Senators react to budget amendment

by Dave McCarthy

The controversial Giuffrida amendment was attached to the Senate approved $35,000 allocation for the Student Union requesting the Academic Commission to seek Senate consent before inviting a speaker costing more than $300 was reconsidered at last night's meeting. Another vote was taken and the amendment failed.

Steve Brown, an off-campus senator who had originally voted no and then yes when the riders were first considered at last Sunday's favored reconsideration saying, "I can think of a number of reasons. First of all, we did not have a large number of senators present Sunday night. Though we did have a quorum."

Giuffrida defended his amendment. "I'm just going to address myself to arguments against this," he said. He noted the difficulties in such processes as impeachment, which can only be undertaken if an official acts unconstitutionally. Impeachment had been suggested as an alternative to the amendment by some opponents to it.

This isn't a political amendment, he said. "It's just a thing to screw liberal speakers." Giuffrida conceded that Union personnel were better able to contact and invite speakers but said, "why a Student Union member is better able to decide how to spend money."

Rebating arguments about the inefficiency that the amendment would cause, he said, "This does not have to be an inefficient system. I do not see any practical problem that cannot be overcome."

Bad Senior T.C. Tressor also spoke in favor of the rider. He listed those arguments he "detected" against the amendment. "The most exacting of this bill," he said, "is that it should slow down the decision making process." Tressor felt such slow down could be avoided if the Academic Commission sought Senate consent at the time they were "hunting down" the speaker rather than at the time they were ready to sign a contract with him.

Tom Threber also favored the amendment. He noted that "many senators believe we don't have a balanced speakers program." But he was convinced that "the ideological battle wouldn't go too far" if the rider was defeated if the Academic Commission had been suggested as an alternative to the amendment by some opponents to it.

Students amazed: faculty is silent concerning dismissals

by Jerry Lukus

The furor over the failure of the History Department to promote Janus faculty member Carl Estabrook, John Williams, and Donald Mattenehen, continues today. A student petition calling for "an intensive reevaluation of the entire system" has apparently appeared as students seem more and more concerned over the decision of the History Department.

Students seem puzzled concerning the action taken by the department. Senior History major Joseph "Prof. Stu" Estabrook was by far the best prof I've had since I've been here," Max feelings that Prof. Estabrook's credentials are uncontestable, but the failure to be promoted should be held to lie in other areas. "To put it bluntly, he got a raw deal. Undoubtedly was due to the fact that he was a liberal in a blatantly conservative department. Student opinion seems to follow that vein, saying that the terminations were caused by political considerations.

Students were vocal about the issue, but the faculty remained quiet and for the most part réseau. Dean Crossen, dean of the College of Arts and Letters, said, "It's not policy to discuss reasons for dismissal. If you like to keep those confidential." When asked whether he had any personal aspect he replied, "There are plenty of other radicals, who have no promotion and tenure. I cannot believe that in this country we can claim political reasons."

Professor Bernard Norling said that it's "not necessarily a fair assumption to label the terminations political." When interview ed about the situation, he answered, "What puzzles me is that every year faculty members are not renewed in many different departments and nothing is said. Why all the attention on this particular case?"

Professor Michael Francis of the Government and International Studies Department commented on the incident, saying, "Because of the nature of this, the History Department is going to be forced into telling us why these teachers haven't been renewed. You really don't know if it was for political reasons or not." About the men as teachers, Francis stated, "If these men are good teachers and to the best of my knowledge, judging by the fact, they and they can't keep their jobs..."

The reasons behind the terminations are "I'm rather close with the tenure and promotion committee of the department, so we can claim political reasons." (Continued on page 9)

ESTABROOK

(Continued on page 9)

Laflin

(Continued on page 3)

SMC student government leaders questioned

SMC student government leaders and students felt the student body for their support, which questions the principles of SMC as a Christian College community. Compounding their statement, student government president and vice-president, Ann Marie Tracey and Jean Gorman, Academic Affairs Committee, Senator who had originally spoken about the situation, he answered, "I'm thankful I can think of a number of reasons. First of all, we did not have a large number of senators present Sunday night. Though we did have a quorum."

Giuffrida defended his amendment. "I'm just going to address myself to arguments against this," he said. He noted the difficulties in such processes as impeachment, which can only be undertaken if an official acts unconstitutionally. Impeachment had been suggested as an alternative to the amendment by some opponents to it.

This isn't a political amendment, he said. "It's just a thing to screw liberal speakers." Giuffrida conceded that Union personnel were better able to contact and invite speakers but said, "why a Student Union member is better able to decide how to spend money."

Rebating arguments about the inefficiency that the amendment would cause, he said, "This does not have to be an inefficient system. I do not see any practical problem that cannot be overcome."

Bad Senior T.C. Tressor also spoke in favor of the rider. He listed those arguments he "detected" against the amendment. "The most exacting of this bill," he said, "is that it should slow down the decision making process." Tressor felt such slow down could be avoided if the Academic Commission sought Senate consent at the time they were "hunting down" the speaker rather than at the time they were ready to sign a contract with him.

Tom Threber also favored the amendment. He noted that "many senators believe we don't have a balanced speakers program." But he was convinced that "the ideological battle wouldn't go too far" if the rider was defeated if the Academic Commission had been suggested as an alternative to the amendment by some opponents to it.

Students were vocal about the issue, but the faculty remained quiet and for the most part réseau. Dean Crossen, dean of the College of Arts and Letters, said, "It's not policy to discuss reasons for dismissal. If you like to keep those confidential." When asked whether he had any personal aspect he replied, "There are plenty of other radicals, who have no promotion and tenure. I cannot believe that in this country we can claim political reasons."

Professor Bernard Norling said that it's "not necessarily a fair assumption to label the terminations political." When interview ed about the situation, he answered, "What puzzles me is that every year faculty members are not renewed in many different departments and nothing is said. Why all the attention on this particular case?"

Professor Michael Francis of the Government and International Studies Department commented on the incident, saying, "Because of the nature of this, the History Department is going to be forced into telling us why these teachers haven't been renewed. You really don't know if it was for political reasons or not." About the men as teachers, Francis stated, "If these men are good teachers and to the best of my knowledge, judging by the fact, they and they can't keep their jobs..."

