Teitel outlines aid at Quang Nai

Marty Teitel, the young administrative director for the American Friends Service Committee's refugee aid program in Quang Nai, South Vietnam, spent the student center last night talking about Quang Nai.

"Talk about turning swarms into plowshares," Teitel said. "You know, bombs come in crates, wood crates. We take the empty crates and use the wood to make inedible food for the victims of land mines. Wood is very expensive in Vietnam.

Prosthetics, the fitting of artificial limbs for Vietnamese who have injured limbs by land mines or bombs is the work of the medical center at Quang Nai, said Teitel. There have been six Americans and forty-five Vietnameses.

Teitel emphasized that the center receives no funds from the government or public foundation, but relies on voluntary contributions from private individuals.

"Americans think the war is a force, but the people's war is very expensive in Vietnam," Teitel said.

"One fourth of the victims of the land mines are children, and of course we need to be reflected with new artificial limbs every year," Teitel said. "If the war ended tomorrow, which it won't, there would still be a tremendous rehabilitation job in Vietnam. There has been ineffective destruction in Vietnam."

"The political neutrality of the medical center means that we don't have to give the American military, the ARVN, or the NLF," Teitel continued. "Neither staff members don't ask if you're a VC if you come in with your leg blown off by a land mine."

"You stand at Quang Nai and hear the bombs dropping and the rockets whistling overhead, and then you read in Newsweek that the war is practically over," said Teitel.

Stoltz, Hotz to be editors of Scholastic; state plans

Mary Ellen Stoltz, a junior thespian student, and Joe Hotz, a junior economics major, will become the new editors of the Scholastic starting next issue, current editor Steve Brian revealed last night. Brian also revealed that the weekly magazine will be operating with a reduced budget next year.

According to Hotz, money from advertising in the Scholastic will be put in a special fund for the magazine.

Stoltz and Hotz said that the Scholastic will be biweekly next year; they are planning 14 editions compared to this year's 21. They will begin using cheaper paper and covers made from the regular page material which will also allow them to run color pictures within the magazine.

The co-editors want to continue having perspectives written by faculty members. They also think that the Scholastic should be "open to everyone in the university," and sighed the prospect of articles and an article to be printed about the college seminar as stories written by non-staff members.

"We'd like to really consider ourselves with university issues, but with the entire university, not just the College of Arts and Letters," Stoltz said about future issues. They would also like to deal with other issues that have "direct implications to ourselves, such as policy and methods which can be used at Notre Dame.

This year's soon-to-be-released Course Evaluation Booklet will evaluate only the College of Arts and Letters, but the co-editors expressed the hope that with cooperation from student government a future book might expand into all the colleges.

Neither editor plans to have book deals with freshmen and required courses.

There have been Saint Mary's students in editorial positions of the Scholastic for the past four years, but Stoltz is the first to become an editor-in-chief. The magazine is presently trying to bring more women into its writing and photography staffs, Stoltz said.

Business manager, Sutton, sports editor Don Kennedy, and circulation manager Cliff Zwick will hold the same positions next year. Greg Chinchiar will become the managing editor, Joe Rundl the new assistant managing editor, Tom Maken and Greg Stidum the new associate editors, and Joan Deegan, Mike McClave, Jim Fanto and Mike Mooney the assistant editors.

"I hope a large percentage of what Stoltz called "a good, strong staff" is expected to be back next year.

Harshbarg denied review, Badger claims

Don Badger said yesterday that University President Father Theodore M. Hesburgh refused to review his suspension for allegedзорные offenses and failure to obey the Appeals Board decision sustaining his suspension stand.

Badger said that Fr. Hesburgh informed him of this in a telephone conversation after he had tried several times to arrange an appointment.

Fr. Hesburgh said he was not at liberty to say whether he got his facts or not. He added that he did not know when he would reach a decision.

However, Badger claimed that Father William Burke, his freshman year advisor on his behalf and contacted Fr. Riehle about a possible refund, but said that it was not told that he would not be for- through.

Father Burke last night confirmed that Fr. Riehle had told him that Badger would not be given a meeting held just before Easter.

Fr. Riehle said that it is university policy that no refunds are given to students who withdraw or are suspended.

He cited the cost of paying for the contracted faculty and maintenance people regardless of student attendance as the reason for this policy.

