He said he was returning because of his "duty to the Student Body Presi­dent," but admitted that he had done some "soul searching" since he walked out. And he denied the Senators to the same on the "whole idea of leadership and your positions as a minority." "It is difficult to be a black student body president at a predominantly white, Catholic University," he said, "The Afro-American on this campus is an alienated individual." He emphasized that the $4300 allocation to the Afro-American Society had been defeated while an earlier motion to allocate $3000 to the Hall Presidents Council had succeeded. "We only have good faith with the Hall Presidents," he asked, "for can we share it with the Afro-American?"

Money allotted to the HPC will be used to fund An Tostal with its share auction and knitting marathon. Krashna remarked that there were "more committees" than those. "I'm the greatest exponent of good faith," he said, "but what is the priority?"

"There is never a rationale for the policy of the HPC, a policy of the 'Home of the Brave'," he said, and later asked, "What is the hell going on?"

"I'm not the savior. You're the savior of your own fate," he continued. "It's not a black and white problem. The only problem for the black is white people."

"It's like it, but I'm about serious business," he said. He expressed disfavor with the parlor and the Senate proceedings terming it "absolute, genuine bullshit." And he asked the Senators to "be about serious business."

"I see an atmosphere which does not allow for the growth of an individual," he added. "I've heard some academic growth is stifled."

Also among the Executive reports was news of the upcoming Student Life Council election in Flanner and Grace Halls to elect a replacement for Glen Corso, retired SLC member. The election is scheduled for November 19. Petitions may be picked up at 9:30 tonight at the Student Government Office. They must be returned, with the required 100 signatures and addresses, before 7 p.m. the following Sunday.

After the reports the Senate got down to business and defeated an amendment to allocate $1500 ($175 more than requested) to the MCRU (Micro-Cultural American Organization). It then approved a motion to allot $3000 to the International Student Leadership Institute.

Hesburgh answers

The following excerpts are from University President Theodore M. Hesburgh’s letter to Montague James F. Conroy’s editorial in last week’s The Observer. The editorial attacked various aspects of Notre Dame life, including the presence of T.G. Grace, about abortion ad that ran in the paper the week after the controversial abortion article. In general, Hesburgh reaffirmed the University’s "home of the Brave," he said, "The Academy, as a whole, is an open speaker policy, supported the non-censorship of the OBSERVER, and requested the patience of the Catholic community on the educational process.

The President’s letter responded to the May 27 letter to the Daily South Bend's Editor in Chief...

"I am not trying to be a fool. I have heard her of before she was invited. But, women’s liberation is certainly a suitable topic for discussion in the university today."

It so happened that this was a sorry choice. The reasons behind the invitation were valid enough; the book written by this woman was not particularly provocative, but she did take this occasion to proclaim such outrageous things that she completely lost her audience. governmental officials, which would make these officers more representative of the whole student body and not solely their respective halls. In accordance with this proposal the officers would receive $60 for expenses and salary to be determined by all the halls together. In addition the election would have to take place before students pick up their rooms the following year.

The proposal was defeated primarily on the grounds that it seemed unworkable given SM’s concentration of certain classes in certain halls. It was felt that the students ability to vote in a school-wide election would be impaired since it would be difficult to know the candidates well enough.

Jackie Stone, an Assembly member also presented a proposal about a new open house policy. The proposal called for open houses to be held in the dorms every week for 5 p.m. to 5 p.m. throughout the academic year.

The rationale behind the policy was... It is believed that true liberation is stifled by extremely limited male visitation hours.

According to the proposal, a student, as a responsible individual, should be able to invite male friends to her room, which is her home, within a perspective of normalcy, rather than use of "special occasion." The basis of this proposal stemmed from the results of questionnaires circulated in the halls.

"I was deeply shocked and grieved at the passing of Gen. de Gaulle, said French President Georges Pompidou in a personal letter of condolence.

The Stil program will take place in the part of the Senate which was allotted $3000. The Off-Campus Commission was unable to help; the Senate voted to allow no money at all to NSF.