The reasons behind the terminations are "I'm rather close with the tenure and promotion committee of the department, so we can claim political reasons." (Continued on page 9)

ESTABROOK

(Continued on page 9)

Laflin

(Continued on page 3)

SMC student government leaders questioned

SMC student government leaders and students felt the student body for their support, which questions the principles of SMC as a Christian College community. Compounding their statement, student government president and vice-president, Ann Marie Tracey and Jean Gorman, Academic Affairs Committee, Senator who had originally spoken about the situation, he answered, "I'm thankful I can think of a number of reasons. First of all, we did not have a large number of senators present Sunday night. Though we did have a quorum."

Giuffrida defended his amendment. "I'm just going to address myself to arguments against this," he said. He noted the difficulties in such processes as impeachment, which can only be undertaken if an official acts unconstitutionally. Impeachment had been suggested as an alternative to the amendment by some opponents to it.

This isn't a political amendment, he said. "It's just a thing to screw liberal speakers." Giuffrida conceded that Union personnel were better able to contact and invite speakers but said, "why a Student Union member is better able to decide how to spend money."

Rebating arguments about the inefficiency that the amendment would cause, he said, "This does not have to be an inefficient system. I do not see any practical problem that cannot be overcome."

Bad Senior T.C. Tressor also spoke in favor of the rider. He listed those arguments he "detected" against the amendment. "The most exacting of this bill," he said, "is that it should slow down the decision making process." Tressor felt such slow down could be avoided if the Academic Commission sought Senate consent at the time they were "hunting down" the speaker rather than at the time they were ready to sign a contract with him.

Tom Threber also favored the amendment. He noted that "many senators believe we don't have a balanced speakers program." But he was convinced that "the ideological battle wouldn't go too far" if the rider was defeated if the Academic Commission had been suggested as an alternative to the amendment by some opponents to it.

Students were vocal about the issue, but the faculty remained quiet and for the most part réseau. Dean Crossen, dean of the College of Arts and Letters, said, "It's not policy to discuss reasons for dismissal. If you like to keep those confidential." When asked whether he had any personal aspect he replied, "There are plenty of other radicals, who have no promotion and tenure. I cannot believe that in this country we can claim political reasons."

Professor Bernard Norling said that it's "not necessarily a fair assumption to label the terminations political." When interview ed about the situation, he answered, "What puzzles me is that every year faculty members are not renewed in many different departments and nothing is said. Why all the attention on this particular case?"

Professor Michael Francis of the Government and International Studies Department commented on the incident, saying, "Because of the nature of this, the History Department is going to be forced into telling us why these teachers haven't been renewed. You really don't know if it was for political reasons or not." About the men as teachers, Francis stated, "If these men are good teachers and to the best of my knowledge, judging by the fact, they and they can't keep their jobs..."

The reasons behind the terminations are "I'm rather close with the tenure and promotion committee of the department, so we can claim political reasons." (Continued on page 9)
Church: ‘Above the times’

By Chris Wolfe

Erik von Khuneld-Leiddihn warned the Oreten Brownstone Society last night that the Church must seek to be “above the times” rather than “synchro-mesh with the spirit of the times.”

He opened by noting that the word “aggiornamento” is heard infrequently these days, where “renewal” and “going back to the sources or wellsprings” have replaced it. “And when one returns to the source,” he said, “he must swim against the current.”

In answering the question of how relevant the Church should try to be in these days, Mr. Khuneld-Leiddihn pointed out that the perspective of time was easier for an older man to see, and that young people must come to realize that one cannot cling to the present.

Hilton wins fresh class presidency

Amid accusations of election fraud and blatant mismanagement, the Sophomore class election committee announced last night that their tally, Rick Hilton, was the Sophomore class vice-president over Roderick Braye, Bob Swanson won the Freshman class by a 48 vote margin over James Fossett, and Terry Tulisak won the Nearest contender.

Mr. Khuneld-Leiddihn was the tendency to be a ‘phony coming-lately’, to get enthusiastic over issues which were already dead. Typical examples of this tendency were pointed to, in the nationalizing of the Church in an age which seems likely to be the prelude to a highly disciplined and hierarchical rule of experts.

Noting that love of neighbor is to be central today (rather than love of God), he pointed out that such love exists only because of the fatherhood of God. An historical example of renewal of Christianity by one generation will not one-day parrot Christianity. He closed, “we are celebrating a “vintage generation.”

Mr. Khuneld-Leiddihn, the Church must seek to be against the current.” he said, “he must swim above the times” rather than to cling to the present.

For Your Comfort and Enjoyment

PITCHER OF BEER $1.18

HAPPY HOUR 2-4 and 7-9 Daily

COZY ATMOSPHERE

COFFEE & NICE FOOD

IT ONLY TAKES A FEW MORE MINUTES TO GET TO...

SIMERI’S Corner of Hill and Madison

ALL Newly Remodeled

For Your Comfort and Enjoyment

THE OBSERVER

Friday, November 20, 1970

We’ve Added the Best Pizza in Town to Our Menu! Try Us

The Computing Science Department grants a bachelor’s degree through the colleges of Engineering, Science, and Liberal Arts. It is not the same as the Computing Center which offers courses for the University.

The Computing Science Department presently serves thirty to forty majors in computer science who will be in the position of moving to another school or change majors and make up the needed credits.

According to Prof. Seymour Berger, members of the Department know nothing official about why the Department is being disbanded and what is going to happen to the professors. The acting Chairman of the Computing Science Department, Bernard Waldman, was out of town and unavailable for questioning.

TYPING

Any material, any length, charts and diagrams, 50¢ per page. Will pick up and deliver. Call Connie Paday 389-0177 after 4 p.m.

The Observer is published daily by the Student Union at Notre Dame and is distributed by the student body. Subscriptions may be purchased at student union ticket office or on sale at student union ticket office.

The publisher has no connection with the University of Notre Dame or the Student Union. Subscriptions may be purchased at student union ticket office or on sale at student union ticket office.