The loss of the semester's tuition is a "part of the penalty of being suspended," Fr. Riehle added. There is a pre-rated refund on the room and board costs to the departing student.

Fr. Riehle said that he was surprised that Badger until the first day of classes this semester wanted to meet with him to talk about the case.

Riehle was provisionally suspended by Riehle on orders of University Provost Father James T. Burtchell on January 20, 1971.

An Editorial About Protesting

To the editor:

Your editorial in the Observer of March 30 is way off the mark in severing your deliberations with the truth.

It has been pointed out that the NLF is a political movement and not a military one, a movement dedicated to the peaceful resolution of the Vietnam conflict.

We understand your right to speak our minds, but we don't necessarily agree with our point of view.

US combat role to end in summer

Laird had been a strong advocate of continued U.S. involvement in Vietnam, believing that the end of American forces would lead to civil war and the rise of a communist regime. As a result, he was widely criticized for his decision to reduce U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

Despite the criticism, Laird defended his decision, stating that the United States had achieved its objectives in Vietnam and that withdrawing troops was in the best interest of the nation. He also noted that the decision to end U.S. combat roles was consistent with President Nixon's overall strategy of detente and a withdrawal from international commitments.

Laird's decision to end U.S. combat roles in Vietnam was a significant event in American history, marking the beginning of a new phase in the Vietnam War. The United States would continue to provide military assistance and training to South Vietnam, but the direct involvement of American troops would come to an end.

Lifton, author-psychiatrist, to offer talk tonight

Notre Dame, Ind. — Dr. Robert Jay Lifton, psychiatrist and professor at the Yale University School of Medicine, will speak at 8 p.m. Wednesday, April 18, in the Memorial Library auditorium of the University of Notre Dame. The talk is sponsored by the Notre Dame-Saint Mary's Academic Commission and the Institute for International Studies.

The talk will present a perspective on the Far East where he has been engaged in research of the relationship between individual psychological and historical change. Dr. Lifton is the author of several books. These include "Death in Life: Survivors of Hiroshima," which received the National Book Award in 1969, "Revolutionary Immortality: Mao Tse-Tung and the Chinese Cultural Revolution," and "Thought Reform and the Psychology of Totalism: A Study of 'Brainwashing' in China."

Lifton has written extensively on the effects of nuclear weapons and their impact on society, on the role of the individual in the recent Chinese cultural revolution, on psychedelic trends of contemporary and "protest man," have appeared in a variety of professional and popular journals.
GI rebukes government

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — A young former GI who met with President Nixon earlier this week too discuss veteran's benefits said yesterday the federal government is not doing enough for returning Vietnam veterans.

"I don't think the Nixon administration is showing any special interest," said Bob Spanogle, 28, now a senior majoring in economics at Michigan State University. "Some of the programs for veterans are simply smoke screens."

Spanogle, president of the 100,000 member National Association of Collegiate Veterans, was among a group of Vietnam veterans invited to attend a White House session Monday.

At that meeting, the President unveiled a $1 million pilot project, funded by the Office of Economic Opportunity, aimed at recruiting the 350,000 unemployed Vietnam veterans through direct contact with veterans now in college under the GI bill.

Spanogle termed the project "a step in the right direction, but just not enough."

He said the biggest problem the returning veteran faces is an inadequately funded GI bill. Whereas the World War II veteran of the 1940's found his GI bill to cover most of his college expenses, he said, the Vietnam veteran finds he owes as much as $600 to $1,500 out of his own pocket to finish a year's study.

"We're not asking for anything more than our fathers got," Spanogle said. "Although the President supports the premise of more programs for veterans, I do not see him supporting legislation enabling them to get into schools."

He said another burden for Vietnam veterans is the fact they fought in one of the most unpopular wars in recent times.

"I think a lot of people would just as soon forget about the veterans of this war," he said. "We don't expect them to beat a drum for us, we just want enough money to go to school and get a decent job."

Crypt manager expects SU rent charge next year

John Majeta, manager of the Crypt, said yesterday that the record co-op will probably be charged rent for its space in the student center next year.

When the Crypt was originally established there was "considerable pressure" to abolish it, Majeta said. At this time the Student Union entered and invited him to move the establishment into LaFortune.

According to Majeta, the move was made so that the establishment would be "more centrally located." No discussion of rent was involved and the only stipulation was that the Student Union have control over what was sold. Expansion of services to include posters and other items would be contingent upon Union approval.

