Nixon's initiative is cease fire

WASHINGTON (UPI) President Nixon, seeking "the beginning of the end of war in this century," proposed an immediate ceasefire throughout all of Indochina last night and a new international conference to negotiate peace in Vietnam Laos and Cambodia.

In a 15-minute address to the nation that was broadcast worldwide the President also called for "the immediate and unconditional release of all prisoners of war held by both sides" to establish good faith and help break the negotiating logjam.

Nixon offered to withdraw all troops from South Vietnam as part of an overall settlement of the war but rejected what he termed the Communists' goal of taking over the government of Saigon.

The President's "major new initiative for peace will be presented to the Communists at the Paris peace talks today by Ambassador David K. Lieber.

Nixon urged North Vietnam to join the United States and give our children what we have not had during this century, a chance to enjoy a generation of peace.

After personally briefing his cabinet and congressional leaders of both parties at the White House, Nixon went on nationwide radio and television to propose that "all armed forces throughout Indochina cease firing their weapons and remain in the positions they now hold."

He said the Peace talks in Paris would be followed by wider talks on troop withdrawals and a future government in Saigon.

The President's "major new initiative for peace will be presented to the Communists at the Paris peace talks today by Ambassador David K. Lieber."

As soon as possible, he said, he would, the President said only: "We are ready to negotiate an agreed timetable for complete withdrawals, and part of an overall settlement."

The American position was similarly unchanged in its support of political self-determination for the people of South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia: "Nobody has anything to gain by delay and only lives to lose," he said.

At the same time he urged convening a new Geneva-style peace conference on Indochina to participate in the Paris talks and perhaps absorb them in the search for a political settlement of the wider conflict.

The war in Indochina has been "proved to be of one piece," Nixon said. "It cannot be cured by treating only one of its areas of outbreak.

Indochina includes North Vietnam, South Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. The region was held by the French as colonies until 1954 when Geneva agreements ended French control and established the independent nations.

The Viet Cong had proposed Sept. 30 that U.S. agreement to withdraw all its forces from Vietnam by next June 30 could be followed by discussion of other issues, including a political settlement and release of prisoners of war.

Nixon turned this around, proposing an immediate ceasefire and standstill as now in effect in the Middle East as well as a prisoner exchange, to be followed by wider talks on troop withdrawals, as some had speculated he would, the President said only:

During a press conference in South Bend, Senator Vance Hartke spoke about his campaign platform centering on the issue of unemployment, crime and President Nixon's address last night.

Sen. Hartke predicted that Mr. Nixon's speech would be "a dramatic, pre-election statement" which would call for a standstill and cease-fire in Vietnam much like the one he proposed last August.

Hartke commented on Nixon's mandate to talk about violence and crime in the nation.

Mr. Hartke added that, if the President's Peace Plans were implemented as soon as possible, he would fully support them. However, Sen. Hartke expressed his doubts saying: "I don't want the President to play games with the lives of American men."

Turning his attention to the problems of unemployment and crime Hartke said, "There's a direct correlation between unemployment and crime."

The fall semi-annual meeting of the Alumnae Board of Directors at St. Mary's College will take place October 11 and will feature a luncheon dialogue between members of the board and student leaders.

Mrs. Mary Galvin, Jr., chairman of the twelve-women board, will conduct the meeting which begins at 9:00 in the Main Hall. Representing the student government in the Sundial luncheon will be Anne Marie Tracey, Student Body President Joan Gorman, Student Body Assistant News Editor Floyd Koedle is running in Grace Reading in 1971. Senator Tom Thrasher said after the meeting that he thought the meeting had been a good year in the Senate.

"There were no indications in Washington that the leadership in Hanoi was prepared to accept Nixon's initiative," he added.

After an advance briefing by Secretary of State William P. Rogers, Foreign Minister Than of Thailand said South East Asia "observes" the benefits of a ceasefire "but this hangs on the willingness of the other side to participate."

Senator George McGovern (D-South Dakota), a 1968 presidential candidate was scheduled to speak at St. Mary's O'Laughlin auditorium on Friday, October 9, at 4:30 p.m. However, McGovern's commitments in Washington may interfere with his arrival in South Bend and there is a possibility that the speech will have to be rescheduled.

