NASSER DEAD-ALERT CALLED

The Observer is suspending publication with this edition — but it is not dead.

Observer Editor Dave Bach resigned late yesterday evening. He cited as reasons for his resignation the difficulties in putting out a quality newspaper with the pressures placed on the present staff.

Bach pointed out that The Observer needed professional help in training writers and other personnel. He felt that the paper had grown too fast and that the pressures of daily publication and deadlines had taken the ability of upperclassmen editors to direct and produce the paper.

Observer Publisher Guy De Sapiro pointed out that The Observer has the junior to continue to publish five days a week in order to avoid financial disasters.

De Sapiro pointed out that the editors in the past two years have not been able to evaluate the question of the frequency of publication on its merits. The decision was always based on the need to publish five days a week in order to attract the advertising needed to survive.

Meeting last night, the editorial board of The Observer decided to suspend publication until the faculty advisory board of the paper could meet to give the staff advice on procedure.

The editorial board pointed out that the following problems would have to be solved before publication could resume.

First, the advisory board will have to select a new editor for the paper. The position is open to any student from St. Mary’s or Notre Dame. Application can be made by submitting a statement of intent to: The Observer Board of Directors, Box 11, Notre Dame.

Second, consultations will be made with members of the Notre Dame Department of Communications Arts and with other officials of the university to determine whether professional aid can be obtained in helping to set up the staff. Efforts will also be made to obtain academic credit for Observer personnel.

Third, a decision would have to be made as to how frequently the paper will be published.

Fourth, efforts will be made to establish a sound financial basis for the paper in order to eliminate frequent concern over the paper’s ability to publish for financial reasons.

An executive committee of Bach, De Sapiro, News Editor Jim Hofsinger, Campus Editor Glen Consor, Feature’s Editor T.C. Treanor and Associate Editor Cliff Wintrode has been established to guide efforts toward resumed publication.

Currently The Observer suffers not only from staff and professional journalistic problems but also from its lack of financial stability.

The Observer’s existing subsidy depended during the last few years on a financial subsidy from student government. This year The Observer was able to break the tie by obtaining approval from the Vice President’s Council to place a two dollar subscription fee on a student’s account to obtain the necessary funds. The Observer had hoped to obtain between $10,000 and $12,000 from this fee. Although this sum would be enough to enable The Observer to continue to operate it is not enough to allow The Observer to obtain the equipment needed to put out a daily paper that looked professional.

De Sapiro contrasted The Observer’s financial aid from the university with that which The Scholar receives. The Scholaristic, which is an official university publication receives an annual subsidy of $58,000 from the university. The sum comes out of tuition fees collected. Part of the sum goes to financial aid for the editors of the magazine.

De Sapiro pointed out that half of the sum which The Scholaristic receives would be more than enough, when coupled with advertising revenue to allow The Observer to operate safely.

Bach and Krashna noted that currently no member of The Observer editorial staff receives monetary compensation for his work.

The money collected from the student body this year for The Observer remains unappropriated.

Nasser heart attack victim

Vice-president takes over

CAIRO (UPI)- President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt, who unified a divided Arab world and was the greatest figure in his modern history, died Monday of a heart attack at the age of 52. His death shocked the specter of chaos in the Middle East.

Nasser was struck at Cairo International Airport, where he lived under the Sheik Sabah Al Salim Sabah, the ruler of Kuwait and one of the Arab leaders who had attended the summit conference Nasser called to end the civil war in Iraq.

The Egyptian president suddenly complained of feeling dizzy and weak and began praying profusely and medical re­port signed by five doctors said. He was taken by car to his suburban Cairo home at 3:15 pm which is 11 am EDT.

Vice President Anwar Sadat spoke here and in Arab in a brief broadcast over Cairo radio in which he said "no words can describe... the only thing is for the Arab nation to remain patient until the victory for the Arab nation will be achieved."

"A number of doctors arrived immediately and found his ex­cellency to be suffering from an acute heart attack which re­sulted from a blockage of the blood artery," a medical bulletin said.

