North Quad SLC candidates expound on campaign issues

by mike murphy

Five North Quad SLC candidates discussed their positions yesterday in separate interviews. They all stated a degree of dissatisfaction with the present operation and achievements of the Senate.

John Cullen, a junior from Zahner hall, said that "The SLC should be the most important legislative body on campus." It has great potential, he said, "but hasn't lived up to it." He said that there have been too many proposals brought up by the administration, who according to Cullen control the body. He would like to see the students and faculty work better together to gain more power.

Cullen stated that he feels the main thing to be dealt with by the SLC is coeducation. He feels that the administration is going to have to handle a lot of that issue, like the placing of girls on campus, but the groundwork should be done in the SLC.

He would like to see a redefinition of the "imminent danger" clause, an investigation of the judicial system and better communications between the SLC and the student body.

In summary he said that the SLC could be, and should be a "check on the administration's rashness.

North Quad SLC candidates expound on campaign issues

The Executive Committee of the St. Mary's Board of Trustees has recommended a merger committee to possibly merge the two boards with the college with Notre Dame by September, 1972.

The group named Rev. Neil McCluskey, director of Notre Dame's Institute for Educational Studies, to chair the committee. Sr. M. Alma Peter, acting president, and Sr. M. Gerald Hartley, secretary of the Board of Trustees will also work with McCluskey.

The Executive Board of Trustees hopes that by establishing the ad-hoc committee to deal with academic regulations that "wild rumors" will stop. Apparently more than 300 SMC students have refused to register for the fall term until they are assured that their credits will be accepted by their major departments in Notre Dame towards a degree.

The Executive Committee also drafted a statement defining St. Mary's position toward unification. Although the contents of this statement were not released, it reportedly contains sections dealing with the status of faculty rank and tenure.

This statement will be presented to a committee composed of the chairmen of the SMC and the Notre Dame Boards of Trustees; both presidents and two other members from each Board on May 2.

The purpose of the meeting, according to Sr. Alma, is "to draw up a joint statement which will be approved by both Boards of Trustees when they meet May 14th and 15th."

In other action at the meeting, the ad-hoc committee suggested that no student president be appointed by the Board. It is their opinion that the present administration should represent the students should be the most important factor in a decision, which was not forthcoming.

Where the committee delegates Fr. McCluskey to meet with all of the college's future today to explain the steps which the college will take.

The committee, according to Dr. Cullen, "The committee will assist the administration in smoother steps toward unification." He plans to have a majority of the committee's work done by mid-summer. He anticipates that in summer the Board of Trustees may appoint a similar committee to facilitate the merger while his committee is at work.

Zimmerman suggests SLC reconsider Tracey candidacy

After a brief informal discussion of the Ann Marie Tracey candidacy by the students yesterday, the North Quad seat and a shorter discussion of the Hall Life Report, the Student Life Council yesterday adjourned for lack of a quorum, that is in the next meeting tentatively for this Thursday at 4:15 p.m.

The discussion of the Tracey candidacy was permitted by chairman Dr. William Eagan at the suggestion of student Mark Zimmerman when the SLC did not have a quorum. The discussion was brief, and ended when a fifth member of the Administration showed for the meeting.

Former National Student Association Coordinator Steve Novak spoke for Miss Tracey's position, saying that the election committee set up by Student Government was unconstitutional, and thus the decision not to allow her to run was illegal.

Zimmerman suggested that the logistical problems be minimized, and that the fact that she could represent the students should be the most important factor in a decision, which was not forthcoming.

Dean of Students Sister Briele, C.S.C., said that unless she were officially enrolled as a student for the fall.

This is the second part of the Observer's interview with University Vice-President and General Counsel PhillipFacenda. Mr. Facenda discusses the "imminent danger clause" today.

Q. In the same SMC meeting in which you called the Judicial Code the product of negotiation, you also called the infamous III-1 clause, "the imminent danger clause", the principle compromising the college. Could you elaborate?

A. From almost the beginning of the discussions, I think it was during Richard Riccio's term that Fr. Hesburg's letter containing the fifteen minute rule came out there was a great deal of student resistance, especially about some way to limit that jurisdiction.