He will appear at scheduled at the Notre Dame Faculty Club for a reception from 8:00 p.m. on Friday night. Tickets, available at the faculty club, are $3.00 (single) and $5.00 (couple).

McGovern will remain at Notre Dame on campus Saturday, October 10, and, with Edmund A. Stearns, chairman of the Board of Trustees, participate in the flag raising ceremonies prior to the Notre Dame-Army football game.

Representing 9,000 Alumnae the Alumnae Board lists its major operations as: service to the Alumnae Association and aid in organizing internal affairs at the college. The Alumnae Association monthly magazine has a circulation of 5470 cities and published a quarterly magazine of the same name. The Alumnae Association is the oldest Catholic women's college alumnae organization in the nation.

Also Rich Wall, former student body president, is running in Grace.

Mr. Nixon's speech would be "a dramatic, pre-election statement" which would call for a standstill and cease-fire in Vietnam much like the one he proposed last August.

Hartke also came out in favor of an all volunteer army to be implemented as soon as possible, he said.

"There was no indication," he said, "that the speech was acceptable to my opponent. It is not acceptable to Vance Hartke."

"We are ready to negotiate an agreed timetable for complete withdrawals, and part of an overall settlement."

The newly built courtyard joining the Hayes-Healy Center and the Harley College of Business Administration is soon to be dedicated, possibly to both

Philip J. Lucier and his father

When the plans for the Hayes-Healy Center had been drawn up, one of the projects listed had been the building of a patio between the two business buildings. The LAM Berry Foundation of Columbus, Ohio, was the same time interested in erecting some physical structure in honor a post executive with United Telephone of Indiana who had passed away. This man's son, Mr. Philip J. Lucier an alumnus of Notre Dame and president of Continental Telephone Corporation, acted on behalf of the Foundation, which had decided to finance the construction of the courtyard in honor of Mr. Philip Lucier's father.

Construction commenced at the closing of school year and was completed by September. Because of the lack of sunlight and space, little plant life could survive there. So, the courtyard was carefully designed, planting the few trees and shrubs strategically, to comply with the available space. The plantings were then to be made and dedicated to Mr. Lucier.

Then tragedy struck. Mr. Philip J. Lucier, father of eleven, was killed July 24 when he was tumed the ignition of his car and set off a pipe bomb planted beneath the seat. The result of this malfuction is that both father and son in the dedication is now being considered.

The decision is soon to be made, with the dedication to be.

An Observer investigation has uncovered the interesting fact that present Student Union President Director Bob Pohl has an outstanding debt of $45.47 to Campus Press. Apparently this debt was incurred during the Student Body Presidential race of last year, and has never been paid back. Rumor has it that Pohl smeared and laughed when asked if he was going to honor his obligations.

Nixon’s Goal: End killing

Many Republican regulars annoyed at Goodell because the Republican senator has consistently criticized the Nixon Administration on Vietnam and other issues are reported to be turn-inning away from their party's candidate and trying with the idea of switching to Buckley.

As a result, Buckley has suddenly become a strong candidate. The race is no longer considered a contest between Goodell a Rockefeller protege, and Ottinger, a brilliant campaigner. The campaign attracts the attention of the Democratic and Republican leaders such as Sen. Barry Goldberg, the Conservative Party candidate and toying with the idea of switching to Buckley.

About three hours before he went on the air, Nixon and his national security affairs advisor Dr. Henry A. Kissinger briefed Democratic and Republican leaders in Congress. On hand were Rogers, Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird and Gen. Willaim C. Westmoreland, the Army chief-of-staff.

None were smiling as they poset for photographers. Nixon looked grim.

Although Nixon’s speech came less than four weeks before the Nov. 3 congressional elections, he had stressed beforehand that it was no "propaganda gimmick" but a comprehensive new U.S. attempt to break the negotiating impasse on Vietnam.

Buckley, who is the elder brother of William F. (Bill) Buckley, a well-known columnist and editor of the National Review, is campaigning on a simple platform.