"All necessary medical aid was administered to him to his ex­cellency, including the use of the best medical equipment to regulate the heart and the arteries," the bulletin added.

But God's will was stronger and he gave up the ghost at 6:15 am during the administration of this aid."

SCF fails to act on Judicial Code
by Greg Podhorsky

The Student Life Council met last night in the Center for Continuing Education for a rushed session to avoid a final vote on the Board of Trustees. The Burchall proposal, which would require the judicial action of a student Judicial Code, was defeated in the spring session of the Board of Trustees.

The substantial extent of the meeting was spent in discussion of a recommendation by Professor Edward Vasta that "the final disposition of all cases (that come before the Judicial Board) are subject to Presidential review." Vasta continued that the added amendment should provide that if "the President or his delegate disagrees with the final disposition of any case that they should meet with the judicial body last involved in the case." His disagreement persisted that final decision would rest with the President.

As originally written the proposal gave the Dean of Students the right to appeal a student's case after a private trial. Such an appeal could follow whether the student was found guilty or innocent of the offence. Vasta argued that "a Code which invites a student to seek private trial from his adversary would appear to mock justice." The discussion which followed the proposal was extensive. A few of the members of the Council expressed the view that despite the fact that any judicial decision which lacked the Administration's backing would be weak and de

Muskie in Senate race

AUGUSTA (UPI) - Maine's senatorial contest is regarded as a step toward the White House for Sen. Edmund S. Muskie. How big a step depends on his presidential nomination. A far closer race is the gubernatorial scrap between Democratic Gov. Kenneth M. Curtiss, a progressive liberal, and Republican attorney general James S. Erwin, a moderate conservative.

The Curtis Erwin fight is considered a toss up. Democratic stategists with an eye toward 1972 would be delighted to see Bishop defeat GOP challengers and apparently will not get White House help, except for good wishes. The 66-year-old Bishop, a former state senator, is coming from a decade of political retirement. He twice was defeated in a bid for the governorship and twice for Congress.

Bach resigns

The university, De Sapiio said that allocations of the funds would depend on consultations with Father Thomas Blantz, Vice-President for Student Affairs who must approve all appropriations.

All other funds of The Observer will be placed in trust to be used when the paper resumes publication.

Memorial Mass

A Memorial Mass for Noel Dube, 1970 graduate of Notre Dame, will be held Tuesday, October 29 at 5:30 in Farley Hall chapel.
In the current push for student participation in campus government, the vital relationship between the faculty and the administration often takes a background position.

Several SMC faculty members were asked for their evaluations of Msgr. John J. McGrath's two-year administration, and for their opinions as to what qualities the new president of SMC should possess.

Sr. Frances Kane, of the English department, said that Fr. McGrath tried to tackle the problem of the relationship of Catholic colleges and universities to the religious orders that sponsor them. She said that he had an interest in clarifying the situation in terms of both canon and civil law, and that he prepared a document to be used as a guideline for this clarification.

Sr. Francis B. said that Fr. McGrath believed in the principles of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) including those concerning student rights and academic freedom. He was a leader in the movement to clarify these issues on the campus. "He was optimistic that the Christian university was the way to proceed."

Fr. Raymond Runde, C.S.C., a faculty member in the education department, said that Fr. McGrath opened the concept of community involvement to include the entire student body. He met with the students on various administrative committees.

He added that the late president had a healthy rapport with Notre Dame and that he and Fr. Hesburgh were able to talk on a "man-to-man" basis.

"He had no concept of caste," Fr. Runde observed. "He would tell a student what he would tell the faculty. He couldn't see any difference and he didn't believe...he couldn't bring himself to pretend."

Fr. Runde said that the Monsignor would have made St. Mary's a financially independent institution and would have obtained a high quality faculty. He said that the Monsignor enjoyed being president of the college and that he "liked the girls and was proud of them."

He commented that the new president should be aware of the academic situation and faculty problems and have the courage of his convictions. He added that a member of the clergy would be better equipped to deal with the religious order and women than Fr. Daley as a lay president.