However, the entire operation is financed and managed by Majeta. He claimed that the management takes a large amount of time and effort to protect what he estimated to be $10,000 worth of stock.

Father Thomas E. Blantz, vice president for student affairs, recently suggested that, since it is being run by a private individual, the service should be charged rental. Majeta said that no amount was mentioned, but a figure would be negotiated by next fall.

Pointing out that he has recently absorbed fifty per cent of a ten cent album price increase by raising his prices only five cents, Bill McGrath, Union Director, and Fr. Blantz both said that the idea of a rental fee was a good one and that Majeta was in agreement with them. Fr. Blantz said that it was "unfair" for an individual to profit from the free use of space and that the students should "get more than just a price savings out of the establishment."

McGrath explained that the Crypt would be treated as a "concession." Each year, applications will be taken for the manager's position and the Union will choose the most qualified.

The funds gained from the rental will then be returned to the Student Services Commission. This commission operates mostly on a pure expenditure basis and it is only through operations such as the Crypt and Student Press that it is able to continue operation.

Rossini, Wilson explain fusions

This is the second and final part of an Observer Insight designed to acquaint our readers with the six vice presidents of the University. Today's insight will present Dr. Frederick D. Rossini, vice president for research and development, and Rev. Jerome J. Wilson, vice president for business affairs. The sixth vice president for research and development includes, which is "any scholarly endeavor in any field of University interest." These areas include research, which is "any scholarly endeavor in any field of the University," Dr. Rossini said. "Good research which feeds into education keeps the faculty alive and up to date in their respective area of teaching." To finance the cost of research done at Notre Dame would mean nearly doubling tuition, but the University feels that its students shouldn't have to bear the cost of research and it tries to recover these costs from sponsors," Rossini said.

Dr. Rossini's office tries to secure financial support for faculty members who have made specific proposals from the agencies of federal and state governments, private foundations, industrial concerns, and private industry. Last year Notre Dame received almost $84 million in federal programs. Speaking of military sponsorship, Dr. Rossini said that the University does receive support from the Defense Department, but also that "the University has a policy of not accepting grants or contracts to do secret, meaning non-pubblishable research, except in times of national emergency." He also explained that each proposal is approved separately because the University has to charge the sponsor "indirect administrative costs," which include money for supplies, equipment, travel, tuition for graduate student assistants and two months summer salary for the professor.

Every month Dr. Rossini's office publishes a bulletin listing the current work being published by the faculty and the awards of sponsorship received. An annual report gives brief general synopsis of each faculty member and a list of the publications and research in progress that year. "Nearly every member of the faculty tries to do research of some kind," Dr. Rossini stated.

Observer Insight

Rev. Jerome J. Wilson, vice president for research and business affairs, summed up his functions by saying, "I do everything the others don't do."

LUBBOCK, Texas (UPI) - A dust storm laced with 60 mile an hour winds turned the sky red. All of Texas was caused by a drought, dust runoff in the Texas yesterday that residents could not see across the street. "If I had an airplane today, I could go up about 1,000 feet and homestead one of the best farms in Lubbock County," said Dean Nichols, a farmer. "On real bad days like today, crops lose up to one inch of topsoil and it takes seven years to replace that one inch.

Farmers shut down irrigation wells to prevent dust damage. Everyone can, their drivers hampered by the reduced visibility piled together on an interstate highway in Amarillo, Texas, sending eight persons to a hospital.

Winds gusting up to 60 miles an hour pushed the dust southwest to the Red River Valley along the Oklahoma border.

Dust warnings were posted for Wichita Falls, Texas where next Friday a full blooded Chordere will conduct an Indian rain dance in an attempt to bring that state its first moisture since a trace of rain fell on March 26.

"That's not dust blowing out there," said Jerry Coleman, a farmer, "That's just plain dirt." The entire west central United States is in a drought. It is a disaster not seen in this area since the Dust Bowl days of the early 1930's. Parts of Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, and in Colorado have had no appreciable rain in seven months.

In San Antonio, Texas, fire fighters answered a grass fire call every seven minutes Tuesday.

Houston officials said Lake Houston, one of the city's many sources of water, had reached its lowest April level in history.

"On the basis of present uses Lake Houston will dry up in about 100 days," said R.A. Thompson, director of the water division in the nation's sixth largest city.

