Earthquake hits Los Angeles

Three U.S. moon explorers landed in the South Pacific yesterday, blazing to a triumphal Pacific splashdown after their historic 13-day mission.

The touchdown was in a small area in the vicinity of the quake which sent tall buildings reeling and airport runways buckling. The jolt, which set tall buildings swaying, schools were closed. The shock was of 6.0 magnitude on Richter scale. The quake was felt from Fresno, 200 miles to the north, to the Mexican border 130 miles south and as far east as Las Vegas.

Scores were injured and hospitals reported dozens of heart attack cases. Property damage was minimal. All Los Angeles schools and hospitals were closed.

The death toll was small in view of the violence of the quake which sent tall buildings swaying, glass windows showering into the streets, dams suffering cracks, chimneys toppling. The rolling tremor began at 5:19 a.m. PST and lasted for more than a minute. The shock was centered near Newhall 40 miles north of downtown Los Angeles but was felt from Fresno, 200 miles to the north, to the Mexican border 130 miles south and as far east as Las Vegas.

The recovered forces now have a happy landing, ground control confirmed. The Apollo 14 astronauts after they were safely through their entry, were lifted by a fast tracking recovery force.

In Newhall, a town of 5,000 and one of the hardest hit.

"I've lived in California all my life but this was the hardest quake I've ever felt. It scares the hell out of me. My wife said I had to get the kids and get them under a desk in a spot where the house is stable," said one.

"My sons-4 and 3-were frightened and couldn't comprehend what was going on. They wanted to know why the windows were broken."

The Van Norman Dam, west of the town of San Fernando, was cracked and hundreds of people were evacuated from their homes in a nine mile area to the south of the reservoir as water began leaking through the breached dike.

Blocks of downtown San Fernando were ripped off and sheriff's deputies patrolled the streets with shotguns to prevent looting or breakdown of storefronts.

Two wings of the San Fernando Veteran's Hospital collapsed. The hospital had about 400 patients and they were carried out on stretchers and in wheelchairs while workmen dug in the wreckage.

Splashdown ends successful mission

The recovery forces now have a happy landing, ground control confirmed. The Apollo 14 astronauts after they were safely through their entry, were lifted by a fast tracking recovery force.

The astronauts triggered their braking rockets at an altitude of about 400 feet above sea level, and came down on 1,200 square feet of water. The splashdown was a complete success.

The astronauts then worked to get the astronauts to the carrier, writing a successful splashdown.

Thief takes $200 dollars

Notre Dame Mardi Gras was robbed last night for over $22,000 in the form of bogus $5 bills. However, for the thief to cash in on the theft, he must redeem the bogus bills at the Mardi Gras bank, and it seems officials have taken steps to prevent this.

According to Student Union director Bob Pohl, someone had entered Stepan Center Monday night after the crowds left. Not a who and why is still up in the air.

The theft then took a quantity of $550 in bogus bills totaling about $2,200 in real cash.

The theft was discovered Tuesday morning by the private security force of Notre Dame. The police have a man in a skid row mission who may have been there.

Carney approves co-ed measures

Kevin McGill, a Notre Dame Trustee, told a meeting of the Committee for Undergraduate Education that he approved of their proposal for co-education and offered them his help.

Dr. Carney stated that he felt the proposal was a good one and bad points, but集装 had needed to be written to the Board of Trustees, and that the student body should have their concern in the matter by coming to the Student Assembly next week. He said that one whole night will be devoted to co-education because it is so important, and "all students must make known their attitudes and show their support."