Dr. Anthony Black, chairman of the SMC faculty assembly and a member of the history department faculty, described Fr. McGrath as having a "guaranteed sense of Christianity."

He was an orthodox Catholic theologian, which is not found here or at Notre Dame with great frequency."

Dr. Black said that Fr. came to the college presidency at a moment when "we needed a man who could take an independent position...he was a positive factor in our existence."

Dr. Black pointed out that the late president was faced with a situation of transition—between the religious orders and the colleges and between SMC and ND.

He said that Fr. McGrath had no time to make many specific moves and that his contributions were more as a model, for example, the erection of a new building.

Dr. Black added that he did take a stand necessary because "the buck stops there"—at the college presidency.

"He was a victim of his times...and limited circumstances."

The new president, Dr. Black commented, "would be committed to the idea that there is a place in the 20th century for an undergraduate liberal education in a Catholic framework for women."

Dr. Mark Bambanek, of the SMC chemistry department, observed that Fr. McGrath seemed to have established the concept of community at St. Mary's—"he got the wheels moving."

Dr. Bambanek said that the late president was a scholar and that he was "forced to spend time on things he liked less. The administrative and financial end of it was part of his job."

"He liked people and had planned this fall to go back to the classroom."

Dr. Bambanek commented that Fr. McGrath was faced with what the chemistry prof calls an "extremely partisan situation," and Fr. McGrath seemed to have met this with optimism by using a number of administrative members to work with students on committees.

"He tried to benefit the whole school. There was bound to be disagreement."

It was possible that high school college president I have ever known, with all the communions of human weaknesses and human strengths.

Since THE OBSERVER is a daily operation, approximately 25 people per day are needed. This necessitates a total of 90 people on the entire staff for the entire week. The staff at present totals 50 people.

The opinions expressed in the editorials, news analyses, and columns of The Observer are solely the opinions of the authors and do not necessarily reflect the views of St. Mary's College, the University of Notre Dame, their administrations, faculty, or student bodies.

Frank Borman's return from his round the world jaunt, and his subsequent report to the Senate raises up once more the issue of American involvement in South Vietnam.

The International Red Cross is not allowed to visit them; there are many women in this country who are in limbo concerning their loved ones, and rumors has it that their treatment makes the tiger cages at Khe Sanh seem like a minimum security prison by comparison. Regardless of what position one takes concerning the American role in Southeast Asia, these are people; and people, regardless of their criminality or whatever must be treated with a certain respect for their humanity. The Senate unanimously agrees, however, that there is very little which can be done—unless students do it. The moral imperative for students to take an action wherein they inform Hanoi that any movement in the improving of treatment of prisoners will make the peace effort more credible be obvious. Washington seems to be convinced that a letter writing campaign from Hanoi's closest allies in this country would have to do some good.

I say let's take them up on their offer of a new twist. Students should write Hanoi. But they should do it at the most opportune time possible—now before the elections.

From here, they should caravan Middle Class America with petitions saying something to the effect that we respectfully request that Hanoi improve the treatment of American prisoners. But, here's the rub.

We do it for peace candidates. The whole effort should be extremely partisan to get doves and other liberal elements into Congress.

How can John and Jane Middle America backlash against clean out students who are circulating "tell it to Hanoi" petitions?

At the same time that these are being circulated, we distribute literature and campaign for the candidates who will get at the root of the fact of these prisoners.

We are not only going after the immediate problem—prisoners of war, at the same time, we are going to the root of the problem—American involvement in Southeast Asia.

This type of activity educates the voters about student's attitudes, shows that students are willing to make a show of goodwill, and may just countercast Spiro, John and Martha Inc.

Obviously, if Hanoi would show it's bit of goodwill, say on November 1 or so by releasing, at large, the names of some prisoners, whichever orifice of their bodies they feel it would enter easiest.

"See you at campaign headquarters."

Frank Borman is a man who opponent the Princeton Plan because students "would be used" are engaged in patronizing dreaming. Let the students learn for themselves.

Those who say the University should not become political should be extremely partisan to get doves and other liberal elements into Congress.