He said artesian wells would probably prevent Houston from having to ration water, but if rationing was necessary industry would probably be the first to feel the cutback.

"Visibility in downtown Lubbock was cut to three blocks, and thus rainwater is an interstate loop around the city could not see to the other side of the highway.

Room situation is said to be slight

The conflict between the actual number of rooms left in the halls after room picks, and the number of rooms previously allotted for next year's freshmen should work itself out, according to Father Peter Chambers, director of student housing.

"We're checking the situation over now, and should know for sure after room deposits come in," Fr. Chambers said. He further commented that, "the differences generally work out well. If a hall has extra rooms we make these available for campus wide hall picks." When a hall doesn't have enough rooms, the situation can be alleviated by shifting freshman allocations and by other factors such as room cancellations.

Father Chambers said that the room picks in his hall went quite well. He commented that the hall at present, has six to eight more people than they should have, but felt that this could be worked out by shifting the arrangements of a few suites.

"Father Maurice Amen, rector of Flanner hall, acknowledged the fact that Flanner is 86 students over its assigned upper-class quota.

He said, however, that this should not be a very difficult problem because of many factors that enter into the situation.

"There are indications that next year's freshman class will be smaller than this year's," he said, designed with this year's number of freshmen as criteria, so this difference should not make much of a difference," Father Amen said.

Fr. Amen added that "one cannot make an automatic decision or plan for next year solely on this year's situation." He also said that one can not judge the room situation by observing one hall.

Clear and Present Danger to the University
Chapter II:
Take the Money and Run

The newest and most pervasive development in the continuing saga of the Great Drug Bust finds Donald Badger, who was acquitted in civil court on charges of sale of illegal drugs, sans his tuition and sans his Notre Dame education. Badger, who was denied even the courtesy of a court on charges of sale of illegal drugs, sans his tuition and sans his the Greer Drug Bust finds Donald Badger, who was acquitted in civil court, that he was forced to prove his innocence before the Judicial Appeals Administration through this whole escapade.

That Badger was suspended on an ambiguous charge (as a “clear and present danger to the University”) for reasons unproven in civil court, that he was convicted by evidence gained from informal conversation, and that he will possibly lose his chance for a ND degree is all history. The ironic crowning blow was a thousand dollars plus and then suspend him is petty and perhaps even malicious.

That attitude, we contend, is a clear and present danger to the University, and we suggest it, as well as the Judicial Code and the obnoxious charges under which Brennen, Badger, Henehan, and Holbert were suspended, be eliminated. Now.
fr. bill tooney

They call Jesus Christ "Superstar" in the new and popular rock opera, but surely this is irony; it would be much more honest to call him "Superflug." Surely Judas is right:

You said pathetic man—see where you've brought us to
Our ideals die around us because of you
And now I'm a kid again—
Someone has to turn you in
Like a cop on gin—like a wounded animal
A jaded mandarin
A jaded mandarin
A jaded jaded mandarin

And when Superstar himself speaks, it is hardly the words of a hero. In the Garden of Gethsemane Jesus sings:

I only want to say
If there is a way
Take this cup away from me for I don't want to taste its poison

Feel it burn me, I have changed—I'm not as sure
As when we started
Then I was inspired
Now I'm sad and tired

Listen surely I've exceeded expectations
Tried for three years seems like thirty
Could you ask as much from any other man?
But if I die
See the saga through and do the things you ask of me

Let them hate me hit me hurt me nail me to their trees
I'd wanna know I'd wanna know my God
I'd wanna see I'd wanna see my God
Why should I die?

Superstar asks the question we all ask—"Why die?"

Would I be more noticed than I was ever before?
Would the things I've said and done matter any more?
I'd have to know I'd have to know my Lord
I'd have to see I'd have to see my Lord
I'd have to know I'd have to know my Lord
Why should I die?

Millions of readers of Love Story have been asking the same question, and the thousands who stood in black-line long outside theaters this cold winter cried over that same question. And we might, in the style of Superstar, imagine Jenny singing: "I'm twenty-five and alive, what's it all about when I've just begun to love? Why should I die?" This is the ancient cry, repeated every day: Why should Jenny die? Why should David Beck die? Why should Beth Keating die? A lovely girl who was killed in a stupid bus accident as she was traveling out here to be with her boy of the March Grass.