Allocations to the National Student Association were con­ sidered next, and again NSF, head of NSF spoke, defending the motions to allot $150 (Finance Committee recom­ mendation) and $134 -both of which failed. Finally the Senate voted to allot no money at all to NSF.

In its final vote, the Senate approved the Finance Commit­ tee's recommendations of $3435 to the Research and Development Commission.

The meeting ended at 9:30 p.m. The Senate will meet again at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

African opposition leader Tabata comments on black nationalists

by Dave Lammers

Mr. LB. Tabata, longtime foe of the South African government and a leader of the African opposition, recounted the development of the African opposition in South Africa in a lecture in the Library Auditorium last night.

Mr. Tabata, in exile from his native South Africa, was a co-founder of the Non-European Unity Movement and is presently the head of the African Peoples Democratic Union, which operates in exile from Zambia.

Tabata outlined the conflicting ideologies of the black nationalists within South Africa as they developed over the century. After the establishment of the Boer and English governments within the Union of South Africa, many African nationalists hoped to work through the English "liberals" in their struggle for African rights. The establishment of African Representative Councils in 1936 established "representation" of Africans in Parliament, though the representatives were white English liberals. Tabata and his colleagues boycotted the Councils, saying that they were incapable of truly affecting the apartheid policies of the Boer power structure. The attempt of the South African power structure to accommodate the rising political consciousness of the Africans merely veiled the true feelings of the rulers, according to Tabata. Cecil Rhodes' view that the African population of South Africa was a "child race" dominated the apartheid policies of the government. Tabata, who opposed the ineffectual African Representative Councils, argued that for "the full democratic rights" of the Africans to be realized, the establishment of an African Opposition was necessary. During the "defiance campaign" of the fifties, Tabata argued that the political leaders should have formed a "national consciousness" of all non-Europeans including Indians, Africans, Modems, and other non-Europeans. His distrust of English liberals was founded on his belief that the English were trying to reconcile non-Europeans. His distrust of English liberals. Tabata and his colleagues boycotted the Councils, saying that they were incapable of truly affecting the apartheid policies of the Boer power structure. The attempt of the South African power structure to accommodate the rising political consciousness of the Africans merely veiled the true feelings of the rulers, according to Tabata. Cecil Rhodes' view that the African population of South Africa was a "child race" dominated the apartheid policies of the government. Tabata, who opposed the ineffectual African Representative Councils, argued that for "the full democratic rights" of the Africans to be realized, the establishment of an African Opposition was necessary.

Tabata described the inhuman conditions of the non-Europeans in South Africa. Half of the black children die before the age of five. The shack that work in the mines of South Africa, the economic backbone of that nation, are shot by the Army if they go on strike. African laborers are considered to be "workseekers," so that they cannot claim the right to decent wages or the right to strike. Africans must carry permits on their possession, and are arrested daily for failing to carry a permit. The eighteen non-white politicians in South Africa are entitled to only 13% of the land.

Right now, however, it appears that the games will be scheduled on a year-to-year basis with winning teams contracted to play. This plan has been in Krause's mind for the past couple of years. It almost became a reality last summer when he had the Kansas City Chiefs and the Minnesota Vikings lined up for a Super Bowl rematch, but it had to be cancelled when another event tied up all of the surrounding parking space.

The money set-aside will go toward complete renovation of the Stadium with emphasis on structural strengthening. This renovation has already begun on a section-to-section basis with the replacing of seats, but the total renovation will take in seats, ramps, cement, bricks, the facade, etc.

"This is the only way I can get money to do it, because the profits from our football games go into the general fund. And so does our share of any bowl game. Last January it was used specifically for minority groups in the university and that probably will be done again.