The publisher has no connection with the University of Notre Dame or the Student Union. Subscriptions may be purchased at student union ticket office or on sale at student union ticket office.
Resistance to helping minority students

(Continued from page 1) rejected by the Board of Trustees. Miss Tracey explained that this was a contradiction to the concepts of community government. They added to their list of grievances the problem of black students who are new at SMC, and further recruitment for minority students.

Miss Henninger said, "There is a marked resistance to extending help to minority students through administrative, structural, and legalistic blocks."

In addition Miss Tracey added that too many unilateral decisions are being made by one person in authority when the decisions are supposed to go through the committees of community government.

Miss Tracey added that students have to initiate everything that must be done for the students welfare. Nothing is done unless we act, and after all the work on the project is done, it is usually put off or not acted upon.

Miss Tracey said that she realized that Father McGrath's death there were a lot of loose ends and problems which the new president had inherited. It is a hard post to step into but she did not feel that this was an excuse.

The student leaders added that they did not believe the problem rests solely with the administration. "There are other groups responsible for the present situation because of their influence," said Miss Tracey. Miss Henninger added that there have been ambiguous responses to legitimate faculty griefs included the problems that must be done for the students welfare.

Carol Henninger, who works on academic affairs, explained that they respected the administration's judgement but she did not feel that the administration respected their good judgement. She said it is hard for student government to operate in a responsible manner if they are not given the facts and if most of the administration's answers are contradictory.

Miss Henninger added that their responsibilities required that they know what is truth. She said that even in her dialogue with the administration a certain distrust seemed to be present.

Citing various examples of areas which have been neglected because of economim priorities the student leaders included the need for residence hall improvements, health facilities, solutions to maintenance problems, and an off campus policy.

Other areas of neglect which were mentioned included the lack of unity and needed representation in the areas which have been neglected.

She painted a vivid, terrifying picture of the end result of marijuana legalization, describing people shooting and smoking in broad daylight, even on school playgrounds.

She quoted figures that claimed that 85% of the users under 18 were introduced to drugs via friends. The school she being made by one person in authority when the decisions are supposed to go through the committees of community government.

Miss Henninger added that they did not believe the problem rests solely with the administration. "There are other groups responsible for the present situation because of their influence," said Miss Tracey. Miss Henninger added that there have been ambiguous responses to legitimate faculty grievances included the problems that must be done for the students welfare. Nothing is done unless we act, and after all the work on the project is done, it is usually put off or not acted upon.

Miss Tracey said that she realized that Father McGrath's death there were a lot of loose ends and problems which the new president had inherited. It is a hard post to step into but she did not feel that this was an excuse.

The student leaders added that they did not believe the problem rests solely with the administration. "There are other groups responsible for the present situation because of their influence," said Miss Tracey. Miss Henninger added that there have been ambiguous responses to legitimate faculty grievances included the problems that must be done for the students welfare. Nothing is done unless we act, and after all the work on the project is done, it is usually put off or not acted upon.

Miss Tracey said that she realized that Father McGrath's death there were a lot of loose ends and problems which the new president had inherited. It is a hard post to step into but she did not feel that this was an excuse.

The student leaders added that they did not believe the problem rests solely with the administration. "There are other groups responsible for the present situation because of their influence," said Miss Tracey. Miss Henninger added that there have been ambiguous responses to legitimate faculty grievances included the problems that must be done for the students welfare. Nothing is done unless we act, and after all the work on the project is done, it is usually put off or not acted upon.

Miss Tracey said that she realized that Father McGrath's death there were a lot of loose ends and problems which the new president had inherited. It is a hard post to step into but she did not feel that this was an excuse.

The student leaders added that they did not believe the problem rests solely with the administration. "There are other groups responsible for the present situation because of their influence," said Miss Tracey. Miss Henninger added that there have been ambiguous responses to legitimate faculty grievances included the problems that must be done for the students welfare. Nothing is done unless we act, and after all the work on the project is done, it is usually put off or not acted upon.
THE OBSERVER

Friday, November 20, 1970

Naked Kahuna discloses secrets!

By John E. Knerr
[Imagery of a surprised and excited man."

I was told by the strong-armed guard at the door that, yes, indeed the famed Naked Kahuna would not only see me, but that he would also grant me an interview. It is not many who manage to gain entrance into The Kahuna's closely guarded third floor suite in Tree's-Phillips."

The following is what was discussed in this infamous meeting between The Observer and the Naked Kahuna. The funny thing, the Kahuna is just a friendly, ordinary guy, after the glamour and excitement of his Saturday antics are stripped away.)

A 20 year old junior standing 5' weighing 148 pounds from Chicago, Illinois, Jamie "Naked Kahuna" Fan is his first year of varsity stripping."

OBSERVER - When did this career of yours start?

KAHUNA - When I was told by my mother and father, who conceived the Kahuna, born, that I would come a long way from the bumbling idiot in the Purdue to a good showing in my Pitt performance. At Georgia Tech I felt I could do a better job after the 4th quarter because at the end of the third quarter my heart just was not in my performance."

KAHUNA - I can't say that I have ever felt cold at any of the games. The warm temperature at 98.6 degrees. I also bring a bottle of anti-freeze to the warm weather games in September. I strip at least once a day in the studio every afternoon while humming the high step tune. At night I push my desk in front of my window, place my high intensity light on me, put the Notre Dame band record on and then do my thing.

OBSERVER - Is their any time when you go through both before and during the season?

KAHUNA - Not really. I start getting butterflies in my stomach with about 3 minutes left in the third quarter. The bloodstream. By game time I feel 100 percent ready to go."

KAHUNA - I can't say that I have ever felt cold at any of the games. The warm temperature at 98.6 degrees. I also bring a bottle of anti-freeze to the warm weather games in September. I strip at least once a day inside the stadium every afternoon while humming the high step tune. At night I push my desk in front of my window, place my high intensity light on me, put the Notre Dame band record on and then do my thing.

OBSERVER - Is their any time when you go through both before and during the season?

KAHUNA - Not really. I start getting butterflies in my stomach with about 3 minutes left in the third quarter. The bloodstream. By game time I feel 100 percent ready to go."