Like Jesus Christ Superstar, we want to to confront the God who seems to allow such senseless things to happen:

Why then am I scared to finish what I started
When you see I saved
I believed in you and God
So tell me that I'm saved

Yes, Superstar is dead, but Jesus is alive. At the end Jesus has only the Father. In the final words of the opera, we hear Jesus sing: "Father, into your hands I commend my spirit." He has nothing but the Father, but having nothing but the Father, he has everything he needs. A God who is with him, no longer anything standing in the way. He's home free. The end of Superstar is the beginning of Jesus risen. And now the only one who can tell him what he is going to do is the very one who is willing to do what he did: turn and open to God in trust.

As a result of reflecting on Superstar, we come to the exhilarating discovery that Jesus was right: it can be good and blessed when we are without, when we are humbly fulfilled. The beatitudes do make sense, because if a man is willing to live in the real world, and accept the human condition, it means that he will have to struggle in the midst of frustration and disappointment, the downs and the blains. Not that he looks for these; he doesn't have to. They come anyway. But being as they are, an inevitable part of the human condition, they can still be opportunities for him to grow. Because in the midst of these moments of human unfulfillment he is more apt to pen, to more likely consider, a transcendental source of fulfillment than if he lived in a world where every day everything came up roses. Never a rape, never a disappointment, everything perfect and wonderful.

Imagine, if you will, this scene: a Notre Dame student wheels up in his Superport, decked out in Gilbert's finest, with St. Mary's loveliest at his side. He is Supermover! Now he can say to him:

"Cocktail Party," says, "Every moment is a fresh beginning, and life is simply keeping on." This is what God asks of us, to be faithful to the end. Because the end is only the beginning; it's a door marked, "Exit." "Entrance." The end of the record, "Jesus Christ Superstar," is really the end of the historical record of that band. The end of the record is the beginning of a new life of glory, which never ends at all. As Jesus sings in the song, "Poor Jerusalem!"

If you knew all that I knew, my poor Jerusalem,
You'd see the sun rise in your eyes
But you close your eyes

While you live your troubles are many, poor Jerusalem.
To conquer death you only have to die
You only have to die

So it's very true, as someone recently wrote, that "The pledge of a man's love is the beginning of a man's death." So we pledge ourselves to be true to a commitment, to be loyal to a pledge, we have to die. But the death is to those things which stand between ourselves and this fidelity; the pledge of our gift of self in trust to the Father means a death to selfishness, to comfort, to convention, to betrayal. It's a death that liberates and frees.

A couple of weeks ago I was in the home of friends and the valentines made by children are displayed on the kitchen bulletin board. You know what valentines made by children are like. A little boy comes home from school and gives a valentine to his mother, and by any artistic standard whatsoever the two are gems. The boy's "Mom" spells "As" but what does it do to his mom? He gives to her and breaks her heart. She has to run out of the room to have a good cry. For the old saying is really true: it's not the gift of the lover but the love of the giver that counts. God doesn't expect great, dramatic accomplishments from us; he asks for great love-fidelity in the midst of whatever happens to come to our way because of the particular pattern of our years.

So there's a very simple, yet crucial, lesson in "Superstar." It's one of the most profound lessons the world has ever known. The lesson is that we love, we give, but we grieve will be changed to joy, and your hearts will respond with joy that no one-one-one can ever take from you.

God doesn't expect great, dramatic accomplishments from us; he asks for great love-fidelity in the midst of whatever happens to come to our way because of the particular pattern of our years. So there's a very simple, yet crucial, lesson in "Superstar." It's one of the most profound lessons the world has ever known. The lesson is that we love, we give, but we grieve will be changed to joy, and your hearts will respond with joy that no one-one-one can ever take from you.

ND, Church change lauded

The future of the Christian church may well depend upon the success of the revolution going on in the Roman Catholic Church today, according to an Episcopalian priest who recently completed the first year of a visiting professorship at the University of Notre Dame.

Dr. Morton T. Kelsey, rector emeritus of St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Moravia, Calif., reported on his academic year at the University in an article, "Catholicism in Revolution: A Protestant Report from Notre Dame" in the spring issue of Religion in Life quarterly.

Kelsey noted that the article deals with aspects of the religious revolution in the Roman Catholic Church he saw at Notre Dame, where, he noted, students "are seeking for answers which may help spread a vitality faith." He taught biblical and liturgical pedagogics, theories of religious instruction, and the prophetic role in religious instruction.