Of course, the faculty, the administration, especially the administration, took the opposite position. This was constantly debated in the Student Life Council. It ran through the discussions with the Dedrick committee on writing a code. Any attempt to bring that into the debate was thrown out.

Q. From the students point of view, what was the major concern of the administration?

A. That point probably was that the SMC students who wanted to be part of the administration, be part of the law and procedure which the SMC students wanted to put into practice. What we ended up with was, if I had said, the basic compromise on which the whole thing was built. We agreed to let students have control of the university court level as long as the very basic issues of discipline, the information of the infractions of the code, were handled by a tripartite board.

Q. How did this agreement affect the fifteen minute rule?

A. By this we meant specifically the fifteen minute rule. It would seem ridiculous to turn a fifteen minute rule case over to an all student panel. It was our impression and I think that everyone pretty much agrees on this, that it would be far better if the administration's right to impose the fifteen minute rule was, of course, resisted by the administration.

McCartin's first proposal reads, "all Junior and Senior ROTC courses (300-400 level) should not be granted credit towards the conferral of a bachelor's or upper undergraduate degree in Liberal Arts."

He rationalizes the proposal with the fact that ROTC courses are not "traditional liberal arts, just as it would be hard to stretch them to become modern liberal arts."

McCartin said that presently these courses can be taken as electives toward a BA degree. He disagrees with this policy saying that these are "non-liberal" courses.

Again he stressed that his objection is "not a moral or political objection. It's simply and purely an intellectual concern. These courses are so technical in the upper levels that they cannot be construed as liberal arts.

The SLC Elections

The usual barrage of often self-serving rhetoric is at its peak now with Student Life Council elections scheduled for tomorrow. This year's race is complicated by the fact that the election committee has ordained that Ann Marie Tracey's candidacy from the North Quad is illegal, because she is not a Notre Dame student.

For the past year the general tone and content of Observer editorials concerning the SLC has been largely negative. The SLC has been bogged down in a quagmire of its own general ignorance and inability to go past the technicalities and deal with the substance of the issues.

Co-education as an issue came and went, and throughout the SLC remained mute. The drug problem on campus was brought home with the pre-Christmas drug raid. The SLC took a fine proposal and put it through the mill. It came out flat as day old dishwater. In effect it gave the administration a blank check to do what it damn well pleases, until the SLC decides to move. Yesterday's meeting was highlighted by the absence of a quorum of administration members. This failure to achieve a quorum necessitated the postponement of the meeting until Thursday.

Unless and until people with some kind of spark, drive or imagination are elected to the body, it will continue to wallow like a wounded bull elephant in a tar pit.

In the belief that the following students have these qualities, or at least some of them they have received the endorsement of the Observer editorial board.

SOUTH QUAD

The Observer unhesitantly and unanimously endorses the Rich Urda-Buzz Imhoff ticket for the South Quad. Urda, a former judicial coordinator for student government, is the most knowledgeable candidate running. He has an excellent grasp of the issues and will work hard if elected. Buzz Imhoff complements Urda's knowledge with his intimate involvement in hall life, both as a two term hall president and chairman of the Hall President's Council. He will be in a special position to help the SLC relate the problems in the halls, something they have failed to do this year.

TOWERS

In this district the Observer, without reservation, endorses Floyd Kezele. By his work on the council Kezele has shown his ability and willingness to bring greatly needed reform to that body. Kezele is vice-chairman of the SLC and he is head of the steering committee. Under his direction work has begun on legislation which would setup a badly needed committee system for the council. We urge the residents of Grace and Planner to re-elect Floyd Kezele.

NORTH QUAD

For one of the North Quad seats the Observer endorses Ann-Marie Tracey, former St. Mary's SBP. Miss Tracey is quite competent and has a superb understanding of the issues at hand. Her knowledge will be invaluable when proceedings are begun to form some sort of council that will deal with student life on both campuses. Since Miss Tracey has been ruled off the ballot by the election committee, hers will be a write-in candidacy. We urge the residents of the North Quad to do so.