If elected Buckley says he will "try to be the best senator in the Senate and defend our country against every attack from within and without."

sions reached after a month-long review of the U.S. negotiating stance in Paris, was made possible by "the remarkable success of the Vietnamization policy" of sing South Vietnam to assume a greater burden of the war effort.

Father Hesburgh's speech ...

Father Hesburgh has had a good week. First, there was his sober, inclusive essay on the Middle East (New York Times, Oct. 2, 1970), then, his savvy analysis before the Notre Dame faculty Monday of the problems facing major Universities today.

Hesburgh scored on a number of points, but three statements were particularly germane to all of us. When Hesburgh called a "steady dryup of public and private, moral and financial support," a basic problem, he pinpointed a phenomenon that has been developing largely in obscurity since 1960 and the Berkeley Free Speech Movement. Hesburgh has a pipeline into Middle America like few other College Presidents and fewer students have his grasp on political reality is strong. Support for Universities is becoming more meagre, and it is due not a little to students insurgency. One doubts that a student body unwilling to give thanksgiving vacation up to campaign for the ideals to which they are committed would sacrifice maid service or free use of the Rock for the sake of a little revolutionary excitement.

Hesburgh is dead right when he pinpointed the solution to that problem: "Good teaching—no great teaching," he said, "may be the salvation of the University today." For the most offensive thing about Student Activists is the thing that turns away the proffered hand of contributing alumni is their total lack of perspective, and of objectivity. The problem can be remedied by good teachers—dispassionate informed, and concerned—but they must work in concert with students who are willing to learn as well as teach, willing to listen as well as proselytize.

The most interesting contention Hesburgh made Monday, and the most important for students—was the students should have "a reasonable voice in controlling their affairs." One would assume then that students should establish their own curricular hours. One would assume that the Burtsheller judicial code passed by the Students Life Council should have been approved intact. The war of the Observers all the foolish in loco parentis rules St. Mary's suffers though (eg, freshmen hours) should be immediately dismissed. And with those contentions, we wholeheartedly agree.

... Sister Marita's project

WITH the proliferation of "charitable" organization in recent years it has become increasingly difficult to determine which ones are performing the most worthwhile function with the monies donated them.

Traditional charities such as the Vincent DePaul Society and Salvation Army have long established traditions of helping the poor and unfortunate but the nagging doubts exist as to whether or not their efforts have done much to alleviate the ills of the hard core urban poor. Other charities such as the United Fund seem to be caught up in fantastic mazes of red tape which diminish their effectiveness.

There is one social action being carried on in South Bend which deserves the full unflinching support of just about everybody—Sister M. Marita's Primary School Day School. This gracious nun has perfected a revolutionary approach to the teaching of basic reading skills for children. The program is performing wonders with the ghetto children who otherwise would have been condemned to sitting through meaningless years in South Bend public schools because of failure to instill them with the essential skills of reading and comprehension.

This noble project has led a marginal existence for two years housed in an abandoned school building belonging to St. Joseph Parish. An endless round of fund raising efforts has produced enough cash to keep the school operating to date but now the venture is faced with a critical cash shortage. The Shakespeare reading marathon was concocted in order to deal with this emergency. This school must not be allowed to die, merely because students and faculty at this allegedly Christian University didn't bother to contribute a few cents apiece towards it. Many cry over the stinginess of the federal government in funding projects which will break the poverty cycle. This is one project which is doing something to contribute a few cents towards it. Current on display at the South Bend Art Center is an exhibition entitled "Art and Death." This is the second major show of the season at the venerable art forum, and the program is clearly indicative of the current preoccupation with death, a subject that seems to be stimulating much interest and discussion in contemporary art. The exhibition features a wide range of works by both established and emerging artists, including paintings, sculptures, and installations that explore the theme of mortality in various ways.

The opening reception for "Art and Death" was held on Thursday evening, and the atmosphere was charged with a sense of both excitement and unease. Friends and family members of the deceased were in attendance, and there was a palpable sense of loss and mourning among the crowd. The art on display ranged from hauntingly beautiful images of dead bodies to more abstract works that seem to evoke a sense of the afterlife or the realm of the dead.

