamrock emblems will be distributed to contributors, acknowledging their generosity in the campaign, which aims to move with the times and public health and public service in an effort to eliminate the disease, which strikes primarily as young children.

Which One is the Paulist?

It's easy to tell a Paulist. Just talk with him.

The first thing you notice is that he's very human; he lives today, but plans tomorrow with the experience of knowledge of yesterday. That's a Paulist characteristic: the ability to move with the times and to meet the challenges of each era.

A Paulist is also the mediator of his age; he tries to bring together the extremes in today's world and the Church, the liberal and the moderate, the eternal and the temporal.

Next, he is very much an individual. He sets himself apart immediately. He has his own partic­ular talents and abilities — and he is given freedom to use them.

SMC O-C housing

When the executive committee of the Board of Trustees of St. Mary's meets on March 14, they will be presented with an off-campus housing proposal for the 1970-71 academic year. We feel that this proposal should be considered and accepted by the committee for several reasons.

In the past St. Mary's has existed as a totally residential community with only a few of its students commuting. There was no chance for a resident to move off-campus unless she had relatives in the immediate area. We feel the college should realize and accept the individual student's needs as a student and as a person. Many residents are unhappy in the dormitory situation where the rules and regulations tend to inhibit personal freedom and development.

To demand that these students remain on campus is a mistake and denies the student her freedom of choice in determining her own style of living.

But besides denying the student her right to develop as she desires, the current policy denies the college community the opportunity to establish and maintain a contact with the outside area, and a variation in the current dormitory mode of existence.

Many fear the loss of identity which a student establishes while living in the dorms at St. Mary's. Students who move off-campus will have at least one year of dormitory living under the proposal which allows only seniors, juniors, and sophomores to leave the campus. This move off-campus can only improve the present environment at St. Mary's, by establishing a variation of ideas, different styles of living, and personal development ultimately making St. Mary's a more realistic and contemporary college.

One final point should be mentioned. If the off-campus housing proposal is not accepted, students returning to St. Mary's for the fall term will find forced triples, quads, and quints in at least one dormitory. There will be approximately 110 more girls than are available. To prevent this intolerable overcrowded condition, we must turn to off-campus housing as the only realistic solution.

Therefore, it is our opinion that the Executive Committee should accept the proposed bill and allow both the individual and the college to grow and develop.

I said - No Thanks. I've still got plenty left from last year!

Letters to the editor

Overlan's duty

Editor:

I would like to offer a few suggestions to the University of Notre Dame and all others interested. First, if the campus police would stop trying to fill their quotas of parking tickets there would probably be a bit more security in the parking lots around campus. The police spend much of their time writing parking tickets, looking for girls in the hallways listening to their radios and filling in the rest of their time by sleeping. I imagine the fault is not all theirs since they are merely following the lead of their leader, Arthur Perez.

And now for the Dean of Students. I have this for a suggestion: Since you thought the symbolic burning of the lamb was done in good humor perhaps you will take this with a bit of humor also. There comes a time in every man's life when he no longer can keep up with the changing times. Although I don't believe you ever where in tune with the times, it is a certainty that you are prehistoric. Reign.

For those of you who think that Notre Dame is becoming more aware than it was in the past, you haven't seen the navy blue that the basketball season has created. Instead of Notre Dame being rah-rah for three months it has been extended for four more months and now Notre Dame has the privilege of being totally absurd instead of partially absurd. As one freshman said to me, "What if you do around here when the basketball team wasn't any good?"

This is mostly trivial, I find the most productive way to exist at Notre Dame is to ignore Notre Dame. But if I do have an obligation to the University, I expect to find on the walls of a public rest room cartoons are poor substitutes for talent and imagination. Again, I maintain that good taste and evidence of good breeding could have produced cartoons or a message of impact without resorting to a "pigsty" theme.

Customarily, the creators of cartoons feel enough sense of pride to warrant the instilling of their efforts; the fact that these were not so marked would indicate that the perpetrators were not proud of their work.