The Observer editorial board was unable to come to a decision about the second North Quad post. Either T. C. Treanor, Jerry O'Connor or Tom Leahy are acceptable though somewhat limited candidates.

OFF-CAMPUS

In this district the Observer somewhat hesitantly endorses Dave Tushar. He has a sufficient grasp of the issues, but seems to lack imagination. He does have the ability though to perform adequately as a member of the SLC. The idea of his opponent, Joe Schlosser, to turn his vote over to Ann Marie Tracey and thus allow SMC representation on the board is an appealing one, but lacking in realism.

when the bells chime in evening when it is evening and the nations clash when the bells chime and in the towns the people pay their tax when the bells chime

then it is time
down from the mountains
down from the mountains and onto the jeweled plain down to the mythical cities from every fold of this nation let us go down
it is very warm here it is green
this is not a place of war, here it is very green
we must articulate the curses
we must make our anger heard the animals must cry out in anguish all animals must scream with pain there is no joy in springtime no fair scent from the magnolias there are perfumes and the odors of dead earth all blossoms are mould in the archives are kept the records in documents and memograms they are kept into the archives they must place and keep what we are saying what here is being screamed open the archives throw back the doors our voices are coming in let that stone be split open, for our voices must come in
we must articulate the curses
we must make our anger heard every rolling bud must bear our voices each bird must bear us scream we must find joy in springtime we must find water that is pure we must blast the crumbling towers we must scourge the earth's bordello

Washington
Q. There's been a surge and growth in conservative parties throughout the nation, notably, Michigan, and others such as Massachusetts. Do you think that your brother's victory, or the new State had something to do with this resurgence?

A. Oh, by all means. It had, roughly speaking, everything to do with it, and it's too bad, because I see no reason for a fourth party, unless there's a third party. The situation in New York, because the Liberal Party had exercised a kind of laissez-faire with the major two parties over a period of twenty years, the result of which was the effect of this phantasm of conservatives, and that's the reason why the conservative party grew. And, of course, it established its authenticity when it drew for my brother vastly more votes than were given to the Republican official candidate. In Michigan, you have a situation in which, in a sense, the figure was given by the principal challenger, Mr. Romney. When you get that close to taking control of that party, I've never understood the logic of proliferation.

Q. The night of his victory, your brother was quoted as saying: "This is the dawn of the age of the new politics." Do you believe that statement was valid, and if so, what did it mean?

A. Well, it was one part elation and one part a consideration of quite an extraordinary event: not only the first third party Senator to be elected in 40 years, but also a conservative, and from the state of New York. So obviously he was going to do something. Further, I think that he's going to do something. Now it may be that that something will turn out to be a conjunction of unlikely events, but, to be objective, and an independent observer, I think that there is something going on, and I think that there is something important there. It was that there is making in America, some sort of reevaluation of a determination to survive. This is essentially the political stability in which he's engaged.

Q. Many people consider Nixon to be the first of the least conservative Presidents of recent times. Yet, since his election, it seems that he has moved to the left somewhat. Is it your position that Nixon is a true conservative?

A. There are a couple of things I think that need to enter into that analysis. First of all, Nixon came in as a centrist of the Republican party; Goldwater on his right, and Rockefeller on his left, roughly speaking. His election did not signify within the Republican the election of the conservative wing. Second of all, he is a politician, as all conservatives are. They usually arrive at their positions by careful use of calipers, measuring distances from the two extremes. That being the case, when he surveyed the situation and found a Congress, which after all passed the laws which were passed, whose houses were dominated by Democrats, he knew better than to try to propose programs which was absolutely certain to fail, you say a right-wing program, or a program, a market-oriented program. He went so far as he was reasonably able, and succeeded in some cases, failed in others. So I don't think that, in that sense, he's going to be considered as one of the most conservative Presidents of recent times. But I think his domestic policies will be considered to have been conservative in light of historic circumstances.

Q. With the presidential campaign beginning to pick up pace more and more, what do you think President Nixon's performance so far, from your point of view?