KAHUNA - I can't say that I have ever felt cold at any of the games. The warm temperature at 98.6 degrees. I also bring a bottle of anti-freeze to the warm weather games in September. I strip at least once a day inside the stadium every afternoon while humming the high step tune. At night I push my desk in front of my window, place my high intensity light on me, put the Notre Dame band record on and then do my thing.

OBSERVER - Is their any time when you go through both before and during the season?

KAHUNA - Not really. I start getting butterflies in my stomach with about 3 minutes left in the third quarter. The bloodstream. By game time I feel 100 percent ready to go."

KAHUNA - I can't say that I have ever felt cold at any of the games. The warm temperature at 98.6 degrees. I also bring a bottle of anti-freeze to the warm weather games in September. I strip at least once a day inside the stadium every afternoon while humming the high step tune. At night I push my desk in front of my window, place my high intensity light on me, put the Notre Dame band record on and then do my thing.

OBSERVER - Is their any time when you go through both before and during the season?

KAHUNA - Not really. I start getting butterflies in my stomach with about 3 minutes left in the third quarter. The bloodstream. By game time I feel 100 percent ready to go."

KAHUNA - I can't say that I have ever felt cold at any of the games. The warm temperature at 98.6 degrees. I also bring a bottle of anti-freeze to the warm weather games in September. I strip at least once a day inside the stadium every afternoon while humming the high step tune. At night I push my desk in front of my window, place my high intensity light on me, put the Notre Dame band record on and then do my thing.

OBSERVER - Is their any time when you go through both before and during the season?

KAHUNA - Not really. I start getting butterflies in my stomach with about 3 minutes left in the third quarter. The bloodstream. By game time I feel 100 percent ready to go."

KAHUNA - I can't say that I have ever felt cold at any of the games. The warm temperature at 98.6 degrees. I also bring a bottle of anti-freeze to the warm weather games in September. I strip at least once a day inside the stadium every afternoon while humming the high step tune. At night I push my desk in front of my window, place my high intensity light on me, put the Notre Dame band record on and then do my thing.
Sue Bury: Coed stalemate at SMC

by Sue Bury

Recent rumors that Notre Dame will become a co-educational institution with a student body of both men and women have sparked some action on the part of the SMC faculty. Some of the teachers said that the "panic" was the result of comments made by Fr. Burtchell and Sheedy in the Observer. Another source of confusion was the importance of maintaining "autonomy" by setting up a separate educational liberal arts college to "enrich the intellectual life of the University without adding to its financial burden."

Of the proposals and statements brought before the faculty assembly, Sr. Miriam Patrick's original document was the only one to be considered. At Black phrased it, "Teachers talk a lot." The assembly got around to looking at the guidelines designed by Poinsatte and Runde, but decided to make St. Mary's a college of the university, "a coordinate rather than a merged organizational plan." The second resolution, prepared largely by Detlef, amplified the first -- "the arrangement alone will preserve the advantages of competition among departments and courses which may deal with almost identical subject matter...the competition can only be helpful not only in the sense of diversity, but as a stimulus to the quality of thinking and teaching."

Dr. Charles Poinsatte, of the chemistry department, added to this view by commenting that "the faculty is that they all think that this threat is inhibiting an outgoing attitude." He said that he didn't know if the current cooperation between merger and autonomy was feasible.

Dr. Francis Benton, of the chemistry department, added to this view by commenting that "the faculty has had trouble hitting a real point of agreement of the whole SMC faculty uproar...it is not even positive that those resolutions reflect a real consensus of opinion."

Dr. Poinsatte said that the students who are pushing for co-education are trying to make decisions for institutions in which they have only a temporary concern. The faculty is "deeply concerned" -- especially when their jobs may be on the line.

But faculty actions so far has gained little yardage toward solving the core problem. The only course of action available now is to wait -- for Park and Mayhew to make their resolutions, hopefully next semester.

If you'd like to know more, call 376-2111 for Regional admissions.

Friday, November 20, 1970

THE OBSERVER

State at 7:30 & 9:30

Now Showing

The Wrecking Crew

Starring Richard Benjamin, Frank Langella, Susan Strasberg

Based on the play by Howard K. Smith

A Universal Picturess-

Directed by Stuart Rosenberg

Surrounded by a variety of ad hoc committees, the SMC faculty has had trouble hitting a real point of agreement of the whole institution. The first statement, which eventually died, was to set up a panel to make St. Mary's a college of the University, "a coordinate rather than a merged organizational plan."

"That's all," Runde said. "That's the final responsibility of the ad hoc committee."

Dr. Robert Runde, head of the chemistry department, added to this view by commenting that "the faculty has had trouble hitting a real point of agreement of the whole SMC faculty uproar...it is not even positive that those resolutions reflect a real consensus of opinion."

Dr. Poinsatte said that the students who are pushing for co-education are trying to make decisions for institutions in which they have only a temporary concern. The faculty is "deeply concerned" -- especially when their jobs may be on the line.

But faculty actions so far has gained little yardage toward solving the core problem. The only course of action available now is to wait -- for Park and Mayhew to make their resolutions, hopefully next semester.
Centralized Balloting

When the new constitution comes up before the student body, the Observer hopes that it will win. We've made this abundantly clear. By the same token, we hope the vote is efficiently and fairly conducted.

There are some thirty ballot boxes in twenty-two halls and one off-campus office, the chances of dishonesty and perfection rate high. Past elections have indicated this. Rarely has there been a year of a Senate or HP elections which hasn't been marked by charges of fraud, and this year's farcical Freshman Class election run, as Senate and HPC races are, in the hall, amplifies all our misgivings about such races.

The one time centralized elections were held, the ballotting turned out to be an impressive success. Balloting for the Princeton Plan, held around the Registrar's office of the Administration building, was clean, efficient, and honest. There were no charges of voter fraud. None were needed. The superiority of the system was obvious.

Centralized ballotling is like that, though. Since there would be perhaps only six ballot boxes (as opposed to the present twenty-three), there would be one-fourth the number of people required to man the boxes, and one-fourth the chance of a mistake.