Sincerely yours,

A friend of mine told me about this hand without bothering to explain the bidding. South somehow managed to end up in Three No Trump. In the original hand, the contract was not made. However, if one is a good double dummy player, it can be made even against best defense. So spread out all four hands and try it.

With an opening hand lead, the timing of the hand is such that it is impossible to set up the diamond suit. One must therefore go after the clubs. The first proper defensive play is for West to refuse to win the club. This effectively destroys communication between hands. One must use the Q of Spades to enter the South hand. Upon leading a card, forcing the ace, there is no additional entry to cash the good clubs.

However, if one leads the fourth round of Spades, East finds himself on lead. He is now out of hearts and spades. In order to avoid leading to your clubs, he must lead the Q of Diamonds. If his partner does not overtake, you let it hold and on the next trick he leads the desired clubs. If West puts out the King in an effort to enter for his good heart suit, you overtake with the Ace, and lead to the Diamond Jack in your hand. The Jack becomes both entry and overtrick.

However, good defense for East necessitates pitching the H9 under the A&Q of Spades to avoid giving South an entry. East gives up one trick, saves two and sets the contract. Final answer next column.

Student films tonight

Having featured variety ranging from flute dance to political drama, the Student Arts Festival reached its fourth day of exhibition. Crowds have been moderate and accommodations have been comfortable.

Tonight the fieldhouse will house a festival of student films. Matt Zivisch, South Bend painter turned filmmaker, will screen his award winning Fisheye II. A sterling comment about women and media. David Kahn, veteran filmmaker at Notre Dame, will screen his 7½ minute quasidocumentary of arrant revolutionary spirit (with occasional feminist allusions.)

Beginning with A Cartoon by Finder is John Stupp's first public showing of his first major work. Stupp, winsome critic of Scholastic/Observer prominence has said about his film "I want everyone to see it."

Phil Curry, professor/photographer at St. Mary's College will screen Saturday and Less Swen's Fool on the Hill will make its world premiere. Don Connors has promised to submit some of his student's work to be announced tonight.

Peterson will be an ‘alternative’ candidate

by Mike Mooney

“Unity” will be the keynote of the SBP campaign of junior Michael “Fete” Peterson. Peterson, a junior in the General Program, has shown some history major Rory Baruth as his running mate in a campaign opposed to what Peterson views as the “polarized” political situation at Notre Dame.

In an interview Tuesday night, Peterson stated that he saw little difference between whom he considered the two leading candidates, Tom Thrasher and Dave Baruth, and previous campus elections.

“Students look at the candidates and the other groups between a Fascist and a Commie, who the hell cares?” observed Peterson.

He viewed his candidacy as an alternative.

“It (Peterson’s candidacy) is not the same choice as offered by one of the other major candidates, it’s a choice between us and one of them,” said Peterson.

Peterson listed his major activity as “writer” and added that he had done and was doing publicity work for campus coffee houses. Neither Peterson nor Baruth have had experience in student government. But Peterson felt that this inexperience was an asset not a liability, that his varied experience was an aid to uniting the various political factions on campus. He felt the experience of the other candidates narrowed their political outlook.

“I think I know more about what various factions on campus all (think),” he can see a larger segment of victory,” Peterson suggested.

The junior from Star Lake, N.Y., added that he was getting more “co-operation” than he expected from candidates in his campaign into four “major priorities”: coalition of factions, hall autonomy, academic reform and student services.

The “coalition” would be accomplished through his proposed “concensus” government.

The consensus government is based partly on Peterson’s belief that he represents a wide range of student opinion and his intention to include within the Student Government structure students representing the opposing views on campus, possibly even his current opponents.

Peterson saw on-campus students as “tenants” and the University as “landlord.” “When a student is required to shell-out in excess of $500, he must have some independence,” stated Peterson.

Within “academic reform,” the junior suggested the total abolishment of the present grading system in favor of a campus-wide pass-fail scheme. Peterson regarded the current system as “schack” and added that it was often seen that past grades are “not indicative of future performance.”