A. A. Pretty good, pretty good, I think in Vietnam the chances are that it will have proved successful by mid-summer. As far as I mean that, by mid-summer of next year, the American President will be the most difficult to compose into a major cause of military authority. I think that his domestic policies lack a certain consistency, which is why I think it's a considerable confusion. But essentially I think that his stand on Vietnam will be consistent. Perhaps the most telling quote on Lent's presidential politics is, perhaps the most conservative Presidents of recent times. Yet, I think his domestic policies will be considered to have been conservative in light of historic circumstances.

students are ideally what this place is being run for," said O'Connor.

"I want to get in there and kick them occasionally when they get too vague and aren't dealing with the student's problems." He said that he had seen enough of the Bull that is being used by the administration to know that it's dog eat dog, and "you've got to get mad and shout if you're going to be heard."

"The SLC must start realizing that the entire community must be dealt whith as a whole, and naturally SMC must be a part of the SLC. Students, faculty and administration.

He stated that the action to prevent Miss Ann Marie Tracey from running for the SLC was "wholly uncalled for, discriminatory, and a major loss for the university. "She's one of the few students who know all about co-eduration, and that's going to be the major problem dealt with in the SLC."

"We have to be the conscience of the administration. They are kind of set in their ways, we've got to keep kicking them," Tom Leahy from BP said that the SLC has been a step behind in everything that has happened on campus this year. "It has failed to assume the leadership which could lead to a meaningful change."

He said that he felt the students on the SLC haven't represented the students very well. "The meetings have been controlled by the Administration and faculty." He feels that if the students did their "homework" better they would be in a better position.

The SLC, according to Leahy has been limited by the review that the Trustees and Fr. Hesburgh has over it. He said that he would like to increase the number of proposals brought to the SLC and work for more specific bills affecting student life.

Phil Reilly, a freshman from BP, said that he saw the SLC as "too much too slow in their actions. An example he cited was the issue of phone cars. This bill was debated and "worked on" for many meetings when it could have been handled in one or two. There is too little committee work, he said. He felt that there should be more student representation and more work done before bills are brought before the body.

"The main concern being co-education, and that's the SLC must work in order to prevent Notre Dame from being "just an all male institution with girls enrolled." He saw the SLC as the body that must handle the transition and hopefully bring such things as co-ed dorms.

"But," he said, "they need more power. The review by the trustees and Fr. Hesburgh isn't good."

Mooney out of race

willing to take the criticism for our decision."

Rodriguez said that the decision to allow candidates to run in any district was made because according to SLC bylaws students represent the entire student body, and not just their own district.

"They have always been allowed to run anywhere," he said. "No one ever realized it before this year."

St. Mary's SBP Kathy Barlow also released a statement supporting the Tracey candidacy. She said, "with respect to representation, we are one student body as soon as we choose to recognize ourselves as such."

She urged the students to "decide for themselves" and joined with Mooney in calling for a massive write-in campaign for Miss Tracey, not only on the North Quad, but all over campus.

At the afternoon SLC meeting, the question of the validity of the Student Government Election Committee was raised in informal discussion by former National Student Association Coordinator Steve Novak. Novak said that the Election Committee must consist of all the ten Senators, the SBP, the SBVP, and the Student Government Executive Coordinator. This year the committee consists of SBVP candidates and two Stay Senators, Jim Clarke of Grace Towers and Bob Sauer, of Stanford. The decision of the committee was unanimous.

Robert H. SBP John Barkett and Constitutional expert and former Stay Senator Tom Thrasher pointed out last night that the Constitution does not mention at all the composition of the Election Committee and that the four-senator rule had been used by former SBP Kashnax out of convenience. Barkett cited the precedent of Phil McKenna's appointment of four non-Stay Senators as evidence of the SBP's ability to set up his own committee.

Rich Urda, the candidate attacked specifically by Mooney in his statement, responded by saying that he would indeed by an R.A. next year, but that he "fully intends to represent the students."

He continued, "I really don't think that you can represent the students who elect the four-senator R.A. How can I represent the students who elect me to be the third Senator? I don't think I can represent the students who elect the R.A.

Drinking at SMC

Legal action may have to be taken against students found drinking on the St. Mary's Campus, Capt. William Parker, head of St. Mary's Security, announced last night.