He was impressed with the freedom with which theological and social issues were handled at the University. "The questions of compulsory celibacy for the priesthood, of birth control, of ecumenism and other controversial issues are discussed with the same freedom as in a secular university, and often with greater understanding and balance," he commented. "Indeed, there may well be more intellectual freedom at Notre Dame than in many state universities, where only the rational materialism of our time is presented. Here both sides of modern culture are presented, and the student has a chance to make a real choice: at least 10 percent girls.

Other facets of campus religious life which drew praise from the Episcopalian rector were the variety and sincerity of informal liturgies, the attempt "to develop a daily informed and dedicated," and the openness to "new discovery of religious or spiritual realities." Notre Dame, he said, "has taken root and in the Catholic Church in its attitude toward the future."

NEEDS PEOPLE

Three gala spring outings were announced last night by the newly established Cape Cod-Toledo-Kankakee Club, in a news conference on the second floor of Brenn-Phillips Hall.

Speaking in behalf of the membership were President Jack Gillis, Secretary-Treasurer, Bill Schmidt, and SMC Coordinator Ann Shoemaker.

Gillis said that the club's "spring offensive" will begin this Friday at 9:00 P.M. with a party at a location to be determined.

The remainder of the spring agenda calls for a trip to the Cubs-Mets game on April 25 and a banquet, featuring club moderator, Father Theodore M. Hesburgh, temporarily scheduled for May 15. In answer to a query concerning the purpose of the club, Gillis responded, "Whereas it began simply as an excuse for a bunch of guys to play basketball together in the club league, it has now blossoned into a legitimate club. We see our purpose as improving the social atmosphere on the campus by providing places where girls and guys can get together without any obligations to each other."

By establishing a policy whereby girls are required to pay, Gillis contends that the dating syndrome is broken down and the atmosphere at the club's outings is more relaxed and informal.

Schmidt, who is chairman of the April 25 outing to Chicago, emphasized that this, as well as all other club activities, is open to all students. Schmidt noted the club has chartered two buses and purchased 92 box seat tickets in a block, for this crucial National League contest.

Included in the $11 fee for the trip will be round-trip transportation, game ticket, refreshments served aboard the bus and perhaps a tour of some of Chicago's finer establishments.

Schmidt mentioned that sign-ups will be held today in the dining halls on both campuses.

Speaking on the financial situation of the club, Schmidt said, "We aren't interested in making a profit and because of that, we are now running a little in the red." The secretary-treasurer, however, pointed out that "all of our past events have been well received, and successful, and we have made the same from our spring offensive."

The recent successful events were open to include parties at Brenn-Phillips and Alumni, which attended "at least 10 percent girls."

The reason for this phenomenon, explained Miss Shoemaker, is that "there are more than 100 charter members of the club on our campus and enthusiasm is extremely high." Miss Shoemaker expects a combined turnout of 50 to 60 people Friday night. As for the club's future, next year all three officers were in agreement that the club would be expanded, but have made no specific plans to date.

Hesburgh sees future need for Civil Rights Commission

Notre Dame, Ind. - The need for a politically independent fact-finding agency in the area of civil rights is as evident today as it was 14 years ago when the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights was established, according to its chairman.

Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., president of the University of Notre Dame and a former chairman of the Civil Rights Commission, traces the development of the Commission's independence in an article, "The Civil Rights Commission: An independent fact-finder," in the April issue of the University of Notre Dame Law Review. The only original member of the Commission left from the initial group appointed by President Eisenhower, Father Hesburgh emphasizes the bipartisan agency's continuing role as a "burr in the saddle" to the President, the Congress, the federal bureaucracy and others who have the capacity to remedy civil rights denials. He notes that the Commission continued while there were disagreements as to its independence.

SU appointees to focus on SMC participation

Student Union Director Bill McGrath yesterday outlined the roles that his appointees Kathy Eglet and Mike Jones will have during the new year. "Kathy will be key to cooperation between the Student Union and the University," Mr. McGrath said. "Kathy will also be an important liaison between the student body and the University's administration."