Quite frankly, we have very little hope that the election committee will act in such a rational manner. Events past have indicated that the election committee is fain to take action because of some agent's action. Nonetheless, the action would be of obvious benefit to the student body, and is, indeed, the only fair system possible.

Dave Lammers

Academic Freedom

The present flap over the decision of the History Department not to rehire three of its youngest professor is a complicated issue, and is important to all of us. The problem encompasses political, economic, and academic considerations. The decision affects the tenured faculty in every department, the students in Liberal Arts, and the credibility of the Administration.

Two facts should be known from the outset. First, Professors Matthiesen, Estabrook, and Williams are all considered to be excellent teachers within the department. The teacher evaluation forms that the University conducts found all three men to be well regarded by the history students. The Scholastic evaluation book has glowing descriptions of Mr. Matthiesen, which leads one to speculate that good teachers are held to be expendable elements. In Father Williams are all considered to be excellent administrators, the reasons for the dismissals were emphasized that teaching should be of more importance than administrative work.

And what if, as surely will be contended by the administration, the reason for the dismissals were clean and pure, academic and financial, unbeknownst to personal or political antipathy? There are at present six tenured faculty members in the history department, while six men lack that degree of academic protection. Father Bluntz, on leave from the history department, hypothesized that the department could afford to take on two more tenured faculty members. There are at present, ten Ph.D.'s in history for every job opening, which means that some students is coming from the federal government, which means hypothetically, that less faculty members will be needed without department. This economic situation is combined with the financial priorities at Notre Dame, which less and less money is available for liberal arts studies while the federal grants for engineering and military research go unimpeachable.

Did, then, the history department fail to rehire three men as an economy move? Again, we are left to speculate. Department heads rarely trim their own department without a directive from the central administration. Also, financial considerations are far from the minds of tenure committees, who should more concerned with the teaching and academic excellence of the department.

And if, in fact, liberal arts faculty are being dismissed for economic reasons, that means there will be fewer young professors teaching fewer courses to more students in liberal arts. Liberal arts students become more numerous while liberal arts professors decline in numbers. Priorities?

And what intelligent young professor would want to teach at a university that keeps its professors for five years before banning them to the classified ads?

The argument that the history department is magnanimously cutting back expenses so that the classified ads? Priorities?

The student strike last spring reportedly had an especially sharp impact on the already conservative history department. At any rate, it is impossible to say what the actual cause of the dismissals was the major consideration. Professor Estabrook, who was at Notre Dame for two years, was not up for tenure, and it seems that political considerations in his case may have been the deciding factor. The other reason was given, and again, we are forced to speculate, and at Notre Dame, one soon comes to expect the worst. Dr. Matthiesen agrees that he was a political figure in the department, and some believe that he was not rehired, along with the two others, as a political issue. Again, we are left to speculate because of the unfortunate silence of the decision maker.

The student strike last spring reportedly had an especially sharp impact on the already conservative history department. At any rate, it is impossible to say what the actual cause of the dismissals was the major consideration. Professor Estabrook, who was at Notre Dame for two years, was not up for tenure, and it seems that political considerations in his case may have been the deciding factor. The other reason was given, and again, we are forced to speculate, and at Notre Dame, one soon comes to expect the worst. Dr. Matthiesen agrees that he was a political figure in the department, and some believe that he was not rehired, along with the two others, as a political issue. Again, we are left to speculate because of the unfortunate silence of the decision maker.

The student strike last spring reportedly had an especially sharp impact on the already conservative history department. At any rate, it is impossible to say what the actual cause of the dismissals was the major consideration. Professor Estabrook, who was at Notre Dame for two years, was not up for tenure, and it seems that political considerations in his case may have been the deciding factor. The other reason was given, and again, we are forced to speculate, and at Notre Dame, one soon comes to expect the worst. Dr. Matthiesen agrees that he was a political figure in the department, and some believe that he was not rehired, along with the two others, as a political issue. Again, we are left to speculate because of the unfortunate silence of the decision maker.

And what if, as surely will be contended by the administration, the reason for the dismissals were clean and pure, academic and financial, unbeknownst to personal or political antipathy? There are at present six tenured faculty members in the history department, while six men lack that degree of academic protection. Father Bluntz, on leave from the history department, hypothesized that the department could afford to take on two more tenured faculty members. There are at present, ten Ph.D.'s in history for every job opening, which means that some students is coming from the federal government, which means hypothetically, that less faculty members will be needed without department. This economic situation is combined with the financial priorities at Notre Dame, which less and less money is available for liberal arts studies while the federal grants for engineering and military research go unimpeachable.

Did, then, the history department fail to rehire three men as an economy move? Again, we are left to speculate. Department heads rarely trim their own department without a directive from the central administration. Also, financial considerations are far from the minds of tenure committees, who should more concerned with the teaching and academic excellence of the department.

And if, in fact, liberal arts faculty are being dismissed for economic reasons, that means there will be fewer young professors teaching fewer courses to more students in liberal arts. Liberal arts students become more numerous while liberal arts professors decline in numbers. Priorities?

And what intelligent young professor would want to teach at a university that keeps its professors for five years before banning them to the classified ads?

The argument that the history department is magnanimously cutting back expenses so that the classified ads? Priorities?

The student strike last spring reportedly had an especially sharp impact on the already conservative history department. At any rate, it is impossible to say what the actual cause of the dismissals was the major consideration. Professor Estabrook, who was at Notre Dame for two years, was not up for tenure, and it seems that political considerations in his case may have been the deciding factor. The other reason was given, and again, we are forced to speculate, and at Notre Dame, one soon comes to expect the worst. Dr. Matthiesen agrees that he was a political figure in the department, and some believe that he was not rehired, along with the two others, as a political issue. Again, we are left to speculate because of the unfortunate silence of the decision maker.