According to Parker there has recently been a "terrible problem with drinking at night, particularly on weekends, which is disrupting the peace and quiet of the campus and college area."

The drinking which takes place largely in the cemetary behind Regina Hall has resulted in several incidents of disorderly conduct on the part of some Notre Dame students.

Stickmen back on the win trail by Joe Passatore Observer Sports Writer

A week's lay-off proved to be a period of rejuvenation for the Notre Dame lacrosse club on Sunday. The squad, which was axed last Saturday when they traveled to Ypsilanti, Michigan and Wooster college, rolled out the red carpet on offensive patterns and accounted for four of Notre Dame's goals. Midfielder Dave Juravsky pulled off the second hat trick of his career and now has ten goals on the season. Another midfielder, Jim Lepley, hurled a shot into the Chicago net and attacker Kenny Lund tallied the other two goals.

Coach O'Leary also appreciated the stalwart efforts of the Notre Dame defense and, in particular, Irish goalie Jerry Kamm, after allowing two early goals and falling behind, 2-0, the Irish stuck on pressure and the Irishmen were thwarted the rest of the way. Notre Dame defensemen, Fred Morrison, put the clamps on Chicago All-American attackman Joel Lankin and held him to one goal for the afternoon. This performance earned Morrison the game ball. Kamm was superb in the goal for the Irish as he made several clutch saves on one-on-one situations.

The victory carried an expensive price tag with it as attackman Ed Hoban, who along with Kenny Lund has been carrying much of scoring burden for Notre Dame, reinjured a loose cartilage in his knee and was helped off the field. Hoban is scheduled to operate on his knee this Wednesday and will be lost for the remainder of the season. B. J. Jones, the first draft pick of the season is favored to replace Hoban. Notre Dame's Austin Carr, the Irishman as he made several clutch saves on one-on-one situations.

The Irish left the bench at halftime trailing the Palmer ruggers, 94, but put it all together in the second half to notch the victory. Club vice president Charlie Blum cited the outstanding overall team effort, noting that the Palmer ruggers had not lost a regular season contest since the Irish turned the tables on them last spring. Included among Palmer's victims were the Irish, who were beaten last fall in a match at Palms.

The Palms club had also managed a seventh place finish in the Monterey tournament which features the top rugby squads in the country.

Irish Guard tryouts

The Irish Guard will begin spring tryouts today for prospective members of the famed high-stepping unit.

Irish Guard Captain Jerry Hogan said yesterday that anyone interested in trying out should report to the Bandroom in Washington Hall at 3:30 this afternoon.

"We've got about four positions open for the fall due to graduation, and we would like to get a look at some new recruits before summer vacation," said Hogan. "This will give us an idea of how we shape up for the fall and also give those who are genuinely interested in trying out a chance to practice over the summer," he continued.

Hogan emphasized that prospects must be between 5'11" and 6'3" in height and be man enough to wear a kilt. Only then will they be given the chance to find out what the Guard really wears underneath them.

Sailors 3rd

The Notre Dame sailors placed third in a field of 23 last weekend in the Cornell Invitational held at Lake Martin in Lafayette, Louisiana and will head into the College Gymnastics Association National Championship this Saturday at 8:00. The Michigan State games were held over 25 miles a hour and allowed only four races to be sailed and Sunday's one-o'clock rule left time for just six races.

Skippers for Notre Dame were Captains John Bicanick and Tom Willison in the "B" division, George Robb was skipper in the "A" division while Will Donelan served as crew in the "B" division.

The Irish "B" team placed in an easy 34-0 rout over Palms in the preliminary. The ND ruggers put together a 13-point first half with a 13-point second stanza to win going away. Joe Greig led the "B" attack for the second week in a row, scoring on three tries. Both Joe Digan and Phil Calandra turned in fine performances, as the "B" squad upped its record to 2-0.

While the "A" team head east for next weekend's Virginia Tournament, the "B" squad will travel to the windy city to participate in the Chicago tournament. The "A" team will close its season the following weekend with a game in Chicago against the Irishmen, according to Pete Flannery.