Mr. McGrath said that Kathy Eglet would focus on SMC participation, and that Mike Jones would be involved in organizing events. "Kathy will be responsible for ensuring that all students are aware of the opportunities to participate in the SMC," Mr. McGrath said. "Mike will be responsible for organizing events and activities that will bring the student body together."
The Student Union Board of Directors. The student union board of directors is composed of one faculty member, the SBP, the SBVP, student union president, and a student senator. It dictates the policy of the student union and sets fees. The Dean’s Committee members include the provost, assistant provost, and all deans. It decides on many academic and administrative matters. The Academic Council is comprised of 60 members, seven of which are students. Student representatives consist of the student government academic commissioner, one delegate each of the four colleges, and two grad students. It is chaired by Fr. Burchael, and makes academic decisions such as grading systems, academic calendar, and other similar decisions.

The Sophomore Prom is in danger of being canceled, according to SMC Sophomore Class President Sue Wolfe.

"The bids will be on sale until tonight at 6:30 p.m. If at that time, there isn’t the needed response, the prom will be canceled," Miss Wolfe said in an interview last night.

She stated that currently only forty girls have bought $50 bids for the Saturday night event. "We have the girls who have to be fulfilled — the band (The Chapped Lips), the caterer, and the consultant — $600.00. With forty girls invited to attend, we can’t fulfill these contracts," stated Miss Wolfe.

The Sophomore Class President contended that the problem is a matter of timing. This weekend was the only time possible to hold the prom, she said, and opposition to the prom comes in part from a "official man fresh from Notre Dame student body.

Irish nine beaten by Detroit, 9-8

Frank McGraw seems to be the best subjective to describe Notre Dame's baseball season thus far. The Irish are 9-3-6 on a game trip Spring break but lost a couple of games because of inability to bring home a doubleheader sweep.

On Wednesday, April 14, 1971

I coughed a Rutgers the other day in an attempt to get the details. He admitted that while they were not actually thrown out of the country, it was really sort of going.

I was willing to relate the various carry-ons, but declined to divulge the claim that he didn't want to accidentally fail to give anyone his just recognition.

On Thursday, March 11, the Rutgers left Kennedy Airport after several hours of drinking in New York City for an overnight flight to Shannon. Their behavior was enough in the Rugby Club tradition to lead the students to remark upon it. "I hope you guys are happy. You've drank half our house, stolen the rest, and kept all the passengers up all night." To this the Rutgers replied, "Flattery will get you nowhere."

On Friday, Saturday, and Sunday were spent in relaxed quiet in Shannon. The Rutgers left their sight-seeing bus in good condition, but did some parking-in or doors for which they were assessed at $72.

They were no games in Killarney, merely several days of organized sight-seeing. Perhaps lulled by the beautiful countryside, the Rutgers behaved themselves admirably.

On Thursday, however, they found themselves hoselt in a hotel in Farretstown-by-the-sea. This hotel was out in the "sticks," leaving the Rutgers little entertainment save what comes from the bottle. The night was a stormy one, by game time, however, the weather worsened into a 40-mph gale reeflet with sheet and snow. Furthermore, the playing field was right under a hill.

Facing the Bandon City team, the Rutgers chose to play into the wind and up the hill for the first. Under these conditions, they batted a little better, but before their strategy could pay off, the game was called, leaving them with a "moral victory."

Down the hill in the second inning, following which the Rutgers returned to their hotel. A dance was in progress so they returned to the hotel bar. When that was closed at 2:00 AM, several Rutgers decided to join the dance. The frustrated manager herded them with two cases of beer and they returned to their rooms.

The following morning, the manager promptly charged the Club for the beer, demanding $7 per case. The angry Rutgers offered him $5 for four cases and he accepted. The Club then journeyed to the failed Blarney Stone.

On Friday, Thursday, and Saturday were quiet, sight-seeing days in Waterford, where they had to tell the Rutgers that they had an 11-3 decision to the University College of Galway on Saturday. Dublin's final five points came in the closing seconds when the Club weakened their defense in order to try to score.

Following a dance, Sunday sight-seeing, and another dance, the Club reached Mullingar Monday night. When the bowl was out of off midnight, the Rutgers responded by throwing mugs against the walls and engaging in "general ball-hating."

The management was called out of calling the police.

On Thursday, the Club visited Galway City for a game party given by University College of Galway. After spending time at the American Hotel bar, the Rutgers left around 11:00 PM for a dance. On the way out, the Rutgers had to deal with a police officer and a bartender.