He recommended that a course in “citizenship” be offered, possibly in the Free University, to acquaint students, especially off-campus residents, with their civil rights and responsibilities.

“There are a lot of little things that people assume you know but you don’t,” said Peterson.

One of his objectives under “student services” would be a legal aid society institutionalized on campus, not only to assist individual students with legal problems but also to help halls examine any legal questions that may arise in relation to the autononomous actives. The Peterson-Baruth campaign will be managed by sophomore Bill Driscoll, with their headquarters in 411 Morrison Hall.

The Peterson-Baruth campaign will be managed by sophomore Bill Driscoll, with their headquarters in 411 Morrison Hall.

Tight control over many food sales activities on campus. Such control would preferably be exercised by the students themselves but would be imposed by Student Government if necessary.

The aim of such control would be the improvement of the service and the protection of the operations from “coersion” of catering services. “Halls should control food sales and try to maintain some quality of service,” said Peterson.

Thrasher opens drive

He also mentioned the need to de-emphasize grades per se with the pass-fail system to be encouraged, and called for the general easing of academic restrictions.

Thrasher noted that specific policy regarding academic reform as well as pressing issue of co-existence, hall autonomy, lessening of racial tensions, and improvement of off-campus conditions, would be made available to the students in a series of five postcards which will be distributed in the coming days.

In regard to co-coduction, Thrasher broached the need for a specific program wherein the Student Government must throw the support of the Administration by convincing the Administration that Student Government is truly acting in the name of the students.

Thrasher mentioned the possibility of a total or partial merger of the Notre Dame and Mary’s Student Governments, and the increase in the present Co-Ex program as necessary steps toward the final implementation of co-coduction.

On the question of hall autonomy, Thrasher drilled the tendency of Student Government to contract everything solely out to others.

“Instances of violation of hall autonomy and subsequent student bitterness intensify disillusion people,” Thrasher contended.

“Halls must be granted total freedom to create conditions satisfying academic, cultural, social, and personal needs in the hall,” he added.

In regard to the implementation of the new program, Thrasher stressed the need to effect a smooth and orderly transition between both incoming and outgoing administrations in order to keep the pressure new for programs focused on the University Administration.

Thrasher and Murray concluded that the experience and skill in Stanford by emphasizing the personal and open approach of their campaign.

Voicing the need to meet with as many possible during the course of the campaign, Thrasher hopes to stimulate a sense of awareness to the potential of both Student Government and of the students themselves.

ND and the NSA: Is it worth it?

This is the second part of a two-part series. In the first part, Notre Dame National Student Association Representative Mike O'Shaughnessy heatedly endorsed the University's student organization's continued participation in the organization. Today, Observer reporters T.C. Druyan interviews four Notre Dame political figures to gain their reaction to this endorsement.

Mike Shaughnessy was obviously enthusiastic about the NSA, but his enthusiasm is not echoed by the University of Notre Dame's more prominent figures. Reaction ranged from Fred Detrich's mild interest in civil engineering to Chris Wolfe's outraged disgust.

Observer insights

Student Body President Phil McKenna endorses NSA, but with no particular enthusiasm. "For fifty dollars we get enough services to justify our continued participation," McKenna said, but he berated a "lack of well-developed programs," a situation which he contends is due to a lack of financial backing.

The SBJP admitted that Notre Dame doesn't take full advantage of the economic opportunities the NSA is supposed to make available. He also contends that most member schools don't send a full file of information to the national NSA office in Washington, and frequently, sometimes NSA help is incomplete. "They were very helpful when we were studying the Board of Trustees issue, though," McKenna said.

The fifty dollars McKenna referred to is the fifty-dollar per-semester that the National Student Association charges member schools. The dues were reduced this year after having been three dollars over the past several years. McKenna admitted that had the dues remained at the three hundred dollar level he would probably opt for Notre Dame's withdrawal from the organization. With dues "at the present level, though, it's worth it," McKenna says.

McKenna's evaluation of the NSA's worth is not shared by Young Americans for Freedom president Tom Murphy. Murphy contends that "the NSA is not worth any membership dues."