The games will be limited to summer exhibitions because of league rules which have teams play a certain amount of games at their home stadiums. So, for now, Notre Dame and the South Bend area will be treated to summer exhibition games and a gradually refurbished stadium.
A candid interview with comedian Bob Hope

by Ann Conway

His theme song is "Thank for the Memory;" His favorite game is golf; his business is comedy; and he's good friends with Bob Hope. Appearing at the ACC this Saturday night, Bob Hope is one of the biggest names in show business. He has appeared in over 53 motion pictures, more than 250 T.V. specials, and has traveled the world entertaining war zone troops, college students, and people at large.

Last night, this reporter got a chance to interview this man. Have you ever wondered just what it is that makes him nervously wondering why I ever joined the Observer, and why I continue to try to answer your questions. Finally 5:30 arrived and Hope's press agent called him. The interview went like this:

OBSERVER: Hello, Mr. Hope.

HOPE: How are you? Is that fellow bothering you?

OBSERVER: No, No. He's been very nice.

HOPE: Watch Him.

OBSERVER: Okay. I know him.

HOPE: I've been talking to you some questions.

OBSERVER: Okay. Why did you accept to come and do the concert at Notre Dame?

HOPE: Well, I have a very sentimental feeling about Notre Dame. And I know so many people connected with the university. In 1962 they gave me the Patriot's award, so I feel that I owe them something.

OBSERVER: I hear you're going to be at the football game on Saturday too.

HOPE: That's right.

OBSERVER: Did you hear that I was coming?

HOPE: I sure did. Well, it's a great team. That's really something.

OBSERVER: You play a lot of college tours. Why do you like college shows?

HOPE: I certainly do. The audiences are the last group of people to learn. It's a great challenge to me. I like them because you can't do a show that's too smart. They'll grab you anytime.

OBSERVER: Since you play a lot of colleges, how do you feel about the various youth movements that you see on the campuses, like the anti-war protests and college strikes?

HOPE: Oh, I think they're all right. I have a strange philosophy about it. I'm a little emotional about the conflict since I've been connected with it for so long and I just resent any thing that hinders our chances of getting the right kind of peace and I just feel that if we'd all pull together as a nation instead of breaking up into such political factions we'd have a better chance of getting a peace which would serve our kids and our grandchildren. I feel that when a group like the North Vietnamese group that are over in Paris talking to Bruce could get down to what the President did during our elections. They're so concerned with that question.

OBSERVER: You play a lot of college tours. Why do you keep going back?

HOPE: Well, I've been doing it for so many years that it's sort of our annual trek. We know what it means to the kids over there, and the requests we have for it, and the fact that the Pentagon wants us to do it all the time. You have to really make the justification of this kind of thing because there's no way we could put this show together over here for the volunteers we get. This year we're taking Johnny Bench, the great catcher from Cincinnati, and you couldn't put this show together for a domestic show over here. We take it to the jungles of Vietnam, and Bangkok, Korea, Alaska, Germany, England, Greece and Saudi Arabia. That's our trip this year. It's a pretty exciting trip for everybody concerned, not only the troops but for us too.

It breaks up the monotony for the men, but when they hear that we're coming, they don't know the exact date, but they get a real kick out of it. It's something to look forward to because there's one thing that they enjoy and that's looking at beautiful girls and that's something we try to bring them. That and laughs.

OBSERVER: Do you think that the present administration, Mr. Nixon, with his administration, is doing a good job at trying to end the war?

HOPE: I think they're doing a fantastic job. I really do. I just don't think you could wind this war up any quicker, and again it's difficult to wind up a war and make a peace and convince the enemy like this enemy and we know we're all fighting a communist enemy -- if you were connected with it you'd realize it -- and we're fighting one common enemy and it's one we have to be very worried about. And I think he's doing a fine job and I think he's convinced them that we mean business and they have to make a peace and I think also that we strengthen the South Vietnamese forces and even the Cambodian forces to the extent where they can hold their own. And get our boys out. Now if we can get our boys out by 70, even the end of '71 I think he'll go down in history as doing something very important for the liberation of all of Southeast Asia.

OBSERVER: My roommates really wanted me to ask you about the women's liberation, how you feel about that?