Homesickness

Observer Sophomore Phantom

by Ikey

I suppose that it's reasonably safe to assume that a multitude of you studious beings are plagued by the old ailment of homesickness. This dreaded affliction is not reserved solely to the freshmen. The upperclassmen also suffer from this disease. The only difference is that the upperclassmen like to brag about having this "communicable disease," whereas the freshmen don't even know what one is. Known to most of you for snoozing folks feel, I believe I ought to clue you in on a few of the known cures for your malady.

One of the most common medicines is a little thing that requires little or no intelligence, which should thrill the majority of you. Simply rip all of your name tags off of your wardrobe and then sew them in backwards. This bit of lightheadedness will frustrate your friends for a time, but if you're going to tear at all then this is a safer way to do it and sew them back in properly. This little exercise of appendage agility should take you anywhere from 2 weeks to 6 years, depending on the seriousness of your illness and your stitching ability.

A more advanced cure for the more advanced sufferers is one of the old favorite remedies - stuffing. This may sound strange to you, but just how long does it take to get a hold of an Elementary Lithuanian book? One of the best downers is a good run through the entire Kirkwood campus. The only thing you need to remember is that you must cut your stitches every five years or so. (Rumor has it that he's slated to be next boss of the Northwest.)

If you're feeling very cruel, try and see if you can't get your friends to bring back some clothes. Many things you might have been, but he was not, and is not artificial in any way.

Letters to Uncle Bass

Dear Sir:

I would like to object to the article which appeared in the Observer last week. John Barkett as a prospective candidate for SBF next March. It is not that I do not like him, but I object to the fact that he may be running next spring. I do think it is a bit early to start naming people, since many government contributions have been made. Given the chance to get off the ground, but that is not my purpose here.

What I must object to is the author's sniveling attack on Phil McKenna. As a former co-worker, and as a friend, I can offer testimony that Phil McKenna is not the man some students think he is. Many things Phil might have been, but he was not artificial in any way.

What your correspondent saw at "pseudo-philosophy" was, in fact, a sincere concern about the quality of the Notre Dame experience, the goals of the University and Student Government, and the course which all candidates say. The McGeeney administration set out to achieve those goals. I did not always agree with Phil, but I never got knocked down by his sincerity or his dedication to principle.

The McKenna administration was different from any of its predecessors - and will probably be different than any that follow - because it was different, it was misunderstood. Out of that misunderstanding came criticism which was more than an honest look at the job and continued until the day he stepped down. McKenna said in his campaign certain things which all candidates say. He did what he said he was going to do, to the surprise of even some of us that worked with him. Phil's administration was much like the man himself - quiet and thoughtful. Ronnie's term was characterized by the constant support the University in the next five years, and shook a lot of people out of their stupor, but a lot of it, I am distressed that this misunderstanding has led to yet another big public malapropism of Phil McKenna and I hope I have cleared up some of it.

Steve Back

No one in his right mind would deny McKenna's sincerity. The contention of the "correspondent" wasn't that McKenna didn't want to be a philosopher, but that he thought he was a philosopher and really wasn't. One doesn't become a philosopher by constantly suffering the existential dread. One doesn't become a philosopher by writing a lot of philosophy. One doesn't become a philosopher by smoking a lot of cigarettes every time a crisis arises, or by crying. One doesn't become a philosopher by "walking naked at the beginning of the world." Phil McKenna mistook Dionysius for Dionysus. He didn't travel any road. He tripped. Right at the beginning.

Cotton Candy between Consenting Adults

I read with interest the article concerning the circus which appeared in Monday's Observer. I was struck by the force of its basic contention - that the circus is out of place in a world that has death and war and unwanted pregnancies. Not to mention the fact that the smells this means alcohol, nicotine or caffeine wasn't clear. Maybe it referred to Monosodium Glutamate and other preservatives in his food. A seven year old could appreciate a circus, but not someone at

Alumni meet with Krishna

The Board of Directors of the Notre Dame Alumni Association met over the past weekend with Fr. Peter Grundmeier, Director of Admissions. Many of the administrators are new, and James Cooney, secretary of the board, said that the board was "concerned because the student has been given a great deal of personal responsibility, and has not developed a concern for his fellow student. The board said that they could not understand the reluctance of the student to leave his own sphere to turn in offenders.