One of the most striking pieces on display was a large-scale sculpture of a human skull, created by a local artist. The skull was made from a variety of materials, including clay and wire, and was suspended from the ceiling in a way that seemed to defy gravity. As the lights flickered, the sculpture cast eerie shadows on the walls, creating a sense of foreboding and unease. Another memorable work was a series of small, delicate paintings of dead flowers, arranged in a circle on the wall. The paintings were created by a younger artist, and the simplicity of their design belied the depth of emotion they conveyed.

The exhibition catalogue, which is available for purchase at the Art Center, is a comprehensive guide to the works on display. It includes essays by several leading art critics and scholars, as well as detailed descriptions of each piece, including its materials, dimensions, and significance. The catalogue is a valuable resource for anyone interested in exploring the themes of death and mortality in contemporary art.

The final piece on display was a large, multimedia installation that seemed to be a cabinet of curiosities. The installation was made up of a variety of objects, including photographs, paintings, and sculptures, all of which seemed to be related to the theme of death in some way. The objects were arranged in a way that evoked a sense of disarray and chaos, as if the installation were an attempt to come to terms with the randomness and unpredictability of death.

Overall, "Art and Death" is a thought-provoking exhibition that invites viewers to consider the ways in which death is represented in contemporary art. It is a powerful reminder of the complexity and depth of the subject, and of the ways in which art can be used to explore and understand the human condition.
Dear Editor: I am writing this letter in reference to the October 6 editorial concerning the student referendum. According to the Observer editorial board, our political duty is just too large and too complex for a democratic government to be effective — or even to exist any more. To think that any elected official represents a majority and that a body of such officials represents a still larger majority, is ridiculous. In a nation of such size as ours, we have but a great number of minorities whose lifestyles and opinions happen to coincide every once in a while. Some governmental decision comes out of Washington, pronouncement: “Common Good”, actually it is Common Good for some, repression for others. As long as a self-perpetuating evil system is allowed to exist, there really is no cause to hope for improvement. The officials may change, but the system molds them to itself necessarily, regardless of their good intentions, if they actually do exist.

Voting “yes” for the Princeton Plan is absurd. So you work to help a candidate into office. You know that he is in a minority. You know that large bureaucratic governments do not move fast. You know that feeding the Common Good is just like running in place — tiring and useless. Voting “No” for the Princeton Plan is absurd. To become involved at the breakdown of normal university activities is to be thinking that, if the structure of learning breaks down for a moment, then everyone must vegetate until claws repace. You know that you’ve only had a class or two worth remembering. You know that if you hadn’t become a $15,000 investment you probably would have elsewhere by now anyway. Of course there are those who make the university a true learning experience. Of course there are. Of course there are. So “Yes” and “No” are absurd. What to do? Obviously, not voting was a good start. Why bother? Fr. Henchur says that the modern student needs a better sense of history. Any sense of history will show you that we’ve only progressed in technology, confusion, and hypocrisy. Were killing our species man, so sit back and enjoy it. You know there’s no escape.

Smile, God loves you.

Dear Editor:

At times the Observer Features Page has a tendency to display a great lack of taste in its effort to entertain us all at lunch time. Monday’s first in a series of “Poo-bah” interviews was particularly depressing.

Almost anyone will admit that Notre Dame is an awfully competitive place, especially for “student government types.” When all those former student council presidents gather in one place, their first instinct demands they run for some type of story. This could fill up a page here just a little friendlier.

Dear Editor:

We hope the other students see the problem of unhealthy competition when it starts the political season in September. Likewise, a series of articles on “Famous People” smacks of an elitism that we hope doesn’t exist here.

We want to make clear we have no complaint with John Barkett. He certainly acted in good faith when unasked by writer Ellis. It is unfortunate that his name had to be used freely by the Features Editor in an introduction, as were the names of other students.

Primarily though, we hope that the Observer features editor remembers that David Krahsma is still SBP, and will be until next March. It seems unfair to discuss his personal background, his personal philosophies, and his aspirations. Possibly an Observer writer could spend some time with these and do a “Day in the Life” type of story. This could fill up the features page with something a bit more positive than speculation and “Poo-Bah.”