HOPE: I'm in favor of any women's movements. No, I like women as what they are; I like them as girls. I don't want them in the men's clubs.

OBSERVER: Well, I don't think they're pulling down any more. HOPE: Well, yeah, I think so. And with that the interview ended. I was rather sad and about it. Bob Hope seem to me a genuine, interested person, I admint -- I was impressed. And I'm looking forward to seeing him. So I guess working for the Observer does really have its compensations. To coin a phrase, "Thanks for the memory."

Your Notre Dame Accounts Welcome
We Ought to Have Soph Cars.

The proposal presented to the SLC last Monday by the Sophomore Class concerning the feasibility of Sophomore car privileges was an excellent one and deserves top consideration from the Council.

The class detailed several possible locations for the lot, the best of which seems to be the area beside the aerostage building. Any faculty cars which park there now; plus any more cars which would result from the opening of the new biology building could be shunted to the area behind the student union. This would leave the lot free for its assigned purpose as an overflow area for ACC parking.

The University has already shown their efficiency in landscaping and the like when they set up the grounds outside Flanner and Grace last year in time for their dedication. This was done in a fairly short time, and there is no reason why the lot could not be overlaid with gravel equally fast, before the worst part of the winter sets in.

The additional cars, perhaps 400 in number, will bring in more than enough revenue to defray any additional expenses incurred in setting up the lot. There will be increased demands for security but these can be met by hiring more students to patrol, rather than outsiders. As for additional lighting, while the University would not get back their original investment the first year, they would in subsequent years.

In short we believe that Sophomore cars are a good and feasible idea. We urge the Student Life Council to act favorably upon this matter with all possible dispatch.

The Delay has Hurt

The past two weeks has seen a wierd and inexcusable delay in executing the Senate's directive to set up elections in the towers to choose the successor to resigned SLC member Glen Corso. Since Mr. Corso's resignation, in fact, twenty-two days have passed.

Twenty-two days with only seven student representatives on the Student Life Council; twenty-two days in which serious and important business could have been delayed for lack of complete representation.

Fortunately, as is its wont, the Student Life Council has not considered any serious and important business for the past twenty-two days. For this we are indebted to reasons over and over of student representation. Nonetheless, the fact that for nearly a month the SLC was deficient of student representation is a disconcerting one. The fact that the SLC was deficient of student representation because of the inefficiency of other students approaches the absurd.

The fault, we fear, lies squarely with Mr. Krashna. As head of the Election Committee, it was his obligation to call the election committee together to set terms of the election. He has not called that committee together.

In the end, almost through executive fiat, Mr. Krashna has set the date for the election on November 19. Although The Observer does not agree with the unilateral nature of his decision; although The Observer is most unimpressed with the delay he has taken in finally implementing the Senate's expressed will, we are glad that the action has been finally taken.

Joe Schlosser & Dennis Barthel In Extremis

While stumbling along my daily path of existence here, I came upon a flaming controversy currently raging in the minds of most of my fellow students. The controversy concerns the destruction of the class of 1968's SLC homecoming float on campus.

I was shocked to realize that the float, which was a half-hearted show of support for Notre Dame's homecoming, had actually been destroyed. The destruction was done by a small group of students who felt that the float was an affront to Notre Dame's spiritual and academic ideals.

This was done in a fairly short time, and there is no reason why the lot could not be overlaid with gravel equally fast, before the worst part of the winter sets in.

These actions are not for the benefit of Notre Dame, but for the benefit of Notre Dame Manhood. Notre Dame Manhood is a reality, gentlemen, remember? We are those Notre Dame men who, sometime within 4 years will all emerge complete with a certain set of ideals for the asking.

Undoubtedly everyone, all those with an Image of Notre Dame, awaits this great moment when we can finally be considered Notre Dame "men." My question, brother, is, before the Metamorphis-what?

Right now it's tension, tension bred from the simultaneous existence of a well nurtured and fostered "image" of someone's creation called a Notre Dame man, and the undeniable presence of the reality of ourselves.