The board also heard Fr. James T. Burtchaell, University Provost, speak on continuing education and Fr. Thomas E. Chambers, Director of Student Housing, speak on the function of the residence hall in the total picture of university life, said Cooney.

He also said that since 1940 of the 44,000 alumni whom the board governors had graduated since 1960 and 605 since 1950, the Executive Committee entered a motion to include younger men in the board. A decision will be given in January, and Cooney said it had a "good chance" of passing.

The Board of Directors is the governing body of the Alumni Association.

One college does more than broaden horizons. It sails to them, and beyond.

Now there's a way for you to know the world around you first-hand. A way to see the things you've read about, and study as you go. The way is a college that uses the Parthenon as a classroom, a lecture hall in Greece, and illustrates Hong Kong's floating societies with a ride on a harbor sampan.

Injury ends Bill Etter's career

SOUTH BEND Ind. (UPI) — Notre Dame's No. 2 quarterback has had for some time, a Notre Dame spokesman said.

"Bill was given extensive tests in the past two weeks and the results indicate that he should give up football or any other contact sport," Parisegan said.

"The doctors anticipate no problems but Bill will drop out of school until January and stay with his brother in Arizona."

Etter, a junior from South Bend, Wash., has lost in the move to Step one. It was a great rally. Gatewood and the Irish added another seven.

Hempel boots a goal field; Dwyer runs for a score; and now Notre Dame has 4-1 but the fans clamor for more.

Larry Parker Etter all displaying his breakaway speed; The goal is 63 yards away but Larry runs for a 48-0 lead.

Yes, Ara promised us a win, The Boilermakers would be beat. Three years of frustration are forgotten, Ah, revenge is sweet.

Notre Dame's 48-0 thrashing of Purdue Saturday was the most one-sided victory in his history of the series. The Irish appear to be moving into high gear and, if the South River Roadrunner stays healthy, will pile up a bundle of points this season.

Allan, Gulyas, Barz, Minnis, and Parker rambled through gaping holes opened by the now solid defensive line. When the ground game falters, the-Theismann, I mean Theismann, to Gatewood combination can open up the defense.

Gatewood put on a tremendous show Saturday, grabbing 12 passes good for three touchdowns. His last touchdown, where he shook off three tacklers to score, symbolized the game. Gatewood trotted to the bench all smiles while the Purdue defenders, including the renowned Veno Paraskevas, lay in the mud.

Theismann was equally impressive, completing 16 of 24 passes for 276 yards. Other than the weather, I was disappointed by only one thing this weekend — the Golden Girl has a pot belly.

It would appear that Step one Center has most satisfactorily replaced the fieldhouse as the site for football rallies. Although lacking in tradition, Step one was also lacking the choking dust of the fieldhouse. Most importantly, none of the Notre Dame spirit was lost in the move to Step one. It was a great rally.

Close up on the Irish. A 1-1-1 record. The Hanlon-Schweitzer combination put the Irish back on top in the second quarter as they reversed roles, Hanlon knocking in a shot by Schweitzer that had caromed off the Purdue netminder. Once again, Purdue rallied tied the score 2-2 after 40 minutes of play. Although the Purdue football squad was trounced Saturday afternoon by the Fighting Irish, the Boilermaker soccer team had better results Saturday morning, toppling the Notre Dame hooters 3-1 in a game played in a driving rain behind Stepone Center.

The Boilermakers broke a 2-2 halftime deadlock by tallying single goals in the third and fourth quarters to hand the Irish their first setback of the season. The Notre Dame soccer club now has a 1-1-1 record. The Irish jumped into an early lead Saturday as Jim Schweitzer shot past the Purdue goalkeeper midway through the first quarter. The Boilermakers fought back to tie the score at 1-1 however before the quarter ended.