Rev. Charles E. Sheedy, C.S.C., members of the S.C.I., spoke of the chronology of co-education, sighting the examples of Harvard and Radcliffe and Columbia and Barnard to show that each one of schools was taken account of each other."And the proposal is not only "required the merger of the two schools" St. Mary's and Notre Dame, he foresees, will eventually fall into the same pattern."
Co-Ed Committee to Meet, Will Judge Park-Mayhew

by Matt Cavanaugh and Kevin McGill

The Notre Dame-Saint Mary's College Co-education Coordinating Committee, headed by Rev. Charles Sheedy, C.S.C. will meet Saturday February 13 at Lauglin' Lodge in Michigan to prepare a report that will be presented to the Board of Trustees at their March meeting. In addition to the committee, 12 to 15 invited guests will also attend the meeting. These guests will be representatives from the administrations of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, and members of the sub-committees set up by both student governments to study the feasibility of co-education.

Security doesn't cover Mardi Gras

by Jack Bennett

Security Chief Arthur Pears said yesterday that no Notre Dame security men were available during the incident of assault against a Notre Dame student Monday at the Notre Dame-Mardi Gras carnival.

The victim, Chuck DeMonaco of St. Ed's Hall said he was accosted by a group of five youths, after one of the gang had ignored DeMonaco's order to keep away from his date, by repeating his action letting his hand touch the girl's shoulder.

In the scuffle that followed DeMonaco suffered a concussion of the head, kicked, and robbed of his wallet and glasses. He said he managed to hold one of the youths after the others ran off with his possessions but could not get any of the passing students to help him.

The two who had run off soon returned and beat Wackitchi with the passing students to help him.

Wackitchi said he had seventeen dollars in his wallet in addition to his id and credit cards. He valued the glasses at about $30.

According to Pears, another incident took place at approximately 11:30 p.m. Saturday. John Wakachi of Dillon Hall was attacked by three assailants behind the Huddle. Wakachi reported that he was knocked down, kicked, and robbed of his wallet and glasses. He said he managed to hold one of the youths after the others ran off with his possessions but could not get any of the passing students to help him.

The two who had run off soon returned and beat Wackitchi with a club until he released their friend.

Wakachi said he had seventeen dollars in the wallet in addition to his id and credit cards. He valued the glasses at about $30.

The primary purpose of the meeting will be to formulate an official position on the Park-Mayhew report and to decide how best to implement concludes either through or without the report. Fr. Shedy has sent to the members of the Committee a number of questions dealing with specific points made in the report so that the members will be able to prepare their own positions. The various attitudes that arise will be discussed at the meeting, and items not covered in the report will be taken up.

The sub-committees, established as "clearing houses for student opinions," having studied such areas as admission and registration policies, financial aid, student affairs, and housing, will submit their reports to the Coordinating Committee for discussion.

Rev. Charles E. Sheedy, chairman of the Coordinating Committee, guaranteed that the "general substance" of these student views will reach the Trustees. To insure that nothing is left out of their report, the committee will prepare a 20 to 30 page document from the minutes of the meeting, and submit this document to the Trustees. This document will be presented at the Board of Directors meeting in March where it will either add weight to the Park-Mayhew proposal, or if it differs substantially, it will have an influence of its own.

Five students will attend the meeting, Jean Gorman, Julia Rok, Carol Henninger, Bill Wilka, and Tim Connor. The stand they plan to take will call for Saint Mary's to be a separate college in the university, but the entire university, including Saint Mary's, will be confessional in every way. Connor said yesterday that he and other students on the Committee would be interested to hear anyone's reactions to the Park-Mayhew report.

Connor also hoped "that cooperation will be possible at the downward meeting. If both sides are willing to give just a little, something really good could come out of this."

After obtaining written assent from twenty-two of the first forty senators he contacted, Nay-Senator Tom Thrasher succeeded yesterday in securing more than enough support for his petition calling for the convening of the Senate over the opposition of SBP Dave Krashna. After weeks of enforced layoff the Senate will meet this Thursday night at 7:00 p.m. in the amphitheatre of LaFortune Student Center.

Krashna, the chairman of the Senate, has refused to recall the body into session since it last met at the end of the fall semester. Under the student government constitution, the only way to call a meeting of the Senate other than at the request of the chairman is through a signed petition supported by a least one-third of the student body.