And what if, as surely will be contended by the administration, the reason for the dismissals were clean and pure, academic and financial, unbeknownst to personal or political antipathy? There are at present six tenured faculty members in the history department, while six men lack that degree of academic protection. Father Bluntz, on leave from the history department, hypothesized that the department could afford to take on two more tenured faculty members. There are at present, ten Ph.D.'s in history for every job opening, which means that some students is coming from the federal government, which means hypothetically, that less faculty members will be needed without department. This economic situation is combined with the financial priorities at Notre Dame, which less and less money is available for liberal arts studies while the federal grants for engineering and military research go unimpeachable.

Did, then, the history department fail to rehire three men as an economy move? Again, we are left to speculate. Department heads rarely trim their own department without a directive from the central administration. Also, financial considerations are far from the minds of tenure committees, who should more concerned with the teaching and academic excellence of the department.

And if, in fact, liberal arts faculty are being dismissed for economic reasons, that means there will be fewer young professors teaching fewer courses to more students in liberal arts. Liberal arts students become more numerous while liberal arts professors decline in numbers. Priorities?

And what intelligent young professor would want to teach at a university that keeps its professors for five years before banning them to the classified ads?

The argument that the history department is magnanimously cutting back expenses so that the classified ads? Priorities?

The student strike last spring reportedly had an especially sharp impact on the already conservative history department. At any rate, it is impossible to say what the actual cause of the dismissals was the major consideration. Professor Estabrook, who was at Notre Dame for two years, was not up for tenure, and it seems that political considerations in his case may have been the deciding factor. The other reason was given, and again, we are forced to speculate, and at Notre Dame, one soon comes to expect the worst. Dr. Matthiesen agrees that he was a political figure in the department, and some believe that he was not rehired, along with the two others, as a political issue. Again, we are left to speculate because of the unfortunate silence of the decision maker.

And what if, as surely will be contended by the administration, the reason for the dismissals were clean and pure, academic and financial, unbeknownst to personal or political antipathy? There are at present six tenured faculty members in the history department, while six men lack that degree of academic protection. Father Bluntz, on leave from the history department, hypothesized that the department could afford to take on two more tenured faculty members. There are at present, ten Ph.D.'s in history for every job opening, which means that some students is coming from the federal government, which means hypothetically, that less faculty members will be needed without department. This economic situation is combined with the financial priorities at Notre Dame, which less and less money is available for liberal arts studies while the federal grants for engineering and military research go unimpeachable.

Did, then, the history department fail to rehire three men as an economy move? Again, we are left to speculate. Department heads rarely trim their own department without a directive from the central administration. Also, financial considerations are far from the minds of tenure committees, who should more concerned with the teaching and academic excellence of the department.

And if, in fact, liberal arts faculty are being dismissed for economic reasons, that means there will be fewer young professors teaching fewer courses to more students in liberal arts. Liberal arts students become more numerous while liberal arts professors decline in numbers. Priorities?

And what intelligent young professor would want to teach at a university that keeps its professors for five years before banning them to the classified ads?

The argument that the history department is magnanimously cutting back expenses so that the classified ads? Priorities?
Lone hearts in the Unreal City

The incident happened in a recent summer on a Sunday evening, when the choirs of the Lord's day were done, and I was walking down the main street of Salyersville (actually downtown Salyersville is composed of the intersection of Routes 460 and 7). The most evident is the unbelievable number of men just strolling down the street or leaning on a passing meter shooing the breeze. Walk by the courthouse steps any time of day and you will see men jacked up on the steps, sitting there whistling on a stick, taking time out every so often to spit a waad of brown into the gutter on the side of the street. Men's faces are grizzled and weather beaten. Some of them have used jobs a short time ago with a camper-trailer factory that was started as part of the War on Poverty. But the company closed up shop shortly after it started for a number of reasons, and the men ended up back on the courthouse steps. The factory building still remains, waiting for the day when some energetic, young businessmen, will come in with a scheme to give old Mr. Smith his luck at starting a small business. The men of Magoffin County are still waiting for a push from the ground up.
A Alternative

Editor:

I wish to avail an opportunity, to powers that be, for a real expression of what we students have to say. Presently, our cheerleaders are engaged in a drive to finance a trip to our game with Southern California. It seems to me that a more appropriate utilization of the money accrued might be realized. The money could be given to some family or families in South Bend to provide a Thanksgiving dinner to those, who otherwise would have been deprived of a decent meal. Admittedly, such a gesture will not receive national publicity that the superfluous presence of cheerleaders will attract. But, just where do our values and priorities lie in this matter?

Sincerely,

Robert Pallemon 71

MECHA

Editor:

I am in total shock over the Observer's latest example of irresponsible journalism. Your editorial comment on the Senate's allocation of $1,500 for the MECHA program and at the same time make a mere non-sequitur, it is a serious matter?

I read the excerpt in the November 18 Observer on the MECHA program and at the same time make a mere non-sequitur, it is a serious...
Budget reactions varied

(Continued from page 1)

would like to maintain some sort of "creative control" and concluded by saying that the amendment put "an unnecessary sort of "creative control" and that since the Union did the work and research in such matters it should be allowed freedom to invite speakers. The vote was taken and the amendment failed (20 against – 15 for).

At this point the Senate changed back from Committee of the Whole to General Assembly.

Senator Don Ferris proposed the Student Union allocation be upped from $35,000 to the Finance Committee recommendation of $37,000. He explained, "Quite a few senators voted against $37,000 then (Sunday night) because of the wider (Gifford) Wattchell's dilemma. But I think they need the money."

Thrasher, a member of the Finance Committee said, "I feel quite sure that the Student Union can get by on $35,000." 13 favored increasing the Student Union allocation. 18 rejected the motion.

Steve Novak moved the Senate "Accept the Committee of the Whole's Recommendation." "On the whole we've considered this budget very rationally," he said. He remarked that it was a "compromise budget" and reminded the body of the long time it took to get through considerations on it.

Tom Thrasher proposed an amendment to be attached to the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole. It stipulated that none of the $65,094 that had been budgeted be used to pay any expenses of the National Student Association. As Committee of the Whole the Senate had voted to allot no money to the NSA in or of itself. Thrasher's amendment passed on a close vote (18 in favor – 16 opposed).

The Senate then voted to accept the Committee of the Whole's Recommendation, with the Thrasher amendment attached. Under the new business, petition.