The image of the Notre Dame man was blatantly insulted and shocked by the badmouthing of Miss Atkinson. Many of the Notre Dame men, themselves, it seems were also upset and my sympathy goes to them, so, that they felt it necessary to make an act of Reparation to Our Lady. Others - the majority of our men - deemed it necessary to take no special action, but just to continue the day to day existence they find themselves in - an existence which, by any internal examination would show completely natural and correct use of those same words in slandering equally sacred concepts and many others even more basically sacred - the people around us. (A week of caustic rants in the unbiased observer - the word. To word ratio might be slightly higher on Friday or Saturday evenings.)

It all continued. Those concerned about the image are frantic in criticism of our official publication, to them hopefully in criticism of the University Press, to them hopefully in criticism of the university administration, to them hopefully in criticism of our own publications. For Notre Dame, about Notre Dame, Notre Dame and the Church, Notre Dame and Our Lady, Notre Dame and abortion, the words come in from all corners, expressing their concern about the Image of Notre Dame and the Notre Dame Man. That's about us, gentlemen, remember? We are those Notre Dame men who, sometime within 4 years will all emerge complete with a certain set of ideals for the asking.

I really want to end this, at least not in any way dramatic, because I'm part of it myself. I'm just wondering if somebody would clue me in.
On my birthday, this year, a single, long-stemmed red rose appeared in an amber-colored vase on the altar where I was about to celebrate Mass. Attached to this budding bloom, written directly on its stem, reading simply: "From your lady love." In a lifetime like mine, if it is a question of love, there is seldom any mystery as to the lady's identity, since all the lady loves me should be captured with ease on one hand. In this instance, the girl who came bearing the birthday rose, never to be seen again, was present only on the date which was October 7th, the feast of Our Lady.

Since its arrival with that first dear flower, the amber-colored vase has never been empty. It is too delicious a hope, for one does not dare destroy at once the gift of that first rose, all the other roses have been taken with the hope he won't really mind from the bouquet of her musky beauty in tribute at the tomb of Cardinal O'Hara in Sacred Heart Church.

One knows, if these words are ever presented, the story of the Cardinal's roses must stop. In the meantime, one can be grateful for having lived, through these flowers, with the memory of O'Hara and of the times he stood as a brother.

For those who believe that religion belongs to the department of the impossible, I will now say that in the beginning of the decade of the Forties. But around the beginning of the beginning, close to the time O'Hara was preparing to leave Notre Dame, the school chapel, Father Franz Werfel wrote a book in fulfillment of a promise of gratitude to God and to the future. The book was: Some Other Better Part of Heaven. It was a promise that the Mother of God had appeared on earth in these latter days to delight in the debris of humanity.

For those who believe that God seemed to send miracles promptly declared to be an idiot for her delightfully visit a French peasant girl named Bernadette Soubirous. Her name, Bernadette, or in the stone of Chartres, or in the arms of the gentle shepherd lying in the grass presumably, at times, in a smudged on the mirror of creation. The husband gets to sleep quickly. But her husband comes home and they discuss the day—over two Manhattan. With dinner, both have wine. About 10, when the kids have gone to bed, the couple sits down over a bit of creme de menthe and watch the television. A little later, both decide it is about time to get some sleep. The husband gets to sleep quickly. But the wife, worrying about the arrangements for her bridge club the next day, can't quite get to sleep. After remaining awake for fifteen minutes—remember—she decides to send a telegram on the televisual—she decides she had better take a sleep pill. The routine continues the same every day with the wife.

One may disagree with me, Father. But I am embarrassed by students who speak criticisms of Mary, when actually they no more doubt the existence of God; one may be skeptical of the doctrines of Mary. But one thing is certain: We all live and well (I hope you are, sir), and living, we are body and soul. And each one of us, whether in or out of the Church, one must be very cautious of the dogmatic affirmations that one lays upon the hand of the Bishop of the diocese. One may approach their son to talk about drug use and it can affect the individual user differently in different circumstances. Socially, drug use or abuse can change the individual user, the same every day with the wife.