On the way to the bus stop, there was much bashing about of the mugs. One of them went through the window of the Bank of Ireland. The Rutgers returned at 2:00 AM, the police were waiting. Demand was made of the Rutgers, the doors, and windows was assessed at $72.

More serious for the damage, the Rutgers retired, the row on Wednesday for "A" and "B" contests with UG. Really felt the effects of the constant celebrating, the Club dropped both games.

The game was roughed up (with a stiffness but a relentlessly uneventful and the Rutgers felt that under normal conditions they could have held their own against their competition. The IRA has not been heard from.

While troubles continue in Northern Ireland, the southern part of the Republic of Ireland came under another kind of attack when the ND Rugby Club invaded the Emerald Isle last month.

I cornered a Rutgers the other day in an attempt to get the details. He admitted that while they were not actually thrown out of the country, it was really sort of going.

On Friday, Saturday, and Sunday were spent in relaxed quiet in Shannon. The Rutgers left their sight-seeing bus in good condition, but did some parking-in of doors for which they were assessed 10 pounds.

On Sunday, the Rutgers belted a City team from Abbey Feale, 24-8. Their conduct was excellent at a dinner party afterwards but the hotel bar. When that was closed at 2:00 AM, several Rutgers decided to join the dance. The frustrated manager herded them with two cases of beer and they returned to their rooms.

SAIGON (UPI) — Six thousand South Vietnamese troops moved on Fire Base 6 yesterday in a drive to crush North Vietnamese troops who have besieged it for two weeks. U.S. warplanes supported the effort with the heaviest one day bombing campaign in South Vietnam in more than eight months. By late afternoon, hours after the South Vietnamese task force landed by helicopter, advance elements reported pushing to within sight of Fire Base 6, a hill top outpost on the Central Highlands near the Laotian and Cambodian frontier.

U.S. Air Force B-52 Stratofortresses, each capable of carrying 30 tons of bombs, flew six missions Tuesday in jungles around Fire Base 6, trying to smash North Vietnamese troop concentrations. Air Force transport planes dropped two more 7.5 ton "Daisy Cutters" black buster bombs in the area, adding to the destruction caused by two which were unloaded Monday.

Military sources said the Daisy Cutters were used for the first time against Communist troops. But an official com m u nique from American headquarters said the giant bombs, largest conventional explosive device in the U.S. arsenal, were designed to blast away foliage and create "in­ stan t" helicopter landing zones.

"There is no indication that they are being used for any other purpose," an official U.S. spokesman said.

Dr. Wood to speak

A leading authority on sterilization, Dr. H. Curtis Wood, M.S., will speak at 6:30 p.m. in the Engineering Auditorium on Thursday, April 15, as part of the ND-SMC Academic Commission's Environment Series.

Dr. Wood is the medical consultant for the Association for Voluntary Sterilization. He will be speaking on "Sex without Babies."

Dr. Wood received his medical degree from the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine and is an authority on obstetrics and gynecology. He has been Chief of Staff of the Philadelphia Planned Parenthood Clinics and is listed in the 1960-61 issue of Leaders in American Science.

He has contributed articles on various aspects of the population problem and sterilization to numerous medical journals.

Dr. Wood now spends most of his time lecturing and discussing sterilization and related matters on radio and television stations across the country.

Policy stated for co-ex dinner

The distribution process for the co-ed dinner tickets for Saint Mary’s student has been changed from former research and development, commissioner Bob Ohlemiller announced yesterday.

Instead of having all 60 tickets given out in the lobby of LeMans Hall, only 60 will be distributed and 100 will be given out at the Cashier's office of the pay-caf in the South Dining Hall. This is for the convenience of those girls already at Notre Dame, Ohlemiller said.

The tickets may be picked up between 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. in LeMans and all day in the South Dining Hall. They are good for both the North and South Dining Halls.

The tickets are a different color for each week day and are good only for that particular day. Because there are no dates stamped on the tickets, students are asked to pay attention to the color set-up:

Wednesday-blue
Thursday-orange
Friday-green
Saturday-white
Sunday-yellow

Tickets are distributed day by day in the pay-caf but are distributed for the week in LeMans lobby. Distribution will begin tomorrow.

The Commission’s independence is still crucial, Notre Dame’s president argues, because minority groups still do not have sufficient power to obtain acceptable political compromises on many issues and the job of monitoring is more important than ever because of a proliferation of federal agencies with civil rights responsibilities.