"I was glad to see the dues cut," Murphy said. "I suggest that the Senate cut the dues entirely and leave the organization."

The Bloomfield Heights, Mich., senior contends that "The organization isn't representative of the student body at Notre Dame." He suggests that Notre Dame "stay in contact" with the nationwide organization without being a retaining dues-paying membership.

According to YAF member and Grace Hall president Chris Wolfe, the less Notre Dame association with the NSA, the better. When asked about the National Student Association, Wolfe said in turn, "What's it? It seems to me to be an association for radical students which provides an opportunity once a year at a convention for them to condemn all of society (if they're white) and just all of society (if they're a minority group)."

Student Body Vice-President Fred Detrich says that he is not dismayed by anti-NSA activity, although he himself supports the organization. "They have every right to say what they want," Detrich conceded. "But I think the NSA is well worth the time and money we put into it."

"In many senses, the NSA convention last summer was not structured enough. Problems arose when there weren't enough speakers, when there weren't enough programs to work on. The NSA conventions need more organization," the Vice-President continued.

Of course, the National Student Association is dependent on student government participation. As the nationwide organization pursues its uncertain destiny, it appears as though Notre Dame's relations with the organization will be just as muddled.

Notre Dame's wrestling squad brought its season dual meet record one mark closer to .500 last night as they dumped University of Illinois-Chicago, 26-1.

The match took place at the Recreation Center auxiliary gymnasium in front of a mild crowd of 150-200 spectators.

The match was a close affair until the fifth bout of the evening when a Notre Dame pin gave the Irish the momentum for the victory.

The first bout in the 118 lb. weight class was a close white for ND's Phil Sutton.

Tom Ciaccio, one of the more consistent grapplers for the Irish in this season, was upset by Joe Sipur, 7-3.

It was a close match until the third period when Sipur made a reversal for two points and a pin at 126 lbs.

In 134 lb. Keith Giron punished his opponent Larry Zwickl and finally pinned him at the end of the third period.

Tom Mordue, 142 pounder, came right back for the Circle team and he pinned Dave Grif

The turning point of the match came in the next bout as Bob Habig pinned Leroy Maga in the 150 lb. class after a hard fought two periods and this gave the Irish a lead that they never relinquished.

R. Galbreath (ND) d. K. Bart 14-0

Co-captain Jim Hansen made an impressive performance as he maneuvered Phil Kotas at will for a 1-0 decision. Hansen pinned his man right after the final buzzer in the 155 division.

Ken Predovic made a valiant effort to put Chicago back in the match as he won a close 5-2 decision over Tom Powell in 167 lb.

Bill Hashbrow won the 177 lb. match by decision and extracted 5-0 win over an injured Bob Mathews. This gave ND an eight point lead.

Dean Olmstead and Joe Mul saw a 6-0 dual meet record, far below what had been originally expected. Some individual performances have made the grapplers worth going to watch.

NEW YORK (UPI) - There will be several familiar faces in the National Intercollegiate basketball tournament next week.

UCLA and Duquesne are two forer

New York basketball, with four

Winter Classic basketball, led by Big Ten and Big East, will be taking part in the 17th annual Classic played at Wrigley Field.

The tournament will begin on December 13 and will feature eight teams from across the nation.

The signature teams include the University of Kentucky, Notre Dame, Oklahoma State, and the University of Louisville.

UCLA is the defending champion, having won the title last year with a 72-64 victory over North Carolina.

Kentucky, coached by Rick Pitino, is seeking its 15th national championship and is favored to win the tournament.

Notre Dame, led by coach Mike Brey, is looking to make a deep run in the tournament after a disappointing season.

Oklahoma State, under interim coach Mike Cliffe, is expected to be a dark horse and could surprise everyone.

Louisville, coached by Chris Mack, is coming off a dominant season and is considered one of the favorites to win the tournament.

The tournament will feature games every day until December 16, with the championship game scheduled for December 16 at 8:30 pm Eastern Time.