Professors

(Continued from page 1) and with the department head, Professor Vincent DeSantis. Yesterday afternoon he had no comment for the press. The teachers involved have had no further comment, but Professor Eastbrook is reportedly waiting until after Thanksgiving to offer a statement.

Students Jim Leary and Jim Heitzman are circulating petitions concerning the tenure system. The body of the petition reads, "We the undersigned, demand an intensive reconsideration of the entire tenure system in light of the termination of the contracts of several Notre Dame professors. We believe that the student body should have control proportional to their contributions concerning the tenure system. The body of the petition reads, "We the undersigned, demand an intensive reconsideration of the entire tenure system in light of the termination of the contracts of several Notre Dame professors. We believe that the student body should have control proportional to their contributions to the University concerning the decision making processes of hiring, firing, and granting tenure. In order that this proportionate control have force in the current crisis, evidenced by the coming to light of various refusals to renew contracts, it should be implemented immediately to include the academic year 1970-71. These conditions are to be met by February 1, 1971."

Also, Tuesday night the history graduate students are going to meet to discuss the case of the three professors.

Keenan hangs psyche banner

A 151 foot banner is, if you haven't noticed, hanging in the air over the North Quad. It was done by Section Three East of Keenan Hall and reads, "Raggers note: Fat and Shuppy So they saw on Saturday LSU will pay Go Irish Bag the Bongals". Ken Ross, leader of that section headed this project which he said took several weeks to finish and cost over twenty dollars for paint alone.

Ross said that the sign was originally a half project, but only his section showed interest, so they worked on it and financed it themselves. He said that the suspension system for the banner was designed by Physics majors in the section. Ross admitted that he had wanted to get the banner in the field during halftime, but could not secure permission. He felt that the sign served as a unifying factor for the entire section.

Student Billing Service makes sense!

There's no reason why you shouldn't enjoy the convenience of making long distance calls from your dorm room phone and receiving a monthly bill for your calls...and yours only! That service is available right here, right now. Dorm residents may pick up their Student Billing Cards at the Indiana Bell Business Office. Talk it up.

HOMEBOUND BOUND

STUDENT UNION'S

BUS SALES to O'HARE

THANKSGIVING BREAK

Leaves: Tues, Nov 24 ND Circle at 4:30 P.M. Wed., Nov, 25 ND Circle at 1:00 P.M.
Returns: Sun, Nov. 29 from O'Hare (United's ground floor terminal) 8:00 & 10:00 p.m.
Buses leave SMC Holy Cross Hall 15 minutes later $5.00 ONE-WAY
Sales at 1st Bank Travel Bureau (on campus in the ground floor of Badin Hall) 9:00-12:00, 1:00-4:30 Daily. ALL SALES FINAL
The Observer

Friday, November 20, 1970

Icers face tough Tech

Notre Dame's ambitious hockey team, anchored by a promis­ ing, but inexperienced group of freshmen, opens the 1970-71 season Friday and Saturday at Michigan Tech.

And Irish coach Charles "Lefty" Smith, confident his icer can compete with the powerful Western Collegiate Hockey Association teams that dominate the schedule, is ani­ mated.

"We couldn't pick a tougher opening opponent — it's a big step but we'll be playing this type of first class competition right after work," said Smith, starting his third season as the Irish coach.

The weekend series at Hought­ own against Michigan Tech, the third place team in the NCAA championships at Lake Placid, will start at 8 p.m. (EST) in Dee Stadium (1,196) against a team that was 19-12-3 last year while tying for second in the WCHA (14-7-3) before win­ ning the playoffs.

"The big question mark is just how quick the younger players will mature," reasoned Smith, who lists 13 freshmen or sopho­ more among his top 19 players.

"The difference is a night and day between this year's team and the one two years ago, but the com­ petition is equally tough," continued the Irish mentor.

The only veteran slated to start the opening series for Notre Dame is junior goalie Dick Tom­ akson, a two-year letterman. Tomakson allowed just 3.5 goals per game last year.

Two talented freshmen, Eddie Bumbacco and Ken Williams, will anchor the first unit while senior co­ captains John Roselli and Phil Wittliff lead the second and third lines respectively. Wittliff led the team in goals for the second season as a junior with 29 white roses picked up over 26 overall points, many coming in crucial situations.

Michigan Tech opened the Cagers play in Convocation Center box office.

Mike Anderson, LSU's All-American linebacker season last weekend with two WCHA victories at home over Wisconsin, also a NCAA finalist last year. The Huskies posted 6-2 and 5-2 victories over the Badgers.

Tech coach John MacHune, the NCAA Coach of the Year last winter, will also use several outstanding freshmen, Rookie forsman John Nohr and veteran Mike Usthalo anchored the victories over Wisconsin with two goals spaces. MacHune, starting his 15th season of Tech, may see as many as three goalies — senior Dick Marshall, junior Bob Lee and sophomore Morris Trewin.

Notre Dame basketball coach Johnny Dee, realizing less than two weeks are left before the opening of the 1970-71 cam­ paign, will put his highly re­ garded squad through a final freestyle scrimmage next Tuesday night.

The Iron cagers, ranked as high as fourth nationally in pre­ season polls, will face a talented group of freshmen in the Athlet­ ic and Convocation Center start­ ing at 7:30 P.M.

Admission is $5.00 for adults, $5.50 for children under 12 and students free with ID cards. The game will be played for the benefit of the St. Joe Council for the Retarded and the Wichita State disaster fund.

Notre Dame, 21-8 a year ago while gaining the NCAA Midwest Regional semifinal, opens the season at Michigan Dec. 1 (Tues­ day) before returning home to meet second-ranked South Caro­ lina on Saturday, Dec. 5.

"We're right on schedule and we've also stayed clear of inj­ uries," explained Dee, who will anchor his attack once again this year.

"I still would like to make a considerable amount of improve­ ment in our team defense," said Dee, adding, "but our players are also very concerned and working hard to correct this."