Thank You

Every year there seem to be a few new names popping up on the Notre Dame campus that brand a sophomore as a “can’t miss” prospect at halfback. He has blinding speed, good moves and tremendous size. But for the last two seasons those potential supernovas have not been able to out just one solid running back. This back is Denny Allan. Allan has been a force since his first varsity game as a sophomore and aside from a few weeks during that first season when he was injured, he has not been out from the starting backfield.

The S’11 senior feels that there are not many players up every spring have been a sort of blessing in disguise. “When you have these new names that come up, you have to get ready for every spring have been a sort of blessing in disguise. “When you have these new names that come up, you have to get ready for all the positions in order to hold your position. I’ve been lucky enough to stay away from injuries for the most part, which has helped a great deal. I just go out and listen to the coaches and try to do the things they want.”

This is not to say that Allan is lacking talent. He is a strong runner and very adable co­holder of the ND record for most carries in a game with 59 vs. Michigan State last season. He has a knack for finding the hole and reading blocks by his linemen. He rates as one of the better blocking backs on the Notre Dame squad.

Denny feels that there is much to learn about playing, halfback, especially at ND, where the backs must be versatile. “This was a big change from high school where all I had to do was run when they called my number. Coach (Tom) Cieza offensive backfield) has been a great help to me. He taught me how to block, how to read holes correctly and how to run a good pass pattern and, most important, how to get those extra yards after the catch. Those things you do day and day out get to be incredibly difficult to endure. Denny agrees. “Anything you do day in and day out gets to be a grind but this is where our coaching staff is great. They know that almost two hours on the field every day is not enough for our current situation so they lighten up the workouts if they sense that the entire squad is sort of down.”

In no way would the 190-pounder from Ashtabula, Ohio, agree that there are some opponents that you can’t take seriously. “I can honestly say that I am afraid of every team we meet. After the first few series of plays I am okay, but I never take a game light. It seems that I have my poorer games against weaker opponents though. I don’t really know why, but it seems to happen that way.”

Like many athletes, Denny Allan sets goals for himself. “I think 800 yards rushing would be a reasonable goal for the season. Before the beginning of the season I was thinking in terms of a thousand yards but our offense is too balanced to rely on any one ball carrier for the much yardage.”

Since coming to Notre Dame Denny has continually kept in close touch with his family, particularly his father. Charles Allan. “My dad understands a week to see how things are going. He rarely misses a game. I think he means a lot to the team and because of this I really want him to be proud of me. As for Mom well, she worries a lot, but I think she still wants me to play. She often tries to hide this but she would really be dis­appointed if I wasn’t out on that field on Saturday.”

Not only do his parents influence his career but his older brothers all persuaded him to play football. “When I was younger I used to go see them play for John Carroll University in Cleveland) under coach Johnny Ray (former ND defensive coach) I thought they were good ball players then and now I try to emulate them.”

Allan and Denny has decided on one of two things. “If I get drafted I will definitely give pro football a shot. I don’t really have a preference for any one team but hopefully not one with a surplus of running backs. But if I don’t play in the NFL I call I will teach history and coach football on a secondary level. I think that my experience here under Coach Perasgian qualifies me to coach at any school.”

These careers may prove a challenge for Denny Allan but he will probably just face them as he has faced all the challenges at Notre Dame. When you call him D Allan that big “D” may stand for dependable and durable as well as Denny.

Denny Allan will be a doubtful starter for the Army game. The senior halfback has been slowed up with strained tendons in his ankle.

Po Hockey in Convo

The Fort Wayne Komets of the International Hockey League will play the Muskegon Mon­tawks on Sunday, October 11 at 7:30 P.M. at the Convocation Center Ice Rink.

Fort Wayne is the most suc­cessful minor league hockey op­eration in the country. The 1971­72 season marked the return of Ken Ulliot to the coaching reigns. He has a record of 464 wins and 395 losses and 46 ties since taking over at Fort Wayne in 1958. He retired to become General Manager in 1968, but returned this year after perennial bad­man player coach Joe Bar­tol resigned to go into business. Fort Wayne has only finished lower than 2nd, 3 times in the reign of Ken Ulliot and on one of these occasions they went on to become playoff champions.