Thrasher had no trouble rounding up the necessary number of senators to back the petition; picking up the twenty-two names within the petition's first day of circulation. He explained that he had taken the action because he felt that too many important items were being neglected by the Senate.

As the chief example, Thrasher said, "The Student Body elections which is the sole duty of the Senate. So far, he said, nothing has been done toward setting up the elections. If the Senate fails to meet, he pointed out, there can be no elections at all.

Thrasher also mentioned the possibility of writing a new constitution within the Senate in the near future.

Don Mooney, off-campus Senator, was one of two senators who refused to sign Thrasher's petition. Mooney said he felt he could work more effectively outside the Senate than in it. Mooney assured however, that he would attend any meetings that the Senate had scheduled through successful petitioning.

Faculty seeks financial authority

by Greg Rowinski

In an attempt to gain the faculty more authority and responsibility in matters concerning financial priorities, the Faculty Senate yesterday passed unanimously the report of the Committee on the Administration of the University.

The Committee's resolution stated that, at present, the faculty has "little if any authority or responsibility or information concerning faculty budgetary allocation or expenditure of resources." It resolved that the faculty should receive "specific budgetary analyses and planning forecasts" so that it could "shoulder its appropriate share of the responsibility for the continued well-being of the University."

It recommended that the Senate authorize the Committee to initiate discussions with University officials concerning "the most appropriate institutional modifications for achieving effective communication and shared responsibility."

The approval emphasized the faculty's intention to associate itself with more than just classes. Professor Edward Manier, Chairman of the Committee, commented that "the faculty does have financial responsibility as related to academic policy," especially when it places "constraints on departm ents." He

Thrasher petition gains support; Senate to meet despite Krashna

After a Student Government petition, the faculty has been granted the authority to call a meeting of the Senate presently because he was primarily concerned with the Senate's authority over the budget. Mooney stated that with the completion of the budget last semester, he felt the Senate had fulfilled its only real duty and that the body should have no role in student government this semester.

Mooney assured however, that he would attend any meetings that the Senate had scheduled through successful petitioning.

The Expiration of a Myth

The sleepy death of the Blue Circle would have won no more attention than its sleepy life save for the salient comments of one John Sweeney, the Blue Circle President who presided over its recent demise.

Mr. Sweeney rightly consigned most of the credit (blame?) for the organization's late disintegration to the fact that most of its functions have been usurped by other organizations—notably student government—but he also said that "today's students care more about situations like Cambodia and Viet Nam than little things that groups like Y.C.S. (Young Christian Students) or Blue Circle are doing," and that "the death of Y.C.S. and Blue Circle, decreased enthusiasm for Mardi Gras, and growing ineptness of student Government are signs of a shift in attitude and interests on the part of the students."

Those are two interesting quotes; each in their own way, and the connection between the two is also good diversion. Given Mr. Sweeney's hypothesis that students are strangely insensible to the ramifications of Cambodia and Viet Nam, (which we don't), the inescapable conclusion is if organizations do not intend to remain within the range of student interests, they are destined for the common fate of Blue Circle and the Young Christian Whatnamacilities. The Blue Circle is a living Testament: its consistently offensive elitist claims (typified by its Grade-Point Requirement and its title of "Blue Circle Honor Society"), both affections dropped during the terminal stages) and its patronizing attitude (typified by its most important function, tutoring) ended up in its sad demise yesterday.

The second quote holds special interest because of the nature of the organizations indicted. Y.C.S. and Blue Circle have departed; the Raccoon coat image of Mardi Gras is strangely incongruous with the ramifications of Cambodia and Viet Nam, (which we don't), the inescapable conclusion is if organizations do not intend to remain within the range of student interests, they are destined for the common fate of Blue Circle and the Young Christian Whatnamacilities. The Blue Circle is a living Testament: its consistently offensive elitist claims (typified by its Grade-Point Requirement and its title of "Blue Circle Honor Society"), both affections dropped during the terminal stages) and its patronizing attitude (typified by its most important function, tutoring) ended up in its sad demise yesterday.