One of the most disturbing manifestations of drug use and abuse is the reaction of the federal government and its officials. Over the past several decades, government agencies such as the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs have directed monologues against the use of drugs. Such monologues are not uncommon in "discourse" on drugs. Each time it is presented to students, it is a repetition of one particular theme. The possibility of LSD or any other drug has unchained to reduce drug use by attempting to scare people. Although the Bureau has greatly reduced its reliance on this technique, it is still used to some extent. Uniformed scare techniques are at their most dangerous when they are accompanied by a prominent official. V.P. Spiro Agnew attempted in a recent speech to establish a causal relationship between popular music containing allusions to the drug culture and an increase in drug abuse. Such species reasoning can only lead to skepticism of factual, well researched presentations on the individual and society.

There also exists some inconsistency in the thought of the "non-establishment." The philosophy has poinpointed versus the desire to overspill the bounds of that society has set. In attempting to reject society by the use of drugs, the individuals are really only manifesting a rebellious tendency that they are enshrined in the American culture. Thus, the use of drugs as a means of rejecting society becomes incredibly ironic.

The student Drug Information Center is attempting to supply information that will not be a deliberate distractor for or against the use of drugs. Rather, the Center is attempting to collect and distribute factual information regarding the effects of drugs. The Center also hopes to introduce the idea that drug use is not just a personal concern, but that it is also a psychological concern, a social concern, a religious concern. All of these various aspects of the individual and his society enter into a discussion of drug use and abuse. Medically, of course, the abuse (as opposed to drug use) can cause permanent physical, mental and abuse. This is especially true of the opioids and barbiturates. Psychologically, drug use or abuse can change the individual user, the same every day with the wife. One may disagree with me, Father. But I am embarrassed by students who speak criticisms of Mary, when actually they no more doubt the existence of God; one may be skeptical of the doctrines of Mary. General Electric's been building biggest jet engines for 30 years.

When are they going to start building cleaner jet engines?

Not many people know that General Electric started building a jet engine in 1947, America’s first jet engine. That jet produced only 1200 pounds of thrust.

Our newest jet, for the DC-10, produces around 50,000 pounds of thrust.

In the early days of jet aviation, the important thing was thrust. But suddenly our skies are filled with jets. And, suddenly, jet propulsion is a major problem.

General Electric tackled head on when building the DC-10 engines. And we accomplished two things. When you see the DC-10 take to the air, you'll see no black marks against the sky. Because the engines make virtually no smoke.

Of course, there’s more to jet exhaust than just smoke. Our goal is someday to make jets run totally clean. Another problem with jets is noise. If you’ve ever lived anywhere near an airport, we don’t have to tell you that.

General Electric has been working on noise, too. GE was chosen by the federal government to help solve this problem for the aviation industry. At present, we know of no way a powerful turbofan engine can be made noiseless. But we’ve made progress in that direction.

The DC-10 engines, for instance, are quieter than any jet engines on the passenger planes of the Sixties. Quieter, even though they’re more than three times as powerful.

We have more work to do before we’ll satisfy all the people concerned about jet noise. And that applies to ourselves included. But because we’ve been working at it since the mid-Fifties, before it was widely recognized as much of a problem, we’ve already crossed some important hurdles.

Why are we running this ad?

We’re running this ad, and others like it, to tell you the things General Electric is doing to solve the problems of man and his environment today.

The problems concern us because they concern you. We’re a business and you are potential customers and employees.

But there’s another, more important reason. These problems will affect the future of this country and this planet. We have a stake in that future. As businessmen. And, simply, as people.

We invite your comments.

Not forgotten by those who know

"I don't really feel forgotten out on the field. The team knows the job we do. They know that we linemen have a tough job to perform. Maybe the people in the stands and press box forget about us but the team knows what we're doing and their respect is what is most important to me." Gary Kos, a man who has spent entire football career in what ball players call "the pit" (interior line), was voicing an opinion about the forgotten man on the football field, the offensive lineman.