Fourteen of last years squad will be back headed by Terry Fahey and Ron Ulliot (Coaches both who is a Mich­igan Grod). No, we're not, and in case you have been wondering lately just what 26,000 megaphones look like (I'm sure that you have been lying awake every night for the past month pondering such a relevant question), just ask any one of Notre Dame's thirteen varsity cheerleaders. Believe it or not, they now have some 45 odd boxes of "Total Sound" stacked away in rooms, in closets, under beds, and in car trunks. One would wonder what the cheerleaders want with all those megaphones. Well, we have a few problems (no comments from the lunch crowd) among which the most outstanding is money. The band will begin its march at 6:45.

Sen. Hartke "drops in" at SMC

by Joseph Abell

I n an unannounced appearance, Senator Vance Hartke (D-IN.), spoke to about fifty St. Mary's students Wednesday afternoon.

The informal session held in Stapleton Lounge was an open discussion, lasting slightly over half an hour. Hartke accompanied by two members of his staff answered questions of the students and expressed his views on many issues. Hartke said that the reason for his appearance on the campus was that he felt students had something to add to political campaigns.

DeGaulle's book published

PARIS (UPI) - Gen. Charles de Gaulle said in a new volume of his memoirs published yesterday, Franco-American relations might even want to use it to to the Southern Cal. game will be held DeGaulle Army football game in Los Angeles at Thanksgiving, as a group, and since the University budget does not allow for such travels some way of raising money had to be found. The revenue from the sales of Notre Dame megaphone, and help send 13 really nice people to California. — Would you believe happiness is a warm megaphone...

When asked his views on pollution, the House Senator mentioned that he was now in charge of the House committee dealing with the pollution situation. According to his bill he would allow for such travels some measure waste produced, by industry, and that a "rewards and punishments" type of system would be set up to help enforce the laws.

On Vice PresidentSpiro Agnew, Hartke said that Agnew's speeches had not hurt him, but that they had hurt only the Republican party.

DeGaulle's book, entitled "The Renewal" is the fourth in a series of six volumes of memoirs the former French President has written or plans to write about his experiences between June, 1940 the beginning of the free French movement and April 13, 1969, when he was forced to resign the French presidency.

DeGaulle wrote in his memoirs that following Kennedy's visit to France in late May, 1961, "It turned out that the final phase of preparing legislation dealing with pollution laws. According to his bill he would allow for such travels some measure waste produced, by industry, and that a "rewards and punishments" type of system would be set up to help enforce the laws.

DeGaulle began to tour almost from the day John F. Kennedy became President and that warned the young President against involvement in Vietnam.

DeGaulle said Kennedy revealed to him in mid-1961 that the United States was preparing for the Vietnam intervention, and that he warned the young President he would be leading America into a bottomless quagmire.

Hawaii congresswoman in Indiana

South Bend, Tuesday, October 6. Democratic Congresswoman Paty T. Mink of Hawaii will tour Indiana's Third Congressional District this week as a guest of Congressman John Brademas (D-IN). Mink will visit four Third District cities on Saturday, according to the following schedule released by Brademas:

6:00 a.m. Coffee at Plymouth

10:30 a.m. Opening of Mink's Democratic Headquarters at 121 North Main Street, Mishawaka

11:45 a.m. Press Conference at Brademas Campaign Headquarters, 1111 South Michigan, South Bend

1:30 p.m. Attend Notre Dame-Army football game, 6:30 p.m. Columbus Day dinner at DeAmico Club, 302 West 11th Street, Mishawaka

9:00 p.m. Elkhart Democratic Women's Club dance, Albion Room, Hotel Elkart.

Brademas, who serves with Mrs. Mink on the House Education and Labor Committee and the Select Education Subcommit-tee, said: "I have worked on legislation with Mrs. Mink for the past six years and regard her as one of the most valuable Members of Congress. She has a distinguished record as a legislator in the field of education and she has also provided strong leadership in consumer affairs and pollution control."

She is a co-sponsor with Brademas of a major bill to provide Head Start-type programs for all American school-children.

Mrs. Mink is one of ten women members of the U.S. House of Representatives. She besides her Education and Labor Committee assignments, she serves on three subcommittees of the House Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.