Dee will use seven players as a first unit. Curr (6-3, Sr.) will join Doug Gammell (6-3, J.C.) on the "low post" with Collis Jones (6-7, Sr.) and John Piark (6-8, Sr.) playing the "high post" positions. Jackie Meem (6-0, Sr.) will play the point with Tom Simon (6-4, Sr.) and Sid Calliet (6-8, Sr.) waiting in re­ serve alternating with the starters.

Season basketball tickets are on sale ($35 and $25) and may be purchased by writing the Ticket Committee, Notre Dame, Ind. Tickets may also be pur­ chased at The Athletic and Con­ vocation Center box office.

Ole Miss Student Body says...
Ara sees a close defensive battle

terry Shilealus

Well, the time is at hand where Notre Dame can show the world that ND can do more than run up a score against some of the weaker foes. The Irish must contend with these factors if they want to come out of this contest undefeated. The LSU defense, led by legendary Mike Anderson, a 6'3" 225 lb. All-American candidate, and tackles John Sage (220) and Ron Estay (233). The deep secondary contains a two-game-breaking style ball player. Craig Burns, who has returned a punt 90 yards for a touchdown, teams with Tommy Casanova to give LSU a team scoring with 40 points. Punter Wayne Dickinson has kicked 43 times for a 37.7 average. LSU has figured a balanced attack in 1970, scoring with 69.1 points per game. The running game has averaged 158.6 yards per game and the passing game has averaged 191.3 yards per game. Bengal opponents, relying primarily on run game, have averaged 197.4 yards through the air.

The Tigers are a rugged unit and if they play their best ball against the Irish, a fight to the finish will be the order of the day. The LSU fans and the entire South is 'up' for this game would be an understatement. The Tigers have a reputation for great prima donnas. If the Tigers win, their fans will be jubilant. If they lose, they will be crestfallen. The Tigers are a tough and well-coached team.

The offense, building gradual-
Thoughts of a third team guard

by Terry Shields
Observer Sports Editor

What kind of person would go out day after day to get some of the best college football players in the nation? Somebody that should be in a strait jacket? Possibly. A person with tremendous masochistic tendencies? Also very likely.

If you talk to Kent Hildebrand, however, a guard on the Notre Dame prep squad, you probably wouldn’t come away with those feelings at all. “Hildey” (as he is more commonly known by his friends) is just a guy that wanted to play football and at the same time get his big reward at the first South Quad championship of ND. Upon his return the campus to know that it too appreciates what they’ve done.

Sigrist, Pete Schivarelli, Frank and longer for guys named Tim Bossu, Joe Maxim, Kent Hildebrand and at least know that their friends

It might be rewarding enough to introduce all the seniors, the starters treat us pretty well. Ara is up on his tower for those guys may never be rewar ded by getting into a game. They are the rewarding enough to at least know that their friends

Fatigue is the nature that the starters could feel aloud from the third team players but Hildey explains that nothing like that is true. “The starters treat us pretty square. There is no rift between us. This could possibly be due to the fact that some of the first starters were once on the prep team as well. The best team is represented on the team and Dillon feels that its strength lies in the fact that they have a two-platoon system with 22 starters. Thus at the end of many games when the other opposition to minus five yards is the only way they’ll get the job done.”

As for the record
compiled by Mike Pavlin

TEAM-GENERAL
1) (New Record) Consecutive Games Scoring (incl. Cotton Bowl) 49
TEAM-SEASON
1) Total Passes Attempted 180
2) PATs - .942, Hempel .923
3) Pass Attempts — 210, Theismann 180
4) Total Offensive Plays - 308, Theismann 275
5) (Record Tied) Total Performance Yards - Theismann 5146
6) Total Offensive Plays - 308, Theismann 275
7) Total Offensive Yards/Game - 504.4, 540.1
8) Total Offensive Plays - 308, Theismann 275
9) 2-pt. PAT’s Scored Made — 2, Theismann, Gatewood, Dewan
10) PAT’s Made - 3
11) Total Offensive Yards/Game - 504.4, 540.1
12) Total Offensive Plays - 308, Theismann 275
13) Passes Broken Up — 18, 731
14) Passes Interception — 1, 731
15) Sacks Made — 2, 1
16) Total Defense Plays - 308, Theismann 275
17) Touchdown Passes — 308, Theismann 275
18) Sack Yards/Game — 504.4, 540.1
19) Individual SINGLE GAME
1) (Record Tied) Touchdown Pass Receptions - Tom Gatewood 3
2) PAT - .942, Hempel .923
3) Pass Attempts — 210, Theismann 180
4) Total Offensive Plays - 308, Theismann 275
5) Total Offensive Plays - 308, Theismann 275
6) Total Offense Plays - 308, Theismann 275
7) Total Offensive Plays - 308, Theismann 275
8) Total Offensive Plays - 308, Theismann 275
9) Total Offensive Yards — 504.4, 540.1
10) Total Defensive Plays - 308, Theismann 275
11) Total Defense Plays - 308, Theismann 275
12) Total Defense Plays - 308, Theismann 275
13) Total Defense Plays - 308, Theismann 275
14) Total Defense Plays - 308, Theismann 275
15) Total Defense Plays - 308, Theismann 275
16) Total Defense Plays - 308, Theismann 275
17) Total Defense Plays - 308, Theismann 275
18) Total Defense Plays - 308, Theismann 275
19) Total Defense Plays - 308, Theismann 275
20) Total Defense Plays - 308, Theismann 275

New Low Fares
South Bend -- Chicago

For Vacation, Shopping, Theater, Concerts, Sightseeing, Museums, Recreation

Past, convenient service to and from South Side and downtown Chicago at frequent daytime hours
22 weekday trains daily
14 trains Saturday and Sunday
Now - New low fares that save up to 30 percent

Old Fare New Fare Per Cent Savings
One Way $4.35 $3.10 29% Round Trip $7.30 $5.10 30% 10-mile $35.65 $29.45 17% 25-mile $79.25 $66.12 17% 30-day limit from date of sale

For information - Call Ticket Agent at 233-3111 Convenient bus service (except Sunday) between Notre Dame, Downtown Chicago and South Bend
2702 West Washington Avenue. Free Parking
24 hour cab service

South Shore Line