Gary is the right guard on one of the best attacking lines in college. If there were another school he could possibly be worthy of an All-America label, but since his running mate at left guard is a fellow named Larry DiNardo it's quite certain that one team can have two All-America guards. This lack of publicity has done little to hinder Kos' style of play. He is a combination of Rick Lockner and great pass protector. Just ask Joe Theismann, who is rarely forced to use his scrambling ability.

Gary has become a sort of leader for the other offensive linemen especially when DiNardo came up with his leg injury. Kos explains, "I am not what you would call a holder guy. Actually, I am sort of quiet, but once Larry was out of the starting lineup, I felt that being a senior, I should take things up a bit and keep everybody from getting tight."

He must have succeeded at this because the line, which was considered suspect before the season has now proven to be one of the many strong points for the nationally ranked Irish. Gary says, "I feel that the line has come along real well. Mike Creamery, a sophomore, has really played real well at tight end. Dan Novakov and Larry are starters from the end of last season, so we know what they could do. We also knew that John Dampeer always had the ability but he was injured for a full season. He has bounced back well. Mike Martin has been plagued with leg problems but he has fought off all those hurts and given us a fine job at tackle. Another thing that impressed me with this team is the depth. Dennis DePrenio and Jim Hummer have filled in remarkably well for Larry and Mike Martin."

Renzo "Rock" Perdoni, a native of Milan, Italy, whose family moved to the United States when he was seven, is certain to be listed as one of the great tackles in Georgia Tech Football history.

Perdoni, 5-11 and 236 pounds, came to Tech last season from Ferrum (Virginia) Junior College where he had received All-America recognition and had been named "Junior College National Lineman of the Year" after the 1968 season. He proceeded to have a great year for the Yellow Jackets, being credited (from films) with 105 tackles and with throwing opposing quarterbacks for 82 yards in losses. He was named in 1969 to many All-America second and third teams.

As a result of his outstanding play in 1968 Perdoni's name was listed on most of the 1970 "Pre- season" All-America lists. In Tech's nine games played to date (the Yellow Jackets are 7-2-0 as this is written with ND coming up Saturday) he has certainly lived up to that preseason billing.

Georgia Tech Coach Bud Car- son, speaking this week to the Atlanta Quarterly (Nov. 10th), said of Perdoni: "I've been in football for 27 years and Rock has impressed me more than any other player with his performances and his dedication to the game. He is a great football player that he is. . .It's a real pleasure to be able to associate with a player who wants to be an outstanding player and works at it as Perdoni has."

Coach Carson also repeated an offer he had made before to send films to anyone who has any doubt about Perdoni is an All-America football player.

Perhaps the most interesting quote of the season to date on Perdoni was made by University of Miami Guard Garry Vujanov. Talking to the Atlanta Constitu- tional's Hal Hayes in the Miami locker room after the Georgia Tech-Miami game (which Tech won 31-21), the 6-3, 252-pound Vujanov declared: "He (Perdoni) is absolutely unbelievable . . .He's the fastest man I've ever seen in my whole life. I don't think I touched him other than to touch his hand at the end--all day long--after the snap. . .and he's gone. He's got me and I've never even before I knew what was happening.

"And what a lick he's got! . . .I heard that somebody (an FSU player) said last week that Per- doni 's a great player, but looks just like a strong peg for him. Well, that's the silliest thing I ever heard of. He's strong, sure, but I don't get this . . . or this . . . or this (pointing to various bruises and casts) because of his strength."