The sleepy death of the Blue Circle would have won no more attention than its sleepy life save for the salient comments of one John Sweeney, the Blue Circle President who presided over its recent demise.

Within the next month, the undergraduates at Notre Dame will be asked to elect a leader to replace outgoing Student Body President David M. Krashna. For the last four years, the outgoing Student Government probably has selected one of its membership, or someone close to its membership, to carry on its activity (or perhaps inactivity). One may assume this to be the case in 1971.

Since the voters will be asked in large part to pass judgment on the outgoing Administration, and they must in any case vote in the context of Mr. Krashna's activity, let us consider the record.

One of candidate Krishna's major platform points last March was the revision of the Constitution and the elimination of the Student Senate. In the eighth month of his twelve-month term of office he took a feeble and spectacularly ineffective action on this major platform plank. The Constitutional referendum of December saw an abortion. Sixty per cent of the Student Body must vote in such a referendum. Only thirty-two per cent voted, and twenty-four per cent of the electorate as a whole approved the new charter. When a candidate who received sixty-three per cent of the popular vote in his own election cannot muster a quarter of the school to his side, there is perhaps a new sign of a alteration of the status quo.

Consider a second platform plank, also aborted this year by the establishment of the Committee for Social Understanding. This committee was heavily dominated by Student Government-appointed personnel and despite the presence of several highly qualified and interested faculty members, the group seems to have settled into the same state of Morpheus as the rest of Krishna's innocuous process.

An ironic consideration is that the Student Government people insisted that diversity was being sought, and that "most of the students were not from Student Government from the beginning." Consider that Cabinet Publicity Director Don Mooney, Research and Development Commissioner Tim Conner, Student Body Vice President Mark Winters, and Krishna himself were all from Student Government. Only George Holt, an unsuccessful Student Life Council candidate on the South Quad last year and Dan O'Donnell of the University Arts Council gave any "diversity" whatsoever to the group.

Last Spring, Mr. Krashna took part in a strike out of which the Princeton Plan emerged. Student Government's support of this was pitifully weak and a phenomonal bust. Another failure on the part of the Poobah machine in La Fortune.

Last election, Krishna placed great emphasis on "getting back to the halls." Yet in most halls he has not yet presented himself, and he supported a grant of only five hundred dollars (not even enough to run Antostal) for the Hall President's Council. The despised Senate granted three thousand dollars to the HPC. To Mr. Krashna the Senate may be a joke. He redeemed his only redeemed campaign pledge. What a riot.

This year Student Government took it upon itself to call in the press and cameras to defend a senior with a 2.5 GPA who lost his scholarship, the conditions of which were his maintenance of a 3.0 GPA. Mr. Krashna had been working on the case for five months, yet he never contracted the donor of the scholarship. Observer reporter Fred Schaefer talked to Mr. Koch, of Little Rock, Arkansas, in five minutes. Ah, the wonders of modern communication.

In short, it has been a most distressing year for those who believe Student Government should do something for its constituency. Even the so-called report currently being drawn up in Holy Cross Hall at SMG is cluttered by mis-organization and pitiful publicity. At ND, the Poobahs play political games and come to the students only when they need pawns on their imaginary chessboard of imaginary power.

As one Hall President said, "They only come to us when they want our help. They never want to help us or the students."

Sad obituary? Maybe, but the worst is yet to come. A Hall President from the North Quad estimates the odds against the success of the February 17-19 General Assembly at between 98 and 100 to one.

Student apathy? Maybe, but in that case apathy has increased since the current dynasty of SRP's took over. In Senate elections under Chris Murphy, 80% of the students voted; under Richard Rosie, 70%; under Phil McKenna, 60%; under David M. Krashna, 52%; 4% more than voted on the Princeton Plan and 205 more than voted on the anti-Senate constitutional.

Murphy supported Rosie. Rosie supported McKenna. McKenna worked for Krashna. Krashna will work for Don Mooney, popular campus disc jockey and poobah-elite, who has already begun to organize his campaign.

This year's heir to Student Government must defend his team's incomprehensive record. He will undoubtedly promise new programs, new ideas, new concepts, and bigger and better garbage. To murder an old cliché, "It's time for a change."

The Importance of Language

Pascal once said that "he who would act the angel acts the brute," and thus assessed the political predicament of our day. "History is a collection of dates, names, and figures," he said, "but it is not the history that mattered; it is the history that counted." This view of history, and of language, is obviously false, but it is also an important reminder that language is not just a means of communication, but a medium of thought and action.

Miss M'coed's address covered various aspects of language, and in particular focused on the way in which language is used to construct and maintain power relations. She argued that language is not just a tool for communication, but a means of constructing reality and shaping individual and collective identities.

She pointed out that in the academic-government complex, language is used to legitimate power and to construct narratives of progress and development. This is particularly evident in the way in which language is used to construct and maintain a discourse of progress and development, which is often used to justify the accumulation of power by certain groups.

Miss M'coed also highlighted the way in which language is used to construct narratives of crisis and need, which are then used to justify the allocation of resources and the implementation of policies. She argued that this is a pernicious use of language, which serves to maintain and reproduce power relations.

She called for a more critical and reflexive approach to language, which would involve recognizing the ways in which language is used to construct and maintain power relations, and working to transform these relations through the construction of alternative narratives and discourses.

In conclusion, Miss M'coed's address was a powerful reminder of the importance of language in shaping and maintaining power relations, and of the need for a critical and reflexive approach to language in order to transform these relations.
The long range proposals all "aim toward the establishment of one student body." The committee is presently discussing the feasibility of community government at Notre Dame. Rich Urd and Mary Bernath, members of the committee, are looking into the possibility of the merging of the judicial systems of the two schools. Barlow stresses that the basic point of the committee is the merging of the student governments and she sees this merger "coming very quickly."

"The merging of the student governments is but a preliminary step towards the merging of the student bodies. Right now our long range plans are still nebulous, they have to be completely worked out," he said.

The committee, which consists of co-chairmen, Mark Winstead, Jean Gorman, Bernath, Udrea, Dan Hyde, and Eileen Fitzpatrick, reacted favorably to the proposal which was released yesterday. They claimed to be especially favor of co-ed student government elections. Barlow spoke for them when she stated, "These are good things to aim for. It's definitely worth trying for. If we can work it out with the Administration, students, and the faculties, it's definitely a good step."

Bob Ohlemiller, chairman of the Student Services Committee, stressed that the merger of services between the schools is "financially, the most feasible thing to do." Ohlemiller's committee covered the merging of the psychological services, the counseling centers, the campus ministries, security, health services, and Student Union with Student Services Office. "There is no psychological center at St. Mary's right now," stated Ohlemiller, "so, it would simply be an extension of our service to SMC. It would probably require a small fee to be included in SMC students' fees."

The merger of the counseling centers would not result in too much difficulty because these centers already a good cooperation between the centers of the two campuses. The same would be true in merging the campus ministries. Merging the security forces of the campuses could be the most feasible action of the merger, he said. The two forces are working co-operatively now and their existence is "a needless duplication." The only change, he stated, would have to be in a common radio channel and a common answering service between them. The campus health services, if merged, would also have to be extended because they are presently limited, Ohlemiller commented.

In speaking with Sister Immaculata today, Ohlemiller claimed to have discovered a small handicap with the merger of services. Sr. Immaculata forwarded the philosophy of SMC toward student involvement Ohlemiller said, while he believes that it is a valid assertion that this philosophy could be destroyed by the merger. That philosophy is based on more student involvement within the structure, in other words, community government, he commented. This should not prove to be a major handicap, however, as even Sr. Immaculata, according to Ohlemiller, believes the merger of services is a "feasible and practical action."