There was much pre-game speculation before the Georgia Tech-Tennessee game (won by Tennessee 17-4) on who would come out on top. Perdoni faced Tennessee's great offensive guard Chuck Merideth, who had agreed in the contest that it was pretty much a standoff . . . that they both played outstanding football. This to Tech fan Bill Battle agreed, saying, "Perdoni and I are both Rock Perdoni, called an overgrown midget by some team mates, looks as a giant to the Irish offense for Saturday's clash. different attitude on this year's team. I think it started with the Perdue game. Winning, and winning big like we did, gave us some tremendous momentum. I really don't believe that this team has reached its full poten- tial yet. On any given Saturday we can go out and beat anyone in the country."

Gary wasn't speaking idly about the prospects for the Irish this season. He is a avid watcher of the UPI and AP polls that come out every week. He states, "If we were in a confer- ence where, if we won the championship, the polls wouldn't mean that much to us because we could be assured of a bowl bid. Since we're not, our goal is to be Number One. They (the polls) may not be the most efficient way to proclaim a team's strength but I'll be the first to say we're the best around."

The final comment that the rugged guard made was one that many other members of the 1970 Fighting Irish have stated. "This team is really close. It may sound corny, but once Larry was out of the team, we know that offensive linemen are the heart of the team."

The little price tag that isn't.

When is a price tag not a price tag? When it's on a diamond ring. Drop by your local jewelers, we think that's unfair. When is a price tag not a price tag? When it's that inscrutable code the jeweler can size you we've been one of the largest sellers of diamond rings, to selling it to you, we pay no middle-quality and cost for each and every ring is making of a ring, from buying the rough stones, to selling it to you, we pay no middle-man profit that drive up the price. So you get the lowest price and the highest quality.

Frei does it again

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI) - His team has beaten UCLA, Southern California, Air Force others, and yet isn't in the top 10 or 20.

The has the best corps of college pass receivers in the country.

With stars on the sidelines he has brought his team to the emotional pitch needed to win when experts said it would lose. He gives credit to his assistants and his players for any success he has because of the losses.

And for the second time in two weeks Jerry Frei of Oregon is the United Press International Football Coach of the Week.

"You gotta be kidding...hey, that's impossible!" Frei said when informed of the honor.

Two weeks ago Frei was named coach of the week after Oregon edged USC 10-7 in a downpour at Eugene to knock Air Force from the ranks of the unbeaten and untied 46-35. Fouts who started the season behind injured Tom Blanchard completed 28 of 43 passes for 396 yards and Newland caught 11 for two touchdowns and 145 yards.

Oregon won without star halfback Bobo Moore who was suspended for a week for missing practice.

"Maybe" said Frei after looking at this week's ranking which saw USC, UCLA and Air Force all in the top 20 "our people are being underrated. We have proven the point that we're back in the football world. We're not surprised when we win. Why should everybody else be?"

Frei said Moore's absence "probably added a little incentive", but that the Webfoots have "that kind of a team all year."

Oregon leads the nation in passing and with Moore out against Air Force his substitutions Thuman Andensen and Jim Anderson ran for a combined total of more than 170 yards.

Club basketball

This year the Interhall Office will again sponsor a club basketball league. All registered clubs are eligible. Rosters must contain between 10 and 18 players who are all members of the club.

All rosters must be submitted to the Interhall Office (C4, ACC) by Nov. 24. For further information call the Interhall Office (Tel. 6100).

Just for the record

compiled by Mike Pavlin

The Notre Dame Sports Information Department has decided to count any bowl statistics in a player's individual career statistics. I checked with Mr. Roger Valdiserri and he said that the previous Cotton and Rose Bowl stats would not be counted as Team season marks, thus saving what would otherwise be a total revamping of the record book.

All this of course, affects my calculations which this week are updated with last year's Cotton Bowl figures. Not only do the Bowl stats affect Joe Theismann and Tom Gatewood, but they have moved Scott Hempel into 6th place on the scoring list, Denny Allan into the place in kickoff Returns, and Clarence Ellis into a 10th place tie with Ralph Stepanick and John Porgine for Interception.

By the way, that '79-yard Theismann to Creamery touchdown pass last Saturday is the 3rd longest pass play in ND history, tying a pass of similar distance from Paul Hornung to Jim Morse in 1955.