Ohlemiller stressed the feasibility of the merger.

"Overall, for both schools, this is the most economical and efficient way to go," he said. He admitted that "without student support, this report is nothing but a piece of paper. Without widespread student support, this report will do nothing. The Student General Assembly will be the best opportunity for the students to voice their support. We need the support to pass this report. This is not an elitist student government action. It's a student job, a job done by the students for the students."

It wasn't the Notre Dame fencing squad managed two victories last weekend to up their season mark to 2-2. It wasn't the reality that gave the Deacon a second wind, they beat Illinois, Chicago Circle 25-2 and scored early versus Wisconsin Parkside to coast to a 17-10 win.

The real trouble for ND came in getting to the match. One of the university luminaries literal­ly blew up on the trip to the Chicago Campus and all of the starting fencers were forced to cram into one female to get to the meet on time.

Once the Irish arrived their troubles were over.

Against Chicago Circle both the epee and foil division shut the door and the Irish had the 17-10 win.

Co-captain Rich "Rip" Deladrier led the division in the weekend's action.

Irish swimmers hit the 500 yard freestyle Thursday when they dopped a meet to the Western Michi­gan University team by a 73-40 sound.

Fencing mentor Mike DeCiccio was pleased with the team's showing in the Windy City, es­pecially since they bounced back from the near auto tragedy. Neither opponent was considered es­pecially weak. UIC has already beaten Midwest power Wayne State earlier in the season and the psyched up Irish had little trouble with them. The Wisconsin Parkside match was never really in doubt due to the early wins by ND.

The fencers have suffered two defeats this season but there is the same number and two teams in the nation (NYU and Navy). Aside from this the Green Wave have performed well this season.

The fencers will return to Chicago this weekend for a quadrangular meet with the Uni­versity of Chicago, the Univer­sity of Detroit and MIT.

Three persons died of heart attacks which authorities attributed to the fright of the earthquake. One man was running in panic from his home. Another was killed when his pickup truck was buried in the collapse of a freeway overpass. The Pasadena, San Diego and Golden State freeways were closed in several stretches because of buckled pavement and collapsed overpasses. The Golden State is the highway to Interstate 5 which links Los Angeles with Northern California.

Another three tier cloverleaf intersection of freeways which was under construction collapsed.

A spokesman for the city fire department said there had been "so many damn fires it's unbelievable." He estimated that there were at least 150 fires, most of them set by bored gas lines and falling power lines. Two major supermarkets in San Fernando were gutted. Lockhead sent home 18,000 day shift workers at its plants in Burbank, Van Nuys, Watts and Sanga Newhall while firemen and patrons inspected the buildings cleaned up broken glass and checked on neat locks.

Education: 1960

Dr. Robert Christin will probe into the future with a look at "Education: 1960" when he presents the next in a series of lectures on "Trends in Contemporary Education" Wednesday night, February 10, at Saint Mary's College. The Lecture, which is open to the public, will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Carroll Hall of the Madonna classroom building.

The president of St. Norbert's College, West De Pere, Wisconsin, Dr. Christin is a former resident of South Bend. He was a member of the English faculty of the University of Notre Dame from 1963-65 when he left to assume the presidency of Educational Associates Incorporated of Washington, D.C. EAI served as an educational consultant to the federal government for over 300 colleges and universities across the nation.

Since being named the first lay president of St. Norbert's in July 1969, Dr. Christin has been responsible for a number of major innovations including the adoption of a "no failure" grading system and a reorganization of the curriculum which included the establishment of a tri-divisional structure: humanities and fine arts; natural sciences and social sciences; and sciences and social sciences.

Dr. Christin's talk is part of an experimental interdisciplinarian program being carried out at Saint Mary's during the second semester. Under the joint sponsorship of the department of education and the Student Development Committee, the series presents outstanding speakers in a number of fields as a part of the elective
